A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"I'm going," said Heroncourt, simply, and as a matter of course.

He went into the shed and found Lucy, not resting as he had expected, but bending over one of the wounded men. He laid his hand on her shoulder and spoke her name before she knew that he was near her; and her pale face flushed and her eyes shone as, with a start, she turned to him.

"You're all right, Lucy?" he asked. "You're not hurt, please God?"

"No, no," she said, brushing the hair from her face, and looking at him with eager questioning, looking over him, as it were, to see with her own eyes whether he was injured or not.

"And you, sir? They told me that you were not wounded; but I had a dream—before I came to—"

She shuddered and her hand unconsciously tightened on his; then, as if remembering herself, she drew her hand away and shrank back timidly and modestly.

"I have come to thank you for all you did for me last night, for me in particular, Lucy," he said. "You behaved like a hero, a Joan of Arc; you set an example to all of us. But for you we might now be lying dead. I certainly should have been. But you don't want me to thank you; indeed, I know no words in which I could do so. A man's life is a very precious thing, Lucy, and I owe mine to you."

She stood with her hands gripping each other, the blushes chasing each other over her cheek, the lashes that covered her eyes quivering with the unspeakable joy evoked by his broken words.

"Won't you take some rest now?" he said. "Do, for all our sakes, for mine."

She raised her eyes to his and her swelled over with love and devotion. For the first time he saw, realised, that the terrible night's work, perhaps her noble self-sacrifice and devotion had changed her from a simple girl to a woman with higher instincts and broader emotions. He regarded her with a mixture of wonder and novel respect.

"No, no," she said, "I do not want any rest. I could not rest with those here," she glanced at the wounded. "But you—you ought to rest—"

"I have had a long sleep," he said. "I am quite fresh. But promise me that you will not make yourself ill, that you will not wear yourself out?"

"I will, if—she raised her eyes to his timidly for a second—"if you wish it." Then, as he was turning away, she put her hand to her head as if she had just remembered something. "I was near forgetting," she said. "One of the men here says that Black Jake and the rest of the gang were going on to Milda Wolda; but perhaps they won't now."

"Very likely not," said Heroncourt, reassuringly; but his face was clouded with apprehension as he left the shed.

He found Brown, the dealer, at work outside.

"You sent that note to Milda Wolda, I suppose, Brown?" he asked.

Brown straightened himself and shook his head.

"No, Mr. Tudor. I've got it here still. There was no chance of sending it. We wanted all the men we'd got to come on to help you."

Heroncourt strode off to find Dartford and communicated his fears for the safety of Milda Wolda.

"If you've no objection, Dartford," he said, "I'll take some of the men and ride over there. It's only about fifty miles. We could be there before nightfall. I'm told there are some women there and very few men."

Dartford nodded gravely.

"Right you are," he said. "But I'll go; you've had more than your share already."

"No, let me go," said Heroncourt. "I am quite fit. Besides, I'm restless, and feel as if the ride would do me good."

Dartford laughed.

"It's the tiger and the first taste of blood, eh, old man? Well, if you've made up your mind, it wouldn't be much use me trying to argue with you; I know of old. Take as many of the men as you want. We can get on very well here; they won't trouble us again; they've had too much already."

Heroncourt thanked him and went amongst the men for volunteers. Of course, they all wanted to go; but Heroncourt, with some difficulty, picked out half a dozen. He was for leaving Baxter and David Jones behind, that they might get some rest; but both Baxter and Jones quietly got their horses and respectfully, but firmly ignoring Heroncourt's remonstrance, rode with the others. Just as they were starting, Lucy came out of the shed, and threading her way amongst the horses, went to Heroncourt's side and laid her hand upon his arm.

"Don't go, oh, don't go, sir!" she pleaded.

Heroncourt bent down in his saddle, and whispered to her soothingly.

"It's all right, Lucy. Don't be afraid, my child. Lucy, there are women there, as there were here: you would not leave them to their fate—women, Lucy!"

Her hand fell from his arm, and she covered her eyes and kept them covered as he rode away.

The men were well-armed and in the best of spirits; in fact, they were delighted at the prospect of another brush with the ruffians who had nearly done them to death the preceding night. One of the little band acted as a guide; but at starting he had confessed that he had only a general idea of the direction they should take, and after about a score of miles he began to get uncertain, and presently admitted that he had lost the way though Brown had carefully described it to him.

After a time they picked up the route again, but some hours had been lost, and it was nightfall before one of the men caught sight of the lights of Milda Wolda. Heroncourt ordered a halt, and sent on two of the men to scout.

"If the ruffians are not there, we do not want to alarm the women by riding up in a body," he said. "If they are there, get back as sharp as you can."

While the scouts went on the others got off their horses to rest them; but in a very short time the scouts returned with the news that Milda Wolda was surrounded by the gang. Heroncourt gave the word to advance, and they rode forward as noiselessly as possible, and spreading themselves out so as to surround the bush-rangers, for bush-rangers they might well now be considered. As Heroncourt approached he heard the sound of firing, the barking of dogs, the yelling of the rangers; and he thrilled once more with the lust for battle. The night had now fallen, and in the darkness the flames of torches flitted to and fro, casting red patches of light upon the building and revealing the dusky forms of the attackers. Guided by these patches of light, Heroncourt was able to surround the house, and, suddenly shouting the word to charge, he bore down upon the assailants.

The attack was as sudden as it was unexpected, for the gang had been fully convinced that Heroncourt and his men would be too much occupied at Dartford to come to the relief of Milda Wolda; but the gang showed fight, and a fierce scrimmage took place in front of the house. Heroncourt was shot at several times, but, owing to the darkness, was fortunate enough to escape. He fought his way, rapidly using his revolver as he went, to the front door; his men, following his example, formed into a kind of line with him, and, advancing from this base, as it were, bore down upon the gang, firing volley after volley, and drove them back. As the battle receded from the house and was carried into the darkness beyond the light from the windows, Heroncourt heard on his right hand the sound of approaching horses and not knowing whether they were friend or foe, he pulled up to wait and ascertain; and a moment or two afterwards a stalwart figure, on a slight, barebacked horse, dashed up beside him, levelling a pistol at his head. Heroncourt struck up the extended arm and turned his horse, and, in so doing, brought his face towards the light.

"Why, you are not one of them! Who are you?" demanded Robert, for it was he.

"Owen Tudor, of Dartford," said Heroncourt. "We came to help you; my men are driving them on, must have dispersed them by this time; you'd better come with me and see."

The two men rode side by side—strange allies!—and came up with the remnant of the fight. It was all over in a few minutes, and those of the gang who were not killed or wounded were riding off. Heroncourt called his men together, for he had no desire for more slaughter, and the hand gathered in front of the house with Heroncourt and Robert, still side by side, in their midst.

The door of the house opened, and in the light that streamed from it Mrs. Broseley appeared with some of the terrified servants at her back.

"I hope no one is hurt," said Heroncourt; "that we came up in time."

Robert Broseley shrugged his shoulders.

"I don't know," he muttered. "I was away; I only had news of it a little while ago. My name is Broseley—Robert Broseley. That's my mother. You'd better come in—something to eat and drink."

He dismounted and led the way, disengaging himself from his mother's embrace.

"It's all right, mother," he said, impatiently. "This gentleman and his men came up just in time. It's all right, I tell you. Get us something to eat and drink, especially something to drink. Here, you there! get some whiskey. Come in here, all of you. Hi, William Henry, look to the horses. Come in! There's no damage done, except a few broken windows," he said to Heroncourt as, followed by his men, they went into the large living-room.

All was bustle and confusion. The women, scarcely recovered from their terror, hurriedly spread a cloth and brought out food and drink, superintended by Mrs. Broseley who, though outwardly calm, cast anxious glances towards Robert.

Robert signed to Heroncourt and the rest to sit down.

"I hear you've had a set-to with these gentry up at Dartford, Mr.—, I didn't catch your name."

"Tudor—Owen Tudor," said Heroncourt. "I am Lord Dartford's partner-manager. Yes, I am sorry to say that most of these ruffians are our men. They attacked us last night, partly burnt the station, and, if it had not been for the arrival of Lord Dartford and some men from another station, they would have been too many for us. We learnt that they intended coming on here, and"—he smiled with the modest apology of a man who has been of some service—"here we are."

"Much obliged to you," grunted Robert. "I'll be even with them—I'll teach them what it means to attack the Broseley property. I'll track 'em down and hang 'em for it; yes, if there's any law in Australia."

"I'm afraid you've been very much alarmed," Heroncourt said to Mrs. Broseley. "I am glad that no one has been hurt."

"No, no one," she faltered, her eyes resting on him for a moment, and going back to Robert who paced the room angrily and impatiently. "But God only knows what would have happened to us if you had not come up in time, Mr. Tudor. It was very kind; kind! it was noble of you after—after your own trouble last night. I am very grateful—my son is very grateful—you must not think he is not," she went on, apologizing for Robert's churlishness.

Members of Lichfield family are noted for looks. Lord Lichfield among them and they are often called the "some Ansons." They are proud of their descent from Admiral Anson, who was the peerage in 1747. Another son, Viscount Anson, of the century, married a girl of who had four children before twenty. At the wedding bride relative offered her a guinea would run round the table such a child. The bride-to-be raced round the table triumphantly claimed her reward.

EMIGRATION BEGINS

Already the London office of Colonial Governments are busy with intending emigrants. Of them are men invited to army, or rejected on examination. Many men are making arrangements to leave England for the colonies. The authorities are confident after the war there will be a large number of emigrants. Naturally the number who are taken to the Dominions is restricted by the shortage of ships, and many men are holding off the present on account of the fee of getting passports for women-folk. Much of the attention in such ships as are reserved for discharged soldiers, and the officials get their hands full in dealing with one. In one colonial case

AN ANSON'S ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.

The Hon. William Anson, who has married an American actress, is one of the thirteen children of the late Earl of Lichfield, and brother of the present peer. The youngest daughter died in 1895, and all the other twelve have now married. Members of the Lichfield family are noted for good looks. Lord Lichfield is called the "handsome Anson." They are rightly proud of their descent from the famous Round-the-World navigator, Admiral Anson, who was raised to the peerage in 1747. Another ancestor, Viscount Anson, of the eighteenth century, married a girl of sixteen, who had four children before she was twenty. At the wedding breakfast a relative offered her a guinea if she would run round the table—she looked such a child. The bride delightedly ran round the table and triumphantly claimed her reward.

EMIGRATION BEGINS.
Already the London offices of the Colonial Governments are busy dealing with intending emigrants. Many of them are men invalided out of the army, or rejected on examination. So many men are making arrangements to leave England for the colonies that the authorities are convinced that after the war there will be a big rush. Naturally the number who can be taken to the Dominions just now is restricted by the shortage of shipping, and many men are holding back for the present on account of the difficulty of getting passports for their women-folk. Much of the accommodation reserved for discharged colonial soldiers, and the officials here find their hands full in dealing with them. In one colonial Government office I had to wait until the passages of a dozen or so of these men were arranged before I could receive attention, and I was impressed by the thorough and detailed way in which the officials went into their cases.

RELATIONS WITH ITALY.

No effort is being spared by the British-Italian League, founded last autumn, to promote its self-imposed task of cultivating better relations, political and economic, with Italy. Many people in different parts of the country have been made acquainted, by means of lectures organised by the League, of the work of the Italian army and of the commercial opportunities in Italy which will be available to British manufacturers after the war. But it is probably not so generally known that the counterpart of this movement is thriving in Italy. There Signor Aldo Sorani, supported by the organisation of the Dante Alighieri Society, is touring the country describing and explaining, with the aid of lantern slides, the British military effort in France and elsewhere, the work of the Navy, the munition factories, and the air service. Reports reaching this country show that the lectures have proved to be a very effective piece of propaganda. What is called the "intellectual entente" is being promoted by encouraging the study of the Italian language in this country, and negotiations are in progress with the Roman League regarding the supply of text books, the interchange of teachers and students, and the development of the book trade between the two countries. Recently Italy's antiquated duty on books has been abolished, and this is regarded as a notable step in the right direction, as the duty operated almost entirely against British books. Here pressure is being ing brought to bear on the libraries to enlarge their lists of Italian books.

RUSSIAN RECONSTRUCTION.

I learn from an authoritative source that in spite of all its anxieties the Provisional Government of Russia is making rapid progress towards constitutional reconstruction and domestic reform. Under the presidency of a member of the Duma a Council of sixty-one members has been created to prepare for the elections to the Constituent Assembly. This body will not only draft Russia's permanent constitution, but solve certain immediate problems, the chief of which are the questions of nationalities and the conditions of the transfer of the lands of the nobles to the peasantry. In this preparatory council are sitting a group of constitutional specialists, with deputies from the army and all the political parties, representatives of Jews, Ukrainians, Poles and other races, and a representative of the women. To prevent dealings in land intended to evade its future settlement, the Provisional Government has declared invalid all land transfers of a later date than May 14. The Government has submitted to the Council the draft of a law concerning elections to the Constituent Assembly based on universal, equal, secret, and direct voting by both sexes; and it has issued a decree for the selection of judges of petty courts on American principles, including a provision that women may be voted for and may sit as magistrates.

A REPUBLICAN LEAGUE IN ENGLAND.

Arthur Lynch had intended to ask a question which would have puzzled many people. He wanted to know why the "New Republic" had been suppressed. The explanation of the mystery is that he was not referring to the famous American review of that name, but to the organ of the Republican League here. The Republican League is a new organisation, devoted to republicanism as a political principle. Mr. Lynch is the president and amongst the vice presidents is H. G. Wells, the popular novelist. I understand that several other well-known writers are supporters of the League. The suppressed issue of the "New Republic" was only the second number published. I have not seen it, but I am told that it only discussed the abstract political advantages of the republican system of government. At all events, it has now got the priceless advertisement of being suppressed.

ROYALTY AND HERALDRY.

The evolution of the Royal House of Windsor will involve a reconstruction of the heraldic achievements of the King and his British relatives. All trace of the Saxe-Coburg arms will be eliminated, and this will extend to some of the knightly banners, as well as other objects of emblazonment, but the Royal Standard will be unaffected. All these matters are under the control of experts, who are working out the legal and heraldic details pertinent to the King's Proclamation. It is known to be His Majesty's intention, as it has long been his desire, to eliminate from the State and private apartments in Windsor Castle relics of the Teutonic influences on decoration and ornament remaining from the mid-Victorian regime. When the time comes for the public to revisit these apartments under normal conditions very striking changes will be observable in this direction.

COMMANDER ASQUITH'S DOUBLE D.S.O.

In any other campaign the feat for which the ex-Premier's sailor-soldier son, Commander Arthur Melland Asquith, received the bar to the D.S.O. in the list issued on July 18th of service honors would have brought him the V.C. In fact, a Yorkshire soldier home on leave recently who saw Commander Asquith's feat and had heard of his reward told a well-known journalist that there was not a man in the division "who doesn't want to know why he didn't get the V.C." Commander Asquith, who thus joins the group of about sixty officers who have twice won the D.S.O., gained his original decoration in an operation in which he need not have served. He was engaged on duties outside the danger zone, but hearing that a fight was imminent he obtained leave to go to the front. He was wounded, but despite this he returned to brigade headquarters and gave a clear account of the situation and the fighting which had been going on during the night.

Fishery News.

From A. J. Hoffe (Change Islands)

The catch is 10,200 with 700 for last week. All the traps have been taken up but 100 skiffs are fishing. There seems to be plenty fish on the grounds but it will not take bait. A good supply of squid and herring is available though the former is uncertain.

From W. Chambers (Hr. Buffett to Brine's Island)

Prospects are fair and squid is plentiful. Twenty-five dories and skiffs and 20 boats are fishing. The catch is 4,100 qts. and for last week 700.

W. J. White (Aquafora to Caplin Bay)

Fourteen traps, 46 dories and skiffs and 16 motor boats are fishing. Nearly all the traps have been taken up but those remaining in the water are doing fairly well the last few days. The few dories left out are doing a little with trawls. The catch is 3,600 qts. with 450 for last week.

From J. Bishop (Cape Frels to Safe Hr.)

The catch for the week was only 150 qts. Prospects are poor and there is little bait. No traps are out but a few dories and skiffs and 50 boats are fishing.

From D. Duggan (Cape John to Brent's Hd.)

The trap fishing ended this week but hook and liners are still doing well with squid bait. The fish taken all through the season is of an exceptionally large run. Prospects are very good for the Fall catch and there has been a fair supply of squid the last few days. The catch is 8,500 qts. and for last week 400. Thirty dories and skiffs and 55 motor boats are fishing.

Plain birthday cake with white frosting, tiny candles for each year placed on a platter, with the burning candles and surrounded with gay flowers will be a delight to the children. In the finger bowls for each child, a little magic Japanese flower may be placed just before serving, that the little ones may watch the flower open in the water.

This is the recipe for the birthday cake: One cup sugar, 5 egg yolks, one quarter teaspoon salt, three-quarters of a cup flour one half teaspoon cream tartar, six eggs whites, one and one-half tablespoons orange juice, beat yolks until lemon colored and thick, add sugar and flavoring and continue beating. Mix and sift flour and cream of tartar four times. Cut and fold in a stiffly beaten whites alternately with flour. Bake in an angel pan one hour in a moderate oven.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Here is a simple menu for a child's birthday party: Cups of veal bouillion, educator crackers, creamed chicken, bread and butter, sandwiches, cutting sandwiches in fancy shapes roll some and tie with colored ribbons, junket in little fancy moulds, such as hearts, little clover and others have all sorts of fancy shaped small cookies, to attract the little tots.

THURSDAY, Aug. 16, 1917.

The Vatican and Lens

It may not seem a very connected journey from the Vatican to Lens along which the news carries us to-day. But the connection is in fact very close. The Pope, in all sincerity and with every good Christian intention, asks the Allies sundry questions. They will answer them courteously and respectfully, but they are sufficiently answered already in the battle thunder in Flanders and the victory on Hill 70. Washington is authority for the statement that all the Allies, the States included, had reached an agreement not to treat of peace with the enemy as long as he retained any of the territory he had seized. The territorial question being one of the most important concerned, the moral support of America to the old Alliance is very great, for America comes into the war influenced by no considerations of territory whatever. If therefore she rejects the Pope's suggestions as emphatically as the rest, it should be plain to the world that mere readjustments of frontiers are not all, or the most important thing, that has to be settled. The Pope advises practically a return to the status quo ante, than which Germany would ask nothing better. He admits that reparation is also, as it were theoretically, involved in the process, but dismisses it on the sole ground that it is impossible. That is true: nothing can atone for the acts of Germany and her tools, but that is no reason why the fullest reparation and atonement that is possible should not be exacted and made. For the rest the Pope's message will receive the courteous consideration which its spirit and the high source from which it emanates urge upon the Allies. It will not affect their views in the least. It bears too plainly the mark of Vienna, and behind it Berlin, manufacture. The rejection of the Allies will be polite but absolute. It will be used by Germany and Austria to confirm their peoples more strongly in their delusion that the Allies are bent upon their destruction, but that will matter little.

The war news, meantime, is distinctly good. The attack we predicted has come and the further encircling of Lens is added to both British and French gains northward to strengthen greatly the Allies' position. It would seem as if Lens could not resist much longer; it is Comblet once again on a much larger and more important scale. The general expert opinion is that what may be the decisive contest of the war has begun. Frank Simonds says in the Tribune: "We are probably at the beginning of the greatest campaign of the war. Such evidence as has come to hand points to another Somme campaign, a campaign of steady, sustained pressure, marked also by recurring general attacks after long and intensive artillery preparation." The same writer warns against the tendency to set too remote and ambitious objects as the aims of these offensives, such as the clearing of the Belgian coast or the piercing of the German line. That is what the Germans will do, and proclaim our failure when purposes not intended are not realized. The object of the Allies is attrition, the inflicting of larger losses upon the enemy than they suffer themselves, and they are succeeding wonderfully. Nevertheless they are also achieving this object in a region where the smallest territorial gains are of paramount effect. If Lens, for instance, goes, a main support of Lille will be smashed, while further advances above this point will shake the whole German line in Belgium. The enemy claims continued successes against the Russo-Roumanians, but he is clearly not having it all his own way there and resistance is visibly stiffening. Finally there is announced a great reduction in the weekly shipping losses, seven ships less, all of them large ones, being sunk than during the previous week. If the losses could be kept down to this figure, sixteen ships in all, the submarine men-

New Financial Company

As will be seen from reference to our advertising columns, the new firm of J. J. Lacey & Co., Ltd., enters the field, handling investments of a seemingly promising nature. The management is in the hands of Mr. J. J. Lacey late of the Reid Mfd. Co., and of courteous persistence and careful attention to detail count for anything, then the new company will reap the fair measure of success that we hope to speak for it. The offices of the new company are situated in the City Chambers, Rooms 8 and 9.

This Information is Worth Knowing.

All American Speedway records for 150 and 200 miles fell at the Chicago race meet, June 16. Ralph Mulford Irving, sent his mount over the course for 200 miles faster than any other motor car ever made the distance. For years experts who build cars for racing have been shooting their speed monsters over the fastest tracks of America. And yet none of them ever travelled the 200 miles as Mulford's Super-Six.

The significance of this feat to the motor-buying public does not lie in the fact that the Hudson Motor Car Company was able to build a car fast enough to break the 150 and the 200 mile record. It is in the fact that the Hudson Motor Car Company builds a stock car, which at comparatively small expense can be converted into a racer capable of beating the fastest cars of America for 200 miles. Any of the 37,000 Super-Sixes now in the hands of users could be changed at nominal cost into the duplicate of the car with which Mulford broke the 200 mile record. That is the important thing in Hudson racing policy of interest to every owner and prospective buyer. Every Racing Hudson has the regular stock engine, the only change being in the gearing.—adv. 11

Rainbow as Girl is Buried at Sea.

Guides Lookout's Eye to Fishermen Near Death off Halifax.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 11.—Helga Steffensen, three years old, who had endeared herself to the passengers aboard a steamship which arrived here to-day from Norway, died the day before the vessel reached Halifax, N.S. She was buried at sea, and just as the water closed over the little form a rainbow of unusual brilliance began forming in the sky.

One of the passengers said to a reporter that the parents of the little girl derived some measure of solace from the beautiful celestial "sign", and a sympathizing woman told the bereaved mother that it portended that her hope for reunion with the child in heaven would be realized.

While they were discussing the subject a lookout shouted that there was a small boat on the port quarter. And, sure enough, where the end of the rainbow seemed to touch the sea, far over on the edge of the horizon, a small boat was discerned with a man aboard.

The steamship changed its course and soon came up with the tiny boat, the sole occupant of which was quickly brought aboard the larger craft.

"The poor fellow was delirious," said one of the officers. "He had been without food or water for several days. He was Louis Max, one of the crew of the fishing schooner Russell of Gloucester, Mass., from which he had put out in a dory to fish. During a storm he was driven out of sight of the schooner and had been unable to find his way back to her.

"Exposure and privations had brought him close to death, but he soon revived under the care and kindness bestowed upon him, and now he is all right again. But it was the opinion of all on board our vessel that if it had not been for little Helga's funeral rainbow, which directed the lookout's eye to the dory, the fisherman undoubtedly would have perished."

Canada's Taxation Methods.

New Financial Company

Canada has assumed very heavy financial obligations for the prosecution of this war, but has avoided the duplication of taxes on production up to the present time. The Dominion Parliament has levied a business profit tax instead of an income tax in the past, but in order to smooth the way for the passage of the conscription law Parliament has agreed to conscript wealth by imposing an income tax. The Minister of Finance is anxious to avoid higher taxation upon industrial establishments in Canada, such as Congress apparently intends to impose in the United States, and he, therefore, strongly recommends that the business profits tax be discontinued and his opinion is likely to prevail.

Canada is now enjoying great industrial prosperity, chiefly on account of the war. Wages have gone up with the production of merchandise. Canadians are so impressed with the advantages to be derived from increased production of real wealth that they do not wish to have anything happen to their new industries and to the prosperity of those long established.

Increased factory output means the employment of more men at good wages and during the last three years a large number of men and women have been trained to factory work.

The Finance Minister's theory is that all manufacturers should have the chance to make money so they may expand their operations and employ more people. When the war comes to an end Canada will have factory equipment most of which will be suitable for the manufacture of peace products. In order to compete in foreign markets in days to come Canadian manufacturers must have capital and labor. The income tax which the Dominion Parliament will impose will reach those manufacturers who withdraw surplus profits from their business for investment or for living, expenses and luxuries; but that which the business earns or which is retained in the business will be exempt, if Sir Thomas White, the Finance Minister, has his way.

Within the past week Congress seems to have absorbed the idea that it is possible to tax industries out of existence and business men now hope that the taxes on business as distinguished from taxes on incomes of individuals will be held within reasonable bounds. Canada's need for money is much greater than that of the United States, because her resources are smaller and she has been in war three years. Yet the Dominion Government realizes the danger of taxing industries to death and will strive to avoid injuring those who are adding to the productive capacity of the country.

As our position resembles that of Canada rather than that of the European belligerents, Congress might find it worth while to study the causes and reasons that have influenced the Canadian Minister of Finance.—N. Y. Commercial.

1ST NEWFOUNDLAND REGIMENT HEADQUARTERS.

St. John's, August 14th, 1917. [No. 89]

Regimental Order. By Colonel Sir W. E. Davidson, K.C. M.G., Commanding Officer.

Forestry Companies, Promotion:

The promotion of Capt. J. R. Goodyear is to date from July 18th (Correction Royal Gazette July 31st).

Notice:

No. 408, Pte. Thomas Joseph Hackett, Nfld. Regiment, who was posted as a deserter on October 31st, 1914, has been traced under the name of Thomas Murphy, under which name he re-enlisted in the Rifle Brigade on November 10th, 1914, and is now a Lance Corporal since February 9th, 1916.

Private Hackett—as Murphy—of the Rifle Brigade, won the Military Medal for distinguished conduct in the Battle of the Somme on August 24th, 1916. Lance Corporal T. Murphy is no longer a member of the Newfoundland Regiment, but this notice is published to show that he has redeemed his character as a soldier.

J. J. O'GRADY, Capt. and Adj.

His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to appoint Hon. Richard Anderson Squires, K.C., LL.B., to be Colonial Secretary; Hon. W. F. Lloyd, K.C., D.C.L., to be Minister of Justice; Hon. Michael P. Cashin, to be Minister of Finance and Customs; Hon. William W. Halfyard, to be Minister of Agriculture and Mines; William Woodford, Esq., to be Minister of Public Works; John G. Stone, Esq., to be Minister of Marine and Fisheries; Hon. J. R. Bennett, to be Minister of Militia; Rev. T. DuBour-dieu, to be a member of the Roman Catholic Board of Education for the District of St. Jacques, in place of Rev. G. H. Hawkins, left the District; Rev. J. F. Kerwan, to be a member of the Roman Catholic Board of Education for the District of Bay of Islands, in place of Very Rev. Dean O'Rourke, retired; Mr. Arnott Dumaresque, to be a member of the Church of England Board of Education for the District of Forteau, in place of Mr. Elisha Letto, resigned.

Department of the Colonial Secretary, Aug. 14th, 1917.

The telegram is an attempt to squeeze $8 worth of long distance conversation into 45 cents' worth of space.

Before the telegraph was invented the only way to reach an absent friend with a message of love was to send it through the post office and wait until New Year's day for an answer. Some people distrusted the post office, owing to the difficulty of finding general delivery clerks who could read and write, so they hired Indian runners and relays of messengers on horseback. This was expensive, however, and often resulted in tedious delays, due to the tendency of the Indian to stop en route and inhale the entire contents of a brewery.

After a telegram has been painfully written out and the important words underscored, it is handed to a blase interpreter with the idea of converting it into the English language. Many a business man who prides himself upon his handwriting has been lastingly humiliated by some bullet-nosed telegraph operator who informs him that he is not familiar with the Chinese alphabet. This is a very annoying practice when a man is in a hurry, and causes people to wonder why the telegraph companies do not require every employee to tack up a High school diploma in the office.

The telegram is sent over a long wire which runs along the railroad track and which is always busy with the hum of industry. Some telegrams make the wires hum more than others, owing to the nature of their contents. It is wonderful to witness the eagle-like flight of a curt, ten-word telegram which reaches its destination two hours after its time.

The coldest telegram is a practical joke which causes murder to spring up in the human heart. Yet it is tolerated by law, which shows how little real justice there is in circulation.

NOTE OF THANKS.—The brothers and sisters of the late Patrick Lawlor wish to thank the Doctor, Matron and Nurses of the Sanatorium for their kindness and attention to him during his illness; also the kind friends for their sympathy and wreaths to adorn the casket.—THOS. LAWLOR.

Other People's Businesses.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

What a lot we all know about other people's business. Especially about the profits. The other day I heard two men discussing a third man's profit on a trucking job. Said the first, "I'm afraid he'll not make much money on it." Said the second, "Why he's going to get forty dollars and it will only take him three days. Over twelve dollars a day. I call that pretty good money."

What About Gasoline and Oil? Said the first, "What about gasoline and oil? And how about interest on the money invested in the truck? And depreciation?" "Oh, yes, I suppose those things do mount up," conceded the second man. And yet, left to himself he would have reckoned "twelve dollars a day" good pay.

And the queerest thing about that is that he is a business man, in business for himself.

Those Terrible Dentists' Bills. The dentist is another personage whose profits are very commonly reckoned that way. His patrons know he gets so much an hour for his time and they multiply that by the number of hours in the day (forgetting that there must be waits) and that by the number of days in the year (forgetting dull seasons) and allot him an income which they feel is exorbitant. They completely forget his office rent, the salary of his helper, the large cost of up-to-date equipment.

A music teacher told me that she once heard two young girls behind her in the trolley and unconscious of her presence, reckoning up what she must make. The allowed for no dull seasons or studio rent. "I only wish I earned half what they allotted me," she said. "I didn't wonder that both girls decided to be music teachers."

Don't Put On Blue Glasses to Hunt With. In hunting about for the nigger in the woodpile responsible for the high cost of living, many large businesses are now being attacked, some justly and some unjustly. It is a common mistake to reckon their profits in this cross-eyed way. Take for instance the bread business, agitators will show how many loaves of bread can be made out of one barrel of flour and will actually forget to reckon the yeast, the milk, the sugar, to say nothing of the bakery's overhead expenses in plant, labor, delivery, etc.

There is a nigger in the woodpile—there is no doubt of that and we all want to catch him. But to go about in this unreasonable way is to put on blue glasses to hunt with. We need the clearest kind of vision for this task. We can't afford to obscure it by such unreasonableness.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT on my vessel and in my family for years, and for the every-day ills and accidents of life I consider it has no equal. I would not start on a voyage without it, if it cost a dollar a bottle.

Back from the Straits.

The S. S. Ethic, Capt. Goble, reached Humbermouth yesterday morning from the Straits mail service. Capt. Goble wired the following report to the Reid Nrd. Co.:

"Made all the ports of call to Battle Hr. Had strong westerly gales going, and moderate weather, with dense fog. Low separate collars for wear with street dresses are favored. Ribbons are used on everything, even collars are made of them.

Chapter of Accidents.

WOODMAN CUT HIMSELF SEVERELY.

Albert Mitchell, aged 30, of Broad Cove, almost bled to death last evening, as the result of a fearful wound which he accidentally gave himself. During the afternoon he took his hatchet and went to the vicinity of Gull Pond, off the Broad Cove Road, to cut down trees to make whittings for fencing purposes. He was chopping a sapling when suddenly the axe, which was very sharp, slipped and came across his left leg just below the knee inflicting a gash five inches long and equally deep whilst the main artery of the leg was severed and a muscle badly injured. The victim, who bled copiously, was in an awful predicament, as he was alone and was nearly two miles from home. It was then about five o'clock. He kept in good spirit, boarded his boat and rowed up Gull Pond, which task occupied a half an hour. He then hurried home as best he could, the injured member causing him much pain. He was immediately put on board a wagon by a man named Sharpe and driven to the city for treatment. On arrival, about seven o'clock, the clothing around the leg was saturated with blood and the wagon very much besmeared. Mitchell bore up bravely, although showing signs of weakness, as he must have lost a considerable quantity of blood. He was taken to the surgery of Dr. Campbell, who had to insert five stitches to close the wound, after which the patient was conveyed back to his home in Broad Cove.

DROVE NAIL THROUGH FOOT.

A young man named Carter met with a very painful accident on Tuesday evening last. While carrying a plank on his shoulder he stepped heavily on another piece of timber, through which a long nail protruded. The nail penetrated the foot and went through the soft part of his right foot. He extricated himself and then was treated by Dr. Campbell.

MAN SERIOUSLY INJURED.

As a result of a pile driver falling on him, a man named Willis a workman at the Horwood Lumber Company's premises, had to have fifteen stitches inserted in his head. He was rendered unconscious by the blow and the wonder is that he was not killed outright. After being attended by a physician he was conveyed to his home in Charlton Street.

THE STORY OF THE ADVANCE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, To-Day.

After the brilliant advance this morning, in which the Canadians captured Hill 70 and then swept on north-west of Lens, the attacks were at close grips with the Germans in the western part of Lens late to-day. The attack began at 4.25 o'clock, just as the first grey streaks of dawn were appearing. All night the British big guns had been pouring a steady stream of high explosive shells into the German positions, the great detonations overlapping one another like the rapid crackling of machine gun fire and swelling into a mighty volume of thunder that shook the earth and stunned the senses. Then, a short time before the hour of dawn offensive arrived, the batteries rapidly ceased and a strange and almost oppressive stillness fraught with the impending cataclysm which must follow, crept over the country, until then had been an inferno of death. It had been raining, grey clouds still hung low over the trenches as where crunched the Canadian infantry men waiting eagerly for the arrival of the moment which would summon them to attack. Suddenly ten minutes before the time set for the attack, every British gun in the range broke out with a hurricane of shelling, and a solid line of crimson lightning belched from the German trenches as the explosives broke above them. To this lurid picture was added the unforgettable spectacle of burning oil which the British threw upon the enemy lines. Great clouds of pinkish colored smoke billowed across the country from the flaming liquid and the murky sky threw bayonet colors from the configurations below. The moment the attack started and as the British guns dropped their protecting barrage in front of the Canadian trenches, the clouds parted and a yellow crescent moon appeared. Under the light of the beacon the Canadians leaped over

GERMAN POSITIONS ATTACKED.

LONDON, Aug. 15. Field Marshal Haig's forces attacked the German positions along the west front early this morning from Lens to the northeast of Loos. The official statement says the British are making satisfactory progress, and have carried the German first line at all points of the front attacked.

GERMAN STRONGHOLD CAPTURED.

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 15 (By the Associated Press).—Hill 70, a famous German stronghold northwest of the French mining city of Lens, which dominates the city and the Loos salient, was captured this morning by Canadian forces. The British also pushed their lines into the northwestern environs of Lens in a series of attacks around the eastern side of Hill 70. The British attack was made on a 5,000 yard front, which had an extreme depth of 500 yards, beginning at a point just above Hugelwood. The new British positions now run southeast and beyond Hill 70 towards Lens, the line then bends southwest and encircles the suburbs of St. Laurent and St. Enelle. British guns have been pounding for days at Hill 70 which the Germans considered impregnable. The infantry attack began at 25 o'clock this morning. The capture of Hill 70 ranks in importance with the biggest military operation this year. It was the last dominating position in this section which remained in the hands of the Germans. From it a wide territory can be controlled. Hill 70 is to Lens and to Loos salient what Messines Ridge is to Ypres, and in some ways it is an even more enviable position than Messines Ridge because even after the fall of Messines Ridge the Germans still retained Pickem Ridge from which they could sweep the country surrounding Ypres. Hill 70 was bombarded with guns of all calibres which worked havoc among the German defences on the crest of this eminence. The Germans had undoubtedly prepared for the attack as far as possible for there is not a question that they were aware of it impending. Their nervous shelling of the communicating roads back of the British positions here for many days gave full evidence that they knew soon or late they must defend their claims, so it was a case of the better side winning. It was just twenty-five back four when the British guns dropped a protecting barrage before the Canadian trenches and the troops leaped over the parapet for their charge. The details of the fighting are not yet available, but the troops swept forward with the same invincible precision which has characterized the work of the great British fighting machine. Considerable numbers of German prisoners are beginning to arrive at the collection depots. The new British front has been established on a triangular line like shears whose points are to the north and south of Lens. In the first stages of the fighting the Canadians met with comparatively small opposition, but as they pushed into the Lens environs the defences of the Germans stiffened. Whatever the outcome the battle already has taken its place in the list of the most important conflicts in the war, through the capture of Hill 70. The British and Germans were at grips in the western part of the city of Lens itself, following the brilliant morning advance, whereby they captured Hill 70 and then swept on northwest to Lens.

Canadian Headquarters, France, via London, August 15th (By Stewart Lyon, special correspondent of the Canadian Press).—In the battle of Lens which began at daybreak this morning the Canadians have once more made a splendid successful attack upon historic ground. Early reports indicate that the Germans first and support lines along a front of over 4,000 yards, extending from the environs of Lens to the Chalk Pits, 1,500 yards south of Hulluck have been carried by storm. The assaulting waves included men from all parts of the Dominion. War-worn veterans, among them some who answered the first call in 1914, were mingled with recent drafts from the base whose first action it was. All alike went forward with irresistible ardor over the most difficult ground, driving the enemy back before them. Among the objectives was Hill 70, east of Loos, where a fiercely contested battle was fought in September, 1915, and Cite St. Laurent, a northern suburb of Lens. News has come in from the troops who have followed up and passed through the waves of attack that they have reached a point east of Hill 70, almost a mile from their jumping off trench. The enemy put up a strong resistance and will probably counter attack in force as soon as his reserves can be brought up, but what Canadian valor has won Canadian tenacity can be trusted to hold. Hill 70 is regarded by artillery experts as the key to Lens, and the enemy will not surrender the city except under an unendurable pressure. No particulars as to our losses or the number of prisoners taken are yet available, but the artillery preparation was most thorough and it is hoped that in the masses churned up of shell pitted chalk on Hill 70 and the half square mile of wrecked miners' houses in St. Laurent few shelters remained for the enemy machine guns, his most effective means of defence.

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 15 (By Associated Press).—British forces to-day attacked German positions on a small section of the Belgian front, pushed the German posts back across the Steenbeke River, east of the Ypres-Thourout railway, and re-established their line on the eastern side of the river. An attempt of the Germans last night to rush the British trenches north of the Arras-Douai railway met with complete reverse. The German plan to take the positions by a surprise attack, failed, and as the enemy infantry charged across the open it faced a disastrous fire from machine guns and rifles, and was forced to beat a hasty retreat to its own lines. The British conducted a highly successful raid on German trenches west of Hulluck, taking some prisoners, and inflicting considerable casualties on the enemy. One of the most spectacular air fights recently, occurred last night when a British pilot met three planes at a height of 11,000 feet and engaged them. The four pilots brought their machine guns into play and the conflict raged furiously for some time. The British aviator fought on despite the great odds against him. By clever manoeuvring he reached a position which enabled him to pump streams of bullets through the tanks of two enemy machines, and they fell to the earth in flames like great rockets, leaving a trail across the sky. The third German fled on his companions being brought down. The Germans are continuing their nervous shelling of British positions about Lens, and their artillery is more active than usual east and northeast of Ypres where large numbers of gas shells are employed.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Aug. 15 (Official).—Early to-day the enemy attacked our line east of West Hulluck, but by heavy artillery and rifle fire was repulsed. He succeeded only in driving back one or two of our advanced posts a few yards. During the day we again improved our positions on the right bank of the Steenbeke River, where we captured several prisoners. Last night the enemy endeavored to raid our positions east of Laventys. At the second attempt he succeeded in entering our lines, but was immediately driven out. Another raid, undertaken in considerable strength, estimated at three companies, was made against our trenches at Neuve Chapelle. It was repulsed by Portuguese troops, after sharp fighting, in which a few prisoners were secured. Enemy aircraft continued to pursue aggressive tactics yesterday and attacked our long distance bombing machines with great vigor. Our machines reached and bombed successfully their objectives in every case. Artillery and photographic work was also carried out throughout the day by our machines, and machine gun fire was opened with effect upon enemy infantry, both in the trenches and in the open. In the air fighting, seven German planes were brought down, and four others driven down out of control; two of our machines are missing.

ROUMANIAN OFFENSIVE.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 15 (Official).—On the western front there were fusillades and scouting operations. On the Rumanian front Monday there were stubborn battles in the Oczna-Grozechki region. The Rumanian troops continued their counter offensive, which began on Sunday, and toward evening occupied the village of Stanici, and dislodged the enemy from the heights about six vorsts southwest of Grozechki. The offensive is developing in the direction of Marasesti and from the direction of Dragas. All counter attacks were repulsed by the Russo-Rumanian troops. Enemy efforts to attack our positions in the region of Makkaimeni, were frustrated by our fire. A Russian scouting party of forty men in a daring surprise attack against a Turkish barrier guard in the region of Tivobeli, captured some prisoners. The remainder of the front is quiet. German airplanes dropped bombs on the railway stations at Nolvedeschno and Sinitavaka.

ANOTHER ENTENTE OFFENSIVE EXPECTED.

BERLIN, Aug. 15. Another great offensive by the Entente Allies on the western front is expected by the Berlin evening newspapers. The Tageblatt says: Doubtless offensive plans on a great scale exist on the French side. Simultaneously we must reckon with a resumption of English attacks in Flanders. Strong fire is playing incessantly on local points on the Aisne, at Verdun and in Flanders, and it announces that local attacks can be speedily expected. The Vossische Zeitung says: It is true also that these attacks in the beginning can bring the enemy here and there at the front in possession of a piece of trench, but this must not frighten or worry us. On the contrary we will be grateful to the upper army command that in the new well tried methods of defence in past months it has found a means of maintaining the spirit and strength of our troops and fresh spirit and energy for our attacks, even when yielding to enemy portions of positions which have been shattered down by enemy fire and have been impossible to hold because they offer no protection.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Aug. 15. Reports of British casualties issued during the first two weeks of August total 21,782; killed, officers, 223; privates and non-com. officers, 4,424; wounded or missing, officers, 1,821; men, 15,254; total 21,782.

LABOR AND THE STOCKHOLM CONFERENCE.

LONDON, Aug. 15. The political correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that if the Labor Conference adheres to its resolution to send delegates to the Stockholm Conference, the Premier will instantly advise a general election.

FRENCH GAINS.

PARIS, Aug. 15. The French attacked in Belgium last night and made considerable advance in the region of Dixmude, reads the war office official. The Germans directed a heavy artillery fire against the French first lines on the Aisne front, between Hurtebise and Craonne. On the Verdun front the French repulsed German attacks.

SPAIN RIOTING.

PARIS, Aug. 15. Six persons were killed and nine others were wounded when strikers clashed with soldiers at Barcelona, according to a statement issued by the Spanish Consul-General and received here.

INSPIRED BY AUSTRIA.

LONDON, Aug. 15. "The so-called peace terms have a distinct German flavor." This reply was given in authoritative quarters in London to-day in reply to questions by the Associated Press in regard to the Vatican proposals. The opinion was expressed that the inspiration for the peace movement probably emanated from Austria and was in the nature of a trial balloon as a prelude for definite propositions from the Central Powers to the Allies.

THE POPE'S PROPOSALS.

LONDON, Aug. 15. The peace pronouncement of Pope Benedict was an entire surprise to the British public. Whether or not it was a surprise to the Government cannot be learned. The proposal embodies what have been well known here for some time as the terms the Central Powers would have been glad to offer, and believed to have accepted, being virtually the restoration of before-the-war conditions. British pacifists undoubtedly will favor an acceptance of any offer to go into a peace conference, but the great majority of the people will look askance at the proposal, which they think was issued distinctly in the interests of the enemy powers. The Pope's offer did not even constitute a newspaper sensation. While some afternoon papers gave it their largest headlines, others printed it merely as a paragraph among the secondary news items of the day.

AMERICAN OFFICIALS' VIEW.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15. Pope Benedict's proposals were not unexpected to the United States, not to say of the Entente Allies. The possibility of a peace move was discussed with British Foreign Minister Balfour, and Vice-Premier Vivanti, when the British and French mission were in Washington. It was agreed that all the Allies, including the United States, should refuse to discuss peace terms while Germany occupied the territories she had taken by force and thereby avoid what the Allied statesmen considered a German trap. The Pontiff's proposals presents the question in a somewhat different light, difficult perhaps to meet, because it offers to the war-weary world hope for peace. Germany and her allies are expected promptly to accept the Pope's proposals. American officials acknowledge that the Vatican's offer is of a nature calling for reply of diplomats of the Entente circle, but voice nothing but a unanimous opinion that it will be rejected. American officials realize that a convincing reply is required for the world's page of history. That the proposals cannot be accepted as they stand is certain, that they will not be accepted at all is probable.

Yesterday's Garden Parties

KILBRIDE.
There was a goodly attendance at the Kilbride Garden Party yesterday afternoon. Included in those present were His Grace the Archbishop, Revs. Frs. Renouf and Sheehan, Hon. Sir E. P. Morris and Hon. J. R. Bennett. The visitors were welcomed on reaching the grounds by Rev. Fr. Coady. Teas and refreshments were bountifully supplied. Football, baseball and various other amusements were provided for the visitors. In the evening a concert and dance was held, wherein those assisting the ladies were Messrs. M. F. Alyward, P. K. Devine, F. Devreaux and T. P. Halley.

ST. JOSEPH'S.
Despite the unfavourable weather there was a good attendance at the Garden Party in aid of St. Joseph's Parish Church, held at Signal Hill yesterday afternoon. The energetic ladies of the Parish did everything possible for the comfort of their guests. Rev. Dr. Kitchen took an active part and together with his able staff of assistants is to be congratulated on his efforts. At night the residence of Mr. Cantwell, caretaker of Cabot Tower, was thrown open to the visitors and an enjoyable dance held. Quite a number of the younger folks and not a few of the older people tripped the light fantastic till an early hour this morning.

Appealing to Deaf Ears

(From the New York World.)
When the German newspapers themselves quote facts for frying at $4.05 a pound, goose fats at $3.36, fowls for soup at $1 a pound, horse-meat at 53 cents minimum and other meats upward in proportion, it is obvious that fats and meats have gone beyond the reach of all save the rich in Germany. And fats for northern peoples are a most important article in sustaining human dietary. This was the situation when Germany was being supplied with large quantities of foods and fats from adjacent neutral countries which were made good to them by imports from the United States. What it will be when these imports are cut off remains to be developed. There is nothing in this situation to encourage greatly the various neutral commissions on their way to the United States or already there. They will by their mere presence emphasize the importance of the new American embargo as a factor in winning the war against the German autocracy. We have no purpose to interfere with their feeding of Germany. They can export there as much of foods and fats as they want to and get as rich out of trade as they can. But they must sacrifice their own amplitude of living in doing so. They are not to be permitted to draw upon their own vital supplies to help out their enemy and then freely make good the deficiencies by shipments from this side. These neutral embargo commissions will be welcomed and heard on any reasonable matter they have to present. But on this proposition of dulling a great weapon of war now in our hands for their enrichment in giving aid to the enemy they will appeal to deaf ears.

POOR GERMANY

Old Kaiser Bill is bad enough; you must admit it's pretty tough to have a king like that; a man so arrogant and vain, with egotism so insane his head outgrows his hat. It must be tough to have a king who always says a crazy thing when wisdom's in request, who was, before he took his lance and started trespassing in France, the universal jest. But Kaiser Bill, with all his sins, his withered arm and shrivelled shins, has points one may admire; his heart is not entirely stone, and people say they've heard him groan o'er all his blood and fire. The load he carries is so great he'll sink beneath it soon or late, and he will cash his string; then, if the Hohenzollern line be not uprooted, stalk and vine, the kron prinz will be king. The kron prinz, with the weasel face, the runt of a decaying race, the war's prize also, and when he is monarch Germans will with yearning think of Kaiser Bill, who is at least a man. Poor Germany! To look ahead and think that when your Wilhelm's dead, this prinz will be on deck! It will be punishment severe for all the woe you're causing here, the ruin and the wreck.

Warner's Rust-Proof CORSETS.

They have every quality that spells Service—they are light, durable and comfortable.

The first feature that a woman appreciates in a Corset is shape, but the shaping must be comfortable.

This you can rely upon through a Warner's Rustproof; and the fact that a Corset is impervious to moisture is a feature not to overlook.

$1.30 per pair up.

Every Warner Corset is guaranteed not to rust, break or tear.

ABOUT STATIONERY!

You are paying just about twice as much for your Stationery now as you did a few years ago, and prices are still soaring. There are certain grades of paper which will not be procurable at any price if things continue on as they are going, and this applies especially to the better kinds. We have just opened a shipment of Stationery in boxes, packages, etc., and are selling it at prices for which it would be impossible for us to offer it again after this lot has been sold out. We have linen-finished Stationery with a splendid smooth surface—a paper you'll love to write on—boxed, with envelopes to match. Price 27c. and 47c. box.

Writing Paper in 5 quire packages (120 sheets), ruled and plain, at 15c., 25c., 35c., 47c., 55c. and 75c. per package. Special prices to shopkeepers on this paper when buying by the ream.

We have also a splendid assortment of Writing Pads in ruled and plain. Note and letter sizes with paper to suit all tastes, at 95c., $1.10, $1.35, $1.55 and up to $5.00 doz.

Buy your supplies of Stationery from us at present prices and save money.
