Love in the Abbey

Lady Ethel's Rival

CHAPTER XII.
LOVE IN THE ABBEY.

While he is speaking, the two old people hurry off to make ready the room, and Doctor Greene follows them to prepare a bandage. Lord Sterne is seated, leaning back with an air of contentment. Kitty is standing a little aside with anything but an air of contentment, with, instead, the most sorrowful, remorseful, and miserable countenance.

Lord Sterne looks up at her, and the smile and tone of banter disappear. "Kitty!" he says. At the sound of the changed tone, Kitty starts and flushes. "Kitty—come a little nearer!" She moves a shade nearer, within reach of his hand, and he stretches it out and puts it on hers. "Don't look so cut up, Kitty," he says, in that dangerously thrilling voice of his. "You wouldn't have felt a twinge if I had come a cropper over a stiff bullfinch over which you had showed me a lead after the hounds! Why should you now! Don't! It hurts me to see you look like that! You are not yourself, nor the light, careless, darling, self-witted Kitty I love—I like to see," he corrects himself. "Smile!"

Kitty turns her eloquent eyes on him reproachfully. "One smile! What! Don't you owe me that? Ah, Kitty, if you knew how much I owe you!" His hand closes a little more tightly on her arm, and Kitty does not move away. "If you knew—you cannot know now, but you may some day! This is the happiest day I have had for years—this day I shall look back to—I feel it! When you and I played Darby and Joan in a blue coat with brass buttons, and a cotton dress from Noah's ark! Ah, Kitty—if I could but think—could but dare to swallow the tempting delusion that you would look back upon it—," he breaks off suddenly and frowns. Then he looks at her hand so small and soft. "To think this little hand should be so strong," he says, "so strong!" and as he speaks he bends his head and touches her hand, ever so lightly, with his lips. It is a courtly, a knightly caress, full of reverential homage, that may mean everything, or nothing! It is an old-fashioned piece of courtesy that a man may even nowadays pay to a lady, old or young, without offense, given or taken. But Kitty feels as if an electric shock had shot through her. The blood rushes to her face, then retreats, and leaves it pale and tragic. She turns her eloquent eyes upon him with a look that shall haunt him in after years; across the gulf which Fate shall dig between them; a look that even now nerves him strangely.

"Kitty," he says, and then he stops, and stares beyond her, with an impatient frown—"who is that?" he says sharply, in the old, imperious style. Kitty turns slowly, and sees, standing at a little distance, honest, true-hearted James Ainsley. Lord Sterne's hand drops from her arm; Kitty moves—how swiftly, yet softly, a woman can move at such a moment!—from his side, and James—honest James comes up. There is a bewildered, an anxious, a combination of expressions on his round, red face, that contrasts strangely with the calm, pale, patrician one of the other man. James stares from one to the other, from the blue coat to the cotton dress. "Kitty!" he says, "you here! I didn't expect to see you here." ("Kitty!" Lord Sterne's face lowers with sharp surprise.) "No," says Kitty shamefacedly, with an embarrassment that causes Lord Sterne's face to grow cold and critical. "No—I—Lord Sterne," turning her face, not her eyes, to his, "this is Mr. Ainsley, an old friend. James, Lord Sterne has hurt his arm, through my fault."

Honest James came forward, stammering, "Hurt his arm?—I'm sorry for that!—through your fault!" "Nothing of the kind," says Lord Sterne, with a smile that is rather cold. "Miss Trevelyan takes credit for more than belongs to her. Through my own, Mr. Ainsley." James looks from one to the other—Lord Sterne, smiling, Kitty, downcast and embarrassed—and says nothing. Up bustles little Doctor Greene. "Now, my lord—Ah, James! how do you do? Your uncle—," Then stopping short, as he sees James' black coat and hatband. "Humph!—ah, yes, dear me. Lord Sterne has met with an accident, and we are going to make him comfortable, I hope, at the abbey! Now, my lord, will you lean on me?" Lord Sterne rises. "Thanks." Then he looks at James Ainsley. James came forward at once.

"Can I be of any use?" he says, and holds out his arm. "Thanks," says Lord Sterne, placing his own within it. Then, as he turns, he stops and holds out his hand to Kitty. "Good-by, Miss Trevelyan. A few hours' sleep and I shall be on my legs again."

Kitty puts her hand in his for a moment, and he turns away. She watches him until he gets to the door; then he turns his head and looks at her—a look questioning—she might almost say imploring—and then he disappears. Kitty sinks onto the bench and tries to think, her hands clasped in the lap of her cotton gown, and she stares dreamily before her; but she is not to be allowed time to think just yet, for up clatters a carriage, and out of it get the Honorable Francis and Mr. Sydney Calthrop.

The latter jumps out of it in his characteristic way, alert and active, and ere he turns to assist his slow, elegant, and lethargic companion, he glances quickly round, and sees Kitty approaching. For all that, he takes no notice until the Honorable Francis has slowly reached the ground; then he turns, and with a well-feigned start, exclaims: "Miss Trevelyan!" "Eh?" says the Honorable Francis, looking about him with the elevated eyebrows and generally just-awakened-from-an-aristocratic-snooze air peculiar to him. "Miss Trevelyan—my daughter! Where?"

Mr. Sydney Calthrop, hat in hand, with his eyes on Kitty—Kitty, in a cotton dress of the Noah's-ark period—Kitty with disheveled hair, with a bloom upon her cheek that is half defiance, half nervousness—Kitty beautifully grotesque!—with his eyes fixed with respectful admiration upon her face, Mr. Sydney Calthrop makes a gesture almost of introduction. The Honorable Francis raises his eyeglasses, and stares! Then, with a gasp, he clutches his companion's arm, and, in a tone of the deepest horror and despair, half points to, half waves her away from him. "Can I believe my eyes? That—that individual is not Miss Trevelyan—not, not, Kitty!" The obnoxious name forces itself out with a groan. Kitty flushes, then smiles and approaches.

Mr. Sydney Calthrop looks from one to the other, deprecatingly at the daughter, sympathizingly at the father. If any man can run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, that man is Sydney Calthrop; he performs the difficult feat now to perfection. "My daughter!" exclaims the Honorable Francis, in a tone of the deepest woe—in a tone signifying that the last straw had been laid upon his aristocratic back, and that now he must, he really must give in. "My daughter!—in the garb of a maidservant!" he gasps. "Great Heaven! what is the meaning of this hummer?" Kitty, half inclined to laugh, and yet feeling pretty near crying—one must admit that it has been a trying morning for her—says nothing, but frowns deeply. Then is Mr. Sydney's opportunity to run with the hare. Hat in hand still, as if to mark that her strange and humble masquerade makes no difference in his respect, he turns from one to the other. "I think I can explain—yes, I think I understand!" says Mr. Calthrop. "There has been an accident. The worthy old gentleman we met on Lord Sterne's horse said something about the river. We could not glean the full meaning of his explanation, given—I assure you, Miss Trevelyan, while he was at full gallop! But that is it, no doubt, and Miss Trevelyan has been compelled—has been wise enough to change her habit."

Kitty looks at him with something like gratitude. The Honorable Francis groans. "But," he wails, in the lowest of falsettos—"why, if there was such occasion—and knowing—I say knowing Miss Trevelyan's aptitude for getting into difficulties of—of this nature, I can quite credit it—why, if there was absolute necessity for a change of garments, why assume this—this degrading costume!"

Kitty flushes for a moment, then subsides with a sigh. "It is an old dress of Mrs. Pritchard's, papa," she says. "Do you suppose she had a selection of Worth's latest costumes for me to choose from? Lord Sterne was obliged to wear an old blue coat with brass buttons."

"An old—blue coat—with—with brass buttons!" echoes the Honorable Francis, with vacant horror. "Great heavens! Lord Sterne in an old coat with brass buttons? Where is Lord Sterne?"

"In bed, my dear Mr. Trevelyan," says the cheery voice of Doctor Greene, "and I think this young lady should be in here, from all I can hear."

The Honorable Francis looks from the doctor's little red face to Kitty's pale one, still confused and bewildered.

"And upon my word," says the good-natured doctor, quick to see that Kitty is in for a scrape, "we ought all to be very much obliged to Miss Kitty for her courage—and her strength—oh! oh!" he says banteringly, as Kitty turns to him almost pleadingly, "you can't hide your light under a bushel, Miss Kitty, if you try. Lord Sterne has been giving me a very fair account of the catastrophe, and he doesn't exaggerate—I know the Lombe when the stream is up!—he doesn't exaggerate when he says that you saved his life!"

"Saved his life—saved his life!" echoes the Honorable Francis, more hopefully involved than ever. "But—but why should he want his life saved? I mean when did he want his life saved?"

Mr. Sydney Calthrop, who had been standing watching the three faces with a keen, and yet naturally careless scrutiny, here interposes. "I think," he says, in his quiet and easy voice, "we ought to try and save Miss Trevelyan from catching cold. May I go and get your hat? In the cottage, is it not?" and without waiting for an answer, he runs in and gets it, hands it to Kitty, and presents his arm at the same time.

Kitty takes it—goes to it almost as a harbor of refuge, and he helps her into the carriage quietly, respectfully, almost reverentially.

But the Honorable Francis is still confused and hopelessly off his balance. "Lord Sterne," he articulates, "we must wait for Lord Sterne."

"Impossible, my dear Mr. Trevelyan," says Doctor Greene, politely passing him toward the carriage. "In bed, yes in bed—sends all excuses to the earl. I myself will ride that way and make my report—thanks to Miss Kitty, a favorable one. For the present, an revoir," and having at last succeeded in forcing the Honorable Francis into the carriage, the two gentlemen exchange a few words. Mr. Sydney Calthrop jumps in, the coachman drives off, and Kitty, looking out of the window, is just in time to see James Ainsley leaving the cottage by the back way and proceeding moodily in the direction of the Grange.

- (1) Parcels must not exceed eleven pounds.
- (2) Parcels should be addressed with the Regimental number, rank, name and surname of addressee, followed by the last known address of the Unit with which the individual was serving; for example:

U. S. CASUALTIES.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. The new casualty reports added more than 28,000 names to the American total for the war. The summary announced last week totalled 213,111, including 2,163 prisoners. General Pershing said he did not think the number of prisoners would be increased materially by the new figures, indicating the probable total to Nov. 26 will be 265,833. To-day's summary adds 1,823 to the number killed in action or died of wounds, 1,823 to the number of disease, 10,330 to the number of missing and the number of missing in action is increased from 11,160 to 12,980. The large increase in the latter classification is attributed to belated reports from all commands on the checking up of missing men.

U. S. CASUALTIES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. The new casualty reports added more than 25,000 names to the American list for the war. The summary for the last week totalled 213,111, including 2,182 prisoners. General Pershing said he did not think the number of prisoners would be increased materially by the new figures, indicating the probable total to Nov. 26 will be 255,838. To-day's summary adds 2,182 to the number killed in action or died of wounds, 1,823 to the number of disease, 10,339 to the number of missing, and the number of missing increased from 11,169 to 12,169. BRITISH TROOPS CROSS GERMAN FRONTIER.

LONDON, Dec. 1. General Plumer's advanced troops crossed the German frontier, between Bohlen and Eupen and advanced towards the Rhine, the war was announced to-night. By evening the troops had reached the general line of Hurg, Reuland and Bullingen and Montjoie.

SIGNED ABDICATION.

LONDON, Nov. 30. Emperor Wilhelm signed his abdication at Monchengladbach, yesterday, according to a despatch to the British Bureau of Berlin and transmitted by the Exchange Telegraph Co., Copenhagen. The abdication document according to the message expressed the hope that the "Regent" would be able to protect the German people against anarchy, starvation and foreign supremacy. The use of the word "Regent" in the message is emphasized upon here as possibly significant.

WILL PUNISH THE CRIMINALS.

LONDON, Nov. 30. It is returned to power it will be the British Government's policy to insist upon the personal accountability of the Kaiser for the crimes for which he personally was responsible, stated Sir Frederick E. Smith, British Attorney General, in an election speech at Wimborne yesterday. Sir Frederick said the Government was determined that the Kaiser should be given an opportunity to answer the charges which had been preferred against him respecting the submarine murders and outrages on prisoners and the Government was equally determined to make the criminals pay the penalty. It would make no distinction between the occupants of high office and those in humble places. It was also the intention of the Coalition Government to punish Germany, which had broken every law, human and divine, said the Attorney General, adding that in regard to the interned Germans, it was the Government's intention to send them back to Germany.

CANADA'S MUNITION WORK.

LONDON, Nov. 30. The Times, commenting on Canada's munitions achievements says it believes that the record of the Munitions Board will surprise most people in this country, and is unquestionably a striking illustration of the immense and growing resources of the Empire and a signal proof of the great capacity and ability of Sir Joseph Flavelle and his colleagues as well as that of Canadian manufacturers and workers. This great imperial enterprise has been of enormous importance in the terrible struggle through which we have come. The actual and potential strength and resources of the empire are only dimly recognized as yet by our citizens. The work of the Imperial Munitions Board is a proof of what can be achieved by united and harmonious co-operation of Great Britain and the Dominions.

LABOR PARTY'S MANIFESTO.

PARIS, Nov. 30. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—An election manifesto issued by the Labor Party condemns any form of economic war and demands as an essential part of the peace treaty that an International Labor Charter be incorporated in the very structure of a League of Free Nations. It demands immediate withdrawal of Allied forces from Russia, claims freedom for Ireland and India as a democratic right, also self-determination for British subject peoples and advocates the removal of all war time restrictions and the complete abolition of conscription. The manifesto says the party means to introduce large schemes of land reorganization as it regards land nationalization as a vital necessity. It demands the immediate building of a million good houses by the State which could be obtainable by the tenants at fair rents and declares opposition to tariffs. It suggests labor legislation whereby imports produced by sweating shall not enter into unfair competition with home manufacturers. A special tax on capital is urged in payment of war debt and insistence is laid on the heavily graduated direct taxation with the raising of exemption limit. This is stated to be the Labor's definition of conscription of wealth. Immediate nationalization of mines, railways, shipping, armaments and electric power are also demanded in the manifesto as well as better pay and conditions. The Labor Party claims to be the real Women's party and supports complete suffrage, equal pay for both sexes, and deprecates the formation of a sex party. The manifesto is signed on behalf of the National Executive of the Labor Party by Messrs. J. McGurk, Chairman; W. Hutchinson, Vice-Chairman; J. Ramsay MacDonald, Treasurer; A. G. Cameron, J. S. Cline, C. T. Tramp, F. W. Jowett, W. F. Purdy, T. Richards, W. C. Robinson, Ben Turner, Sydney Webb, James Wignall, Robert Williams and W. Harris.

HOOVER TO DIRECT RELIEF.

PARIS, Nov. 30. (By the A.P.)—The plan for the appointment of Herbert C. Hoover as Director General of relief in charge of the entire food and relief administration for the European Allies and the United States has been given approval it was learned to-day by the very highest American authority. It now goes before the Supreme War Council for final determination.

Battle Hymn of the Republic.

(By JULIA WARD HOWE.)
 Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord.
 He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
 He hath loosed the fatal lightning of His ire, and has swung
 His sword of truth and of His rightness marching on.
 I have seen Him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;
 They have built Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;
 I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps—
 His day is marching on.
 I have read a fery gospel writ in burnings rows of steel—
 "As ye deal with my contemners so with you my grace shall deal;"
 Let the hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel—
 Since God is marching on.
 He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
 He is sifting out the hearts of men before His judgment seat.
 Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer Him; be jubilant, my feet—
 Our God is marching on.
 In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
 With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me,
 As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free—
 While God is marching on.

Obituary.

EDWARD J. OLDRIDGE.
 Word has been received by relatives in the city of the death at Pipestone, Minnesota, of Edward Joseph Oldridge, late of the Royal Canadian Engineers, at the age of 44 years. The deceased left his native home 23 years ago, going to the United States, making his way toward the setting sun until he arrived in Western Canada. At the outbreak of war he joined up with the Royal Canadian Engineers and went overseas with his unit. Some six months ago he was invalided out and sent back to Canada, finally crossing the border to Pipestone where, after a few weeks illness his death occurred. He leaves to mourn two sisters, Mrs. Clark, Water Street; Mrs. Renouf, Cochrane Street, and one brother, Richard, this city, to whom the Telegram extends sympathy.

MARIA ELIZABETH HISCOCK.

Passed peacefully away at her residence, South Side, Trinity, Maria Elizabeth Hiscock, wife of the late Edward Hiscock, and daughter of the late John Moore, of Trinity; her daughter Miss Alberta, predeceased her some months ago. Although in spite of best medical aid and all that loving hands could do, death released from her bodily pain one who was beloved and respected by all with whom she came in contact; we feel our loss is Heaven's gain. She leaves to mourn her one son and one daughter—Frederick and Miss Sarah at home; also mother, Mrs. Sarah Moore, of this city, two brothers—John C., of the Reid Nfd. Co., and Frederick, of the Martin-Royal Stores, who left on the noon train to attend the funeral; two sisters, Mrs. Edward Rowe, Trinity, and Mrs. Levi Bursey, Old Perlican.

The victory is won,
 Life's battles are o'er,
 We'll meet you again,
 On that beautiful shore.

The Old, Old Dialogue.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

I was much amused to hear a man and a woman behind me in the trolley, the other day, conducting what I am sure was an age-old dialogue between the sexes. The woman was making comments upon some people whom they had spoken to when they got in, and who were now separated from them by about half a length. She knew the time she said, when Mrs. Russell didn't wear fur coat. In fact, she could remember the time when she was thankful to have some of her rich relations pass on a shabby second-hand coat. But since Mr. Russell had gone into that contracting business she'd forgotten all about those times, especially since that failure of his that seemed to leave him so much better off.

"Don't Speak So Loud, They'll Hear You."

The husband, who had been moving uneasily in his seat, became vocal at this. "Don't speak so loud," he urged. "They'll hear you."

"Nonsense!" said the woman. "They can't hear me." And she went in with some more comments upon their life and habits, while the man squirmed about and put in occasional protests.

Now perhaps my women readers will be wondering why I call this an age-old dialogue between the sexes. Somehow, I do not feel that the man will be similarly puzzled.

My reason is that it seems to me that the habit of thinking people will not hear anything you do not wish to hear is a distinctly feminine trait, and that men are always reasoning with their women folks about their carelessness in this respect.

The Woman Who Makes Audible Comments.

Haven't you seen women picking out people in a gathering and making comments or explanations about them while their masculine companion urges them to modulate their voices?

Haven't you seen women who are dissatisfied with service or purchases, walk through a shop or restaurant commenting freely and sonorously on their dissatisfaction while some unhappy male trails behind, wishing the floor would open and swallow him up?

The Sins of the Tongue Feminine.
I hold no brief for the faultlessness of men. Quite the contrary. But I do think that sins of the tongue are more apt to be feminine offenses; and this is no exception.

Perhaps one explanation of the carelessness of women about what they say is that they are not held to account as men are. While Mr. Russell might rise up and offer to bet any man who said his fallers left him better off than he was before, he couldn't very well fight a woman. I wonder if an age in which women will unquestionably pay for greater rights by greater responsibilities and accountabilities, will change this particular trait at all.

THE VANITY OF POWER.

He built great guns and armaments; Trained men to kill and maintain the work.

To sixty years his life he spent; He fashioned mighty ships of steel And kept their purpose grim unknown.

He boasted that the world should kneel Some day before his mighty throne. The child was taught to bear a gun. His preachers preached the law of love.

Love was forbidden to the Hun. Except the love which served the state. The voice that dared to speak of truth. Was stifled. Only that allowed which led a nation's trusting youth To serve a Kaiser, coldly proud.

Never in all these forty years Of training was there hint of right; His people's praise, his people's cheers Were all reserved for force and might.

And then at last he launched his blow Which was to read and chatter truth. For power he filled the world with woe. For power he spent a nation's youth.

Never such armies men had faced. Never such guns had mortals known. They laid great fortresses in waste. By them were temples overthrown. Before his ranks the helpless fled. As devastation marked their trail; With blood their hands and feet grew red. And they believed they couldn't fall.

For forty years he'd builded might. In less than five he came to know That none shall ever conquer right. However well he plans the blow. For they who loved the ways of peace And taught their children to be just. Have made his mighty cannons cease And blown his palace walls to dust.

Doomed unto failure is the man Who strives to rise by power alone; However well he makes his plan. In time he shall be overthrown. For vain are all the gains of haste And all the cunning plots and schemes.

Items of Interest

GATHERED FROM EVERYWHERE.
A private from Pawtucket, R. I., found stuck on a barbed wire point in New Man's Land, in France, a scrap of paper bearing the address: "Miss Mary Cooney, 255 Friendship Street, Providence, R. I. U. S. A." Miss Cooney, to whom he sent the slip, it is the hand writing of her brother who has been reported missing, and thinks he stuck the paper on the wire hoping that some word would get to her.

During the influenza epidemic at Pasadena, Cal. it was permitted for church congregations to assemble and for other gatherings to be held—in the open air—provided those present were seated at least two feet apart. In one of the stores a young woman was heard to say: "My! but brought down the statue of the 18-18 inches of me last night and he almost blew a kiss my way." That man ain't afraid of anything."

Dear around Mars Hill, Me. It is said, are more numerous than they have been before for 20 years, and a 200 pound sack of onions can be bought for $2.50. A Mars Hill man says that anybody who can get a rifle ought to get a deer; that $3.50 will buy him a winter's supply of onions, and with a buckwheat meal he ought to live like a King. Is there really one place where people don't have to worry about the high cost of living?

Superstitious persons are saying that the Hun hordes were pressed back steadily from the time when they destroyed the tower of the Parish Church at Albert, and brought down the statue of the Mad donna which had been dislodged by German shell-fire during the invasion of France in 1914. The Germans, after they were driven back from Albert, opened a story that when the statue fell France would lose the war. The parish priest employed a blacksmith to brace and rivet the statue, so that it could not fall while the tower stood.

For the first time since Spanish influenza became epidemic in the United States army camps at home, the surgeon-general's weekly report shows the disease effectually checked, with indications of further improvement. Figures made public Thursday record a decrease of about one-third in the number of cases for the week ending November 5 as compared with the previous week. The total was 6,857, as compared with 18,175. The epidemic now is wearing itself out in the west, the last section to be affected. Marked improvement generally was shown in the pneumonia situation.

One line of work for which women have clearly demonstrated their fitness is banking. More than 51,000 banking positions are now being filled by women in England. The process of filling bank jobs with women in Great Britain is going on at a fairly good rate. Some banks began to substitute girls for men early in the war and now have a good proportion of feminine help. The girls have been found highly efficient and satisfactory workers in most of these positions. They have greater patience than men in routine jobs, and some women are fully equal to men in initiative.

CHANGE OF SUBJECTS.

WALT MASON

We've talked so long of shell and shot, of captains and of kings! The time has come at last, I wot, to speak of other things. Let's turn our thoughts from Petrograd to places nearer home; we need good roads and need them bad, and hence this stirring poem. For years we've struggled through the muck, in weariness and grief, and only said, when we were stuck, "It is no time to beef." We floundered through the muddy pools, across the reefs and bars, and lost our horses and our mules, and mired our costly cars. We said, "Until this war shall cease, our woe's can't be discount; but when arrives the dawn of peace, we'll have good roads or bust." We've talked so long of battle fronts that we may find it hard to turn to other, milder stunts; our spirits may be jarred. We've railed so long at Kaiser Bill that we may think it stale to talk of grading down a hill, or filling up a vale. But it is wise to talk good roads instead of bones and blood; the farmers can't haul their loads because of endless mud. There is no bottom to the pike when comes a sudden shower; I cannot scorch as I would like, at fifty miles an hour. We've harped so long on treason vile it's hard to break away; but we should talk good roads a while, and start the graft to-day.

A DIET FOR HEALTH.

Useful books on food values are constantly appearing and short courses in domestic economy and scientific cooking are now made so plain and simple that any one with ordinary intelligence can follow them and profit from them.

The four tests to which food must be subjected are as follows: Chemical—This shows what percentage of each nutritive constituent the food contains; that is, how high it is in protein, how much fat or carbohydrates it contains.

Physical—How much potential energy is in it. The standard of heat production is the calorie, which means the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one gramme of water one degree centigrade. Therefore when we speak of the caloric value of food we mean the amount of energy liberated. This is a most important point both to brain and muscle workers.

Physiological—Broadly speaking, this means does the food agree with one. How does it behave in the stomach? Is it easily digested and how perfectly is it absorbed? A food difficult to digest had better be omitted, no matter what proportion of proteins it contains or how high it may be in calories.

Economical—Under this head we must decide whether the nutritive elements can be obtained at a proper and reasonable cost. The chemical and physical test in relation to food would seem to be the most important, and they would be so if the body was exactly what it is often compared to—a machine. The human machine has curious idiosyncrasies. We might feed it with certain substances strong in proteins but in such a form that the body could not digest or absorb them.

Christian Bros' Collection.

Yesterday at all the Masses in the city churches the annual collection in aid of the Christian Brothers was taken, and once again a record amount was realized, the total exceeding that of last year by $1,672.95, with the Kilbride subscription yet to be handed in. The comparative figures are:

Parish	1917	1918
Cathedral	$3,968.00	$4,991.91
St. Patrick's	1,704.00	2,384.18
St. Joseph's	124.64	162.85
Mt. Cashel	55.00	55.30
Kilbride	52.65
Total	$5,900.29	$7,574.24

At noon the collectors assembled at the Monastery when Hon. J. D. Ryan on behalf of the committee and the churches tendered to Rev. Bro. Ryan, Superior at Mount St. Francis, the collection, which he was pleased to state exceeded expectations, but was larger than ever, which he took as an evidence of increased general support of the good work of the Brothers. Mr. M. Bambrick, of St. Patrick's, paid a glowing tribute to the work of the Brothers since coming here in the fitting of their pupils for every walk of life, and congratulated them on the appreciation of their efforts as shown by the collection. Mr. J. Clooney felt that St. Joseph's parish had contributed liberally and that even better would be done next year. He referred to the good work done there in the erection of a new church, and the establishment of the Nuns, and hoped that in the near future the Brothers would also be holding school there. Rev. Bro. Ennis thought that while the amount showed appreciation, it also evidenced the prosperity of the country. Hon. J. D. Ryan hoped a number of Brothers would soon be teaching at St. Joseph's and also the number of priests would be increased, and promised all assistance in his power to bring this about. Rev. Bro. Ryan, superior of the community, was deeply grateful for the splendid collection, and said that his experiences while visiting friends of the schools during the week were of a most happy nature. Everywhere himself and associates were given the impression that it was really a pleasure to help them. He was proud to represent the Monastery and greet the friends present, some of whom were the pupils of Rev. Bro. Holland, many of whom had attained high positions in life. Briefly he reviewed the history of the Brothers, who brought learning to all parts of the world, and implanted the spirit of religion which lives and flourishes. Referring to the war, he said that when the history of it is written the story of no unit will be brighter than that of Newfoundland. He regretted their native land would never hold the ashes of the heroes who had fallen, among whom were 150 of St. Patrick's and Holy Cross boys. Peace has now come and he hoped Newfoundland would share in the benefits to follow. In conclusion he again thanked all for the splendid collection, the Press for the assistance given, and promised the support of the Brothers' efforts in the cause of education as before. Other speakers were Dr. V. P. Burke, Mr. J. L. Slattery, Mr. Jas. Harris, Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., and Sir P. T. McGrath, who in turn extolled the work of the Brothers and congratulated them on the substantial amount of the collection.

A Tribute.

Yesterday morning the pulpit of the Congregational Church was occupied by Rev. Dr. Cowperthwaite who preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon from Psalms 103, verses 4 and 5: "Who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies. Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the Eagles."

Instancing the entire book of psalms as depicting the various heights and depths that can be attained in our earthly pilgrimage, and citing the beautiful 23rd with its glowing description of the good shepherd leading his flock through green pastures, beside still waters, and the 46th as portraying the confidence of the Christian Church in Almighty God as "our refuge and strength," the preacher, in choice language, showed the psalmist David as rising to the highest and noblest heights in his exhortations to bless God for all his mercies, as contained in the words of his text in the 103rd psalm.

The entire service was bright and inspiring, the Hymns selected being: "O God our help in ages past," "Rock of Ages" and "Jesus lover of my soul," whilst the sacred duet: "He shall wipe the tears from every eye" was pleasingly rendered by Miss B. Langmead and Mr. R. G. Ross.

Dr. Cowperthwaite, who yesterday entered on his 81st year of earthly pilgrimage, still exhibits remarkable vitality, and listening to him yesterday morning the minds of quite a number of his hearers were carried back over a quarter of a century when the rev. gentleman was a prominent figure in old Gower Street Church then. The sermon was so much in keeping with the times, we are living in, with recollections of the past four years of joys and sorrows of the greatest heights and depths, and our looking forward to the coming International Peace Conference which all hope and pray "will sound the death knell of war for all time."

The writer, therefore, wishes to pay tribute to the venerable clergyman and feels sure he is only voicing the sentiments of his co-religionists of Queen's Road Church in wishing Dr. Cowperthwaite an extended happy eventide and glowing sunset of life.—J. A. C.

The Septic Tank.

Dear Sir,—For the information of any of your readers who do not thoroughly understand the Septic-Tank Disposal System, I enclose a simple explanation. It is now possible to get steel chambers ready to set in the ground which will be cheaper than the concrete ones in general use as the steel one would have the advantage of being removable.

I also give a short explanation of the Chemical Toilet. The one I explain is the latest development in the line, but a perfectly sanitary one could be made locally for less than a ten dollar bill.

Every earth closet in the city could be converted into a Chemical Toilet at the cost of only a few dollars each, and to anyone interested I should be pleased to give a drawing and explanation of the making of same.

I would thank any architect or engineer to criticise or endorse my explanation.

The following is Section 178 of the proposed City Charter and proves that the Septic-Tank System is not condemned by the Council.

Section 178.—No privy or cess-pool shall be permitted within the City limits, but the Council shall have power to permit the use of Septic-Tanks in localities where sewage connections are impossible, provided the same shall be constructed and used according to the rules and regulations provided therefor.

Trusting that if you think these explanations are of public interest, you will publish them.

Yours faithfully,
JAMES MURDOCH.
Nov. 30, 1918.

SEPTIC-TANK SYSTEM OF SEWAGE DISPOSAL

The Septic-Tank System or sewage purification and disposal is a process by which the raw sewage from a building, or a number of buildings, is conveyed to a set of collecting tanks and stored there until the solids have settled to the bottom and the floating material has gathered at the top, and a septic action has more or less purified the liquid between the sediment and the floating scum. The term Sep-sis, from which Septic is derived, means putrefaction, or decomposition of animal or vegetable matter accompanied by fetid odors. The septic action, or putrefaction, is produced by a germ growth, which is encouraged, as much as possible, by burying the tanks underground and preventing the liquids becoming chilled.

The condition of darkness, no air-currents, and a moderate heat caused by decomposition and fermentation, develop a large mass of minute organisms known as ANACROBIC BACTERIA. The chemical action thus developed causes a large portion of sewage to pass off in the form of gases, a small portion remaining in the tank as sludge. The effluent flows from the tank practically without odor. The septic process is continuous and requires no attention except the occasional removal of the sludge. The effluent from the tank being practically odorless, can ordinarily be discharged into an open ditch or stream, that is located at a point lower than the outlet from the tank or it may be run through farmer's tie pipe and used to irrigate a lawn or garden if the ground is located lower than the outlet.

The Latest Chemical Toilet

consists of a special hopper-shaped vitreous china bowl. No water is required for flushing. The bowl is connected to the tank below by a large 12" tube. In the tank is placed a strong disinfectant consisting of a dry powder which is dissolved in water. It takes twenty-five pounds of this chemical to charge the 140 gallon tank. The whole charge is put in at once, and no further attention is required until the tank is full. The tank will require emptying about twice a year in the average home.

The emptying process is very simple. A four inch valve in the bottom of the tank is opened by merely turning a rod. This allows the sewage to run out in a pile drain or a cess-pool, or to be pumped out as explained later. Inside the tank is an agitator, operated by pulling up the rod that rests beside the bowl. This agitator breaks up the solid matter and the paper, and with the assistance of the chemical completely liquefies.

The outfit is made odorless by a four inch ventilating pipe which leaves the top of the bowl and runs up through the roof or connects with the chimney.

Chemical toilets can be installed in any home or building in a few hours' time by any man handy with a hammer and saw.

It is simple and inexpensive in operation and free from the annoyance of freezing and clogging pipes.

Must Wear Their Medals.

Probably no fighting-man is as proudly proud of his decorations as the French soldier. While the British "Tommy" is content to wear his ribbons and leave his medals in safe custody, the poilu is never quite happy unless his medals are dangling on his tunic. He even takes them into battle; and, although only the ribbons are visible, he knows that the medals attached to them are in his tunic-pocket to inspire him to fresh deeds of valor.

If the Medaille Militaire is among them he has good cause to be a proud man; for his much-coveted decoration is to him what the Victoria Cross is to our own soldiers—the supreme reward of valor. There is no General in the French Army who would not envy him this high decoration, unless he has one himself; for, curiously enough, the Military Medal is awarded to Generals as well as to private and non-commissioned officers, but to no man of intermediate rank.

It is four years older than our Victoria Cross, and its possession carries several enviable privileges with it. Its owner is entitled to a pension of about £4 a year as long as he lives, and to burial with military honours when he dies. Every gentry's epaulettes present arms to him, men of his own rank must salute him, and he need not return to barracks until 11 p.m.

But if the poilu cannot sport the green and yellow of the Military Medal, he may aspire to the much commoner Croix de Guerre, with its ribbon of green, crossed with five red stripes.

The Croix is the "baby" of French war decorations; for it was only instituted in the spring of 1915, "to commemorate individual mentions in the Daily Orders during the campaigns against Germany and her Allies," and it is awarded not only to soldiers but to sailors and civilians. It is also given to nurses who have won a "mention" by their devotion or courage.

The Cross is distinguished by four different symbols. This, a bronze star on the ribbon denotes mention in a Regimental Order; a silver star, mention in a Divisional Order; a gold star in an Army Corps Citation; and a palm in General Army Order. If a regiment has been specially mentioned three times in Army Orders, every soldier in it is entitled to wear a green and red cord across his left shoulder.

Although these are France's chief and best-known war decorations, she has several others, ranging from the Colonial Medal, with its blue and white ribbon (awarded for service in a Colonial campaign) to the ribbon of blue, white and gold, with a red star in its middle, which marks the man who has been discharged from the Army through wounds.

Market Notes.

Codfish.—Notwithstanding the troubles arising over the Italian situation and the difficulties of placing the cargoes of S. S. Escosson and Wellington in that market, in consequence of the action of the combine in forcing down prices, the situation is slowly adjusting itself, thanks to the organized action taken by the local exporters, backed up by the Board of Trade. The suddenness with which hostilities ceased had a considerable effect in weakening the various European markets, and new conditions, unanticipated so quickly, have been created. Nevertheless there need be no uneasiness as without doubt all the fish that we can ship will be wanted. Level head and strong organization are the prime essentials now. The prices of Labrador soft has dropped to $15, but No. 1 Shore holds up at $15.50 to $15.80, with Straits (hard cure) $15.70.

Cod Oil.—The conclusion of the armistice between the belligerents in Europe brought down the demand for this commodity, the present market price being $300 per ton with few, if any buyers, for export. Though the English market is prepared to take our output, there is nothing doing because of a lack of present tonnage, and the high freight demanded. Refined is also suffering from the set back and buyers are not stocking heavily. The price is $2.50 per gallon, on a dull market.

Herring.—Both Bay of Islands and Bonne Bay report an improvement in the fishery since last writing. Several United States schooners are in both bays and a couple have completed loading. The price paid from the nets ranges from five to six dollars per barrel.

Provisions.—Standard Flour wholesale is being sold at $14 to $14.50, the retail rate being $14.90. Importers are suggesting to the Food Control Board that these prices do not allow them a reasonable profit, on account of the extra charges on winter importations and enhanced market rates abroad. Hence it is possible that the coming week will witness a small advance. Beef stands at the last figures quoted, viz., $46.60 for Bos Flank; $48.00 for Bos Packet and $45 for Boston. Local stocks short in consequence of the loss of consignments at Cascadia. No reduction of quotations may be expected, and it is quite likely that an upward trend will take place. Pork on the open market, has taken on several more quotations being 2 1/2 to 3 higher than last week. This has been brought about by an increased demand for purposes of trade. Locally, Fat Back is being offered at $49 to $49.50; Mess, $45.50, and Ham Butt, $47 to $47.50, etc. Sugar continues scarce the local assignment having been disposed very quickly. The prices last week were $12.70 per hundred pounds American Granulated and $12.50 for shipment of brown per S. S. Bag. part cargo of Molasses arriving from Barbados by the Prydzwen, but does not materially reflect the price. There being but enough on hand to supply the sealing and other fisheries. The wholesale price is 95% cents per gallon, retailers selling $1.15 and $1.20 for Plant Groceries. Vegetable Importations from P. E. I. are not coming in so heavily; grown produce continuing to supply the demand.

Benzine mixed with cornstarch a good cleanser for white ware. Cereals and nuts are richer in energy than milk, eggs or meat. When the "howitzer" and its gun became common in the war, it was not used in the same way as the old mortar. It is difficult to separate these classes. Even an expert in ordnance would not find it easy to make a distinction between the two. The mortar is just at what point of the gun disappears and the mortar begins, or at the characteristics of the mortar and those of the mortar. When Germans Escape.

Nothing is more notorious than German cunning, and when three hundred specimens of it, the majority of whom are officers, are penned up in a detention camp with nothing to do but think out fresh schemes for escaping, you may guess that it takes more than ordinary care to hold them. In the camp at which I am stationed there have been several attempts during the past month, all of which have been unsuccessful. The first two were fencing of the compound. Their plans showed the tunnel was intended to pass right under the wire, coming to the surface among some bushes in the garden. The only tools they had were a poker, which they used as a fire-shovel. They also had a large square wooden frame which they pushed along the passage as they worked forward to prevent a collapse. This frame was made from shelves, etc., taken from their huts, and was dove-tailed together beautifully—a typical sample of German workmanship. The soil was collected in a sack, and was distributed among the flower-beds and gardens during the night, so that it should not attract attention.

Dead Countries.

The Allies have promised that when the war is won Poland and Palestine—to mention no others—shall be restored to freedom. Poland was destroyed as a nation in 1795, and Palestine so long ago as 70 A.D. Yet history shows that there is no reason why they should not return to life. Quite a number of countries have been wiped off the map for centuries, and have then reappeared on it. Greece, after being the most famous state of antiquity, was seized by the Turks in 1453, and remained enslaved until 1821. Then the Greeks of the Morea rose against their oppressors, and through years of heroism, blood, fire and agony fought their way to freedom.

How Mrs. Boyd Avoided an Operation

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well. My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. I tried it and so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARY BOYD, 1421 8th St. N. E., Canton, Ohio.

In the evening of the year,
Life unto my saddened gaze
Seems a vision veiled in tears.
All the knowledge fades away
That I vainly thought to keep;
As a little child I pray:
Now I lay me down to sleep,
I have wandered far from Thee,
Since the childish prayer I said,
And the lips that taught it me
Have been gathered to the dead;
Yet her face I seem to see,
When the evening shadows creep,
And again as at her knee,
Pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep!
Softly fades the lingering light;
Lo! the last beam leaves the skies;
And I watch, amid the night,
For the evening star to rise.
Far beyond the bounds of space
I may drift ere day shall break;
Let me see thy mother's face
If I die before I wake!
Darker grows the gathering gloom,
While my soul its vigil keeps
With the memories that loom
Up from Life's unsound deeps.
When upon a sunless strand
I shall hear the surges break
Ere I near the Nameless Land,
Pray Thee, Lord, my soul to 'take.

Press Briefs.

TAKING THEIR WEAPONS.
(Boston Herald.)
The British are receiving those murderous U-boats much as a justice receives gunshot and brassknuckles.

QUEER DAYS.
(New York Evening Post.)
Who would have thought that he would live to see more ex-monarchs in Europe than ex-Presidents in America?

THE CASUALTY RECORDS.
(Hamilton Record.)
Canada's casualties in the war were two and a half times as numerous as those of the United States. But then the American armies were just striking their stride when the fighting stopped.

POETIC JUSTICE.
(Montreal Herald.)
Germany began the war for plunder and ends it by begging for the crumbs from the Allies' table. Was ever there a more ideal exposition of poetic justice?

WORTH WATCHING.
(New York Herald.)
Watch those Bulgars. They are now talking about making a republic.

obviously in the hope that they may be allowed to hold on to some of their ill-gotten gains. The monkish roles of the devil of the Balkins these days is due to acute illness. Watch those Bulgars!

NO REGRET.
"The Kaiser may return to Germany. Why not? As the records stand, no German has expressed regret for the man or his deeds, and not a single German has said a word that would indicate opposition to his returning to his throne whenever he may choose to do so."

OXO

Fortifies the system against Influenza Infection.

Extract from a communication received from a Doctor:—

"A cupful of OXO two or three times a day will prove an immense service as a protective measure. Its invigorating and nourishing properties are most rapidly absorbed into the blood, and thus the system is reinforced to resist the attacks of the malady. It will be apparent that a strong, healthy person will escape contagion when the ill-nourished one will fall a victim, consequently one's aim must be the maintenance of strength."

The benefit to the community of a concentrated Fluid Beef like OXO is greater than ever in the present day; it increases the nutrition and maintains vitality in the system, and thus an effective resistance is established against the attacks of the influenza organism.

OXO appreciably compensates for the shortage of meat.
