ROOFTING OUT DISEASES.

MONTEBELL'S EFFORTS TO SUPPRESS SMALLPOX.

Noble Services Rendered by the Grey Nurse and Sister Religious. Discovery of Many New Cases.

MONTEBELL, Sept. 22.—The number of deaths from smallpox on Sunday was 41. The disease is spreading with the past week being more than double that of the week previous. The deaths in St. John's Baptist village since the outbreak have been computed at 4200. There are many deaths from smallpox in the surrounding municipalities from the 17th to the 21st September.

At a meeting of the health board of health to-day a letter was received from Messrs. Laird, Paton and Son, offering to build a complete smallpox hospital for $21,000 within fifteen days of the acceptance of the tender.

A report was presented of the work done by the sisters of Providence in the east end. They have discovered 138 cases, which they are now caring for. Supplies are carried round in the houses, but simply hand the articles required, as they have no time to enter the houses. Eighteen nurses in the city have been required these are sent. The grey nurse has gone through thirty cases which have been discovered in 88 houses which contain 186 patients.

The civic hospital report for yesterday shows: Admitted, 5; discharged, 4; died, 10. Fifteen thousand dollars, showing that in the business portion of this city the disease is very limited, and that the majority of cases are in the poorer districts. The danger is practically nil, and the free from goods imported into the city.

The municipal council of Montreal held a meeting last night to take action regarding the case of smallpox that occurred here recently. It appears a man named Hogan living in St. Laurent, a mile from the city, had smallpox. Hogan had been removed to a small dilapidated shack within the city. Hogan had been sent to the city by a doctor, and the authorities of Montreal discovered the case. Hogan had been in the city for some time, and he had been in contact with many people. Hogan had been in the city for some time, and he had been in contact with many people. Hogan had been in the city for some time, and he had been in contact with many people.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR'S LECTURE ON ROBERT BROWNING.

Shaftesbury Hall Crowded With a Select Audience. A Couple of Hours of Interesting Instruction.

No more select audience ever assembled in Toronto than the one which greeted the Rev. Dr. Farrar as he mounted the dais last evening in Shaftesbury Hall. The auditorium and gallery were filled with an audience showing a liberal sprinkling of Anglo-Saxons, and the Bishop Sweetman and the archdeacon, who presided and introduced the distinguished lecturer.

Dr. Farrar had very little to say about Robert Browning's personality, and no more about his domestic life. He treated him simply and not merely descriptive but critical and analytical of Browning's principal works. These are now very voluminous, as he has been constantly producing them for over half a century, and his productions show no falling off in quality. He has produced not a book but a literature, an intimate acquaintance with which is a liberal education.

The lecturer passed rapidly in review some of Browning's characteristics as a poet, the great variety of characters he had drawn, the conditions of life he has sketched, and of the manner in which he has treated them. His powers of realistic description are unique, and while he is never didactic and varied in his impulses his movement. Perhaps the most startling assertion was that Browning is the most subjective of all poets except Shakespeare. For he is intensely dramatic, and his quality is usually regarded as being that of a subjective poet. He has the term which Browning uses to describe his own subjective in Browning's own sense of it. He is not a poet of the imagination, but a poet of the intellect. He is not a poet of the imagination, but a poet of the intellect. He is not a poet of the imagination, but a poet of the intellect.
