Implementation will require, in some cases, federal legislation, in others action at the provincial level and for many recommendations, federal-provincial co-operative action. At present an Official Languages Bill is before Parliament. Additional proposals were presented to the recent Constitutional Conference and there have been and will be meetings with the provinces to determine effective ways of implementing bilingualism programs across the country. Certain measures in this area can be taken by administrative action within the compass of existing legislation, as with the language training program in the Public Service on which the government has already embarked.

Questions

CLOSING OF RURAL POST OFFICES

Question No. 1,661—Mr. Southam:

1. Is it the government's intention, for economic reasons, to phase out or close 3,500 post offices in rural areas of Canada?

2. Has a study been made to analyze the economic hardship on the people and small businesses concerned if such a plan is carried out?

3. What alternative employment or compensations would be provided for the postmasters so affected in any such move on the government's part?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: 1. Under a program inaugurated in February 1967, 553 Post Offices have been closed, 217 will be closed shortly, 404 are being retained and 2,851 have yet to be examined to determine whether they should be closed because of their limited usefulness. With improved population mobility, limited shopping facilities in the smaller communities, the movement of people from rural areas to large urban centres and a widespread centralized school system, it became apparent that a re-examination of the usefulness of these small Post Offices was imperative. The situation with respect to each individual Post Office is examined separately.

2. Consideration is given to the effect of the closing on individuals and on the community. Basically, the policy is that if equivalent service can be provided—and often improved service—through rural mail delivery to individual or group mail boxes, a post office that has outlived its useful purpose will be closed. If rural mail delivery is not practicable, service should be available through an adjacent post office. Failing an adequate alternative service, the post office in question will be kept in operation.

3. No alternative employment is offered by the Government but those postmasters under superannuation would receive benefits in accordance with the Public Service Superannuation Act.

P.E.I. CAUSEWAY—FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION

2. When did the program begin?

3. How many students enrolled at the beginning?

4. How many students are now enrolled?

5. If any students left, who were they, and what were the reasons given?

6. What screening procedure was followed in selecting the students?

7. What special steps were taken in Lachute (a) with local citizen groups to provide accommodation or hospitality (b) with the manpower training courses to modify courses of instruction?

8. Was this a pilot project?

9. If so, will there be a full report prepared and released to the public?

10. Is it the intention of the government to bring more Indian students to this training centre at Lachute?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. In November 1968, a departmental counsellor made a survey of Indian people in the James Bay area who were interested in upgrading. This information was relayed to the Department of Manpower. We have been informed by the Department of Manpower that several English speaking upgrading classes at the Grade 8 to 10 level at Lachute were organized. Since this was the nearest location where English speaking courses were available in the province of Quebec in relation to the James Bay area, the Department of Manpower approved admission for those Indian people from the James Bay area who met entrance requirements.

2. The Indian students arrived at Lachute on Friday, January 24 and commenced training on Monday, January 27. They were several days late due to weather conditions.

3. Fourteen students enrolled at the beginning.

4. Two students were enrolled as of March 31, 1969.

Candidates were screened on the basis of satisfactory academic prerequisites and a stated desire to follow up with skill training.

7. (a) (i) Local people were involved in helping to find suitable boarding homes, (ii) On arrival students were met by Department of Manpower representatives and taken to boarding places. At this time they were also given a brief orientation to the community of Lachute. (b) (i) Because of the students language handicap, supplementary English instruction was provided to assist them in their studies; (ii) Special instruction in French was provided since the Lachute community is predominantly French speaking; (iii) The Department of Indian Affairs employed an Indian teacher from Oka to counsel and tutor the students three hours an evening, three evenings a week; (iv) The Anglican Minister of Lachute was made aware of the students coming to the community, since they were all of that religious denomination; (v) A social worker from McGill University showed interest in the group and accompanied the special teacher to assist in counselling the students.

8. This was not considered a pilot project. It is one of the regular type of programs conducted by the Provincial Department of Education, where the Department of Manpower buy spaces on behalf of students who meet their regulations.

9. Since this is not a pilot or special program, no report as such is planned to deal with this particular class.

10. The government is not contemplating bringing more Indian students from the James Bay area to the training center at Lachute.

Question No. 1,810—Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys):

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Manpower and Immigration and the Department of the Secretary of State for External Affairs as follows: 1. In the course of that correspondence the Department of External Affairs had occasion to confirm to the Embassy that Dr. Dotsenko was free both to meet again with Embassy representatives and to leave Canada if he wished to do so. He was likewise free to remain in Canada provided he could satisfy the requirements of the Department of Manpower and Immigration.

Question No. 1,833—Mr. Schreyer:

1. Has an investigation been made by the Restrictive Trades Practices Commission or by any other federal agency, into the recent acquisition of the Computer Sciences Corporation of Canada by Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Telecommunications Ltd.?

2. If so, what is the finding and what action, if any, is now being contemplated?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1 and 2. As the hon. member was informed by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs on March 10 the matter has been referred to the Director of Investigation and Research under the Combines Investigation Act in order that he may consider whether the matter is one coming within the scope of that Act and, if so, whether it affords him reason to believe there may have been a violation of the Act so as to warrant formal inquiry.

The Department of Communications has the responsibility of conducting studies concerning telecommunications matters as they affect the public interest. The question of the relationship between the telecommunications carriers and the computing industry is one of many complex matters within the scope of this responsibility and which, it is expected, in due course, can be the subject of suitable policy determination.

CANADA CORPORATIONS ACT REPORTS

Question No. 1,918—Mr. Saltsman:

1. How many Canadian companies have failed to file annual reports to the government as required under the provisions of the Canada Corporations Act for the following years: 1950, 1955, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968?

2. How many corporations have failed to file their annual reports since their incorporation?

3. Has the federal government imposed penalties on those corporations who have failed to file annual returns to the government and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. Subject to what is said below in reply to part 3 of the question, there are no figures available on the number of companies in default of having filed the Annual Return due on June 1st of every year. These Annual Returns are received before, and in many instances, after June 1st and it is known only weeks after that date, when all the Annual Returns have been examined, whether a company is in default or not.

2. A list of the corporations that have, for any year since their incorporation, failed to file the Annual Return does not exist. The number of existing companies, however, that were, on April 18, 1969, in default of filing the Annual Return that was due on June 1st, 1968, was 1396.

3. There are two means available to the government under the law for the enforcement of the provisions requiring companies to file the Annual Return. The prosecution of the defaulting companies before the Court is one; the other is the dissolution of the company which can be effected when the company has failed to file the Annual Return for three consecutive years. It has always been felt that the important objective here was to force compliance with the Act. Since 1965, when the Act was amended to provide for the dissolution of companies in default for three consecutive years, the rate of compliance has substantially improved. In 1967, 603 companies were dissolved under these new provisions, and, in 1968, 643. As of this date, 542 companies have been in default for two years and, unless they comply upon receipt of a notice of default to be sent shortly after June 1st, they will be dissolved.

3. Was a cost-benefit study prepared with regard to the selection of the airport's site in the Province of Quebec and, if so, would the Minister Table the study?

4. If no cost-benefit study had been undertaken, why was the Treasury Board's P.O.B.S. not followed?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Expansion): 1. The selection of the site was made by the federal cabinet of which the Minister of Regional Economic Expension is a member.

2. The factors taken into account, in assessing the effect of different locations in relation to economic disparities, were the income multiplier, the employment multiplier and the spatial multiplier.

3. This economic assessment was contained in the Higgins report, which has been tabled. Both benefits and costs of alternative locations were compared.

2. How many unmarked motor vehicles are used by the RCMP at/or about the airport at (a) Ottawa (b) Toronto (c) Montreal and how are they utilized?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): 1. (a), (b) and (c), Nil.

2. (a) and (c) Ottawa and Montreal Airport R.C.M. Police Detachments have no unmarked motor vehicles; (b) Toronto Airport R.C.M. Police Detachment has one unmarked motor vehicle.

PRE-DOCTORAL N.R.C. GRANTS

Question No. 1,927—Mr. Saltsman:

1. In the academic years 1965-66, 1966-67, 1967-68, 1968-69, 1969-70, how many applications for predoctoral National Research Council grants were received?

2. In those years, how many were granted?

3. In those years, how many were turned down for lack of funds rather than lack of merit?

Hon. C. M. Drury (President of the Treasury Board): 1 and 2. Predoctoral Awards:

| | Applications | | | Awards | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Renewals | New | Total | Renewals | New | Total |
| 1965-66 | 331 | 1797 | 2128 | 315 | 839 | 1154 |
| 1966-67 | 473 | 2594 | 3067 | 473 | 1177 | 1650 |
| 1967-68 | 700 | 3004 | 3704 | 700 | 1480 | 2180 |
| 1968-69 | 931 | 2849 | 3780 | 931 | 1831 | 2762 |
| Total | 3386 | 13024 | 16410 | 3368 | 7040 | 10408 |

The application figures for 1968-69 and 1969-70 are incomplete. In 1968 a new method of selection was introduced. Under the new selection procedures the applications of candidates currently attending a Canadian university are considered first by a special university committee and are placed in three categories, as follows: A list: Highly Recommended; B list: Recommended (in order of merit); C list: Not Recommended.

Students in the A and B lists receive further consideration by the N.R.C. Scholarships Selection Committee. Those on the A lists normally receive awards and those on the B lists receive awards to the limit of the availability of funds. Students on the C lists are those who are not recommended by the university committees and their applications are not forwarded to the N.R.C. The total applications for 1968-69 and 1969-70 does not include C list students.

Because of a limited budget for 1969-70 universities were requested to reduce the size of their A and B lists. This explains why there were fewer applications in 1969-70 than in 1968-69.

3. It is not possible to say with any degree of accuracy the number of candidates who were turned down for lack of funds in recent years. This information has never been recorded. However, from 1965 to 1968 inclusive, most of the worthy candidates, by N.R.C. Scholarship standards, received awards.

As a result of a substantial increase in commitments in connection with post-graduate scholarships and postdoctorate fellowships previously awarded there was less money available for new awards in 1969 than was available in 1968.

The increased commitment was as a result of an increase in the number of (a) renewals, and (b) awards for which final payments had to be provided out of the 1969 budget.

Renewals are not awarded competitively; they are renewed on the basis of certified reports of satisfactory progress.

The scholarships and fellowships for which money for final payments must be provided out of the 1969 budget are 1968 awards. The academic year does not coincide with the government fiscal year and out of each year's budget provision must be made for the final payments of the previous year's awards. The rather large increase in the number of awards offered in 1968 resulted in a greatly increased commitment in 1969 over that which was required in 1968 for final payments of 1967 awards.

APPROVAL OF BROADCAST ADVERTISING

Question No. 1,933—Mr. Monteith:

1. Is there a regulation that the Department of National Health and Welfare must approve, in advance of broadcasting radio or television advertising, relating to food, drugs, or cosmetics for (a) human use (b) animal use?

2. If so, who are the officials in the Department who have the responsibility of assigning or withholding approval, and what are their qualifications?

3. In the last six months, have any proposed advertisements been denied approval and, if so, how many?

4. Are there some classes of food, drugs or cosmetics the advertisement of which, does not require advance approval and, if so, what are these classes, and why are they exempt?

5. Does the same, or an equivalent, regulation apply to advertising in newspapers or media other than radio or television and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. Regulations under the Broadcasting Act require that no station shall broadcast any advertisement for any article to which the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act or the Food and Drugs Act applies unless the advertisement has been approved by the Department of National Health and Welfare. This requirement relates to drugs for human and animal use and to foods and cosmetics for human use.

2. Radio and TV commercials are reviewed at Ottawa by officers of the Bureau of Operations, Food and Drug Directorate, all of whom are university graduates in science, are Food and Drug inspectors with many years of experience and have a thorough knowledge of the Food and Drugs Act and Regulations and the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act and their interpretation. Since July, 1968 the review of radio and TV commercials for food has been the responsibility of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. These officers have the same background as outlined above.

3. In the six-month period ending March 31, 1969, approximately 170 commercials for drugs and cosmetics were denied approval (out of some 3,446 commercials reviewed). Some 300 commercials for foods were rejected (out of a total of 9,618).

4. Radio and TV commercials which do not contain any claims and mention only the name of the product, the name of the place where the product may be obtained and the price of the product, do not require clearance prior to broadcast. The reason is that no promotional claims are made. Advertisements for perishable food products such as fresh fruit, vegetables, fish, meat, and some bakery products, which make claims as to quality, flavour, etc., may be given temporary clearance by the local Food and Drug inspector. This exemption is granted because of the nature of the product and the need for immediate clearance without the necessity of submitting the commercial two weeks in advance of broadcast.

5. Preclearance of advertisements in newspapers or media other than radio or TV is not required since these advertisements do not come under the authority of the Broadcasting Act and there is no authority for prereview under the Food and Drugs Act or the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act.

HALIFAX-DARTMOUTH WATER SUPPLY

Question No. 1,954—Mr. McCleave:

1. Did the Atlantic Development Board make any recommendations with regard to the water supply for metropolitan Halifax-Dartmouth and, if so, what is their gist?

2. Has the Department of Regional Economic Expansion and the government reached a decision as to a federal role in the development of such a supply system and, if so, what is this role to be?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1. Yes. The board made a recommendation for financial assistance on a shared-cost basis for a water system for the area; such assistance to be subject to selection of a water development scheme agreeable to the parties concerned and to have regard to the question of appropriate water rates.

Question No. 1,968—Mr. Brewin:

1. Has the Department of National Defence or the government employed or secured the services of any groups or individuals outside of the Public Service for the purposes of advice, consultation or information in respect to the deployment of an anti-ballistic missile system in the United States of America or its implications for the security and defence of Canada?

2. If so, are any such studies under way (a) when were they begun (b) what are the names and qualifications of those involved in the studies?

3. Will the results of such studies be made available to the public or to Parliament through the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the answer to parts 1 and 2 of this question is as follows: In 1967, the Chairman, Defence Research Board engaged Dr. R. W. Nicholls, Professor and Chairman, Department of Physics, Centre for Research in Experimental Space Science, York University, Toronto, to prepare an informal unclassified report entitled "The Physical Phenomenology of Nuclear Explosions in the Atmosphere and in Space." This study, which was commenced in July and completed in August, 1967, was not concerned with the deployment of an anti-ballistic missile system but it was concerned with the effects of nuclear explosions at various altitudes.

The answer to part 3 is: Yes, if requested.

VISITS BY HIGH COMMISSIONER TO ZAMBIA

Question No. 1,991—Mr. Lewis:

1. How many times did the Canadian High Commissioner in Tanzania visit Zambia in the year 1968?

2. Has the Canadian High Commission in Tanzania ever informed the government of Portuguese military incursions into Zambia?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. The present Canadian High Commissioner to Tanzania visited Zambia four times in 1968. His predecessor as the accredited Canadian representative also visited Zambia once in 1968.

2. Reports of Portuguese military incursions into Zambia have been transmitted to the government by the Canadian High Commission in Tanzania.

AMHERST, N.S., ECONOMIC EXPANSION OPERATIONS

Question No. 2,064—Mr. Coates:

Is the Department of Regional Economic Expansion considering the closure or any reductions in the operations of the Department at Amherst, Nova Scotia and, if so, what are its intentions in this regard and for what reasons?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): In accordance with agreements made with the three Maritime provinces in 1966, these provinces will next April assume the operation and maintenance of all works undertaken under the Maritime Marshland Rehabilitation Act. There will accordingly be some adjustments in the work of federal staff located at Moncton and Amherst. This is currently being reviewed in relation to the other responsibilities of the Department.

4. How many New Start projects are pending and where will each be located and what is the criteria for priorities of each proposal?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1. Yarmouth County, Nova Scotia; Kings County, P.E.I.; Prince Albert, Saskatchewan; Lac la Biche, Alberta.

2. Until March 31, 1971.

3. Between $3,000,000-$4,000,000.

4. (a) Two; (b) The Pas, Manitoba and Richibucto, N.B.; (c) Priorities are determined by the nature of the problems confronting the disadvantaged people of the area in relation to the opportunities for stable and rewarding employment which may be available.

Inquiries of the Ministry

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—INQUIRY AS TO PROGRESS IN NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, in view of the importance of this matter to the country, I ask the Minister of Labour whether he can report on the status of the Air Canada negotiations with its employees.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the negotiations between Air Canada and the International Association of Machinists broke off last evening. At the present moment there are no meaningful talks going on between Air Canada and this particular group of employees. I have no way of predicting how long it will be before the employees and employer resume negotiations, and I can only point to the fact that there are alternative methods of transportation in this country.

Mr. Woolliams: Whom are you fooling?

Mr. MacEwan: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the minister whether he will take it upon himself to try to get the parties together. This matter is very important to transportation in this country.

Mr. Mackasey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When I returned from a short holiday a week ago yesterday I did precisely that and succeeded in getting both parties to resume negotiations. I believe they began negotiations a week ago yesterday. I am rather pleased in one respect, namely that the parties were able, particularly on Friday of last week in Ottawa, to clean up all non-monetary issues which were at that time hampering the discussions of the monetary issues and which, according to both parties, had priority. These items have been cleared up, and when the negotiations broke off last evening there remained only the monetary clauses.

I will be very pleased to take the suggestion of the hon. member into consideration, and when both sides request the assistance of the Department of Labour or even of the Minister of Labour and are prepared to ask for that assistance jointly I will be happy to give it.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the Minister of Labour whether he has been able to inform Air Canada on behalf of the government that the corporation is not tied to any official or unofficial guidelines with regard to the limits which they are permitted to offer to the negotiating union, so that the two sides may negotiate and bargain for a settlement in the normal way.

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. gentleman has raised a very important point. This morning I reviewed Hansard, and from this I see that the Prime Minister made it quite clear last week that Air Canada has the right to bargain with its employees independently of government intervention. I could not continue my role as Minister of Labour if I thought there was government interference in any Crown corporation.

Mr. Lewis: I hope there is not.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Labour. Has the government received any information from the International Association of Machinists that it might instruct its members working for other airlines either to observe picket lines, or to come out in a sympathy strike, because it felt that the government was imposing certain guidelines with regard to wages?

Mr. Mackasey: I think the point should be clarified, Mr. Speaker. The International Association of Machinists has not been negotiating with the government but rather with Air Canada, which happens to be a Crown corporation, but which, in my view, has been given no special preferential treatment any more than, say, Ogilvie Flour Mills Company or other companies which come under the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act. I consider Air Canada to be completely free to negotiate with its employees and to establish wage rates as they see fit, and which they are capable of paying.

With regard to whether or not the International Association of Machinists have advanced that particular suggestion, the answer is no, because at no time have they dealt directly with the government, certainly not through the Minister of Labour; and I doubt if they negotiated or discussed their problem with the government through any other minister.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I have a supplementary question, to clear up the point. There is no suggestion that the union has to deal with the government. My question was whether it has informed the government either directly or indirectly that this might happen.

Mr. Mackasey: To the best of my knowledge the answer is no, Mr. Speaker.

AIR TRANSPORT

AIR CANADA STRIKE—EXPANSION OF LICENSING TO MEET ALLEGED MONOPOLY POSITION

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. As several groups of employees of Air Canada during the past two years have demonstrated on several occasions that they have the ability to deny air transportation to the great majority of Canadians who want to use that mode of transportation, and this has been denied for considerable periods of time, as appears to be the case today, has the Prime Minister or the government given consideration to expanding significantly the air transport licences of Canadian Pacific Airlines and other air transport carriers in Canada, and in this way reducing the monopoly position enjoyed by Air Canada?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): May I take the question as notice, Mr. Speaker.

LABOUR RELATIONS

WOODS REPORT—INQUIRY AS TO IMPLEMENTATION

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): I have a supplementary question which I should like to direct either to the Prime Minister or to the Minister of Labour. In view of the numerous strikes in Canada in these essential industries, has the government given serious consideration to implementing the recommendations of the Woods report.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): The basic philosophy of the Woods report is that there should be a minimum of government interference with labour relations in this country. I should like to remind the hon. member that the official labour spokesman for his party, as well as hon. gentlemen on the front bench opposite me, endorsed the philosophy of the Freedman report, again a very pro-labour report, showing a progressive attitude on the part of the opposition. I hope no one will suggest reactionary solutions to this strike since strikes are inevitable under free collective bargaining. This sort of strike has taken place before in Canada and I think will take place periodically in the future. If we want to live in a democracy we shall have to get used to the idea. I do not think we are faced with a national emergency. It is true the strike is disruptive and unpleasant, but I repeat that there are alternative methods of transportation available and Canadians will have to use them in the interval.

INDUSTRY

DEVCO—COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF MINERS

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, with respect to another Crown corporation called Devco. Why, then, did the minister support the plan for the compulsory retirement of these employees at the age of 60?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

WATER RESOURCES

POLLUTION OF CANADA-U.S. BOUNDARY WATERS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): May I direct a question to the Prime Minister regarding the confidential report which has been submitted to the International Joint Commission on the subject of the pollution of Canadian-United States boundary waters? In view of the fact that Mr. Arnold Heeney, the chairman of the Canadian section of that commission, has described the situation as worrisome, pointing out that the conditions in Lake Erie are bad and that conditions in Lake Ontario are far from satisfactory, may I ask the Prime Minister when this report will be made public and available to members of the House of Commons?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The hon. gentleman refers to a confidential report. He has probably had access to it before I have, so I will take the question as notice.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. No one minds the Prime Minister's trying to be witty from time to time, even when he only half succeeds. But I do not have a copy of the report. I am referring to an item which appeared in the newspapers containing the remarks of the chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission, and I am simply asking when this important report, which the chairman describes as being the most comprehensive yet compiled, will be made public, because it will be of great interest to the people. I submit I should be allowed to ask that question without any facetious interjections.

COMBINES

DRUGS—PRICE FIXING BY B.C. PHARMACISTS

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the serious implications for all federally and provincially sponsored drug programs arising from the decision of the B.C. Professional Pharmacists Society to make a one dollar surcharge on prescriptions for welfare patients, and in view of the request a week ago by British Columbia's welfare minister that the combines investigation branch be asked for a speedy decision in this connection, may I ask the minister what has been the result of this request to date?

Mr. Speaker: I am not sure whether this is not the type of question which should be discussed at the time of adjournment or placed on the order paper.

Mrs. MacInnis: With all due respect, Mr. Speaker, I think this is an important question because the welfare minister stated that druggists already receive no lower—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The matter may be important but I suggest the hon. member is, rather, looking for an argument with the minister, and I do not think in its present form the question can be accepted. If there is urgency, the hon. member knows that under the rules she can give notice and the matter will be considered at the time of the adjournment.

Mrs. MacInnis: There is one final point I should like to make, Mr. Speaker. I believe the minister was rising to answer my question.

Mr. Speaker: He can rise just as easily at ten o'clock.

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO SETTING UP OF PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): A supplementary question—

Mr. Speaker: There cannot be a supplementary. The hon. member could ask a related questions, perhaps.

Mr. Baldwin: It is a related and equally non-argumentative question. Has the minister yet had a productive meeting of minds with the Prime Minister so that the names of those who are to be members of the prices and wages board can be announced?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Our minds are in the process of meeting, Mr. Speaker.

RESEARCH

ACTION ON MACDONALD REPORT ON SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State. Is the minister now in a position to answer the question I directed to the Prime Minister on Friday last and which he said the Secretary of State would answer when he was next in the house? My question is: What procedure does the government intend to follow to deal with the wide-ranging recommendations of the Macdonald report on scientific research?

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that this report has been available long enough to expect from the government a detailed and immediate policy. Its content has been known to us since last Thursday only. I could not even say how this report affects the responsibilities of my own department.

[English]

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

PROCEDURE TOWARD APPOINTMENT OF PERMANENT COUNCIL

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Secretary of State, of which I have given him notice. In view of the fact that the statute that three years ago set up the Company of Young Canadians provided that there be a permanent council, partly elected by volunteers, and the further fact that such council has not yet been established, will the minister inform the house whether election procedures for the purpose are in process of being prepared, and when the election of the permanent council may be expected?

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Quite willingly, Mr. Speaker. The Company of Young Canadians sent us draft regulations which are now under consideration and which will have to be submitted soon to the cabinet.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I also ask the minister whether he received a letter from the volunteers association of the Company dealing with this matter. If so, what reply has he given the association; if he has not yet given a reply, will he be able to assure them of the election of the council within the next month or two?

[Translation]

Mr. Pelletier: I have in fact received representations and I intend to reply when I am better able to foresee how long it will be before approval is given to the election procedure needed to establish the permanent council.

[English]

GOVERNMENT REACTION TO SUGGESTED DISBANDMENT

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Secretary of State. In view of the wide spread disfavour with which the work of the Company of Young Canadians is held by a large number of people in Canada, is the government now considering the disbandment of this organization?

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, like everyone else, I am aware of the criticism, at times quite severe, to be found in the newspapers against the Company of Young Canadians. I hope that the hon. member is also aware of the very good things that are often said about it.

There is absolutely no question at the present time of putting an end to the activities of the Company.

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ADDITIONAL PASSPORT ISSUING SERVICE

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Can the minister advise the house of any plans for solving the problems in the passport office occasioned by the resignation of five staff members due to unsatisfactory working conditions?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I had a report I could have given the house but I was not satisfied that it answered all of the questions that were in the minds of hon. members. I am sure that one of the reasons for the resignation of some of these members of the staff of the passport office is the great burden of overtime work they have all had to bear. We have increased the staff of the passport office by many, many scores. Notwithstanding that, 7,500 hours of overtime have been worked. We are asking the staff to work Saturdays on a regular basis. I hope the members of the house will realize what a tremendous job the passport office is doing, notwithstanding the fact that some passports have not been issued as quickly as they would have liked.

Mr. Fairweather: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would it not be possible to augment the government's very sensible plan to open regional offices, as announced some months ago?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, if it were as easy as that we should have done it yesterday. The trouble is that we have to have trained personnel. The purpose of the passport office in part is to see that unauthorized persons do not obtain passports. I do not think we ought to reduce security provisions in order to increase volume.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the government considered increasing the staff of its office in Ottawa so that applications may be processed more quickly. Also, will that staff be payed at a higher than usual rate for any overtime it puts in?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the staff has already been augmented by 90 persons in recent weeks. We brought them in to deal with the overload. One of our problems of course is lack of space. Perhaps I should not complain about Treasury Board, but it is very difficult to have new buildings built.

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister tell us when the passport service will return to normalcy? Will this be in the near future, so that people applying for passports may be assured they can obtain their passports soon; and if not in two or three weeks, then whether in fact they will be informed it may take two or three months or longer for people to obtain passports.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, within the next few days I intend to embark on an advertising program which I hope will help to clarify the situation. I expect that the peak of passport applications—more passports than anticipated have been applied for—will be over by the middle of June.

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, what has the minister to propose with respect to those Canadians who lose financially because of long delays in obtaining passports? Will there be any repayment of fees to persons who cannot obtain requisite service, or who cannot obtain their passports?

Mr. Speaker: Order please. The hon. member has asked a question. I do not think he should pursue the matter further.

Some hon. Members: Answer.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, when making a statement I hope to deal with this question, among others.

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In his statement would the minister please advise if there will be special provisions to take care of Canadians affected by the Air Canada strike? I am thinking of Canadians who wish to obtain passports, and in particular I have in mind several people who in the next day or two will wish to obtain passports to travel east. Will there be some provisions to enable them to obtain passports in Canada House in England? They might pick them up there, hopefully

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I think the complications brought about by the Air Canada strike are greater even than those suggested by the hon. member. But I will look into his suggestion.

[Mr. Sharp.]

SPORTS

AGREEMENTS WITH QUEBEC CONCERNING GRANTS FOR RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Considering the statement made recently by Gabriel Loubier, Minister of Tourism for Quebec, that the federal minister had reneged on certain agreements with Quebec relating to grants having to do with sports and recreation, will the minister state whether any agreements have been reached with Quebec on this subject and whether he in fact reneged on them?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, no, I have not reneged on any agreements. We had several discussions with the Quebec Minister of Tourism and although he made many suggestions relating to Quebec's participation in the amateur sports program, I indicated that we would entertain what was suggested. No commitment has been given. Before the Quebec minister went to the press I endeavoured personally to reach him on several occasions to talk to him about this, but was unable to do so. He was unavailable.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

WOODS REPORT—REQUEST FOR CONSIDERATION BY STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I address a question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. It is supplementary to one I asked him two weeks ago today concerning the Woods report and the time of its reference to the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs. Can the minister say whether this will be done soon?

Hon. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the answer I gave two weeks ago still stands. As soon as the white paper is ready we shall refer it to the appropriate committee.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister assure us that this will be done in sufficient time to permit this matter to be dealt with during the present session?

Mr. Dubé: Mr. Speaker, it is still my hope that it will be done as quickly as possible. I am afraid that is all I can say at this time.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

ALLEGED EXCESSIVE CHARGE BY AIR CANADA FOR CARRYING MAIL

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Was the Postmaster General expressing the view of the government when he said in Edmonton last night that the government is paying far too much to have its mail transported by Air Canada? I ask this question, particularly in view of his statement to the effect that he had not revealed this to his cabinet colleagues and that he really should not have said anything about it.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Hees: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the Prime Minister take steps to promote more dialogue between members of his government?

INCOME TAX

AIR CANADA STRIKE—EXTENSION OF FILING DEADLINE

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington): Mr. Speaker, may I address a question to the Minister of National Revenue. In view of the Air Canada strike and the failure of the Post Office Department to accustom itself to the five day week delivery of mail, will the minister consider extending the deadline for the return of income tax payments from midnight of Wednesday, April 30 to midnight of Monday, May 5?

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding the facts the hon. member has referred to, there is nothing to prevent our people from mailing their income tax returns before April 30.

Mr. Hales: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister talk to his colleague, the Postmaster General, and ask him to make provisions for stamping in an appropriate manner all mail posted before midnight on April 30.

AGRICULTURE

DAIRYING—POLICY RESPECTING INDUSTRIAL MILK

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture.

As the industrial milk producers are not satisfied with the milk policy for 1969, has the minister received recently representations from the Quebec C.F.U. or does the minister intend, in the next few days, to meet with representatives of Quebec agricultural organizations with a view to considering the industrial milk policy?

[English]

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, we have received a number of communications from farm organizations, including the one the hon. member mentioned. The minister and the department will be happy to meet with representatives of organizations to explain the reasons for making adjustments with respect to the new dairy year.

DAIRYING—COMPLAINTS FROM WESTERN PRODUCERS

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister say whether he is taking any action to deal with representations of western Canadian dairy producers who allege that present Canadian Dairy Commission Policies militate against dairy production in western Canada?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, we do not accept the preamble to that type of question.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

RESIGNATION OF GENERAL DE GAULLE

Mr. David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Prime Minister.

I wish to know whether the Prime Minister has sent a telegram expressing our condolences to General de Gaulle, the former President of the French Republic, who resigned this morning. If so, can he advise us of the text of this telegram?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, I have not sent any such telegram. In my opinion, anyone engaged in politics knows that a politician's career is somewhat short-lived and I think the General is no more surprised than I am myself.

[English]

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the government received a message of condolence from the government of France on the resignation of the Minister of Transport?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Inquiries of the Ministry

MAINLAND CHINA—U.S. REACTION TO CANADIAN RECOGNITION

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Is the minister now prepared to table the statement he referred to on Wednesday last by the Secretary of State of the United States expressing concern about Canada's statement on Red China. Can the minister at the same time say whether Canada received a note on this matter and also what Canada's reply was?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Well, Mr. Speaker, when I answered that question the other day I had reservations about it. I said that if the house considered it necessary, I would make public the statement. If the hon. member really wishes me to get hold of Mr. Rogers' statement, I shall be happy to do so. Our answer to the United States, and I cannot recall now whether there was a note, was that we intend to proceed.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. On Wednesday last when the minister replied to this question he spoke rather casually about the statement made by the United States Secretary of State, intimating it was published many weeks ago. He said he would get it for the house and table it if necessary. I hope he does get it, and that he tables it.

UNITED NATIONS

CONSIDERATION BY CANADA OF PEACEKEEPING UNIT

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): My question, Mr. Speaker, is to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I ask him through you, Mr. Speaker, if his attention has been called to a study or report of an influential group in the United States which has called on its own government to take the lead in working for a standing force of 40,000 men to be used by the United Nations for its peacekeeping operations? Will the government of Canada consider this report and discuss it with the United States government?

Mr. Speaker: The question asked by the hon. member is of a very general nature. I doubt whether it should be asked at this time.

[Mr. Baldwin.]

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

CRIME PREVENTION DISCUSSIONS WITH U.S. AUTHORITIES

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice. Has there of recent date been any meaningful consultation with the United States regarding crime prevention? Have any anti-crime measures been taken in view of the fact that the director of the Montreal police force, Jean-Paul Gilbert, has predicted there will be a wave of criminals entering Canada from the United States?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Approximately three or four weeks ago the Solicitor General and I were in Washington, where we had personal discussions for two days with the Attorney General of the United States, John Mitchell, the Deputy Attorney General, Dick Kleindienst, and most of their senior officials, including the crime investigation branch. We spent about four hours discussing the anti-crime network. The officials gave us advance information about the new strike force announced recently by the President of the United States.

HAL BANKS—POSSIBILITY OF RENEWING EXTRADITION PROCEEDINGS

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In the discussions with these gentlemen, did the question of the extradition of Hal Banks come up? If so, what view did the government express?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Neither side brought up that question during the discussions.

Mr. Hees: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Did both feel that politically this is a very sensitive matter?

INDUSTRY

DEVCO—COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF MINERS

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister. Now that the compulsory aspect of the Devco early retirement plan is in effect, will the government move quickly to assure that Devco carries out that part of the legislation which compels them to provide for former miners?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Perhaps the hon. member would like to ask this question of the minister responsible for Devco.

Mr. MacInnis: If the Prime Minister will examine the question I asked, he will see that the government move to give assurance that Devco carries out that portion of the legislation which compels them to look after the miners, is a question for the Prime Minister. If the Prime Minister would only realize that he is leading the government—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

FLOODS

TRAIL, B.C.—ACTION TO CONTROL EMERGENCY SITUATION

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Prime Minister. Last Friday I directed a question to the Prime Minister regarding federal assistance to the flood damaged city of Trail. At that time the Prime Minister indicated that later in the day he would be contacting both the Premier of British Columbia and the Mayor of Trail. May I inquire what assistance the federal government has offered to the city of Trail to assist in rehabilitation of the flooded areas?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I did answer these telegrams on Friday and I said that after we had further reports of the damage we would be prepared to discuss this matter with the relevant authorities.

Mr. Harding: May I direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Public Works? Has the Department of Public Works any plans to assist in the rehabilitation of the Trail area? If so, would the minister indicate what has been done to date and what assistance, if any, his department can offer to the Trail area?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, as a result of a great number of representations, including the representations made by the hon. member for Okanagan-Boundary and others, a commitment was made by the Prime Minister that someone be sent to this area. The Department of Public Works has co-operated and Mr. Stevens has been to Trail, has now returned to Vancouver, and is making a report.

I have been in touch with the Mayor of Trail. When the report is received an announcement will be made by the government as to its responsibility or otherwise. There are estimates of damage in the area of $1 million or $1½ million. In light of the fact there is provincial legislation covering such disasters, it might be construed this misfortune is within the financial capacity of the province of British Columbia.

FINANCE

SECURITIES COMMISSION—REQUEST FOR PROGRESS REPORT

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): My question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs on the subject of the proposed national securities commission. Will the minister advise whether he has made any progress since I last inquired about his negotiations with the provinces, or are these negotiations still stalled?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, discussions are continuing within my department, within the government, and with appropriate provincial officials.

COMMUNICATIONS

DISSEMINATION OF GOVERNMENT INFORMATION

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. My question is with regard to the statements made by the Secretary of State in London, Ontario, on Friday last, with reference to the methods of presentation of government propaganda. He said:

> Nowadays you can leave the written press free if you can manipulate the radio and television facilities.

I ask the Secretary of State whether this is a statement of government policy in this area?

Mr. Speaker: I suggest to the hon. member the question as asked is argumentative and cannot be asked in that way at this time.

Mr. Simpson: In view of the fact that the Secretary of State is the minister responsible for one of the largest news media in Canada, the C.B.C., and is expressing opinions of this nature, does the Prime Minister intend—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is being argumentative and I suggest the matter should not be pursued.

[Later:]

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State. Was the minister stating government policy when he said in London, Ontario, that the press no longer has much importance except to himself and other members of the upper middle class?

Hon. Gerard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Of course I said no such thing, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The question cannot be asked of the minister.

[Later:]

Mr. Schreyer: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. My point of order is that you allowed the Secretary of State to answer the question—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I did not allow it. I believe the Secretary of State got up a little too quickly. I suggested that the question should not be asked. Perhaps I should have moved a little faster, but perhaps after 40 minutes of questioning the Speaker does not move as quickly at the end as he does at the beginning.

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—AVAILABILITY OF ALTERNATIVE MODES OF TRAVEL

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): My question is supplementary to that asked the Minister of Labour with regard to the Air Canada strike. Will the minister elaborate on his statement that alternative modes of transportation are available? Does the minister mean between Montreal and Ottawa or between western Canada and eastern Canada? If he means the latter, I wish he would get up to date information.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I would not want to leave the impression that the strike is not inconvenient. It is certainly more inconvenient in some parts of the country than in others. I say there are two major railways running across the country as well as Canadian Pacific Airlines, Transair, Nordair, Royalaire and I believe other charter airlines. They are doing the best possible to take up the slack caused by this particular strike. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, this is a dispute between Air Canada and a certain group of key employees. It is not the time for the government to be stampeded into reactionary statements or action.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. McIntosh: A further supplementary to the minister, Mr. Speaker. Possibly the minister is not aware that when you try to get reservations in any of the modes he suggested, the best they can guarantee right now on travelling from western to eastern Canada is May 7. I ask the minister if he will prevail on the existing railways, Canadian National and Canadian Pacific, to make available additional rolling stock to facilitate the demands that are prominent right now in western Canada, so that innocent people will not suffer?

ISSUING OF PASSPORTS FOR EXTENDED PERIOD

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In view of the crisis in the passport department, will the minister give consideration to reissuing passports for an additional five years, rather than issuing new passports, as a solution to a problem which seems to be out of hand at the present time?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker. I do not think that would be a wise thing to do. I believe we should continue as we have been doing to increase the security underlying Canadian passports. These are very valuable documents, and it was not doing Canada's reputation any good to have them issued as loosely as in the past.

THE MINISTRY

INQUIRY CONCERNING NEW MINISTRY OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the Prime Minister has now had an opportunity over the weekend to consider the events of late last week flowing from the resignation of the minister, and having read the many speeches resulting therefrom, is he now giving some consideration to the setting up of a separate ministry of housing and urban development?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Well, Mr. Speaker, the many speeches I heard were mainly concerned with constitutional problems. I do not remember reading any that suggested that this kind of department would increase the constitutional power of the government.

AGRICULTURE

ST. PAUL, ALTA.—PROTEST AGAINST FARM INCOMES

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Would he tell the house and the people of this country what measure his government proposes to alleviate the conditions which today in the town of St. Paul, Alberta, have brought more than 800 farmers out to a mass rally to protest depressed farm incomes? Can he indicate to the farmers of Canada when the nation's agricultural community might be included in the just society?

SASKATOON, SASK.—PROTEST AGAINST FARM INCOMES

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. In view of the wire received from the Saskatoon Board of Trade regarding the serious situation which faces agricultural communities in western Canada would the Prime Minister inform the house concerning the nature of his reply.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I am not aware of having received such a telegram, Mr. Speaker.

CANADA COUNCIL

SCHOLARSHIP TO JON BORDO

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State. Now that he has explained to his own satisfaction the granting of a Canada Council award to one student radical leader, could he now look into the $3,500 Canada Council scholarship granted to one Jon Bordo, self-described student radical leader at the University of Alberta.

CANADA PENSION PLAN

EXEMPTION OF OLD ORDER MENNONITES

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I should like to ask him whether he has discussed with representatives of the provinces the possibility of obtaining an exemption for the Old Order of Mennonites from the provisions of the Canada Pension Plan, and if so what has been the result of those discussions?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest this is the type of question which should be placed on the order paper.

IMMIGRATION

DELAYS IN HEARINGS

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to diret my question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Will the minister undertake to investigate reports of an inordinate delay in granting hearings to immigrant applicants who apply for special inquiries or other proceedings?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Yes. I would be glad to investigate this in general, and if my hon. friend has any specific cases I would be glad to consider those also.

ADMISSION OF DRAFT DODGERS AND DESERTERS

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Could the minister inform the house how soon we might expect a report on immigration policies respecting United States military deserters?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): No. I am not ready yet to make any such statement.

RUDOLPH HOLATA—PROTEST AGAINST HOLDING IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Since I had been recognized just before the previous point of order I wonder if I might ask a question which I believe is very urgent.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member cannot do this on a point of order. He might be allowed to do it with the unanimous agreement of the house.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Paproski: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs based on his statement of Thursday, April 24 regarding the imprisonment of Rudolph Holata. My question is the same as the one I asked previously. Has the Canadian government protested the arrest and imprisonment of a Canadian citizen and employee of the Canadian government and if not why not?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I gave a full answer to that question.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, may I ask whether the government house leader would consider calling a meeting of house leaders perhaps later today to see whether we might have a discussion about the time to be spent on the matters we are about to begin to debate. I am not suggesting any over-all time limit in view of certain positions which have been taken, but I wonder whether the house leader would consider calling a meeting so that we might discuss the time we would spend on the first eight or ten amendments which are now before the house.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned to the member and to the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) I should like if possible to arrange a meeting this evening. I hope just as soon as the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) returns to the house we might be able to arrange a meeting for possibly after eight o'clock this evening. I think it might be useful to work out a procedure, in view of the fact that we have used up the equivalent of 12 full sitting days for the second reading and report stages, and since there are only 25 sitting days remaining for legislation at this session.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Friday, April 25, consideration of Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi) moved amendment No. 15:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by inserting in clause 15, after the words "person who" on line 11 on page 35, the following words:

"being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner".

• (3:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, I moved that amendment to clause 15 on page 35 of reprinted Bill C-150 in order to clarify the meaning of subsection (2) of the section 209, so as to prevent any misunderstanding in the implementation of this legislation.

First I shall read the new section 209 which clause 15 of Bill C-150 would substitute to the present section. I quote:

(1) Every one who causes the death, in the act of birth, of any child that has not become a human being, in such a manner that, if the child were a human being, he would be guilty of murder, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for life.

(2) This section does not apply to a person who, by means that, in good faith, he considers necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child, causes the death of such child.

So the amendment I move Mr. Speaker, would add after the words "a person who" the following words:

"being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner."

Mr. Speaker, this amendment would prevent any person from killing a child in the act of birth if it is possible for such a person to find a qualified practitioner.

I am afraid, Mr. Speaker, that the proposed amendment to Bill C-150 would open the door to any quack who could say afterwards he acted in good faith and thus would not be prosecuted for criminal negligence.

The amendment I am introducing would oblige the woman seeking abortion, under section 209, to take all possible practical steps to find a qualified doctor to perform the abortion. Thus, in case of practical impossibility, the woman concerned could go to another person she feels is qualified enough to perform the abortion.

I am thinking, in particular, of areas very far from medical centers, hospitals, or qualified doctors. Were the case to arise in such places, it would become necessary to request to help of a person who, though not a doctor, could provide the help needed by the woman or girl whose life is endangered.

Mr. Speaker, according to the Model Penal Code of the American Law Institute, abortion will be justified only when performed in an accredited hospital, except in cases of emergency, when hospital services are unavailable.

I would like to point out here that this section from the Model Penal Code of the American Law Institute has not yet been adopted everywhere in the United States; it is simply suggested that with its inherent restrictions it should become part and parcel of the American law.

In my opinion, we should here in Canada enforce the same restrictions in the case of persons likely to perform abortion, I mean doctors. Mr. Speaker, if I have introduced this amendment to the Criminal Code, it is with a view to throwing some light on paragraph 2, section 209, so that persons lacking the qualifications to perform abortion would do so only if it were truly impossible to find a qualified doctor or if the services of a duly accredited hospital were not available.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, the time has now come to study the amendments to the clauses of Bill C-150 dealing with abortion.

With regard to the first amendment proposed to us, I feel it would be well to consider the importance of the specification suggested by my colleague, the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise).

When the doctor is not at the bedside of a woman about to give birth or to have a miscarriage, it is absolutely normal for the persons closest to her to try and help her. However, Mr. Speaker, this type of situation seldom occurs. Indeed, considering modern progress, the number of public clinics and means of communications, it is practically impossible for that type of situation to occur.

That is why we want to make the legislation more specific with regard to the intervention of another person. This would make the legislation even more efficient.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, that all those things should be considered. It would be extremely easy for clever people to use some means to an end that would not always be good.

By proposing this amendment, we want to prevent—and we take this opportunity to say so—in the event where it is really impossible to find a doctor, that the one who lends a hand should be accused of homicide or infanticide. It would be completely in order for that person not to have to suffer the consequences of an inadequate law.

We all agree on that. I insist on the fact that those cases do not occur. I fail to see how anyone other than a doctor could be authorized to procure an abortion.

The legislation even states specifically that these are cases which will be decided by a board of doctors. Therefore, is it possible that a person would have to provoke abortion? This will never happen.

What can happen is a birth, as mentioned in the section. Therefore, at the time of delivery, even if it is premature, there is of course a birth. The birth can be normal. I cannot possibly imagine that the person who would give this service would provoke the death of the child during birth. In other words, it is practically impossible that a person could be accused of having provoked the death during the process of birth. I cannot see how such a situation could occur.

Last week, or two weeks ago, here, in Ottawa, a woman gave birth to a child on her way to the hospital, in a taxi or in a police car.

Mr. Speaker, even if I have never had the opportunity of seeing such things, I feel that, in these circumstances, I would know what to do. This situation does not occur very often. That is why we want to bring in this legislation a particular provision in order to avoid illegal abortions and to prevent unscrupulous people to prevail themselves of this clause to work in a field exclusively reserved to doctors.

That is why we want to add in section 209 the following words:

—being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, there are some isolated areas where no physician is available. Therefore, one could presume that the legislation was devised having regard to such situations. In general, when a pregnancy evolves normally, no serious complications occur. But when difficulties crop up, pregnant women go where they can easily be treated by physicians or where the physician is willing to make house calls.

By adding to that clause the words "being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner", we might limit the number of possible cases and run the risk of making the legislation applicable to unforeseen situations.

As everybody knows, the interpretation of statutes is always emphasized, especially by those who wish to use them for improper purposes. It is unfortunate, but it is common knowledge. People often say that nobody is more familiar with the law than a thief. Nobody is better acquainted with the law than a person bent on mischief.

Therefore, we must be explicit and not be content to say:

This section does not apply to a person who, by means that, in good faith, he considers necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child, causes the death of such child.

Indeed, if we find it good enough to say:

—by means that, in good faith—

—several individuals will come and prove their good faith after having procured abortion, caused the death of a child almost fully developed, and then, abnormal and criminal acts will again be justified.

This is why we ask that these words be added, and the clause would then read:

This section does not apply to a person who, ... being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner—

By so doing, we specify a most important point since it excludes, as my colleague said a while ago, the quacks and other unscrupulous people that are always ready to render a service to persons in trouble. It often happens that a pregnant woman is momentarily depressed and she sometimes feels compelled to resort to the services of individuals who will appear willing to help her while their sole intention is to extract money from her.

Then they will try to do something which only a doctor is allowed to do. This is why the clause should be amended to read:

This section does not apply to a person who, being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner, by means that, in good faith, he considers necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child that has not yet become a human being, causes the death of such child.

Mr. Speaker, I will sum up my views by saying that such a case almost never happens because nature already does things rather well and, generally, there are no particular difficulties.

Thanks to the progress of medicine, a woman who becomes pregnant knows it after a few months. At that time she is already under medical care, and since it almost never happens that a person other than a doctor is called to help a pregnant woman, let us not allow shady individuals to take advantage of the vagueness of this clause to counter precisely the principle we want to incorporate in this legislation.

[Mr. Matte.]

I think we should then add, if this section is approved:

—being unavoidably prevented from finding a medical practitioner—

Mr. Speaker: Is the house ready for the question on the amendment moved by Mr. Laprise?

[English]

Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those a favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it. I declare the motion negatived on division.

Amendment No. 15 (Mr. Laprise) negatived on division.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. McCleave—

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, may I move this motion on the hon. member's behalf? The hon. member is not here at the moment; he is away on other business.

Mr. Woolliams (for Mr. McCleave) moved amendment No. 21:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by inserting in clause 18 after subsection 7 of section 237 on page 44 the following subsection:

"(8) Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person."

He said: I shall be very brief on this point, Mr. Speaker, because the amendment speaks for itself. It reads:

Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person.

In other words, there shall be nothing in the Criminal Code that would force a hospital to set up a special therapeutic abortion committee or to compel a doctor to perform the operation. The amendment is that simple. I think it merely clarifies the law. The witnesses who appeared before the committee—the minister will verify this—pointed out that the rules and regulations which govern hospitals are within the jurisdiction of the provinces; most hospitals come under the jurisdiction of the provinces.

Basically, the suggestion is that the Criminal Code does not and should not require a hospital to set up a committee to deal with this question. A hospital may set up a committee to deal with it, or ask a doctor to carry out the operation, but there should be nothing in the act that forces a hospital to do so. This matter is really clarified by the provincial law, but it is thought that the hon. member's amendment would clarify the position so that hospitals will understand what is intended and that provincial law governs in this regard There is nothing more I need to say. That is what it really means.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker there are just a couple of questions which I should like the minister to answer. The hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) has touched on them. I refer to the distinction between civil and criminal law, particularly the implication here with regard to the responsibility of hospitals and medical practitioners. I think this is quite important, not only for us. The value of the amendment put forward is that it would make the position of the government in this respect more clear. As the minister knows, there is a general section in the Code, I believe it is section 107, which provides that anyone who fails to obey any act or regulation of parliament is, by inference, guilty of an offence. This would be of some consequence to medical practitioners who are concerned with what their duties are under the law.

Inasmuch as we in this party have taken it upon ourselves to vote on the various clauses and amendments in Bill C-150 as our consciences dictate, I believe that medical practitioners should have a similar freedom. I know what most of them would probably do, but I think they should have that right and freedom. Therefore it becomes incumbent upon the government to indicate what opinion has been given to the minister by his legal officers as to the responsibilities, not only under the criminal but under the civil law, because one of these amendments is obviously drafted in the belief that there may even be a civil responsibility falling upon a hospital or upon a doctor in the case of abortions.

I want to remind the minister of a case of which he may not be aware because the section is not now in the Code. Some years ago there was a provision in the Criminal Code that no civil proceedings could be launched against any person who had been charged with common assault and had suffered a penalty or had been acquitted of the charge. This was distinct from proceedings in respect of charges of grievous or actual bodily harm where civil actions could follow. That particular section dealing with common assault, which no longer appears in the Code, was the subject of varying interpretations by the appellate division in the province of Nova Scotia and, I think, in one other province. The Supreme Court of Canada gave no authoritative decision on the point. It was held in one of these judgments that the federal parliament had no jurisdiction to enact legislation under the guise of the Criminal Code, attempting to amend or change the Criminal Code by saying that civil proceedings could or could not be taken in cases of a possible infraction of the Criminal Code. In other words, the criminal law was to be considered by itself and it was not possible for the federal parliament to go outside the criminal law and to say that once an act had been declared to be a criminal act it should or should not be the subject of civil proceedings.

I am quite confident that a great many medical practitioners and hospitals in this country will be most concerned as to what their legal position will be and what the government is purporting to do in this bill. For example, there is an implication in clause 18 that there is a statutory duty falling upon a medical practitioner or upon a hospital and that the refusal by a medical practitioner or by a hospital to permit to be carried on within the precincts of that hospital or by that medical practitioner the act of abortion, which has been made legal under certain circumstances by amendments to the Criminal Code, might subject either the medical practitioner or the hospital to certain penalties either in the civil law by an action for damages or under the criminal law.

I have my own views on this matter but I bring it up to permit the minister to indicate the government's position. Under the rules under which we operate, what the minister says in the house is not binding upon any court, but I am sure it will be of some interest to us, and certainly to myself, to know what his view is before I come to a decision on which way I intend to vote on this amendment.

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, amendment No. 21 on the order paper and the related amendments, 22, 23, 31, 39, 40 and 41, purport to exempt from any civil liability hospitals which may fail to set up a therapeutic abortion committee, or a doctor who may refuse to perform a therapeutic abortion, or any practitioner who may refuse to participate in this type of operation. I may say that a therapeutic abortion is only one of a number of situations where conscience may preclude a doctor or a nurse from participating in an operation which is lawful. I might bring to the attention of the house the question of blood transfusion in the case of a doctor who is a Jehovah's Witness. There is the case of a doctor faced with the problem of administering a blood transfusion to a child whose parents refuse consent on the ground that such an operation is contrary to their religious belief. In other cases doctors are often faced with a problem of conscience when they may be called upon to perform a hysterectomy or a tubal ligature following several Caesarean deliveries. There are also other grey areas where questions of conscience arise, even though conflicting views or doubts exist as to the law, for example, in the case of sterilization generally and also organ transplants. So this is not a unique situation for the medical profession.

Also, I should like to draw to the attention of the house the fact that the substance of these amendments does no more than recognize what has actually been happening already in a number of hospitals with respect to therapeutic abortions. We have no evidence that questions of conscience have posed a practical problem.

Getting down to the question of criminal obligation or liability or civil obligation and liability arising from this amendment, let me say briefly that according to the advice I have received there is nothing in clause 18 to which these amendments relate which would in any way impose a criminal obligation or criminal responsibility on a hospital which refused to set up a therapeutic abortion committee or upon a doctor who refused, for reasons of his own personal conscience, to perform such an abortion, or upon a nurse or any other person involved in the medical services who refused to perform or participate in a therapeutic abortion. So there is no additional criminal obligation or liability attaching to the medical profession as a result of clause 18.

Turning now to civil liability, the civil liability of doctors, nurses or hospitals is based on negligence, that is to say, the failure to meet the standard of care owing to the patient. Although the phrase "standard of care" is a common law expression, the same standard of care is required within the civil law as well, and although the philosophical approach to negligence is different from that of the law of delict, in effect a reasonable standard of care is required in both cases. Obviously this standard of care is to some extent affected by legislation, including the Criminal Code, in the sense that a doctor would not be held civilly liable for failure to perform an act which the law prohibits him from performing. Where, however, the act may lawfully be done, as is the case under the proposed amendment to section 237, one of the factors to be taken into account in the event that the question of civil liability arose would obviously be whether or not the patient had been fairly and properly advised of the limitation imposed by conscience on the range of treatment available to the doctor and to the hospital.

Section 237 as amended imposes no duty on the board of a hospital to set up a therapeutic abortion committee; it imposes no duty on any medical practitioner to perform an abortion; it imposes no duty even on a medical practitioner to initiate an application on behalf of a patient. In these circumstances it is not considered necessary to purport to exempt them from duties which are not imposed by the criminal law. On the other hand, if we were to purport to grant such an exemption it might be misleading to the medical profession and unfair to patients, because such a conscience clause, so far as the medical profession is concerned, might tend to obscure the civil obligation of the profession to the patient to ensure that a patient is able to make a free choice as to both her medical adviser and hospital, untrammelled by the limitations on the conscience of her medical adviser or by the policy of a particular hospital. In other words, it is clear that under civil law, in the case of a hospital not having the facilities or not choosing to have the facilities, or of a doctor precluded by his own conscience from performing such abortions, there might be civil liability attaching to both to advise a patient of her right to go to another hospital and ask for another doctor. But certainly there is no civil liability attaching, as far as we can see, as a result of the operation of the Criminal Code itself.

Mr. Baldwin: Am I to take it there is no intention on the part of the government, particularly by this amendment, to vary the rules as to civil responsibility which normally exist between an individual and a hospital or an individual and a doctor, or to prevent provincial laws from operating? This is a sensitive area, as has been illustrated by the events of the last few days and the exchange which took place between the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Hellyer). The minister seemed to think the Prime Minister was trying to lock the country into a constitutional chastity belt despite the fact that the provinces lost their jurisdictional chastity a long time ago. I want to be sure we are safe here.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): The hon. member suggests there is a constitutional aspect to this as well. The relationships in civil law between the patient and the doctor, between the patient and the nurse, between the doctor and the hospital, the nurse and the hospital, are relationships falling within the operation of provincial law, the civil law and the constitutional responsibility of the provinces—the subject of statutes which regulate hospitals and the professions. These are properly provincial matters, and this is another reason not to trespass on any of these civil relationships which may be accessory but which are not directly affected by this legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the minister.

In that case, if a constitutional matter is involved, would it not have been advisable to let the provinces adopt some legislation relating to abortion, and has any consideration been given to such a course of action?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I do not deem it right to use the Criminal Code to infringe upon the constitutional or civil law of a province. According to legal experts, clause 18 does not impose any criminal obligation or responsibility, nor any civil liability. Civil liabilities are determined rather by the civil law and I do not find any advantage in using the Criminal Code to affect civil relations between parties. Such matters come exclusively under provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the minister.

Since this obviously relates to the social aspect, to health, would it not be preferable, before amending the Criminal Code, to hear the views of the provinces on the matter?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I can only repeat that, since civil relations come under another aspect of the law, they are not directly affected by the amendment to clause 18. I see no reason to wait until the provinces have been consulted.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I wish to support amendment No. 21, proposed by the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave), because I myself presented an amendment along those lines. In fact, it is amendment No. 31, which reads as follows:

> Nothing in subsections (4), (5), (6), and (7) shall apply to any group of medical practitioners nor to any medical practitioner, who has refused to proceed with an abortion nor to any member of the hospital staff of a hospital who has refused to take part in an abortion on purely medical grounds or on any other grounds, so that no judicial proceedings may be instituted against them.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment means that no judicial proceedings may be instituted against any group of doctors, any member of the hospital staff of a hospital, or any doctor who has refused to perform an abortion or to take part in one.

The fact that six amendments proposed relate to the same subject shows how important it is to clarify Bill C-150, and particularly clause 18.

There were many questions raised on that point? Gynecologists and physicians have feared that if clause 18 were passed as proposed by the government, the bill could on some occasions coerce those who, for reasons of principles or any others, refuse to perform an abortion.

Then, if a woman asked for an abortion and died during the operation, some legal proceedings could be brought against the hospital or the physician. Such a situation could be quite embarrassing and since they would be liable to legal proceedings, the physicians or hospital authorities would be in a dilemma.

On one hand, there is the conscience and on the other the law which compels us to ignore our beliefs and our conscience. This is dictatorship.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that if, under section 18, women are given all possible freedon to obtain an abortion, the same freedom should be granted to the physicians or the personnel of any hospital.

Many are concerned about that amendment. Indeed, the Catholic bishops of Canada have recently made a few suggestions, after having thoroughly studied the bill. It is no secret that since the government has proposed amendments to the Criminal Code, especially in connection with abortion, the Catholic bishops of Canada have on several occasions throughly examined that problem.

As for our amendment, the Canadian Bishops' Conference renewed their request to the government and to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) a few days ago, so that the amendment to the Criminal Code would at least respect the freedom of all physicians and hospitals, because this bill could allow proceedings to be taken against them or make them liable to public prosecution.

In my opinion Mr. Speaker, this is of great importance, since the question is whether or not the doctors' and hospitals' freedom is to be respected. I think that such a question should not be put in the house, and least of all be subject to an amendment to the Criminal Code.

This is why, Mr. Speaker, the government should, I think, pass the amendment before the house in order to permit a vote on the matter because I hope that the minister would not want to take this responsibility alone and for his government. He should in that regard respect the freedom of doctors, hospitals and their personnel to perform or not to perform abortions on request.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I have been in this house for ten months, and I am still at a loss to find a way to have our arguments taken into consideration.

And what is even more discouraging is to realize that everything has been decided in advance. Nothing is more depressing for us than to realize that all we do is bring forward, for posterity, arguments which we did not make up ourselves, but found by referring to appropriate sources.

[Mr. Laprise.]

Since this matter deals first of all with medicine and the first signs of life, we consulted scientists and gynaecologists who explained to us what is a human being and at what time it appears in the human foetus.

Medical practitioners explained to us why they objected to abortion, and that is why we ask, in this amendment which I fully support, that gynecologists, whose opinion we must take into serious consideration, are not subjected to such an obligation.

We did not invent our arguments. We consulted the Association of the Hospital Medical Boards of the province of Quebec Inc., whose opinion should not be taken without due consideration.

Its submission was made to us in January 1969, and it reads as follows:

> You will find herewith the opinion of the Association of Hospital Medical Boards of the province of Quebec on the matter of abortion, now being considered in the house.
> This report represents the general opinion of medical practitioners in the hospitals of the province.
> We hope that this will enlighten you so that you may take a fair and equitable position towards every citizen of our country.

Mr. Speaker, an argument based on such an opinion deserves consideration, it seems to me.

In this brief, the Association requests, and I quote:

> The Q.A.H.M.B. agrees: > —that an amendment to the existing text of the Criminal Code be submitted.

Mr. Speaker, we moved many amendments. To prove that this is an important matter, we moved seven amendments on this subject. The minister said a moment ago, that this is not a problem, since we are enacting a legislation based on an established situation in hospitals. As a matter of fact, I do not know where the minister has obtained this information, but when an association of hospitals makes a statement like the one I just quoted, I suggest the minister should think about it seriously. Perhaps he has considered only the whole country. As far as I am concerned, I am not speaking here for the whole country, although the documents we have received prove that the situation is almost the same throughout Canada.

But as regards the province of Quebec, the Association of Hospital Medical Boards of the province of Quebec agrees:

> —that the procedure for the consideration of cases by therapeutic abortion committees in every hospital be accepted.

—that the doctors who decide, after serious consideration within their hospital committee, to approve a therapeutic abortion be no longer considered guilty of that act under the Criminal Code.

In effect, it is the safeguard of their integrity and of their profession that it is sought to ensure. I go on quoting:

We believe that scientific medical research alone can bring the true solution to this problem, and we favour the setting up of any study committee.

One can see, Mr. Speaker, that these are not ordinary men speaking, but real professionals. And they are telling us that medical experts alone can express their views on that question. But if we decide to pass a legislation, even though the doctors themselves ask that we should not legislate now, because scientific and medical research are still not advanced enough, we will be disregarding the advice of these experienced men.

The report goes on, and I quote:

—that abortion, in the present state of medical science, is still considered killing a human being; that every doctor or hospital should be free to refuse to take part in that medical practice.

That is the very purpose of the amendment before us. After having studied this bill, doctors considered all that had been said on the subject for the last few months. This is the reason why they thought fit to advise those who will have to make a decision on the course to follow. I am reading on:

—that this technique where the life of a human being (foetus) is at stake, the decision must not be left to the patient alone.

—We are against a bill which would give rise to false hopes among the population.

We furthermore ask that hospital, authorized to perform therapeutic abortions, be appointed by medical associations in every province to ensure the quality of the established standards.

Mr. Speaker, the question I was putting earlier to the hon. minister was precisely presenting the same view point. We are dealing with the public health, which is a provincial responsibility. And if this legislation is contrary to the set standards, the mentality and the established rules according to the views of the doctors of a particular province, especially in the case of Quebec, it is undoubtedly going against current opinion.

This is another reason for doctors to object, and of course I fully support such an attitude.

And the Association concludes as follows:

• (3:50 p.m.)

This is why the Q.A.H.M.B. is against the present text of the amendment C-195 and wants it to be amended in order to restrict its provisions to the cases where the mother's life is seriously jeopardized.

Mr. Speaker, when we examine the amendment requiring that nothing in the clause be construed so as to make compulsory for a hospital to establish a committee dealing with therapeutic abortion or for a qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person, we can see the tremendous importance of that amendment. Why? Because it deals with the individuals who are most intimately involved in the problem. I refer, of course to the medical practioners themselves. When physicians demand to be protected by us, we should consider their request seriously.

I am told that the situation never arises, that an accomplished fact is merely being sanctioned; that the attitude of Catholic hospitals is being explained; that we live in a pluralistic society. We recognize all that.

Mr. Speaker, we are not dealing here with a matter of religion, but one of conscience. It is a question of mentality. Why not respect the various ways of seeing things? I repeat that we should follow the advice given to us, almost pathetically, by the doctors themselves who are trying to make us understand that we are trespassing on their grounds.

We have dealt only with the social aspect of the question, when the only thing that really matters in fact is whether or not one should approve abortion.

It is imperative that we should know whether we are dealing with a human being or not, whether or not there is murder when the foetus is killed. Doctors or scientists only can tell us that.

Now, they themselves tell us to be careful. They say that the progress of medicine is such that we must prevent major errors being committed by legislating on matters which, not only do not concern us, but concern only the doctor and his patient.

To go back to the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards, and more specifically to the brief it presented on the omnibus bill. For over 20 years now, that Association has represented hospital doctors in that province. We are therefore not dealing with just anybody, not with the members of the Ralliement créditiste, nor layment in this regard. The medical board is the organization which, in every hospital, groups all the doctors who practice there.

Recently, following the introduction of the government bill on abortion, this Association consulted all its members, by writing to them, or on the occasion of meetings called to discuss this bill. The directors of the Association studied all the opinions expressed and they would be glad to submit their conclusions on abortion and on this bill.

We do not base them on the opinions of a couple of doctors, or on those of a small group but on that of all the doctors of a province as a whole, which is, in itself, a nation. Are we going to disregard all that? It would be far better, Mr. Speaker, to grant the provinces the right to legislate on that matter, in spite of the Criminal Code. Let Quebec become independent, if it has to! If we are to accept everything that is going on here, within this chamber which is on the way to becoming a modern Sodom and Gomorrha, I understand better still those who promote the independence of Quebec and want all the Quebecers to be sole judges of what they have to do, according to their own way of thinking.

Such are, Mr. Speaker, the arguments that come to my mind following this brief submitted by all the doctors of Quebec as a whole, a brief simply pooh-poohed by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner).

The doctors of the Quebec hospitals believe that any abortion is a homicide, that the foetus is a human being. Should therefore people who hold such a belief be compelled to perform abortion? That is what we want to prevent by the proposed amendment. I cannot help thinking, Mr. Speaker, how strange it is that something which appears to me so logical, so sensible and so clear will of course be rejected. Nothing could be more stupid.

I revert to what I said at the beginning, Mr. Speaker, namely, that the problem is to find means to convince those people. I have been wondering about that for ten months, for we refuse to believe what the newspapers said last week, to wit, that most people favour abortion. We have received indications to the contrary as late as this morning, at least from the province of Quebec.

I am more and more convinced that sooner or later those opposing the controversial sections of Bill C-150, even those who, at the present time, yield to Trudeau madness, Trudeaumania or anything that issues from Trudeau this or Trudeau that, and who, for that very reason, have up to now deemed it appropriate to approve abortion, will in the end endorse our opinion.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said earlier about the resignation of the French president that politicians' careers were short-lived.

[Mr. Matte.]

It seems that a political career is not so short-lived! For him a 10 year period is short, because he expects himself to remain in office for at least 10 years. Mr. Speaker, I do not think he will do so because, before 10 years, we shall already have noticed the disastrous effects of the decisions we are about to take in the house. It will take much less time to realize we were mistaken in legalizing abortion, on which we did not have enough information, and in failing to follow the advice of great scientists.

That is why we will be accused of playing politics, of filibustering and of making a political football of this issue. They are all wrong because, in fact, all our arguments are based on medical science. Let us stop shifting the problem and considering only its social aspect. By legalizing abortion it is sought to safeguard the practitioners' prerogatives, rather than discuss the social aspect of the problem.

It is sad to see a young girl pregnant. It is not very interesting either to find that a mother with too many children has not enough money to raise them properly. Such considerations are reasonable but they have nothing to do with the subject now under discussion.

What we want to determine now is, whether abortion is something normal or whether it is homicide. In our opinion, of course, it is homicide. We did not consider exclusively, however, our religious beliefs. We wanted to find out what the greatest authorities had to say and we know now that medicine and science are entirely on our side.

According to the present teaching of the medical science, the foetus is a living human being which has the right to live, like every other human being. Even from the legal point of view, the foetus is already considered as a full human being, since it can become an heir and since the State still considers non therapeutic abortion as a crime punishable by life imprisonment.

It is admitted by all serious gynaecologists that the cases where therapeutic abortion would really save the life of the mother have become extremely rare thanks to the progress of science in this field.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, as I understand the principle of this amendment, it is to protect the position of people who may be involved with a request for an abortion, and to protect the position of those people who have a conscientious objection to carrying out abortions.

Amendment No. 21, which is before us at the present time, deals with the position of hospitals as institutions and also with the position of medical practitioners. On the basis of the rulings handed down by Your Honour on Friday, as set out in the Special Notice Paper, I note that consideration of amendment 21 will dispose of amendments 22, 23, 31, 39, 40 and 41. Several of these amendments which will be covered by amendment 21 make reference to the position of hospital staff and personnel and make some attempt to protect them. The point was noted on Friday when the procedural ruling was under discussion that in effect amendment 21 did not cover the hospital staff and personnel who were referred to, particularly in amendments 31, 41 and one other.

I am sorry that I did not hear all of the remarks of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) with respect to why he maintained that there is no need for this amendment No. 21. I am not in a position to comment on his remarks with regard to this point. While there may be some cause for protecting hospitals as institutions and also medical practitioners who may have conscientious objections to carrying out a therapeutic abortion, there is a third class of people who are in a more vulnerable position than either hospitals or medical practitioners. I refer, of course, to hospital staff. These people have no protection under the law, either in terms of professional status or employment, if they have a conscientious objection to participating in a therapeutic abortion. I feel that complete coverage should be provided to all groups of people under the proposed law. And that there should also be reference to hospital staff. Consequently I move the following amendment, seconded by the hon. member for Surrey (Mr. Mather), who has agreed to second this amendment as a courtesy:

That the proposed subsection (8) be amended by adding thereto the following words: "or any member of a hospital staff to assist in procuring such miscarriage."

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I would like to make a few remarks regarding the admissibility of this amendment, Mr. Speaker. I wish to direct your attention to the new Standing Order. I think it is important for the house to receive some guidance from Your Honour, particularly since this constitutes the first real test for the Standing Order affecting the report stage of a bill. I draw your attention to Standing Order 75 (5) which appears at page 80 of the new Standing Orders. It reads as follows:

If, not later than twenty-four hours prior to the consideration of a report stage, written notice is given of any motion to amend, delete, insert or restore any clause in a bill, it shall be printed on a notice paper.

It is in accordance with that rule that 44 amendments were set out on the notice paper. Then if we go on to Standing Order 75(8) we see that it reads as follows:

When the order of the day for the consideration of a report stage is called, any amendment of which notice has been given in accordance with section (5) of this order shall be open to debate and amendment.

As I read this Standing Order its purpose would seem to be to limit debate to those amendments of which notice has been properly given in accordance with Standing Order 75(5). I recognize that 75(8) says, "shall be open to debate and amendment". This seems to imply that an amendment to an amendment under 75(5), of which notice has been given and which has been placed on the order paper, may be in order. I would submit to Your Honour, however, that there is another part to this Standing Order, 75(7), which contemplates an amendment as to form only. It reads as follows:

An amendment, in relation to form only in a government bill, may be proposed by a Minister of the Crown without notice, but debate thereon may not be extended to the provisions of the clause or clauses to be amended.

Then there is the following note:

The purpose of the section is to facilitate the incorporation into a bill of amendments of a strictly consequential nature flowing from the acceptance of other amendments. No waiver of notice would be permitted in relation to any amendment which would change the intent of the bill, no matter how slightly, beyond the effect of the initial amendment.

My submission to Your Honour is that that note underlines the purpose of Standing Order 75, namely, that once all relevant amendments have been placed on the order paper, once the debate has begun under Standing Order 75(8), and once the Speaker has listened to argument in respect of admissibility and relevancy, the house is precluded from going beyond the scope of those amendments. The obvious reason is it would be open to hon.

members to move subamendments and thereby escape the provisions of Standing Order 75(5).

I would urge Your Honour to interpret this rule strictly. Otherwise the full import and purpose of the rule could be circumvented and amendments made on the floor of the house to any amendments which Your Honour has already seen on the notice paper. I would think the only freedom the house and, with respect, the Speaker have, is to look at consequential amendments as to form resulting from a prior amendment.

For these reasons I would urge Your Honour to refuse this amendment and hold it to be out of order. Otherwise it will be open to hon. members to speak to every subamendment of every amendment. If that were to be the case I suggest that the desire to proceed on an orderly basis would be defeated.

Mr. Woolliams: May I speak to this point, Mr. Speaker. I think the difficulty Your Honour may have is in respect of Standing Order 75(8) which states:

When the order of the day for the consideration of a report stage is called, any amendment of which notice has been given in accordance with section (5) of this order shall be open to debate and amendment.

The interpretation of this would seem to be that an amendment may be amended without notice, but if we look at what is before us it is an amendment that proposed section 8 be amended by adding thereto certain words. This is one occasion when I am on the side of the Minister of Justice in respect of the interpretation of the rules. This is not a motion that the amendment be amended but that subsection 8 be amended. It would be like bringing in an amendment to any clause at this stage.

If the hon. member had wished to move that amendment 21 be amended, he would have to move a substantive amendment to the amendment, but at this time he is seeking to amend a clause of the bill. I do not believe the rules were ever intended to be interpreted in this manner. I think Your Honour would be stretching the point very far if you permitted this. In fact, if you did I believe that by changing a few words I could move the amendment which was ruled out the other day.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I happen to be one of those who do not think that either the main amendment now before the house or the subamendment that has been moved is really necessary. I do contend, however, that the hon. member for Regina East has the right to move an amendment at this time and that the amendment he has proposed is in order under the rules. I would point out the fact that on Friday of last week, when the whole question of procedure was debated at some length, the hon. member for Regina East specifically asked His Honour whether it would be possible to move an amendment at this stage and was told by the Speaker that provided amendments were in order they could be moved.

Although the relevant citations have all been read I think they should be emphasized. I draw attention in particular to section 8 of Standing Order 75, which is very clear and very explicit. It states:

When the order of the day for the consideration of a report stage is called, any amendment of which notice has been given in accordance with section (5) of this order shall be open to debate and amendment.

What is before Your Honour at this point is the consideration of amendment No. 21 of which notice was given as called for under section 5 of Standing Order 75. What the hon. member for Regina East is endeavouring to do is to amend amendment No. 21.

Mr. Woolliams: He does not say that.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It is perfectly true he could have added a few words. He could have said that the amendment be amended by adding words to the proposal section 8 which is set out in the amendment, but surely it is not always necessary to multiply words when the meaning is clear. There is not before us something simply called section 8. There is before us an amendment which happens to have in it a proposed new section 8. The wording of my hon. friend's amendment proposes that the proposed new section 8, which is part of amendment 21 that we are now debating, be amended by adding certain words to it. I submit that is completely in line with the provisions and requirements of section 8 of Standing Order 75.

May I say to my hon. friend the Minister of Justice that I think he is on thin ice when he tries to rely on section 7. Section 7 does not relate to amendments that are on the order paper. It relates to a possible amendment to the bill itself made necessary because of something that has been done on the floor of the house in relation to other clauses. I do not like trading on the fact that I was on the committee and therefore know how much we went over all of this, but I may say we did feel that if we did not put in something like section 7 a situation could develop whereby amendments could be moved to various clauses of a bill, one of which might pass—it would be a red letter day if it did—and then it would be clear that certain other clauses in the bill would have to be changed slightly in consequence of the first change. If we did not provide for that situation I think we would be stuck with the impossibility of doing this because we have a rule which says that at the report stage we cannot debate or discuss any clauses except those concerning which notice of amendment has been given.

The purpose of section 7 of Standing Order 75 is simply to permit consequential amendments to other parts of a bill. It has nothing to do with the rule set out in section 8, namely, the right when an amendment is properly before the house, as amendment No. 21 is, to move an amendment to the amendment. That is what my friend the hon. member for Regina East has done, and I submit his amendment is in order.

I sympathize warmly with the Minister of Justice when he says that if this kind of thing can be done we will probably be here until August or September, but that does not invalidate the rule. Let me say to the minister that under the new rules there could have been a dozen amendments put down at the report stage to every one of the 120 clauses in this bill. This would mean something like 14,000 amendments and we might be here for a very long time.

Mr. McCleave: It would amount to 1,400.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It would be 1,400, I am sorry. I did my arithmetic very quickly.

Mr. McCleave: It sounds better.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It seems to me this is clearly what we provided in the rules. The rule of relevancy must also apply. My hon. friend's amendment has to be relevant to what has been proposed in the main amendment before us, but certainly his right to move an amendment is something we anticipated when we drew up these rules, and I think they are quite clear on that point.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): If you will recognize me again on the same point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The minister has already spoken. If he wishes to add further arguments I think he would have to do so by consent. I see one or two others who wish to enlighten the Chair. Perhaps the minister feels his remarks have been misunderstood. There is provision for an explanation on that ground.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Apparently there is agreement on the part of the house to allow the minister to speak.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for that agreement, but I do not want this taken as meaning I waive the right of an hon. member to speak more than once on a point of order. I accept the agreement on the part of the house and thank hon. members.

On this point of order I have three short arguments. Let me first underline what the hon. member for Calgary North said so ably. Even with a liberal interpretation of Standing Order 75(8), surely by the wording of the amendment it must be clearly an amendment to the amendment, in this case to amendment No. 21. What this subamendment tends to do is to amend the bill itself. It goes beyond amendment No. 21 even on a liberal interpretation of Standing Order 75(8), which suggests that the amendment must be an amendment to amendment No. 21. This is an amendment to section 8 as proposed in the bill, and it goes well beyond the scope of the Standing Order.

The second point I wish to draw to the attention of Your Honour is the seriousness of the ruling you will have to make. Standing Order 75(5) taken together with 75(8) limits the debate to any amendment printed in the order paper and submitted 24 hours before the debate begins. If amendments to amendments are to be allowed, then the limiting effect of Standing Order 75(5) and 75(8) would be completely bypassed. As the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has admitted, we would then be completely out of control. I suggest to Your Honour that Standing Order 75(5) is restrictive and taken together with 75(8) must limit the debate to those amendments on the notice paper.

My third argument is that if you look at the wording of the hon. member's subamendment you will see it really proposes to include the members of hospital staffs. These words are in fact included in some of the other amendments which have been grouped by

Your Honour for disposition at the same time. You will notice that amendments Nos. 21, 22, 23, 31, 39, 40 and 41 are grouped together. On reading them you will see that what the hon. member is trying to do by tacking on this amendment is already proposed in several of these amendments grouped together with amendment No. 21 for discussion and voting purposes. I would think it is redundant on this ground.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words about the point of order concerning the amendment moved by the hon. member for Regina East (Mr. Burton) and, with his approval, I would like to point out that six amendments have been put together for the purpose of the discussion dealing with the amendment No. 21 moved by the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave).

But if we read carefully the amendment moved by the latter, we realize that the subamendment moved by the hon. member for Regina East is not included in the amendment No. 21 which we are discussing at the present time. This is one of the reasons which, I think, justify the amendment proposed by the member for Regina East.

Now I should like to raise another point. There is no subsection (8) in clause 18 of Bill C-150. Therefore neither the hon. member for Regina East nor any other member could move a subamendment thereto.

Mr. Speaker, one can read the following in Standing Order 75(8), and I quote:

> When the order of the day for the consideration of a report stage is called, any amendment of which notice has been given in accordance with section (5) of this order shall be open to debate and amendment.

The hon. member's subamendment is therefore quite in order in my opinion and so as to allay the fears of the Minister of Justice, who denies the right to move that subamendment, I would say that he seems to want to have his bill passed as soon as possible, at any cost and without accepting any amendment. And what he fears the most is to see a filibuster, as he precisely said when he spoke the first time.

Mr. Speaker, I had myself moved a similar amendment, which I quote:

> —any member of the hospital staff of a hospital who has refused to take part in an abortion on purely medical grounds or on any other grounds, so that no judicial proceedings may be instituted against them.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

As a matter of fact, among the six amendments we are studying at the same time, I have one which includes hospital staff, but the same cannot be said of the amendment before us.

That is why I believe the subamendment moved by the hon. member for Regina East is in order.

[English]

Mr. Jack Cullen (Sarnia): Mr. Speaker, I feel that what I am really doing is reiterating the third argument put forward by the Minister of Justice. It is important that we should look at Standing Order 75 (10) because in relation to this specific amendment it states:

> Mr. Speaker shall have power to select or combine amendments or clauses to be proposed at the report stage and may, if he thinks fit, call upon any member who has given notice of an amendment to give such explanation of the subject of the amendment—

I suggest that in essence this determination has already been made by Mr. Speaker in that he has grouped amendment No. 21 with, among others, amendment No. 31 which contains the specific wording referred to by the hon. member for Regina East. I suggest, with respect, that so far as this amendment is concerned Mr. Speaker has already made a ruling under Standing Order 75(10).

• (4:30 p.m.)

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I want to support the proposals of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), the member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and the member for Regina East (Mr. Burton) who intend to propose a subamendment to sub-section (8) that the government wants to add to section 18 of the bill now under study.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the reasons referred to by the hon. minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) are not valid as far as procedure is concerned and the reason is quite simple. It is because we have to discuss a bill which contains 120 clauses and we have come to the report stage of the committee.

Like several other members, we moved amendments to modify the bill and make it acceptable. However, Mr. Speaker, as the debate proceeds, we can see the facts in their true light, at least on this side of the house, and that enabled the hon. member for Regina East to see that there is still a gap even in the amendments designed to improve the bill.

Consequently, in the light of the debate, the hon. member for Regina East, pursuant to standing order 75(8), moved an amendment to improve the bill.

However, Mr. Speaker, it belongs to you to take a most important decision since the minister wants to speed up the debate, not caring what the members of the opposition have to say, rejecting any amendment and referring to clause which have nothing to do with the amendment. However, Mr. Speaker—

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. With respect, I do not want to allow that remark to go unchallenged on the record. My purpose in intervening was not to limit debate in any way but to ask for an interpretation of the rules of the house. I would appreciate it if the hon. member would stay on the point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I would like to say at this point that I think we should limit the discussion to the specific point of order raised by the Minister of Justice, which has subsequently been commented on by other hon. members. I think that as much as possible we should avoid going beyond that point of order and the reasons why it should or should not have been raised. An important point is now before the house. I might point out to hon. members that I have given this matter a great deal of thought and am almost on the verge of giving a ruling. I do not want to curtail discussion, but I think any discussion we have should relate to the point of order originally raised.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for being so lenient. I was just coming to this, in order to explain our point of view.

On the one hand, we can see the minister's position and, on the other, Standing Order 75(8) clearly states the bill shall be open to debate and amendment.

Mr. Speaker, there are about 44 amendments before us—that was foreseen—it seems to me that we were free to move a motion under Standing Order 75(5) which reads:

—any motion to amend, delete, insert or restore any clause in a bill, it shall be printed on a notice paper.

Now, Standing Orders do not indicate that once the motions have been presented, and a twenty-four hours written notice has been given and put on the Order paper, that any amendment may be accepted. I think that on the contrary sub-section (8) specifies that it is permissible to move amendments in the light of the debate.

Therefore I think, Mr. Speaker, for this reason among others, that this amendment is most acceptable and will be approved by the house.

[English]

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I say just a brief word with respect to two points that have been made from the other side of the house. First, may I deal with the point emphasized by the hon. member for Sarnia when he argued that Mr. Speaker's grouping of a number of amendments, as he did on Friday, ruled out this kind of subamendment. May I point out that on Friday, as recorded in Hansard on page 7972, at the very time when Mr. Speaker said that amendments Nos. 21, 22, 23, 31, 39, 40 and 41 were being grouped and marshalled, the hon. member for Regina East rose and asked Mr. Speaker a question on this very point. As a matter of fact, he said that these amendments deal with the position of medical practitioners, staff and other personnel who may be involved in abortions. In other words, at that very point, when it was relevant, he asked Mr. Speaker whether it would be possible to move an amendment to deal with one of these points. Mr. Speaker's reply was:

Of course, this will have to be considered when the hon. member suggests these changes to the house. It may be possible to move subamendments provided that they are in order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): "It may be possible", and it is decided when the question is raised. Mr. Speaker did not decide it.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Of course he did not decide it, because the amendment had not been drafted; he did not have it in his hands. My point is that it is in order generally, because of what Mr. Speaker said, to decide that a particular amendment, because of its form, may or may not be in order. But to assert that it is not in order is, I suggest, quite false. I submit that the hon. member for Regina East protected himself by making that point on Friday.

The other point is that the Minister of Justice and the hon. member for Calgary North said two or three times that the hon. member is trying to go behind the bill amending the Criminal Code by seeking to amend subclause 8 of the bill. There is no subclause 8 in the bill. Clause 18 of the bill has only seven subclauses. Amendment No. 21 has been ruled in order, which permits the attempt to add a subclause 8 to the clause that is in the bill. The hon. member for Regina East is not trying to go behind the amendment or the bill; he is not trying to get something into the Criminal Code through the back door; he is dealing specifically with an amendment that is before the house under the provisions of section 5 of Standing Order 75. The hon. member is claiming his right under section 8 of Standing Order 75 to propose an amendment. I think his right to propose an amendment at this stage is beyond question. The only question that has to be decided is whether the form and the substance of his amendment are in order, and in particular whether his amendment is relevant. I for one think it is.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Speaker, without adding to the discussion needlessly, I would just like to note—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I was just going to recognize the hon. member for Champlain. I will then recognize the hon. member for Regina East.

• (4:40 p.m.)

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I would like to discuss briefly, the usefulness and the wisdom of sub-section (8) now under discussion.

Indeed, amendment No. 21 might not be entirely acceptable to the minister unless it were slightly amended. Therefore, I believe that the possibility of amending the bill has been considered, as pointed out a while ago by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin).

In the past, I have seen the house clarify some particular matter. An amendment has been moved; it was slightly amended and the government agreed to it. So it was quite appropriate to consider the possibility of slightly amending an amendment under subsection (8), in order to make it perhaps more acceptable.

In my opinion, we should not make the mistake of creating a factual situation for the duration of the debate on this bill, whereas standing orders provide that any amendment, and I quote:

—shall be open to debate and amendment.

The rules could not be any clearer.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I should like to mention one point.

As recorded on page 7963 of the official report for Friday last, April 25, Your Honour suggested a slight change to amendment No. 28 in order to improve it, and it was agreed to.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. That point has already been raised.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Speaker, in drafting this subamendment I attempted to keep the wording as simple as possible in order to concentrate on the purpose of the subamendment. However, if weight is given to the proposition of the hon. member for Calgary North that this is in fact an amendment rather than a subamendment, I would certainly be prepared, with the permission of the house and the consent of my seconder, to add a preamble to my subamendment so that it would read:

I move that amendment 21 be amended by adding the following words to proposed subsection (8)—

I would be prepared to do that if that is in fact the difficulty involved in accepting the subamendment I have moved.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. If there are no further submissions to be made I think I can deal with this question. I have considered the two points raised, the original point of order raised by the Minister of Justice whether or not an amendment to a motion moved under the provisions of Standing Order 75 is admissible, and the point raised by the hon. member for Calgary North whether in fact this amendment meets the criteria long established for the admissibility of amendments, namely, whether it is consistent with and relevant to the motions. My ruling on whether or not the amendment is admissible as an amendment, namely, whether it is consistent and relevant to the motion, is that it is. On those grounds I do not think it would be necessary to make any changes in its wording.

On the other point, I realize the importance of the point raised by the Minister of Justice. It seems to me that Standing Order 75 is very specific. It does provide for debate and amendment. I listened to the Minister of Justice with a great deal of care, as I always do, but I feel that this Standing Order is declaratory and is perfectly clear. Under the circumstances I am bound to rule that the amendment is admissible. Is the house ready for the question?

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Perhaps I could say a few words on my amendment and the subamendment just accepted by Your Honour. First, I should like to thank the hon. member for Calgary North for filling in for me with an explanatory speech when I was not able to be here at the time when this amendment was called. My concern arises out of the fact that a good many of the witnesses who appeared before the committee or who made submissions had raised the point in committee or in correspondence with the members of the committee. They expressed a fear that since abortions will become legal under certain circumstances, some duty will lie upon hospitals or medical personnel to carry out abortions.

I heard the minister's argument in committee and I have been given the gist of his argument earlier this afternoon. But an ounce of caution is sometimes worth a ton of cure, and I believe that the words I have suggested will allay these fears and make it absolutely clear that these institutions and doctors cannot in any way be forced to perform abortions. I think the strongest argument I have in that regard is the definition of the word "board" in new subsection (6) (c) at page 43 of Bill C-150. It reads as follows:

> "board" means the board of governors, management or directors, or the trustees, commission or other person or group of persons having the control and management of an accredited or approved hospital;

This debate has so far proceeded on the assumption that control and management would be vested in local hands, people aware of the conditions in the community. But I suggest that the definition of "board" as proposed in this legislation is broad enough so that a provincial body such as a hospital commission could assume control of all hospitals in a province. Therefore my fear is that while we have tried to put in the legislation some safeguard against hospitals being required to carry out therapeutic abortions if it is against the beliefs of those who have established or are running the hospitals, it could be circumvented by the definition of the word "board". I suggest that it would be perfectly possible for any provincial government, through a hospital commission, to assume over-all direction of accredited or approved hospitals. I think this fear can be overcome by the house adopting the subamendment proposed by the hon. member for Regina East and my own amendment.

One of the facts of life regarding Canadian hospitals is that many of these institutions are established by groups whose religious principles are very firmly against abortion. I would not want to see them in any way inhibited from establishing even more hospitals as our nation develops and our northern areas are opened up. In the past they have been very good in sending religious groups to provide services that it was otherwise impossible to provide. But unless we adopt some safeguard such as I am suggesting the future development of hospitals, particularly in our northern areas, might be inhibited.

I believe generally in the principle of abortion because I think an individual should be free to choose whether or not she wishes an abortion to be performed on her. If by spiritual inclination she is opposed to it, then the remedy is entirely within the hands of the unfortunate woman. But when we move to the broader field involving hospitals, doctors and medical personnel, we have to add something to the legislation to establish clearly that a person cannot knock at the door of a hospital or at the door of a doctor asking that an abortion be performed.

Finally, when I drafted the amendment I made it parallel to new subsection 7 as it appears in the legislation before us. I also think the constitutional aspect is not affected. Subsection 7 does not eliminate any other steps that would have to be taken before an abortion could be procured. I am carrying it a step farther and ensuring that no hospital or medical person can be put in the position of being legally required to carry out or procure the abortion of a woman. For these reasons I have presented the amendment, and I gladly welcome the subamendment proposed by the hon. member for Regina East.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I should like to support the proposed amendment to the clause on abortion.

In my opinion, any measure to promote the family deserves careful consideration. I know that there are nowadays a great number of wives who accept their role as a mother and who endeavour by all possible means to preserve the life of their unborn child.

Now, as the family is the foundation of society, some special action should be taken to help it, because in my opinion, human beings, human resources, are the greatest wealth of our country.

So much so that we rightly ask ourselves what would be the value of any other material resources of the country, if there were no human beings to use it.

Society spends huge sums in order to save and protect human life. In universities, scientists are carrying out research to discover some ways to cure fatal diseases.

Mr. Speaker, a man can conceive all sorts of projects in all kinds of fields, but he will never succeed by himself in reviving a dead person. And if we are here as human beings, it is not on account of our own power, but as the result of the respect which our parents have shown for life, in spite of the difficulties and hardships which they experienced.

Mr. Speaker, if we become conscious of the material advantages which science makes available to the nation, it is obvious that clause 18 of Bill C-150 now before us is based on wickedness or falsehoods.

It is true that families and children have less and less place in modern society, but I am convinced that life has an exceptional value, one that cannot be measured, and that all necessary means must be taken to preserve it even for those who cannot be seen but who are known to exist.

And I must congratulate the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave) who proposes the following amendment:

Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person.

Mr. Speaker, amendment No. 21, proposed on April 14, 1969, is most appropriate, if we refer to some excerpts of the 880 pages of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the standing Committee on Health and Welfare.

From page 46, we refer to an article of Dr. Isabelle, on the inefficiency of therapeutic abortions.

Dr. Gaston Isabelle: —Those committees (for the study of abortion cases) were tested in the United States in the last four or five years.

And Dr. Isabelle quotes:

A few years ago, a number of hospitals set up Abortion Review Committees which were normally composed of specialists, in order to examine such requests of abortion. Generally, the committees produced unsatisfactory results for the following reasons:

In the same line of thought, Dr. Patrick Beirne, states at page 504, and I quote:

Just as individuals may have liberal or conservative views on assistance, the same applies in the case of abortion committees. And the general public quickly perceives the difference between liberal and conservative committees.

In New York, two hospitals, a few streets away from one another, have abortion committees. In the first one, there is one therapeutic abortion per 16,000 deliveries. In the other, there is one abortion per 20 births. So committees are not guaranteeing us that our own interpretation of what seems a step for the public weal will be respected. One committee is not enough. I think that clearer information should be given.

Mr. Speaker, here is a text we received in January 1968 from the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards regarding the bill under consideration. It is not recent, as can be seen. I quote:

At our inquiry we noted that most of the medical offices and boards of directors of hospitals in Quebec officially and formally protested against the establishment of therapeutic abortion committees in their own hospitals. Because of professional ethics and of the tendency constantly recorded in their profession, hospital doctors are greatly reluctant to belong to such committees and moreover they refuse themselves to make any therapeutic abortion.

It must be noted that such legislation does not take into account religious and moral convictions of a great many doctors and hospitals afraid of becoming liable to legal prosecution for not having committeed what they consider a crime against their professional ethics. But are doctors not always trying to save their patients from death?

And on page 2 of the same report, one can read:

—any abortion purporting to improve the health or the well-being of the mother or to prevent the birth of a malformed baby becomes a social act of mercy killing. If it is permitted to kill such a baby when he is in his mother's bosom, why should it not be allowed when he is out of it. However, if abortion is performed when the life of the mother is endangered by pregnancy, it can then be considered not as euthanasia but as a case of self-defence. Self-defence does not imply necessarily the presence of an unjust aggressor. To warrant self-defence, however, there must be some proportion between the method of defence and the act of aggression, and the offensive act must be the only possible method of defending oneself. But specific medical information pertaining to cases when, in order to save the mother's life, it is obviously necessary to kill the foetus is extremely rare, according to all medical practitioners. Since such cases are unfrequent, one can even wonder whether a permissible legislation is warranted.

A further excerpt on page 3 of the same brief reads as follows:

Because this legislation may lead to abuse, the Association of Hospital Medical Boards of the province of Quebec objects to the legalization of therapeutic abortion when the only ground is the health or well-being of the mother.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Moreover, the Association is unreservedly against Bill C-150 on abortion as introduced by the government.

On page 4, among the reasons given, we find this one, and I quote:

Psychiatric symptoms

Psychiatric symptoms justifying abortion are rejected by the majority of medical practitioners and psychiatrists; however, some psychiatrists find some limited indications. The effects of abortion on a woman are often nefarious and may cause feelings of guilt and hostility. We should ask ourselves if by trying to solve one problem we are not creating another.

The conclusion of the submission says; and I quote:

Faced by these considerations the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards still has the impression that the federal government wanted to solve this complex problem by quick legislation which seems to solve everything but which in fact aggravates the problem of illegal abortion.

The Q.A.H.M.B. considers that this problem must be studied from a medical point of view and finds it necessary to approach the abortion question only after careful scientific studies ... and before any other government proposal is introduced.

In their view only a royal commission of inquiry could make an adequate study.

Dr. Robert Lavigne, 1010 Tassé Street, Ville St-Laurent.

Mr. Speaker, the medical profession of the province of Quebec has clearly taken a very careful stand in this regard. I hope that having heard the opinion submitted by the Association all hon. members will decide in favour of this amendment which I gladly approve without reservation.

Mr. Romuald Rodrigue (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, I support the amendment moved by the member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave) as well as amendments Nos. 22, 23, 29, 31, 39, 40 and 41 on the same subject.

In an article published in L'Action on April 19, one could read the following:

Under the amendments proposed by Bill C-150 known as the omnibus bill, abortions will be allowed when the medical board of a State approved hospital feels that the physical or mental health of the mother is endangered unless the operation is performed.

The argument of pluralism is often put forward. Throughout those countries where abortion has recently been discussed, whether it be in England, in the United States, in France or in Canada, the arguments are much the same. Those who favour relaxing the law do so in the name of the pluralism of the given society and of social convenience.

I am not against giving as much freedom as possible to everyone, against respecting all creeds, and the conscience of everyone, but it seems to me some consideration should be given to respecting the conscience of doctors, their religious and moral beliefs, for there are still doctors who work in hospitals who have professional conscience.

To my mind, the purpose of this section would be to protect the doctors, and other persons who work in hospitals and help the doctors perform their operations, who refuse to participate in abortions.

Because of professional ethics and the constant orientation of their profession, many doctors will refuse to perform that type of operation for several reasons. Many doctors are afraid to be exposed to legal proceedings for having refused to perform what they consider as murder and contrary to their professional ethics.

It should also be noted that the bill does not take into account the personal convictions of many doctors and hospitals. We believe all doctors always strive to protect the life of their patients. It is no secret that doctors constantly receive requests which, very often, are contrary to professional ethics and the constant orientation of their profession.

By legalizing therapeutic abortion in those cases where the pregnancy might endanger the health of the mother, the government gives the impression that one can procure an abortion for any personal reason.

In any case, applications will increase.

Psychiatric symptoms as a ground for abortion are vetoed by most doctors and psychiatrists. A few of the latter, however, have accepted them on a limited basis. The after-effects of abortion on a woman are very often harmful and arouse in her mind feelings of guilt and hostility. By alleviating one problem are we not simply giving birth to another one?

Such are the reasons for which a great number of doctors are against abortion.

There is also another aspect to consider: what will be the approach of the doctors toward the committees established in hospitals? Will they have to abide by the decisions of the committee to comply with cases where application should be made with a social purpose in mind?

I believe that doctors as well as all those whose duties are of a medical nature should be protected against any prosecution, for the sake of the society and for the advancement of medical science.

Incidentally, I would like to quote an excerpt of a file concerning therapeutic abortion, and drafted by the organized medical staff of the Laval Hospital, one of the most famous hospitals in Canada, formerly specialized in treating tuberculosis and now dealing with heart disease and others. There is the quotation:

> On the other hand, Mr. Roy Hefferman, a famous American obstetrician declares that doctors who perform a therapeutic abortion are either ignoring the modern methods of treating pregnancy complications or do not bother to waste their time applying them. The inefficiency of therapeutic abortion is demonstrated, besides, by an American study which shows that out of 1,600,000 deliveries, the mortality rate is of 0.98 for 1,000 in hospitals where it is performed and of 0.87 for 1,000 in the hospitals where it is forbidden.

Considering the progress of science for the past decade, the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code are not justified, in my opinion. Today we are in a better position to treat some diseases. In the next few years, we shall witness even more important developments in science and the cases where it might be necessary to perform a therapeutic abortion will seldom occur.

Mr. Fortin: I thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it is my duty to take part in this debate on abortion on which deal amendments Nos. 21, 22, 23, 31, 39, 40 and 41, that the Chair has grouped together for a more orderly discussion.

Mr. Speaker, having read the amendments which I have just listed as well as the omnibus bill itself, especially clauses 14 and 15 which deal with abortion, we find the bill very "weak".

When one takes the time to go carefully over the very few speeches made in favour of abortion, one realize the weakness of the reasoning which tends to legalize abortion as proposed in this bill.

I think we are forgetting some basic facts while discussing this famous omnibus bill and more particularly the clause on abortion.

Mr. Speaker, it is clearly established one cannot put aside this basic principle, this great truth, that birth is not the beginning of a human life but one of its stages.

Mr. Speaker, it is clearly acknowledged by every intelligent being that birth is only the answer to nine long months of expectation. Birth is really but a coming out into the world which has been prepared by the mother, the father and the child in the womb of his mother during nine months.

Everybody admits, Mr. Speaker, that the foetus in the womb of his mother has got life.

[Mr. Rodrigue.]

The scientific knowledge available to us in 1969 allows us to believe that foetal life exists. The fact is of course recognized by everybody.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, childbirth is not the beginning of life but only a stage in life. This stage is really minor importance really, since what is most important is precisely the birth or the progress of life in the mother's womb.

[English]

• (5:10 p.m.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I recognize the Minister of Justice on a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, with the greatest respect to the hon. member who has the floor, we are debating a fairly narrow amendment which is related to whether a hospital shall be obliged to establish a therapeutic abortion committee, etc. The general philosophy of the subject should be left to amendment No. 19 which deals with the deletion of clause 18. Here we are dealing with a specific point and perhaps Your Honour might suggest that the hon. member should confine his remarks to that point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. As the Minister of Justice suggests, we are dealing with a specific amendment and subamendment, and the debate ought to be confined as much as possible to that amendment and subamendment. I may also say that sometimes it is difficult for the Chair to restrict debate. It is impossible sometimes to prevent hon. members from expressing opinions or viewpoints which may go beyond the strict framework of the amendment being considered. Nevertheless I suggest to the hon. member for Lotbinière that he should try as much as possible to confine his remarks to the amendment and subamendment now before us.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, with all respect, this time I cannot accept the remarks addressed to me through you by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner). I think he is going too far.

Mr. Speaker, we are not dealing with trucks, asphalt, etc. but with the life or death of a child who will decide about that? A therapeutic committee. Now before knowing whether to be for or against an amendment, or for or against a therapeutic committee, one must know first on what we legislate. I feel, from the remarks just made by the Minister of Justice, that he is completely unaware of it. I should like to tell him that we are not legislating about trucks but about human beings, who do not grow like mushrooms and that there is no such thing as spontaneous generation. We are deciding about their life: grow or die, or die or live, according to the decision of the Minister of Justice.

It is not a question of starting or stopping a truck. Since we are discussing life itself, I do not mind being called to order, but there are limits. When we talk of abortion, I agree that we should stick to the subject. However, we should at least be given the chance to speak on the amendment itself.

I was saying that birth is not the beginning of life, but only a stage. Therefore, when we want to establish therapeutic committees in the hospitals, impose no restriction and adopt a law which will oblige the doctors to practice abortion with the approval of this famous therapeutic committee, not only do we contribute to the murder of a human being but we also violate the freedom of the individuals who will have to commit that crime.

Mr. Speaker, this is a serious situation. The Medical Association of the province of Quebec spoke categorically against the bill, not as a whole, but on that particular point. The Canadian Medical Association also spoke against it, all of it. The medical practitioners want to practice freely. I feel it is obvious that nothing more is being proposed in this amendment. But, on the other hand, since we must consider the subject itself, I feel I was not out of order when I said that birth was not the beginning of life, but a stage.

Mr. Speaker, there are so many things we could say that I do not know where to begin.

A statement on abortion made by the Canadian episcopate and published in L'Église de Montréal reads as follows:

Consequences of the proposed amendment

The proposed amendment is well known. According to it, those who will perform an abortion will be, as in the past, liable to life imprisonment, but a qualified medical practitioner will be able to perform an abortion when the continuation of the pregnancy of a woman would or would be likely to endanger her life or health, provided it is performed in an accredited hospital and provided a certificate in writing has been obtained from the therapeutic abortion committee of that hospital. This proposed amendment urges us to make the following remarks.

Not only does this amendment allow for a direct and voluntary interference with an innocent's life, but it opens the door to the broadest interpretations.

This is exactly the purpose of this amendment and amendments Nos. 22, 23, 31, 39, 40 and 41, which are meant to clarify this legislation, and not to object to it, so as to enable any qualified medical practitioner of an accredited hospital to perform or not to perform abortion as he decides. I quote again the same article:

As can be noticed in the press and on the air, our people are already expressing opinions which reveal an obvious and alarming decline in the respect due to a child's life before his birth.

For instance, some merely see in the proposed amendment now under consideration a first step towards the official recognition of the "right to abortion" at will. Others see already in the amendment itself the possibility of making abortion available in a great many cases.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to deal separately with two points.

First, "the official recognition of the right to abortion at will."

The bill, according to clauses 14, 15 and others dealing with abortion, do not specify in which case abortion should be authorized.

There are a great many cases that can be foreseen, after discussing the matter with several doctors. I think we cannot pass a legislation to allow abortion in all cases, or every woman who requests it.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation we are going to pass must be restricted to certain cases where abortion is necessary, since, according to briefs submitted by the Canadian Medical Association and by the Quebec Medical Association, such cases are becoming increasingly scarce, due to the scientific progress of medicine.

Consequently, Mr. Speaker, the bill is only a first step towards the right to abortion at will. In other words, if a mother asks a doctor for an abortion, the doctor procures it.

If another mother who does not have the same illness as the first and whose pregnancy does not have any ill effects on her health asks the doctor for an abortion, the doctor will have to do the abortion whatever the motives the patient may have in asking for it.

Another mother may tell a doctor, she is sick, when actually her sickness is psychological and temporary, and ask for an abortion even if neither her health nor her life are in any way endangered. The doctor will then have to do the abortion.

• (5:20 p.m.)

The minister will say: There is always the hospital's therapeutic abortion committee. If that is so, then that committee should be free to use its discretion otherwise I shall have to conclude that the therapeutic abortion committee also, in accordance with the Act, would be compelled to allow the abortion.

In other words, if a mother or a pregnant woman asks a doctor for an abortion, whatever her reasons, the doctor does not have to consider those reasons. He can only make a note of that person's name and say: Madam, we shall have to submit your case to the therapeutic abortion committee. The only course open to the latter would then be to give its consent.

Now, what about the study of special cases? What about psychological troubles? What happens if there is no illness? Indeed, pregnancy—everyone admits it—is not an illness. It is merely a natural condition peculiar to women. The mother bears her child and is delivered nine months later. It is a privilege granted to women by nature itself.

Incidentally, a pregnant woman is not sick. It is suggested by this bill that pregnancy is an illness. In addition, the physician is considered as a robot or an abortion machine. It is apparently believed that he is unable to think, to consider, to reason and that he will be compelled to perform an abortion.

Through you, Mr. Speaker, I challenge the minister to rise and prove to me on the basis of the bill itself and not with a far-fetched argument that the physician is free to perform an abortion and that the therapeutic committee enjoys as much freedon in this connection. I challenge him to prove it to me, not by stating an obscure argument as lawyers alone can put forward, but by clearly telling me so. If the Canadian Medical Association, the Canadian episcopate and most Canadians have failed to find out that the bill grants such freedom to physicians, I feel that the minister himself will be unable to do it.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to deal with another aspect of this problem. For some people, the clause of the bill proposed by the minister will make abortion possible in a great number of cases. It is not necessary to develop that aspect, since it supplements the first, in the sense that here again no distinctions are made.

Mr. Speaker, it is impossible not to grab this opportunity to plead in favour of doctors and their freedom. The amendments were introduced not because we are against the principle of therapeutic abortions, but rather because we want the law to state that a doctor will be free to perform abortions or not.

At this stage, Mr. Speaker, I wish to read something very interesting to the house. It is a letter from Mrs. Marjorie Ruwald, Secretary of the Ottawa Committee for the Protection of Unborn Children, dated February 19, 1969. It reads as follows:

Dear Sir:

Now is the time to honestly face the facts regarding the amendments to the abortion legislation that are proposed by the government.

Is the government really anxious to protect the life and the health of women?

I shall only read part of it, Mr. Speaker. Since there is only a limited number of women in the house, it may be interesting to know their viewpoint on this subject, since they seem to know something about medical matters. And it goes on:

If such is the case, what evidence do we have that the proposed changes would achieve that aim in any way?

This is more or less what I asked the minister a short while ago.

Never has the health of Canadian women got as much protection as today.

I then wonder on what grounds could a woman want to be aborted?

Canada has one of the lowest rates of mortality in the world for expectant mothers—about three deaths per 10,000 births. Is it really possible to believe that the proposed changes could bring about an even greater improvement?

She ask questions. I now come to what is more particularly related to the amendment, and I quote:

We must sympathize with the liberal M.P. who lost his wife because he turned down the abortion alternative.

She now refers to a former speech:

Such a tragedy cannot be blamed on the Canadian legislation. And the tremendous advance of medicine since then must also be kept in mind. The mortality rate of expectant mothers has been reduced from 10 to 1 in one generation.

Since medicine has advanced to such a degree that the rate of maternal mortality has been greatly reduced, why then compel a doctor to make abortions whereas, by his knowledge and the technical facilities at his disposal, he could save that child, give him a right to live, allow him to live?

Instead of forcing a doctor to kill a human being, let us make it a right and a duty for him to save that human being—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis)—Combines—drugs—price fixing by B.C. pharmacists; the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. Schreyer)—Air Canada—Winnipeg—transfer of base to Northwest Industries Ltd.; the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert)—Air Canada—strike of mechanics—inquiry as to matters in dispute.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice, and Legal Affairs, and amendment No. 21, Mr. Woolliams (for Mr. McCleave), and the amendment to the amendment (Mr. Burton).

[Translation]

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, we are faced with abstract realities.

The bill under consideration should never have been introduced as a logical, human bill that is likely to fit in our human and democratic society.

This bill is illogical and contains provisions that are not only beyond our grasp but go much further than what is permitted to advocate. Consequently, I believe that we are not sufficiently qualified to impose such a bill on the Canadian people, because it has to do with the very essence of life which is something divine and so great that we do not have the right to tamper with it. The procreation act is so sublime, so noble, that we would not be able to find adequate words to describe it.

We have in hand several reports that have been sent to us by the Canadian episcopate. The bishops are not taking a stand from the Roman Catholic point of view, but from a Christian point of view, and we support wholeheartedly the amendment moved by the hon. member, because this amendment fills—

Mr. Laprise: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

I believe that a count of hon. members present would indicate there is not a quorum, and that the house cannot continue to sit.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): On this point of order, Mr. Speaker, I am wondering whether it is proper for a member on the other side to bring this matter to the attention of Your Honour in such a remarkable way and interrupt so abruptly one of his confrères who is making a particularly conscientious and serious speech.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I must advise that it is the right of the hon. member to rise and request a count. I shall proceed to ask the Clerk to take a count.

(On the count being made, 21 members were declared to be present.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: A quorum is present; the sitting will proceed.

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

When I raised my point of order, there were only 16 members in the house, but the minister's speech prompted others to return.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): With the greatest respect, I think that is a slur on the integrity of the Chair. Perhaps the hon. member would like to reflect on that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Possibly we could listen to the hon. member for Compton (Mr. Latulippe).

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, here I should like to quote a statement on abortion made by Canadian bishops:

> The bishops devoted the second part of their statement to the legal aspects of abortion and more precisely to the proposed amendment to the Criminal Code by the government. First of all, they lay down the principle that to the State, the guardian of the common good falls the "sovereign duty of protecting effectively the human lives and in particular the weaker ones." At the present time, the role of the State is all the more necessary since the "complexity of modern life", in a world that is dominated by organization and techniques, makes the individuals live under heavy threats and since, under the guise of progress, some are ready to relax the laws to the point where they would no longer ensure life the thoughtful respect and the effective protection it deserves.

Let us say firmly that the progress of civilization resides in the ever increasing recognition, both theoretical and practical, of the dignity of the human being, of its sacred character and its absolute inviolability.

Besides, in the field of ethics, all things hold together; evil breeds evil; it is the first step which is most painful. We were discussing contraception yesterday; today we are talking about abortion; tomorrow it will be sterilization, euthanasia, infanticide. Every battle lost is fraught with a still worst defeat. Between civilization and barbarism the road is shorter and the slope is even more slippery than one could imagine. Another step, one step too many, and it is the Fall, and as Pascal wrote, "Earth is rented to the very depth of the abyss".

According to the bishops, the government bill, in its present form, should be rejected as a whole for three main reasons.

The first one deals with the very purpose of the legislation. According to the proposed amendment, the therapeutic abortion becomes legal every time that, upon the experts' advice, the mother's life or health are endangered or liable to be endangered by pregnancy. The legislation aims therefore at permitting "direct and voluntary attempt against the life of an innocent child", and that is immoral. Inasmuch as morality must affect legality, the government project, at the very outset and in its essential content, is therefore vitiated. In denying the principle of absolute inviolability of an innocent life, it strikes a blow to the core of civilization, it shakes it right to its foundations.

The government legislation, under its present form, opens the door to serious abuses.

I think that those who have a little sense of justice and humanity, are conscious of what they can achieve, who are aware of the dignity of human life and who know to whom this life belongs, will ask themselves the right questions on this very essential legislation. I quote further:

• (5:40 p.m.)

If the bill is so imprecise, it is perhaps because the government was not quite ready to legislate. "The parliamentary committee on this question recognized in its report of December 1967 the inadequacy of the studies and inquiries on which the new legislation should have been normally based. Why is it then that its decision was so prompt on the substance of the debate and why has it submitted to the government preliminary recommendations, binding our whole future? Above all, why was the government so quick to include in the bill conclusions which, according to the committee itself, could only be hypothetical and premature? Have they both given in to the pressures of the so-called Liberal opinion? Did they want to stay one jump ahead of their opponents, and specially of the Roman Catholics? The bishops, it goes without saying, are not accusing anybody. They are even careful not to point out that the parliamentary committee and the government saw fit to introduce their amendment proposals before having heard those who on the religious level are supposed to speak on behalf of 50 per cent of the Canadian people. They are simply wondering if, in this hour of decision, the Canadian people have really before them all the necessary information and if parliament has the right to venture into new legislation of such significance. "For people and for civilization", without weighing by means of appropriate research the moral, psychological and sociological consequences". That is also the question we are asking ourselves and that, when the day comes, we shall ask the government.

[Mr. Latulippe.]

The new legislation will not solve the problem of secret abortions and death caused by childbirth.

Mr. Speaker, according to those logical warnings approved by very competent lawyers, I believe once again that we even have no right to legislate on this matter the way we are doing it today and I ask the minister to withdraw from Bill C-150 the subsection dealing with abortion and to postpone the consideration of that matter until the time we have the necessary information and are sure of acting for the common good, according to a Christian point of view and in a logical way.

Then we may perhaps introduce a similar bill, provided full freedom is granted every member to vote according to his conscience, his common sense and his sense of justice.

The Department of Justice must live up to its name. In fact, its function is not to pass unjust legislations. Now I believe the legislation we are getting ready to pass is one of the most unjust we have ever brought out in Canada, and we have no right to pass unjust laws that go against the will of most people.

I go on quoting the statement of the bishops:

Does that mean that the Church, at this very moment and for that sole case, is going beyond the limits of the role to which, following the last council, it had consigned itself by announcing that, from now on, it would only interfere in temporal matters when public interest was at stake? Certainly not. We need only point out, in this respect, that the statement makes a very clear distinction between the moral and the legal aspects of abortion. When, dealing with the latter, it rejects the government approach, it does not do so on behalf of catholic morality as such, that is clear enough, but just in the name of morality itself, for the sake of the dignity of the human person, that is, once again, for the sake of the common weal which it has undeniably the right, as well as any other group of citizens, to conceive and to defend according to its own views.

The bishops, in the present case, are deliberately addressing the catholics. If they feel they should abide by their views, the latter have henceforth to trace the line, where abortion is concerned, between moral and civil law. As in any temporal matter, and whether they support or oppose the intentions of the government, they should, as citizens, trust their own conscience, trust their own private judgment on what they feel the common good requires according to their experience and inner thinking, and not necessarily according to whatever wording the bishops have deemed advisable to draft.

In practice, the foetus should be always considered as a human person; abortion, from the standpoint of morality, is always the murder of an innocent being.

Mr. Speaker, we would yet have many a thing to say on the subject. There were, for instance, lively discussions in the committee; but the members who sat on it did not adopt a stand directly. Highly competent men come before the committee as witnesses, among others, Dr. Benoît Légaré, a gynaecologist from the Saint-François d'Assise Hospital in Quebec City. He appeared before the committee. He expressed his point of view; he spoke as a Christian and spoke conscientiously. He did not stake his conscience; he entrusted it to the Almighty and spoke laconically, logically, humanely and like a Christian on that situation;

We have not come here as Catholic doctors. We would, indeed, be ill-advised to try, through legislation, to impose our moral code on those who do not share our religious beliefs. Any argument based on those principles would weaken our plea considerably.

We have come here this morning as doctors concerned with helping our legislators to formulate a law that is just and respectful of human life. Accordingly, we will remain strictly on the level of natural law. We therefore intend to convince you that the foetus, from the instant of its conception, is a human being, albeit imperfect. If we achieve this, I feel that our testimony will have been very useful.

Doctor René Jutras, pediatrist, basing himself on genetics, will take care of the technical aspect of what we have to say to you.

I admit that doctors and biologists have yet to agree unanimously on this point.

I know that there are some who will maintain that at the start the foetus matter is too imperfect to be classified in the category of human beings. But, where is the one so learned he can decide whether this perfection appears in the eighth or twelfth week of life?

Mr. Speaker, all the evidence given by serious, competent and responsible men who want the good of the nation, who understand the very essence of life shows clearly that they oppose the clause now before us and that they do not think it should be agreed to for any reason whatever because it runs contrary to the respect that every person in his right mind should have for human life.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a few comments on this particular clause. It is interesting to note that while I may not confine myself strictly to legal interpretations, I am glad to adopt that course because there are certain moral and social principles involved in a bill like this. The situation could not be otherwise.

Why we do not practise preventive medicine in this field, rather than draw up clauses that pretend to treat the problem after it has been created? Sex used to be taboo; now it is a consumer item. Books by the score are written on sex. Television portrays sex almost every night. I am sure the Minister of Justice watches television and must have seen this program the other day on which a lady was introduced who was not even wearing coloured glasses—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I turn that kind of stuff off now.

Mr. Rynard: The minister says he turns that kind of stuff off now. I think that by the introduction of this bill the minister is giving encouragement to the publicizing of sex. This is the sad part of it. I have a very high regard for the minister and did not think he would be led into the position of not protecting the public better than he is. All the minister is doing by means of this bill is an indirect way, by permissiveness of stimulating the rapaciousness of the sexual appetite, when he should be preventing it. Why ask the doctor to murder? Why not prevent this situation from arising?

The promotion of sex goes on and on. Let us stop and take a good, clean look at this question. Knowledge and science have arrived at the point where almost complete birth control is possible. Why should the medical profession be put in the position of treating something which can be prevented? The minister talks about hospitals in this regard. I am sure that many hospitals will not want to carry out this type of operation. When this bill passes, perhaps they will have to do it. How does the minister propose getting around this? I can name hospitals that will not carry out abortions. It is only fair and proper that the minister tell us how he proposes to get around that problem.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, under the rules I can only answer that question by asking the hon. member a question. Will the hon. member accept a question?

Mr. Rynard: I am always glad to receive a question from the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Was the hon. member here earlier in the day when I spoke directly on this question and assured the house that, within the terms of what I said, there was no criminal obligation or responsibility on the medical profession to force them to participate in or perform a therapeutic abortion? I also said that in so far as there was any civil obligation or liability, this did not arise in any way from clause 18. In other words, the bill does not purport to encroach in any way upon the relationship between the hospital and the doctor, the doctor in a hospital and the patient, the nurse and the doctor, doctor and the nurse, and so on. Is the hon. member aware of the fairly full treatment I gave to that question earlier in the day?

Mr. Rynard: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I am also aware of the abortion cases that are sent from one hospital to another. It is in this respect that I think the minister is closing the door. I ask, what is he going to do about it? Does the minister propose that this be paid out of medicare hospitalization? In Russia, only about 4 per cent of these cases are eligible for that type of treatment. The next thing will be the licensing of prostitution.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Oh, no.

Mr. Rynard: The minister does not believe that. Would the minister like me to tell him what the score is in England? I do not think he has read what the situation is there. I will put it on the record so he will understand the problem. The extract I shall read to the house illustrates very effectively what the problem is in this regard.

This article was written by Dr. Lewis and is to be found in the British Medical Journal for January 25, at page 241. Dr. Lewis writes about an angry lady who wanted a hysterectomy for prolapses and could not get one. There is no exaggerating, she could not get a hysterectomy because the hospitals were filled with patients requiring abortions. This article reads:

> Lewis points out that when the abortion law was changed the gynecologists did not expect a very great change in their practice. They thought that there would be a slightly more liberal attitude to the problem. He continues: "How wrong we were. I am afraid that we did not allow for the attitude of, firstly, the general public, and, secondly, the general practitioners."

I suggest to the Minister of Justice that he, also, can be awfully wrong in this respect. The article continues:

> In 1958, 1,600 abortions were notified in England and Wales; the estimated number for 1968 is 35,000.

I hope the minister listened to those statistics.

> One curious feature of the present pattern is that only 45 per cent of the patients are married. Since far more married women become pregnant than single ones, it is hard to see why medical indications should be so much more frequent in the unmarried.

That is the type of permissiveness to which the minister is opening the door by this bill.

> The whole character of the gynecologist's work in outpatients has changed, says the author, because he has to deal with two, three or four requests at every session; often it takes longer to refuse than to grant the request. "And I have made no mention of the large numbers of pregnancies that are being terminated in registered nursing homes for reasons of convenience and financial gain, masquerading as legal operations under the new act." He feels that this state of affairs will continue, and that it is unrealistic to expect a small section of the community, the gynecologists, to adopt a moral attitude completely at variance with that of society as a whole.

This is the area in which society is sick. That is why I point out to the minister that we should be dealing with prevention rather than trying to cope with the problem after it has been created.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but it is six o'clock. Prior to calling it six o'clock, in view of the fact that the hon. member will be continuing his remarks after the dinner adjournment I might remind him that we are dealing with a specific amendment and subamendment which ask that no hospital be obliged to establish a therapeutic abortion committee. I invite the hon. member to restrict his remarks as much as possible to that specific matter. It being six o'clock, the sitting stands suspended until eight o'clock.

At six o'clock the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. Rynard: I was saying when the house rose at six o'clock, Mr. Speaker, that the pressure which will be brought to bear on hospitals and on the abortion committees of those hospitals—if they have one and they likely will have—will be great, indeed. If any arguments are needed to substantiate this assertion they will be found clearly set out in the report of Dr. Lewis on B.M.J. which I placed on record.

This is what will happen: a certain clause of this bill, once adopted and passed into law, will gradually be the subject of wider interpretation. This is what has happened elsewhere. Today, in Europe, I believe probably less than 4 per cent of abortions performed there are carried out for valid medical reasons. In the long run, the pressure of the affluent society, or of the just society—which, in effect, means "do what you want to do whether it is morally right or not"—may be great enough to break down the moral conscience of abortion committees and hospitals. This is what I fear. Where they have not had abortion committees on religious grounds, they will be made to create them.

If proof of this is required, hon. members need only look at today's Ottawa Citizen where an article appears by Karl E. Meyer concerning social conditions in the Baltic countries. He says:

> Moralists would become discouraged in visiting Denmark, Sweden and the Netherlands. Not only are these countries allowing permissiveness to become a way of life, but nearly everybody seems incorrigibly relaxed about it, even those who may have their doubts . . . The sky is the limit as long as nobody gets hurt. Or, as Irene van der Weetering, who holds the Provo seat on the city council, complains: "They smother us with tolerance."

This seems definitely the trend in Europe today. I wonder whether the Minister of Justice would continue to follow his present course if he felt he was setting a similar trend in motion here in Canada. They certainly did not set out with that intention in Europe, and I warn hon. members that with the permissiveness contemplated here we might well be starting on the same road.

I am one who feels that television can be singled out as a primary agent of change. The author of the article I mentioned quotes a Swedish journalist as saying "Television has the power of legitimizing things." The article goes on to say:

> As a result of all these factors . . . the Dutch, Danes and Swedes are on the way to creating societies where anything goes.

These things go on in communist countries, but these are atheistic in their thinking.

In Denmark and Sweden, there are new forms of marriage, social acceptance of homosexuality, abolition of censorship, permission to use soft drugs, compulsory sex education and easy access to contraceptives. All of these things exist in one or other of these countries. It may be that when the limits of permissiveness are reached the Dutch, the Danes and the Swedes will find that they have not solved any of the age old moral problems but have simply transferred them to a different plane. Their experience has a certain fascination for the rest of the world, and they should not complain, as some of them do, when we curiously peer and prod.

I intend to speak on some other clauses, Mr. Speaker, but I will conclude now by saying that anything that denigrates the spiritual and moral forces of a nation destroys the power of that nation to choose between right and wrong. This could very well happen to the abortion committees and our hospitals when the pressure is on.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, we are studying amendment No. 21 which reads as follows:

> Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person.

However, Mr. Speaker, in my opening remarks I would like to point out to the house, if other hon. members have not done so already—for I have not had the opportunity to listen to all the speeches delivered on that important matter—that the end of the text of the amendment refers to "the miscarriage of a female person".

During the debate of the committee on justice and legal affairs, when Bill C-150 was under study, I had the opportunity to remind the minister who, with much patience, sponsors the bill, that several pages of the bill, in particular pages 42 and 43, and a score of other pages, are devoted to "the miscarriage of a female person". I asked him whether, as far as he knew, persons of another sex could undergo abortion?

I see that the bill was reported without any amendment and I find it strange to want to amend at this stage by making it clear that abortion should be practised only on a female person.

I would like to know whether according to the scientists of the Liberal party, there exists a third, a fourth or even fifth sex that we do not know. To the best of my knowledge, the house has not had the privilege of meeting any worthy specimen of those various sexes. To my knowledge, we have only known in this house two sexes: the male sex and the female sex. In fact there is only one person of the female sex here. We do not know people of the third, fourth, of fifth sex.

Therefore, why make a bill even more ridiculous by inserting the words: "the abortion of a person of the female sex"? What other sex can undergo abortion apart from the female sex? I find that absolutely stupid and ridiculous, and I demand why the legal advisors, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the experts who drafted this bill tried, through the present Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), to get the Canadian people to swallow it? How is it that in a text of law, reputedly serious, we read that we are to procure the miscarriage of a female person only?

Mr. Speaker, I find in at least twenty different places in the bill these terms: "miscarriage of a female person".

However, the minister has not yet answered this question: How many sexes are there in Canada?

Mr. Speaker, at least the spirit of this amendment is in keeping with our beliefs when it provides that an hospital should not be obliged to establish a therapeutic abortion committee. In the name of the freedom which some members want to preach in the house so that a woman may feel free to have an abortion if she so wishes. We should ensure to hospitals and doctors unwilling to perform abortion the same liberty not to have to submit, for some reason or other, to the legislation which they do not want to be part of our statutes.

Mr. Speaker, in expressing my opposition to the provisions of Bill C-150 regarding abortion, I shall not deal tonight with the moral problems involved in abortion.

We have merely brought in arguments based on common sense or provided by medical authorities condemning abortion, even therapeutic abortion, a practice that this bill is trying to impose on our hospitals and medical practitioners.

The main argument against abortion is that this small being, as such, has the right to live. Consequently, society must do every possible thing to ensure him this right.

Mr. Eugene Quay, an American professor, wrote a study which was published in the Georgetown Law Journal. Here is what he said:

> The protection of the life of an unborn child has always been a major concern in the oldest laws known. This matter has continued to form the subject of laws in all civilizations right through to the present time, because this thought springs from a universal sentiment that foresees the decline of civilization when this right is no longer protected.

Unfortunately, we have to realize that at the present time Canada's civilization is decadent, for rather than protecting the right to life, we do everything possible to eliminate such a right.

Section 3 of the United Nations Universal declaration of human rights, passed in 1948, stipulates that, and I quote:

> Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Paragraph (a) of section 1 of the Canadian Bill of Rights, passed in 1960, recognizes that:

> —the right of the individual to life—

—exists in Canada and will continue to exist. However, in 1969, we are already willing to question that principle and to pass legislation to abolish it.

The convention to protect human rights and fundamental freedoms, signed in Rome in 1950 by the members of the European Council, states the following in paragraph (1) of section 2, and I quote:

> The right of the individual to life is protected by law. Death cannot be inflicted intentionally, except in the carrying out of a death sentence passed by a court of justice in the case of an offence punishable by death under the law.

In his book entitled "The Right to Live" Mr. Norman St. John-Stevas wrote in New York in 1964:

> Respect for human life is part of the moral consensus of western civilization—such consensus emanating from intuitive wisdom of a really human society.

It then appears that the right to life is universally recognized and the voluntary and intentional destruction of a living foetus in the body of its mother, or of a child at its birth, constitutes a practice which is universally prohibited.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Whatever the authors of the Criminal Code may say, life begins before the birth of the child and the severance of the umbilical cord.

The physicians who came to testify before the standing committee on justice and legal affairs, on March 25—and others before them—especially Drs. Légaré and Justras proved, without doubt, that life exists well before birth.

The hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Wooliams) asked the following question of Dr. Légaré, a gynecologist at the St-François d'Assise Hospital, in Quebec City:

From the medical point of view, do you agree with the definition given in the Criminal Code?

And the physician replied:

From the medical point of view, no... but the unborn child is definitely a human being. The slides of Dr. Jutras——will give you a medical proof.

Doctor Jutras, head of the Pediatrics Department of the Arthabasca hospital, showed a series of slides which proved beyond doubt that life exists, imperfect maybe but real none the less, because when the fœtus is 24 days old its heart starts to beat. Some Swedish physicians have ascertained that a fœtal heart was still beating one or two hours after an abortion.

Thanks to the transparencies of Dr. Jutras, it was possible to observe that on the twelfth week, a fœtus sucks his thumb.

Mr. Speaker, there are even some members who have been doing the same since they have been here and who continue to do so.

On the sixteenth week, the eyes of the fœtus are developed and on the twenty-sixth week, it is viable.

Life is by then so well established that in the Model Penal Code approved by The American Law Institute, paragraph 3 of section 230, dealing with abortion, it is stipulated, and I quote:

When the abortion is performed after the 26th week of pregnancy, it is murder in the second degree.

This referred to illegal abortions.

What shall we think now of therapeutic abortion. This is what I want to talk about, Mr. Speaker. It is precisely the problem that we study tonight. What shall we think now, I say, of medical abortion which the Minister of Justice wants to include in the Criminal Code in order to justify abortion?

This is what was said on this subject by Dr. R. Gordon Douglas, professor of obstetrics and gynecologist at the Medical College of Cornell University in the United States. This is no idle talk; we are not dealing here with back-street butchers or with blue-stocking gossips:

If we make use of all our therapeutic armamentarium, we can put an end to all the troubles that can arise, for a mother, from the birth of a child.

In other words, thanks to medical knowledge in this field, the life of the mother is no longer in danger when she is bearing a child or when she gives birth to a child.

Professor Quay, in the book which I quoted a while ago, proves, from pages 181 to 220, that appropriate prenatal care and attention can practically always save the life of the mother without resorting to therapeutic abortion.

At this stage, I should like to say to the supporters of abortion that it is almost an insult to medicine to try and make believe that doctors are incapable to cure illness except by killing the foetus, while doctors have proved in the committee that therapeutic abortion is futile today, because treatment can help to cure the diseases that can sometimes attend pregnancy.

On the other hand, Dr. K. P. Russell, from the county hospital of Los Angeles, writes in the Journal of the American Medical Association and I quote:

For the past ten years, we have grown more and more aware of the fact that several indications——and here, he is of the same opinion as Dr. Légaré who was a witness to the committee of justice and legal affairs—

—we have grown every day more aware of the fact that many an indication in favour of therapeutic abortion is no longer valid... in the light of continuing improvement in the field of medicine and surgery.

Professor Quay, on the other hand, believes that if therapeutic abortion is to be legalized, it will hamper research in the field of gynaecology, with the purpose of saving human lives and that doctors will do it the easy way by destroying the foetus.

He also makes no bones about stigmatizing the mothers who seek therapeutic abortion.

A mother who sacrifices the life of her child in order to protect her own health is lacking something somewhere... and if there were to be some authority to decide whether to destroy an innocent life for social reasons, the interests of society would command to sacrifice the life of such a mother rather than that of her child who might one day become extremely useful to society. Some, even, go as far as to say that ... "health of the mother" ... should also cover ... "mental health."

According to doctors who have conducted studies on the problem, the mental troubles about which some women are complaining to justify their application for therapeutic abortion, are just subterfuges in order to get rid of their child.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Moreover, nothing shows that mental disorders are cured by ending pregnancy. And finally, therapeutic abortion could in some cases heighten mental disorders in a pregnant woman, when they give rise to feelings of frustration, hostility and shame.

For instance, Dr. Perlmutter of New York Bellevue Hospital, in his analysis of therapeutic abortion, which appeared in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynæcology, volume 53, 1947, page 1014, said the following:

There does not appear to be a single neurological or psychiatrical condition which could justify ending pregnancy.

Even the threat of suicide resorted to by pregnant women to get an abortion cannot be a valid argument, according to Dr. Lawrence C. Iolb, director of the New York State Psychiatric Institute.

He wrote in 1958, in his book Abortion in United States the following:

There is an interesting report from Sweden about 344 women who were refused a therapeutic abortion, 62 of whom had threatened to commit suicide if their request was not granted. So far, none has committed suicide. The threat of suicide is frequently used for intimidation purposes.

As for "eugenic" abortion, designed to prevent the birth of children who are abnormal, crippled or affected by hereditary diseases, or simply to improve the human race, we find it equally unacceptable.

Let us keep in mind that our soldiers fought against Hitler who practised eugenics in order to preserve the integrity of the German race. Would we, today, include such a provision into our Code, or simply allow, because no mention is made of it, doctors to practise eugenics?

Professor Norman St. John-Stevas, on page 16 of the book entitled "The Right To Live" and previously quoted, tells the following story, and I quote:

A doctor is discussing with a colleague: "With regard to terminating a pregnancy, I should like your opinion. The father suffers from syphilis and the mother, from tuberculosis. What would you have done? I should have terminated it, replies the other. In that case, you would have killed Beethoven!

Finally, a few words on the argument raised by the supporters of therapeutic abortion whereby the fact that abortions are common in certain hospitals is an argument in favour of adopting the amendment to the act.

Mr. Speaker, thefts and crimes are increasing in Canada as in every other country in the world. The efforts of the police to check crime are becoming less and less efficient. But who would suggest that our present legislation against crime be abolished? Who would suggest that our police forces, the R.C.M.P., and municipal forces should be abolished?

And last, the arguments whereby therapeutic abortions lead to a decrease in clandestine abortions—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, would the house allow me to continue my remarks for one minute only?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The honourable member is aware that he must have the unanimous consent of the house. Does the house allow the hon. member to go on with his remarks?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, Professor Quay whom I quoted earlier, states the following:

The section on abortion proposed by the American Law Institute corresponds to the 1939 Danish law. Now while the number of legal abortions increased in 12 years to 5,000 per year, the number of criminal abortions, instead of decreasing or of disappearing, increased to 9,000 per year.

For all the reasons I have just listed, I do not think any hon. member, whatever his party—we have only heard from those objecting to the legislation—could put forward any argument supporting the bill because there is none.

I had the opportunity a few weeks ago to visit four western provinces and I was able to realize that opposition to abortion is as strong over there as it is here.

I believe all hon. members regardless of their faith should unite to ask the government to withdraw the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code relating to therapeutic abortion.

Also, I am in favor of the proposed amendment to the effect that hospitals and medical practitioners unwilling to procure a supposedly therapeutic abortion which, doctors say, no longer exists could at least be free not to abide by the provisions of this bill providing for the creation of an abortion committee in hospitals.

[English]

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, this part of the debate on this bill is different from that part of the debate that dealt with gross indecency. This is not just, shall we say, a mere truism. The amendments before us come as a result of representations made by various organizations, organized groups, pressure groups and individuals. They have been discussed in the public press, on radio and on television, and there has been a good deal of public debate on this matter. Therefore, even though I may not agree with these amendments, I feel they are much more legitimate than the ones contained in clause 7, for which there was no call from the public. They were not debated by the public, there has been no public demand for relaxations on gross indecency and therefore they seem to be a gratuitous offering on the part of the original author of the bill to some factions in the public interested in that type of activity.

Representations made favouring the adoption of clauses in this bill dealing with abortion have been made first of all, I suppose, by a lot of social workers and well meaning people. Many of them were naïve do-gooders to the extent that they believed adoption of this provision would reduce illegitimacy as the result of conception by young unmarried women or by married women who participate in extramarital affairs. It is thought that if such a young woman can go along to a hospital very quietly and have an abortion, this would eliminate the number of illegitimate children. Mr. Speaker, I do not think for a moment that that will be the case. It will be known when a woman goes to hospital. Women resort to the back street quack or to what is known as the abortion butcher because of the moral stigma attached to a woman carrying a child as a result of an illicit sexual connection. This is the reason for resorting to the quack and no amount of, shall we say, making abortions easier will reduce the immorality of the initial act and the immoral stigma. We will have to change society and say that a woman can conceive a child from whomsoever she wishes, and bear it. But society will not accept that. Society does not say that, nor does society pretend at any time to sanction illicit sexual connections which may result in a pregnancy. Therefore, I think the argument that adoption of this provision will reduce illegitimacy is sheer fantasy.

Furthermore, I doubt that it will reduce the number of so-called butchers. Why do I say that? I say it because there is that social stigma attached to an illicit pregnancy. Here again, I think there are naïve do-gooders who suggest that liberalizing the abortion provisions in our Criminal Code will reduce illegitimacy and drive the abortion butcher out of his back room.

On another occasion, I think I shall have the opportunity to speak on the principle of abortion at will or on request, or on proposals which would make abortion much more permissive than at present. At this time I should like to limit my remarks to the purpose of this amendment. I am pleased to see this amendment being put forward. Anything said to me by medical practitioners about the government proposals dealing with abortion has been said in an endeavour to protect practitioners who would refuse to perform an abortion on instruction from any therapeutic abortion committee. The medical practitioner might be either on the staff of the hospital or be connected with the hospital and be entitled to practice in that hospital. Also, many of those doctors who have had a great deal to say to me limit their practice to some of the hospitals within the city of Edmonton where abortions will not be carried out. There will not be an abortion committee in those hospitals as long as the directing staff and the doctors of those hospitals maintain the same view. It is their freedom of practice that we are attacking.

I say it is absolutely wrong. It will be failing morally. I trust the provinces will take some appropriate action to prohibit any undue pressure, either on a hospital or a doctor practising in a hospital, to carry out a therapeutic abortion against their will. Hospitals today have no freedom with regard to their financing. They are directly controlled by the provincial authorities. If it is the view of a provincial hospital authority that all hospitals, regardless of the persuasion by the board of management or directing staff, shall carry out therapeutic abortions under penalty of some financial or other type of restriction, that will be wrong. It has been suggested the remedy does not lie in the Criminal Code. Now, is the time to speak out against any undue pressure.

It is the government's proposed amendment to the Criminal Code which sets up the therapeutic abortion committee. Bill C-150 will entitle a doctor to perform a therapeutic abortion under certain conditions, therefore it is now that we must raise the protest against any undue pressure being exerted. If the abortion committee is not set up or if a doctor does not wish to carry out a therapeutic abortion. There may have to be accompanying legislation from the provinces because no hospital may be able to found a claim in contract or otherwise under these sections against any provincial hospital authority that brought undue pressure. There might be a possibility of a claim for damages, but I think the grounds might be rather tenuous.

When dealing with this bill, we in this house cannot provide that there shall be a civil remedy against any provincial hospital authority that brings undue pressure on either a hospital authority or practising physician or any legal action being brought against either or both of them because of their refusal. I support the spirit of the amendment. I think it has its place at this point.

As my colleague the hon. member for Simcoe North (Mr. Rynard) stated, this is the point where we, as legislators, should indicate there must be no penalty on any hospital or physician refusing to carry out a therapeutic abortion as may be permitted under this act. I wish to reiterate the therapeutic abortion committee will be a creation of this act now before us. If there are to be any consequences arising out of the conduct of this potential committee, they should be expressed in the Criminal Code.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, my comments will be similar to those made by the previous speaker on the amendment before us, which reads as follows:

"Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person."

The hon. minister of Justice, Mr. Turner, has probably received some time ago a written memorandum from the Medical Association of the province of Quebec, stating the clear opposition of its members to the obligation for the medical committee of a hospital to procure what is called a therapeutic abortion.

Like the hon. minister and other members, I have received a request from the medical doctors asking that we oppose that provision in the bill. To date, the hon. minister has not heeded the appeal made by the Medical Association of the province of Quebec. I wonder whether all the doctors making this appeal to the hon. minister and to the members of this House can be wrong.

According to the bill, doctors refusing to procure therapeutic abortion would be penalized. I do not believe that such is the intention of the hon. minister. His Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Cantin), signals that it is not. I would like the parliamentary secretary or the hon. minister himself to give the house a clear and definite answer about the intentions of the legislators with regard to the provisions of this act.

If a person goes to the hospital for a abortion and if the hospital or the doctors there refuse to grant the request, will they be punishable under the act? That was not explained and that is why I am speaking about the Medical Association of the province of Quebec this evening. I ask the hon. minister to clarify the bill for us.

It is obvious that Catholic hospitals in the province of Quebec did not allow abortions until now. Even when the mother's life was endangered. I do not believe the law can established a criterion, permitting to determine whether the life of a pregnant woman is in danger because her pregnancy does not progress normally. I say the minister fails to do his duty by refusing to give on this bill clarifications that could protect doctors in Catholic hospitals who would refuse to perform an abortion.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, I am completely opposed to the party in power legislating on what concerns the mother's health in the case of a difficult pregnancy or premature birth. I believe legislators have no right neither on life nor on the effects of a difficult abortion. They must not substitute themselves to Providence.

The object of my contribution in this debate is to tell the Minister of Justice that the provision concerning abortion is so complex, entails so many after effects and creates so many difficulties that the legislator is wrong in my opinion by interfering with the plans of Providence.

The hon. members opposite may gloat over my references to the Canadian bishops who recently vigorously denounced those provisions of the legislation. They asked the Minister of Justice to clarify the legislation so that doctors who refuse to perform an abortion will not be liable to prosecution.

We know that recently, in the United States, certain doctors were prosecuted by hospitals for having refused to perform abortions. We would not want, especially in the province of Quebec, that such proceedings be instituted against doctors. I insist on that point.

I beg the Minister of Justice to look at me. He is talking at present with one of his colleagues. I beg him to clear up the matter. I know the minister is taking advice from his parliamentary secretary and that he could not follow my speech. His parliamentary secretary will give him the message as usual. I say to the minister that he should make the legislation more explicit.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

I am closely watching what the hon. member says. It is impossible to ignore him.

Mr. Asselin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

I did not hear what the minister said. Could he, please, repeat it?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I said, Mr. Speaker, that "I was closely watching what the hon. member was saying because it is impossible to ignore him."

Mr. Asselin: I thank the Minister of Justice for giving so much importance to my remarks, but before we vote on this amendment, I should like to know whether the Minister of Justice is going to comply with the request of the Association of doctors and also of the bishops who have asked him whether these doctors would be subject to prosecution or to penalties under the Criminal Code.

I think the question is very ticklish and very important and the hon. Minister should at least give the members of the province of Quebec the assurance that doctors will not be prosecuted under the section on abortion.

On April 23, 1969, Claude Ryan published in Le Devoir an article under the heading "Conscience, médecine et avortement" in which he warned the hon. Minister of Justice against all the possible consequences of his bill on abortion. The minister must have read that article. I do not claim that Mr. Ryan is an authority on abortion and medicine. The hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Gervais) and the whip of the Liberal party are shaking their heads...

Mr. Gervais: All depends on the subject.

Mr. Asselin: The fact remains that this editorial of Le Devoir raises, in my opinion, a very important question and I fail to see how the minister can reject amendment No. 21, without giving the Quebec Medical Association some safeguard to the effect that its members will not be subject to legal proceedings under the law when they refuse to perform abortion.

I greatly admire the minister's courage and eagerness. He accepted to sponsor the legislation of the former Minister of Justice, the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). We know that when the minister introduced this legislation in the house he felt—and I think that he was right—that the bill should be divided in order to enable—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): No.

Mr. Asselin: The minister says no! But he did say that the bill should be divided in order to enable the members to express their views freely and according to their conscience. At that time, I think the hon. minister was quite right and, some time after the Prime Minister turned him down and told him that the bill would not be divided but would be considered as a whole, and that the members would have to vote only once.

We know that it was made into a vote of confidence for the government, and we noticed it on the last vote. Indeed, not one member from Quebec, not even the hon. member for Sherbrooke, voted against the government. Thus, on the 54 or 55 members from Quebec who think like those of the opposition and do not favour the omnibus bill, nor would want—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member at this time, but I would like to ask him to confine his remarks strictly to the amendment now under consideration.

• (9:00 p.m.)

Mr. Asselin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I shall heed your advice.

With regard to the possible consequences of the amendment now under study, I think that I have a right to ask the members from Quebec—but not you, since you are Deputy Chairman of committees and Deputy Speaker—to follow the dictates of their conscience on the matters of abortion and homosexuality.

Finally, we have not heard any Quebec member oppose this bill, and yet, I know that in their inner conscience, some of them wished they belonged to the opposition so that they could vote freely, as was proposed by the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Stanfield).

Before this amendment comes up for a vote, I should like the Minister of Justice to explain clearly what the situation of the government is with regard to the request of the bishops that doctors and hospitals not be required to procure abortion or to set up abortion committees. I should like the Minister of Justice to give us specific information and commit himself with regard to this problem, so that the doctors who refuse to procure abortions for reasons of conscience and professional ethics can be protected against resulting legal proceedings.

The Minister of Justice cannot, to my mind, go against the designs of Providence. When one fights nature, nature fights back.

At times, pregnancies are difficult; but doctors have from time to time met the difficulty by performing an operation to relieve the mother.

In closing, I therefore ask the Minister of Justice to clarify the situation and give hon. members some information, so that when the time comes to vote they will know how best to protect natural laws.

I trust the Minister of Justice can give us some details within a few moments and also tell us whether he has replied to the doctors of the province of Quebec who have requested that the act on abortion be amended. I am convinced that the minister of Justice will set forth for us the position of the government, after which I shall be able to decide on how I must vote on the proposed amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the house ready for the question?

Mr. Asselin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I asked the Minister of Justice whether he could give us some further information on the question I put tonight and that was put by other members. I want to direct it again to the minister. Will the doctors who refuse to procure miscarriages, as provided by the law, be liable to prosecution? Even if I alone in the house tonight, I am going to object to the debate being carried on before the minister answers my question.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, on the point of order, I must say to the hon. member that I am not allowed to repeat my remarks of this afternoon, in which I sincerely answered all the questions he asked this evening. If he reads Hansard, he will find there the answers to all his questions. As for me, I am not permitted to repeat my remarks.

Mr. Asselin: Is the minister of the opinion that amendment No. 21 now before us answers the request of the doctors of Quebec and Canada that they not be liable to prosecution after refusing to procure an abortion?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I have already answered that question, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The question is on the motion Mr. Woolliams (for Mr. McCleave) No. 21 which reads:

That Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by inserting in clause 18 after sub-section 7 of Section 237 on page 44 the following sub-section:

"(8) Nothing in this section shall be construed as obliging any hospital to establish a therapeutic abortion committee or any qualified medical practitioner to procure the miscarriage of a female person."

And the amendment to the motion (Mr. Burton):

That the proposed subsection (8) be amended by adding thereto the following words:

"or any member of a hospital staff to assist in procuring such miscarriage."

All those in favour of the amendment to the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Call in the members.

The house divided on the amendment to the motion (No. 21), (Mr. Burton) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Woolliams (for Mr. Valade) moved amendment No. 24, as follows:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatory Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the word "and" on line five on page 43 and the "period" after the word "practitioner" on line 8 on page 43 and inserting the following words: "and,

(e) that those means are employed before the period of implantation."

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Woolliams: I hear some hon. members calling for an explanation of this motion which I am moving on behalf of my hon. friend. Judging by the way so many of them have voted on the other clauses and amendments, I can understand why they believe these things should be explained to them.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Seriously, as I understand my hon. friend's motion the effect is to change certain words in clause 18 and add a provision for the setting up of a therapeutic abortion committee in accredited hospitals. According to the Criminal Code amendment, if the committee gives a certificate, then any medical practitioner can go ahead and perform an abortion providing it is to preserve the life or health of the mother. This brings me to the point I want to argue in dealing with this section. I want to try to explain what Professor Mewett recommended to the committee, though Your Honour, with the greatest respect, ruled out the word "unlawfully" that I wanted to add to section 237 which is being amended by this bill.

[Mr. Speaker.]

First of all, and despite what the minister has said, I ask the house to consider section 209. Section 209 of the Code which is in two parts, commences:

Every one who causes the death of a child that has not become a human being, in such a manner that, if the child were a human being, he would be guilty of murder, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for life.

That is subsection (1) of section 209. My good friend the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) says that this has nothing to do with abortion. Mr. Speaker, it is beyond me how he makes that deduction. The minister says he has consulted the law officers in this regard.

Let us see what section 195 of the Criminal Code has to say about when a person becomes a human being. That section provides:

A child becomes a human being within the meaning of this Act when it has completely proceeded, in a living state, from the body of its mother whether or not

(a) it has breathed,

(b) it has an independent circulation, or

(c) the navel string is severed.

I ask the house to keep that section in mind and to go back to the provisions of section 209 to which I have just referred. In other words, an abortion of the foetus at that stage would be a criminal offence under section 209. However, there is an exception made in subsection (2), which reads:

This section does not apply to a person who, by means that, in good faith, he considers necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child that has not become a human being, causes the death of the child.

Yet, the Minister of Justice and his officers claim that section has nothing to do with miscarriage or abortion. Their definition of miscarriage or abortion must be far different from that of the House of Lords.

I should like to know why this exception is made if the section has nothing to do with abortion. If it has nothing to do with abortion, all I can say is that for the last 25 years lawyers have argued this section in defending abortion cases when they should not have done so.

Let us see what Professor Mewett has to say. I cannot believe that a person like Professor Mewett, who teaches criminal law at the University of Toronto, would not understand what is meant by a miscarriage or a simple abortion within the definition in the Criminal Code. I should like to put on record a quotation from the "Criminal Law Quarterly". I don't mind saying that although the government added another eight clauses, I was not allowed to add one word, the word "unlawfully', to section 237. My amendment was ruled out of order. This is beyond my comprehension, and not only beyond my comprehension but the comprehension of many professors teaching criminal law in universities in Canada.

I should like to refer the house to page 385 of the Criminal Law Quarterly, volume 10, for 1967-68:

> Under section 209 of the Code (with the proposed amendment) causing the death of a child that has not become a human being in the act of birth is not illegal if the person causing the death considers it necessary in good faith to preserve the life of the mother.

Surely, those words refer to miscarriages and abortions.

> The Bourne principle clearly applies, allowing the medical practitioner to exercise his own judgment in the act of birth. If, however, the pregnancy is to be terminated prior to the act of birth, apparently totally different, incredibly complex and dubiously constitutional provisions apply.

Then, Professor Mewett goes on to deal with section 209, the section that my good friend the Minister of Justice and the law officers of the crown say has nothing to do with a miscarriage or an abortion. We are dealing here with doing away with the foetus prior to its becoming a human being. If that is not a miscarriage, then there never was a miscarriage. He says:

> Procuring a miscarriage (or, to be precise, using any means with that intent) will be lawful if a therapeutic abortion committee, by a majority, certifies that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy would be likely to endanger the mother's life or health. Apparently the miscarriage is lawful with or without the consent of the mother, though subsection (8) states "Nothing in subsection (4) shall be construed as making unnecessary the obtaining of any ... consent that ... may be required, otherwise than under this Act ..." I assume that that means, if it means anything at all, which I doubt, that the doctor is guilty of assault but not of procuring a miscarriage. This hardly scratches the surface of the abortion problem, and probably makes no difference to the present situation (apart from complicating it) in which most doctors will already perform therapeutic abortions, on the understanding that the Bourne principle applies not only to section 209 but also to section 237.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, to understand what the Criminal Code means by an abortion and by a miscarriage ,sections 209 and 237 must be read together. Then, Professor Mewett goes on to say this:

> It will leave entirely untouched the problem of an unmarried pregnant woman, the victim of rape, or the respectable married woman who just doesn't want a child. If that is all that it really does, a pregnant woman would be advised to wait until the onset of labour and have the child disposed of under section 209 without the rigmarole provided for by section 237.

What is the Professor talking about, Mr. Speaker? Very simply this. He says that section 209 makes an exception. When in their great wisdom the minister and his officers added the words "in the act of birth", it enabled a doctor in good faith to cause the miscarriage of an unborn child only after the onset of labour pains. I want to be fair to the law officers and say the amendment to section 237 was made in light of the fact that the abortion committee would have to give a certificate for the performing of an abortion. The committee would recommend that a doctor in an accredited hospital perform a miscarriage after the onset of labour pains.

What would be the position if doctors were really ruthless about this? My good friend—and others apparently agree with him—says that the section does not apply to a miscarriage or an abortion. But what would happen in fact? If a woman wanted an abortion she would forget about the abortion committee, the accredited hospital and the committee's certificate. She would wait until she experienced labour pains, then the unborn child could be destroyed and that would be a miscarriage. This was the very reason section 209 was amended. I had suggested removal of the words "in the act of birth" from section 209 and the insertion of the word "unlawfully" in section 237. In that way, the public and the doctors would have been protected.

This party was elected, so it says, in order to bring in this legislation. Hon. members opposite say they have a mandate to introduce amendments concerning homosexuality and abortion, and that no one will stop them from doing so.

Section 209 is applicable only to the death of a child in the act of birth. Where would you be left if you take out the words, "in the act of birth", from section 209 and add the word "unlawfully" to section 237? Perhaps I should put it this way. If you added the word "unlawfully" to section 237, you might then have some protection under our law. When amending the Criminal Code in 1953 another Liberal minister of justice, Mr. Garson, said that the changes he was proposing would protect the public and the doctors. Doctors must be protected. It must be presumed they are acting in good faith. As a matter of fact, the crown must prove in any prosecution that a doctor has not acted in good faith. If you added the word "unlawfully" to section 237 and removed the words "in the act of birth" from section 209, you might have a reasonable abortion law in this country.

Really, the government has put some beautiful drapes over windows here to satisfy those people in Canada who want wholesale abortions and to satisfy those who, because of various convictions and religious scruples, do not want abortions at all. You see here the same old Liberal practice of pointing in both directions; the government is using both arms to point in different directions to satisfy all the people. I know that people will not like me for saying this, but this must be said. It is time we exposed this great fiction of double talk. Whether it is dealing with a language bill or the Criminal Code, this Liberal government manages to talk out of both sides of its mouth at the same time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Woolliams: Some people in this country want wholesale abortions, and others want no abortions at all. Each group thinks this bill is the answer. Some think that anyone wanting an abortion simply has to go to a committee, obtain a certificate and have the abortion performed. This bill does not mean that at all.

An hon. Member: I hope you are right.

Mr. Woolliams: I hope I am, too. The only thing we need to be worried about is if doctors become so ruthless that they interpret the law to mean that any action they take may be considered necessary to protect the health of the woman. If they interpret the wording of the law ruthlessly we shall see wholesale abortions in this country. I know the hon. member is intelligent and understands what I mean.

Naturally, any young girl who gets pregnant will be upset. But I do not think doctors and the courts will say that such a young woman must have an abortion because the abortion is necessary to protect her health or to preserve her life. I do not think the doctors of this country will go that far.

Mr. Flemming: But it only takes the opinion of one doctor, does it not?

[Mr. Woolliams.]

Mr. Woolliams: I agree. We are developing into a permissive society and cannot see what is ahead of us.

An hon. Member: Be careful, or we shall be having some resignations.

Mr. Woolliams: I would not wish to see that. Basically, this law does nothing for girls who have been raped and do not want to bear the child resulting from that offence. That is, unless it is shown that bearing the child will in some way endanger the life or the health of the mother, the girl will have her child. I do not think the courts will go so far as to say that if a girl is pregnant as a result of being raped that that endangers her life or health. So, basically, the act in this regard is left alone. One can say that the law has not been changed. Certainly, if the courts interpret the law as they have been interpreting it since 1953 in this regard, one could well say that the present provisions do not change the law.

Clearly this government is talking out of both sides of its mouth. To those who want abortions it is saying, "Look at what a great reform party we are," and to those who do not want abortions it is saying, "We are really not that kind of party after all, we just want to be very careful in this area." I suggest that if we had left section 209 alone and added the word "unlawfully" to section 237, we should have arrived at basically the same sort of the law the government proposes to have. In addition, our doctors would have been afforded a little protection.

If my suggestion were adopted, doctors would be protected. Abortions would be performed to preserve the life or health of the mother. Also, the law would be more realistic, and we should not wind up playing games, as we are here.

May I now read some questions and answers given before the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. I am reading from page 349 of volume No. 10 of those proceedings. This is what I asked Professor Mewett, as reported at page 348:

> May I ask you to pause there, so that this is on record? You are dealing with the Canadian Section 209. I think it should be read in at this time.

I will not read section 209 at this time. Having read it, I went on to say, as reported at page 349:

> And I take it from conversations I had with you this morning, that you feel that the Bourne case principle that interprets the preservation of the life has been applied in Ontario, and I believe it has been applied elsewhere in Canada. It does not mean to save her from violent death, but it means to preserve her life, in a case where she might otherwise be left impaired physically or emotionally. Then, of course the doctor in good faith who performs such a therapeutic abortion would fall into the saving and exception clause of Section 209.

Speaking of the saving and exception clause of section 209, there is no indication as to whether it applies to miscarriages and abortions. That is, there is no indication that it does not apply to miscarriages and abortions. At any rate, that is my understanding of the matter. I continued to ask:

—with the strength of section 237, if the word "unlawfully" were put in you would be obtaining the same result basically—

I said in so many words that the law would remain the same, with the added proviso that you would have some protection under it. And what did the professor say to that? He agreed. That is why we have moved this amendment. It is basically relevant to what we are talking about.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It being ten o'clock, the house will proceed, pursuant to the provisions of standing order No. 40, to debate certain questions to be raised.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

COMBINES—DRUGS—PRICE FIXING BY B.C. PHARMACISTS

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, on April 16 I drew to the attention of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) a situation in which, as from April 15, the British Columbia Professional Pharmacists' Society was charging each welfare patient $1 for a prescription. I asked what action the minister proposed to deal with this matter and, specifically, if such apparent price fixing would be referred to the investigation branch for combines investigation.

It seems to me that the Minister's answer contradicted itself. On the one hand, he said that the practice of pharmacy comes under provincial jurisdiction, inferring he could do nothing about the situation; then, he added that such apparent price fixing in respect of professional fees has for some time been before the Combines Investigation Branch.

Since then quite a lot of water has gone under the bridge. On April 24 my colleague, the hon. member for Surrey (Mr. Mather) asked the minister whether the Combines Investigation Act was being used in this instance. The minister replied that he had no knowledge of any request from the government of British Columbia for an investigation but that he might have received it without knowing about it. Since the provincial Minister of Welfare on April 21 wrote to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, asking for an inquiry under the Combines Investigation Act and since he called a press conference two days later, on April 23, to talk about it, there is only one possible explanation about this state of affairs. The explanation lies with our new mail service. The letter sent on the 21st did not manage to arrive on the 24th.

An hon. Member: That is a disservice.

Mrs. MacInnis: Yes, as a colleague has said, that is a disservice. In British Columbia, Mr. Speaker, 65,000 people are on welfare who are classed as unemployable. This means that 65,000 breadwinners are now classified as being medically unfit to work and dependent for their living on welfare. These are the people who get optical and dental care under welfare as well as drugs. The people are unable to pay for those services. In 1967-68, the latest year for which such figures are available, there were 820,000 prescriptions filled for these patients. These are the people who are now being told they must pay a $1 surcharge if they want a prescription filled. How can they pay this $1?

• (10:00 p.m.)

A single person on welfare in British Columbia receives $75 a month, from which $30 is deducted for rent. This leaves a balance of $45 for food, clothing, bus fare, etc. A couple receives $125 of which $45 is paid out in rent, leaving $40 for each of them to live on for a month. Of course, they do not live, they only exist. A couple with two children receives $191, minus $55 for rent, leaving the magnificent sum of $136 a month for four people to exist on, $34 each.

These are the people who will be affected by this $1 prescription surcharge. They are the helpless hostages in a war the pharmacists society is waging against the government of British Columbia. The pharmacists want more money from the government with respect to welfare patients. The government says no. Therefore, the pharmacists are fastening themselves like leeches on the helpless bodies of the poor. I realize recent reports indicate that some pharmacists say they will not carry out the direction from their association, but the direction is there.

On April 24 the Pharmacists Society wrote to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. They presented a brief to him which includes all the facts from their point of view. At the same time, the British Columbia Minister of Welfare drew to the attention of the minister the serious implications of federal and provincial sponsored drug programs. This was as a result of the decision of the British Columbia Professional Pharmacist Society to make a $1 surcharge on prescriptions to welfare patients. The provincial minister stated that druggists already receive no less than a 66⅔ per cent mark-up on drugs dispensed to welfare patients. This is precisely the reason I am raising this question tonight.

The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has been trying, in some respects, to achieve co-operation with the relevant provincial authorities. He has been trying hard. I urge him, personally, to take a hand in this matter as it is his job to protect consumers. Those who are ill and on welfare need his help most of all.

Less than two weeks ago the minister presided over the first federal-provincial conference of ministers of consumer affairs in Ottawa. It appears this was a very successful conference. Cabinet Minister without Portfolio, Mrs. Patricia Jordan represented the British Columbia government. I suggest that the federal minister should now profit from this contact and discuss with the provincial government ways and means of dealing with this drug situation in order to protect those who are completely dependent on welfare payments for their supply of drugs.

The minister must face the situation that if these people are forced to pay this $1 surcharge from their meagre welfare allowances, they simply will not be able to get their prescriptions filled. They will not get the drugs they require. I appeal to the minister, in his capacity as champion of the consumer, to take a hand himself in this matter, together with the provincial minister of welfare of British Columbia, which involves so many helpless consumers.

Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I share the concern of the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis) with respect to the high cost and availability of drugs and proper medical care for these people who need it most. That is why the government has introduced the Canada Assistance Plan and, in this session, Bill C-102 to meet these problems.

In the present case, as my minister indicated to the hon. member on April 16, the department is aware of the British Columbia situation. Since then, the minister has received a letter from the Hon. Dan Campbell, minister of social welfare for British Columbia, asking for a combines investigation. This has been referred to the combines branch. The director has the matter under review at the present moment to ascertain whether it provides reason to believe that the act has been violated. The minister also stated that the practice of pharmacy is within provincial jurisdiction under their provincial licensing authority. When Bill C-102 was introduced in the house last October, the minister informed the house of our five point program to tackle the high cost of drugs. The fifth step in that program involves discussions with the province designed to tackle the problem of the high cost of the retail distribution of drugs, important aspects of which are within provincial jurisdiction. Arrangements have already been initiated to bring the provinces and our department together for the purpose of these discussions.

The minister has already outlined to the house a very clear and cogent program for dealing with the high cost of drugs, and I can assure the house that any supplementary measures which are available to him will be given full consideration. Certainly any infractions of the Combines Investigation Act will be dealt with firmly. I should like to add also that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) has been informed by the Director of the Investigation and Research Branch under the Combines Investigation Act that many reports have been received over the past several years about the adoption of some kind of formula pricing by druggists, usually by way of relationship to cost plus prescription fees. Whenever such reports have come to his attention he has been in touch with the pharmaceutical associations concerned and has indicated to them that the adoption of such a system by agreement would give rise to a question under the Combines Investigation Act, unless the system has been adopted pursuant to valid provincial legislation.

AIR CANADA—WINNIPEG—TRANSFER OF BASE TO NORTHWEST INDUSTRIES LTD.

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, many people probably have the impression that the people of Winnipeg are resentful and jealous of the people of Montreal because Montreal has had the good luck to have Air Canada expand its jet overhaul facilities at Dorval and also has succeeded in obtaining an effective international airport at Ste. Scholastique just a few miles away. If people have that impression, I suggest they have missed the point. What the people of Winnipeg resent very much is not that something has been taken from Winnipeg and placed in Montreal; what is resented above all is the fact that in all the inquiries that have been made over the past years in an attempt to find justification for Air Canada taking its jet overhaul plant out of Winnipeg there has been a long and sad history of deception.

The hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Osler), who is a colleague of the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey) who I presume will be answering, has himself used words to the effect that the executives of Air Canada in testifying at the Thompson inquiry, for example, were lying—I repeat "lying". It is precisely the use of that kind of word that I want to endorse. I want the minister, or whoever is responsible for his department at the present time, to give some good reason why there should not be an inquiry into the testimony given by the Air Canada officials in an attempt to find out whether their testimony was accurate and truthfully given. I wish to state, as categorically and as truthfully as I can, that after going through the evidence of the Thompson inquiry and after having received from the Department of Transport an order for return only a few weeks ago, I find there is a contradiction between the words used by the executives of Air Canada before the inquiry commission and the information received through the order for return.

This is a clear indication that there has been a deception perpetrated on the people of Canada, the people of Winnipeg and the people of Manitoba by those officers who hold positions of responsibility with this Crown corporation, namely Air Canada.

In addition to the economic effect all this has had on Winnipeg and the western part of Canada, there is something equally important and sinister about it. It is indeed foreboding if we cannot, as members of parliament, be absolutely confident in the high-ranking civil servants we employ. Let me suggest that no administrative official in the United States would dare give the kind of misinformation to members of Congress that has been given to members of parliament in Canada by officials of Air Canada.

What I should like to hear from whoever is in a responsible position in the Department of Transport at this time is an indication as to why there should not be some kind of full inquiry into this whole sorry episode resulting from the testimony given by Air Canada officials to the Thompson commission. Some explanation should be given to reconcile this testimony with the information included in the order for return tabled in this house a few weeks ago.

In concluding, I want to say that all these charges of deception revolve around certain facts, given in 1964 when Air Canada spokesmen were testifying before the Thompson inquiry. At that time they said the main reason the jet overhaul base should be pulled out of Winnipeg and transferred to Montreal was that the Dorval facilities were not being utilized, and that it was uneconomic to maintain the two plants. Within a very short period of time steps were being taken to ask the Treasury Board to approve amounts to institute a multi-million dollar extension of the facilities at Dorval. This request amounted to some $20 million to $30 million. That was the magnitude of the extension to the jet overhaul plant facilities at Dorval.

A few short months before Air Canada asked for money to extend the facilities, officials of this corporation were saying to this inquiry commission that the plant in Montreal was being utilized to half its capability and was therefore uneconomical; that it was necessary to close down the plant at Winnipeg. It is impossible to reconcile that testimony with what has transpired since then.

Even though it is easy to say in retrospect that this was not the case, there is sufficient evidence to convince many of my colleagues including the hon. members for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Osler), Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) and anybody else from almost any other part of Canada, that we cannot be completely confident of the evidence given by these officials to the committee. There is sufficient evidence to raise a doubt as to the veracity of the statements made by these senior officials of this Crown corporation.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

Mr. H. E. Gray (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have been asked to reply to this question on behalf of the Minister of Transport. I can certainly understand the concern of the hon. member and I shall make certain that his eloquent remarks are drawn to the attention of the minister and to the attention of the management of Air Canada. I suggest that this is a matter the hon. member may well wish to pursue when the senior management of Air Canada again appears before the transport committee of this house.

AIR CANADA—STRIKE OF MECHANICS—INQUIRY AS TO MATTERS IN DISPUTE

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, the point I wish to discuss this evening relates to a question I raised initially on April 23 and again on April 24 with the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey). It arose as a result of the strike of machinists with Air Canada. My question was reported at page 7858 of Hansard. At that time I asked the minister directly to tell the house in general terms what might be the issues. The minister's reply was a simple "no". In other words, the minister refused to give the house any indication of what, in general terms, might be the issues in this dispute. I had asked whether it was a matter of seniority, fringe benefits—and fringe benefits cover all sorts of sins of omission and commission—or wages. The minister said that the hon. member, meaning myself, had described the problems.

I wanted the minister to take the house into his confidence a little more than that. After all, the minister said today that the country is undergoing grave inconvenience because of this strike. Therefore, we should know why we are being put to this grave inconvenience. For the second time this union has struck Air Canada, which has an unblemished record in regard to labour relations. We want to know why these people are holding this country to ransom. This is not a case of their trying to get more money out of Air Canada; this is a hold-up of the country. This is a small union, an international union, and there is no indication that they are not taking instructions from elsewhere. As I say, they are holding the country to ransom.

My complaint is not so much about the actions of the union, but the fact that the minister has given us a clear example of what he and his colleagues have been doing in respect of answering serious questions in the house. First of all, there is the notorious roster system which means that members cannot ask questions on certain days because the minister concerned is not here. There is a very moot point as to whether the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is empowered, under the rules of the house, to have a minister deliberately stay away from the house. Standing Order 5 says that members shall attend this house. Members do excuse themselves from the house, but if they do it is not because the leader of the party has said: You shall not appear in the house. I think this practice is wrong.

Also, Mr. Speaker, on many occasions questions and grievances have been raised about the practice of ministers saying one thing in the house and then running out into the foyer and saying something different into a microphone. This is precisely what the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey) did the other day. After his categorical refusal to tell us what were the issues, other than a vague reference to those matters which I had enumerated as casual examples—and there are more—the minister went outside the chamber and said something that was entirely different. I have seen the transcript of what he said. I do not have it with me, but I can tell the house that it makes interesting reading. The minister went into considerable detail outside the house, so much so that members of the press who were present at that interview called me later in the afternoon and said: Did you hear what the Minister of Labour had to say outside the chamber? He gave us the answers that he refused to give you inside the chamber.

I do not think we should put up with this sort of thing. This is what we are complaining about. I have had many instances, starting with the Prime Minister who is one of the worst offenders, of ministers giving no answer, or a partial answer, and then going outside the chamber and adding to or glossing the answer given in the chamber. Ministers are human; they suffer from foot-and-mouth disease. They go outside the house and correct what they have said inside it, after one of their executive assistants or advisers have told them what sort of fools they have been. This happens. The minister then corrects outside the house the answer that he gave inside the house, and to the public and he looks like a well-informed, intelligent individual. No one is in the foyer to question him; no one is there to bring him up short. He can make any sort of misrepresentation, innocent or otherwise, in that interview.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that this is a bad practice, and the only way we can get it curbed is by protesting with any means at our disposal. I myself, raised the point very briefly having been Speaker, so that I wonder if this practice outside the chamber should not be overseen and proper facilities made available for interviews instead of this catch-as-catch-can practice which we see outside these quarters.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): I will refrain from discussing the roster system which the hon. gentleman has raised in his seven minutes. I must also refrain from endorsing or rejecting his suggestion that the machinists union is responsible for the breakdown in labour relations with Air Canada. This is a matter of opinion to which the hon. gentleman is entitled. If he feels that labour is to blame, he is entitled to that opinion. However, I, as Minister of Labour, am not in a position to state who is to blame until this very disruptive strike comes to an end.

I do not think the hon. gentleman would expect me to get up here and blame the unions any more than he would expect me to blame Air Canada. But I might say that there is a pattern of labour unrest in Air Canada. I do not think this is an isolated case. It is an isolated case only in the sense that there has been strike action. But after having been involved in negotiations of this nature, let me tell you that the relations between Air Canada and unions in general leave much to be desired.

In so far as making statements outside the house is concerned, I must plead as guilty to it as are other ministers. In all honesty, I think I was rather short in my answer the other day, but this is a welcome change because I am usually accused of and constantly being admonished by the Speaker for making my answers into statements.

With regard to television facilities outside the chamber, may I say that I think the hon. gentleman, being a fair individual, will admit that the use of television is not restricted to cabinet ministers, Liberal backbenchers or members of the government in particular. If he were to review the time spent before television cameras in the centre block or outside these doors he would find, I am sure, that the time is justly apportioned between all parties. I am sure that when the hon. gentleman has something of importance to say he is always welcome before the television cameras and, I am sure, takes full opportunity to express his words of wisdom over television. I am sure that most Canadians, knowing the hon. gentleman's reputation as former Speaker and a seasoned member of the House of Commons, always listen to his television interventions with a great degree of interest, certainly greater than to anything the Minister of Labour would say.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): May I say, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Mackasey: But as former Speaker of the House of Commons, he also knows he is not supposed to interrupt the speaker at this particular time. I will also say that the next time he asks a question in the House of Commons I will be as expansive as possible.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. As the existing Speaker I must interrupt the minister. The motion to adjourn the house is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this house stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.25 p.m.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—INQUIRY AS TO PROGRESS IN NEGOTIATIONS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister, in connection with the Air Canada strike which continues to cause increasing inconvenience to Canadians, whether the government proposes to take any steps to encourage a settlement of this strike, and whether there have been any developments today or yesterday which encourage the government to believe that the parties can be brought together to continue the discussions.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there are no developments or steps beyond those which were reported to the house yesterday by the Minister of Labour.

Mr. Stanfield: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Are we to assume from the statements of the Minister of Labour yesterday that the government has abandoned the guideline which was laid down by the Prime Minister in the house prior to the strike taking place?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the Leader of the Opposition that the supplementary question is argumentative in nature.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I am seeking confirmation or otherwise of an impression created by the Minister of Labour yesterday, and with respect I suggest that the Prime Minister might confirm or deny the impression that has been created.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member's understanding is exactly contrary to that which was said in the house. When asked a few weeks ago about guidelines, I said there were no guidelines, and I went on to add other things. The hon. member is implying that there are guidelines. Of course there are none.

AIR TRANSPORT

SUGGESTED HALIFAX LANDING TO ACCOMMODATE ATLANTIC AREA PASSENGERS

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport, if there is a Minister of Transport in the house. Due to the inconvenience and hardship caused by the Air Canada strike to certain people on the Atlantic side of this nation, would the minister check with his officials or with the officials of the Canadian Transport Commission to explore the possibility of the landing in Halifax of international carriers now taking off from Montreal. I have in mind in particular B.O.A.C., which flies from Montreal. At present people have to journey from Halifax and other parts of the Atlantic area to catch the plane in Montreal, and even so the service between Montreal and Halifax is not good.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): I will be glad to have that suggestion brought to the attention of the Canadian Transport Commission.

GRAIN

WHEAT—TWO PRICE SYSTEM AND ACREAGE REDUCTION PAYMENTS

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture. In the light of statements made recently by the minister, will he inform the house if it is the government's intention to institute a two price system for wheat and a program of compensation for acreage reduction on the prairies. Can he also inform the house of the government policy on these two matters.

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): In response to the hon. member's question as to the content of statements made recently, what I said, or what I intended to say, was that these proposals had been made to the government by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and by other bodies.

Mr. Gleave: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister assure the house that it is not the intention of the government to say to the farmers of western Canada that it is abandoning any real effort to sell or dispose of stocks of western grain?

Mr. Olson: As has been indicated positively on a number of occasions, the government intends to do everything possible to be helpful.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Agriculture. Does the government in this session intend to implement a two price system for wheat?

Mr. Olson: The government has received representations from provincial legislatures and a number of farm organizations. What I said last night was that these representations had been received.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): If the minister is not able to give the house any assurance about the two price system, is he able to say whether there will be a just price for farmers?

Mr. Olson: Whatever the government does will be just.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): I suggest to the minister he should go west and find out. He will then get an answer to that suggestion.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the right hon. gentleman rising for the purpose of asking a question?

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, it is gratuitous observations such as the minister has just made that result in the necessity of answers being given by the opposition.

What I wish to ask the minister is this: In view of the increasingly calamitous conditions in the prairies—the Minister of Finance bends his head in the negative, is he going to do anything about it—will the government provide emergency legislation to meet the serious situation, or will the minister have to set up himself as a task force to go out west to find out how serious the situation is?

Mr. Olson: As I indicated, we have received representations—

Mr. Diefenbaker: Why don't you act?

Mr. Olson: —respecting the two price system, and I am sure my right hon. friend would want us to consider them very carefully. This examination ought to include the reasons why his government rejected this proposal on a number of occasions.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: That statement is false. But my question is this—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Diefenbaker: The minister himself used to advocate the two price system; has he changed his mind?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Agriculture. In view of the fact that on television last night I heard him say, not that he had received these representations but that the government was giving serious consideration to a two price system for wheat and acreage reduction payments, can I ask the minister if this is being considered by the government as a matter of policy, and if the government is likely to carry out the commitment it made to the western farmers of a guaranteed price for wheat and a two price system for wheat?

Mr. Olson: What I said on television, disregarding the interpretations that were put on what I said, was that responsible bodies such as the provincial legislatures of the three prairie provinces as well as the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the Farmers Union and a number of other bodies had made these representations to the government. Certainly, if responsible bodies such as these make representations, this government takes them seriously.

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): I should like to ask the minister whether the government is now in a position to award an acreage payment to western farmers, something which the government headed by my right hon. friend from Prince Albert did.

Mr. Olson: That, also, is part of the representations which are under consideration.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

SUGGESTION THAT POLICY BE PUBLICIZED

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

Since the minister has just said that whatever the government does will be just, does he not think that if the government waits too long before announcing its farm policy, the farmers will be led to believe that whatever the government does will be just for fun?

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me the hon. member's question is rather argumentative and, therefore, is out of order.

[English]

HOUSING

AUSTRALIA—SALES OF SUBURBAN HOMES

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a question for the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Could the Prime Minister have an appropriate member of his government contact the government of Australia and acquaint himself with the housing policies of that government which have made it possible for builders to sell first class three-bedroom suburban homes for $13,000 on a down payment of $1,200 and a mortgage at 5 per cent?

Mr. Speaker: I do not think a question in this form is acceptable by the Chair.

Mr. Hees: With great deference, on a point of order: If I do not give the Prime Minister the background he will make an awful mess of the answer.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES FOR STUDENTS

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): I have a question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, Mr. Speaker. Has the minister any immediate and specific plan for providing summer employment for students who are now leaving our universities in great numbers?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Nesbitt: Could the minister tell us what this plan is, and how soon it will come into effect?

Mr. Speaker: Before the minister rises, may I point out that the hon. member is asking a question which is very general in nature, and that the type of statement he is inviting the minister to make would normally be made on motions.

Mr. Nesbitt: Perhaps I could put it this way: Can the minister tell us how soon he will make a statement on motions providing us with this information?

Mr. MacEachen: No, Mr. Speaker.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

NATO—NOTICE OF WITHDRAWAL OF CANADIAN FORCES

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Has the Canadian government informed our NATO allies, or some of them, that Canada intends to withdraw all its forces from Europe except one battalion?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Not that I know of, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Harkness: Have the members of the military committee of NATO, who are responsible for military planning, been given information along that line?

Mr. Trudeau: I hope not, Mr. Speaker.

CONSULTATION WITH TEACHERS OVERSEAS BEFORE CONTRACT CHANGE

Mr. David Lewis (York South): I have a question for the Minister of National Defence arising out of a statement made by the Canadian Teachers Federation. Can the minister inform the house whether he has refused to consult teachers, or the federation of teachers, before changing a contract of employment for teachers under the Department of National Defence, and whether the contract has in fact been changed in the absence of such consultation?

Hon. Leo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): First of all, the contract has not been changed. In the second place, I hope the hon. member understands that we are not employing these teachers; it is a tripartite contract between the school boards, the teachers and the Department of National Defence.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I do understand, and that is the reason for my question. I should like to ask the minister whether there has been some change along the lines of making it possible for teachers to have a particular period of service extended, without discussion with them but after discussion with the school board concerned. In addition, have there been any changes relative to the provision of medical assistance and the like? If not, are these provisions in fact in the contracts?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, as far as medical services are concerned, the exercise of my ministerial discretion simply indicates that the minister is not responsible for medical services when they are available at the place the teachers serve. There has been no change in the contract regarding prolongation of the stay overseas. Our oversight might have been not to inform the teachers that, in the event of a prolongation required by national defence and the school board, obviously we would also consult the teachers.

Mr. Lewis: A further supplementary question. Would the minister inform the house whether the teachers federation, or one of the teachers federations, sought an appointment with him to discuss the matter, and that the minister refused to meet them on the ground that it would serve no purpose? If that happened, or even if it did not happen, would the minister now assure the house that he would be ready to meet with the teachers federation to discuss the whole problem of teachers' contracts for overseas service?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, I have always received with pleasure representatives of the teachers federation. What I did refuse was a visit from Mr. Nason, who wrote me a letter and wanted to explain the letter to me. I can read.

[Mr. Lewis.]

OIL

VOLUNTARY REDUCTION OF CRUDE EXPORTS TO U.S.

Mr. P. M. Mahoney (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Has the National Energy Board requested the petroleum industry in western Canada to reduce voluntarily its exports of crude oil to the United States, and further has it indicated that if these reductions are not made voluntarily it will impose export quotas?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I think the strict answer to the question has to be no. However, the National Energy Board has been in touch with various suppliers and buyers of Canadian oil in the light of the existing agreement between the United States and Canada. As I indicated in the house yesterday, no agreement other than that has been reached. Accordingly that agreement stands and we have certain obligations in relation to it.

Mr. Mahoney: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In fulfilling these obligations, is the National Energy Board or the department indicating that they will impose export quotas?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, in discussing the whole situation between the United States and Canada in regard to oil exports, needless to say the question of alternative action in the absence of voluntary compliance is always an issue. It was indeed impliedly referred to in the agreement between the two countries.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder whether the minister would now make it clear that in his answer to the hon. member for Calgary South he was saying that what the National Energy Board has done is to implement government policy, which is to reduce the amount of exports to the United States and to introduce quotas.

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I believe my answer in fact dealt with that issue. The hon. member is carrying my answer to the question further, when he asks what in fact government policy is. It is government policy that, as long as an agreement exists between the United States and Canada, we are obligated to honour it.

REQUEST FOR REPORT ON CANADA-U.S. CONTINENTAL POLICY

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In answer to a question that I asked either earlier this week or at the end of last week the minister said he would make a statement in reference to the new agreements that are now being made between Canada and the United States. Is the minister prepared to make this announcement either today or soon?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I did not make any statement about making any statement and I will indeed not do so until there is something specific to say about any new agreement.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, that is the first honest answer we have had. The minister admits that he will make no statement.

ACCESSIBILITY OF WESTERN OIL TO EASTERN MARKET

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources take the house into his confidence on the question of the establishment of a national oil policy for Canada under which western Canadian oil may gain access to markets in eastern Canada.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the whole question of oil policy both in Canada and in the United States, and the question of the proper handling of oil in North America, is under review. As decisions are made in this regard statements of course will be made to the house. I could, indeed, make a statement at this time or at any time reviewing the tremendous progress that has been made in developing oil resources as a result of existing government policies in this field.

STATEMENT OF NATIONAL POLICY FOLLOWING VISIT WITH PRESIDENT NIXON

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): May I address a supplementary question to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. As it is more than six weeks since he discussed oil policy with President Nixon and others interested in the subject, can he report on any progress which has been made that would indicate it will be possible for Canada to achieve in the near future a successful national oil policy similar to that introduced by the former government in 1961.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

FORESTRY

LOGS—DENIAL OF EXPORT LICENCES TO MEET DOMESTIC DEMAND

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry. It relates to an announcement which he made in the latter part of February concerning a voluntary ban on the export of logs from British Columbia. Since the export of logs from Crofton and Chemainus on Vancouver island has increased sevenfold in March as compared with one year ago, is the minister now willing to consider imposing a ban and denying export licences for export of logs until domestic requirements have been met?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, the figures the hon. member has mentioned are news to me. I will check into the matter and let him know my answer.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

SUGGESTED REPLACEMENT FOR "DON MESSER'S JUBILEE"

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister.

Since the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has removed "Don Messer's Jubilee", the last program devoted to Canadian folklore, from its programming schedule, does the Prime Minister intend to suggest to the Secretary of State, responsible to the house for the C.B.C., to replace that program by another one on Canadian folklore, a tradition dear to millions of Canadians?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): That could be a useful expedient for introducing television in the House of Commons, Mr. Speaker. There is quite a lot of folklore around here.

TRANSPORT

ACTION ON MEASURE RESPECTING MARITIME FREIGHT RATES

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting

Minister of Transport. I hope he has not been too busy with his new duties to provide an answer to my question of April 18 with respect to the future of Bill C-182 and the Maritime Freight Rates Act. I hope the minister can answer the question, in order to alleviate the fears of shippers in the maritimes.

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, the government has introduced legislation in the form of Bill C-182 which has received first reading in the house, the purpose of which is to extend the freeze on rail freight rates until March 23, 1970. Provisions are made in the bill to compensate the railways for extending the freeze on their rates.

Mr. Bell: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the government house leader indicate when this bill is to come forward. There seemed to be a great rush a few days ago to bring it on.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I could do that if I had some indication as to when we will finish with Bill C-150.

Mr. Bell: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. We gave an assurance in this house, which is indelibly recorded in Hansard, that we will pass this freight rates bill post haste, as soon as it is brought on. The government has held it up on three or four occasions.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

FARM PRESS RATE INCREASES

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Postmaster General. I welcome him back from his western think-out. My question is based on information that the Canadian Federation of Agriculture has finally been granted an audience with members of the government. Can the minister advise if he or an acting minister gave any assurance that sympathetic consideration would be given to representations made on behalf of the farm press of this country which is now suffering from postal rate increases which are, in some instances, as high as 2,000 per cent.

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I did attend a meeting. I was accompanied by my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, and we were able, at that time to discuss the problem quite fully. Since that time I have written a number of letters to individual papers suggesting they do come under a different classification. I understand they are quite happy.

EXTENSION OF SECOND CLASS RATE TO COMMUNIST PUBLICATIONS

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Can the Postmaster General explain why the department has lifted the second class mailing privileges of the Canadian Legion magazine?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General): Because it represents the interests of a very important, but still a particular group.

Mr. McIntosh: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister explain why his department, while lifting second class privileges from legitimate labour union publications, has granted such privileges to a whole string of communist and subversive publications, such as Canadian Tribune, Communist Viewpoint, Combat, American Exile in Canada?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is asking a question—

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Woolliams: What about Playboy?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

PUBLIC SERVICE

SUPERANNUATED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES—REQUEST FOR INCREASED PENSIONS

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that within the past few days the International Nickel Company of Canada and Imperial Oil Limited have announced plans for increasing the pensions of their retired employees, will the Prime Minister, as head of the government, expedite the cabinet's consideration of the question of increasing the pensions of retired public servants?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): We are proceeding according to plan, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact the President of the Treasury Board indicated on January 8 to an organization representing these people that there would be a report within a few weeks, can the Prime Minister say when there will be a statement as to the progress that has been made?

Mr. Trudeau: The plan is secret, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

HOUSING

THOMPSON, MAN.—AVAILABILITY OF MORTGAGE MONEY

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Housing. Is the minister in a position today to answer a question I directed to him on Friday? I asked him if he would look into the matter of precedence in the making available of C.M.H.C. mortgage money for high rise apartment construction at Thompson, Manitoba?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): No, Mr. Speaker. I do not have a specific answer to that question.

AGRICULTURE

FEED GRAIN—REQUEST FOR CONTINUATION OF POLICY

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Central Nova): I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture. Can the minister advise if he received representations from the various federations of agriculture and other organizations in the Atlantic area stressing the need for the continuation of the present feed grain policy in that area? If so, what reply was given?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): We have received such representations, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacEwan: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister advise as to what reply he has made or what action he intends to take on this very important matter to the feeders and others in that area?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, we have indicated to them that this program, which has been in effect for a number of years, is under review, and that any adjustments which seem to be reasonable and positive will be part of that review.

Mr. MacEwan: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister advise whether he endorses the apparent policy of the task force to the effect that these subsidies should be discontinued?

Mr. Olson: The views of the task force are completely independent of the government's views. I would like to advise my hon. friend that, when we have completed the review of this and a number of other programs, government policy will be announced.

FARM CREDIT ACT

ONE YEAR ADVANCE FOR LOAN REPAYMENTS

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): I ask the Minister of Agriculture whether, in view of the serious situation in which western farmers find themselves, resulting from diminished revenues arising from reduced wheat sales, he will consider advancing farm credit repayments by one year as is done in the case of farm improvement loans, since these loans are always adequately secured?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): I have announced on several occasions in this house that if an individual who has a loan from the Farm Credit Corporation would make application, along with substantial evidence that it is difficult or impossible to make the payments, they will be given consideration.

Mr. McIntosh: Could I ask the minister at this time what he will accept as evidence? Will he accept a low quota which is controlled by the Canadian Wheat Board as sufficient evidence that these payments cannot be met?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, the evidence is an indication of his receipts and expenses.

ARTS, LETTERS AND SCIENCES

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE OPERATING DEFICIT

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the President of the Treasury Board. In view of the fact the National Arts Centre Committee predicts a net operating deficit of between $400,000 and $500,000, depending on interpretation, for the two week opening festival of the arts, can the minister say whether Treasury Board has given approval to any such plans?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I doubt whether the question is acceptable at this time. The hon. member might want to discuss this at the time of adjournment.

Mr. Schreyer: May I rephrase the question so that it will be in order? I ask the minister whether he will use his good offices and try to lower the operating deficit, and at the same time give Ottawa high society a treat by having Don Messer appear at the National Arts Centre?

Inquiries of the Ministry

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

COURTENAY, B.C.—INAUGURATION OF CARRIER SERVICE

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Question, I have a speaker for the—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): You are out of practice; you have been away too long!

Mr. Barnett: I will try again. I have a question for the Postmaster General. I ask the minister when he intends to inaugurate in the city of Courtenay a letter carrier service, since that city has been qualified under the rules for a number of months?

Mr. Speaker: I doubt if the question is in order, but in view of the very special circumstances perhaps the house will allow the minister to answer the question.

Mr. Barnett: May I put it down for ten o'clock?

Mr. Speaker: Possibly the minister would prefer to answer now.

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, there is a freeze on introducing new letter carrier service. As soon as this is lifted, I think we will be able to give this service to Courtenay.

Mr. Barnett: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Why this freeze?

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the supplementary might be considered at ten o'clock.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

QUEBEC—ASSISTANCE TO PREVENT BANKRUPTCY OF FARMERS

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

In view of the deplorable and disturbed economic situation now prevailing in agriculture, would the minister inform the house if he expects new tendencies and an adequate policy so as to give practical assistance to the Quebec farmers and prevent a great many of them from going bankrupt?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is now inviting the minister to make a general statement which should normally be made on motions.

[Mr. Schreyer.]

EDUCATION

EMPLOYMENT OF CANADIAN SCHOLARS IN CANADIAN UNIVERSITIES

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Manpower and Immigration a question on an urgent matter. This is the time of year when many students of Canadian universities are at the stage of making career decisions. Is the minister satisfied in his capacity as Minister of Manpower and Immigration that a sufficient mechanism exists in the country so that our universities are aware of Canadian scholars available for employment in the universities?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am not exactly certain of what is meant by mechanism. We in the department, through our manpower centres and other devices, maintain fairly complete information respecting the university labour market. We do assist the universities in recruiting abroad by our retrieval program and I do not believe, unless the hon. gentleman has some specific obstacle in mind, that there is any difficulty in the flow of this information.

Mr. Stanfield: As a supplementary question, is there any machinery in the country specially for the purpose of making certain that Canadian universities are aware of the qualifications and availability of Canadian scholars, or is the minister simply relying on the normal machinery of his department in this regard?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, as the main network of service in the country, we have over 300 Canada Manpower Centres. We have over 3,000 counsellors who are informed as to the opportunities in Canadian universities, and we do maintain a close relationship with the Canadian Association of Universities on this and other matters.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, may I ask one further supplementary question. Last week the minister indicated that he was conducting some inquiries into difficulties that might be encountered by Canadian scholars seeking teaching employment in this country. Would he include in those inquiries the adequacy of the existing machinery in this country, so that Canadian scholars may have an adequate opportunity to have their services made known, and will his inquiries also include a determination as to whether the proportion of Canadians teaching in our universities has fallen from roughly 75 per cent a few years ago to less than 50 per cent last year?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Leader of the Opposition has made a submission to the minister.

FISHERIES

SALT COD—SETTING UP OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry. It is based upon his new statement of policy concerning the salt cod fish industry. In view of the fact that there is a great deal of doubt as to the efficacy or effectiveness of this new policy, would the minister tell the house when he proposes to set up the advisory committee which was announced in the policy statement?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, we are now in the process of setting up the advisory committee. It is a good scheme and I do not think we will have any difficulty getting it over to the fishermen.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

ENTERTAINMENT OF LIBERAL MEMBERS AT 24 SUSSEX DRIVE

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister with respect to the program of dinners he is holding for his backbenchers. Is he going to extend an invitation to the hon. member for Trinity?

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT RESPECTING SELF-GOVERNMENT

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. My question relates to the proposal for self-government in the Territories, a subject that has been inquired about over some months now. Has his proposal yet received cabinet approval and when will he be making an announcement about it?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, these proposals have not yet been approved by the cabinet, but I hope that they will be very soon.

AGRICULTURE

MEETING BETWEEN FARM ORGANIZATION AND FEDERAL MINISTER

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister.

Is it a fact that the Quebec C.F.U. has asked for a meeting with the Prime Minister and the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion?

Would the Prime Minister also tell us whether the Minister of Agriculture will be invited to this meeting?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not know exactly to what meeting the hon. member is referring. I have met representatives of some agricultural federations yesterday and I shall be seeing another delegation on Monday next. It may be that the C.F.U. will be a member of that delegation.

NATIONAL PARKS

GASPÉ—AGREEMENT BETWEEN PROVINCIAL AND FEDERAL AUTHORITIES

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

In view of the fact that the Quebec Public Service Minister and the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion were to meet last Friday, could the minister tell the house whether or not such a meeting has taken place?

In addition, since I am interested in the development of this famed national park in the province of Quebec, could he tell us whether an agreement has been reached in this connection?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, there was a meeting last Friday between the Quebec Public Service Minister, the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion and myself, but we did not make much headway.

[Later:]

Mr. Pierre De Bané (Matane): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Has he entered into an agreement with the province of Quebec about Forillon Park, in the Gaspé peninsula?

Mr. Chrétien: No, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

[Later:]

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a supplementary question.

Has the minister received realistic counter-proposals from the province of Quebec?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, there have been counter-proposals but I am not in a position to talk about them at this time.

OIL

MARKETING OF PRODUCTION FROM YUKON AND NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet, I would like to answer the question which was put to me last Friday by the hon. member for Battleford-Kindersley (Mr. Thomson).

The answer is no.

[English]

WATER RESOURCES

INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Is the minister's proposed water act nearly ready for introduction to the house, and can we expect it this session?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, it is our intention to have the water act ready for introduction before the end of this session.

INDUSTRY

PARITY BETWEEN CANADIAN AND U.S. AUTOMOBILE PRICES

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I rise for the first time in my new position as a left-wing Conservative. In the absence of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce I have a question for the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon-Humboldt. In view of the report of all-time high levels reached by shares of the Ford Motor Company on the Toronto Stock Exchange would he request the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce to make a statement to the house on the progress he is making with the Ford Motor Company in his attempt to achieve price parity—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Mr. Chrétien.]

TRANSPORT

CORNER BROOK, NFLD.—WITHDRAWAL OF PORT FROM COASTAL SERVICE

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Transport. Would he give most urgent consideration to suspending the recent order of the Canadian Transport Commission withdrawing the port of Corner Brook from the coastal service of the Canadian National system, until such time as a full public hearing may be held to establish a true basis for decision?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, I will convey that representation to the Transport Commission.

[Later:]

ACTION ON MEASURE RESPECTING MARITIME FREIGHT RATES

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Transport supplementary to an earlier question asked by the hon. member for Saint John-Lancaster, having to do with the freeze on rates in the Atlantic area. Do we understand from the minister's answer that there is also going to be a freeze on transportation policy in the Atlantic area, and when may we expect a statement of policy on that matter, now that the minister has received the opinions of the four premiers on Atlantic transportation problems?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): The matter is being given very definite consideration, Mr. Speaker. We have still to hear the final report of the Standing Committee on Transportation but the matter is not being unduly delayed.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

INQUIRY AS TO MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN FIFTH REPORT

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Government House Leader. As the government is not prepared to bring forward the legislation to deal with the Maritime Freight Rates Act would it give immediate consideration to bringing forward debate for concurrence in the fifth report of the Committee on Transport and Communications, so that we can get on with the committee's final recommendations, as mentioned by the Acting Minister of Transport?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, we are now going into the 14th day of debate on Bill C-150 and I hope all hon. members will agree to reach an end to that debate as soon as possible so that we can get on with further business.

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): Would the Government House Leader give an assurance to the house that upon completion of the Criminal Code amendments bill the fifth report of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications would be brought into the house for debate?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, at the current rate of progress on the Criminal Code bill I cannot give an assurance that we will ever get finished with it.

HOUSING

THOMPSON, MAN.—AVAILABILITY OF MORTGAGE MONEY

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet might I say that I have checked with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation concerning the question asked me by the hon. member for Churchill. I cannot give him much more information than I could have had I been briefed before the question period, but C.M.H.C. advises that the application in Thompson to which he referred is under consideration but has not yet been approved.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

WOODS REPORT—REQUEST FOR CONSIDERATION BY STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Has he received representations from yet another veterans organization, in this case the War Amputations of Canada, complaining about or protesting the length of time in getting the Woods Commission report before the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs?

Hon. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker. This morning I received a brief and a covering letter from the War amputees, and I do agree with what the President of the War Amputations of Canada had to say in the covering letter, Padré Lambert, who is a very highly respected veteran. In his letter he said this:

> We do not urge that the government should attempt to rush the preparation of the white paper. The importance of this document justifies that sufficient time be taken to ensure its excellence.

I agree with that.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Did Padré Lambert not also state in that letter that the Woods report should be referred to the committee without waiting for the white paper?

Mr. Dubé: Yes, he did. But we believe that it would be an advantage to the veterans associations to appear before the committee with the full knowledge of the government's policy as it will be expressed in the white paper, otherwise they will have to appear twice, once to confirm their support of the Woods report, about which we already know, and again to express their views on the white paper. We believe they should appear only once.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): When will that be?

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

INCOME TAX ACT

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance) moved:

> That a ways and means motion to amend the Income Tax Act, laid upon the table, Monday, April 28, 1969, be now concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On division.

Motion to concur agreed to.

Mr. Benson thereupon moved for leave to introduce Bill C-191, to amend the Income Tax Act.

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might indicate for the benefit of hon. members that it will not be the government's intention to call this bill for debate before Monday, May 12, barring contingency in the meanwhile, to give hon. members of the house and various professionals the opportunity to examine this proposed legislation.

An hon. Member: Another month will not mean much, as this has had six months already.

Criminal Code

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Monday, April 28, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 24, Mr. Woolliams (for Mr. Valade).

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, last evening I was discussing the amendment before the house in reference to abortion and had almost concluded my remarks. I want to make one or two further references to this matter.

Before doing so let me say that as a result of the remarks made by the President of the Privy Council in respect of delay during this debate—and I only speak for this party—the minister would surely agree, were he here, that we gave full co-operation during the committee hearings. If anyone looks at the record he will note that the opposition members made very few remarks on this amendment. There was no delay so far as we were concerned. I made it my duty to explain this amendment as it appears on the order paper in the absence of the hon. member who put it on the notice paper.

In my opinion the amendment concerning abortion does not change the law very much. It was worded in the manner it was worded in order to catch two classes of people, those who are absolutely against any extension of the laws on abortion and those who think that abortion should be carried out in a wholesale manner. As far as I am concerned, the law as it is drafted in the new bill does not change the present law in Canada.

The bill proposes an amendment to Section 209, which I dealt with last evening, in that it adds the words "act of birth". This would mean that when a woman was in labour in the delivery room there would be no need for a doctor to go to a committee. If he could in all faith say it was necessary to cause a miscarriage for the purpose of preserving the life of the mother or the health of that mother it would be done without delay.

The second amendment the minister brought in was based on the opinion of the committee that if, in the act of birth, it was necessary to preserve the life or health of the mother a doctor could perform the operation in an accredited hospital. I am at a loss to understand why the minister would suggest that Section 209 has nothing whatsoever to do with abortion. As found on page 333 of Crankshaw's Criminal Code, section 209 refers to the killing of an unborn child. This is the law as defined in Crankshaw or in any other book on criminal law dealing with this section. This is the law as referred to by Professor Mewett of the University of Toronto and other legal opinion. In other words, the killing of an unborn child would be caused by a miscarriage, and under that heading would mean an abortion.

It seems to me to be impossible for the minister or his officers to come to the conclusion that Section 209 has nothing to do with abortion. The killing of a foetus at any stage of development is really what is meant by abortion under the law today. This section has reference to the preservation of the life or health of the mother, and there really has been no change in that regard.

The hon. member for Peel South (Mr. Chappell) probably let the cat out of the bag in respect of the Liberal plan to satisfy everybody. I say the government is speaking out of both sides of its mouth in that it wants to get across to the nation that it is helping those who want whosesale abortion and those who do not want abortion extended. This is a policy adopted in order to get the votes of all these people by putting them in one basket.

I do not think anybody could have put this more clearly than that hon. member did in a letter he sent to a Mr. Edward O'Brien of 95 Roywood Drive, Don Mills. The letter is dated March 14, 1969. I will not read it all, but I think a part of it is of great interest. The hon. member said in the last paragraph:

> Actually the laws of Canada now in respect to abortion and homosexuality are the most archaic in the western world. Although the expression "unborn child" is used by those who oppose the bill, this is not a life and no religion that I know of anywhere in the world recognizes or claims that the foetus has a soul. Rather than turning the clock back 1,000 years, the change will bring us forward from the laws of the middle ages.

I do not know what he means by that because it does not change the law very much. This letter really tells us what is going on in the Liberal caucus. That party embraces all religions and philosophies and it arrives at the same conclusion for everyone. The hon. member states in his letter:

> As I said before, it was supported by all members of the Liberal party including Roman Catholics from every province with the exception of one.

I do not know who that exception is but that letter was signed by the hon. member for Peel South.

What I am really saying is that we should not for one moment believe that the new bill will change the law. The amendment in the bill really is a lot of window-dressing designed to satisfy that group of people who are against abortion while at the same time satisfying those who are in favour of abortion. As Professor Mewett says, this bill really does nothing for the girl who has been raped or for any individual whose case does not fall within the narrow interpretation of health or life.

I do not intend to say anything more on the amendment, but it does not change the law of Canada. It is just a vote-catching part of the bill. There are many other similar parts to which I could refer, but if I did so I would be ruled out of order so I will not go into them this afternoon.

I wish to re-emphasize the co-operation of hon. members during the committee hearings. We co-operated with the Minister of Justice and attempted to state our thoughts to the committee expeditiously. I suggest that the committee members worked in a non-partisan way. Since these amendments were introduced into the house members of the Conserative party have been brief and to the point, and we have co-operated with the minister. In spite of this, the President of the Privy Council has tried to leave the impression that our party has caused delay in the passing of this legislation. Let us have no more of this misrepresentation and fraud on the part of the President of the Privy Council when he talks about this debate or any other. He is always leaving that impression. In this way he creates bad will in the house. That is why he is not a good house leader.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, in speaking on this amendment in the abortion debate, I am sure that in the future this legislation will be referred to as the long talked of great step forward that resulted in a step backward. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in his election promises stated that abortion would be legalized in line with 20th century thinking, and that our abortion laws would be modernized. What has happened? Nothing. There has been absolutely no progress in this respect. The new legislation is a step backward.

Therapeutic abortion has been practised in Canada for many years. Therapeutic abortions have been condoned by the Bourne case of 1938 when Dr. Alex Bourne, an English surgeon, aborted a 14 year old girl who had been raped by soldiers.

The Criminal Code states that therapeutic abortion may be carried out when the life of the mother is at stake. This provision is open to wide interpretation. What is the rate of therapeutic abortion in Canada? A study of non-Catholic, Canadian hospitals shows that in 1967 there was an average of six abortions per 1,000 deliveries or live births. There is no wholesale abortion there.

How is an abortion carried out in Canadian hospitals? It is carried out by the patient's physician in conjunction with a consultant of his or the patient's choice. Now we are to set up a committee, none of whose members will know the patient or will be likely to interview her or her husband. This effectively removes from the patient and her physician the decision to abort.

If the abortion law has to specify indications for abortion, rather than leave the decision to a woman and her physician, as is done in regard to nearly all decisions to carry out a surgical operation, the indications should include all the physical diseases of the mother that would jeopardize her health or that of the baby should the pregnancy continue. It should include obstetrical indications if carrying the pregnancy to full term would be hazardous to either mother or baby. The law should include psychiatric indications where continuation of the pregnancy may result in psychotic episodes or suicidal thoughts.

The law should include provisions to cover the situation where because of an unwanted pregnancy there would be adverse effects on the emotional health of the mother, the existing child or children. It should include provisions to cover cases of rape or incest. A therapeutic abortion should be permitted if there is a reasonable possibility that the child, if born, would be physically and mentally incapacitated. Does the legislation do any of these things? The answer is no.

Another important factor is the safety of the abortion procedure. With a woman less than eight weeks pregnant, D. and C. carries little risk. Beyond eight weeks of pregnancy the chances of complication increase rapidly, especially after the tenth week, owing to the high risk of hemorrhage or perforation of the uterus. Legislation designed to keep down mortality must ensure that the period between application and abortion is the shortest possible.

The best way to increase the period is to insist upon mutiple consultations. The legislation will increase the danger and risk involved in the procedure more than has been the case in the past. It will increase the risk and danger to the patient. The committee will probably have a discouraging effect on both the patient and her physician. There is a higher mortality rate when there is an exasperating abortion committee system. Awkward abortion legislation tends to divert patients from orthodox health care systems to self-abortion or criminal abortionists. The morbidity of criminally induced abortions is substantial. Criminal abortions in the United States are estimated to be one million to one and a half million a year, with deaths running from 5,000 to 10,000. The figures for Canada are probably proportional to those of the United States because our laws are essentially the same.

Why is there a cloud over abortion, necessitating an abortion committee in addition to other hospital committees? Abortion is as old as history; it was practised in primitive cultures by the midwives and physicians of Rome and Greece. The definitive edict against abortion is only about 100 years old. Abortion was practised in England up until the early 1900's. It is restrictive legislation of this type that many countries are today attempting to revise.

Abortion should be taken out of the Criminal Code and placed in the hands of qualified medical practitioners. This legislation is not good legislation; it creates barriers of time in respect of patients who would benefit by abortion; it does nothing to define the conditions where an abortion is indicated. People living in sparsely populated areas of Canada will be denied the services of an abortion committee unless they travel great distances, involving time, expense and danger to health. This legislation discriminates against them.

The legislation before us is a great abortion hoax. It does nothing to bring our abortion laws in line with public desire or 20th century needs. It is a step backward into the 19th century; it is not a step forward in the 20th century. Any real change in our abortion laws has yet to come. The minister would be wise to remove from the bill the provision for a therapeutic abortion committee and substitute therefor the practice which has been adopted for many years, that of consultation between the patient's own physician and a colleague.

[Mr. Ritchie.]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I should like to speak briefly to amendment No. 24. By the amendment the hon. member is attempting to insist that any means used to procure a therapeutic abortion be employed before the period of implantation. We must reject the amendment. I think the simple way of stating it is that implantation occurs about five days after intercourse. Therefore this amendment would in effect negative the whole aim of clause 18 relating to therapeutic abortions. The woman would not know she was pregnant, and even if that fact could be determined there would not be enough time for the therapeutic abortion committee to consider the case or for the doctor to perform the operation. Therefore I submit to the house that in strict medical terms, and in terms of the facts, it would be impossible to implement this amendment. That is the simple answer to it.

But since certain latitude was allowed the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) to reintroduce the argument he made before the committee as to the relationship between section 209 and section 237 of the Criminal Code, without repeating the legal arguments that I introduced on behalf of the government before the committee I want to state again that there is absolutely no relationship in fact between those two sections. With the greatest respect, Professor Mewett was in error when he suggested that if an abortion could not be legally performed under section 237, one could await the time of birth and obtain a defence under section 209. There are two different factual situations here. I should like to read the first two subsections of section 237 of the Criminal Code. These are the operative sections relating to the factual situation involved.

Every one who, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a female person, whether or not she is pregnant, uses any means for the purpose of carrying out his intention is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for life.

Subsection 2 reads:

Every female person who, being pregnant, with intent to procure her own miscarriage, uses any means or permits any means to be used for the purpose of carrying out her intention is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for two years.

Clause 18 exempts from those two subsections a therapeutic abortion which has been approved by a medical committee in an approved or an accredited hospital where the operation is performed by a qualified medical practitioner for the purpose of protecting the woman where her life or health is in danger. This section obviously relates to any killing of the foetus before natural birth and to a miscarriage or an abortion, which legally are equivalent terms. I introduced an argument to that effect before the committee. A miscarriage or an abortion is any killing of the foetus before natural birth and before the child becomes a human being.

Section 209 is a completely different factual situation. It was before this bill and it certainly will be after the bill because clause 15 adds some clarifying words. Section 209 (1) as amended reads as follows:

Every one who causes death, in the act of birth, of any child that has not become a human being, in such a manner that, if the child were a human being, he would be guilty of murder, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for life.

Subsection 2 provides a defence where, in good faith, a person causes the death of the child before it becomes a human being when he considers it necessary to preserve the life of the mother of the child and for that reason causes the death of the child. Therefore section 209 of the Criminal Code relates to any killing of a child who has not yet become a human being at the time of the act of birth.

Section 237 relates to the killing of a foetus before the natural time of the birth. Section 209 relates to the killing at the time of the birth. Section 237 involves a miscarriage or an abortion, and section 209 involves homicide.

There is a third factual situation in the Code to be found in section 195 which is not amended by this bill. Section 195 reads as follows:

(1) A child becomes a human being within the meaning of this Act when it has completely proceeded, in a living state, from the body of its mother whether or not

(a) it has breathed,

(b) it has an independent circulation, or

(c) the navel string is severed.

Subsection 2 sets forth the offence. It reads as follows:

(2) A person commits homicide when he causes injury to a child before or during its birth as a result of which the child dies.

Here we have a third factual situation: Injury caused to a child before or during birth as a result of which the child dies after birth, after the child has become a human being. So in sections 237, 209 and 195 we have three absolutely separate factual situations. It is for this reason that we rejected the argument of the hon. member for Calgary North, supported as he was by Professor Mewett, that the Bourne case in any way applied to section 209 of the Criminal Code. The Bourne factual situation applies to section 237. That being so, I rely merely on the fuller treatment of the subject we introduced before the committee. If hon. members wish to review it, of course the proceedings of the committee are available.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I should like to preface the question I wish to put to the minister by saying that the words of the amended section 209 include the phrase "to preserve the life of the mother". Subsection 2 reads:

This section does not apply to a person who, by means that, in good faith, he considers necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child, causes the death of such child.

If in fact any person in good faith performs an operation to preserve the life or the health of the mother, is that person not performing a legal abortion? My second question is. If such a person performs a legal abortion, is the foetus not killed?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): The simple answer to that is that section 209 does not relate to an abortion at all.

Mr. Woolliams: I do not want to harp on this subject, Mr. Speaker, but may I ask the minister one more question. Let me read again subsection 2.

This section does not apply to a person who, by means that, in good faith, he considers necessary to preserve the life of the mother of a child causes the death of such child.

To cause the death of the foetus or of an unborn child would in fact under the law be considered an abortion. The minister said that this section does not apply to abortions, but surely these are indentical words to the ones used in section 237. In spite of what the minister's advisers have told him, I ask him to consider this matter again. When a person is performing an abortion in good faith and takes the life of a foetus he is exempt from a penalty under the law, as stated in section 209(2), because he performs a legal abortion.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I have done a great deal of thinking about this. Section 209 relates to a killing at the time of birth.

When performed at the time of natural birth, it is not an abortion.

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to put a question to the minister on a particuler point before delivering my speech, if the rouse agrees. The minister referred earlier to the famous Bourne case. As far as section 209 is concerned, I would like to ask him, in connection with what the hon. member for Calgary Nroth (Mr. Woolliams) stated, whether it would be fair to say, to clear up the matter, that for several years, Canadian and British courts have been constructing in a broad way this qualification stated in section 209 (2) of the Criminal Code—the minister is speaking of—so that it would be generally accepted that, to save the mother's life, it would not be necessary to wait unit the mother runs an immediate risk of death. In the famous Bourne case, the ruling of the judge was—if I remember well—that the doctor had a right to procure a miscarriage for his patient, if it was his conviction that the pregnancy could probably result in ruining her physical and mental health. Does the minister take into account the proposed amendment to the bill? Is it in keeping with that precedent? Would the Bourne case constitute a legal precedent?

• (3:20 p.m.)

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my simple answer is no.

The Bourne case was a case of rape, following which the woman had become pregnant and the doctor had agreed to perform an abortion. The actual facts must be considered in that Bourne case. The rape was committed on April 27, 1938, and the abortion performed on June 14, 1938, which leaves an in-between period of about seven weeks. That is a typical case of abortion.

Section 209 rather applies to an operation; or to actual facts in the natural act of birth of a child. Therefore, the Bourne precedent does not apply to the circumstances as defined in section 209.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question my earlier interpretation which to my mind, constitutes a precedent, was corroborated by the famous Newton vs. Stongo case, which is found at page 469 of the Criminal Law Review. In that famous case, it was specified that protection of a woman—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must remind hon. members that we are not in committee. If the hon. member for Lotbinière wishes to deliver a speech, he has the right to do so, but at this stage, he can only ask a question.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

My argument is borne out by the famous Newton vs. Stongo, case, when it was specified that the word "health" meant the physical health as well as the mental health of a woman. Can the minister tell me whether my interpretation of that precedent is correct?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I do not believe I am in a position at this stage to analyse the entire British jurisprudence. I did my best in an attempt to explain the difference between section 209 and section 237 and I cannot add anything more to the evidence I gave a few weeks ago before the committee on justice and legal affairs.

Now, if the hon. member wants to know my innermost thoughts about this, he will find them there.

[English]

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): The semantics of legal affairs leave me somewhat mixed up, Mr. Speaker, and I think it would be as well to look at the medical side for a moment. After all, this is a medical problem and we are dealing with people.

I did not understand the minister clearly, if he was clear, when he spoke about what would be done in the case of an alleged rape reported a month or six weeks after the event when the woman found she was faced with a pregnancy. It is my opinion, and I believe it is the opinion of the medical profession generally, that after five days, once the foetus attaches itself to the uterus, a human life is begun. In the hospitals today doctors are engaged in saving every human life in utero they can, and I can see very little difference between the abandonment of a life in utero and ex utero. We are now able to treat babies in the uterus itself when necessary. We are treating them for the Rh. factor and other conditions, and recently we have discovered a vaccine for the treatment of rubella which, when administered to the mother, will prevent deformation of the new-born infant. We are working to preserve life. Regardless of what the hon. gentleman's opinions are, life starts once the foetus attaches itself to the wall of the uterus.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I did not get into the question of when life starts or does not start.

An hon. Member: Why avoid it?

Mr. Rynard: The proposals here will destroy life in utero, completely ignoring the fact that a human being has been started in the uterus with a long life ahead in most cases. Why not destroy older people? The live foetus in the uterus may have a long and successful life ahead. This is what disturbs me. We in the medical profession are doing everything we can to see that every woman is able to carry her baby through to full term. Millions of dollars are being spent on research to prevent deformities and illnesses which may cause trouble for the baby after it has been born. Again, it seems to me that in a country such as ours, with a population of 21 million people living in an affluent society, we should be working to preserve every Canadian baby in utero.

It was not very long ago that a Liberal minister of immigration who later became minister of transport and who, while in that office, created a job he was able to step into after resigning, placed a high value on Canadian babies. If the minister would like the reference in Hansard I think I could supply it to him. It is disturbing to note that in Sweden, for instance, in 1939—and at that time they were already on the road we may be embarking on now—there were 439 legal abortions. In 1965 the number was 6,245. I was told not long ago by a doctor from Stockholm that businesswomen were now becoming pregnant and raising children as a result of the creative imbalance between males and females. This is a story we do not want to see repeated in Canada. Canada was not founded on those principles. Doctors work to protect human life from the embryo to the end of the road. This proposition upsets their efforts.

I ask the minister again what he proposes to do in cases of abortion when the woman concerned has alleged rape. He tells us that five days is not enough time in which to set up an abortion committee. How is the law to deal with such a situation?

Mr. Speaker: I have to remind hon. members that the rules do not allow the minister to speak a second or a third time.

Mr. Rynard: I wonder whether I could ask the question so as to clarify the position.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member might have asked the question while the minister had the floor. However, with the consent of the house he may be allowed to put his question to the minister and have it answered, but certainly we shall get ourselves into difficulty if we disregard the rules. As I pointed out at the beginning, we are not in committee and we should as far as possible keep this in mind. As I say, there may be a disposition on the part of the house to allow the hon. member for Simcoe North to ask a question of the minister and to allow the minister to reply to it if he wishes.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Because of my respect for the hon. member for Simcoe North, who is a medical doctor, may I say that my opposition to this particular amendment which would restrict the performance of a therapeutic abortion in the sense that it would have to be performed before the period of implantation, which, as I understand it, is about five days after conception, derives from the fact that it would render the clause inoperable. In most cases a woman does not know she is pregnant so early, and even if she did it would be impossible for the therapeutic abortion committee to meet and judge the case. This is a very technical amendment and I am replying to it on these specific grounds. When we are discussing clause 18 as a whole perhaps I shall be able to deal with the general question the hon. member has raised, and I may do so at that time.

Mr. Rynard: I ask the minister whether he would not make some statement on a later occasion covering the case I mentioned a few moments ago, that the woman concerned must lay a charge alleging she was raped, before the expiration of the five days, or file a legal complaint.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): If I may continue the liberty which was extended to me before Mr. Speaker's alter ego took the chair, let me say that when we are dealing with amendment 19 covering the whole aspect of clause 18 I shall certainly include that question in my statement.

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I listened carefully to the statement of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) who moved the amendment No. 24 on behalf of the hon. member for Sainte-Marie (Mr. Valade).

I was very much amazed by that statement, and what strikes me most is to see how the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), who is alone to defend his bill, is losing no time in refusing all the measures proposed by the opposition.

He said more or less that the hon. member for Simcoe-North (Mr. Rynard) was all mixed up, because he does not want to accept the assertions of this eminent doctor.

He said, at the beginning of the statement he made earlier, that the professor Mewett was wrong.

If the Minister of Justice is the only one who knows the conseqences of the amendments to the Criminal Code, I think we should simply close the debate, go home and let the Minister of Justice take care of all this.

However, it seems to me that such is not the case. We were not elected to fully endorse all the proposals of the government, but rather to defend the views of our constituents, of the medical associations, of the hospitals and of the clergy, whether Catholic or not.

It is disconcerting to notice how unanimously the members of the Liberal party support Bill C-150 now under study.

I find it strange that the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), who first sponsored Bill C-195 which has now become Bill C-150, used to blame the right honourable Lester B. Pearson about his way to deal with the members of the house. Indeed, as we can read in an issue of Cité Libre of 1963, he said, and I quote:

The Pope had spoken—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but at this point the house is really not discussing Bill C-150 but a specific amendment moved by the hon. member for Calgary North for the hon. member for Ste.-Marie, seconded by the hon. member for Saint John-Lancaster. The Standing Orders are very specific on this point. They require hon. members to restrict their remarks to the amendment under discussion. Under the circumstances I would invite the hon. member for Abitibi, who knows the rules better than I, to try to confine his remarks as much as possible to the specific amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Thank you for your explanations, Mr. Speaker but I do not accept the statement that I know the rules better than you do for I do not boast of being a specialist in matters of procedure. I do believe, however, that the rules allow me to support or to oppose a bill and to do so I have to offer some kind of clarifications. That is why I want to be specific about my reasons for supporting the amendment introduced by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) and to say why it does, indeed, seem strange to me that all the amendments we have so far suggested would always be defeated in the same way, as if everybody were wrong on this side of the house and the government members the only ones to be right.

I shall have the opportunity, in some further debate, maybe in the debate on the motion for third reading, to speak out my mind on the present leadership of the Liberal party.

The amendment now before us is quite acceptable for it also tends to clarify Bill No. C-150. Mr. Speaker, the fact that we are considering amendments tending to amend section 18 of the Criminal Code does not necessarily mean that we do accept section 18.

I would like to stress the fact that it was one of my colleagues who first presented an amendment for deleting section 18 from the aforesaid bill. Had we considered the section and had the house accepted amendment No. 19 as suggested by the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau), there would have been no need for debating section 18. Such is not the case, however, and were section 18 to be retained in Bill No. C-150, we would be bound to introduce amendments in order to improve the wording of this section and to make it less harmful to the public.

Mr. Speaker, I have here an article published in the Quebec L'Action dated March 18, 1969, in which the Organized Medical Staff of the Laval Hospital of Quebec states for the second time for the guidance of the government and the public that its point of view had not changed.

Here is the statement of the Staff, of which Paul-Émile Gareau is chairman and Claude-D. Hébert, secretary. I quote:

The Medical Staff of the Laval Hospital studied carefully the bill on abortion introduced in the House of Commons by the Minister of Justice.

It has pronounced itself unanimously against this bill for the following reasons:

Mr. Speaker, those doctors could not have made this public statement without having given it serious thought.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. The hon. Minister of Justice has raised a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member explain to the house in what way his remarks are relevant to the amendment now before us?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The point is well taken, and I thank the Minister of Justice for raising it.

The hon. member for Abitibi should confine his remarks to the amendment under consideration.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, the amendment needs no clarification as it states "that those means are employed before the period of implantation".

So, if I confine my remarks to that matter I would simply have to state that I am for or against the amendment, and it seems to me that I am allowed by the rules to give some explanations. That is why I want to express the views of the medical board of Laval hospital.

So, Mr. Speaker, whether abortion is allowed during the period of implantation or a few hours, a few weeks or a few months before or after, it remains an abortion. Regardless of when the abortion takes place, it remains an homicide because there is life from the moment of implantation.

The doctors of Laval hospital, like the great majority of doctors, are against abortion because, in their view, any abortion is an homicide, the foetus being a human being.

At this point I would like to quote the following:

> Some say that the foetus is not a human being until it becomes viable. The notion of viability of the foetus, outside the womb, is a matter of medical opinion. Today, the foetus is not considered to be viable outside the womb of the mother before the twenty-eighth week of gestation, ... but this period will perhaps be reduced with the acquisition of new data and the development of proper techniques.

This is exactly what Doctor Jutras said when he appeared before the committee on justice and legal affairs.

And I continue:

> Whether or not the foetus will be viable outside the mother's womb depends on the degree of maturity of the foetus. But is it possible to define a human being on the basis of the obvious maturity it has reached, especially since this maturity is attained after many years only?

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it is generally agreed among gynecologists that the foetus is a human being right from the beginning. And the period between conception and delivery of a viable foetus is but one stage in the life of that human being.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) is perfectly valid and should be inserted into clause 18, so as to avoid any mistakes. It was with this in mind that the hon. member for Calgary North moved this amendment and it is my intention to support it.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, upon reading the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), which states:

> —that those means are employed before the period of implantation.

—we realize that, in essence, it seeks to restrict abortion, because the intent of the legislation before us is to legalize abortion without any medical or scientific restrictions.

The amendment establishes that the period of implantation is the time when life appears in a mass of cells and, in my opinion, it is important to specify at what moment life appears and when according to the law it does not exist, not necessarily from a scientific point of view but from a legal one.

The legislation introduced by the minister aims to specify that life begins only once the foetus has completely proceeded, in a living state, from the body of the mother. According to the law, that would be the definition of a human being: a foetus that has completely proceeded, in a living state, from the body of the mother.

The proposed amendment is to the effect that abortion could not be legalized before the period of implantation. Under the present bill, abortion would be legalized if it is performed before or after implantation, until the foetus has completely proceeded from the mother's womb.

We can see the difference between the two wordings. The government party supposes life does not exist while the foetus is still inside the womb.

As for us, we have a strong, sincere, honest and scientific conviction that life exists during the period the foetus is inside the mother's womb.

I would hardly see the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) rising to deny that statement, because he is aware of the fact. He knows that a foetus is alive.

We want the law to be more specific, in order that abortion be allowed, but before the implantation period.

In support of my assertion, I will quote an excerpt of the interesting, scientific and conclusive testimony of Dr. René Jutras, who lives in my constituency, since he is a member of the pediatrics service of the Hôtel-Dieu of Arthabaska. Several members apparently have this next on hand.

This is why I am pleased to make use of his knowledge, in order to give fuller details.

Mr. Speaker, we are dealing with the life of the unborn child before and after implantation. But let us see rather what science says in that connection. Dr. Jutras stated on March 25, and I quote:

The chromosome contains in itself all the genes. There are 46 chromosomes and in the deoxyribonucleic acid there is a complete code which is the code of heredity. This code contains, according to present research, about 100,000 special characteristics, descriptions or connotations determined in advance which will lead the impregnated cell to its final state of man at the age of 20.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, this merely means that there is an evolution from the time of sexual intercourse to the time of birth and even up to 20, 30, 50 and even 70 years of age. That evolution at the various stages of life will only stop at the time of death.

Mr. Speaker, we are now discussing a bill which seeks to establish as a fact that there is no life during the time the foetus is in the woman's womb, while science states positively the contrary. In fact, science says that not only there is life then, but that as soon as implantation takes place the chromosomes are perfectly arranged and the deoxyribonucleic acid contains already all the genetic information regarding the future physiological and biological characteristics of the man at 20.

Some members, the hon. member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) for instance, if I am correct, do not speak often, not to say never. Well, at the time of his conception, it was already settled that the hon. member for Mercier would never say a word. The die was cast.

Now, let us go back to serious business. I think there is continuity and this fact has been established scientifically.

Dr. Jutras says and I am quoting:

This is to tell you that we are facing a real challenge. It is more than a negative.

This is what the person I referred to earlier had to say on this subject, and I quote:

It is more than a negative. Everything is codified and sealed in advance. And what is fantastic in all this is to see that before impregnation—

Mr. Speaker, I hope I am not out of order. I continue the quotation:

—there is a phase of immeasurable hazard.

More than 400 million spermatozoa are participating in a frantic race to reach the ovule. Only one reaches it, and thus the foetus begins to take form. Therefore, it is a race to the finish.

In examining the bill introduced by the minister, it is useless to wonder why the spermatozoa are racing, Mr. Speaker. They do not want to be overtaken by the omnibus bill.

Dr. Jutras went on to say, and I quote:

But there is one thing about which human beings do not often think. It is that once the head of the spermatozoon has penetrated into the ovule—

At this stage, I ask the hon. member for Chambly (Mr. Pilon) to listen carefully——the hazard has ended.

Well, Mr. Speaker, from then on, it is scientifically possible to foresee what the future human being will be like. It is possible to know what his defects, even the smallest ones, will be, his qualities, the colour of his eyes, the shape of his ears and of his nose, etc. It is possible to foresee everything, even his mental or physical deficiencies. Biologists and scientists are saying so, not me.

—there is no more chance happening.

Dr. Jutras states, and he says so on the basis of studies he has been conducting on the subject for eight years, particularly in the United States. And I continue:

After that, the setting into motion is extraordinary, if one reflects on it.

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that this question can be treated lightly, for this is a matter of life or death. Ultimately, we have to know whether after implantation the foetus can be considered as a human being. If not, abortion raises no problem, but otherwise, the problem is immense.

I said a moment ago that there was continuity from the moment of fecundation until the human being reaches the age of 20. This continuity will only end at death.

So, Mr. Speaker, what we are to-day at the age of 20, 30, 40 and 50 years could be found not only as a mere potentiality, but in an embryonic stage, within the ovule and the spermatozoon when they met, and combined to create the outstanding features of the new human being.

I shall illustrate this by a very simple example. Let us suppose that the hon. member for Chambly is thirty years old—this must certainly flatter him—that he is trying to remember what happened in his life, ten years ago. He will be able to remember certain things. Ten years seems a very long and a very short span of time. We feel that if we can remember what happened ten or twenty years ago, we can also remember what we were doing at the age of three, four or five. Anybody can.

These memories are vague and remote though at the same time precise. Nevertheless, the most fantastic and extraordinary thing, is that we feel we have not really changed from the time we were five years old.

No hon. member could rise and say that evolution stopped abruptly between the time he was five years old and today. Everybody realizes that there is so much continuity that the individual does not feel he has changed.

In other words Mr. Speaker, the fœtus in the womb of his mother is a potential human being. It is just as clear if we follow this reasoning that birth, as I said yesterday, is not the beginning of life as the Minister of Justice would have us believe, but a stage in this life which took a nine-month long preparation and scientific "alignment"; the mother fed the embryo for nine months. She took care of him. He is entirely dependent at that time both of the mother and the father.

He is totally dependent and right from the moment of his birth, his mother is giving him all he needed to become a human being.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the fact of performing abortion without any serious reason is, in my view, a homicide.

And I say again, Mr. Speaker that I simply cannot believe the Minister of Justice dares to suggest, together with his colleagues, that life is absent from the fœtus in the mother's womb.

And if he admits that life is indeed present, he must also admit that it is a crime to kill this fœtus.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I give on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Minister of Justice on a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I never said life was absent from the fœtus and therefore the remark of the hon. member has nothing to do with my argument. I said nothing at all because, to defeat the amendment, it was not necessary.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Justice so far, did not tell us whether life was present or not in the foetus. He says he never said it, but he never said the contrary. I would like him to be more specific about facts. The point is to have a bill that become law would allow a committee of qualified doctors to jeopardize the normal development of the fœtus after implantation.

It is therefore important to know if the surgical operation will be performed on a human being or just on a cluster of cells. There is a difference. If one considers the foetus just as a cluster of cells, there is no problem; we are wasting our time discussing it, since bringing about abortion would not be a homicide but simply eliminating a cluster of cells.

But if it is definitely not a cluster of cells, every scientific conclusions leads us to believe it is a foetus.

Let us go further. Let us suppose that we are not quite sure whether it is a cluster of cells or a foetus, whether it can live or not. In the light of those considerations, are we authorized, from the legal as well as the human point of view, to legalize abortion when there is some doubt?

If we have doubts whether we are dealing with a viable foetus, it is impossible to legislate as clearly as the minister would have us, because abortion is dangerous, since the doctor himself cannot determine whether or not he is interfering with the normal development of the foetus.

Since some risk is involved, the wisest attitude would be to abstain from doing so until science has dissipated all doubts and abortion can be allowed because, then, it will not entail moral consequences.

But, if we are sure to be dealing with a viable foetus, we do not have the right to interfere by the artificial means that therapeutic abortion constitutes: there would then be homicide.

Mr. Speaker, to my mind it is extremely important that we should clear up this matter. The minister does not tell us whether he considers the foetus as a human being or as a group of cells but, really, that is the question.

If we are dealing with a mass of cells, there is no problem; but if we are dealing with a human being, the minister must recognize with us—for this is not stated in the text of the legislation—that he is forcing the doctors, the therapeutic abortion committees and hospitals concerned, to practise homicide, no less.

The situation is all the more serious as the foetus, from the stage of implantation, is a human being, and is not only completely dependent on his mother and on her psychic and physical behaviour, but is also innocent and defenceless.

This is why, if one follows this argumentation, one will admit that the minister is unable to show up its weakness—and I tell him clearly—without running the risk of making himself ridiculous and contradicting everything the Prime Minister might have said, because he knows as well as we do that the foetus is a human being and that to destroy it after the period of implantation would be nothing short of compulsory murder if the bill proposed by the minister were passed.

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Simcoe North (Mr. Rynard) said that the passing of such a law in other countries had increased the number of abortions. I think that in view of the foreseeable consequences—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but I must ask him first to restrict his remarks to the amendment under study and secondly remind him that his time has expired.

Mr. Fortin: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. With all due respect, I would like to tell you that you would find it very difficult to show the house that I am out of order because if I am, other hon. members have been so for a long time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The last words of the hon. member were in fact out of order.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to speak on this amendment but having listened to the arguments for or against from the hon. minister, I suggest they failed to convince me and I find this amendment perfectly logical.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to express my opinion on the amendment which reads as follows:

—that those means are employed before the period of implantation.

[Mr. Fortin.]

This amendment, which allows abortion "before the period of implantation", will inevitably lead—as pointed out by the hon. minister and on this I agree with him—to the avoiding of abortion. It is precisely for those reasons that we are in favour of applying "those means before the period of implantation".

I said in my remarks yesterday before the committee on justice and legal affairs that 12 weeks after the period of implantation a baby could suck its thumb. Now I know government members who have been in this house for twelve years and have done nothing else yet than sucking their thumbs.

Mr. Speaker, I have here a statement from a doctor, which impressed me very much and describes an abortion performed after the period of implantation. I refer to Professor Ian Donald, professor of gynecology at the Queen Mary hospital of Glasgow University in Scotland, who is not Catholic but Anglican. In the 1967 July edition of WAY magazine, he describes the killing of a foetus, perpetrated "after the period of implantation".

Here is a doctor who takes us to a hospital in order to witness an abortion practised "after the period of implantation". This is what he says:

I must resist describing the disgusting details of an operation designed to put an end to a pregnancy. Within a few minutes, you would feel sick and go out vomiting.

An abortion can be performed through a tiny Caesarian section——that is to say "after the period of implantation".

However, you have a baby alive in your hands, a baby who stirs, who kicks and who wants to live. But you have to kill it... you hide it from the nurse... it is a depressing sight. There is no mistake about it, it is a murder in slow motion. Besides, the baby can be killed while still in his mother's womb.

Is there such a big difference? The intention is still the same: to destroy the child.

Mr. Speaker, if we are in favour of that amendment, it means that we approve of abortion induced "before the period of implantation", that is to say before life begins.

In the Way Catholic Viewpoints, July 1967 issue, Dr. Edward Cossel, a biologist, says, and I quote:

In my opinion, scientific evidence shows conclusively that every human life begins at the time of fertilization of the ovule by a spermatozoon to form the child at his primary stage. At that stage, according to biologists, the individuality (character, qualities, shortcomings) is created in animals.

The same is true for human beings.

Failure to apply the same principle to the development of the human being would not be scientific. Therefore, destroying a child at that stage, that is from his conception to his birth, is contributing to destroy a human life.

It is precisely because we do not want to destroy human lives that, in our opinion, these means should be employed before the period of implantation.

We were given several reasons why we should object to the legalization of abortion, and why means of abortion should be employed before the period of implantation. In that connection, there is no consensus among medical practitioners and biologists. We are convinced that the foetus is a human being, however imperfect it may be, from the moment of conception.

As the human being is the most valuable creature of any organized society, it has undeniable rights to temporal property which must be fully respected and protected.

Now, natural rights involve duties because natural law, even though it confers rights, imposes corresponding duties.

In fact, we recognize and favour the right to life. We want these amendments to be accepted, and abortion means employed before the period of implantation.

For instance, the right to life entails the right to maintain it. The right to a decent existence entails the duty to act with dignity. Moreover, if the right to start a family derives from the natural right of man to choose freely his state in life, members of parliament then have an obligation to take financial, social, cultural and ethical measures to consolidate the general stability of man's environment and facilitate the uneasy role that rests with him.

Mr. Speaker, we favour the use of such abortion methods before the period of implantation, and we say so in the house as we have been requested to by the physicians of the province of Quebec and the Association of French-speaking medical practitioners. Indeed, immediately after implantation, life exists. Doctors do not wish to have to procure abortion contrary to the basic aim of medicine, to wit, the protection of the human being, of the individual and of the foetus inside or outside the uterus.

Also on the basis of those very principles of the protection of life and of the right to life, of the human being or of the foetus, the government must be at the service of man. Therefore it is incumbent on us to pass legislation likely to protect the weakest. We should protect the most dispossessed and without the means to defend themselves. We should protect the human being still in the mother's womb, the foetus.

Some time ago, the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry (Mr. Davis) made recommendations to the house concerning the killing of baby seals. The baby seals, he said, cannot see. To insure their protection and the survival of their species, the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry introduced legislation to that effect. He showed much solicitude for the baby seals that cannot see; and yet he displayed flagrant inhumanity towards the foetus that does not see and is unable to defend itself.

It is the government's duty to comply with the people's wishes, provided it is physically possible and morally desirable to do so. It must therefore find and retain a truly democratic formula of life in society, based upon just laws. This is why we are opposing the bill.

We want those abortion methods to be applied before implantation because we are in favour of fair legislation based on fair principles which will permit every individual to enjoy social, economic, political and religious freedom.

Through a collective effort, prosperity, security and cultural progress will be assured.

Mr. Speaker, I could quote several other doctors who have submitted briefs to us, as well as to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), but it seems he does not want to take them into consideration.

Mr. Speaker, we are certainly in favour of applying those methods before the period of implantation, since I have in hand an article about the life of a foetus. It is a note appearing in an article written by Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, and I quote:

This story was issued by Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski as a pastoral aid to help resist pressure from the Red Polish government for abandonment of the church's stand against abortion.

The Communist government of Poland was then exerting all kinds of pressures on the Church in order to prevent the government from opposing the abortion law. In Canada, unfortunately, a so-called Liberal government which advocates the establishment of a just society wants to force on us what the Communist government wanted to force on Poland.

Here is what Cardinal Wyszynski wrote about the life of a foetus:

[English]

October 5: Today my life began. My parents do not know it yet. I am as small as a seed of an apple, but it is I already. And I am to be a girl. I shall have blond hair and azure eyes. Just about everything is settled though. Even the fact that I shall love flowers.

October 19: I have grown a little, but I am still too small to do anything by myself. My mother does just about everything for me. And what is odd—she still doesn't even know that she is carrying me here under her heart, and that she is helping me already, that she is even feeding me with her own blood. She is so good.

Some say that I am not a real person yet, that only my mother exists. But I am a real person, just as a small crumb of bread is yet truly bread. My mother is. And I am.

October 23: My mouth is just beginning to open now. Just think in a year or so I shall be laughing, and later talking. I know that my first word shall be—mama.

October 28: My heart began to beat today all by itself. From now on it shall gently beat for the rest of my life. Without ever stopping to rest. And after many years it will tire. It will stop, and then I shall die.

November 2: I am growing a bit every day. My arms and legs are beginning to take shape. But I have to wait a long time yet before those little legs will raise me to my mother's arms, before those little arms will be able to gather flowers and embrace my father.

November 12: Tiny fingers are beginning to form on my hands. Funny how small they are, I shall be able to stroke my mother's hair with them. And I shall take her hair to my mouth and she will probably say: "Oh, nasty!"

November 20: It wasn't until today that the doctor told mom that I am living here under her heart. Oh, how happy she must be! Are you happy, mom?

November 25: My mom and dad are probably thinking about a name for me. But they don't even know that I am a little girl. They are probably saying Andy. But I want to be called Cathy. I am getting so big already.

December 10: My hair is growing. It is smooth and bright and shiny. I wonder what kind of hair mom has?

December 13: I am just about able to see. It is dark around me. When mom brings me into the world, it will be full of sunshine and flowers. I have never seen a flower, you know. But what I want more than anything is to see my mom. How do you look, mom?

December 24: I wonder if mom hears the whispering beat of my heart? Some children come into the world a little sick. And then the delicate hands of the doctor perform miracles to bring them to health. But my heart is strong and healthy. It beats so evenly—tup-tup, tup-tup ... You'll have a healthy little daughter, mom!

December 28: Today my mother killed me.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, it is precisely to prevent such atrocities that we ask that amendment No. 24 be adopted, because it says:

—that those means are employed before the period of implantation.

This is in order to prevent such murders by unscrupulous people who would be allowed by the act to do as they please without any consideration for life, or for the principles any sound society needs to perpetuate itself.

• (4:20 p.m.)

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, we have before us another important amendment to Bill C-150, which seeks to add the following words to clause 18:

—that those means are employed before the period of implantation.

I have not heard the remarks made by hon. members on this subject, but nevertheless I wish to make a few comments on the importance of considering human life as a whole, and more particularly at the time when it begins, according to scientific evidence.

It must be recognized that a certain period of time may elapse before the fertilized ovum is really implanted. That is the basis of the amendment that I find most logical. Even if impregnation takes place, if there is no environment propitions to the development of the embryo, of course there can be no human life. If necessary, one could boil down the question to some experiments made recently, when scientists succeeded in reproducing the phenomenon of fecundation in laboratories. Can the result of such experiments be considered as a real human being? I doubt it very much.

Therefore, in the days following fecundation, it may happen that implantation does not take place and I believe that in such a case it would only be fair to consider the possibility of adopting an amendment which would specify that before such methods are used, nobody can be accused of having performed an illegal abortion.

Mr. Speaker the matter now under study deserves our full attention. It is not a question of taking only religious beliefs into consideration. In fact, there are unfortunately too many members who believe that those who oppose abortion are only doing so on religious grounds, because if religious factors are one aspect of our argumentation, it remains that they are only secondary. What we are considering first and foremost is the scientific viewpoint.

The hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) has spoken at length on the report submitted by Dr. Jutras to the committee on justice and legal affairs. This report demonstrates most eloquently the merits of our arguments.

I can well remember that after hearing Dr. Jutras' evidence, all the members of the committee were dumbfounded. They were all left gaping and no one put a question to the man who had just given us such an extraordinary demonstration of what life is.

I am of the opinion that we would make a serious mistake if we admitted that the human being exists only after he comes out of his mother's womb. This demonstration left us dumbfounded and I wish that all those who were present would attempt to deny it. I wish they would express their views or ask the questions they were unable to ask at that time.

Mr. Speaker, it is normal that we, who are only laymen in the matter, should rely on experts.

The experts prove that there is perhaps less difference between a child of five or six and a man of 21 than between the foetus at the moment of fertilization and at the end of pregnancy. There is less transformation before than after birth.

As stated by Dr. Jutras, we remember quite well part of the events which occurred when we were five or six years old. However, most cells from that stage have been renewed many many times, even if essentially the individual has remained exactly the same, because the human soul, the essential principle of individuality, cannot undergo any transformation. This is exactly what happens at birth. As many changes occur during adult life as from conception to birth.

This explains the importance of human life. When the amendment under consideration states that "those means are employed before the period of implantation", it is entirely normal since before that implantation it is impossible to speak of development.

As I see it, it is the reason for the amendment and that is why we should support it.

Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, too many members are not interested in this matter, and it is a disappointment to those who take their responsibilities seriously and would like the law to be well thought out so that they would not incur reproaches later on.

Let us really consider each of the amendments and the possible consequences if adoption of the bill or rejection of the proposed amendments in a few years from now, led to complete chaos.

It is in a way what is happening in countries where, under the pretense of being in the van, abortion was authorized. In Japan, where abortion is obtainable on resquest for only a few dollars, the government is beginning to realize it made a mistake.

According to what a newspaper, wrote last week, the Japanese population is steadily dropping off and there will be no Japanese left within a century.

What is happening in England is hardly more encouraging. According to an article, in last week's issue of Le Droit, a doctor is supposed to have performed 62 abortions in one day, which is an unprecedented occurrence.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. In all kindness, I would like to remind the hon. member that he is not allowed to deal in a general way with section 18 of Bill No. C-150; he should confine his remarks to the amendment under consideration, introduced by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) which reads partially as follows:

—page 43, the "period" after the word "practitioner" on line 8 on page 43 and inserting the following words: "and",

(e) that those means are employed before the period of implantation."

The hon. member, together with a number of others, has been indulging in generalities on clause 18 and I would like him to confine his remarks to the amendment before the house.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if you have taken the trouble to consider the question thoroughly, but I can tell you it is not just a matter of a period and—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The question is not to remind the hon. member the rules for the sake of a period but to ask him to confine his remarks to the amendment before us.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the proposed amendment would be to prevent people from being prosecuted for having procured abortion, this being, in fact, was impossible, since the impregnated ovule was not implanted.

This is a very technical matter that would require thorough consideration, but if the hon. members did not bother about scrutinizing it, considering it throughly—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I think the hon. member cannot impute any motives to any member I ask him once again to limit his remarks to the amendment before us.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that whenever we speak in the house, it should not be merely to enlighten chairs and desks, but to try to convince our hon. colleagues of the need of an amendment. If such is not our function, I wonder what it could be.

Our business is to try and state our case as well as we possibly can, in order to reach a clear understanding of the matter in hand. And as a good number of people turn a deaf ear, we try to wake them up and make them understand what those amendments are all about.

Mr. Speaker, if we thoroughly examine the matter, we have to acknowledge that it is logical and based on scientific grounds and I wonder whether every member should not make some efforts to vote in favour of the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I know that sometimes we indulge in digressions but I can assure you that it is not out of ill-will. The point is merely to deal with amendments in depth and to convince the house to vote seriously on a matter which will have repercussions on the future.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the house ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No, no.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Pursuant to Standing Order 75 (11) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

[Translation]

Mr. Gaston Clermont (Gatineau) moved amendment No. 26:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to" on line 4 on page 43.

Mr. Speaker, I think there are at least three schools of thought on abortion.

According to one of them, abortion could be secured at will, and the right to abortion should be a matter between the pregnant woman and her doctor.

A second school of thought would not allow abortion on any ground whatever, and a third contends that it should very seldom be permitted, as is proposed in clause 18 of Bill C-150.

I think that clause 18 (4) (c) of this bill is too important for us to pass it right away because if it contains obscure wording it could be given a meaning much beyond the one intended by its proponents.

Mr. Speaker, clause 18 (4) (c) reads as follows:

—has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health, and—

Mr. Speaker, I find it difficult to follow the argumentation of clause 18 (4) (c) when I read it and I confine myself strictly to the French text of Bill C-150——would or would be likely to endanger her life or health, and—

I think there is a contradiction here. I was asked why I recommend deleting the words "or would be likely". In my opinion, the expression: "would be likely to endanger" is too vague and would leave wide open the interpretation of this legislation.

And if I refer to the Petit Dictionnaire Larousse, I can read that the word "certainement" means "assurément", (certainly) "indubitablement" (indubitably). As for the expression "assurément", (assuredly), it means "certainement", (certainly) "sûrement" (surely); as for the word "probablement" (probably), the Petit Larousse gives it the meaning of "vraisemblablement" (likely). As for the word "vraisemblablement" (likely), its meaning is "avec vraisemblance" "selon la vraisemblance" (with all likelihood).

This is why I proposed the amendment to delete the words "or would be likely to".

Another aspect of clause 18 (4) (c) on which I would like to comment is the word "health". And, Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that one did not include in clause 18 a paragraph allowing the governor in council to enact regulations in order to define what is meant by the word "health".

Indeed, I would like to have an answer to the following question: What is health? Where does it begin? Where does it end? Still, we must admit that we are dealing here with a sector of medicine that lends itself more easily than others to individual interpretation. Consequently, psychiatrists are far from unanimous on this point.

Mr. Speaker, some remarks have been made concerning the word "health". I refer to volume No. 16 of the proceedings and evidence of the standing committee on justice and legal affairs at its March 27, 1969 sitting.

On page 801, to a question put to him on the word "health", Mr. D. H. Christie assistant deputy attorney general replied, and I quote:

> So far as we are aware there is no legal definition of the word, and presumably it would be interpreted in accordance with its ordinary dictionary meaning.

To another question put to him on the same page, on the same topic, his reply was as follows:

> Once the courts define the word it will take on the aspect of a judicial definition.
> Presumably, in accordance with the ordinary rules, they will apply the ordinary dictionary meaning to the word.

On page 802, in reply to a question on the definition of the word "health", Mr. J. A. Scollin, director of the criminal law section of the Department of Justice, made the following comment:

> At the meetings which took place between representatives of... the Canadian Medical Association, the advice of the representatives of the Canadian Medical Association was that from a medical point of view they preferred the word "health", treating mental and physical health as a whole; and that the word "health", from a medical point of view—from their point of view—

On page 803, giving his own definition of the word "health", Mr. Scollin said, and I quote:

> I really have no difficulty myself... "Health" means just what it means: mental and physical—the total health of the being. It would not give me any difficulty at all.

If I refer to No. 16 of the proceedings of the committee on justice and legal affairs of March 27, 1969, I see that my colleague the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. MacGuigan) made a few comments based on what had been said before the committee on health and social welfare, when studying the first draft of Bill C-195, and I quote:

> The committee in its consideration intended health to mean physical and mental health and not the wider definition given to it by the World Health Organization.

I continue my quotation:

> The committee feels that a simple amendment to the proposed legislation should establish that a clear and direct serious threat to the mother's health must be present.

In my opinion, the door is left open, because persons wishing to get an abortion will give psychological and social reasons.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I proposed amendment No. 26 to delete the expression "or would be likely" which appear on page 43 of Bill C-150.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I hope that this time the hon. member will excuse me if I speak in English. I have to be very specific. The terms he referred to are rather specific also. I find three distinct parts in his argumentation. I want to deal with each one of them.

He said first that there might be a difference between the French version and the English version of the section.

• (4:50 p.m.)

[English]

We have already received an opinion that the two versions relating to the words on page 43, line 4, "would or would be likely", which come in the larger context of "in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health", and the French version "mettrait certainement ou probablement en danger la vie ou la santé de cette dernière", do correspond. However, I have asked the department to look into this matter again.

I also understand that it is the practice, if there is a subtle difference between the two versions, to bring them into accord in the sense of the English version "would or would be likely" by way of clerical correction by parliamentary counsel. I want to assure the hon. member that I will look into it again, but it would merely involve a clerical comparison of both versions.

As to the substance of the amendment, which in the English version seeks to delete the words "or would be likely to", and which in the French version seeks to eliminate the words "ou probablement", I would have to recommend to the house the rejection of the amendment. If the words were removed, the therapeutic abortion committee would be restricted to the prognostication of certainty only. We would be asking for an opinion of medical certainty from a committee of doctors that the life and health of the mother would be in danger. Such certainty would be virtually impossible to achieve.

I recall the speech on second reading of the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle), who is a medical doctor and who dealt with this very point. The most that can reasonably be required of a professional medical judgment is an honest and competent prognosis of the likely or probable medical consequences. I do not think we could expect anything more from a medical judgment, and I think we could expect less from a legal opinion. The realm of certainty is beyond the limitation of professional judgment, which is what the hon. member is asking from the medical profession if those words are eliminated.

There is one final point which the hon. member made that is not quite pertinent to his amendment and which has to do with the definition of "health". The earlier house committee on health and welfare, the committee on justice and legal affairs, the Canadian Medical Association when it appeared before the earlier committee, and the Canadian Bar Association were all unable to arrive at a satisfactory definition of health. This is a question that is left to medical judgment. Certainly it has to be taken in a global sense. You cannot isolate physical from mental health; they interact and react each upon the other. In that sense health is incapable of definition, and this will be left to the good professional judgment of medical practitioners to decide.

For these reasons and subject to the clerical problem that I outlined, which is clerical only and can be remedied by parliamentary counsel if that is necessary, I would have to recommend to the house that it reject the amendment.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton.]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are the following:

[English]

The hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie)—Transport; the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis)—Industry; the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski)—Agriculture.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 26, Mr. Clermont.

Mr. Rynard: Mr. Speaker, I was very glad to hear the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) admit that there had been an error in the drafting.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I did not admit that at all. I said that we would look into the matter again and that if it were a mistake the two versions could be reconciled clerically.

Mr. Rynard: There certainly is an error because there is no certainty. A doctor could not be certain.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I admitted that.

Mr. Rynard: Then there is an error in clarification, if you want to put it in that way.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I think we are talking about two different things. There is the question of the drafting of the words, and there is the question of medical judgment. I admit that there is no such thing as a medical judgment that is certain, which is the reason I have to reject the amendment.

Mr. Rynard: The point I am making concerns the drafting of the words that would be legally applied. A doctor could not be certain. He could use the best judgment and the best equipment that is available, and we do have great diagnostic equipment today. All who practice medicine have seen people get better who they felt would not get better. On the other hand, they have seen people die who they felt should not have died. There is always the unexpected, though this does not happen very often. I was very glad to hear the minister admit that there is a problem here and that he will look into it. There will be more objections if the matter is not corrected and made very plain to the house.

[Translation]

Mr. Ovide Laflamme (Montmorency): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Justice.

I ask him to clarify the French and the English versions, since there is apparently a strong tendency to stick to the English version, which says:

Would or would be likely to—

I wonder whether it would not be desirable, in order to simplify both versions, to come back to the original version which read as follows:

—likely to endanger her life or her health—

This is the question I put to the minister.

As long as that has not been clarified, I will be inclined to support the motion of the hon. member of Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) because I cannot see how the words "would" and "would be likely to" can be reconciled in the same text, as those are two contradictory terms.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Romuald Rodrigue (Beauce): I endorse the remarks of the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme) regarding the words "or would be likely". Sub-paragraph (c) of paragraph (4) reads as follows:

c) has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health;

Of course, I also agree with the member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) when he says that he finds it hard to understand the grouping of these words. Not only did I have difficulty to understand this phrase but, it is somewhat difficult for me to understand the whole paragraph 4(c). It should be entirely rewritten. I feel that if we deleted the words "would be likely" the meaning would be more precise and would also prevent different interpretations either on the part of doctors, or on the part of the person who is seeking an abortion. Moreover, it would perhaps avoid litigations.

I also share the opinion expressed by Dr. Légaré when he appeared before the committee of justice and legal affairs. He was answering a question put by the member for Calgary-North (Mr. Woolliams). This is what he said:

In fact, this is why it is so difficult to legislate. When legislators have in all good faith drawn up a legislation, you may be sure that someone will come and try to find faults in the text. It is quite possible that such is the case. In fact, the difficulty for the legislator is to draw up legislation whose text is well-structured in order to prevent abuses in one way or another. This is not impossible however. We can always try but I do not know whether it will be a success from a legal viewpoint. I am not acquainted with that field.

Abortion is a rather serious surgical operation. According to Dr. Cairns, who appeared in Ottawa on December 14, 1967 before a parliamentary committee responsible for studying the question of abortion, therapeutic abortion performed under the best possible circumstances, as it is done in Denmark and in Sweden has a death rate ten times higher than deliveries attended by obstetricians.

In a Toronto hospital where 250 abortions have been performed in the last 12 years, the rate of complications is 9 per cent.

This means that errors of judgment are possible. Some decisions must be made and the wording should be clarified further in order to avoid errors that would naturally be imputed to a doctor or to an abortion committee that might have been established.

Many scientific discoveries have been made. The risks of error are much slighter, since the number of cases where therapeutic abortion would be needed is reported to be around 3 out of 10,000 pregnancies. I feel this is further reason to prompt the legislator to make the law more explicit.

Any abuse should be avoided unlike certain countries where, after abortions have been allowed for a while, people are wondering if it was not a mistake.

I agree with the hon. member for Gatineau who moved this amendment that it is necessary to clarify paragraph (c). I hope the Minister of Justice will be agreeable to this.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, after listening to the speech made by the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont), I want to congratulate him for the courage he has shown in spite of his party's admonition.

I also hope that people will finally understand that what French Canadians or Canadians are expressing in their own terms is that one cannot legislate with any certainty when there is some doubt.

I do not intend to play on words, even if the debate is a very sophisticated one, as the minister might object. Nevertheless, there is a distinction to be made.

Mr. Speaker, paragraph (c) of clause 18 reads as follows:

(c) has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health—

Mr. Speaker, we are asked to adopt this provision on the ground that the Criminal Code is evasive, non-applicable and difficult to understand. We are asked to insert that paragraph which attempts to establish a link between the danger inherent to pregnancy and the danger to the life or health of the mother.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that that is not logical and that is why I give my wholehearted support to the motion submitted by the hon. member for Gatineau.

Mr. Speaker, the progress of medical science has been amazing, as the hon. member for Simcoe North (Mr. Rynard) said a moment ago. Less and less will pregnancy be likely to endanger the health of the mother, and still less will it be likely to endanger her life.

Medical experience has shown—the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) could probably corroborate this—that German measles can in some way endanger the life and the health of the mother and even of the child. However, last week, I had the pleasure and the honour of meeting a group of doctors from my riding and, in their opinion, such cases are extremely rare.

[Mr. Rodrigue.]

Mr. Speaker, this is a borderline case. But the minister would like to put together in the same clause not only such cases where the woman's health would likely be impaired, but all abortion cases without distinction.

If a woman pretends to be ill to justify an abortion, the medical practitioner will then abort her, thus killing a human being. No attempt was made to find out whether that woman was truly ill.

Mr. Speaker, doctors agree, as a rule, that a pregnant woman often claims to be sick whereas she is not really. On the contrary, a woman is ill when she cannot bring forth a child, not when she is bearing one. That is why this is completely illogical. It should be the other way around, Mr. Speaker.

A woman is considered ill—and I challenge the member for Hull to deny this—when she cannot have a child. Doctors are at a loss to find a way whereby that woman could satisfy her natural need to give birth to a child. Pregnancy is not an illness.

Having heard other members of parliament, I think it is a mistake to tell women that pregnancy is a form of illness. Not at all. Several women claim nevertheless to be sick when they are pregnant. Why? Because they feel they have lost something of their beauty, etc. They say they are sick for such reasons of a psychic nature.

To the woman who consults him, a doctor will say what is in the law. He will tell her that he can state, by way of a certificate, that in his opinion the continuation of pregnancy—for this woman who says she is sick, psychologically, even if she does not admit it frankly—would or would be likely to endanger her life.

The law leaves much latitude for its interpretation. I think we cannot afford not to clarify the situation.

In my opinion, the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme) has clearly established the difference between the French and English versions. This is a poor French translation.

That is why we must consider the situation very seriously.

Pregnancy, Mr. Speaker—and it is important to repeat it—is not a sickness. The doctors themselves acknowledge the fact, and since the hon. member for Hull does not deny it, that proves I am right.

The fact that she is pregnant does not necessarily mean that a woman is sick. Some women feel temporary discomfort, but generally with the almost safe medical advances and new techniques, few are really sick to the point that their health or life is endangered. That is why, Mr. Speaker, even if the words "health" or "life" remain, we cannot leave the words "or would be likely to".

We can at least ask the minister to add thereto, as the hon. member for Montmorency suggested a while ago, the words "likely to endanger" so that the physician will have to prove that the condition of the patient is liable—since there is a fifty-fifty chance—to endanger her health or her life.

To show how important the shades of meaning of those words are, I would like to remind the minister of two precedents that already have been mentioned. It is quite important to clarify the situation for physicians, experts, professionals and to protect them. In addition, we must give precise details, since some cases could go before the courts, in order to help judges and lawyers. Moreover, the minister has spoken about it a while ago.

For several years, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian and British courts have been broadly interpreting—and I insist on the word broadly—the reservation provided in subsection 2 of section 209 of the Criminal Code, so that it is now generally recognized—we know the great influence of precedents—that to save the life of the mother, it is not necessary to wait until the latter is in an imminent danger of death.

And to confirm my statement, I rely on two specific cases to show how important it is to specify the terms of that section not only to protect the patient, the father and the mother, but also the physician and the courts.

• (5:10 p.m.)

In the famous Bourne case in England—and I hope my colleagues remember it—the judge stated that the doctor had the right to procure the abortion of his patient. It must be observed that it is not a question of interpretation but rather an extract from the judgment. The presiding judge alleged that "the doctor has the right to procure the abortion of his patient if he thinks the pregnancy will likely contribute—note the significance of those words likely contribute—to ruin the physical and mental health of the latter".

Legally, the words "will likely contribute to ruin the physical health" mean that there is more than a fifty-fifty chance. From the scientific point of view this is almost a certainty.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the word "likely" is not necessary here. It is even dangerous.

This interpretation was later corroborated in the Newton vs Stongo case, where it was explained that "the protection of the woman's health meant the protection not only of her physical health but of her mental health also".

The courts of justice, the doctors or patients can go as far as that in requesting abortion if the word "likely" is not clearly defined. The word "health" should also be defined.

In that judgment the court ruled "that the protection of the woman's health meant the protection not only of her physical health but of her mental health also."

In the bill now under consideration mention is made of health in general in paragraph (c). What do we mean by health?

If a pregnant woman has a headache, visits her doctor—the hon. member for Hull, for instance—and requests an abortion, that doctor can read the Act and say that the headache in question "would or would be likely to endanger her life or health". Then abortion would be allowed. The headache would be considered as an unusual and abnormal illness and indicate that the physical condition of that woman is deficient at this time.

Mr. Speaker, let us define the word "health", for the matter is of consequence. Otherwise, one might allege all kinds of indispositions to request abortion.

The more I look into that legislation, the more I feel that the government is opening the door to all possible excuses not to discharge its responsibilities and apply the law.

That is why it does not give a clear definition of the word "health" and resorts to the word "likely".

Now, the medical practitioner will not have to be sure that the health or life of the mother is being endangered, and any illness might be considered as threatening one's health. Consequently, it could be a valid excuse to ask for an abortion.

Mr. Speaker, if the house rejects the amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau, it will prove irresponsible, since the hon. members' basic duty is to be explicit. Mr. Speaker, before completing my remarks, I would like to tell the house that I am pleased to see, as I was saying at the very beginning of my speech, that the hon. member for Gatineau was not afraid to rise and to move an amendment to the bill since everything cannot be perfect from the start.

In my opinion, it is important that everyone should contribute in some way to the improvement of the legislation. That is why we are legislators and if we do not express our opinions, we do not fulfil our responsibilities and duties.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to see that the hon. member for Gatineau was not deterred by the fear of being given a good scolding by the Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) who do not want to understand anything. However, it is important that his colleagues, the members of his party, should take the floor to encourage him and that the members of the Ralliement Créditiste should rise to support him because he feels lonely. I think it is a pity, Mr. Speaker.

Therefore I would like to invite his colleagues to support him, as all of us should. All hon. members should be free to move amendments which might improve the legislation. Perhaps the minister thinks he has a full knowledge of everything, but I have a feeling that it would be to his advantage to listen to what people say to him, in order to improve the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have so much to say that I just do not know where to stop. My head is simply buzzing with ideas. But if we fail to delete the words "or would be likely to" in the wording of the bill, we are on the wrong track and fail to assume our responsibilities. Let us be honest enough to ask ourselves where this law is likely to lead us.

[Mr. Fortin.]

Could any member or the minister tell me about a single case in which under the law, a doctor would not be allowed to perform an abortion?

There would not be a single case, where abortion would be forbidden. Indeed all the doors are left wide open, every pretext and every excuse is good, because the government fails to assume its responsibilities and, under all sorts of phony excuses is legislating without giving us the slightest assurance, that the law will be effective, in some cases at least.

The government is introducing a bill that will open every door; and tells us: Here's for you, all cases are permitted. Go ahead. Abortion is legalized. No more problems, thanks to the great, big Liberal party.

Mr. Speaker, this is an irresponsible approach. The minister does not realize the awkwardness of his position and we would all admire him if he had the guts to, urge his colleague, the hon. member for Hull to enter the debate instead of merely telling us that we are wrong.

Mr. Speaker, ministers would profit by considering what ordinary members are doing. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) is wrong when he says that it is merely a subtle distinction, and house should be enlightened as to the exact meaning of the words probablement, certainement and santé. Otherwise there will always be some grave doubt in our mind and, as I said earlier, any doubt involves a risk which, in the present case, may lead us to commit a criminal act.

In conclusion, I urge for the third time the hon. member for Hull to tell us whether our statements are true or not.

• (5:20 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, like the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) I extend my congratulations to the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) on taking a stand that he feels he should take regardless of the position of his party. However, any similarity between my views and those of the hon. member for Lotbinière on this question end there. That, indeed, is the reason for my taking the floor for just a few minutes.

I want to say that I feel, and I am sure most if not all of my colleagues agree with me, that this amendment must be rejected. The hon. member for Lotbinière suggested.

that this amendment was a way of improving the legislation. I submit that it destroys the whole attempt to bring our abortion laws in line at least with modern thinking and modern practice.

If we were to take out the words that the hon. member for Gatineau wishes to be removed, then the section would permit therapeutic abortions only when a therapeutic abortions committee was absolutely certain, beyond any doubt whatsoever, that the continuation of the pregnancy would endanger the life or health of the pregnant woman. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that that would mean practically no abortions at all. What therapeutic abortions committee could be absolutely certain that that would be the result?

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons that members like the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) and other medical men in the house have supported the idea of improving our abortion laws is that at the present time they are in a difficult position. At the present time the law is unclear, and many a time a doctor just does not know what to do because of the uncertain state of the law. If the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Gatineau were carried the law would be worse. No therapeutic abortions committee could ever be in a position of absolute certainty, and so there would be no such certificates and no matter how much an abortion might seem to be necessary there would be a very real danger it would not be permitted at all.

In such circumstances you would still find doctors who were human beings, who had compassion, who felt in certain cases that this should be done and who would go ahead in spite of there not being a certificate from the committee, and the law would be still in a mess. So, Mr. Speaker, as I said at the start I cannot but give my hon. friend across the way full marks for moving an amendment that does not have the support of his party, but I think the position stated by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) is absolutely right. If we are going to write this new abortion law into our statute books let us not destroy it by wording it in such a way that it would not have any operative effect at all. Therefore I ask the house to reject this amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Gaston Clermont (Gatineau): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) permit a question?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): With pleasure.

Mr. Clermont: If the hon. member followed attentively my remarks, he must have realized that I was dealing strictly with the French version of paragraph (c), subclause 4 of clause 18 and I even gave the Larousse definition of the word certainement. And that word, even according to the Larouse definition, leaves some doubt, Mr. Speaker, for according to that dictionary, the word certainement also means sûrement. But that does not mean that there is no doubt. So I referred to the French version.

As I am not a linguist, I cannot comment on the English version. But according to my interpretation of the word certainement, if doctors have a valid doubt, I believe that word would justify their performing an abortion.

What I do not accept, Mr. Speaker, is the use of the words "ou probablement". If the officials of the Department of Justice find a more adequate expression, I will have no objection. But I cannot see—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member asked permission to ask a question, but I believe he is now making another speech.

Mr. Clermont: Maybe I should have raised a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, as I would not like the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, by his remarks, to leave the house under the impression that I am absolutely against abortion. But in my opinion, the word certainement leaves the doctor free to perform an abortion, if there is a valid doubt.

[English]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I take a moment to answer the hon. member's question which I am very pleased to have on the record. May I say that I am less an expert in the two languages than he is, much less, and I appreciate the fact that he is concerned about the French text, but it does seem to me that we need to have in the English version the two concepts, namely, that it would endanger or that it would be likely to endanger the life or health of the female person and, by the same token, it seems to me that in the French text there must be the same two concepts. There must be the idea of certainty but there must also be the idea of reasonable probability.

If better words can be found by experts in the French language I am sure the Minister of Justice would be quite happy to accept them. But I think that just as the two concepts are necessary in the English version so the two concepts must also be in the French version. If you have in the French version only the concept or certainty, even with the nuance the hon. member for Gatineau has put on it, it seems to me it would have the effect I described earlier of limiting a committee from making recommendations for abortions where they really were needed.

I appreciate the last remark of the hon. member for Gatineau that he is not opposed to abortions where they are necessary, that he is merely trying to straighten out the wording of the French text. But it does seem to me that the wording in English is satisfactory, and so far as the French is concerned there must be the same two concepts, one of certainty and one of reasonable probability.

Mr. Gaston Isabelle (Hull): Mr. Speaker, there were a few digs at me, this afternoon, as to medical science, health and especially as to the interpretation of the words certainement and probablement.

I do not intend to speak at length but I hope the members opposite may one day leave to future generations the speeches they delivered during the last few days and I am afraid that one of their descendants might say to his mother: Good were it for that man if he had never been born.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière on a question of privilege.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, since the hon. member for Hull is a doctor, I would like to tell him that thanks to the progress of science, it is more and more probable that even after an abortion the foetus is still alive and it will then say to the Liberal party: You wanted me to die and I live.

Mr. Isabelle: We have daily examples of this.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Isabelle: I would like to explain somewhat to the house the meaning of both texts. In my opinion and as a doctor, if one of the two words expresses adequately the thought of:

[English]

—would or would be likely to injure—

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

[Translation]

I think one should delete the word certainement because medicine is still an art and even today there are not only diseases but also patients. One can operate today on somebody under normal conditions, and if the patient dies, one is incapable of determining, even with the help of the post mortem examination what he died from.

Thus, medicine still remains an art. There is never any certainty in medicine and there will never be, because the doctor works on man who is subject to changes and on cells which are not identical in all individuals. The proof of it is the phenomenon of rejection and you cannot graft on victims of serious burns the skin of another person. On the contrary, it is necessary to use the skin of the patient. Then, it simply means there is no certainty in the field of medicine, and consequently, this should not be included in the wording of any legislation. And if you want to give a legal definition of health, there is a great risk of making a mistake. Indeed, if lawyers find it often difficult to interpret legislation, how would they manage to express their views on health, since they do not know anything about it.

So, law should be left to lawyers and to legislators, and health, especially its definition, should be left to medicine. It belongs to doctors to define health; and the bill has taken this into account. Then, let no one say that doctors are against the measure.

An association of 25,000 doctors, which includes all the doctors in Canada, that is the Canadian Medical Association wrote on January 29, 1969—I saw this by accident while I was glancing through a few publications—and I quote:

[English]

We have recently obtained a copy of your Bill C-150 to amend the Criminal Code, and again wish to congratulate you and your colleagues in bringing in legislation to amend the Criminal Code in respect to therapeutic abortion—

[Translation]

It groups 25,000 Canadian doctors, including those of the province of Quebec.

Now, there are dissident doctors in the province of Quebec as everywhere else. Of the 11 provinces, some protest against the federal government.

The same thing exists in medical ranks. The interpretation of certain individuals has been given; I shall mention that of associations such as the Canadian Medical Association.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): How many provinces?

Mr. Isabelle: Ten. There will be another one soon: the federal district.

I follow the idea of the member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont); there must have been some confusion, some error in the translation or interpretation. That is why we insist so much, when requiring a document, on the original copy being produced.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Shefford on a point of order.

Mr. Rondeau: I should like to point out to the hon. member that he may not impute motives to the hon. member for Gatineau.

Mr. Isabelle: The member for Gatineau always has good intentions. That is why the wording of an act—and we discussed this with my colleague, Mr. Clermont—seems to have been poorly translated—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I should like to remind the hon. member that he must identify members by the name of their ridings and address his remarks to the Chair.

Mr. Isabelle: He is such a good friend of mine that I often slip up on that: I apologize. If the member for Gatineau belonged to the medical profession, I am sure he would have removed the word "Certainement" and left the word "probablement" for the reasons I have just given.

Medicine will always be an art, Mr. Speaker, regardless of any new scientific discoveries; for it will always involve that undefinable element that is life. It is almost as difficult to define life as it is to detect cancer, in spite of all our modern scientific methods, precisely because we are dealing with the phenomenon of the multiplication of cells.

So, Mr. Speaker, if it is possible to find a solution, I would suggest that the word "certainement" be deleted with a view to perhaps enabling the medical profession to do its work properly.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I have been listening for the past few minutes to a French lesson, to the meaning to be given to the words certainement or probablement. I know very well that if the government maintains its position, the word probablement will probably be replaced by the word certainement and in the next election, the government will certainly be defeated.

There is a difference, Mr. Speaker, between probablement and certainement.

Naturally, one is always sure that his cause is just and one is surprised by the position adopted by others, namely that of the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle). I understand what he means. I agree with him when he says that medecine is an art of probabilities, that is that one can never state categorically that something will happen or that a certain treatment will surely cure the patient.

We object to abortion for the same reason that the member for Hull has just given. Therefore, the doctor never can say whether the woman's life or health is endangered. It is exactly the argument he put forward. Medicine is an art of probabilities. The doctor never can say positively in connection with a pregnant woman whether the pregnancy will affect the mother's health or life.

That is the main reason why we are discussing this bill. Feelings or politics are not involved, it is only a matter of life and death. The point is to pass an act or not. Our arguments are serious and well-founded.

In this connection the hon. member for Hull gave us a chance and I thank him for it. If we take up his own words, we must acknowledge that medicine is an art of probabilities. As abortion is part of medicine, we cannot see why we should now be legislating on that matter. That is the very reason why we are discussing so much.

Mr. Speaker, in a letter that the Alliance pour la vie sent to members on November 20, 1968, one could read, and I quote:

Dear Hon. Member:

It seems that you will soon be called upon to vote amendments to the Criminal Code involving radical changes in the clauses concerning abortion. Anyone who considers carefully the proposed amendments realize that they involve major changes, regardless of any assurance given to the contrary.

Mr. Speaker, the second paragraph is most important.

Unfortunately, few members have had the time or the opportunity to consider the amendments carefully. Therefore, very few clearly understand the meaning and the reasons of the amendments proposed. We noticed that such a confusion exists not only among members of the government party and the opposition parties, but even among members of the cabinet.

The Alliance pour la vie gives evidence of that in the third paragraph, which reads as follows:

During a conversation with one of our members on August 29 last, the Minister of Justice admitted that the government had formed its opinion on the matter of abortion before due consideration had been made. He—

Mr. Speaker, is there anything less responsible, more immature than to propose amendments to a legislation before having considered it, all its implications and all its consequences?

The hon. member for Hull or rather the dull member for Hull, as said the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau), said that he was eager to know what succeeding generations will think of our interventions.

I do not know whether he has listened to or read my other speeches on this subject because I spoke on several occasions. In fact, this is not the last one either since I intend to speak on each amendment.

As I have pointed out, I want at least posterity, that is to say my own children and others, to know that we stood our ground, that we made our views known, that we challenged the position of the government on this question. I feel sure that sooner or later we shall overcome.

The standing committee on health, welfare and social affairs held hearings on the question in the fall and winter. However, as the proceedings will show, the amendments had been drafted before the committee hearings. And we are told that we are not serious to fight in such an untimely way, if I may put it that way, those clauses of the bill! If we are putting up such a fight it is for reasons we are not afraid to explain openly; it is for scientific reasons, for medical reasons and because the government does not face its responsibilities and is passing legislation before having considered it carefully.

The following is the text of a document that everyone has received. I am quoting:

In December last, the government exerted pressure on the committee in order that an interim report should be prepared before having heard the majority of briefs. Neither the government, nor the committee in its sympathetic report, rely on the proceedings to justify the proposed amendments.

Mr. Speaker, the more I keep on reading this text, the more I get worked up, the more I find this situation ridiculous and childish. That is why I keep harping on about that. I had already put on the order paper a question for the minister asking him if:

—some organizations were bringing pressure to hear on the government to promote the passage of the omnibus bill?

If so, what were those organizations?

On which of the three subjects—homosexuality, divorce, abortion—were the pressures the strongest?

The minister answered in the negative. I have it here, it is the original and complete text.

On the other hand, several organizations have sent us representations and the minister still answered no. Then, he said, and I quote:

Several organizations made representations in favour or against such and such provision of Bill C-195, the first reading of which took place—

Of course, it was the former bill, Bill C-195.

As far as abortions are concerned, here are some organizations that have made representations to us on this subject. I want the minister to tell us—there is a whole page here—how many are in favour of the bill and how many are against it.

According to my information and the documents we have received, not two are in favour of this bill which was given so little consideration prior to its introduction.

I am taking the minister's words, namely that no organization has brought any pressure to bear.

But, a great many organizations have opposed this bill. On that basis, we feel quite justified in defending our position fiercely.

I continue the quotation:

The official explanations given by the government for broadening the grounds for abortion are inconsistent and contradictory. It seems that the proposed amendments are designed to make a distinction between sin and crime and mainly to clarify the existing act.

• (5:50 p.m.)

That is what the minister had said and before him, the former minister of justice, the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

The purpose of the legislation was to make a distinction between sin and crime.

The explanations contradict each other and will not bear examination.

First of all, if the government really believe that abortion may be only a sin, why does it not delete any mention of it in the Criminal Code?

One can see how logical it is, since there is no reference to sin in the bill. In fact, at a given time, the debate was diverted on that subject and it was suggested that it did not rest with the government to determine whether an act was moral or not.

If the act was considered immoral—because it is deemed immoral by a number of people—it would not be enough to consider it a criminal act. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, I agree on that point, but if the government considers it is only a matter of sin, then, it should stop dealing with sin and legislating on sin.

The Minister of Justice recognized it would have been a logical conclusion to reach. However, such was not the case, for he wrote subsequently:

—that the government would not do so under any circumstances.

Furthermore, the Prime Minister maintained "that the government in its amendments to the Criminal Code was not legalizing abortion."

This is the argument brought forward. Abortion is not legalized but on the other hand it is said:

—the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health—

This, Mr. Speaker, constitutes an obvious contradiction brought about by the famous word "likely" and I also commend the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) who, like us, had noticed this excessive freedom allowed by in saying: ... "or likely".

If all doctors were as honest as the hon. member for Hull, we could most certainly rely on their professional conscience and on their knowledge. There would not be any problems then. Besides, legislation would not even be necessary in any field if everybody was assuming his responsibilities.

When a law is enacted it is because some people are not behaving as they should and it is their case which is provided for in using the famous word "likely".

One can imagine all the possibilities that such a word as "likely" represents. A great many unwed mothers will likely become insane temporarily in order to justify their abortion.

"Likely" a great many married women who in order not to have any more children and to avoid doing more work at home will always succeed in finding a disease to justify abortion.

There will "likely" always be welfare recipients who will find themselves all kinds of diseases to justify their request for abortion.

What will the physician do in such circumstances? Will he be stubborn and say to the patient that she is not ill; she will reply that she is. And if she succeeds in discussing during 12 hours, the physician will probably decide that she is mentally ill and he will agree to procure an abortion.

Mr. Speaker, we have to think about the implication, of the words. A while ago, the Chair interrupted me on account of a comma, but words "would be likely to" are much longer and much more dangerous for the above-mentioned reasons.

Mr. Speaker, these words give complete freedom to those who wish to evade the law. Complete freedom is liable to bring about a decadence of morals, which should certainly not be promoted by the house.

Mr. Speaker, a great number of persons, due to their lack of education, will maintain that they approve that bill. Others, better educated, will state their views after mature consideration.

This last argument has been suggested to me by a so-called survey reposted in the press and which indicated that most people are in favour of abortion.

Even if such was the case, I do not think that we would be justified in promoting abortion.

If a pregnant woman who has marital troubles or others is asked if she is in favour of abortion and if she answers yes, can we rely on her judgment?

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for recognizing me; I would like you to call it six o'clock.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock this sitting is suspended until 8 p.m.

At six o'clock the house took recess.

Criminal Code

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

[Translation]

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, when the house rose we were discussing the amendment of the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont), which aims at deleting from the legislation the words "or would be likely to".

I must congratulate the member for Gatineau who was not afraid to speak up; when he says that the legislation is too liberal, we could not agree more. His standpoint tallies with the ideas we have already expressed in this house, with those of many doctors and with testimonies we have received, namely that the proposed legislation we are now proceeding with will impose no restriction on abortion.

Our arguments are supported by the documentation we have on similar legislation adopted in other countries and by the experience in those countries. It would be useless to quote all the figures in connection with experiences made elsewhere where abortion laws have been liberalized the same as we want to do here through Bill C-150. In any event, this legislation has far too much scope and will open the door to all kinds of abuses and that point was made very clear before the committee on justice and legal affairs.

We heard, for instance, quite eloquent witnesses say that childbirth could impair the health of the mother, but that, on the other hand, the child had to be saved. We reject those arguments.

It is obvious that no woman can go through pregnancy without experiencing some inconveniences. But if we should allow all abortions that are claimed for health reasons, there would not be many hon. members in this house.

Perhaps we would have accepted arguments balancing the health of the mother against the life of the child. We have been told that medicine has made big steps forward in this connection and that old arguments whereby the doctors of yesteryear justified the taking away of the life of the child for health reasons do not hold water today. Medical science has overcome them through the rapid and constant progress of medicine.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

I have here the evidence of Dr. Légaré who is well versed in this field. This evidence appears on page 616 of issue No. 13 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. Here is what he said:

> We believe that this is precisely what makes the text of the bill dealing with therapeutic abortion unacceptable. If even, it were proposed to weigh the life of the foetus as against the life of the mother, the discussion would be possible and furthermore, we are going to come back to this. But when we propose a text that would accept to sacrifice a foetal life in order to eliminate a cause that would "certainly or probably endanger the health of the mother", we feel the argument is one that does not carry any weight and makes the test unacceptable. I would like to know, in fact, who can reply to the following question: "What is health? Where does health begin and where does it end?"

He goes on to say that in the light of experience, what was taught to our doctors does not hold anymore.

And, further, he says:

> The main indications in regard to therapeutic abortion under this heading are especially of a psychiatric nature. We know of many pitiful cases and we are not indifferent to these cases. However, we must admit that this is a field of medicine where individual interpretation is easier than elsewhere and also that psychiatrists are far from being unanimous on this subject.
> Those doctors who support therapeutic abortion claim attractive results when careful enough to question their patients during the period of euphoria in the weeks following the expulsion of the foetus. But they would be wise to see these patients again a few years later when a feeling of guilt may possibly have developed amongst several of these women a guilt complex that is difficult to overcome. Every one recognizes there is a psychosis after delivery, but therapeutic abortion is not a panacea and does not eliminate the possibility of a post-abortion psychosis that is every bit as serious as the other.
> Another indication of therapeutic abortion that is discussed to great extent is the possibility of serious trouble in foetal development caused by the taking of certain kinds of medicine or because of certain virus infections. A pregnant woman who catches German measles during the sixteen first weeks of her pregnancy is the most typical and the best known example. We want to emphasize that this phenomenon is a rare one and will become more and more rare because of the recent appearance on the market of a preventive vaccine that can be given to the mother—
> As an Appendix to my brief, I have an article from the Lancet 1966, an English medical journal, to prove this. Therefore, this means that the systematic acceptance of this indication of therapeutic abortion amounts to accepting in cold blood to eliminate, at least, 75 p. 100 if healthy children amongst whom this accident occurs—
> Fortunately, medicine is progressing with gigantic strides and indications that were formerly imperative for having recourse to therapeutic abortion have become of minor importance.

Concerning the amendment under study, when it says certainement or probablement, we find that the wording of this legislation is much too vague, because a pregnant woman will be able to get an abortion on any ground. Even here, doctors have questioned the merits of this argument and their experience proved to them that even the committees of doctors once they start practicing abortion, accept more or less any reason given by the patient.

To corroborate my argument, here is an excerpt from the brief submitted by the Quebec Association of Medical Boards and I quote:

It is universally admitted by all serious obstetricians that the cases where therapeutic abortion would really save the life of the mother have become extremely scarce and are getting even scarcer with the progress of science.

It is alleged that therapeutic abortion would certainly or probably endanger the life of the mother but we think that this argument is not valid.

We have also here all the evidence of the doctors given on page 606 of the proceedings of the standing committee on health and welfare on the same bill, in which these words by Dr. Whyte are reported, and I quote:

Yes, I think they should include mental disorders.

I know it is difficult to define this area and those who have tried to find such a definition have had difficulties. For some people, this includes even social balance. For example the birth of a child can cause a complete upheaval in the way of living.

And Dr. Whyte has this to say about health on page 695:

That is a very hard word to define, I agree; you can define it as meaning happiness if you like.

• (8:10 p.m.)

We can also read at page 667 of the report submitted by the Hôtel Dieu du Sacré Cœur de Jésus, of Dolbeau, and I quote:

We feel that the health of the mother is an elastic criterion which may involve rather wide interpretations of the law, particularly when psychiatric reasons are taken into account.

We may also read, at page 682 of the same report, the evidence given by Dr. Quigley, and I quote:

We submit that your committee and the government have recommended a change in the law to include health grounds, without adequate information on such a vital issue and without any definition of the meaning of the word "health".

We are here legislating on health, and the text of the law fails to define the word "health".

At page 486, Dr. Quigley goes on saying and I quote:

The word "health" is used rather loosely. Are you talking about a cold in the nose? Are you talking about a girl who comes into your office and says that she is so upset at being pregnant and so forth? Somebody can say that this girl is really upset and her health is jeopardized. Is this serious enough for abortion?

I am not being facetious when I state that somebody could say, "I am so upset; I am so nervous about this pregnancy that you have to abort me." Now, her health at this particular moment is interfered with. She is a nervous, upset, anxious, possibly depressed, woman. Is this going to be sufficient justification for terminating that pregnancy?

Thus, the word "health" is not defined and it is felt that any meaning can be applied to it. Furthermore, at page 488, one can read the question asked by the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis) and I quote:

I gather that you are not happy about the inclusion of the words "and health", the health of the pregnant woman, as proposed in the Criminal Code.

And Dr. Quigley answered:

I am very unhappy because I do not know what is meant...

...by health. And here is what Jack Walters said about this, and I quote from page 540 of the report:

How you are going to change this law is something that disturbs many of us.

I think the omnibus bill, which has already been submitted, extends it into a field which is going to be very difficult to interpret, and I would submit that we are getting out of a frying pan into a fire. "Health" as defined by the World Health Organization or by a final year medical student on an examination paper, entails a tremendous area—economic, social and emotional.

Again, it is going to come down to interpretation of what you mean, what we in London mean, or what somebody in Ottawa means by "health"... This is going to be the problem in including "health" as well as "life".

The wording of the bill refers to health and states that life begins at birth, when medical authorities tell that life begins long before birth. This is what dismays the medical profession.

On page 541 of the report, Dr. Walters says:

There is difference of opinion in the medical profession. When you have a group discussing this in a specialty, or in a multi-specialty—the general practitioner group—you have differences of opinion on a purely medical basis. If it could be established only on the life of the mother being endangered there would be much firmer solidarity.

—I know what life is, but I am not so sure about health... The term "health" is very ambiguous.

And further on, one can read on page 533:

—As for the doctor, he could give medical evidence concerning the life of the patient in such or such conditions, but it would be asking too much of the members of the medical profession to have them interpret the word "health".

Dr. Paul Christie says on page 475 of the brief submitted by the Anglican Church:

"The term "health" must in this case be subject to the broadest interpretation."

I believe that health as understood now by specialists in health and organic medicine, always involves social factors—

But for health reasons, for social reasons, for psychological reasons, a woman will be able to resort to abortion in order to free herself.

And Dr. H. Brody tells us on page 274:

—What these laws may do is give us a greater opportunity to find medical and psychiatric rationalizations... However, the interpretation of these reform laws will still remain in the hands of physicians. As stated by Howell "the law will again be unclear and dishonest".

Mr. Speaker, I could quote a host of doctors who say that "health" is a general term that is not defined in our statutes.

And to distinguish between "health" and "life", let us see what Dr. Douglas Cannell tells us on page 110 of the Proceedings of the standing committee on health and welfare:

The greatest proportion were done for psychiatric reasons; next to that was rubella; then cardiac disease, renal disease, malignant disease and a variety of others.

Today, medicine proves that it has overcome those problems which were formerly medical indications but which today are readily cured by medicine.

This is what Doctor Gray has to say on page 110:

—this type of mental illness may encompass almost any variety of mental illness, but the types which most commonly provide an indication for abortion are the depressive illnesses because of the risk of suicide.

And the risk of suicide is again another pretext to revert to abortion.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

Doctor Theodore Lidz, speaking of suicide, as reported on page 174, says as follows and I quote:

(as given in a brief presented by the Emergency Organization for the Defence of Unborn Children): ...When the psychiatrist says that there is a suicidal risk, in many instances he does not mean that at all, but feels that there are strong socio-economic grounds for therapeutic abortion. Since the only ground for abortion in many states is if it is felt there is threat of death, suicidal risk is thus established as the only legal way out of the situation.

On page 223, we find the figures given by Dr. Ford. I quote:

—Interruption of pregnancy for psychiatric indications is given as the commonest reason for therapeutic abortion in the United States. In one four-year study from 1960 to 1964 in the States, there were 80 therapeutic abortions per 15,000 deliveries, 77.5 per cent of these therapeutic abortions were done on psychiatric grounds. Another authority states that the incidence of therapeutic abortion on psychiatric grounds is 85 per cent.

A bit further, we read as follows:

One of the commonest ways for a patient to present for an opinion about therapeutic abortion is with the threat of suicide. There is nothing more likely to force the doctor's hand than this and I have little doubt that it has been used frequently as the reason for recommending termination. However, once again, the available opinions indicate a different story. The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists report states that it is extremely rare for suicide to take place following refusal of termination for psychiatric reasons. Anderson, in a series of 90 patients, had 33 threatening suicide but only one in fact committed suicide a year later and the refusal of termination was only one amongst other factors. And Lindberg reported on 304 patients with 62 threatening suicide, but without any actual suicides.

Mr. Speaker, the scope of this bill and more particularly of the clause now before us is too wide and so we cannot approve it. We have to congratulate the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) who moved the amendment.

We received another very interesting evidence which refers to emotion, as a pretence to ask for abortion and, most of the time, it is emotional reasons which bring the women—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I regret to have to interrupt the hon. member who is to quote another evidence, but his time has expired.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I join with those who have spoken before me in congratulating the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) who moved the amendment.

I have had the honour to work with him on some committees and even then I had great regard for him. He is not the only one who found fault with the omnibus bill. However, Mr. Speaker, he is the only member of the Liberal party who had the guts to move an amendment.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Clermont: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

I think the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) also moved an amendment to the omnibus bill.

Mr. Godin: Mr. Speaker, I am glad there are two of them.

That means we are gaining ground.

The amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau on April 14, 1969, reads as follows:

> That bill C-150, an Act to amend the Criminal Code . . . be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to" on line 4 on page 43.

The hon. member for Gatineau told us this afternoon that he could hardly grasp the meaning of clause 18(4)(c), page 43 of the bill, which reads as follows:

> (c) has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health,

Mr. Speaker, when reading the words: "pregnancy of such female person", we realize the significance of this amendment.

If the bill dealt with a male person, it is obvious that the amendment would not be justified since the dangers of a pregnancy would certainly be non-existent.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Godin: When we read in the bill, and I quote:

> —endanger her life or health—

—the problem is as the hon. member for Gatineau pointed out this afternoon.

We know when life begins, but as far as health is concerned, this is another matter. The word "health" has many meanings. On the occasion of a birth, for instance, one can drink to the infant's health. On the occasion of an anniversary, a graduation, an engagement, a wedding, one can drink to the health of the people concerned. On election night, one can drink to the new member's health.

When an hon. member becomes a minister, we extend to him our best wishes and drink to his health. Good luck, good health, do we repeat more often than necessary.

"Good health" are meaningless words, when we know that the persons to whom those wishes are extended are suffering from a deadly illness.

How do you do, how is your health? We know that we will not say the truth, because most of the times, we have to feel sharp pains to make up our minds to disclose publicly our condition.

Personally, Mr. Speaker, I may be mentally ill and it is probably due to their civility that my colleagues refrain from telling you so. I am not at all in a position to speak about it.

On the other hand, when we see those lovely ladies with a hair piece or a man with a well curled wig, we must think that all those persons enjoy a very good health, when probably it is not the case.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate once again the hon. member for Gatineau who is thoroughly conscious that section 18(4)(c) is ridiculous. If the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) would consider that clause a few minutes, he would understand the importance of that amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Justice is probably aware of that. However, I take this opportunity to quote another article published in Le Soleil and which shows that in the medical or legal fields, it can be difficult to ascertain the truth.

Let me quote you an article published in Le Soleil of Quebec City on Saturday, January 25, 1969. I quote:

> When removing a tumour, the physician discovers a nice baby of 9 lbs. 2 oz.
> Mrs. Evelyn Crawford, 47 years of age, to whom physicians had told she had an abdominal tumor, had it removed yesterday and at the same time she gave birth unexpectedly to her first child.
> The mother, who was unaware that she was pregnant, and the baby girl, Kitty Roslyn, were both well, but the father, Irving, 53 years old, was shaken up.
> Crawford, who was working at his snack bar in Houston when the doctors phoned him the news that he was a father, was so shaken that he ruined three cars on his way to the hospital and was given a ticket for causing an accident through careless driving.
> The doctors said they did not know about the baby until the birth because the tumor prevented from hearing the heartbeats. The tumor weighed seven pounds. The little girl, born by Caesarean section weighed nine pounds and two ounces.

The Crawfords, who celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary last December 27, have two adopted children and they take care of three others, all teen-agers.

"Naturally, I was flabbergasted, said Crawford. I expected to hear about the tumor operation. The doctor phoned and said he had a surprise for me. I could never have imagined!"

Mr. Speaker, in No. 13 of Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, on March 25, Dr. Benoît Légaré, gyneacologist at St. François d'Assise Hospital, in Quebec City, told us and I quote:

We do admit that certain mitral stenoses that cannot be operated on give rise to certain reservations. What does that leave? A handful of cases that will become fewer and fewer as medicine benefits from modern techniques.

Is it worthwhile risking to upset through an Act a state of equilibrium brought about under the status quo? Is it worthwhile setting up a mechanism that would risk going beyond the intentions of the legislator? Would it not be better to have broader consultations, accessible to all the strata of the medical profession, to medical associations, specialists and so on? Would it not be better to find out what we can at that particular level, all the distinctions that may improve the legislation before it is adopted?

Mr. Speaker, in view of those statements and those of many other competent persons, the proposed amendment is clear and stands to reason. If the hon. member for Gatineau had not introduced it, the opposition would have taken this opportunity to move it.

I am therefore happy to give it my wholehearted support and I would be more happy still if I were sure that the Liberal members would do the same.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the house ready for the question?

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, concerning the amendment that I have just read, submitted by the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont), I wish to congratulate, at last, a government member who has spoken up. Let us hope, as an hon. member said a moment ago, that others will also speak up, so that the truth be heard across the country.

The object of the amendment is to delete from sub-paragraph (c) of paragraph 4 of clause 18, the words "or would be likely."

[Mr. Godin.]

All members have heard last week, the people of Western Canada protest strongly, saying that Parliament is always discussing legislation on homosexuality or amendments to legislation of this type.

When this bill was submitted, we ourselves asked that the provisions relating to homosexuality and abortion be withdrawn. If that had been done, we would not have to spend days on such matters. We could perhaps discuss urgent problems arising in the West and in the whole of Canada.

As the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) was compelled by an uncompromising Prime Minister to introduce the omnibus bill as it is written, the debate goes on and because of this, newspapermen say that we in the opposition do not have much success.

Canadians were truly aware of the night of June 25 that, with an authoritative government, the amendments proposed—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must interrupt the hon. member to remind him that he must not speak on all the provisions in the bill, but simply on the amendment that was moved by the hon. member for Gatineau.

The hon. member has been talking for a few minutes already and he has not even come close to the matter under consideration.

Of course, he is allowed by the rules to make a 20-minutes speech. However, he is also required, pursuant to the standing orders, to relate his remarks in one way or the other to the amendment being considered.

Mr. Dumont: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I shall probably come to the amendment that has been moved, and to . . .

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think an hon. member has a question.

The hon. member for Frontenac has the floor, and it is up to him to permit a question.

Mr. Dumont: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but in view of the interpretation, I would rather ask him to send me his inquiry in writing. I shall supply him with any information he wishes in my office where interpretation is easier.

I was saying, Mr. Speaker, that the phrase "or would be likely to" should be deleted from the omnibus bill; this would clarify the bill legalizing abortions and explain a number of points.

We know that that phrase should be replaced by this one: "when the mother gives her life so that a human being may have a chance to start his own". That is what the Ralliement Créditiste proposes.

As I said at the beginning, we would like at least this amendment to be carried.

The hon. minister has no doubt received a great deal of protests, and this is why I am convinced that he will at least accept this amendment. As a matter of fact, the revised edition of the bill to be introduced in the house is now being printed. As to the comments made to us, they are in favour of the adoption of this amendment.

The Canadian Association of Catholic hospitals, representing 300 hospitals, requested that the amendments which would have to be made to the legislation be not studied before the whole question had been thoroughly considered and more effective research undertaken by the government.

This is the information we received. The minister must also have received it. A translation had been prepared. Since the amendments were proposed by members of his party, he is willing to accept them.

Besides, the brief dealt mainly with the importance of the administrative aspects, that is to say of the real problems faced by hospitals, should parliament, without analyzing beforehand all possible consequences, hastily legalize a practice which the majority of the population consider not only revolting but contrary to the common good of the country.

As far as the amendment moved today is concerned, I could quote a statement made by the Catholic bishops. It says, and I quote:

God, Master of life, entrusted man with the noble ministry of giving life; man must therefore carry it out in a manner worthy of himself. Life must be carefully preserved from the moment of conception. Abortion and child-murder are abominable crimes.

And the brief states further:

The advancement of civilization, we say it firmly, lies in the recognition always clearer, both theoretical and practical, of the dignity of the human being, of its sacred character and of its absolute inviolability.

Everything leads us to believe that it is illusory to think that the proposed amendment by the enactment of a law will bring about a reduction in the number of clandestine abortions. Here again, the experience made in a few countries where legislation has already been approved, similar to the one that is proposed here, shows that the contrary is to be feared. But could it be otherwise? With a law that belittles, by the very exceptions that it accepts, the right of the foetus to live, it promotes the development of a permissive attitude that no longer considers abortion as a real crime. Here is where one should be reminded that the lawmaker must not underestimate the educational value of the law. People are indeed easily led to consider as morally acceptable what the law itself allows.

It always rests with the lawmakers alone to find realistic means of adjusting their convictions to the often complex situations of current life. They should not passively wait for the Church to come to their rescue, at this connection; but, on the contrary, they must—in co-operation with their colleagues—endeavour to find efficient means of promoting the common good, especially through the drawing up and the enactment of wise and just laws.

Instead of unjust laws.

I have here the report of an inquiry conducted in United States. Everyone knows that in United States, where the people have a rather liberal mentality, several States have adopted measures to allow abortion for reasons other than the health of the mother, as for example, eugenics, incest, poverty of the family and other social and economical reasons. A woman who is not pregnant from her husband can get an abortion. However, people are not ready to accept abortion for such reasons. They accept it largely when the mother's health is in serious danger.

On the other hand, 56 per cent only of the people are in favour of abortion in case of malformation of a child.

On the other hand, they are against abortion requested for economical reasons, as for instance when a family income is so low that the family cannot be brought up properly—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Dumont: Refusal in 77 per cent—

Mr. Speaker: It is with a deep regret that I interrupt once more the hon. member to remind him again that he must limit his remarks, under the standing orders, to the amendment before us.

The hon. member is dealing with abortion in a very general way. That is not the object of the amendment under consideration. As I said a while ago, the hon. member may speak during the time allotted under the rules, but on the other hand, he must limit his remarks to the subject before us.

As I mentioned before, this is a subject with a very limited scope, namely the amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau, and I am sure the hon. member has very interesting remarks to make on that.

Mr. Dumont: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for following my remarks so closely. However, I read a while ago the speeches delivered by many members, especially from other parties, who had spoken at great length. I thank you for following my speech so closely, so as to call me back to order and I will try to sum up my thinking to the effect that we want the word probablement to be struck off, so as to make sure that this bill will be quite clear.

If they thought fit to add in the omnibus bill words such as ou probablement, the moment has come to make sure that the wording is such that people will interpret it exactly as it should be. That is why we want the word probablement to be struck off so that this abortion law, which will likely be passed, will be clear, even if we do not approve it.

We hope that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Minister of Justice, by pleading to the Prime Minister, will succeed in ensuring a free vote, so that we may know the real thinking of Parliament.

We must congratulate the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) for having allowed his members to vote freely, on sections of the bill dealing with homosexuality and we hope that the Prime Minister will let the government members vote also according to their conscience, as was established a long time ago within the Ralliement créditiste. Let us hope that the word probablement will be struck off once and for all from the omnibus bill.

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I shall be brief, but I would like to make a few remarks on the amendment proposed by the government member.

Frankly, this amendment is quite reasonable and I think that government members should at least consider the amendment moved by one of them, an amendment which reveals a certain social spirit and a certain generosity.

No amendment has been made to the bill, as if the minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) or all the members opposite considered themselves extremely strong, powerful, learned, even more so perhaps, than the Creator himself. In fact, it is a legislation which affects freedom. God wants that in a world men be born and be able to fulfill their destiny, like the Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

I wonder if the Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister would now be in their seats if their mother had made use of such an immoral and unjust legislation.

We need men, and I think the Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister are great men, of the type we need to ensure the progress of the nation. But today, we claim, perhaps like the bad angels, to be more learned than the Creator and to oppose his designs.

Mr. Speaker, as far as this bill is concerned, we are more and more frustrated, more and more annoyed by the fact that the government members and the Minister of Justice refuse to consider the point of view of the opposition. None of the amendments we proposed has been in any way adopted or even considered.

I really wonder if the minister is so convinced that the recommendations of the opposition are worthless and that his views should prevail and this bill should be adopted since what is at stake is life itself and the survival of our nation.

Mr. Speaker, I think that a country as young and vast as Canada, with tremendous resources—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I presume that all we have heard until now from the hon. member is the preamble to his speech, but after hearing his remarks submitted to the house as introductory, I would ask him to come now to the amendment before the house.

Mr. Latullipe: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that you will realize that it is rather difficult to keep exactly to the proposed amendment, because it is from this amendment that all the consequences of this bill and of abortion result. That is why we are inclined to go a little beyond the amendment which is meant only to change one word. It is a word with a special meaning and to speak about it we have to use several words and make sentences.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that you will have the opportunity to help us in trying to convince the minister. I know that everything we say will be of no use because so far nothing has been taken into account as yet. So, Mr. Speaker, we could say many things but I will limit myself to asking the minister, as the Lord, through him, is helping the nation and guiding future generations, not to go too far.

For, when it comes to analyze the divine act of creation, I believe that nobody is in a position to oppose the laws of creation. We should let the Creator fulfil His views for what He has done is well done and it does not befit us to interfere with his divine laws. I do not think we are at all qualified to interfere in the rules and commands of the Lord.

• (8:50 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Oza Tetrault (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, before I am asked to vote on Bill C-150, which will legalize the destruction of human life, I wish to make a few comments. I have come to the conclusion that the passage of this bill would create more social evils and injustices than it would cure. Killing can never be a cure. It can only be a denial of the basic right to life which we all enjoy equally before the law. To deny this right, even to so small a human being as a foetus in the womb is to deny it, in principle at least, to every citizen in Canada.

To deny that, a foetus is a living human being is to deny the scientific evidence of biologists who without exception say that human life begins at conception. This is no longer merely a religious belief or opinion; this is a proven scientific fact.

Secondly, this matter involves a change to the whole basic concept on which our laws of society are founded, the equality of all human beings before the law and the dignity of human life. It is useless to have a conference on human rights if we are about to deny the primary right of the dignity of human life, and if we are about to deny the primary right of life itself. The measure of a society is in direct proportion to the protection it gives to its weakest members.

Surely, in this great country we cannot accept the suggestion that we have no room for these innocents because we cannot feed or clothe them. What is always overlooked, however, is the experience in other countries which already have permissive abortion laws. When a country legislates to permit abortion, the demand for it is always increasing. Women become abortion-minded to such an extent that doctors and hospitals find it impossible to respond. Let us look at some of the figures from Japan.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Before the hon. members refers to the Japanese figures I should like to remind him, as I have tried to remind other hon. members who have spoken during this debate, that it is not the whole bill which is before the house at the present time but just that portion to be amended by those amendments proposed at the committee stage. These matters are open to consideration, but I must remind hon. members that their remarks must be relevant to the amendments under consideration. The hon. member should direct his remarks to the matter which is under consideration.

Mr. Tetrault: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will not continue my remarks.

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the floor just for a few minutes.

I intended to speak only for two or three minutes because the Speaker seemed slightly exasperated by all those speeches which are so very much alike but like his assistant seems quite fit, I guess I will take a few minutes more.

Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I had not planned to take the floor about this bill for I had already done so to discuss Bill C-196. Here is the reason why I now want to take part in the debate: the amendment now before us is rather short but it is worth being considered, especially since it is introduced by a Liberal member, and a French Canadian.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gauthier: I congratulate most warmly the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) who had the courage to oppose his leader and to introduce this amendment. At the outset very strict orders were issued and we were hoping that the new Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) would show a little more understanding, but that is not true, he is following the others blindly, as in the army.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Gauthier: We have here in front of us a military government and a dictatorship. I am sincerely sorry for our hon. friends opposite, for they cannot express their feelings as freely as the hon. member for Gatineau did a moment ago.

We have received many recommendations concerning this bill. I shall certainly not read all the testimonials and protests I have received.

The first brief on the first bill we dealt with was sent to us by the Quebec Association Hospital Medical Boards. All the members received it and I am sure all of them have read it. That brief gives the point of view of the doctors. It enumerates the reasons which forbid them to accept the principle of abortion, or the bill, as it is from the human and medical points of view.

We have also been made aware of the grievances of the religious authorities through the declaration of the Canadian Catholic Bishops on abortion. Catholics know where they stand.

We also received from the Alliance for Life a release on the reasons for which they oppose the bill.

At the start, as in the case of homosexuality, we tried to pull out from the omnibus bill those two articles so that they could be voted on separately. We failed all down the line. Again tonight my words fall upon deaf ears. My words run off like water on the backs of ducks. The public will know that I speak on deaf ears, because members have been given strict orders, and when the leader has spoken, they must comply. I want to move, Mr.—

Mr. Marceau: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

I point out to my hon. friend that we are not of the Ralliement Créditiste party to comply solely with what our leader has said. We have not received instructions from the Prime Minister or the Minister of Justice; the hon. member is presuming a lot. This is the second time it happens and I object to that type of accusations.

• (9:00 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether this exchange will advance the cause of the debate. The hon. member did not raise a point of order, but rather stated a grievance. I suggest that we might hear the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier). I might also mention to the hon. member for Roberval that, as the Speaker has mentioned previously, he should try to keep his remarks within the framework of the amendment that is now before the house.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, my remarks were in order. I was urging government members to support the amendment. I urge them to express their views. If they claim they were not given any guide-lines, let them speak. We only want to know their views in order to make them known to their constituents. They may be accused of having no opinion, because they remain silent.

I want to congratulate the member for Gatineau on having moved his amendment with a view to deleting at least the words "or would be likely to". And that is the purpose of my intervention.

If a few members of the party in power wanted to be sincere and at least help one of their colleagues to have the words "and would be likely to" deleted, I think many consciences would feel relieved, especially within the medical profession.

On January 19 and 22, I received a letter that all hon. members probably received also. I would like to quote part of it.

Dear Sir,

You will find herewith the opinion of the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards on the problem of abortion.

That report represents the opinion of the majority of doctors—

That brief was not submitted by lawyers but by doctors practising in the hospitals of the province of Quebec.

I continue:

We hope that this will enlighten you so that you may take a fair and just stand towards every citizen of our country.

The letter is signed by Mr. Robert Lavigne, Chairman.

The protest reads as follows and I quote:

Concerning Bill C-195 on abortion, the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards is in agreement on the following:

—that an amendment be made to the present text of the Criminal Code.

—that the procedure of case studies by therapeutic abortion committees in each hospital be agreed to.

—that the medical practioners who have decided, after a serious study within their hospital committee, to authorize a therapeutic abortion should no longer be considered as guilty under the Criminal Code.

We believe:

—that only scientific medical research will furnish the true solution to the problem under discussion and we are in favour of any study group.

—that abortion, in the present state of medical science, remains a murder perpetrated on a human being.

These statements are not mine, but those of physicians and surgeons.

I continue:

—that any medical practitioner or hospital should be free to refuse to take part in such a medical technique.

That is the reason why I congratulated the hon. member for Gatineau a while ago for he seems to share the views of the experts.

I continue the quotation:

—that as such a technique involves the life of a human being... the decision should not be left to the sole will of the patient.

We are against:

—a bill creating false hopes among the people.

Heaven knows that the Liberal party has created false hopes since it coming to power.

And I go on:

—furthermore we ask that the hospitals entitled to perform therapeutic abortions be designated by the Physicians' College in each province so as to ensure the quality of the established standards.

We conclude:

—that is why the Q.A.H.M.B. is opposed to the present wording of the proposed Bill C-195 and would like to have it amended in order to restrict it to cases presenting serious danger to the mother's life.

This is precisely why I am convinced, without having discussed it previously, that the hon. member for Gatineau, in wanting to delete the word "likely" is trying to restrict pretty much the scope of the law. If we do not remove that word, well, an unwed mother or a pregnant woman will pretend to be sick. A pregnant woman is always a little sick. Right there is ground for abortion. Right now. In the case of a mother fearing pregnancy, she will be able under the existing law to procure her miscarriage. Within a year or two this will mean disaster.

We are told that in Canada because of the pill births have dropped by 40 per cent. In two years, births will have decreased by 60 or 75 per cent. We shall no longer need the Chinese to destroy us then. We shall only need abortionists to decimate the Canadian race. We shall import immigrants to replace these people who should have lived and who were killed by abortionists. We who are in the process of passing this anti-social measure...

Well, I believe that—

Mr. Marceau: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: If that point of order is like the other previous one, Mr. Speaker, I shall continue with my comments.

• (9:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Marceau) on a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Marceau: Mr. Speaker, I believe that my hon. friend has strayed from the question. I think he is always coming back to the same point.

I believe that—

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Marceau:—nothing is said about the amendment and that comments should be limited to the text of the amendment.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I might point out to hon. members that I can only hear one point of order at a time. I think out of courtesy to the hon. member for Lapointe I should hear his point of order, after which I will decide whether he has a legitimate point of order. If, following that, the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) has another point of order, I will listen to him and decide that. I did not hear what the hon. member for Lapointe said, so possibly he would like to repeat it.

[Translation]

Mr. Marceau: Mr. Speaker, I simply wish to say that my hon. friend is not speaking about the amendment. His remarks are of a general nature and would be proper on third reading.

Mr. Gauthier: On a question of privilege—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I might point out to the hon. member that I was listening to the hon. member for Roberval fairly carefully. Sometimes it is difficult to decide whether or not he is dealing directly with the amendment. I was trying to give him as much latitude as possible, while recognizing his right to express his point of view. I think that within fairly broad limits he is in order, but I also remind him that the Standing Orders are fairly specific on this matter. We should confine our remarks to the amendment before us. I know that the hon. member for Roberval, who has been in the house for a number of years, knows this as well as I do and I am sure he will try to confine his remarks to the amendment before us.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to congratulate you for being impartial, since my remarks were in order, whereas the silence of the hon. member for Lapointe was not.

Mr. Speaker, I was finishing reading the report on the bill. The hon. member for Lapointe is trying to make me digress from the subject matter.

The amendment under consideration is the best one moved since the beginning of the debate, and I am particularly proud of it as it was moved by a Liberal member. I like it when Liberals are sincere, since I feel there are good people among the Liberal members. However, a good animal on a leash is not worth much. Just set the Liberals free, and you will see that the business of the house will be speeded up and amendments accepted.

I was saying...I have now lost the thread of my thoughts.

An hon. Member: It was not a big one.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Your thread was not a big one.

Mr. Gauthier: But the amendment is not a "big" one. Just one word. We have to speak for 20 minutes on one word, while limiting ourselves to the amendment. The hon. member for Lapointe, being a lawyer, tries to catch us digressing from the subject, but he has nothing to do. He does not digress since he does not speak.

I have another letter of protest which I should like to send to the minister—

Mr. Marceau: I rise on a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Gauthier: I realize, Mr. Speaker, that I have only three minutes left. I would then beg leave from the house to read this letter.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I see the hon. member for Lapointe wishes to rise on a question of privilege. I will hear him, as I am duty bound to do.

[Translation]

Mr. Marceau: Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw to the attention of my hon. friend the fact that he has just made a rash and untrue judgment. I have talked on second reading of the bill, I have already expressed my viewpoint and what he has said about me is not fair.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. This matter does not constitute a point of privilege.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I respect my hon. friend for Lapointe. I simply told him that he had not spoken to the amendment and that I wanted him to do so. It is not asking too much, I think.

Now, for the information of the Minister of Justice, I would like to read a letter published in Le Droit, January 30, 1969 issue, and which reads as follows:

> With respect to the abortion bill, Catholic hospitals say that they are in an awkward position.
> In a letter sent to the Minister of Justice—

So he received a letter. I go on quoting:

> —the Association of Catholic Hospitals of Canada asserts that the bill... designed to legalize, in certain conditions, therapeutic abortion, could place Catholic hospitals in awkward positions.

● (9:20 p.m.)

I am sure, once again, that it is for that reason that the hon. member for Gatineau is trying to do something about it. I continue:

> Catholic hospitals refuse to provide for such purposes premises, equipment or staff under their authority.
> Because of that position, the A.H.C.C. maintains that the bill would place Catholic hospitals in a very vulnerable position, since provincial authorities can oblige them, pursuant to the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code, to establish abortion committees in their own institutions.
> Therefore, the A.H.C.C. asks, on behalf of all its members, that a special clause be inserted in the proposed amendment to protect Catholic hospitals and their staff against the obligation of establishing such committees.

This amendment answers the desired purpose.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I too should like to congratulate the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) for having brought in an amendment to Bill C-150, in order to clarify one of its clauses and to make it clearer. However, I wonder if he went far enough.

Mr. Speaker, in rising to support that amendment, I should like to make one thing clear. Even if I support this amendment to clause 18 of Bill C-150, it does not mean that I support clause 18. I wish to mention it again quite clearly. I am against any liberalization of the legislation concerning abortion and I know that there is another amendment for deleting clause 18 of Bill C-150 and I will fully support it.

But since other amendments must be considered before that one, we must necessarily vote on them.

Then, the hon. member for Gatineau as well as my colleague for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue), who introduced similar amendments, were right when they asked the members of the house to strike out the words "or would be likely." Otherwise, it could cause trouble to those who are compelled to comply with those rules and to apply them.

As I said, I wonder if the hon. member went far enough with his amendment.

This afternoon, one of my colleagues said something that upset me. According to him, physicians are liable to make mistakes and none of them can come to a categorical conclusion as to any health condition.

It reminded me, Mr. Speaker, of a situation I heard of four or five years ago, about a woman who had come to an Abitibi hospital where she was going to have a child. The doctor who examined her just before the delivery foresaw some difficulties. Thinking that he would have to make a Caesarean section and anxious to make a good job, before he quite made up his mind, the doctor consulted two of his colleagues. While they were talking, the woman was giving birth to her child in the delivery room without undue trouble.

This goes to show that people may often make mistakes, even if they are the greatest physicians, scientists or experts in the world. Then, Mr. Speaker, in view of this irrepressible doubt, we have cause for concern and doctors responsible for the life of human beings are concerned too whenever they have to run this risk. That accounts for the determination of the members of the Ralliement créditiste to take all available means to convince the government of the need to be very careful in connection with the amendment to the Criminal Code dealing with abortion.

Mr. Speaker, this determination results from the requests of persons who are interested in the well-being of patients and of mothers who are to give birth to children.

The question came up: Is the government truly concerned with protecting the life and the health of women? The proposed amendment seeks also to add that when a doctor —has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person—

Yes, a female person.

—would or would be likely—

"Probably" means "perhaps".

—to endanger her life or health.

Then was added to the amendment the word "health", for the bill already contained the expression "to endanger the life of a female person".

• (9:30 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, if the government wants to make health a reason for justifying abortion, one wonders what it will do next. Bill C-150 includes provisions on homosexuality and abortion. Who knows, perhaps next year a bill will be introduced on artificial insemination for human beings? A stop must be put immediately to this excessive liberalizing of the Criminal Code.

Mr. Speaker, when I heard this afternoon—

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I presume the hon. member wants to put a question. The hon. member for Abitibi has the floor and a question may be put to him only if he agrees to it.

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Would the hon. member permit a question? Would he agree that if his party were not so illiberal in its attitude toward homosexuals it would not have to be so illiberal on the question of abortion?

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I shall reply to my hon. friend, that as a Créditiste and a Catholic, I consider myself one of the most liberal members of this house. I recognize freedom for everybody, but I do not admit abuse of liberty.

I shall have the opportunity, later on in the debate, of putting one of his colleagues straight.

This afternoon, when I heard the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) question the wisdom of the amendment proposed by the government—if I understood him correctly, he was in favour of the amendment of his colleague from Gatineau—I wondered whether the amendment went far enough and, to improve it, to complete it, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin):

That Bill C-150, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, etc., be amended by deleting, in clause 18, on line 4 on page 43, the words "or would be likely to" and inserting therefor the words "according to medical science".

Mr. Speaker, my purpose in moving this subamendment, is to improve this legislation even further and to recognize the importance of the associations, in order to express confidence in the decisions they will take on each application for abortion that is presented to them.

Mr. Speaker: I have here the amendment just proposed by the hon. member and I must say that I doubt very much that it is in order.

I am ready to make a decision on the spot if the hon. member so desires.

Some hon. members might want to express their point of view but I must remind them that the only thing they are allowed to do at this stage is to amend the amendment itself, but not to amend the clause that the amendment under consideration is trying to amend.

In other words, the hon. member is trying to go back to a previous stage of the debate or to go beyond the terms of the motion now before the house by amending the clause itself. This is clearly out of order.

If the hon. members want to make some comment, I shall listen to them before making a decision.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I am sure your remarks are quite timely, but, with your permission, I would like to present a few arguments which, in our opinion, justify the submission of this amendment to the amendment and make it in order.

First of all, we believe, Mr. Speaker, that under Standing Order 75(8), it is possibly, at this stage of the report of the committee, and I quote:

When the order of the day—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I remind the hon. member that it is not the matter put to the house for consideration at the moment. Nobody denies the hon. member the right to present a subamendment. I admit that the hon. member can, under the rules to which he has just referred to present a subamendment.

[Mr. Laprise.]

What I am telling him now is that the subamendment does not seem to be in order and that is the point on which I would like to hear his arguments.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I now come down to this specific question.

The subamendment proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) says this; and I quote:

—be amended by substituting the words "or would be likely to", by the words: "according to medical science".

So, there are two things. The deletion of the words "or would be likely to" and their replacement by the words "according to medical science".

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the amendment before the house moved by the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) tended to delete the words "or would be likely to", but suggested nothing positive to replace them.

On the other hand, if the words "or would be likely to", are deleted, any sub-amendment must be related to the main amendment. That is why the hon. member for Abitibi thought perhaps of replacing the words: "or would be likely to" by the expression: "according to medical science".

Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the terms "according to medical science" are related to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau since it merely tends to make it more acceptable, and that it is directly related to the amendment, and not necessarily to the bill.

This is why, Mr. Speaker, I believe, in accordance with the clause I was quoting, we have linked up the sub-amendment to the amendment so that it is acceptable.

[English]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I argued yesterday for the right of an hon. member to move an amendment with which I did not happen to agree. Tonight, however, I must argue against an amendment with which I do not agree. I think I can do it briefly.

It has already been established under Standing Order 75, paragraph (8), that an amendment to a motion that has been put down at the report stage is in order. However, I submit that this amendment is faulty on two grounds. In the first place, it is not drafted in the form of an amendment to the motion that is before the house; it is drafted in the form of an amendment to the bill itself.

Mr. Rondeau: No.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): The hon. member says no, but even with the limited amount of French that I understand I can assert that it is. The amendment is to section 18 of the bill, and specifically to line 4 on page 43. Section 18, line 4, on page 43 of the bill is not before the house at this time. What is before the house is an amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont).

The other ground on which the amendment is faulty is that it violates the rule of relevancy. While an amendment may be in order at this stage, it must be relevant. I am thinking in particular of citations 202 and 203, and the various paragraphs of those citations, in Beauchesne's fourth edition.

I submit that the hon. member for Gatineau proposes merely to drop certain words. The hon. member who is now proposing an amendment is introducing a new concept, that of bringing medical science into the picture, and surely this is going beyond the substance of the motion he seeks to amend. Therefore, on those two grounds, I submit that while an amendment at this stage is in order, the present amendment itself is not in order.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lotbinière has already expressed his views and hon. members know that the Chair can make a ruling when all the arguments have been submitted. However, I would not want to be unfair towards hon. members and if others want to express their views, I will gladly listen to them, in order to reach a fair and equitable decision.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, on the amendment just moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) it is obvious that it is not an amendment to the bill itself. The amendment proposed by the hon. member is an amendment to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont). It relates not to the bill itself, but to clause 18, where the words "would be likely to" would be replaced by "according to medical science".

I think that this amendment automatically relates to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau and that it is fully relevant. I trust your judgment, Mr. Speaker, but this amendment is in accordance with standing order 75(8). As the debate, since this afternoon, has been on the amendment moved by the hon. member for Gatineau, we want to clarify the intention of the hon. member who merely deplored a factual situation about which the legislation is ambiguous.

As for the linguistic aspect, we wanted to clarify his thought by suggesting that the words "according to medical science" should replace "would be likely to".

For those reasons, I think that this amendment complies with the procedural rules.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Shefford repeated exactly the argument brought forward by the hon. member for Lotbinière. I do not see why we should listen over and over again to the same argument.

I must point out to the hon. member for Shefford, as I said earlier, that his proposed subamendment is not in order for at least one reason.

I suggest to the hon. member that this amendment is of the kind which could have been proposed under standing order 75, that is to say by giving notice of it before the motions are considered in the house. Once the motions have been proposed—there are 43 or 44 of them I think—the house must consider particular amendments or specific motions proposed by the members and only such motions can be the subject of a subamendment under Standing order 75(8).

What the hon. members can do now is to propose a subamendment to the motion of the hon. member for Gatineau, because they cannot introduce an amendment to change section 18 of the bill under consideration. I suggest to the member for Abitibi and to the other members that the motion of the member for Abitibi is in fact intended to amend clause 18 of Bill C-150 and not the motion of the hon. member for Gatineau.

In fact, the motion of the hon. member for Gatineau is so simple that it would be difficult I think to imagine an amendment which could be in order. Therefore under the circumstances, I find it impossible, even if I wanted to be as tolerant as the Rules allow me, to accept the subamendment proposed by the member for Abitibi.

I thank hon. members who have been good enough to enlighten me and to advise me, but I must say I am in full agreement with the arguments of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I have not had the opportunity—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member having already taken part in the debate on this amendment can not speak a second time of course.

Mr. Clermont, seconded by Mr. Comtois moved that Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to" on line 4 on page 43.

[English]

The question is on motion No. 26 (Mr. Clermont). Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 75(11) the recorded division on the said motion stands deferred until after consideration of proposed motion No. 28.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi) moved amendment No. 27:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "a female person who, being pregnant," on lines 29 and 30 on page 42 and by inserting the following words:

[Mr. Speaker.]

"—a female person who is married or of the full age of twenty-one years, or a female person who is under the full age of twenty-one years, with the written consent of her parents or guardian."

Mr. Speaker, I moved another amendment to clause 18 of Bill C-150, in another attempt to clarify the bill. I want to replace the words "a female person who, being pregnant," in paragraph (b) subsection 4 of clause 18 of the bill, by the words "married or of age or a female person under age, with the written consent of her parents or guardian".

Mr. Speaker, that amendment stipulates that only married women or those of full age will be allowed to call, on their own, on a medical practitioner or an abortion committee, should clause 18 be agreed to. However, if the pregnant woman is a minor, she should first get an authorization from her parents or guardians.

Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask parliament to agree to that specific point, so that the relaxing of the law will not cause a mad rush for abortion. We are told already that many people seem to believe that the amendment to the Criminal Code now under study will open the door to various types of abortion for any person wishing to get an abortion. That is the common belief among the public. The same belief prevails, among the public concerning the amendment to clause 7 of bill C-150: homosexuality would be quite legal and allowed. That is what the bill led the public to believe, and people are already talking about it in Montreal.

The same thing will happen, Mr. Speaker, as concerns the relaxing of the abortion law. I believe that clause 18 should spell out that only married women or persons of full age could ask for an abortion on their own. If they so wished, they could, under the provisions of the act, meet a responsible and qualified medical practitioner and be directed to a committee made up of two or three medical practitioners—I know that other amendments on the same subject will be discussed a little later on—who could then decide whether they may get an abortion.

That concerns a married woman of the full age of twenty-one years or a single person of the full age of twenty-one years. However, the unmarried girl under the full age of twenty-one years, will have to get authority from her parents or guardian, that is to say that the committee, it it must decide to procure an abortion for her, should get the written consent of her parents or guardian.

Mr. Speaker, I think that with the insertion of that detail in clause 18 of the bill, once more difficulties would be avoided.

If my memory serves me well, it was necessary in the province of Quebec until recently to obtain the father's authorization, for instance in the case of a person under the full age of twenty-one years applying for a driver's licence or any other thing normally granted only to persons over the full age of twenty-one years. The Civil Code of Quebec will be amended soon and the mother will also be able to give her consent if it is impossible to find the father or if he refuses. I therefore think the federal government should use discretion so as not to go beyond the provisions of the provincial laws. That is why I ask for an explanation on clause 18 of Bill C-150. Mr. Speaker, I think it would be important to have the opinion of the hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) as well as that of his colleagues and other members of the house. I think that, pursuant to Standing Order 75, the amendment has been tabled early enough to enable members of the house to take notice of it and to appraise it.

I want once more to point out quite clearly that this amendment has been moved with some reservation. I moved it in case clause 18 would be agreed to. However, if the amendment tending to delete clause 18 is agreed to my amendment would not hold out any more. But in case amendment No. 19 were not rejected, I would then ask the house to pass my proposed amendment.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), had considered asking this evening to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) his opinion on this amendment, but I thought it advisable to rise, in order to enable him to think about it until tomorrow afternoon. It is a serious, logical and judicious amendment, because the hon. member for Abitibi wishes to amend clause 18 by substituting to the words " . . . a female person who, being pregnant" the words "who is married or of age, or a female person under age with the written consent of her parents or guardian."

Now, we are considering a most serious amendment, because how can we imagine that a pregnant girl of 17 years of age could have an abortion without the consent of her parents?

It is possible that a young girl, who could be an only child, for instance, becomes pregnant and would like to get an abortion, without the consent of her father who could be anxious to be a grandfather. The girl might want to interrupt her pregnancy for all kinds of social considerations or not to let her parents know. Then, because the law authorizes her to get abortion without the knowledge of her parents, the father could one day learn about it and realize he missed an unique opportunity to become a grandfather.

From that point of view, I believe the girl's father has a right, as far as his grandson is concerned.

Moreover, if his daughter, one day, is remiss in her duties towards her child.—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It being ten o'clock it is my duty to put the questions to be debated at this time.

[English]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

TRANSPORT—BORDEN-TORMENTINE FERRY RATES

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I regret that the other day when asking the Minister of Transport (Mr. Hellyer) about the ferries between Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, I directed my question to the wrong terminal and it ended up with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) who immediately disclaimed responsibility for the cargo and the container. I did not know, in the few days following my question, there would be such change and turmoil as developed in connection with the Minister of Transport.

It is not new, Mr. Speaker, for representatives of the province of Prince Edward Island to be addressing this chamber on questions of transportation. Indeed, the Fathers of Confederation from my province over one hundred years ago very wisely put transportation at the top of the list of priorities. The Province of Prince Edward Island entered Confederation on the promise of "continuous and efficient communication with the mainland". The people of Prince Edward Island were assured that, as far as humanly possible, the province's insular geographic disabilities would be overcome as a result of national governmental policies. We were to be made a part of the national railway system, or I should say more precisely we were to be made a fully integral part of the national system of transportation, whatever contemporary technology made that system to be.

The issue today is acute, Mr. Speaker. Our promised causeway, on which $15 million has already been spent, has now been finally thrown into the ashcan of unfulfilled obligations. The building of the causeway was not just an election promise but a commitment of one level of government to another, made over and over again by the representatives of the dominion government to the representatives of Prince Edward Island in this parliament of Canada. One must say, and one must always say if he believes in federalism, that without full faith and credit between the various levels of government within a federation, the functioning of federalism is difficult if not impossible.

I had today brought to my desk an old newspaper, the Charlottetown Guardian of February 2nd, 1967, dealing with the causeway in which the then Minister of Public Works, now the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) who is doing other things in other places, was reported as having assured me that by 1970—and note the precision, Mr. Speaker—2,004 people would be employed as a result of work that would be undertaken by the causeway. The year preceding that there were to be 1,833 people employed, and the year preceding that there were to be 1,549 people employed. After 1970, he did not wish to predict.

But with the causeway discarded, how cruel to pile Pelion upon Ossa in our terrain of discontent. Surely, this is too much even for the smallest province of Canada. Now, the C.N.R. wishes to increase the rates, and the government is going along with this iniquitous suggestion. I have two comments to make on this suggestion. The first is that while the Government of Canada, rightly or wrongly, decided to farm out this ferry service to the C.N.R. it did not thereby divest itself of its constitutional or indeed moral responsibilities in the field of interprovincial transportation. The mode of communication in transportation between one province and another is a very, very important federal responsibility.

[Mr. Macquarrie.]

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, long ago in the days of the Bennett government, the operating deficit on this ferry service was transferred from the C.N.R. account to a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada. In other words, there was a fiscal recognition of the dominion government's obligation to join province to province. What is confederation all about if not at least that? Therefore, the C.N.R. need not penalize the people of P.E.I. and its neighbouring provinces in any exceptional and unique exercise in economy. Their job is to provide adequate service as agents for the Government of Canada, the government which is solemnly committed to provide full and ample service.

It is presumptuous of the C.N.R., with government connivance, to seek to impose excessive tolls on transportation between P.E.I. and the rest of Canada. To what other province of Canada do we pay admission? Does it cost to enter Ontario, to enter Quebec, to enter Manitoba, or any other province in this dominion except Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland? Why must so high a price be paid by those of us who were born on islands?

We live in an age where discrimination is regarded as an evil ingredient of social life, and properly so. Why, then, is this kind of discrimination tolerated, yea fostered by the government of all Canada and of all Canadians? I ask that this measure be not proceeded with and that the government look into, by means of a modern device such as a task force or some other form of investigation, the prospect not of increasing the tolls or of holding them as they are but of abolishing them altogether. This, at least, would be something of a consolation prize for the long promised and much desired causeway now consigned to 60 years of neglect by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) of the just society. Surely, upon the corpse of our causeway hopes anything less would be inadequate.

Mr. Gérard Loiselle (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I have a very short and sweet reply to the hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarie) in respect of tariffs on the Borden—Tormentine Ferry. The acting minister advises that the government's decision concerning passenger and automobile rate changes on the Borden-Tormentine Ferry will be announced in the very near future.

INDUSTRY—DEVCO—COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF MINERS

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, earlier this week I put a question to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) with regard to the Devco corporation, asking that the officials take account of the situation in respect of the Crown Corporation Devco and the suggested compulsory retirement situation. I wanted to know why the minister supported the plan for this compulsory retirement at between age 60 and 65.

It has been brought to my attention that in respect of this voluntary aspect of the situation Devco suggests the employees or dependants of persons employed by the company in coal mining and related work will fall into a similar category. Surely, the minister is aware, as is the Prime Minister, that this case will wind up in court. The final solution, I suggest, will be worked out as a result of a judgment by the court. In seeking a reply to the question I requested further information from the government, but the Prime Minister again referred this matter to the minister who has some responsibility. In spite of the fact that this company has spent some $20 million in respect of this retirement situation, and the reference of this matter to a minister who in fact has nothing whatever to do with the situation, I suggest the government should take a second look at the matter and refer it to another minister who perhaps might have some responsibility.

The Prime Minister's response was that something was being done about it, and that the responsible minister was actively engaged in doing something about the situation. However, my information is that in response to the efforts which have been made, nothing has been done. That is why I feel this situation will wind up in a court case.

I asked the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) a week ago if some answers could be given to the questions posed to the law officers about his last answers in the house, in respect of this matter. He did not give any positive answer, but suggested that the committee chairman, and no one else, could perhaps deal with the answers at this time.

It was my understanding when we were dealing with Section 18 of the act to establish the Cape Breton Development Corporation which provided for the establishment of pension arrangements for the benefit of persons and dependants of persons formerly employed by the companies in connection with coal mining, related works and undertakings formerly operated by the companies, a permanent secretary was to be appointed to look into appropriate legislation.

It may be that Devco assumes it is looking after this obligation, but this is not the case. This has not been the case in respect of any works or undertakings formerly operated or carried on by the company. This has never been the policy in respect of the situation which even now exists. This is the substance of the matter in respect of which I asked the question.

The miners have been pensioned off by the former company since 1953. The moment they qualified for old age security payments, $40 was knocked off the original $75, on the basis that the coal company had contributed toward the old age security payments. This is nonsense. It should never have been done. I argued this question many times with the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Munro) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) when the Canada Pension Plan was set up. I maintain that this was not a pension but was a gratuity, because there was no such agreement between the union and the company.

I hope that Devco will at least restore to these former workers the $40 that has been lopped off by the Dominion Coal Company, because the legislation makes this mandatory. The Interpretation Act provides that the word "shall" is imperative. It has been laid down that the workers shall compulsorily retire at age 60. Therefore, this government will have to give these miners, former employees, what is theirs according to the legislation passed by parliament.

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think it is only about a week ago that we reviewed this matter. I indicated then that I thought the hon. member was a little confused, and I have no reason to think that he is any less confused tonight.

Mr. MacInnis: Nonsense. This is something entirely new. Let us have the truth. You did not give it to me last week. This will be a question of privilege, if you want to make something of it.

Mr. Honey: Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend repeats, shouts and raves, but I do not like—

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether this is the way in which we should proceed. We have heard the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis), and the parliamentary secretary now has three minutes in which to reply.

Mr. Honey: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In his remarks the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond referred to compulsion being used. I reject that suggestion out of hand; it is not the case. The hon. member again reiterated his former complaint about the legality of the action taken. I assure him that the matter has been approved and authorized by the law officers of the crown. I think this is the third time I have said that—

Mr. MacInnis: That is a lie.

Mr. Honey: It is a little difficult for me and hon. members of the house to understand why my hon. friend is so persistent in this matter. He has had the answer time and time again to this question. He has persisted, and I suggest to him respectfully that he is arguing against the interests of the people in his constituency. I should like to refer to a report in the Halifax Chronicle-Herald of April 23, under the headline "MacInnis Asked to 'Cool It' by UMW". The article reads:

> No. 12 local union of the United Mine Workers has told Cape Breton-East Richmond member of parliament Donald MacInnis to "cool it."
> The New Waterford miners, in a special meeting, decided to send a telegram to Mr. MacInnis—

I hope the hon. member received that telegram.

> —scoring "his destructive attitude towards Devco's plan."

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry, but the parliamentary secretary's time has expired.

AGRICULTURE—ST. PAUL, ALBERTA—PROTEST AGAINST FARM INCOMES

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): May I say at the outset, Mr. Speaker, that I am very pleased that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) is able to be in the house this evening to discuss what I feel is a very important and urgent matter. I wish to raise the question of the serious deterioration in farm income in the past seven months in western Canada, and particularly in the north-east central portion of Alberta, the area of St. Paul and Bonnyville. My question was prompted by the protest meeting by the farmers of this district which took place in the town of St. Paul, attracting in excess of 800 people last Monday.

I believe it is reasonable to assume that, in general, farmers are quite patient, willing and able to take their share of knocks, as they certainly have. However, when conditions continue to deteriorate with no immediate sign of improvement, with no significant sign of government interest, and no alternative means of securing a decent living, then I believe protests and lobbies are justified.

At a time when seeding and spring field operations are about to commence, farmers are confronted with a critical shortage of cash. The average return per bushel of wheat delivered to elevators in this area amounts to approximately $1.03. Most farmers last fall were forced to seek maximum cash advances, with the result that now, upon delivery, half of their return is deducted to be applied to the advance which was received last fall. As a result, the farmers are receiving an average net of roughly 50 cents per bushel.

The difficult conditions in this area are further aggravated by the fact that generally a large part of this area is a newly developing district, and by the fact that farmers have experienced three or four crop failures prior to this year. The problem that is foreseen now is that if some form of relief does not come in the near future, if markets do not improve, if deliveries are not more adequately accommodated, and if income is not upgraded, farmers will be confronted with a very grave difficulty in clearing their present cash loans on stored grain. They will thus experience much hardship in acquiring new cash advances this fall.

One alternative of course is to launch an all-out aggressive wheat selling campaign, something which this government has failed to do. We have not even been given any assurance that they might try. We have been given no indication of whether or not Russia might exercise her option of picking up 150 million bushels as part of the three year, long term agreement which I believe expires at the end of July.

We have been given no indication of any exploration of new markets. Japan has indicated its lack of interest in Canadian wheat and has elected, just recently, to purchase further large orders from Australia, the United States, and even Bulgaria for the first time. Perhaps Japan has reason to do what it has done. To date, we have failed to settle with the Japanese for a shipment of wheat which was of a low grade quality or which was damaged by rain. Furthermore, I am sure they have not forgotten the bungling and mismanagement in loading their ships in Vancouver harbour this winter. We have seen many trade junkets to Asia and Japan but we have see no action, no orders, no sales, no sales programs—just lots of talk.

I suppose that now we shall have to wait perhaps for the resignation of the Minister of Agriculture before any action is taken with regard to western agriculture. The business community in the area to which I referred has also felt these adverse effects. During the period from January 1 to April 30, 1969, the area to which I referred experienced the following decrease in the level of sales as compared with the corresponding period last year. Machinery sales have decreased by 66 per cent; sales of fertilizer have decreased some 60 per cent; feed and prepared supplements have decreased by 15 per cent; hardware supplied by 38 per cent; clothing supplies by 20 per cent; machinery repairs by 55 per cent; and groceries by 10 per cent. So, it becomes very evident that if conditions of this nature continue hardship will be caused in the business community as well. Furthermore, there is a very strong indication of the fact that accounts receivable are being consolidated, and abnormal borrowings are being negotiated from banks and other lending institutions to liquidate accounts receivable which are being carried by the local business concerns. In other words, it would appear that farmers in this area are living on borrowed time.

We on this side of the house are rather disappointed at the government's lack of concern for western agriculture. We are also disappointed about the attitude of some of the western cabinet ministers. I do not refer particularly to the Minister of Agriculture. Many of the questions we pose during the question period are answered in a flippant or arrogant manner, as if to say these matters are none of our concern. In many cases we get no answer at all. Farmers are at a loss to know what to plant this year. Many are turning to coarse grains and oil seeds. Here, too, we must follow an aggressive sales policy; surely, we can produce far more than we can feed to our own livestock. I cannot understand our failure to develop the potential of the feed grain markets of eastern Canada. This being so, how can we expect to sell our produce abroad? The point I am making is that our marketing arrangements as a whole are in need of a major shake-up. I believe the policies of the Wheat Board have to become more flexible and ought to be upgraded. This is where government leadership is necessary, and until it is provided some form of assistance must be forthcoming.

I, therefore, plead with the government, asserting that western agriculture requires help, and requires it badly, now. Let it be in the form of an acreage payment or of a direct grant, or in the form of supplementary income to provide farmers with a decent living as a short term measure. If something is not done soon, the wave of protests we are now witnessing could grow and expand, conceivably leading to a form of violence. The agriculture community is communicating a message, Mr. Speaker. I take this opportunity to warn the government that it had better pick up the receiving unit and start listening. It had better start listening carefully to these submissions and institute proposals for overcoming a condition which could well develop into a crisis more severe than any we have witnessed before.

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): I think the hon. member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) would agree that in the three minutes allowed to me to reply I could not make even a cursory examination of all the economic factors involved in the subjects he raised.

I would remind him that the Standing Committee on Agriculture is now in the process of preparing recommendations following its observations during a tour of western Canada when a first hand look was taken at some of the areas affected by the problems the hon. member has raised.

In the question he asked yesterday, the hon. member had something to say about the timing of government programs and policies for dealing with these measures. If the government were to make an announcement respecting precisely the matters which the committee is considering, it would not show the kind of respect I have for this house and for its committees. Surely, if the committee is prepared to come forward with a report in a very few days, the government ought to respect it sufficiently at least to provide enough time for the preparation of that report, which is being done, as far as I am aware, as rapidly as possible.

I am sure we intend to take very seriously the observations and recommendations of that committee. After all, that was the purpose of the tour of western Canada by the committee earlier this month. Within the three minutes allowed me, I think that answers the question in the narrow context in which it was placed on Hansard yesterday. The hon. member, as usual, expanded it tonight because he is allowed seven mintues compared with my three.

The hon. member mentioned one or two other positive things that have been done, such as doubling cash advances, which must have been of help to the farmers in that area. They would have been able to get cash to take care of costs incurred last fall and through the winter.

I do not try to contend that this is a complete answer to the problem, which is a very serious one. However, I do not accept his contention that the Canadian government or the agencies of the farmers, such as the Canadian Wheat Board and other bodies involved, are doing anything less than the full amount that they think is advisable in a sales promotion campaign. There is a very vigorous sales promotion campaign in regard to all cereals and other crops which can be grown on this land. I see my time has expired.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I am afraid the minister's time has expired.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.28 p.m.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

REFERENCE OF RAILWAY REPORTS TO STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, hon. members will recall that the house made an order referring the report of the Canadian National Railways and Air Canada to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications. As the house will also recall, the 1968 Annual Report of the C.N.R. is now available, and if the house is agreeable I should like to recommend an order whereby the report of the C.N.R. for the year ended December 31, 1968, and the report of the Canadian National Railways Securities Trust for the year ended December 31, 1968, both tabled on April 24, 1969, be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications. If the house is generally agreeable to that, perhaps that could be made an order of the house.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: It is so ordered.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

STATEMENT BY MINISTER RESPECTING PASSPORTS—REPAYMENT OF FEES—STAFF OVERTIME

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I promised the other day that I would make a brief statement on the passport situation. The passport office is going through its peak period—12,500 applications were received last week—and the present volume of applications is expected to continue with only slight easement until mid June.

I realize that this situation has created inconvenience for some members of the travelling public, and the following measures have been taken to cut down the delays:

(a) We are in the process of adding additional accommodation to the passport office which will improve the efficiency of operations and provide room for additional staff. Simultaneously as the program of renovation proceeds, we are adding additional staff;

(b) Nine departmental staff who in the past have had experience in passport work have been drafted on a temporary basis. In addition, during the course of the next two weeks some 27 students who worked in the passport office last summer will be returning to their jobs;

(c) The passport office staff has increased its daily overtime and will work Saturday until the present situation is resolved. The implementation of this policy takes into account individual staff problems, and we hope that Saturday work will not be required beyond the present week.

(d) Three additional telephone lines, for a total of six, have been installed in the special ternoon, has been on the amendment moved

(e) The staff of examiners has been reorganized in groups of five, each working under a leader. During the course of this week each group leader will be equipped with a telephone. If a form is not properly filled, he will be able to speak to the applicant by telephone to let him know what more information or documentation is required. This should cut down on time consuming exchanges of correspondence;

(f) During the course of a few days I intend to launch an advertising campaign to assist the public to obtain passports without undue delay.

May I add that all applicants could assist the passport office by initiating their applications at an early date, by taking greater care in the completion of their applications, and by insuring that they have submitted the necessary documentation, photos and fee.

I should perhaps add answers to a couple of questions that were asked me and which I promised to answer. The first was a question about the repayment of refunding of fees to persons who cannot obtain requisite service or who cannot obtain their passports. If the passport office is unable to issue a passport for various reasons, or an applicant fails within a reasonable period to reply to a request for additional information or documentation to substantiate his entitlement, the fee is automatically refunded after due warning by two follow-up letters.

If an applicant informs the passport office that he is forced to cancel his travel plans, photographs and any documents submitted will be returned and the fee refunded. If in such a case an application has reached the stage in production where the document is being prepared, or already has been issued, the document is however forwarded. I suggest that at this stage it would be unreasonable for the passport office to refund the fee in view of the administration costs that have been invested. In any event, the passport when issued is normally valid for five years. The chances are, therefore, that the cancelled trip might be taken in the season or in an ensuing year.

There was also a question about payment of overtime to the staff of the passport office. There is no authorization to pay clerical employees for overtime at rates higher than those already established by the Treasury Board. When collective bargaining agreements have been ratified by the union membership, overtime will be compensated at time and a half and employees working on Sundays and holidays will be paid at a higher rate.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): I think Members of Parliament will agree that despite all the difficulties under which they work the employees of the passport office have shown patience in the face of what amounts to intolerable working conditions and hours. It is because the passport office enjoys such a low priority—I say this with great frankness—in the affairs of the department, that these conditions have not been remedied long ago.

[Mr. Sharp.]

I hope that when the minister begins his advertising campaign people will be told in plain language how to go about obtaining not only birth certificates but citizenship. There has been a crisis in this division for some months. Many hon. members have hesitated to raise this matter, feeling that to do so might only add to the problems which the overworked division is experiencing. I am glad the minister has finally recognized that conditions are altogether intolerable. Members of all parties have been subjected to forceful importuning over the last few months by citizens whose mail, telegrams or telephone calls have not been answered by the passport office.

I regret the program did not include the simple step of opening offices in other cities in Canada, as announced by the government some months ago. Heaven knows, there are plenty of facilities in our major cities for the receipt of passport applications. The government might follow the example set for some years in the United Kingdom, by decentralizing its passport system so that people could obtain passports in many places across Canada.

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): The calm statement we have just heard from the minister belies the absolute chaos which exists in the passport office at this moment. We are facing an emergency situation and the government has been caught completely unprepared.

It is a situation which is intolerable. There are more people travelling today than ever, and these people are being seriously inconvenienced. At every airport in this country there are cases of passengers waiting for passports which have not arrived and which will not arrive.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Saltsman: I do not know the reason for those comments from members on the other side. Apparently they do not admit there is any kind of urgency here, though I believe every member of this house knows that there is an emergency. Indeed there is a tendency for this house to bog down because Members of Parliament are almost totally occupied looking after passport problems. Something has to be done about this.

I was over at the passport office yesterday, and the way in which those girls have to work under existing conditions is absolutely inhuman. How those girls can stand it, I don't know. Telephones are ringing and the girls are running around. The more confusion that exists, the fewer passports issued. No relief is in sight as far as I can see.

The idea of regional offices, whatever their merit may be, does not offer any solution; I wonder whether it could be a solution anyway. In regard to unemployment insurance the government asked the public to use the mails. It is now talking of reversing the process.

I do not think that the government does have a policy or has one clue about what to do in this situation. The minister talks of refunding the money paid for passports. Is he also going to refund the money people lose because they could not make a charter flight? There are more significant expenditures involved than just the passport fee.

The passport office was designed to operate at a nice, leisurely pace. That leisurely pace has now disappeared. I hope the minister will reply to the suggestion that an emergency does exist, and that he appoint an emergency controller for the passport office immediately to investigate what the problem in the office is, and get the situation cleared up. The minister's statement today is not one designed to instil any confidence for the future.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, if we were not aware of the facts in respect of the passport problem, we could believe that the opinions expressed by the hon. member who has just resumed his seat are exaggerated. But, it happens that we have had to help several persons to obtain their passports. We, of the Ralliement Créditiste, are experiencing the same difficulties and we must address the same criticisms to the minister because he has not taken in time the necessary steps to prevent such occurrences.

On the other hand, we are not blaming the officials of the passport office who, up to now, have fully co-operated with us.

However, since there has been in the last few months such an increase in the number of applications for passports, the minister's statement was, I think, too long in coming. We also believe that he did not resort to the proper means to alleviate the situation, because the problem is growing worse every month.

AMENDMENTS CLARIFYING DEFINITIONS AND DEALING WITH THE INTEREST RATE ON INSURED LOANS, AND WITH OTHER MATTERS

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk).

BERTHIER—SOREL FERRY SERVICE

Question No. 1,739—Mr. Caouette:

1. Has the government considered, or is it considering, or will it, in the near future, consider the inauguration of a ferry service between Berthier and Sorel?

2. Has a study to this effect been made or will such a study be made?

3. If not, for what reasons?

4. If so, what are the government's plans?

5. At the present time, what means of transportation are available to these citizens to enable them to travel between Sorel and Berthier?

6. At the present time, what is the shortest route between Sorel and Berthier?

7. How many people from Berthier are presently working in Sorel?

8. How many people from Sorel are presently working in Berthier?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: 1. A ferry service is on operation between Berthier (Ile St. Ignace) and Sorel.

2. See answer to question one.

3. See answer to question one.

4. See answer to question one.

5. Ferry service operating all year long.

6. One mile and a half via ferry.

7. Ferry operators report that 250 to 300 people work in Sorel and Tracy.

8. Ferry operators report approximately 15.

LAW OF THE SEA LEGISLATIVE CHANGES

Question No. 1,842—Mr. Harding:

1. What specific legislative changes did Canada make as a result of becoming a signatory to the

Questions

Final Act of the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1958?

2. What steps have been taken to define Canada's territorial sea?

3. What steps have been taken to define Canada's inland waters?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Canada has not taken any specific legislative action as a result of becoming a signatory to the Final Act of the 1958 United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. However, in 1964 Parliament passed the Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones Act which took into account certain provisions of the 1958 Geneva Convention on the Territorial Sea and Contiguous Zone. This statute also necessitated the passage of certain consequential amendments to the Aeronautics Act, the Canada Shipping Act, the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act, the Criminal Code, the Customs Act and the Fisheries Act. Certain provisions of the Geneva Convention on the Territorial Sea are also reflected in the Oil Pollution Regulations of September, 1968.

2. Canada's territorial sea has been defined by the Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones Act and also by an initial list of geographical coordinates for the establishment of straight baselines pursuant to Order-in-Council P.C. 1967-2025 of October 26, 1967.

3. It is presumed that the term "inland waters" refers to the internal waters of Canada. Pursuant to the 1964 Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones Act these include the waters on the landward side of the baselines of the territorial sea of Canada. These waters have been defined in the same manner described in the reply to part 2 above.

MILK AND BUTTERFAT PRODUCERS

Question No. 1,911—Mr. Korchinski:

1. How many registered milk and butterfat producers were there in the last three years in each province?

2. For the last three years, what amount of subsidy was paid to these producers in each province (a) for the production of whole milk (b) for the production of butterfat?

3. For the last three years, what was the maximum production upon which a subsidy was paid, in each province?

4. In each of the years that the phasing out policy has been in effect, how many producers in each province received payment and what amount was paid?

5. In each of the last three years, including 1969, on what date was the dairy policy announced?

[Mr. Harding.]

CO-OPERATIVES AS A HOUSING INVESTMENT BANK

Question No. 1,931—Mr. Beaudoin:

Are discussions being held to establish co-operatives which will become a housing investment bank as was recommended in the Hellyer Task Force Report?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Discussions have been held with representatives of the National Labour-Co-operative Committee regarding the establishment of a Co-operative Housing Foundation designed to promote and provide technical assistance by local and regional housing associations serving the interests of low and moderate income groups.

While the supply of mortgage funds is being kept under review no action has been taken towards the establishment of new forms of lending institutions.

RETURN OF CENTENNIAL MEDALS

Question No. 1,932—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many Centennial Medals awarded to recipients have been returned to the government and are they to be awarded to other Canadians and, if so, who will be the recipients?

2. Have all Centennial Medals been distributed and, if not, how many are available for distribution and what are the terms of reference for distribution?

3. What units and/or formations did not receive any allotment of Centennial Medals and why were awards not made and is it because the units did not have any worthy (a) Officers (b) N.C.Os. (c) Men?

4. Was the allocation of Centennial Medals to military units awarded in accordance with the "actual strength" or "paper strength"?

5. Did the Officers of any militia unit in Canada receive more than three Centennial Medals and, if so, which units?

6. Were all Centennial Medals allotted to the militia distributed and, if not, how many are still available for distribution?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Defence and Secretary of State as follows: 1. Eleven Centennial Medals were returned. These medals were not reallocated but are maintained as a reserve from which replacement of lost medals may be made.

2. Distribution of the Centennial Medal is complete.

3, 4 and 5. See reply to your question 737, Hansard dated 25 November, 1968, pages 3125-6, and supplementary reply tabled 15 January, 1969—(Votes and Proceedings page 590 refers).

6. Yes.

STARCH DIVERSION PROGRAM

Question No. 1,948—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

1. What effect is the starch diversion programme announced by the Minister of Agriculture on March 21 likely to have on the potato producers of Prince Edward Island?

2. What amount of potatoes will be purchased from the Prince Edward Island potato growers and what is the expected price the growers will receive?

3. What other forms of assistance are being contemplated in order to assist the Prince Edward Island potato growers in this regard?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): 1, 2 and 3. Storage holdings of potatoes in the Maritime region were in excess of the five-year average, resulting in depressed producer prices. A starch diversion program was authorized under the Agricultural Stabilization Act as a means of removing potatoes from the market and stimulating producer prices in the Maritime area. The market is being carefully watched, but there are no current plans for other forms of assistance.

SEPT-ILES AIRPORT FIRE-FIGHTING EQUIPMENT

Question No. 1,953—Mr. McCleave:

1. Was an Air Canada Viscount recently destroyed by fire at Sept-Iles and, if so, what fire-fighting equipment was available to the Department of Transport at the Sept-Iles Airport?

2. Were all vehicles using Foam fully equipped with foam during the fighting of the fire and, if not, what was the amount carried and the amount that could be carried?

Questions

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): 1. (a) Yes, Air Canada Viscount CF-THK was destroyed by fire April 7, 1969; (b) One Department of Transport Crash Rescue Truck equipped with 1,000 lbs. of dry chemical extinguishing agent. A pick-up vehicle was also available, carrying 23—5 gallon cans of foam concentrate and portable foam equipment. The City of Sept-Iles, on request, responded with one structural fire truck carrying 500 gallons of water and one 2,500 gallon Water Tank Truck.

2. (a) The Department Crash Rescue Truck is not designed for foam application, therefore, was not equipped with foam concentrate. The foam concentrate and portable foam-making equipment carried on the pick-up vehicle was used in conjunction with the City of Sept-Iles fire fighting vehicles. As these vehicles are not designed for major foam applications, they are not equipped with a foam concentrate carrying capability; (b) The Department of Transport's major foam fire fighting vehicle at Sept-Iles Airport, which carries 800 gallons of water and 90 gallons of foam concentrate, was out of service for maintenance at the time of the incident. A NOTAM (notice to airmen) advising that this vehicle was out of service was in effect at the time of the incident.

C.B.C.—PERMISSION FOR COMMERCIALS

Question No. 1,970—Mr. Broadbent:

1. Is the C.B.C. considering eliminating its traditional ban on commercials in news, public affairs and special events programs and, if so, what are the reasons for the above review?

2. Is the government considering making representations to the C.B.C. in order that the ban on commercials for the above areas be not lifted?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): 1. I am informed by the C.B.C. that while C.B.C. news and public affairs programs have never been commercially sponsored, commercial messages have occasionally been carried in public affairs and special events programs. Extension of this practice has been considered, as a source of revenue to meet rising costs, but no decision has been taken.

2. No.

* DISCUSSIONS ON U.S. AIRBORNE WARNING SYSTEM

Question No. 1,973—Mr. Lewis:

1. How long have discussions been proceeding between Canada and the United States in relation to the proposed Airborne Warning and Control System?

[Mr. McCleave.]

2. Who has represented Canada at these discussions?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first part of this question is, since 1966, and to the second part, discussions and briefings on the proposed U.S. airborne warning and control system have been included in discussions regarding co-operative defence matters by the Canada-U.S. permanent joint board on defence and between planning staff members of Canada's Department of National Defence and the United States department of defence.

P.E.I.—STAMP VENDING MACHINES

Question No. 2,003—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. How many postage stamp vending machines are in operation in Prince Edward Island and what is the location of each?

2. How many are operated by use of new twenty-five cent coins?

TRAVELLING CLAIMS OF ARMED SERVICES PERSONNEL

Question No. 2,010—Mr. Saltsman:

Has the Department of National Defence rejected the recommendations by the Auditor General, as referred to in his 1968 Report, page 68, paragraph 119, that the Department require travelling claims submitted by service members to be supported by a special certificate of an officer who has knowledge of the trip being undertaken?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence): It is impractical administratively and economically for an officer to have personal knowledge that the claimant did in fact complete the journey in the manner claimed. It is considered that the existing audit procedures should reveal cases of fraudulent claims, and the disciplinary action which could be taken affecting careers and pension entitlements is a reasonable deterrent.

STUDY ON USE OF STAFF CARS

Question No. 2,011—Mr. Saltsman:

1. When is it anticipated that the special study of the use of staff cars and chauffeurs by senior officers of the Department of National Defence, that began in 1966, will be completed?

2. On completion, will the Minister table the above report?

3. What are the reasons for the long delay in the completion of this study?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence): 1 and 3. Canadian Forces administrative transport is established, purchased and accounted for as a capital resource to enable the forces to fulfil their role and commitments. The requirements are reviewed continually and the present review, which is nearing completion, is to ensure that the use and allocation of these vehicles, with particular reference to staff cars, satisfy new guidelines for economy and efficiency. This study has been lengthy in that it embraces not only the use of staff cars but has been expanded to encompass a review of existing policy regarding the employment of all administrative transport used by the Canadian Forces.

4. Qualified Department of National Revenue assessors carry out field audits to test check the accuracy of the income tax returns filed. SUGAR COMBINE INQUIRY

Question No. 2,039—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. Has an application been received in the name of Roberta Gray et al for an inquiry under Section 7 of the Combines Investigation Act into the practices of Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Canada and Dominion Co., and St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries and if so, what was the date of such application?

2. Has an investigation been started and if so, on what date and, if not, for what reason?

Questions

3. At what date is it anticipated that this investigation will be completed?

4. Will the report arising out of this investigation be made public?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. Yes, the application is a matter of public knowledge. Section 8(a) of the Combines Investigation Act requires the Director of Investigation and Research to institute an inquiry on application under section 7 and he is carrying out his statutory duty. The general practice in regard to the matter of inquiries under the Combines Act, however, is that no information is given out as to whether a particular inquiry is being pursued with respect to a particular group of companies or individuals unless and until a report is published as the statute may require.

2, 3 and 4. See answer to 1.

1. How many acres of land forming part of the South Saskatchewan Dam project are reserved for recreational purposes?

2. How much did the federal government contribute toward the cost of acquisition of the recreational land and what percentage was this amount of the total cost of such land?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development): Mr. Speaker, in respect of the first part of the question, this is a provincial responsibility and any information would need to be requested from the province of Saskatchewan. In respect of the second part, the federal government did not make any contribution toward the cost.

Question No. 1,208—Mr. Skoberg:

4. Is there any co-ordination among government departments or agencies in order to achieve efficiency in advertising expenditure allocation?

5. If so, who are the members of this co-ordinating group and what are their specific functions and objectives?

6. Is the government considering the establishment of a Crown corporation for public advertising expenditures?

EXHIBITIONS—TORONTO AND VANCOUVER

Question No. 1,385—Mr. Fortin:

What expenditures or contributions have been made each year since 1965 by the various departments of the federal government in connection with exhibitions in Toronto and Vancouver?

Return tabled.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I should like to draw the government's attention to starred questions 1964 and 1965 which were placed on the order paper on April 15. Neither of them require any statistical data or research and I should hope that answers can be obtained at an early date.

Mr. John L. Skoberg (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I should like to draw the government's attention to Question 933, which was put on the order paper on December 3; Question 1121 which was placed on the order paper on December 20; Question 1256, which was placed on the order paper on January 27, and Question 1323 which was placed on the order paper on February 4. I should like to know whether I can expect answers to these questions, unless there is some reason for us not wanting to know why we should not be given this information in respect of—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could respond in respect of Questions 933. An examination of a number of departments, for example, the Department of Transport, indicates that it would require several thousand dollars to prepare this information. Under the circumstances I wonder whether the hon. member would be prepared to withdraw certain parts of the question so an answer can be prepared more easily?

Mr. Skoberg: Mr. Speaker, I was contacted to see whether I would do this, but I believe the information should be made available?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): At any expense whatsoever?

DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION OF THE VATICAN

Motion No. 88—Mr. Howard (Skeena):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all telegrams, correspondence and other documents received by the Prime Minister or any other member of the government since January 1, 1969 relating to the proposal that Canada extend diplomatic recognition to the Vatican.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated to the house last week, it is estimated that between January 1 and March 28 of this year 10,275 letters responding to this inquiry have been received. In view of the fact that this would require the reproduction of over 20,000 copies of the document at a heavy expense to the treasury, I wonder whether the hon. member would be agreeable to withdrawing the motion?

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Far be it from me to put public servants to such an amount of work as a result of such a carelessly thought out proposal as the one advanced by the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, so I will gladly withdraw it.

CANADIAN TERRITORIAL AND INLAND WATERS

Motion No. 92—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of a map of Canada showing both territorial waters and inland waters claimed by Canada.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the government intends in the near future to issue maps illustrating additional straight base lines which will be drawn along Canada's coasts. It is also intended to amend the Territorial Sea and Fishing Zones Act to permit the establishment of fisheries lines in certain areas without affecting the limits of Canada's internal waters and territorial sea. It would not be in the Canadian interest for the government to issue further maps of Canada's possible maritime claims at this time. On this basis I ask the hon. member if he will agree to withdrawing his motion?

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to have permission to have the matter transferred for debate.

[Mr. Orlikow.]

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that it shall be transferred for debate?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Transferred for debate.

LAW OF THE SEA—ARCTIC ISLANDS BASELINES

Motion No. 93—Mr. Harding:

Than an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House a copy of all notes exchanged between Canada and the United States concerning the drawing of baselines between the islands of the Canadian Arctic pursuant to the provisions of the Final Act of the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, any communications on this subject form part of confidential exchanges between the government of Canada and the government of the United States. Such communications are privileged. It has not been the practice to produce them. I therefore ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE AND B.C. RESPECTING COMMONWEALTH TRUST

Motion No. 97—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence between the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Province of British Columbia, or any of its agencies, concerning the operations of the Commonwealth Trust Company since its incorporation.

Mr. H. E. Gray (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am informed the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation considers correspondence in its files with member institutions to be of a confidential nature. I am informed this is consistent with the policy followed in this regard for the Bank of Canada, the Industrial Development Bank and other Crown corporations that report to the Minister of Finance. I therefore ask the hon. member if he would be willing to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to have permission to have this matter transferred for debate.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that it shall be transferred for debate pursuant to Standing Order 48?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Transferred for debate.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE AND COMMONWEALTH TRUST

Motion No. 98—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence between the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Commonwealth Trust Company concerning the operations of the Commonwealth Trust Company since its incorporation.

Mr. H. E. Gray (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remarks I made with regard to the preceding notice of motion apply to this one as well. For the reasons expressed, I again ask the hon. member if he would be willing to withdraw this notice of motion?

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to have permission to have this matter transferred for debate.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that it shall be transferred for debate pursuant to Standing Order 48?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Transferred for debate.

EFFECT OF WAGE PARITY IN AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Motion No. 104—Mr. Saltsman:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the study by Economist David F. Smith of the Mechanical Transport Branch, Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, on "The Effects of Canada-United States Wage Parity Upon the Cost Structure of the Canadian Automotive Industries".

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am informed by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce that the study referred to in this motion is an internal departmental document which is privileged, and will therefore not be tabled. The minister wants to point out to the hon. member that this work is not an official departmental study but one carried out by a university student. In addition, this document contains confidential information received from the industry. On this basis, the minister hopes the hon. member will withdraw his motion.

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I regret I cannot accept the explanation given by the government. I should like to have permission to have this matter transferred for debate.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that it shall be transferred for debate pursuant to Standing Order 48?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Transferred for debate.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION—ACTION TO PREVENT FRAUD

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I make a brief reference to Motion No. 70? I had a few words regarding this motion with the Minister of Labour. Subject to my right to redraft it, I ask permission to have it withdrawn.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining notices of motion be allowed to stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

HOUSING

PROVISION IN MEASURE TO REMOVE CEILING ON LOANS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Prime Minister in his capacity as minister in charge of housing. Does the housing bill which received first reading this afternoon, and which we have not yet seen, contain a provision to remove the ceiling on interest rates charged on N.H.A. loans?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The bill will be in the hands of hon. members within a few minutes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Stanfield: Meantime, Mr. Speaker, we can hope for the best.

REMOVAL OF ROADBLOCKS ON URBAN RENEWAL AND PUBLIC HOUSING

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I would now like to ask a supplementary question. With regard to people on very low incomes will the Prime Minister say when the roadblocks on urban renewal and public housing projects will be removed so that Canadians can get ahead with the work of adequately supplying housing for these people?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I believe the minister did report that in many cases the so-called roadblocks have been removed after discussion with the authorities concerned and many projects have received approval, but there are still some under consideration.

ISSUANCE OF NEW GUIDELINES

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the acting minister in charge of housing if he would advise when the new guidelines for public housing will be issued?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, the guidelines on public housing are being prepared by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and when these guidelines have been received and approved by the government they will be made public.

MEASURES TO BENEFIT LOW INCOME GROUPS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, so that there is no ambiguity this time I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. Will he say whether the government plans any measures at this session which will bring housing within the reach of a large number of Canadians to whom subsidized public housing is not available, and yet who earn less than $8,000 per year and therefore are effectively prevented from buying, building or even renting improved housing? I am speaking about measures in addition to those concerning limited dividend companies, which I understand are in the housing bill.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Surely, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is anticipating the debate on that bill. The first reading of the bill was given a few moments ago. It will soon be in front of hon. members and this will be the answer to all these questions.

CITIES INCLUDED IN URBAN RENEWAL SCHEME

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether to direct my question to the Prime Minister or to the Minister without Portfolio in charge of housing. I think I will try the Minister without Portfolio. Now that some cities have had the freeze removed from their urban renewal schemes may I ask which cities are these, and have they been advised of any federal commitment?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, with regard to urban renewal projects the position is really the same, that guidelines are being prepared and they will be made available to all municipalities as soon as the government policy is determined.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

THE PRAIRIES—REQUEST FOR ACTION TO AUGMENT FARM INCOME

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. In view of the serious deterioration in the prairie economy due to the decline in farm income resulting from declining grain prices and reduced delivery quotas, may I ask the Prime Minister has the government completed its consideration of the various proposals submitted to it by farm organizations, and how soon will the appropriate ministers be able to announce the specific measures that the government intends to take to augment western farm income before the situation becomes more desperate?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I will discuss this with the ministers, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Then, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister whether any consultations have been held between his government and the governments of the prairie provinces regarding what steps should be taken to meet the very serious economic situation on the prairies?

Mr. Trudeau: Well, we have received many representations from various authorities, including the provincial governments, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): As a further supplementary question, could the Prime Minister give the house any idea what proposals have been received from the provincial governments and what action the federal government intends to take with respect to these proposals?

Mr. Trudeau: As the hon. member must know, Mr. Speaker, they cover a variety of subjects from two-price wheat to various forms of subsidy to the grain producers. They are all being given consideration, and they have been the subject of answers in this house at various times.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the situation is pressing, may I ask the Prime Minister when the prairie provincial governments and the western farmers can expect some statement of policy from the government as to what it proposes to do about the situation?

TRADE

REDUCTIONS IN WHEAT EXPORTS— OIL QUOTAS

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, this is a supplementary and somewhat related question. In light of the serious reductions in wheat exports and the imposition of export quotas on petroleum exports to the United States of America will the Prime Minister now agree to set forth on motions this week, his government policy in reference to these serious matters, so that the industries of western Canada can make decisions which will be good for the nation?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Not this week, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Woolliams: If he will not do it this week, when can we expect some decision on the deterioration of the economy of western Canada?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, as is indicated by the increase in demand for passports the economy is booming more and more—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

PROMOTION OF GRAIN SALES IN ASIA

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. During his present trip to Asia is the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce putting some emphasis on grain sales and markets?

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I hope that I may suggest to the Prime Minister that he might alter that last answer of his.

Some hon. Members: Question?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The right. hon. gentleman has to ask a question.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I find it difficult, sir, to understand why any minister, or the Prime Minister—

Some hon. Members: Question?

Mr. Diefenbaker: —can make these gratuitous observations—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Is the right hon. gentleman rising on a point of order?

Mr. Diefenbaker: Yes, Mr. Speaker. With great deference to you, I find it very difficult to understand why we on this side of the house are to be denied answering gratuitous statements such as the Prime Minister and other ministers are making from time to time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. With equal deference to the right hon. gentleman I have to tell him that unfortunately the rules do not allow the present procedure at this time. This is a question period, and the long established practice is that hon. gentlemen in the opposition may ask questions but may not make statements.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Again on a question of order, does that mean that ministers can do that which other members in the house cannot do? If it does, then I take the strongest possible objection to it. It is developing day by day that the ministers make their smart Aleck interruptions and statements—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I ask the Prime Minister this question. In view of the fact that the other day in an interview he spoke of the western people as being those who are forever crying about something—either too much production or too little, that the country is too dry or too wet—will he send somebody out west to look into the serious situation there, which cannot be laughed off by the government? Will he do something about it instead of postponing, procrastinating and doing nothing but laugh at the situation in western Canada?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): There was no indication the government was not doing anything for the people of this country. I was just describing a condition of human nature.

Mr. Diefenbaker: In western Canada?

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, and in the House of Commons. Some people are complaining all the time. When I said what I did about the west I said it was a condition occurring in all parts of Canada. Naturally people want the government to improve conditions in all areas and the government has to answer as it can these demands.

FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS ACT

FORECLOSURES UPON FAILURE TO MEET OBLIGATIONS

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. While the economy booms will the Minister of Finance and the government consider what they are going to do for the western farmer? Will the Minister of Finance consult with the banks in order to stop the banks foreclosing on farmers who cannot make their payments?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): If my friend has any specific instances, I would be very interested to have him bring them to my attention and I will certainly take them up with the Bank of Canada.

ARTS, LETTERS AND SCIENCES

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE OPERATING DEFICIT

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the President of the Treasury Board. I should like to ask the minister if our economy is so booming that we can afford to subsidize by half a million dollars a two-week opening festival at the Arts Centre.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's question is hardly a supplementary question. I do not think it should be asked at this time.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

INCOME TAX

REFUNDING OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT TAX

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Minister of National Revenue.

Has the minister received from his Quebec counterpart a request for the refund of the social development tax from January 1, 1969, up to the date medicare will be implemented in the province of Quebec, and if so—

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Minister of National Revenue): No, Mr. Speaker, and I do not expect to receive such a request. There might be an exchange of letters between the federal and provincial ministers of Finance.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PASSPORTS ISSUED SINCE JAN. 1 1969

Mr. Colin D. Gibson (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Can the minister inform us how many passports have been issued since January 1, 1969?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

CORNER BROOK, NFLD.—BUS ACCIDENT

Mr. Ambrose Hubert Peddle (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Acting Minister of Transport. Will the minister investigate and report to the house the details surrounding an accident on April 25 in which a Canadian National bus, one of the fleet which is to replace the reliable and accident-free rail passenger service in Newfoundland, left the highway 12 miles west of Corner Brook while carrying 35 passengers, plunged over an embankment, coming to rest on its side, striking two large boulders which completely penetrated the side of the bus—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We have only 40 minutes.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Peddle: Mr. Speaker, I apologize, but since there have been so many accidents with this service, and are apt to be many more, I thought I should properly identify the particular accident for the minister. I have just about finished my question, Mr. Speaker, and this is a very pertinent part of it. It did strike two large boulders which completely penetrated the side of the bus and injured nine passengers, necessitating hospital treatment, and rendered the $60,000 bus a total loss.

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, this accident is being investigated and I will be pleased to report to the hon. member.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

NATO—STATEMENT BY GENERAL LEMNITZER ABOUT EUROPEAN REQUIREMENTS

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, this question is for the Minister of National Defence. In light of the statements of General Lyman Lemnitzer to the effect that there is no justification for any military reduction in Europe at this time, will the Minister of National Defence say whether the government of Canada has formed an assessment of the military and political situation in Europe different from that of the NATO military command? If so, will the minister undertake to make an explanatory statement in this regard to the house at an early date?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member I understand is not asking the minister to make a statement now. The question is acceptable only to the extent that the hon. member is asking the minister to indicate whether he will make a statement, and when.

Mr. Nesbitt: Well, in view of Your Honour's very correct observation about the question I realize that perhaps there is a slight misunderstanding. I wonder if I might be permitted to put the question in this way: Will the minister undertake to make a statement to the house at an early date concerning the first part of the question I asked him, and can he indicate when he might be in a position to make the statement?

Hon. Leo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): I think first of all I should investigate the interview to find out exactly what was said. After having done that I suppose I could advise whether or not it would be advisable to make a statement.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question? After the Minister of National Defence has investigated and obtained a copy of this statement will he table it in the house, so that all members will have an opportunity to examine it?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): I do not believe it was in written form. I think it was in the form of questions and answers.

Mr. Baldwin: The questions and answers are what we want—the answers particularly.

STATEMENT BY GENERAL ALLARD IN LONDON, ONTARIO

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Since the minister has been so kind as to give this undertaking will he now tell us if General Allard, the chief of staff, was speaking on behalf of the government last Saturday in London, Ontario—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member cannot ask a question about statements made outside the house. He can ask the question directly, but not in relation to a statement made outside the house.

Mr. Nesbitt: Perhaps I could rephrase the question. Did the Minister of National Defence authorize the remarks purportedly made by the chief of staff in London, Ontario in which the chief of staff was quoted as saying:

> I don't give a damn. You tell the university professors they are not going to destroy Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the ruling applies to the second portion of the question as well as to the first.

Mr. Nesbitt: I just wanted to know whether that is government policy.

A.B.M. SYSTEM—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT OF GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, as nearly six weeks have passed since the Prime Minister discussed the United States A.B.M system with the President of the United States, has the government had a chance to give full consideration to this matter and is the Prime Minister now in a position to advise the house and the country what the government's position is on this important matter?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the government has been considering it. I hope the opposition has been doing the same thing. I know the debate is going well in the United States and it would be unwise for Canada to intervene in it.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, of course the Prime Minister did not answer my question. He has not told me whether the government is in a position to state its position. Since the government seems to find it increasingly difficult to make up its mind on matters—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is making an argument. Would he ask the question directly.

Mr. Hees: Would the Prime Minister and his government consider taking some form of mental laxative to free up their mental processes so that they would be able to give an opinion on these important matters, so that the country will know in what direction they are trying to go.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings knows that when the Speaker has the floor he should resume his seat.

AIR CANADA

REPLACEMENT OF NON-STRIKING EMPLOYEES BY NON-UNION EMPLOYEES

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct this question to the Minister of Transport and/or the Minister of Labour, whichever of them has been dealing with the matter. I should like to know whether such minister has received any protests from the non-striking unions of Air Canada, or whether he has in some other way been made aware of their dissatisfaction with the fact that all union employees who are not on strike have been laid off without pay, and that non-union employees have been put on their jobs? If so, has he discussed the matter with Air Canada, and what is being done about it?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, representations have been made to my department, and possibly to the Acting Minister of Transport. We have informed the particular groups involved that if they think they have a grievance within the confines of their collective agreement, they are quite capable of taking whatever action is necessary. In other words, if they think their collective agreement is being violated, having in mind the provisions of the I.R.D.I. Act, they should place the problem before arbitration.

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. If there are cases, as I am informed there are, where the collective agreement may not apply or have the required provisions, would the minister discuss with Air Canada the simple justice of retaining on the job people who held the job previously, rather than replacing them with people who are not members of the bargaining units?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's question is in the form of a submission.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

INCREASED EXPENDITURES FOR MENTAL HEALTH

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Having in mind that tomorrow marks the start of national mental health week in Canada, would the minister consider increasing financial aid in this very important area, particularly because there has been in recent years a great increase in the rate of mental ailments in Canada, even prior to the present government's taking office?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would advise the hon. member that I would be pleased to take that matter into consideration.

DRUGS

CANADIAN ACTION IN MARKETING OF ANTIBIOTICS

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I should like to reply to a question put to me on April 16 by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) with reference to antibiotics. A study group was set up in the United States to study particular antibiotic drugs and their efficacy on the United States market prior to 1962. It was felt that many claims were made for these drugs which experience might not bear out as being true and accurate. The manufacturers of those antibiotics have been advised that they will have an opportunity to prove the claims made before the drugs are removed from the market. I think approximately 80 antibiotics are involved. As of now these drugs are still on the United States market. Our Food and Drug Directorate are watching the situation closely and working closely with the food and drug people in the United States in order to determine whether we will have to take similar action.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that this investigation revealed that some 78 drugs containing antibiotics exposed the patient to unnecessary risk, is the minister's department following this aspect of the investigation with a view to taking whatever action is necessary to protect the public?

Mr. Munro: Yes, we are, Mr. Speaker. As I have indicated, our information, obtained after close work with the food and drug people in the United States, would indicate that they are not alarmed to the degree indicated by the hon. member. The investigation being carried out by the food and drug people in the United States may show that the claims made in respect of these drugs are not borne out by the facts. But no serious harm is being done. For this reason they have not as of this date removed the drugs from the United States market.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CONSULTATION WITH TEACHERS OVERSEAS BEFORE CONTRACT CHANGE

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Minister of National Defence.

According to the Canadian Teachers' Federation, the minister refuses to consult the teachers before making changes in contracts for teaching in national defence department schools overseas. Is that statement true?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member cannot ask a minister to confirm or to deny a statement. Furthermore, I point out to him that a similar question has been asked yesterday.

[English]

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

"DON MESSER'S JUBILEE"—INQUIRY AS TO POSSIBLE CONTINUATION

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, as one who admits that he is fond of the Don Messer show, I would ask the Secretary of State whether in view of the widespread requests from all parts of Canada for the continuation of this program, the C.B.C. has given consideration, either finally or interimly, to the continuance of the show.

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I shall inquire of the C.B.C. about its views on the matter. Every day, I know, we forward to the C.B.C. representations made to us by listeners. I also know that the C.B.C. takes them under consideration. I shall ask C.B.C. officials to what conclusions they have come and whether they intend to revise their decision or not. I will be happy then to make their answer known to the right hon. member.

[English]

Mr. Diefenbaker: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the rather lengthy delay on this matter, would the minister communicate with the C.B.C. today and give tomorrow on motions a report of the situation? Many people are asking that this show be continued, and they are not particularly pleased with the fact that Black Panthers and the like apparently have the inside track with the C.B.C.

Mr. Barney Danson (York North): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Secretary of State. Will the minister ask the C.B.C. to allow Don Messer to fiddle while the hon. member for Prince Albert—

Mr. Hees: "Burns" is the word.

Mr. Danson: Yes, while the hon. member for Prince Albert burns.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

RUBELLA EPIDEMIC—ACCESSIBILITY TO VACCINE

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare based on a question I asked him on April 16 regarding the availability of anti-rubella vaccine for the innoculation of expectant mothers, to prevent foetal abnormalities. Has the minister the answer to this question?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would advise the hon. member for Simcoe North that my department has under review several investigational new drug submissions for anti-rubella vaccine. We expect that one of these vaccines will be cleared for clinical trial in Canada in the next few weeks.

PROSECUTIONS FOLLOWING MONTREAL BOND THEFT

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Justice which might be considered an economic question. Is he contemplating any prosecutions in respect of the recovery of bonds stolen recently from a Montreal firm? These bonds, worth approximately half a million dollars to the company, are supposedly worth $10 million.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member—

Mr. MacInnis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the hon. member should have asked the supplementary question first, because my understanding of the situation is that the first question need not have been directed to the Minister of Justice.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I was asking the Minister of Justice about the arrest of anybody connected with the theft of half a million dollars worth of bonds. However, I direct my supplementary question to the Minister of National Revenue and ask whether his interest has not been aroused by the fact that negotiable bonds could be held in this manner, as they were before the theft.

FISHERIES

SHUSWAP RIVER DIVERSION—INQUIRY AS TO DECISION REACHED BETWEEN FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries. Can he inform the house of any decisions reached between the federal and provincial governments over the proposed Shuswap River diversion plan?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is difficult for the Chair to understand whether this is a matter of some urgency. If it is an urgent matter, the minister might like to reply at this time.

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, that important matter is under active consideration. The minister responsible is the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

FORESTRY

LOGS—DENIAL OF EXPORT LICENCES TO MEET DOMESTIC DEMAND

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, I should like to answer a question asked yesterday by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas), concerning the export of logs from British Columbia to Japan. I would tell the hon. member that exports to Japan for the first three months of this year were down about 25 per cent. Most of these logs are of substandard quality and of no interest to our sawmills. They are not a potential source of employment. Others come from the Peace River reservoir which will be subject to flooding. The last approval by our log export committee was in December, 1968. Shipments made since that date have been made in fulfilment of contractual obligations entered into last year and under permits granted prior to January 1, 1969.

As a final point of information I should like to say that exports of logs from British Columbia have never exceeded 2 per cent of the annual timber cut, and exports from the western United States are ten times our own.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the figures released by the British Columbia forestry department indicate an increase of some 2.6 million board feet for the first three months of this year and a sevenfold increase from Vancouver Island—Crofton and Chemainus—from 1.5 million to 10.5 million board feet in March compared with one year ago—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will the hon. member ask his question, please.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Would the minister undertake to have the figures checked to see whether or not there has been any violation of the voluntary ban on log exports and, if so, make it a mandatory ban?

Mr. Davis: The answer is yes. The statistics which I gave today have been checked today with the British Columbia forestry service. Nevertheless we will look into the subject again.

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the minister's reply with regard to the Shuswap River water diversion, would he indicate to the house whether he has any responsibility for salmon conservation in that particular area?

Mr. Davis: I certainly agree that the federal government does have a direct interest and responsibility in respect of salmon conservation in the Fraser River system, and hence in the Shuswap area as well.

HOUSING

INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF FURTHER LEGISLATION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask either the Prime Minister or the Acting Minister of Transport whether it is the intention of the government to introduce any other legislation in this session respecting housing, in addition to the bill introduced by the Prime Minister this afternoon?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): There is no additional legislation beyond that which we have set out in the program previously. The hon. member is referring to the bill with regard to the National Housing Act.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—OPTING OUT BY QUEBEC

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Has the minister, or anyone else speaking on behalf of the government of Canada, advised the government of Quebec that they could opt out of the federal medicare system before entering it, but still get the money?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker.

FINANCE

NORTHERN ONTARIO—ALLEGED INVESTMENT DISCRIMINATION

Mr. Ralph Stewart (Cochrane): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Since the minister has announced that there will be new regulations governing the trust companies can he assure the house that there will no longer be a double standard on the part of lending institutions, which discriminates against capital investment in northern Ontario?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am not sure whether the question is one of urgency. Perhaps the hon. member might consider the advisability of debating it at the time of adjournment.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

SUGGESTED REFERENCE OF SUBJECT TO STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the President of the Privy Council in his capacity as house leader. While the house awaits concurrence in the fifth and sixth reports of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, would the house leader give consideration to referring to that committee by an order of the house the very important matter of automobile safety standards and highway safety in Canada?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): I might be prepared to discuss it with my colleagues. I might indicate that there is a bill amending the Canada Shipping Act which will have to be referred to the committee, in addition to the harbours study which should be considered in the committee. So it looks as though the committee's timetable will be very full for the next two months.

Mr. McGrath: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the house leader ensure that the committee will study this matter before the legislation is brought in?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I am prepared to discuss this with my colleagues to see whether it fits into the timetable. I understand that the legislation referred to by the hon. member concerns automobile safety.

ARTS, LETTERS AND SCIENCES

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE OPERATING DEFICIT

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, I hope you will agree that the President of the Treasury Board should be held accountable. Therefore I should like to ask the minister whether specific and prior approval was given to the group of people who decided on a course of action which will result in a deficit of $500,000 for the two-week opening festival of the arts here in Ottawa?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member suggested that the minister is accountable, and I do not disagree with this. But the hon. member is asking a question which was asked yesterday, I believe, or recently. At the time I suggested to the hon. member, a suggestion which I repeat at the present time, that his question is normally of the type that is put on the order paper or discussed at the time of adjournment.

INCOME TAX

REFUNDING OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT TAX

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, when the Minister of National Revenue answered the question of the hon. member for Abitibi a while ago, I understood him to say that the question should have been asked of the Finance Minister.

As the Quebec Finance Minister has stated that he would ask for the transfer of the 2 per cent social development tax, I ask the minister whether he has received from Quebec an official request to that effect?

[English]

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): I do not know whether it can be called an official request, but the idea has been put forward several times.

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—AVAILABILITY OF ALTERNATIVE MODES OF TRAVEL

Mr. Charles H. Thomas (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, my question arises out of the statement made in the house on Monday by the Minister of Labour that the air strike did not constitute an emergency because there were alternative methods of transportation available. I direct my question to the Acting Minister of Transport. Since the railways and bus companies are not able to handle the extra traffic and are not providing a satisfactory alternative service between the maritimes and the rest of Canada, what action is the minister taking to assist other carriers to provide a suitable service?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think we have already given that answer in the house. The President of the Canadian Transport Commission has said that the commission will grant any reasonable requests for licences. My office has been in touch with the President of C.P.A. expressing parliament's concern and the government's concern about some of the goods that are not moving, and he has agreed to give all help possible. I think the government is doing all it can in the emergency.

Mr. Thomas (Moncton): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the acting minister aware that C.P.A. does not provide service in this area, and that the railways will not book sleeping car accommodation?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): I have a supplementary question for the Acting Minister of Transport. Would he cause the government to re-examine its present policy, which prevents the development of a second coast to coast national air line service?

[Mr. La Salle.]

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—INQUIRY AS TO PROGRESS IN NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Norman A. Cafik (Ontario): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Labour. Will he take this opportunity to report to the house on what is happening in the negotiations between Air Canada and its employees?

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): The minister is getting up more slowly every day.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): I plead guilty to having been in Montreal last night because I thought it would be the last occasion this spring when there would be a National Hockey League game in that city.

With regard to the hon. member's question, may I say that I feel a little better as the result of the public statements made both by the union and by Air Canada that they welcome an opportunity to resume negotiations. I hope that in the next few days, of their own volition and by their own initiative, they will seize the opportunity to resume negotiations.

FISHERIES

SALT COD—RESPONSE TO ANNOUNCEMENT OF POLICY

Mr. John Lundrigan (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries. Can the minister indicate whether he has received any unfavourable response to his recently announced program on Atlantic salt codfish?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): So far the response has been one of general approval.

Mr. Lundrigan: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it the government's aim to have the prices received by fishermen approximate the target prices set by the government regardless of the prices paid by merchants?

Mr. Davis: We have sought the advice of fishermen who are on the advisory committee in this program and my understanding is that the price schedules are meeting general approval.

Mr. Lundrigan: Can the minister indicate whether the government would be willing to revise the formula in the event of a depressed price being received this year?

Mr. Davis: The answer is no. However, the formula is this: Whatever the price, the government will make up half the difference between that price and the target price, which is a high price, as the hon. member knows.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my appreciation to the government for providing me with an answer to a question posed on April 22, which was not asked by me in the first place. I would ask the government to give the same consideration to a question I asked one month earlier, on March 21.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADIAN PROPOSAL TO NIGERIA

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, a week or so ago I asked the Secretary of State for External Affairs for information regarding the proposal made by him to the government of Nigeria. I wonder whether on his next appearance in the house he would make a statement on motions with regard to the proposal which was made?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would be prepared to answer the question but I do not know whether it would be worthy of a statement on motions.

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Tuesday, April 29, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 27, Mr. Laprise.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order.

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): I thank you very much to have called the members to order, Mr. Speaker, because we must consider such an important bill as earnestly as possible. Some members may not take this bill too seriously. As far as we are concerned, we feel that this bill as well as the amendments moved these past days are of the utmost importance.

That is why we study them so carefully and so seriously. We put forward every argument we can possibly find, including some opinions expressed by experts and by the public at large who may unfortunately be governed in a few months' time by so odious a bill.

Yesterday, we were discussing amendment No. 27 proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), and pertaining to abortion in the case of a female person, pregnant, of full age or married, or of a person under age provided she gets the written consent of her parents or guardian.

The amendment provides that a female person under age who would be pregnant must obtain her father's consent for abortion.

Parental authority over minor children has always been widely recognized in all areas. When the father is deceased, the consent of the mother or the guardian is required; that goes for driver's permits and for the right to enter liquor stores.

The father must always remain the guide, the protector of his minor child, male as well as female. I base my argument on the Civil Code which clearly establishes the responsibility of the father, the mother or the tutor if the father is dead or cannot act.

At page 215 of the Civil Code, and more particularly at section 1053 dealing with offences and quasi-offences, it can be read and I quote:

> Every person capable of discerning right from wrong is responsible for the damage caused by his fault to another, whether by positive act, imprudence, neglect or want of skill.

Section 1054 of the Civil Code of the province of Quebec as well as similar provisions in the Common Law clearly establish, and in a more detailed manner, the parents' responsibility towards minor children. Section 1054 reads as follows:

> He is responsible not only for the damage caused by his own fault, but also for that caused by the fault of persons under his control and by things he has under his care.
> The father, or, after his decease, the mother, is responsible for the damage caused by their minor children;

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that the parents have authority over their children and are responsible for them. What is beyond me is that the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) corrects the Civil Code.

Under the above-mentioned clauses, the Civil Code recognizes the authority of the father, but the Criminal Code, as the result of the proposal made today, abolishes the authority of the father over his minor child.

That is why I feel the amendments on abortion are an infringement of the Criminal Code on the Civil Code. It is an infringement of the federal government on the authority of the provinces and by accepting the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi, we would confirm the paternal authority conferred by the Civil Code.

As for abortion, the amendment if adopted would have for effect to show that the Criminal Code cannot destroy what is already recognized by the Civil Code. The Civil Code establishes the authority of the father over his minor children, but at the present time the Criminal Code does not require the father's consent to the abortion of his female children.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) should be told, once more, that if he does not accept this amendment, he will be violating the constitution which provides the provinces with the authority in civil matters. Thus, he is creating the proper environment for separatism in the provinces.

Moreover, section 186 of the Criminal Code states and I quote:

Every one is under a legal duty as a parent, foster parent, guardian or head of a family, to provide necessaries of life for a child under the age of sixteen years;

Thus, the Criminal Code holds a head of a family criminally responsible for not providing necessaries of life for his children under age. Thus, a head of a family would be held criminally responsible if one of his children under age died of hunger.

On that point, the Criminal Code is clear. If the Minister of Justice were willing to accept the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi, once more we would be confirming the father's authority with regard to abortion.

Section 186 of the Criminal Code indicates that a person is fully grown up at the age of sixteen years. We have ample documentation showing when maturity begins.

On page 262 of a book entitled Adolescence, there is some definition indicating when a child can be considered mature.

• (3:20 p.m.)

[English]

Every parent . . . in regard to sex must have clear ideas of what he himself considers mature attitudes toward sex. He must know what he believes to be the values and goals in sex relations. He needs to be able to suggest ways in which such values and goals can be attained, what self-control and self-discipline will be necessary, and what satisfactions can be achieved.

[Translation]

And further on it is said, and I quote:

[English]

What attitudes toward sex are mature? A mature person sees sex in the total setting of life itself—

[Translation]

However, Mr. Speaker, a person is only mature when able to understand all the responsibilities involved in life. If under the terms of the Criminal Code, one allows a 14, 15 or 16-year-old girl to have an abortion, it is obvious that this right is given to someone who is not yet capable of judging all the implications of her act.

Here are other reasons why we ask that the father's consent be compulsory for the abortion of a pregnant girl. The father should have his say regarding children under age.

A girl under age who would not have to get her father's consent will use every possible means to conceal her love affairs from him; she will take all the necessary steps for her abortion because she wants to hide the truth from her father.

The father should have the right to consent to the abortion of a girl under age, otherwise he will be unaware of those facts, and thus the girl will be encouraged to carry on in the same foolish way and make the same mistakes. Why? Because she does not yet have all the required knowledge and is still unaware of the full implication of her responsibilities in connection with life.

I hope that the bill will not be passed without this amendment being agreed upon, for if we granted as much freedom to children under 21, it would mean giving them the green light to lead a loose life that leads to moral decay. Nobody will be able to supervise the young girls who are still unaware of all the responsibilities of life and have their own way without their father's consent.

We claim, Mr. Speaker, that this amendment is in order. If it were not adopted, then there would exist a contradiction between the Civil Code in which the fathers' responsibility towards his child under 21 is made clear and the Criminal Code which for the time being does not enable young girls to consult their father in order to be allowed to undergo abortion.

Many other reasons could be put forward to justify the fact that the father should be consulted when a girl under 21 wants to undergo abortion.

I could quote a few cases which unfortunately arose. In fact, young girls or other persons have induced young girls to undergo abortion so as to obtain a better share of the estate, to inherit greater amounts of money. I would not like this afternoon to deal with all these matters for my hon. colleagues will be able to throw much more light on the facts than I.

I would like to remind the Minister of Justice of the fact that if we adopt the bill in its present state, the provinces will have the right to state that the Criminal Code abolishes the authorithy of the father vested in him by the civil law of the provinces.

[English]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak specifically to amendment 27. This proposal would deprive a woman of the provisions of clause 18 relating to therapeutic abortions if she happened to be unmarried or under 21 and did not receive parental consent to a therapeutic abortion. The policy of clause 18 is to restrict therapeutic abortions purely to medical considerations, and such considerations ought not to be confused, as this amendment proposes, with age or consent.

[Translation]

As for the provincial law, I must point out to the hon. members of the Ralliement créditiste who are well aware of it, that the subsection 7 under section 237 of the law reads as follows:

> Nothing in subsection 4 shall be construed as making unnecessary the obtaining of any authorization or consent that is or may be required, otherwise than under this act, before any means are used for the purpose of carrying out an intention to procure a miscarriage of a female person.

There is nothing to prevent the provincial law, before such surgery is decided upon, to request the consent of the state and that of the parents.

Mr. Speaker: Is the house ready for the question?

• (3:30 p.m.)

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. minister for telling the house that the Ralliement créditiste is of all the parties the best informed on the matter under study. We agree with his statement and that is maybe one of the main reasons for our wishing to inform the house about our opinions whether on the bill, as a whole or on particular opinions about the litigious sections it contains, especially, section 18 which concerns the amendment now under study. This amendment would require the terms of subsection (8) under section 18, to be much more specific, and I quote:

> —a female person who, being pregnant, permits a qualified medical practitioner to use in an accredited or approved hospital any means described in paragraph (a) for the purpose of carrying out her intention to procure her own miscarriage.

The object of our amendment is to delete the words:

> —a female person who, being pregnant,— and to replace them by the following words:

> —"a female person who is married or of the full age of twenty-one years, or a female person who is under the full age of twenty-one years, with the written consent of her parents or guardian."

The reasons for such an amendment deserve to be thoroughly examined.

That amendment is to state clearly the problems doctors will encounter in the case of a female person under the full age of twenty-one years, who is pregnant.

Some people may accuse us once more of indulging in witch-hunting and of getting lost in the meandering considerations of past centuries, but it is not by accusing us of being mediaeval that they will clear up problems as old as the world itself.

If the daughters of Adam and Eve had had the freedom to dispose of the fœtuses nestling in their womb, where would mankind be?

On the contrary, Mr. Speaker, the fruit of their love was of such a value that never would they have thought, even for a second, to get rid of it. They may have regretted the apple but never this fertilized ovum which was intensely wanted through one of the deepest instincts the Creator has ever instilled in the soul, one which is irresistibly manifested in the body by the ineffable sensual pleasure linked to the function of reproduction.

This instinct has been transmitted in full. This explains the existence of the world. Without doubt, it happened one day that a pervert came to sully this unescapable natural law. I would tend to think that this sad individual was a descendent of Cain.

And ever since, for all sorts of reasons that are more or less pure fantasy, and exist most often only in minds floating in unreality whose lucubrations are causing this incredible loss of time we are now sustaining, others have been continuing to try and legislate against nature.

One must not let a girl under age alone reach some agreement with her doctor or the committee of the doctors of a hospital. The father and the mother of this girl must also take their responsibilities. One-sided decisions from the part of the child who is under 21, could greatly affect, in such circumstances, the health of her parents.

One talks of the health of the mother. One should also think of the health of the other close relatives. The extreme care which one brings to the protection of the pregnant mother is both very understandable and commendable. The whole problem consists in knowing which of the two following possibilities will affect more the life or the health of the mother. Is it abortion or normal pregnancy carried to its normal conclusion?

Now, if we refer to the evidence of the specialists who appeared before the committee on justice and legal affairs, we notice that the facts are sometimes very different from the inhuman theories of the supporters of abortion.

Allow me to quote, Mr. Speaker, a few words from Dr. Lavigne which are taken from the proceedings of the committee. In No. 12, page 535, one can read and I quote:

> However, the effects of abortion are often detrimental to women and create guilt and hostility complexes in the mother and this is often worse than what can be obtained by abortion, or than the secondary psychiatric or psychological reactions due to an unwanted pregnancy.
> We should ask ourselves whether in trying to solve one problem we do not create another problem.

To help the doctors understand more clearly the situation of a girl under age and whose problem is now under study, I would say that it is important that the doctor consulted should have the consent of the parents or guardians. That is the very reason for the amendment. The doctors would be delighted with this additional precaution.

Dr. Lavigne said, on behalf of all the Quebec doctors, and I quote:

> It must be noted that this bill does not take into account the personal conviction of physicians and hospitals who fear that they might be liable to legal proceedings for not having practised that which they consider as not acceptable as far as their own professional ethics are concerned. Medical doctors are always concerned with protecting their patients against death.

Indeed, doctors want the acts they are called upon to perform to be carefully considered, strictly scientific and medical, and consistent with the most elementary laws in the world. Dr. Lavigne added, and I quote:

> However, we believe that only scientific medical research will bring a true solution to this problem and favour any committee set up to study the problem. Dr. Hurteau has proven to us that abortion, in the present state of medical science, remains the murder of a living human being. Any doctor or hospital should be free to refuse to participate in this medical technique and this is not mentioned in the bill. Since this technique has to do with the life of a human being, the decision should not be left up to the sole will of the patient.

• (3:40 p.m.)

The amendment now before us, Mr. Speaker, seeks to give a little more precision to that. I repeat the last sentence of the quotation I just gave:

> Since this technique has to do with the life of a human being, the decision should not be left up to the sole will of the patient.

Is there anything more logical than to demand in the legislation the co-operation of the parents or the guardians in order to help the doctor responsible obtain a better knowledge of the health of his patient. And we should not forget, as I said a while ago, that the immediate family of this pregnant teenager could be affected in their physical or mental health just as much as the girl herself. I pointed this out a while ago and I noticed that the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) seemed to smile, finding this statement funny.

I think there is here food for thought, pondering and discussion.

Many possibilities or suppositions could be involved. The father has a heart attack upon learning that his daughter has secured a miscarriage. The mother has a nervous breakdown following the abortion performed on her dear young daughter.

Some may object on the other hand that many parents would also be affected upon learning that their daughter is going to give birth to a child. I say no and I will prove the merit of my opinion by evidence given before the committee on justice and legal affairs. It is the opinion expressed by Dr. Walsh, a psychiatrist, and I quote:

> There is at the present time a considerable body of psychiatric opinion which states that it is impossible to prove that either neurosis or psychosis can be prevented by abortion. This has been illustrated in several studies.
> On the contrary, neurosis and psychosis can be provoked by abortion, and this has nothing to do with the individual patient's religious or moral philosophy.

Mr. Speaker, that is one of the favourite arguments of those who do not agree with us, who say we express the opinion of Catholic theologians and of members of the clergy and that our position therefore has no legal or medical value. We often come back to this argument as we would very much like it to be taken seriously.

When, everyday, at the opening of the sitting of the house, Your Honour says the prayers asking God to protect Her Majesty the Queen, her husband, Prince Charles, Princess Ann, I do not think this disgraces the house in any way. On the contrary, I think all hon. members are glad thus to state their Christian principles.

In the same way, when, by chance, the policy we are promoting agrees with the teachings of the Catholic church and of all the other Christian churches, there is no reason to feel upset. It simply proves that, from every aspect, we are right.

And I go on quoting Dr. Walsh:

> Here I am talking on psychological grounds. In other words, it has been our experience that, whatever the patient's moral viewpoint, abortion is, in fact, psychologically harmful. Therefore, many psychiatrists who accept this viewpoint would be reluctant to recommend abortion.

Such is the conclusion reached by Dr. Walsh.

Mr. Speaker, in the light of this evidence, it is easy to understand how important it is for the doctors, the psychiatrists and all those who might be requested to perform therapeutic abortions, to be in possession of all the necessary information on the condition of the patient.

How could we not feel shocked when we think of the incredible number of hon. members who close their ears to such statements? Fortunately, there are still, on the opposition side, free people who are not afraid of calling upon the whole country to witness the war they are waging for the sake of principles which are so important and so essential to the honour of the country. Besides, if she becomes pregnant the very young girl, who sees everything through rose-coloured spectacles, and for when nothing is more beautiful than love, is not mature enough to feel the seriousness of the problem; she is still malleable and she often falls a prey to common prejudices. Should not parents or guardians lend a helping hand?

Mr. Speaker, all of us have met with situations of that kind. It is quite normal for parents to intervene when their children find themselves in a predicament. Of course, we eliminate—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I regret to have to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I would like—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member asks the house to allow him to carry on with his remarks.

• (3:50 p.m.)

[English]

Does the house agree to allow the hon. member to pursue his remarks beyond the allotted time?

Some hon. Members: No.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: There is no unanimous consent.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I have nearly finished—

Mr. Speaker: Unfortunately, the house did not agree.

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I regret that we cannot get the unanimous consent of the house so that the hon. member for Champlain (Mr. Matte) may carry on with his very serious remarks.

I would like to express my views, as a father, on this fair amendment to the omnibus bill. This proposed amendment suggests a reform which I think is quite justifiable. The members of the Ralliement Créditiste closely examine the remarks of hon. members on this amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) which is before us. We agree with this amendment to the effect that the words "a female person who, being pregnant" be replaced by the words "a female person who is married or of the full age of twenty-one years, or a female person who is under the full age of twenty-one years, with the written consent of her parents or guardian."

Mr. Speaker, this amendment is logical and I commend the hon. member for Abitibi for moving it, because it forces us to think seriously of the fact that this house sometimes passes legislation, making light of parental authority.

Mr. Speaker, whoever has children is in a position to consider this problem in its true perspective. I agree with the hon. member for Abitibi who, as the father of a large family, fears that such a legislation may lead to abuses.

In fact, if a girl under the full age of twenty-one who becomes pregnant does not need to have her parents' consent to get an abortion, we can expect serious abuses.

The minister said that our amendment was provided for in the act. So why not accept this amendment right away by the vote that will take place shortly, so that it is provided in the act that a girl under the full age of twenty-one years should get the written consent of her parents or guardians to get an abortion?

Nothing, I think, must be said lightly. This is why after scrutinizing the bill, I feel that if we accepted the amendment the minister would not feel frustrated. He leads us to believe that he must bend before the dictatorship of a Prime Minister who wants him to have this omnibus bill passed without any amendment.

The amendments we are presenting are logical. We would like them to be adopted and we regret the dictatorship which exists in parliament. This is why I am convinced that the Minister of Justice himself is sincerely sorry he did not follow his first thought, which was to divide the omnibus bill into several bills, as he said himself publicly.

In view of the fact that an order has been given and that amendments are rejected, I submit that if 14, 15, 16 or 17 year olds do not understand the beauty of maternity and hope to conceal the fault they believe they have committed, even though we are living in a perverted world we must ensure that their parents are given full authority to give their consent to abortion, because if the health of the minor girl is affected, her parents will have to bear the consequences.

I think this legislation should be made clearer, more explicit. The minister should explain to us why he does not want at least this amendment to be passed.

Mr. Speaker: Is the house ready for the question?

Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

[English]

All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

[Mr. Dumont.]

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it. I declare the motion lost on division.

Before the next motion, no. 28, is put to the house may I draw the attention of hon. members to a printing error in the wording of the said motion as printed in the Special Notice Paper. The house will recall that on Friday last the hon. member for Abitibi was granted leave of the house to delete from his motion the words "or approved". The text, as it appears in the Special Notice Paper, unfortunately includes these words. The correct text of the hon. member's motion is appended to this day's Order Paper.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin (for Mr. Laprise) moved motion No. 28:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting paragraph (a) of sub-section 6 of clause 18 on page 43 and substituting therefor:

"(a) For the purpose of this section, an accredited hospital means a hospital containing not less than four hundred (400) beds and/or forming part of a university, in order that the therapeutic abortion committee may execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics."

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) has moved the amendment which you have just read and to which we might revert later on.

Mr. Speaker, one can readily see that the purpose of that amendment is to clarify the words "accredited hospital" not only under clause 18, but everywhere they appear in the bill.

I wish a definition were given of "accredited hospital". Is it meant to be a 25, 30, 100 or 200 bed hospital? Or any hospital, whatever its status, where the medical practitioners are more or less competent? One does not know. We know that in a 20 or 25-bed building with medical practitioners in attendance, abortion could be procured by qualified physicians.

The hon. member for Abitibi, by means of his motion, wants the words "accredited hospital" to be clarified. In his opinion, the words "accredited hospital" should apply to an institution providing at least 400 beds.

Mr. Speaker, that is a minimum. We believe that a 400-bed hospital is not a small one; however, we consider that such an hospital, where several highly qualified medical practitioners have to be in attendance, should be able to avail itself of all health, therapeutic, medical and other services in order to perform abortions.

If abortions must be procured under the law, let they be done at least in a safe and sure way, with all the odds in favour of the patient, which is not necessarily the case in small hospitals.

There are many services in large hospitals or in institutions of 400 beds or more which are not to be found in smaller ones. And the most evident proof of that, Mr. Speaker, is that in Quebec particularly—it is the same in other provinces—several hospitals with less than 400 beds have today to close down at the request of the government because their services are inadequate and do not comply with the minimum standards of health.

I do not say, Mr. Speaker, that hospitals with less than 400 beds should not perform abortions because they do not have sufficient health services and so forth.

That is not the question. The greatest security possible must be ensured with regard to abortions, in accordance with the professional ethics of those who will be performing such medical operations.

Consequently, the hon. member for Abitibi has drawn the line on the right side of the 400 bed hospitals, to make sure that hospitals will be in a position to give proper medical care—which is not guaranteed at least in certain hospitals—and that the therapeutic abortion committee may comply with the professional ethics when an abortion is performed.

This amendment seems to me most acceptable to the government for the simple reason that it is legalizing abortion, in short that it is allowing it in all possible and imaginable cases where probably the life or the health of the mother would be in danger.

Mr. Speaker, while we are in favour of the legalization of abortion, I am also asking the house—on behalf of the hon. member for Abitibi and my colleagues—to have at least the decency of providing in the legislation a minimum of protection for the patients admitted into the said hospital to undergo a therapeutic abortion. It seems to me quite logical to obtain at least the assurance that patients treated in the hospitals will obtain sound and competent care worthy of the university level in a well organized hospital of at least 400 beds.

Mr. Speaker, everyone knows about the number of illegal abortions that are practised all over Canada and in many other countries.

All hon. members know that abortions are procured for pregnant persons, female—to speak as the minister—by abortionists who are not professional physicians but what we might call "jobbers" who work at an hourly rate or by the job, as the case may be. It is a professional "racket". I apologize for using such English expressions in a speech in French, but I want to show the Minister of Justice he is not the only one who is bilingual.

Mr. Speaker, everybody knows that all over Canada, in a word everywhere, illegal or clandestine abortions are practised. For the majority of those abortions the fact remains—and it is well-known—that abortionists who are not doctors but who do this in part to help and at the same time to make a little money, do not use the best means. They are professional killers—because abortion is still a homicide, a murder—who take advantage of the situation because the mother or the unmarried mother are in distress. The means they use are against the most basic hygienic principles and consequently, not only is the health but also the life of the mother endangered.

Mr. Speaker, the minister is well aware that illegal abortions we hear about sometimes, have most serious consequences which more often than not, prove to be dangerous for the woman.

If we cannot help the passing of that clause, namely the legalization of abortion to which we are opposed with all our might, let us at least ensure a minimum of safety in hospitals so that patients will be able to get abortion feeling secure because they will be treated in appropriate hygienic conditions, and receive professional care that will enable them to recover, whereas, with abortionists, there is the fear of death, sooner or later, or other serious diseases. This is unavoidable since, as the government itself acknowledges, even when this bill is passed, the number of clandestine abortions will keep on increasing, and this has been proved beyond any doubt in other countries.

Mr. Speaker, if we cannot have any control over illicit abortions, we should at least state that no therapeutic abortion committee is to be set up nor any abortion performed in any hospital containing less than 400 beds, as is provided for in the act.

The law should compel hospitals to meet minimum health standards. I could give to the Minister of Justice the names of several hospitals in the province of Quebec which must close down soon because they were giving inadequate service. Not that the staff was not well trained, but a 100-bed hospital cannot give the same quality of service as would a 400-bed unit.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment is very important. As a matter of fact, the omnibus bill defines a person who might ask the doctor for an abortion as follows: "A female person who, being pregnant".

Mr. Speaker, no one will deny that this definition must be made more explicit. As a matter of fact, when a pregnant woman asks a doctor for an abortion, it may happen that the doctor is not a responsible one, as there are incompetents in all professions, among lawyers as well as among doctors. What protection does this woman have?

If the doctor says that he will consider the matter,—and the law authorizes an abortion only when the therapeutic abortion committee of the hospital has issued a certificate,—if he submits the case to the therapeutic abortion committee, when the hospital is not authorized to procure abortions, the patient runs the risk of receiving very poor care.

The therapeutic committee may say: My dear man, we can perform an abortion, as the life or health of the patient would or "would be likely to" be endangered. The therapeutic committee will be in such a position that it will have to say yes.

Then the therapeutic abortion committee issues a certificate and the doctor performs the abortion in circumstances that leave much to be desired and could lead to serious consequences.

The patient will have confidence, but she will not know whether those people are quacks or professional killers. She will never know it either if the hospital where she applies does not have the required services.

It is the responsibility of the minister to place the hospitals and the doctors who perform an abortion under the obligation of complying with minimum standards.

Mr. Speaker, this is something essential. It is extremely important, in my opinion, and the minister will have to admit we are right in this regard.

If a person goes to see a lawyer, it is, above all, because he has a problem to solve. He chose that lawyer instead of another, because he trusts him.

If a woman consults a doctor, it is because she has a problem. She is ill, she is suffering from a momentary or perhaps more serious disorder. Anyway she has a more or less serious reason to go and see her doctor. She has some sort of a problem. Why would she choose this doctor instead of another? There are hundreds of doctors everywhere. Very few communities are without any doctor in Canada. There will always be a shortage of doctors, but they can meet the needs. Every individual has to make his own choice. The minister can choose his doctor. I can choose my own doctor, as well as everybody else.

Why would this patient go to one doctor in particular? It is because she trusts him. Therefore, the doctor must be worthy of that confidence. As relationship based upon trust must exist.

If the doctor is not qualified, if he is not serious or if he is an alcoholic—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Minister of Justice is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the hon. member about doctors are very interesting but the amendment deals with hospitals and the number of beds available.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to play on words uselessly, but it seems to me that what I am saying concerns abortions and the conditions in which they will be performed. I am dealing with the safety, for the patient, at the hospital, such conditions should also concern those who perform the abortion. It is above all a matter of confidence and safety.

Mr. Speaker, as I was saying, the doctor must, through his competence, experience, professional qualifications, and respect for his professional ethics, deserve the confidence of his patient, just as the lawyer must deserve that of his client.

The doctor may be a member of a team of specialists or doctors, in any hospital. Now, to help him, so that he can be sure he can perform the abortion, I feel the doctor will have to perform it in a hospital where the services are adequate.

If a very competent doctor wants to do a good job for his patient, and does it seriously, but finds himself in a small hospital where the equipment is not adequate, etc, it may happen that even if he is competent and serious, even though he is honest and trustworthy, even though he can be fully trusted, without the necessary instruments, the minimum equipment required, without nurses to take care of the patient, then he will not be protected with regard to procuring an abortion.

A very small hospital, Mr. Speaker, will be allowed to accept an abortion case, and to designate a doctor to whom the patient will have to turn to perform the abortion. The doctor will comply, as he has no choice; if a certificate is issued, but he does not want to perform the abortion, he will be subject to prosecution on criminal charges. So, he is bound to comply. What safeguards will he have if he has to perform the abortion in a hospital which is not adequately equipped?

For those who know something about the matter, I shall say the hospitals with 400 beds are well equipped. There are also, of course hospitals with 300 beds which are just as well equipped as those with 500 beds. We should think in terms of an average. According to statistics, hospitals with 400 beds are adequately equipped since they are subject to such heavy demand.

• (4:20 p.m.)

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) was quite right in presenting this amendment—if only to dispel certain prejudices entertained by government members—for it does not aim at forbidding abortion but rather at making sure that it is performed under healthy and safe conditions which protect the patient, the doctor, the therapeutic committee on abortion and the government which has legalized abortion.

Mr. Speaker, if it is realized some day that 25, 30, 50 or 100 abortions have been performed in inadequately equipped hospitals, the patients would be entitled to blame the government for failing to provide for minimum security standards.

Mr. Speaker, we must take our responsibilities and see to it that abortions, if allowed, are performed in proper conditions. If doctors were consulted about the matter, we would realize that they agree, because they certainly want to be protected themselves by this legislation.

There were numerous opportunities in the course of this debate, to discuss this confusing problem. If the minister says that the amendment moved by the hon. member is not valid because there is a comma here and a line there, I think he does not adopt the proper attitude.

This is what I said to a visitor who asked me why we were moving so many amendments that were all rejected. Does it mean, he said, that all those amendments are stupid and out of order?

I think, Mr. Speaker, that we are here to legislate, that the opposition has a constructive role to play, that it must not always oppose but take part in the debates in order to improve the legislation.

If the minister says that the amendment is not in order, it means that he allows abortions to be performed in any Canadian hospital, by any doctor whether or not he is an alcoholic or whether or not he has adequate equipment. The minister no longer asks himself questions but simply says: Perform abortion on a large scale, commercialize it, do whatever you like, we could not care less.

I think the minister would prove irresponsible if he failed to recognize that there is something valid and positive in the subject-matter of the amendment, the purpose of which is not to oppose the government but to protect it against the disastrous effects of an abortion being performed in a hospital lacking proper equipment or in a hospital where abortion would be done by an alcoholic doctor.

Mr. Speaker, I am looking forward to hearing what the minister will say in this regard, not because we are anxious to know if he will deny once more our assertions, but in order to know his viewpoint. I feel he cannot do otherwise than to accept the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, before concluding my remarks, I would like to tell the minister and members of the cabinet that there is nothing wrong for the Liberal party to vote for an amendment moved by the Ralliement Créditiste. This does not mean that they are becoming Créditistes. In fact, when we are supporting an amendment or a bill introduced by a Liberal member, this does not mean either that we are becoming Liberals.

We are here to legislate and we should try to forget those stupid political discussions which have been going on since we began to consider this bill, and endeavour to produce a legislation which will ensure the protection of women, doctors, the therapeutic abortion committee and the legislator.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I regret to inform the hon. member who has just resumed his seat, that for very valid reasons, we must reject once again the amendment.

First, I must point out that when this bill has been considered by the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, several amendments have been moved by members from all political parties and the government has accepted about 25 of them.

We are now at the stage of the committee report. This report has been prepared by the members of the four political parties involved and we have to accept or reject the report. The amendments moved by the members of the Ralliement Créditiste are not affecting this bill, but the committee report.

Well, as I said, the committee has accepted about twenty or thirty amendments—

Mr. Fortin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Lotbinière on a point of order.

Mr. Fortin: I should like to remind the house, Mr. Speaker, that I think the minister is out of order. He is not dealing at all with the amendment under consideration.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Then, these interventions concerning the debate are of another order, Mr. Speaker.

The standing committee on justice and legal Affairs met 14 times in 30 days. It really meant business. The committee made inquiries, called witnesses, almost all the officials from the Department of Justice. After six days of debate on second reading, 14 committee meetings, and 8 more days of discussion in the house at the stage of the committee report, I can say we are very much concerned with this important legislation.

I should like to read the bill, and particularly the sections and sub-sections to which the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) refers to. This is related to the definition of a hospital in which therapeutic abortions can be performed.

This definition applies to two kinds of hospital, to an "accredited hospital" or to an "approved hospital", and the words "or approved" have been added by the committee on justice and legal affairs.

This amendment had been proposed to the committee. It was quite proper since it had been accepted by the committee at that stage. A hospital—

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Abitibi on a point of order.

Mr. Laprise: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker, and I wish to say that Mr. Speaker asked me last Friday to delete the word "accredited" from amendment No. 28. As a matter of fact, the Speaker said, as reported on page 7963 of Hansard, and I quote:

> Amendment No. 28 appears unacceptable in its present form because, if it were adopted, it would give two different definitions to the words "accredited hospital" as used in the bill. However, as this is merely a technical error, the house would no doubt allow the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) to change his amendment by deleting therefrom the words "or approved".

I think those words were added by the committee as the Minister of Justice has just said. But those are the very words Mr. Speaker asked me to delete from my amendment to make it acceptable.

I wish to point out to the Minister of Justice that his reply is running counter to the ruling issued by Mr. Speaker last Friday.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): That is not correct. Mr. Speaker recommended that the words "or approved" be deleted because the amendment of the hon. member was related to paragraph (a) subsection 6, section 18 of Bill C-150. This paragraph refers rather to accredited hospitals, and paragraph (b) refers to approved hospitals. Thus, as the amendment of the hon. member refers rather to paragraph (a) but not to paragraph (b), Mr. Speaker suggested to the hon. member to delete the word "approved".

I am speaking about the definition given by Bill C-150, of the term "accredited hospital" at paragraph (a) and "approved hospital" at paragraph (b), subsection 6 of section 18.

> Under paragraph (a), "accredited hospital" means a hospital accredited by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation in which diagnostic services and medical, surgical and obstetrical treatment are provided;

Paragraph (b) reads as follows:

> "approved hospital" means a hospital in a province approved for the purposes of this section by the Minister of Health of that province;

Because of this definition, only hospitals accredited by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation or approved hospitals designated by the Minister of Health of a province are covered by this section.

In my opinion, this is sound and secure protection.

• (4:30 p.m.)

[English]

Now, what is this amendment trying to do? The amendment says that instead of allowing therapeutic abortions to be performed in an accredited hospital or an approved hospital they should only be permitted in a special type of hospital, one which must have at least 400 beds or is a hospital attached to a university. We reject this amendment because in our opinion it would impose an unwarranted restriction on the number of hospitals in which therapeutic abortions could legally be carried out.

Moreover, the amendment contains an unjustified presumption that perfect professional ethics do not exist in smaller hospitals. We believe that the tests of accreditation or of approval for which provision is made in the clause itself are entirely adequate. Our information from the Canadian Hospital Association is that the size of the hospital has no relationship to the quality of service or care which it provides. In fact I suppose some officers of the Canadian Hospital Association and of the Canadian Medical Association would admit that, for certain types of treatment, in many cases one gets better care, more regular care, more personal care, in the smaller hospitals. I do not think the size of the hospital has anything to do with the standard of care provided.

At a meeting in April, 1966, between representatives of the Canadian Bar Association, the Canadian Medical Association and the Department of Justice, the question of the accreditation of hospitals was specifically raised by the department. The reply was to the effect that where such treatment was available it could be carried out under the proposed amendment in an accredited hospital regardless of the size of that hospital. Hon. members who look up the testimony given before the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare which reviewed this matter during the last parliament will see that representatives of the Canadian Medical Association and others supported this point of view.

What the hon. member is really saying is that he has no confidence in the smaller hospitals. Yes, he is insisting—

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière, on a point of order.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order simply because what the Minister of Justice has just said, with all due respect, is entirely false. It imputes motives to me that I do not have, and statements that I have not made.

Mr. Speaker, I want this to be clear to everyone; I repeated it and I even hit my desk with my fist when I said it: there is not necessarily a link between the quality of the services and the number of beds or the size of the building. Generally speaking, services are more adequate in large hospitals, that is those with a minimum of 400 beds; even the Hospital Association recognizes that fact.

Mr. Speaker, I would not have the minister, under the pretext of fighting for his stupid point of view, make others say stupid things, when it is he who says them.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, this is no point of order, but never mind; let us read the amendment. The amendment says that an "accredited hospital", in this text, means "a hospital containing not less than 400" beds and/or forming part of a university".

The only hospitals the hon. member trusts are those in which there are at least 400 beds and which form part of a university. To my mind, he is prejudiced against rural hospitals, against rural ridings and against the small cities of Canada or the province of Quebec.

I believe the Ralliement créditiste party does not trust rural hospitals!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Abitibi, on another point of order.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

I simply reject all the charges just laid by the hon. Minister of Justice. I wonder if he still deserves that name after making such a statement.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I cannot understand why the hon. member is so sensitive. Indeed, does not his amendment say:

> A hospital containing not less than four hundred (400) beds and/or forming part of a university, in order that the therapeutic abortion committee may execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics.

According to this, there would be no "professional ethics" in the smaller hospitals.

That is what he contends and it really amazes me.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Chairman, I feel the hon. minister is indeed unfair when he makes such statements.

The amendment is drafted in the following terms and I quote:

(a) For the purpose of this section, an accredited hospital means—

—I repeat, an "accredited hospital"—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): This is not a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Chairman, I shall go on reading the amendment:

—means a hospital containing not less than four hundred (400) beds—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member has already taken part in the debate and I can see no point of order right now.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, one must then conclude that under this amendment, the Ralliement créditiste does not trust small hospitals, does not believe that "an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics" can be found in small and/or rural hospitals.

I humbly suggest to the Chair that this amendment reflects a bias against all rural, all small hospitals in the province of Quebec. The women who live in small towns in the province of Quebec—

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, does the hon. minister allow me a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière has a question.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, could the hon. minister tell me what he means by "rural hospitals"—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member knows that the member who is asked a question does not have to answer.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Not now.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. Minister of Justice has the floor.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): The submission of this amendment leaves us under the impression that the Ralliement créditiste is not ready to grant the women who live in small towns in the province of Quebec, in villages and rural communities of that province, the same rights as to the women in the larger cities of that province.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) rising again to a point of order?

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Lotbinière wants to speak on a question of privilege.

Mr. Fortin: I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I should like to tell the house that what the minister just said does not tally with the facts. Actually, in Arthabaska, in the constituency of Lotbinière, which is considered as a rural one, even on the electoral maps, there is a hospital with more than 400 beds. Therefore I believe the minister has no right to make such an assertion and we could give him many reasons for that. The Minister of Justice is a liar of the worst kind.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Minister of Justice has the floor.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I cannot understand why the members of the Ralliement créditiste are so upset. Nor can I understand why people who are supposed to represent rural areas of the province of Quebec should choose to cause a serious wrong to all the women who live in the rural communities of the province of Quebec. Indeed, the government is not of the opinion that a woman living in a rural area or in a small town of Canada or of the province of Quebec deserves less service than the other women of the country. Therefore, we reject this amendment unreservedly.

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I am quite willing to speak on this amendment and I thank very sincerely my colleague, the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) for having moved it on my behalf since I had to leave for a few minutes.

I was surprised at the insulting remarks, I would say, of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) who imputed to us motives that we have not. We have never said that we do not trust our rural hospitals nor that we want to deny any woman, from any area, the right to the care she needs.

The minister told us that we felt a little nervous, but I think that it is rather he who gets more and more nervous as this debate is progressing.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment I introduced reads as follows:

"(a) For the purpose of this section, an accredited or approved hospital means a hospital containing not less than four hundred (400) beds and/or forming part of a university, in order that the therapeutic abortion committee—

If there is one, because that is not yet sure.

—may execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics."

Mr. Speaker, when it is a matter of deciding whether one must kill a being which is supposed to live, it will have to be done in a normal way and as carefully as possible.

Today a killer gets every opportunity to defend himself.

The present Liberal party went as far as to abolish the death penalty for he who, in a deliberate way, takes the life of another person.

Mr. Speaker, in that struggle against abortion, we fight to protect the life of a helpless being. And if those beings have a right to be protected, it is the role of the state to ensure that protection, for themselves are deprived of any means of defence.

That is why we use every available means to see that the law should be quite clear, in order to ensure that the minimum number of mistakes will be made. We know that the government intends to establish committees of doctors responsible for deciding whether it will be possible to put an end to a life.

Mr. Speaker, it is not at my request that the amendment was moved but at the request of doctors who told us: We want those therapeutic abortions to be practised only in big centres and not in small centres in which everybody knows everybody else, so that people cannot point the finger at a well-known and respected doctor, saying that he has become a professional abortionist.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Laprise: That is one of the reasons which led us to move this amendment. Doctors do not want to be considered as murderers, nor to be seen in such a light, when they are obliged, at the government's request, to destroy a life.

This amendment is also designed to preserve the identity of pregnant persons who will resort to abortion.

We know, Mr. Speaker, and the Minister of Justice also knows that in small communities, everybody knows everybody else, and if a girl or a married woman requests an abortion, the finger of scorn is pointed at her.

We have often been aware in our rural areas of so-called accidents—because many girls thought they could play around without getting into trouble—and to avoid scandal, a girl used to go to big cities like Montreal and Quebec to get a job, coming back seven or eight months later. Her employment was over and scandal was avoided. Very few people knew what had happened, and the baby was alive.

Mr. Speaker, if all small hospitals are allowed to do it—I do not question their competence nor that of their medical staff, because they certainly can perform that kind of operation as well as doctors in large cities—all the desirable security is not given. In the hospitals of LaSarre, Amos, Val-d'Or and Rouyn, the doctors are as expert in this field—when they have made the necessary studies—as in any other Montreal hospital—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Minister of Justice on a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I wish to call the attention of the house to the wording of the amendment:

—execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics."

How does the hon. member explain the lack of "professional ethics" in small hospitals, since these are the words he used in his own amendment?

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, the minister is really a blockhead. He did not understand anything, he will not understand anything.

Some hon. Members: He has received orders—

Mr. Laprise: Yes, he must have had orders to have this legislation passed at any cost. But at least my colleagues and myself will have done our duty and cleared up as best we could this legislation, and we shall have nothing to reproach ourselves with when the effects of it will be felt.

Mr. Speaker, I moved this amendment for an entirely different reason than the one the Minister of Justice has attributed to me. We want to prevent young girls from being embarrassed when they go to a little hospital.

Another point is to avoid that hospitals, even if they are accreditated—and I believe there are still some—be insufficiently equipped to perform this type of operation. I know one, in particular, that can ensure very normal deliveries, but in a village where there is only one doctor.

How do they want to organize a therapeutic abortion committee under these conditions? The Minister of Justice should, in my view, reconsider the whole question. And I would be happy to hear other hon. members say so. Other members of the Liberal party may also express their opinions and I would be happy to hear them on that.

An hon. Member: They are not able to do it. They are afraid.

Mr. J.-A. Mongrain (Trois-Rivières): Mr. Speaker, I feel the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) might not be happy to hear my comments, even if he asked for them, because I have been listening for the last two weeks to the most rambling speeches I have ever heard during my whole career.

Those people who pass themselves off as guardians of virtue, come here to speak to us of what is the least noble in human nature.

They are in such a state of confusion that they say certain things even if they have to contradict themselves a few minutes later.

For instance, the hon. member for Abitibi spoke about a girl who had a mishap and wants an abortion. The bill makes no mention of such a thing. There is no question of allowing ny woman, who wants an abortion for all kinds of reasons, to have one.

However, the question is to authorize a woman to procure an abortion under the control of a medical board, when her physical or mental health or her life is endangered. And those people who claim to be more virtuous than the others—their electors whom they managed to deceive, are as virtuous as they are—do not trust their own physician.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

[Mr. Laprise.]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Lotbinière rises on a question of privilege.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I should like to take up the assertion of the hon. member for Trois-Rivières, when he said that the members of the Ralliement créditiste deceived their electors.

Mr. Speaker, you will agree with me that such a statements affects our privileges.

We have not been elected through theft, electoral funds or patronage. We have been honestly elected and we have the courage of our convictions—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. The hon. member for Trois-Rivières.

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, again, I say that they have deceived the population and that they have been deceiving their electors for two weeks by their false statements, when they say for instance, that Liberal members have been instructed to vote in favour of that bill. It is absolutely untrue.

And if decency and the rules allowed me to do so, I would call them liars, because they do not tell the truth. This has never been so. Only when he calls the members of—

Mr. Corbin: Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The honourable member for Madawaska-Victoria on a point of order.

Mr. Corbin: Mr. Speaker, I ask for your indulgence. There is so much noise in that part of the house that it is impossible for us to hear the enlightening comments of the member for Trois-Rivières. I therefore ask you to call them to order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Indeed, an elementary Standing Order stipulates that when a member has the floor he should not be interrupted.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, they even went so far as to call us murderers a while ago. I wonder what their position will be in the face of mothers they will condemn to death, when doctors have decided they must choose between the life of the mother and that of the child. I wonder who will be the more committed murderer according to his conscience, if the members of the Ralliement créditiste succeed in having this bill rejected, a bill which was conceived and drafted by people as serious as they are and I am charitable when I say "as serious as they are".

Mr. Speaker, their amendment stipulates that abortion must absolutely be performed in a well-equipped hospital. But all those who have ever been to the hospital know that there are perfectly well-equipped hospitals with 100, 150, 200 beds, staffed with doctors who are as conscientious as those in any big hospital. And I say it is rather amusing to see the way the members of Ralliement Créditiste are caught red-handed for they do not even trust their own hospitals nor their own constituents who will want to procure themselves a miscarriage.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Mongrain: They will force the mothers, whose life is endangered, to travel hundreds of miles, to the other end of the constituency of Abitibi, for instance, to get to a 400 bed-hospital with the expenses and dangers involved.

Mr. Speaker, such is the logic of those people who for two weeks, have indulged in petty politics with regard to this bill which is not perfect of course—in party politics, which will enable them to go back to their constituency around election time and say: We are the guardians of virtue. Yet they are the ones who today call others liars, traitors, murderers. Those are the guardians of virtue, Mr. Speaker, the ones who feed on things as shocking as those we have been hearing for two weeks. I have never seen such experts on immorality or bestiality as those I have just seen among the members of the Ralliement Créditiste.

Mr. Speaker, they talk of an atmosphere of professional ethics as if such a thing could be found only in large hospitals.

As for me, I would like to talk about an atmosphere lacking in professional ethics in this house on account of the demagogy those people have indulged in for two weeks, while bills that could enable the government to give bread to the unemployed, to stimulate the economy, are pending because some members paralyze the work of the house, for purposes of party politics, which will enable them to say to the simple-minded, around election time: We have haved the virtue of the Canadians. Yes, Mr. Speaker, but it was by dint of lies and misrepresentations, by dint of statements which have a double meaning, by dint of mental reservations and of concealment before the electorate.

Mr. Speaker, we are studying another of these silly amendments which cannot be explained, but which enable all the members of the Ralliement Créditiste to raise, one after the other, and with a kind of masochism and parliamentary "auto-eroticism" to wallow in these dirty things which are hidden in good families.

Mr. Fortin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière on a point of order.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is merely that I think I must now make a remark. The fact is that since the hon. member for Trois-Rivières has been speaking, one wonders what he is talking about. I can read the amendment to him, but where is it? He came for it a while ago but he did not bring it back.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I thank the hon. member for Lotbinière and I also take the opportunity to ask the hon. member for Trois-Rivières who is wondering a little to kindly restrict himself exclusively to the amendment.

Mr. Rondeau: I would like to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that you are very indulgent to the hon. member for Trois-Rivières.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Lotbinière said that it was hard for him to understand; this does not surprise me, because they are rather hard of understanding in that area. This does not surprise us.

I repeat that for two weeks they have been stirring those things with a vengeance and prevented us from passing legislation which could improve a situation for all Canadians.

I appeal to them, if they have a little common sense left, so stop this unending twaddle and so that we can go on to some other serious business. They know themselves that this does not make sense. They have just shown us their weakness, their inconsistency and now is the time to put an end to this.

Mr. Speaker, I shall stop for a moment because I would not want to do as my friends over there—

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Shefford is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, may I point out that, a moment ago, you called the hon. member for Trois-Rivières to order. And now he is again out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I was under the impression that the hon. member for Trois-Rivières was also rising on a point of order.

• (5:00 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Mather: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to ask whether anything can be done to protect the house from these phony points of order.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Is the house ready for the question? Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I would really like to change the atmosphere of the house and bring it back to a more serious mood for I feel, that for the past fifteen days, we have had very earnest discussions, not just with arguments coming right out of our heads but coming from very competent people, whose briefs we had the opportunity to study, from medical books and reports of studies made on the subject.

All this was, indeed, done in earnest, more especially as the amendments we moved were accepted by the Chair and put into Hansard.

I am afraid some members are not in a position to discuss our amendments and to call them irresponsible, as they tried to insinuate.

The amendment under consideration is in no way questioning the quality of smaller hospitals. We are quite aware that a patient admitted to a 100 or 200 bed hospital, is attended by very capable doctors. After submitting his patient to all required examinations, in most cases, the doctor will have him transferred to a specialized hospital, not that he does not trust his own hospital but in order to provide his patient with the best possible care.

We have back home a 400-bed hospital which has an excellent reputation. Similar hospitals can be found throughout Quebec and Canada.

There are also hospitals with fewer than 400 beds, the personnel of which are extremely competent, but where it is felt preferable to call upon specialists if need be.

This is why, every week, we see people from Granby, for instance who having consulted our own doctors, are transferred to specialized hospitals in Montreal.

Now, the amendment before us this afternoon is not intended to cast a slur on small rural hospitals, but to give more weight to the provisions of the law on abortion, should they be adopted, unhappily.

It would not be normal, in a hospital of 150 to 200 beds, for a committee of doctors who have never performed abortions or who need the help of a psychiatrist, a general practitioner or a gynaecologist, and who do not have access to the services of those specialists, not to be able to send their abortion cases to those hospitals that have them.

Ordinary doctors would not be expected to give a final judgment before the committee to authorize abortion.

Now, I have here the testimony of a Liberal member, who is a doctor and who appeared before the committee on health and welfare in 1967. On page 46 of the proceedings, he himself expresses doubts about the efficiency and competence of the medical boards. Now I quote what the member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) had to say:

> —Those boards have been tried in the United States for four or five years. I will quote from the RN review of June 1966:
> Some years ago therapeutic abortion boards—usually made up of specialists—were organized in many hospitals to screen abortion requests. The boards have generally proved unsatisfactory for these reasons:

We are not questioning the skill of those hospital doctors, far from it, because it was found in the United States that some doctor committees have after a certain time fallen into routine and when an abortion case came up—and this was substantiated by inquiries that have been made—the foetus was killed and the papers were signed after by the committee of doctors.

This means that if we permit all the small country hospitals to make abortions, if they have qualified doctors to do so, there will be abortion committees throughout the country in every little village, and it will become routine. The abortion legislation will then be known as a farce and a butchery for the Canadian people.

Those ideas are not ours, they come from experts. It may seem strange, but I rely much more on medical specialists than in the nonsense of the hon. member for Trois-Rivières, and we wonder on what side of morality he is. I am not afraid, Mr. Speaker, to express my moral principles in this house because I did so in my constituency. I will continue to do so and it will take more than the hon. member for Trois-Rivières to stop me.

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

The hon. member seems to be questioning my morality but somebody who once said: "My Lord, I thank Thee that I am not as other men. All the others are—

Mr. Rondeau: More nonsense! Mr. Speaker, this is not a matter for a question of privilege, this is one more stupid remark to add the hon. member's record.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Abitibi has dealt with serious points on which I want to make a few comments. First, I want to deal with the variety of specialists needed to decide whether an abortion should be done or not. It cannot be decided upon only by three ordinary doctors, but by a gynecologist, a pediatrician and a general practitioner.

But all hospitals have not such specialists. Why? Because a gynecologist cannot make a living in a 100 or 200-bed hospital, so he will go and settle in a big city where there is a 400-bed hospital. Why? Because he will find there a greater number of patients. That accounts for the concentration of specialists in the big cities.

We should give those specialists the opportunity to study those problems thoroughly. Before any abortion could be performed specialists should be invited to examine every aspect of the problem. According to the Hon. Jack Winters, the hospitals in which the greatest number of abortions are practised are those whose committees are the most lenient.

Now then, if any physician who is neither a gynecologist, nor a pediatrist, nor again a psychiatrist may settle the future of the foetuses of the nation, I say that the Canadian people—

Mr. Mongrain: I rise on the question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Trois-Rivières rises on the question of privilege.

Mr. Mongrain: The hon. member is discussing amendment No. 29. We are studying amendment No. 28, which refers to 400-bed hospitals. Amendment No. 29 refers to gynaecologists and psychiatrists. Therefore, the hon. member is out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I do not think the hon. member for Shefford is out of order.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I am allowed only 20 minutes, because otherwise I could squelch those dumb cluck who keep on clucking from time to time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I know it is Wednesday; people may get excited and during the debate, rather unparliamentary language may be heard.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Nurses' Newsletters for March-April 1968, on page 69, deals with the definitions of hospitals and their competence. It reads as follows:

> As you can see, the three definitions rather push aside the denominational aspect and clearly indicate that the legislator intends to place the medical profession in a state of bondage.

We are told that physicians should be protected, but this legislation is an insult to physicians; medical science is questioned, and doctors are told that the only way to solve pregnancy problems is abortion which is, the most idiotic, the most atrocious and the most stupid way of all.

And this paper has not been submitted by members of the Ralliement créditiste. I am sure that the hon. member for Trois-Rivières received it, but he has never read it. I will continue to quote excerpts:

> Can it be hoped that the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation—

Mr. Mongrain: I rise on a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Trois-Rivières on a question of privilege.

Mr. Mongrain: I wonder how my hon. friend can say that I never read that document? I do not tell him what I read. I have read it, but I am trying to interpret it—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

Mr. Mongrain: —intelligently and not to—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order please. It is precisely to avoid these frequent calls to order that I pointed out a while ago to the hon. members, and especially to the hon. member for Shefford that people get excited and that certain unparliamentary terms are being used during the debate.

Mr. Rondeau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

As the old saw goes: The tree is known by its fruit. Therefore, I have judged the hon. member for Trois-Rivières by his achievements.

The committee goes on further to say in the same magazine, and I quote:

Is there any hope that the Canadian Hospital Certification Council will have any regard for the status of religious hospitals?

Is there any hope that a hospital board—considered in this definition and even in everyday life much more as an administrative than a medical unit—will be able to resist the pressures exerted against the religious freedom of its members?

Then, nurses question the efficiency of those medical committees and, what is worse, an attempt is being made to spread those abortion committees by setting up one in every small hospital in every town of the province of Quebec.

I continue:

Finally, by what kind of acrobatics will the Canadian government manage to put in a Catholic hospital a therapeutic abortion committee?

Mr. Speaker, many other testimonies would be worth putting on record.

The Humanist Association of Canada has already done a great deal to promote medicine and health in Canada.

It is said regarding "Accredited Hospitals", and I quote:

[English]

The stipulation that only accredited hospitals will be able to hear cases and that only such hospitals will be allowed to perform legal abortions limits severely the availability of avenues for help to those women seeking it.

[Translation]

What is meant by that is that, if abortion committees are to be set up all across the country, this will automatically favour abortion, because, instead of being considered in a responsible way, the matter will become one of routine. Instead of revalorizing medicine, we shall degrade it.

That is why we do not want just anyone to be authorized to procure an abortion or to decide that an abortion may take place. We do not want such authorizations to be granted to all doctors in Canada; we believe that this field of abortion should be entrusted to specialists who will study the psychological state of the patient.

Gynecologists could also study this important aspect of medicine, which is related to the reasons given for asking for an abortion.

How can a general practitioner be expected to make a decision on psychiatric, psychological and gynecological matters, if he has not specialized in those fields?

It is because we trust physicians and specialists that we want them to sit on those medical committees so that the decisions made will be most enlightened.

If we do not ask specialists to decide such matters, who shall we ask? Then, it would be the surgeon who usually takes out an appendix, tonsils or something else. Who, within the committee, will have the final say?

Unfortunately this is what happened in the United States. After a few years, after that practice is established, we shall find out that the foetuses will be destroyed and doctors will afterwards be called upon to straighten out the situation and sign the necessary authorizations.

It is in the name of medical freedom and competence that we object to the Liberal party and this bill degrading medicine in Canada. Let us keep on entrusting specialties to specialists. Let us not destroy our Canadian race for insignificant and non-existent reasons, since if we were to listen to every emotional reason which prompts a woman to want an abortion, half of the members would not be here today.

• (5:20 p.m.)

I contend that the Canadian nation is still too young to allow the Liberal party and Bill C-150 to throw half of its children in the gutters and rivers and to butcher them in our hospitals.

Mr. Speaker, that is why, in the name of medical freedom and competence, and of our regard for the profession, we ask that the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi be adopted.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I feel duty bound once again to take part in the debate on this amendment, especially after the interventions of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) and the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain). They help us focus our attention on the subject-matter of this debate, since they acquaint us to some extent, with their points of view. I do say to some extent, Mr. Speaker, for we have not yet heard arguments based on principles accepted by most people.

We feel this debate is dragging on, but we have no need for any particulars on the subject from the hon. member for Trois-Rivières.

We appreciate that we are discussing a matter that should not have been introduced in the house. Such is the position we have taken right from the beginning.

For the information of the hon. members, I may say that we would agree to adjourn this debate on abortion and, as suggested by the hon. member for Trois-Rivières, to proceed to the consideration of matters much more urgent, and of more consequence for the future of this country.

The government thought it was an astute policy to introduce this bill immediately after the Easter recess claiming that an immediate debate was necessary, and leading us to believe that we had to rush the passage of that bill in order to proceed to more urgent measures. We shall certainly not be fooled by such a childish game. Indeed, we are not deprived of intelligence to such an etxent. We were opposed to this debate and we have been proving, for the past two weeks, that it was useless.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Now that he has been talking for three minutes, I would like the hon. member to tell us what he thinks of the amendment now under study.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, the many points of orders and questions of privilege which have been raised in the course of this debate have probably led me to make this digression and I do apologize for it. In any case, I promise I will do my best to be as brief as possible and to limit myself to 20 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment raises the question of accrediting the hospitals.

Should, this bill be adopted as a whole, we want to reduce as much as possible the harmful effects of abortion. We think that by reducing the number of hospitals where it would be possible to perform abortion and by setting the conditions under which these hospitals might be accredited for that purpose, we would have successfully dealt with one of the many means of alleviating its evil consequences.

Mr. Speaker, if we look at the amendment from this point of view, we can understand it much better. Why should we curtail the number of hospitals and increase the number of beds in the "accredited" hospitals?

The experience in other countries where abortion was legalized justifies our attitude towards this amendment.

Recently, a paper published an article entitled: English concerned about abortion law.

Mr. Speaker, this article deals with the results of legalizing abortion in that country, I quote:

> The current application of the act authorizing abortion under certain conditions causes "serious concern, even to the advocates of the act", stated Richard Crossman, British Minister for Social Services, Monday afternoon in the House of Commons.
> The act, adopted by parliament in October 1967 and which became effective in April 1968, authorizes termination of a pregnancy when it threatens or harms the physical or the mental health of the mother, that of the child to be born or that of the other children.
> Mr. Crossman said that he was particularly displeased with the way in which the act was interpreted and applied in the private sector. Since June 1968, 22,000 abortions have been performed, of which more than a third in private clinics. The others were performed in state hospitals and paid for by social welfare.

Mr. Speaker, the last paragraph of the article which I have just quoted gives one of the main reasons which prompts us to propose the amendment now under study.

One of the main reasons there have been as many as 22,000 abortions since June 1968, is the increased number of hospitals where abortion may be procured. It is one of the reasons why we want to decrease the number of "accredited" hospitals. For this purpose, we are using the nefarious experience of other countries, so that we will not have to blame ourselves for the same mistakes.

And it says further, and I quote:

> —in which the act is interpreted and applied in the private sector.

We understand, Mr. Speaker, that those hospitals must be accredited or approved. The number of applications that will come in just to accredit or approve such hospitals will be great.

Then we will surely get to the unfortunate consequences which we denounce. We urge in all seriousness every hon. member to consider all consequences, because there is an infinity of them. And to prove my point I will quote part of the submission of the Family Planning Centre of Montreal where we will realize once more—

[English]

Mr. Woolliams: May I raise a point of order, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Calgary North on a point of order.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, we had some discussions concerning the taking of a vote on those matters that we have convered up to this time. All parties agreed. I do not know whether my friend has completed his argument, but in any event I wonder whether we are prepared to vote on the other motions now. Our agreement was to vote on the amendments on which the vote was deferred.

• (5:30 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I know that some hon. members would like to proceeded with the vote immediately.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Minister of Justice on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Perhaps the hon. member for Calgary North would repeat his intervention, because some hon. members did not hear it.

Mr. Woolliams: There was a definite agreement among the parties that we would take a vote on those matters which have been stood. This does not affect the hon. member who was speaking, unless he is winding up his remarks and wants the amendment voted on. But if this is not the case, it is my understanding that we should now vote on those matters which were stood.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may join in the point of order. I have had a few words with my Creditiste friends, and I think they are willing that we interrupt the debate at this point and take recorded votes on amendments Nos. 24 and 26. I understand, however, that they do not wish to end the debate on amendment No. 28 at this time. I think this is in keeping with the agreement that was arrived at among the parties. I would suggest, therefore, that the hon. member for Champlain might be given the privilege of adjourning the debate on this amendment at this point, so that he may come back to it on Friday, and that we have the bells rung so we may take the votes on amendments Nos. 24 and 26, as the hon. member for Calgary North suggested.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Is the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) raising a point of order?

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Yes, Mr. Speaker. We heard the representations of the members of other parties when they said that a recorded vote should be taken on the amendments the study of which is already completed. We support that request for we want to participate in a positive way in the debate, even if some members on the other side do not agree.

However, I would like to point out that the hon. member for Champlain (Mr. Matte) has still a lot of things to say and that we would not like his time be cut for that. We would like him to resume his speech, after the adjournment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): It has been suggested that the hon. member for Champlain (Mr. Matte) should adjourn the debate so that he may be the first to have the floor when the sitting is resumed.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I propose the adjournment and I am very pleased to contribute in that way to bringing together the political parties in the house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. We require the unanimous consent of the house to proceed in the manner suggested a short while ago. Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I had allowed the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) to make our stand known. I would also like to point out that there is nothing folkloric about this debate, in spite of what the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said yesterday.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

By unanimous consent, consideration of amendment No. 28 is adjourned. The house will now revert to amendment No. 24 for the purpose of recording the division thereon. The question is on motion No. 24, (Mr. Woolliams for Mr. Valade) which reads:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the word "and" on line 5 on page 43 and the "period" after the word "practitioner" on line 8 on page 43 and inserting the following words: "and,

(e) that those means are employed before the period of implantation."

Is the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Call in the members.

The house divided on motion No. 24 (Mr. Woolliams, for Mr. Valade) which was negatived on the following division:

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard).]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise briefly on a question of privilege. In this afternoon's Ottawa Citizen there is a headline that reads: "Speaker Cuts Short 'Tenacious' N.D.P. Attack On Abortion Reforms". Obviously this is a mistake; it is not a correct reference to this party at all. If it is a reference at all, it is to another party. I think it is also unfair to Your Honour.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: It being after six o'clock this house stands adjourned until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

It being eleven minutes after six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, May 1, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

PRIVILEGE

MR. MACQUARRIE—INFORMATION GIVEN TO PRESS BY MINISTER BEFORE DISCLOSURE TO PARLIAMENT

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege concerning the failure of the Postmaster General to table in this house the report of the consulting firm of Kates Peat Marwick and Company which was commissioned to study the workings of his department, and especially his action in discussing this matter with a reporter before making it available to members of this house.

In this morning's Financial Post the following appears:

> Communications Minister Eric Kierans is scheduled to table a remarkable document next week in the Commons.

There follows a commentary, and evidently an interpretation of this document by the minister. This growing tendency of members of the ministry to communicate to persons and groups outside this house information which should be properly conveyed to hon. members amounts to an erosion of the respect properly due from the executive to the people's representatives.

That this is not the first failure of the Postmaster General to give parliament information available to him is indicated by the fact that an earlier report of the same consulting firm was presented to the minister on November 19, 1968 and has not yet been tabled in the house or made available to members. On general principle I protest that such practices by ministers breach the privileges of parliament.

Any blockage in the flow of information to parliament in reference to the Post Office, a department about which there is currently such widespread and justifiable criticism and dissatisfaction among the Canadian public, is particularly reprehensible and indeed inexcusable.

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): As hon. members are aware, no one is more critical of the Post Office and of its operations than those who work for the Post Office. We examine its operations from a variety of different points of view. We intend to table the results of some of these studies.

The purpose of these various investigations and task forces is to enable us to find out our weaknesses and improve our service. We have already tabled some of these reports, some of which even criticize our own stamp designs. One of the reports mentioned when Mr. Baxter came in to see me concerned the environment in which the Post Office will have to operate throughout the next 25 years. I have read this report carefully. The firm commissioned to prepare it also analysed the probable impact of a changing environment on the present operation of the Post Office. In answering the questions put by Mr. Baxter I was armed with this type of information. I did say to Mr. Baxter that we intended to table this report. What is holding it up is this: We are getting it translated and I expect it will be completed by next week.

GOVERNMENT DOCUMENTS

RELEASE TO ARCHIVES OF RECORDS IN EXISTENCE FOR THIRTY YEARS

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I should like to announce a policy to make available for research and other public use as large a portion of the records of the Canadian government prior to July 1, 1939 as would be consistent with the national interest. The cabinet secretariat and the departments and agencies of government are being asked to transfer to the Public Archives official records which are more than 30 years old to be made available to the public under the normal rules of access in force in the Public Archives.

• (2:10 p.m.)

[Translation]

Certain records will be exempted from public access, particularly those the release of which might adversely affect Canada's external relations, violate the right of privacy of individuals, or adversely affect the national security. However, it is the intention that a vast portion of Canada's records prior to mid-1939 will be transferred to the Public Archives during the current year, and that annual transfers be made in subsequent years.

While certain of the records to be made available to the public have already been transferred to the Public Archives, the majority are still in the hands of the cabinet secretariat and the various departments and agencies of government. The volume of files is such that it will take some time to screen and arrange for an orderly flow of documents to the Archives. Within these practical limitations, however, every effort will be made to provide public access to these papers as promptly as possible, beginning on July 1, 1969.

The general rule will be that, with the exceptions noted, all records over 30 years old will be transferred to the Archives and made available to the public. In addition, departments and agencies will be encouraged to transfer to the Archives records less than 30 years old, in so far as this would be consistent with the efficient operation of the departments or agencies involved. Although these more recent records would remain under the control of the minister concerned, they could be made available to the public under terms and conditions to be established by the responsible minister in consultation with the Dominion Archivist. As for records less than 30 years old and which are retained in the custody of departments and agencies, controlled access may be permitted in special cases, again under terms and conditions to be established by the minister in consultation with the Dominion Archivist.

[English]

Because of the nature of cabinet and cabinet committee documents and minutes, they will in no case be made available for public examination until they are 30 years old. Former Prime Ministers and ministers will, of course, be given access on request to such of those records as originated during their various periods of office, in order to refresh their memories.

Of particular interest in future years, beginning in 1970, will be the release of annual portions of records of the cabinet war committee for the period 1940 to 1945. In 1974, records of the deliberations of the cabinet will begin to be made available, the first formal recording of its proceedings having begun in early 1944.

In announcing this policy I should like to express the government's belief that it will meet with the approval of Canadian scholars, members of learned societies and others interested in the history of Canadian government. In a broader sense, it exemplifies the government's desire to stimulate interest and participation in the affairs of government by Canadians generally.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to express my approval of the statement made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), who was kind and considerate enough to consult me, and I believe others, about this proposal which I hope will facilitate the work of scholars in our country. I do not know whether it will have any adverse effect upon journalists like Mr. Wilson and Mr. Westell, but subject to that sort of consideration I think it will certainly be widely approved in the country at large.

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, I am sure many members of the house will welcome the announcement made today by the Prime Minister on this very important subject. We feel that it is a step in the right direction that is considerably overdue. As some may recall, a bill was presented by a member on this side of the house at a former session urging something very much in the nature of what has now been put forward. While it is late and meagre, we do feel that action has been taken in the right direction.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, we, in the Ralliement Créditiste, approve the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) who has just announced a new policy to make government papers, 30 years old or more, available for research purposes.

Mr. Speaker, the policy will enable men of letters and members of scientific societies in Canada to do their work much more easily and to write an accurate history of Canada.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

U.S. PRESS RELEASE ON CANADIAN RECOGNITION OF MAINLAND CHINA—STATEMENT BY MINISTER ABOUT NIGERIA-BIAFRA HOSTILITIES—UNITED NATIONS INVOLVEMENT

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I rise for two purposes. The first is to table an exchange which took place at a press briefing given by the United States State Department spokesman on February 11, 1969, relating to the Canadian government's announcement of its intention to negotiate with the representatives of Peking for an exchange of diplomats; the second is to make a brief report, as requested by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), on the representations made by our ambassador in Lagos to the Nigerian government.

Representations Mr. Malone made included a reiteration of our concern at the reports of bombings of non-military targets in the rebel area, the question of a cease fire and ways of improving relief deliveries. General Gowon shared our concern at the reports of bombings of civilians and reaffirmed that strict orders had been given to avoid, where possible, civilian casualties. I am pleased to note that there has been a notable absence of reports of bombings for some time. As to a cease fire, it was confirmed that the situation with regard to a cease fire and a negotiated settlement remained unchanged. As I have told the house on many occasions, until conditions and terms exist which are acceptable to both disputants, prospects for an early cessation of hostilities will remain remote. With regard to relief, the High Commissioner reiterated the government's support for efforts to conclude agreed arrangements for relief deliveries by day into the Uli and Obilago airstrips.

I was also asked by the Leader of the Opposition about possible United Nations involvement. In that regard I believe it would be useful for the house to have the following excerpt from a press conference given by the Secretary-General of the United Nations on April 17 of this year. I quote:

> —the United Nations cannot be involved in a crisis situation which is declared by the member state concerned to be an internal matter under Article 2 (7). This point of view is endorsed and supported by the whole Organization of African Unity. So, in the face of this attitude by the Organization of African Unity, I do not believe that any member of the United Nations has any desire to inscribe the item, "The Situation in Nigeria", before a principal organ of the United Nations.
> If I may anticipate something, if any member state were to bring this item, "The Situation in Nigeria", before the Security Council or the United Nations General Assembly, I am sure that the item would not be inscribed on the agenda. So it does not make any difference whether any member state tries to inscribe this on the agenda or the Secretary General tries to inscribe it on the agenda. From a realistic point of view, any such attempt would not succeed because of the knowledge that the Organization of African Unity is against such a course as the inscription of an item on the agenda of either the Security Council or the United Nations General Assembly.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the Secretary of State for External Affairs for the information he has given to the house about suggestions made on behalf of the government of Canada to the government of Nigeria and for the statement he made about the United Nations. I cannot help feeling that here we have a most unsatisfactory state of affairs. As a member of the Commonwealth and of a group of civilized nations, it seems to me that Canada has a greater responsibility towards those suffering and dying in Nigeria than has so far been discharged. It is estimated that more than a million people have died as a result of that war.

I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the government of this country should exercise its diligence in trying to organize, in consultation with other countries and particularly Commonwealth countries, an effort to terminate the war, bring about a ceasefire and a cessation of shipments of arms. They should make a real effort to terminate the suffering and dying that is going on in that country.

• (2:20 p.m.)

I am not minimizing the difficulties which exist, Mr. Speaker. I suggest in all seriousness that what is happening in Nigeria, the number who are dying as a direct result of the war is a very sad commentary indeed on the civilized nations of this world, of which this country has been proud to be part, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I say to the Secretary of State for External Affairs that his statement is totally unsatisfactory to those who are really concerned with seeking a solution to the problem in Nigeria and Biafra and seeking some alleviation of the terrible suffering by the people in Biafra.

First I wish to say to him, Mr. Speaker, that while I have the greatest respect for the Secretary General of the United Nations, his word is not yet the last word on everything concerning that organization. Indeed I remind the Secretary of State for External Affairs that just about two years ago the Secretary General of the United Nations made a certain decision with regard to UNEF in the Middle East. Both the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs at that time did not hesitate to criticize that decision and action.

I am not satisfied, Mr. Speaker, that because the Secretary General of the United Nations, with his great experience and knowledge, says that something should be done a certain way, that this is the way it must be. I am not satisfied that it means that Canada or any other member of the United Nations should not make some attempt to have this matter discussed in the international forum. They should search for a possible cessation of the terrible fighting in Nigeria.

I did not have a copy of the statement of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, but as I listened I noted the fact that the Secretary General of the United Nations spoke about the Security Council and the United Nations General Assembly. I remind the minister that my colleagues and myself have asked him many times to inscribe this subject, not on the agenda of the Security General or General Assembly, but on the agenda of the Third Committee of the United Nations which deals with humanitarian, cultural and other matters. In my humble opinion, this matter should be put on the agenda of the Third Committee and discussed. This would be the starting point for an international consideration of the problem.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I am totally dissatisfied with the approach of our ambassador in Lagos. He has offered help under certain conditions. Canada is able to make assistance available now through various organizations for the building of the new airstrip which they are attempting to build in Biafra. There are also other ways to alleviate the suffering of those people.

I have said from time to time, and I now repeat the fact, that the civilized world has not reacted to the terrible fratricidal war in that country, the fact that a conflict like that can go on for two years—in two months it will be two years—with 1 million to 2 million people dying, mainly of hunger, and the civilized world keeps its hands off. All this reminds me of many instances in history where this kind of barbarity was permitted to go on, and everybody called non-intervention, with the result that the barbarity ended in colossal difficulties for the world as a whole. One of the matters of which the government cannot be proud is the constant excuses for inaction that the government has given in the case of the terrible war in Nigeria.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I believe everybody is deeply affected by what is happening in Nigeria.

However, everyone must at the same time recognize that the internal policy of that country is not the concern of Canada nor that of the United States.

Although some people protest because Canada does not go to Nigeria to re-establish peace and ask Nigeria to accept the Biafrans as they are, there are not many to protest, for example, against Russia invading Czechoslovakia and crushing those who want to be free.

Mr. Speaker, I say again that we would like to see an end to the Nigerian war. However, it does not come to an end and the only thing Canada can do, in my opinion, is to put before the United Nations an agreement proposal between the Biafrans and the Nigerian people. Their domestic policy is their own business.

In fact, we would not accept that these people interfere in ours. We are ourselves involved in domestic feuds, without bloodshed yet, but what assurance do we have that we will not be facing such situations in the future.

I say again that these countries' domestic policy is their own business, and that Canada, as a so-called peaceful nation, can encourage them to settle their differences and advise them, but it not desirable to interfere directly in their domestic policy, because that is no concern of ours.

DRUGS

ANNOUNCEMENT RESPECTING COMMITTEE INQUIRY INTO NON-MEDICAL USES

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that the government plans to establish a committee of inquiry to examine into and make recommendations respecting the non-medical use of drugs and related substances in Canada.

The establishment of this committee of inquiry reflects the grave concern felt by the government at the expanding proportions of the use of drugs and related substances for non-medical purposes. This committee will consist of five members and be directed to pursue the following objects: (a) to marshal from available sources, both in Canada and abroad, data and information comprising the present fund of knowledge concerning the non-medical use of sedative, stimulant, tranquilizing, hallucinogenic and other psychotropic drugs or substances;

(b) to report on the current state of medical knowledge respecting the effect of the drugs and substances referred to in (a);

(c) to inquire into and report on the motivation underlying the non-medical use referred to in (a);

(e) to inquire into and recommend with respect to the ways or means by which the federal government can act, alone or in its relations with government at other levels, in the reduction of the dimensions of the problems involved in such use.

The committee will have the authority contained in Part 2 of the Inquiries Act and be assisted, as required, by officials of appropriate departments and agencies of government. It will be authorized to invite, receive and consider submissions from organizations and individuals.

It is anticipated that the committee will make an official report of its progress within six months of its establishment and periodically thereafter, with a final report to be presented within two years.

Hon. J. W. Monteith (Perth): Mr. Speaker, we are pleased to show our commendation of the move made by the minister. I think this is a necessary and worth-while endeavour to set up this committee. I believe also the reporting which is supposed to commence in six months is a good move. We will certainly follow the actions of the committee with interest.

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, we in this party also welcome the news that a committee of inquiry is to be established. Across this country there is a great deal of concern about the use of drugs of this kind. Unfortunately very little hard evidence is available yet to substantiate some of the claims made in connection with certain drugs. I believe the time is long overdue for this investigation. I would suggest however, in view of the fact that this inquiry committee is just being set up now it would be a very desirable thing if the minister would delay passage of Bill S-15, or at least those sections having to do with hallucinogenic drugs, particularly marijuana, until such time as the evidence on which the legislation is based is in.

A number of us are not by any means convinced there is evidence available yet to support severe sentences such as are envisaged in this legislation, particularly in respect of marijuana. I am not in favour of the widespread use of marijuana, but I feel we would be in a much better position to proceed with such legislation if this committee of inquiry would report before the legislation is passed.

ATLANTIC MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY—MOTION TO EXTEND FILING LIMIT

Mr. Philip G. Givens (York West) moved:

That the petitions of The Canada North-west Land Company (Limited), of Nova Scotia Savings & Loan Company, of Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and that of Thomas Ledwell Doyle, of the City of Moncton, New Brunswick and six other persons, praying for the passing of an Act incorporating "Atlantic Mutual Life Assurance Company" and, in French, "La Compagnie mutuelle d'assurance-vie Atlantique", filed after the time limit under Standing Order 90, be referred to the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills and Standing Orders together with the Twelfth and Thirteenth Reports of the Clerk of Petitions thereon presented to the House on Friday, April 25, 1969 and Thursday, May 1, 1969 for any recommendations the Committee deems advisable.

Motion agreed to.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA—MOTION TO DISCUSS ALLEGED DISREGARD OF INVESTMENT RETURN REGULATIONS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I rise under the provisions of Standing Order 43 to ask the house to agree to a motion regarding Bell Canada. Late yesterday, Bell Canada issued its quarterly report showing that it has exceeded for the second time the 6.8 per cent limit placed on its return on invested capital by the federal government's regulatory board. The 7 per cent reported by Bell Canada is a clear case not only of disrespect for the legal process, but also of continued exploitation of the Canadian taxpayer. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of Standing Order 43, I ask leave to move, seconded by the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. Schreyer):

That the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications be authorized to meet forthwith and proceed as quickly as possible to investigate, analyse, and hear from officials of Bell Canada on their apparent disregard of the rate of return limits placed on them by the government's regulatory agency.

Mr. Speaker: According to the terms of Standing Order 43 this motion requires unanimous consent of the house. Is there such consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: The motion cannot be put to the house.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

LOCAL GOVERNMENT ON INDIAN RESERVES—DEBATING TIME

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, had it not been for the fact that today is an allotted day the house normally at five o'clock would have proceeded to deal with the item of business Notices of Motions. The first such item had only one minute remaining to it. In other words, a vote likely would have taken place with regard to the production of a document entitled "Local Government on Indian Reserves".

In view of the fact that here in Ottawa this week there is a meeting of native Indian delegations from all across Canada, I wonder whether the house would be agreeable to making a special order to deal with that item at five o'clock and add to the balance of the day any time so taken by the vote on that motion, so that it would not interfere with the allotted day debate. I would so request.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I think we would be willing to accept this, provided any order made contains a provision that any time required to take the vote would be added to the time for the debate now proceeding under the appropriate Standing Order. It is my understanding there are so many people with complaints against the government's agricultural policy that we should give them all an opportunity to be heard.

[Mr. Orlikow.]

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): In light of what the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) has said, I do not think we should interrupt the established proceedings for today.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Let it be shown that the Liberals object.

IMMIGRATION

ALLEGED SECRET GUIDELINES NEGATING EFFECTIVENESS OF REGULATIONS CONCERNING U.S. DESERTERS—CHARGE BY UNITED CHURCH MODERATOR

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to inquire whether the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) intends to make a statement to this house as a result of his exchange with the moderator of the United Church and certain allegations made by the moderator and his reply.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether this is a proper point of order. It seems to me that the hon. member might wish to ask this question during the question period. I realize that by that time we would have passed the period for motions although the consent of the house could then be obtained to revert to motions. However, the point having been made perhaps the minister might reply.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I did have an exchange of telegrams with the moderator of the United Church. I think both documents speak for themselves and that further comment on my part is unnecessary.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MAINLAND CHINA—U.S. REACTION TO CANADIAN RECOGNITION

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp) reiterated on at least two occasions his intention to table a statement by the Secretary of State for the United States, Mr. Rogers, dealing with Canada's negotiations and attitude on the recognition of China. He stated that Mr. Rogers statement had been published. He has tabled a state department release of February 11 without identifying it as a statement by Mr. Rogers. I would ask if it is in fact the Rogers statement to which he referred on two occasions or whether it is a statement by a subordinate official. If it is a statement by a subordinate official, I ask him now if he will table the Rogers statement if in fact the Rogers statement exists at all. I also ask him again whether there was a note from the United States expressing grave concern at Canada's move and whether he will inform the house concerning its contents and his government's reply if any.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it had been my impression that the statement which I tabled in the house today had in fact been made by the Secretary of State for the United States, himself, because this was what was in my mind when I answered the questions the other day. On inquiry I found that the secretary of state himself had not made any statement whatever on this subject, and therefore I thought I should table the statement that came from the state department, presumably representing the views of the secretary of state even if he was not the spokesman.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I might say a few words about the order of business for tomorrow and next week. I think there might be general agreement that any recorded division required on the amendments to the Criminal Code be not held tomorrow, but rather that the divisions be postponed until Monday next. If this is agreeable to the house it might be possible to make such an order. That is, should the consideration of any amendments at the report stage of Bill C-150 be concluded tomorrow, any recorded division required thereon shall be deferred until Monday next. As I say, perhaps if there is general agreement that could be made an order of the house.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Is it so ordered?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Inquiries of the Ministry

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

INDIAN AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT OF INTENTION AS TO LEGISLATION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, but in his absence I will direct it to the Minister without Portfolio from Port Arthur. I should like to ask him whether it is his intention to introduce legislation in the month of June to amend or repeal the Indian Act, or is it merely the intention to issue a general statement of government policy in June? I ask this question, sir, in view of the various statements made by the minister on this subject both in the house and at this week's conference.

Hon. Robert Andras (Minister without Portfolio): The whole review of our policy with regard to the Indian people is the subject of intense examination now. As the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has stated in the house on previous occasions, that policy, including any reference to the Indian Act or any component part of it, will be made known within a few weeks time, we hope and expect in the month of June.

Mr. Stanfield: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since it seems to be very difficult to get a straight answer to what was intended to be a straight question, can the minister say whether it is the intention of the department to repeal or amend the Indian Act, or is it the intention simply to make a statement of policy during the month of June?

Mr. Andras: No final decision on that matter has yet been made.

RESOURCES TO PREPARE RESEARCH MATERIAL ON ACT AMENDMENT

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister and the department accept the proposal of the representatives of the Indian people that they should be given the resources necessary for research to allow them to prepare and submit a draft Indian Act, rather than merely to comment on a draft that may be presented to them by the department?

Hon. Robert Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, this proposal was made by the Indian representatives attending the consultation meetings here in Ottawa yesterday and it is under serious examination. An answer will be made shortly.

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder whether the minister would not consider it a better course to deal first with the legitimate grievances of the native people before starting to play around with amending any laws?

MEETING OF INDIAN DELEGATES WITH STANDING COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the cancellation of the meeting between the Indian delegates attending the conference in Ottawa and the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development, will there be a later opportunity before the departure of this group from Ottawa to meet with the committee?

Hon. Robert Andras (Minister without Portfolio): When the delegation met with the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development at the beginning of this conference on Monday morning, the minister, I think quite appropriately, made it quite clear that the agenda, the format, the items for discussion and the meetings with everybody concerned were to be decisions made by the Indian delegates themselves. When the matter of meeting with the standing committee was referred to them yesterday afternoon, they chose to defer a decision on that. I think we would have to consult with the chairman of the committee and the Indian delegates themselves as to whether they wish to meet with the committee before the end of the session. It would be entirely up to them and subject to the convenience of the committee.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

GOVERNMENT POLICY ON TREATY RIGHTS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have one further supplementary question. Will the minister give a firm commitment—to the same sort of applause, I hope—as to the government's policy concerning treaty rights before the Indian people are asked to prepare or approve a draft Indian Act, and if so, when can we expect that kind of firm commitment from the government?

Hon. Robert Andras (Minister without Portfolio): I think we can give a firm commitment that the treaty rights of Indians, their feelings about treaty rights, and other such matters, are the subject of intense examination. Their feelings have been made very well known to the government, and a major portion of the review of the policy that is under way.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the minister a question with reference to treaty rights. Can he say whether the review and consideration that is taking place would include the bringing of Indian treaties before parliament—treaties that were made between the Indians and the British Crown prior to Confederation, so that the Indian rights under those sacred treaties shall be upheld, to use the words of some treaties, "so long as the sun shines and the rivers flow?"

Mr. Andras: I do not think I can elaborate on the answer I just gave except to say that this is a difficult and grievous problem that has been with us for at least a hundred years and through the tenure of the right hon. gentleman's term of office. I think he introduced certain measures which were commendable, and we are trying to do our best to do the same.

An hon. Member: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: The hon. member for Burnaby-Seymour (Mr. Perrault) always applauds. At some time he will be identified by the Prime Minister.

When the minister said that these treaty rights have been under consideration or in doubt for a hundred years, would he not agree that it was within very recent years that the Supreme Court of Canada decided that the treaties made previous to Confederation were not binding on the government of Canada or the people?

Mr. Andras: I do not think I could elaborate any further, except to say again that the subject is under intense examination.

I think that the policy statements which will come in a few weeks' time will clarify the matter and answer the right hon. gentleman's question.

Mr. Diefenbaker: They are meaningless.

THE MINISTRY

INQUIRY AS TO REPLACEMENT FOR FORMER MINISTER OF TRANSPORT

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the right hon. Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the resignation of the former minister of transport took effect at midnight last night, has a Minister of Transport been appointed, and if not, how soon does the Prime Minister expect such an appointment to be made? In the interim period what minister will be responsible for matters relating to transport and housing.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The Minister without Portfolio who was acting minister remains acting minister, Mr. Speaker, until I make an appointment.

HOUSING

POSSIBILITY OF REQUEST FOR ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the government proposes to raise the ceiling on the mortgages that are outstanding and on the amount of money that can be lent by the treasury to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, is it the intention of the government to ask parliament for any additional appropriations for housing over and above those that are now outlined in the estimates?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I do not know the answer to the question. I will consider it and see if it will be necessary to present additional estimates to the house.

AGRICULTURE

GUARANTEED ANNUAL INCOME TO FARMERS OF SAGUENAY-LAC ST. JEAN AREA

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct to the Minister of Agriculture another question which has been asked to the four members from the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area—and I am sure of them—at a meeting with the farmers.

Could the minister tell the house whether it is his intention to allow the C.F.U. in the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area to be officially accredited as the negotiation unit for questions regarding our area, especially as far as the guaranteed income of farmers is concerned?

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether the hon. member's question could not be asked during the debate which is to begin within a moment. If it is urgent, however, we could answer it immediately. But I point out to the hon. member that it would be better to wait for the debate to start.

Mr. Gauthier: Ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

IMMIGRATION

ALLEGED SECRET GUIDELINES NEGATING EFFECTIVENESS OF REGULATIONS CONCERNING U.S. DESERTERS—CHARGE BY UNITED CHURCH MODERATOR

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. In view of the continuing charges that Canada's immigration policy operates in certain areas on secret guidelines, which is, as termed by the moderator of the United Church an immoral and intolerable evasion of public responsibility, and the minister's public reply that such statements are ill-founded and erroneous to the point of irresponsibility, will the minister inform the house as to what actually is the policy of the Department of Manpower and Immigration with regard to U.S. immigrants?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the policy has been made clear on a number of occasions and I am afraid it would not be possible to deal with it on the orders of the day. We do admit members of the armed services of other countries. If such persons apply in this country and satisfy normal immigration criteria they are admitted regardless of military status. Since January, 1968 a number of such persons have been admitted.

The hon. member should bear in mind that until January, 1968, no member of the armed forces of any country could be admitted without discharge papers. With respect to applicants at the border or overseas, the immigration officer is expected to exercise overall discretion in determining admissibility.

Mr. Thompson: In view of the seriousness of the charges being made, would the minister consider issuing a white paper or some document explaining the background in more detail than he has yet given, and table it in this house?

Mr. MacEachen: The estimates of my department were under consideration in the house not so long ago and we did have an opportunity to discuss the question on that occasion. I was prepared to answer all inquiries. The estimates of the department will be before the committee very shortly and I will be delighted to answer any questions on this subject, and particularly to deal with the unfounded charges contained in the telegram from the moderator of the United Church.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister one or two questions. I should like to ask him, first, whether in view of the fact that he has made a statement to the press by way of a press release, and has in the past refused to make a statement on the subject on motions, he would now be ready to make such a statement in the house, provided hon. members were prepared to revert immediately to motions? If the minister is not ready to do this now, will he undertake to make such a statement on motions tomorrow?

Mr. MacEachen: I do not think it is good procedure to expect a statement in the house on the occasion of a reply to a telegram.

Mr. Lewis: In view of the fact that the minister made one statement about these alleged guidelines on March 5, to which his reply to the moderator of the United Church referred, and another statement in a press release yesterday, I ask him again whether he proposes to disregard the rights of parliament and the right of the people—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is, of course, not an admissible question.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): The minister indicated the other day that he would not make a statement with regard to this policy. Then he issued a press release. Surely he is prepared to read that press release in the house and table it so that it may become a parliamentary document? Surely a statement in this house should prevail over a press release?

Mr. MacEachen: The press release should not be developed into an historic document. It was merely a copy of the reply I made to the moderator of the United Church. The telegram from the moderator has been made public and I felt that the reply ought to be made public, too. It was made public in the form of a press release. I would be delighted to table copies of the press release. I believe they have been made available, but I will be delighted to table them.

[Mr. MacEachen.]

CRIMINAL CODE

REQUEST FOR REFERENDUM ON BILL C-150

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister.

In view of the great number of requests from thousands of Canadians of all classes and religions, would the Prime Minister look into the possibility of calling a referendum on the famed omnibus bill?

[English]

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

NEWFOUNDLAND—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): I have a question for the Minister of Regional and Economic Expansion, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister now inform the house when an announcement may be expected concerning the proposed regional development program for Newfoundland—I hope the hon. gentleman does not think I said "Prince Edward Island" this time—bearing in mind the serious financial difficulties facing that province? I ask this question in all sincerity because this is a very critical situation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has asked his question.

[Later:]

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the minister is ready, now, to answer the question I put to him. Perhaps I could repeat it.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I gather the minister is now ready to reply to the question put to him by the hon. member a few moments ago. I assume he heard it.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, my department is in constant touch with the Newfoundland government to find the best ways possible of helping the province and promoting its economic development.

[English]

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): I am glad to know the minister is alert to this serious problem. My supplementary question is based on a statement made in Newfoundland yesterday by the premier of that province to the effect that if he does not get some action from the minister and from the department soon he will withdraw his support of the Liberal party—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: That is not the first time he has said that.

Mr. John Lundrigan (Gander-Twillingate): Can the minister assure us that when he does arrive at the nature of the program of development for Newfoundland he will honour the house with his statement first, before giving it to Canada's only living war lord of Confederation?

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—DEPARTMENTAL INTERVENTION AS CATALYST

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Central Nova): I have a question for the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker. In view of the reported suggestion by one of the parties concerned that the Department of Labour be the catalyst initiating future talks concerning the Air Canada dispute, would the minister tell us whether he intends to follow this suggestion in order that the parties may resume negotiations as soon as possible?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): As I have indicated on one or two occasions the Department of Labour would be very pleased to be a medium of communication through which both parties could resume negotiations. The appropriate time however at which to resume these negotiations, and the moment at which I intend to provide this medium of communication, is when both sides have convinced me, either privately or in writing, that such talks would be fruitful. In other words, if both parties retain such rigid positions as they have so far shown on monetary issues, talks at this moment would in my opinion serve no purpose.

Mr. MacEwan: Has the minister received requests from the parties concerned to set a time for continuing negotiations?

Mr. Mackasey: There has been no formal request either from union or management for any assistance from the Department of Labour since the talks broke off last Sunday. If they were to contact me I would be very pleased, but I reiterate to them that it is no use having talks unless there is some modification by both sides of the positions they established so firmly on Sunday evening.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

HEARING AIDS—INQUIRY AS TO AVAILABILITY OF REPORT

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): My question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Nearly two weeks ago I directed to the minister a question prompted by the action of an Ontario judge in convicting a hearing aid dealer for defrauding the public by selling $45 hearing aids for $360. I inquired when the minister's investigation into the hearing aid racket would be completed. In the minister's absence the question was taken as notice by his Parliamentary Secretary. I wonder whether the hon. gentleman is now ready to answer.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): As I indicated in a written answer to a question on the order paper, I hoped to have a report ready by June. However, I am now advised that I shall probably not receive it by June due to the large number of associations and groups organized on behalf of the hard of hearing, which wanted to submit briefs and prepare submissions for consideration by the people working on the report.

[Translation]

CRIMINAL CODE

REQUEST FOR REFERENDUM ON BILL C-150

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister.

Since he would not even consider replying to the question asked by the hon. member for Témiscamingue, can he tell us whether a referendum on the omnibus bill would have the same effect as the one that was held by his excellent friend the former President of the French republic?

Mr. Speaker: Order. That question is hypothetical and therefore out of order.

CANADA DAY

SUGGESTED HOLIDAY TO ADVANCE NATIONAL UNITY

Mr. Colin Gibson (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State. In view of the urgent need to advance national unity and display our Canadian flag, will the Secretary of State announce a holiday in June or July to be known as Canada Day, as requested by Kinsmen's Clubs and other agencies throughout Canada?

WATER RESOURCES

INCLUSION OF POLLUTION CONTROL IN NEW MEASURE

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In the water act that is to be brought in shortly, is it the intention of the government to include provisions concerning pollution control?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, it is our intention to bring the water act into the house for first reading before the end of the session. Hon. members will then see what government policy has seen fit to include in the measure.

Mr. Aiken: A supplementary question. Does the government intend in one way or another to take the lead in a pollution control program for this country?

IMMIGRATION

ALLEGED SECRET GUIDELINES—POSSIBLE APPEARANCE OF MINISTER BEFORE STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration arising from an earlier answer he gave. Do I take it from the minister's answer that he would be glad to appear before the Labour, Manpower and Immigration committee to answer any suggestion that this negates his earlier commitment to the house to submit a statement to it based on his current review of immigration policy?

Mr. Speaker: Order. This question appears to me to be an argument, but perhaps the minister might like to reply to it to the extent that it is a question.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to appear before the committee and subject myself to any questions. That does not rule out the possibility of a statement being made in the house when the review that I have undertaken has been examined and a decision reached by the government.

[Mr. Gibson.]

Mr. Broadbent: A further supplementary question. Could the minister indicate with any degree of precision when this review will be completed?

Mr. MacEachen: My hon. friend knows that reviews have uncertain terminal dates.

FISHERIES

REPRESENTATIONS TO UNITED NATIONS SUPPORTING CONTINENTAL SHELF POLICY

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In a recent speech made in Seattle the Minister of Fisheries suggested that each nation's authority over its commercial fishing—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It seems to me that too many members are getting into the habit of prefacing their questions with references to statements made outside the house or reported in the press. According to the rules, questions have to be asked directly. If hon. members would go to the trouble of reading the precedents, particularly Beauchesne, as to the form questions ought to take, they would see it is out of order and not in proper form to ask questions in this way. The hon. member should ask his question directly.

Mr. Crouse: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In view of the pronouncement of the Minister of Fisheries, has the Secretary of State for External Affairs made representations to the United Nations in support of a continental shelf fisheries policy?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the whole question of the law of the sea in all its aspects is before the United Nations in various committees. There the Canadian point of view was expressed on a number of questions. The question of jurisdiction over fisheries, as the hon. member knows, is now a very active one in Canada. Indeed, the Minister of Fisheries has proposed that there should be some new laws and international approaches to this subject, and I hope that they will get widespread support, including the support of hon. members opposite.

Mr. Crouse: A supplementary question. Is it the minister's intention to make representations to the Warsaw meeting of the 14-country international commission on the northwest Atlantic fisheries, which meets in June, requesting support for a continental shelf fisheries policy?

Mr. Speaker: Order. If we are dealing with an event which will take place in the month of June, I would think that the question might be placed on the order paper.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO SETTING UP OF PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, since the minister has been speaking about activity, I wonder when we may expect the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to announce the appointment of the commission relating to prices which was forecast as long ago as last December and about which I have asked umpteen times in the house, but with no result?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as I have said a number of times, I welcome the interest and support of the Leader of the Opposition in regard to this commission, which I hope to announce shortly.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PASSPORTS—EMPLOYMENT OF STUDENTS IN PROCESSING

Mr. Hyl Chappell (Peel South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. To further speed up the processing of passport applications, would he take advantage of the availability of students for summer employment and place the department temporarily on a two or three shift basis?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have been talking with the administration about measures of this kind. There are some very real difficulties involved, because of the limitations on a number of key personnel, in the proposal to have shifts. We have already moved to an overtime basis and I have asked the director to consider whether he could move to at least a two shift basis. This is under serious consideration.

DIPLOMATIC EXCHANGE WITH THE VATICAN

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, today is May Day and I should like to address my question to the Prime Minister. It arises from the May Day message of His Holiness Pope Paul VI, calling upon civil governments everywhere to seek to stop the exploitation of man by man. Has the Prime Minister sufficient feeling about this matter to want to respond in some appropriate way?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have sufficient feeling about it to respond, and I hope that we will have the support of the hon. member's party when we take further steps to open up negotiations with Vatican representatives.

[Later:]

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether his comment a moment ago indicates that the government of Canada has decided to proceed with an exchange of representatives with the Vatican.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as the house knows, we opened this question for debate some months ago in this country and have received representations from all sides. What I indicated a moment ago was that I welcomed this additional support from the N.D.P.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the Prime Minister what is the score in this debate at the present time?

MAINLAND CHINA—U.S. PROTEST NOTE RESPECTING CANADIAN RECOGNITION

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Did Canada receive a note from the United States expressing strong reservations with regard to Canada's intention to open relations with China, and was that note replied to by the minister or any official of the government?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated in reply to a similar question, I would have to check the records. The Secretary of State of the United States made oral representations to me and I gave the Canadian government point of view. Even if such representations did exist, I would not table them, of course; they would be privileged documents.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister be so kind as to check the records, as he suggested, and to advise the house and the Canadian people?

CRIMINAL CODE

REPRESENTATIONS ABOUT ABORTION AND HOMOSEXUALITY

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): I would like to put a question to the Prime Minister. Did he receive a petition signed by more than 70,000 family heads concerning abortion and homosexuality?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I did not receive such a petition, Mr. Speaker, for the whole debate is taking place in the house. In my opinion, the members were elected to represent the people and it is their duty to express their views.

Mr. Fortin: I would like to put a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. As it is very likely that the Prime Minister will receive this petition, does he intend to read it at least?

[English]

PARLIAMENTARY COMMISSIONER

APPOINTMENT OF OMBUDSMAN

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice and it is direct. When does the minister expect to introduce legislation to establish the office of ombudsman? I ask him now because yesterday an ombudsman was appointed in Quebec and last week one was appointed in Hawaii. I think the federal government should follow suit.

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member certainly gets around. The whole review of the rights of the citizen against the administration and the bureaucracy is being pursued actively by the department from the point of view of administrative law and the structure to implement it. I cannot add anything more at present.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

DECISION OF DESIGN COMMITTEE ON NATO COMMEMORATIVE ISSUE

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Postmaster General. Did his recently appointed design advisory committee advise him on the department's current official cancellation message which notes the 20th anniversary of NATO, or did this commemoration stem directly and solely from the minister's enthusiasm?

[Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys).]

IMMIGRATION

ALLEGED SECRET GUIDELINES—POSSIBLE APPEARANCE OF UNITED CHURCH MODERATOR BEFORE STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration and is supplementary to others which have been asked this afternoon. Considering the seriousness of the minister's charge, that the moderator of the United Church of Canada has indulged in irresponsibilities, and in view of the minister's offer to appear before the committee when his estimates are considered, would he also favour an invitation being extended to Dr. McClure, so that he may appear before that committee as well?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, that is up to the committee.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I asked whether the minister would favour the invitation being given.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

APPLICATION OF S.O.68(1) TO INTRODUCE MEASURE THROUGH MOTION FOR COMMITTEE

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister without Portfolio from Port Arthur relating to questions already asked on several occasions. In view of the serious situation that has developed in attempts to obtain new legislation dealing with Indians, who are reluctant and hesitant about accepting legislation prepared by the government, would the minister and his colleagues consider making use of Standing Order 68 (1) which provides that a bill may be introduced upon a motion to appoint a committee to prepare and bring it in? If the Indian people are given an opportunity to be consulted and to engage in research, we might be able to bring forward legislation within a short time by this means.

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, part of the review is consideration of the best methods of providing opportunities for consultation between the parties. The hon. member's suggestion is worthy and will be given full consideration.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

"DON MESSER'S JUBILEE"—STATEMENT BY MINISTER OUTLINING REASONS FOR DISCONTINUANCE

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State. Has the C.B.C. decided to stop fiddling around and leave that to a master entertainer?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I had a conversation with officials of the C.B.C. and I can now state the reply. It is that the C.B.C.'s decision to discontinue the program on the nation-wide network was made after a careful review of several factors, including the diminishing size and nature of the program's audience, the desirability of change to improve the over-all schedule and the potential of the program "Singalong Jubilee" from Halifax which will have a more flexible format. While the C.B.C. recognizes the great contribution made by the Don Messer program over the years, it feels that the proposed change is in the best interest of the over-all network schedule. That was the C.B.C.'s answer, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

COMMUNICATIONS

BELL CANADA—ALLEGED DISREGARD OF INVESTMENT RETURN REGULATIONS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Postmaster General. Does his department intend to make representations to the Canadian Transport Commission and bring to its attention the failure of Bell Telephone to limit its profit to the 6.8 per cent authorized by the Board of Transport Commissioners, or will it ask Bell to reduce the rates it charges customers?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Orlikow: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister's department oppose the application of Bell Telephone to the Canadian Transport Commission to increase its profit margin to 9 per cent?

Mr. Kierans: Mr. Speaker, the C.T.C. was given power by this house. It is the appropriate body to make decisions. Its members have the ability to make judgments and decisions on their own.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the Minister of Communications not consider that he has a responsibility to the house and to this country to see that the order of the Board of Transport Commissioners is carried out?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest that the question as asked is argumentative.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I put the question another way. Since the profit margin for Bell Telephone has been set at 6.8 per cent, does the minister intend to take any action about that ceiling being violated?

Mr. Kierans: Mr. Speaker, parliament has entrusted the Canadian Transport Commission with power, authority and responsibility in this matter. If the house wishes to take away that power and responsibility I suppose an appropriate bill would have to be introduced.

DRUGS

REQUEST FOR PERSONNEL OF COMMITTEE INQUIRING INTO NON-MEDICAL USES

Mr. R. L. Whiting (Halton): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Is he now in a position to name the members of the commission who are to study the use and abuse of drugs?

Mr. MacInnis: He ought to be.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No, Mr. Speaker, not at the moment. The government is actually considering the membership of the inquiry. I hope in the near future to be in a position to advise the hon. member and the house about the composition of the committee of inquiry.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES FOR STUDENTS

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. It relates to the statement he made on Tuesday about a program to provide summer employment for students. Are steps being taken to allocate students for farm assistance to offset the shortage created by the cut-back in foreign students who would otherwise be available under the auspices of the International Exchange Association?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, we have continued the agricultural exchange program but we have reduced the numbers involved because we want to provide employment opportunities for Canadian students. The concrete step we are taking is to make these job offers that become available first to our Canadian students so that they will have the first chance.

EXTERNAL AID

BIAFRA—PROPOSALS TO PREVENT STARVATION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In light of reports of increased starvation in Biafra resulting from the fall of the city of Umuahia and in light of indications that there is likely to be a long war, has the government of Canada any new proposals to alleviate the increased starvation?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the hon. member is asking for a rather general statement. We have almost reached the end of the question period. Perhaps the hon. member might put his question in such a way as to invite the minister to make a statement on another occasion.

[Translation]

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice but I see that he just left his seat.

[English]

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—COMMUNICATIONS REQUESTING GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour which is supplementary to the one asked by the hon. member for Central Nova (Mr. MacEwan) relating to the Air Canada strike. Will the minister say whether he has received letters and telegrams from the Canadian people asking him to take action on the strike, and settle it?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether the question as asked is proper. I do not think it is proper to ask simply whether the minister has received letters, telegrams or representations.

Mr. Allmand: May I rephrase the question, Mr. Speaker?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I received three telegrams suggesting that I join the New Democratic party, one suggesting that I was a communist, three others, I believe, suggesting compulsory arbitration, and several serious telegrams from other groups of people. Certain union groups within Air Canada are protesting the use of non-union personnel within the company. That, I think, is hardly conducive to good industrial relations for the future within the company.

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): Are we to take it from the minister's answer, Mr. Speaker, that he will be activated and stimulated in proportion to the number of letters and telegrams he receives from Canadians in such a national emergency?

Mr. Mackasey: It will take more than a telegram to get me to join the N.D.P.

THE MINISTRY

INQUIRY AS TO APPOINTMENT OF MEMBER FOR YORK WEST

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Is he now prepared to appoint the hon. member for York West to the cabinet?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am glad the hon. member has asked that question. It is such a refreshing change from the endless questions he has asked about Devco. I am glad that the Leader of the Opposition and the friends of the United Mine Workers have finally exercised greater control over the members of the Conservative party, particularly the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond. I understand the union has scorned his destructive attitude toward—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stanfield: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago Your Honour suggested a proper course of conduct to a member of the opposition. I suggest the answer given by the Prime Minister was possibly amusing—I do not know.

Mr. Trudeau: Did you think the question was serious?

Mr. Stanfield: I was about to rise at the time Your Honour made the suggestion to the hon. member to suggest very seriously that ministers and the Prime Minister might set an example to the rest of us in the house.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacInnis: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, is the Prime Minister asking whether my question was serious or not? If he does not think the appointment of the hon. member for York West is a serious matter and if he does not believe me, then he should ask the member for York West.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question period expired some moments ago.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I wish to add to the point of order raised by the Leader of the Opposition. I do so by drawing Your Honour's attention to a portion of Standing Order 39(1). It deals with this question and I quote an important part of it:

—but in putting any such question or in replying to the same no argument or opinion is to be offered, nor any facts stated, except so far as may be necessary to explain the same;—

I submit that Your Honour is perfectly right in calling on members who ask questions to comply with that part of the Standing Order, and I think ministers should be asked to do the same.

Mr. Trudeau: On a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether there is any point in pursuing the matter much further? It is obvious the rules apply to members on both sides of the house, either members of the opposition or members on the government side asking questions of ministers. I am sure hon. members realize that the rules, and particularly the rule referred to by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, apply to cabinet ministers. I thank hon. members who from day to day try to assist the Chair respecting this rule.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON FIFTH AND SIXTH REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Before the orders of the day are called, Mr. Speaker, would you permit me to direct a question to the government house leader concerning the business of the house? In view of the fact that the motions for concurrence have not been passed by the house in regard to two reports, the fifth and sixth, of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications and, more particularly, as the Transport and Communications Committee has not met since early last week, will the government house leader inform the house when he intends to bring forward these two measures for debate?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): As I indicated, Mr. Speaker, it is of obvious importance to the house and parliament generally for the current debate on Bill C-150 to be brought to an end. The equivalent of 15 sitting days has been devoted to the second reading and report stage of the omnibus bill. Until the filibuster on this matter can be brought to an end, it is impossible to plan any of the future business of the house for the balance of this session.

Mr. McGrath: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, each time this question is directed to the government house leader he refers to a filibuster. It is a legitimate debate. I remind the house leader that many Liberal members have participated in that debate, as well as members of the opposition.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think we should call orders of the day.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 58—NON-CONFIDENCE MOTION—FAILURE OF GOVERNMENT TO PROVIDE CAPITAL TO AGRICULTURE

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent-Essex) moved:

That in the opinion of this house the government has failed to deal with the seriously deteriorating net income for Canadian agriculture, as a result of which farmers in all parts of Canada are unable to obtain the necessary operating capital to finance the 1969-70 crop year.

Mr. Baldwin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, before the debate begins I wish to advise Your Honour there have been discussions among members with regard to the course of conduct of this debate. I am happy to propose now for the consideration of the house an amendment to the appropriate Standing Order so that the length of speeches would be limited in this way: The first speaker for each party to have 20 minutes and thereafter each speaker to be limited to 10 minutes. This would permit a wider participation in the debate. I am sure it would not detract from the strength and value of the debate. It may well be that the house will accept this proposal.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I take it that the members of the opposition would like to hear from my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, at some length with respect to the government's proposals. I wonder whether the proposed amendment could be amended by stipulating that the minister might be given the opportunity to speak for 40 minutes and otherwise the rule would apply as suggested by the hon. member?

Mr. Baldwin: I recognize the seriousness of the subject, but this proposal would probably prevent three members of the minister's own party from having the opportunity to speak. The whole purpose is to have wider participation. I am sure the minister would be glad to give members of his party who would be brave enough to participate in the debate an opportunity to say what he otherwise would have said in the additional 30 minutes.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I misunderstood the motion. My understanding was that the opposition wanted to hear the government's proposals in this regard. I regret the fact that my colleague is not to be given the extra time.

Mr. Baldwin: He is entitled to 30 minutes in the debate as the Standing Order is now. Surely he can contract the 30 minutes to 20 minutes. This is all we are asking. If this cannot be accepted, the proposition must fail.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): The Minister of Agriculture is prepared to agree to this. I must say I regret that his time is to be cut down in this way, but we are prepared to agree.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have spoken to those concerned in this part of the house. Could we agree on 30 minutes for the first spokesman of the Conservative Party, 30 minutes for the minister, 20 minutes for the spokesmen of the other two parties and 10 minutes for the balance of the speakers?

Mr. Speaker: Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Danforth: Mr. Speaker, the motion of non-confidence before the house this afternoon was not drafted without a great deal of serious consideration of all of its implications. Certainly there is no conceivable opportunity to defeat the government with its numerical superiority in the house at this time. But if the motion serves to draw to Your Honour's attention and that of hon. members opposite the very serious plight of all segments of the agricultural industry today, it will have served its purpose.

• (3:30 p.m.)

I am supported in moving this motion, Mr. Speaker, by the hon. member for Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain (Mr. Southam). The reason I asked for his support, which was granted quite eagerly, was to emphasize that this problem exists in all parts of Canada, from the east coast to the west coast. It is a problem on which public attention has been focused because of the dire position of the wheat growers and grain growers of western Canada and of the farmers of eastern Canada, but the economic problem is not confined to them.

I was rather alarmed, indeed shocked, to learn when travelling in the west that a minister or ministers of the Crown in meeting with farmers there had implied that one of the reasons no solutions were being put forward by the government to alleviate the farmers' economic problems was that they could not obtain the understanding, the consideration or the sympathy of eastern Canada. I reject that theory in its entirety. It is the old one of divide and conquer. We in eastern Canada are very much aware of the problems in the west. The only major difference is that many farmers in the west are unable to dispose of their crops while farmers in eastern Canada, although they can sell their crops, in many instances must sell them below the cost of production. Therefore Canadian farmers in general are directly concerned with the government's agricultural policy, and they have every right to be concerned because it directly affects their livelihood.

Many grave criticisms have been expressed by leaders of agricultural groups about the lack of policy of the government, about the confused policies of the government, about agricultural policies that seem to be working toward opposite ends. Surely after almost seven years in office the government should be able to indicate to the great agricultural industry where it thinks its place should be in our economic life, what its long-term and short-term goals should be, and what the future is for the young Canadian farmer. These are questions that should be answered.

But whenever questions have been asked in the house over the last few months by members of opposition parties we have heard the old refrain that agriculture has never had it so good, that production has increased, that many new products are being produced, that the gross national income is higher than it has ever been, that inventories on farms are at their highest in history. And then there was the ridiculous observation by a former minister of agriculture when he attempted to indicate how good things were for Canadian farmers by saying that never before had the farmers of this nation borrowed so much money.

In answering these allegations I draw the attention of hon. members opposite to the steady parade of farmers to the banks and other lending institutions, seeking money not only to run their operations but to live on and to clothe and educate their families. I draw the attention of hon. members opposite to the growing total of accounts receivable held by business firms dealing with farmers. I draw their attention to the rural and weekly newspapers where they will find page after page after page of paid announcements of sales of farm machinery and livestock by countless farmers who have simply said, "We have had enough and we must get out." I draw their attention to the drop in sales experienced by businesses connected with farming, to the drop in sales of fertilizer in certain areas, to the drop in sales of new farm machinery, new farm equipment, chemicals and all the other things that are normal to the agricultural business. Surely the farmers of this nation deserve an indication from the government either that they are no longer considered a viable part of the Canadian economy or that the government will take its full responsibility toward them by saying, "We feel you are indispensable; we will take the responsibility of providing an economic climate for you that will enable you to derive from your capital investment and labour a return comparable with that received by all other segments of the economy."

To indicate the tremendous confusion in the government's approach to agriculture I shall deal with a few specific commodities. I shall not deal with wheat and feed grains because some of my colleagues and members of other parties no doubt will do so. As an example, look at the dairy industry. Here is an industry in which there is a tremendous investment. By its very nature it must be considered in the context of a long-term economic plan, but within the last five years we have had five separate and distinct government policies for that industry.

We have a National Dairy Commission whose sole purpose seems to be to curtail Canadian production so that it will just meet the demands of our domestic market. But when we travel across the country we see thousands of pounds of imported butter simply because some sections of the country are unable to provide for their own needs. A quota system was set up that was supposed to put farmers on an equal basis from coast to coast. But quotas totalling millions of pounds have now been transferred from the west, an area that does not produce all its own dairy requirements, to eastern Canada where we normally produce more than we consume. This does not seem justifiable, practical or reasonable. In addition, the way subsidies are being implemented means that many small dairy businesses are being forced out of business, and it is becoming financially impossible for a young farmer to enter that business.

What about the greenhouse industry? We had a pronouncement by the minister that this industry was in difficulty and that people should be encouraged to leave it. We are not dealing with just hundreds of thousands of dollars in this industry. We are dealing with an industry in which millions of dollars are invested. This industry was based on government action. The fact that the government has not placed tariffs against the importation of specialized food has made it practically impossible economically for the industry to develop in a profitable way. In its desire to have cheaper food and bring down the cost of living the government is jeopardizing this entire industry.

What about the tobacco industry? Here we have a multi-million dollar industry which has brought untold wealth to the provinces in which this product is grown. We have the impossible situation of one government department spending thousands of dollars in experimental work in order to increase production and quality while another department of the government issues propaganda designed to stop the use of this product and curtail the industry. Here the government has a golden opportunity. By shifting its emphasis in research, surely to goodness it could provide methods by which, if there are dangerous components in tobacco, they could be removed to the benefit of the industry, the government and the people.

What about the poultry industry? In Canada we have a poultry industry which is endeavouring by the organization of national commissions to regiment and control the marketing of its produce in an orderly fashion. This is being done at the request of the provincial and federal governments. We know right now that, unless the government proposes to change its policy, importations of poultry, eggs and other allied products will flood into this country from other nations and take up any slack in our market.

Let us look at the canning industry. We had a strong viable canning industry from coast to coast. We were proud of the quality of the pack and proud of the fact that the industry provided an income for hundreds of farmers and their families in almost every province of this nation. What has happened? The government has allowed the importation, especially of fruits and some vegetables, into this country to a degree that is forcing the industry right out of business. We are told that we must allow this because of our agreements and tariff commitments. The fact is that the government in every instance has failed to take any step to protect Canadian industry.

It is not good enough to make excuses. It is not good enough to procrastinate until the damage is done. It is not good enough to come into the house and say, "We cannot, because". I point out that every nation in the world today with excess products is selling them and a lot of this surplus is coming into Canada. Surely it is time we took our place among the trading nations of the world and traded on our terms and not just on their terms.

There was a task force hearing. Government policy was held up because we were to have a congress to which the task force would report. I have a great deal of admiration for the work the task force has done. I compliment those responsible for setting up the congress and for the manner in which the meetings where carried on. One thing that disturbs me, however, is the fact that the task force seemed to be directed wholly to the one proposition of getting the government completely out of agriculture and letting it stand on its own feet.

I have before me a book about the size of Eaton's or Simpsons-Sears fall and winter catalogue. It contains 385 pages devoted entirely to the government's involvement in agriculture. Now we see at all levels of government a move toward complete abandonment. We are now at cross-purposes. We heard the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) get up in the house and announce a change in hog premiums. This was good; it was asked for by the industry. We were told it was designed to increase the quality of hogs in Canada. It was acceptable and reasonable. I take issue with it, however, because within 90 days the minister announced another policy which was not based on the report of the task force and was not announced after the congress met. It was not done in consultation with the industry. It was designed solely not to increase the efficiency of the hog producers but simply to save the government X million dollars for no other reason than that it wished to have nothing to do with the agricultural industry.

This brings me to the subject of tariffs. It has always been a source of amazement to me and to other hon. members that whenever a tariff question comes up and one of our industries finds itself in economic chaos the government merely says it is aware of the problem. We are told by members of the government that they have listened to the representations and are in sympathy with them but cannot do anything. They tell us there are agreements and that we must wait upon the Gatt threaty. We have to wait for its conclusion, we have to wait for its inception, we have to wait for its deliberations. We must wait. This is not good enough.

Last fall we were involved with the problem of Ontario corn. That was a serious situation. Of course the industry made representations and I must say, in all fairness, that the minister was most sympathetic. But for nine weeks the minister took no action. It is true that he caused meetings to be held. He did confer with officials in the United States where the corn was coming from which was causing us trouble. The minister made a deal with the United States whereby in exchange for the dropping of the duty on seven tariff items coming into Canada they would undertake to protect us from importation of cheap corn. Seven to one—that was not good enough. What the farmers and the people of the nation did not know was that the implementation of this protection in respect of corn would only be in effect for seven weeks. As of January 1 it expired. We are right back where we were. Unless action is taken immediately we will be in the same trouble this year.

Let us compare this situation with the actions other nations take against us. Whenever we encroach on the privileges and rights of producers of other nations they do not wait weeks or months; they do not even wait for hours. When we go into their markets we find that, with perhaps an eight-hour warning, conditions are changed and we are faced with a tariff increase which means an almost complete ban on importation of our products. We on this side contend that it cannot always be that way. We believe that trade must be a two-way street. If we are treated in this fashion, surely we have the right to treat others in the same way. Why must our farmers always pay for the mistakes of others in respect of international agreements?

I now come to the matter of credit. The only policy of any major proportion which the government has initiated in its entire life has been the increasing of credit to farmers. The increase of credit to farmers does not solve any of our major problems. All it does is increase their debt, increase land values, increase the value of the machinery they must buy, and place them in a position in which it is almost impossible to survive. And what does the government do? After initiating greater credit it established a policy, as it indicated in the house and at the congress, to put off the land what is calls inefficient and small farmers. Such a policy defeats the purpose for which credit was initiated in the first place.

Syndicate loans were supposed to be the answer. We were going to have larger corporate farms subsidized by government money which would be used to establish viable economic units. What does the implementation of the new estate tax do? It takes away the farmer's incentive to build up a corporate farm. This is why the farmers of this nation have no confidence in the government. This is why the farmers of this nation say that the government has no policy, or a confused policy. This is why the farmers of this nation cannot and will not make any money under these conditions. Surely the time is now for the government to act. Surely the government knows what is going on in the west and what is going on in the east. It knows how bad farmers' credit ratings are.

The farmers of this nation are sick to death of investigations, delegations, deliberations, conversations, and procrastination. Is it not time that we had some legislation? Even hon. members opposite must realize how serious the situation is and how urgent it is that solutions be applied now. This must be done if a great segment of the Canadian economy is not to fall into economic chaos and fade into oblivion. I commend this motion to hon. members.

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, on completion of what I wish to say in the new few minutes I will propose an amendment to the motion now before the house. But first I should like to say that I agree with the motion. I think it is time that we had a full discussion of the situation of Canadian farmers. The government and members on this side of the house must seriously consider the situation of the farmers, what is to be their place in the affairs of the nation and, perhaps even more important, whether some segments of the industry will have a place as owner-producers in this country.

One of the most important documents dealing with the situation of farmers in Canada was prepared by a group set up by the government of Ontario. Its title was, "The Challenge of Abundance". The challenge of abundance is really the challenge that faces the people of this nation in regard to farming and agriculture as we come to the end of the 1960's and in a few months move into the 1970's. The problem is not that the farmer is unable to produce food as cheaply as he did 30 years ago. The fact of the matter is that he produces it for much less in terms of real and constant dollars. It is not that he does not have the know-how and the savvy. He is second to none anywhere in the world in his know-how, savvy, and understanding of the land, of the tools he uses and of the economic climate in which he operates.

The real problem is to be found in the heading of the report to which I have referred—the challenge of abundance. The real problem is what our society is going to do with the knowledge, the know-how, the resources and the people we have at our beck and call. It is they who make us potentially one of the best fed nations in the world. I do not say that this is true for every Canadian. I suspect that as I speak here this afternoon there are millions of Canadians who do not have all the food they want and all the proteins they need for their health. I suppose that there are many expectant mothers who do not have the food that is essential for their health. I suppose there are many children in this country who are not as well fed as those who live in well to do, middle class homes. So there is this contrast. I will in no way attempt to describe what is happening in other parts of the world.

What is happening to our farmers as we face this challenge of abundance? One of the first things that happened after I came here as a member of the house last fall was the arrival of an array of tractors in front of the House of Commons, driven by the corn growers of Ontario. I spoke to some of their owners who were large producers. They do not lack the know-how with regard to the production of corn. What they sadly lack is a net income which would enable them to continue to operate effectively as producers.

As the previous speaker said, a solution has not been found. The representatives of the corn growers are still making requests to appear before the Standing Committee on Agriculture to state their position. I am sure they would not want to spend the time and effort to come here to appear before that committee unless their problems still existed. I suspect that in southern Ontario there is a a time bomb that will go off one of these days right in the lap of the government. Perhaps I am wrong; we will wait and see.

The Standing Committee on Agriculture has just returned from a trip to western Canada. We travelled right across that western land to Vancouver Island and we had an opportunity to see what was happening in the western part of this nation. I hope that in due course we shall do the same in the east. What did we see? We saw the same situation that was described in the Ontario report concerning the state of affairs in Ontario. We saw evidence of the challenge of abundance. People came before us representing the farming industry. Farmers came before us. I suspect that the tree fruits industry of British Columbia could produce a great deal more than it is producing at present. But the industry has organized supply management and is successfully maintaining a level of income for its people. We talked to very efficient egg producers. One of them had a blackboard upon which he put his costs. I believe the facts he put before us were true. I have been on many farms; he looked to me like an honest, family farm operator. He showed he was losing two cents a dozen on every dozen of eggs he moved off his farm.

We went to other places. We saw a barn with the number "8" on it. It was part of a factory operation. New forms of agriculture are developing today; we are moving into a phase of factory operations. We were told about one concern which had plans to move to the coast and set up a factory designed to produce 25,000 hogs per year. Mr. Speaker, we need a factory operation to produce hogs in Canada like we need a hole in the head. Farmers in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Quebec and the Maritimes have shown they are entirely capable of producing the amount of pork needed in Canada.

Then we came back and looked at the prairies. The house has been told of the situation which exists on the prairies. We split up into groups and went from farm to farm. We saw the actual situation there, not statistics—wheat piling up and not being moved to markets, farmers with inadequate incomes whose financial position made it doubtful that they could go ahead and put in another crop. What is worse, they really did not know what they should put in, what would be demanded of them by the people of Canada or the markets of the world. These farmers are operating in a no man's land so far as policy is concerned. The big question was: Where do we go from here?

I spoke of the challenge of abundance. I am convinced that we must develop a policy as a people which does not leave our farmers in a never-never-land wondering what their future is to be. I have often expressed concern about farm credit policies and the means by which young people can take up farming. But really, Mr. Speaker, the primary question is: Why should they? What is their future likely to be? Is it certain or uncertain? This is the real problem. The government and the people of Canada must realize that there is an emergency on the prairies as well as a situation which calls for long-term planning. The government must recognize that it cannot leave the problem as it now exists unanswered or regard it simply as a piece of unfinished business. We must produce both emergency and long-term solutions. Indeed, we have no choice.

The least we can do at the moment is establish a two-price system for wheat sold on the domestic market for human consumption so that farmers may receive a minimum of $3 per bushel for all wheat used in Canada for human consumption, and provide that the premium per bushed received over and above the International Grains Agreement price in the current crop year be distributed to all permit holders on the basis of the unit quota. This would at least recognize the fact that the grain farmer is a part of this nation and entitled to treatment at least as good as that accorded to industry, which is protected by tariffs, or to the dairy industry which is protected by subsidies.

In addition, I believe we must recognize there is an emergency that must be dealt with immediately. Cash has to go into the hands of these farmers if they are to carry on business and if the social structure is not to collapse—I am thinking of the schools, roads and churches in the small communities of western Canada. There is much more at stake here than simply the livelihood and business operations of individual farmers.

The president of the Saskatchewan Farmers' Union stated in the west last week that it would take $175 million in federal aid to prevent the collapse of the grain industry in western Canada. I suspect he is right but I do not expect that the government will make such an amount available. I would have to be a flaming optimist to do so, having lived in the west and having watched this government for some time.

Nevertheless I should like to place before the house and the government the concrete proposal that as an emergency measure the government immediately make to all grain farmers an income deficiency payment of 20 cents a bushel on all wheat marketed in the 1967-68 grain crop year so as to put purchasing power in the hands of the farmers of western Canada. The maximum amount which any farmer might receive would be based on a 5,000 bushel delivery to the Canadian Wheat Board in the crop year to which I have referred. This policy should apply also to oats and barley in cases where a grower has delivered these grains rather than wheat.

This would not be enough but it would certainly help to meet the situation which is now at crisis point. I see in this chamber some of the men who toured Saskatchewan from farm to farm during the trip we made in the west, and they will surely agree with me. In the long term we shall be obliged to look at different solutions. We shall have to assess what the market actually is and study the channels open to us for the disposal of our wheat. I believe we should move away from the straight commercial approach we have followed up to now and turn to bilateral sales, to barter.

We must find out who needs this food and devise ways by which it may reach them. This means right here in Canada, in my book, and it applies also to those who live beyond our borders but who are none the less part of the human race. Hitler is supposed to have said that if he won the war and isolated North America, the people there would smother in their own fat. Unless we look outside our borders, we may do this. We are rich. But even rich people do not live alone; they have a host of other people to cater to their needs and serve them.

We must also be very concerned about the policy of the Canadian Dairy Commission in regard to the small dairy producers. Their needs are being neglected. They are being squeezed out. I have received letters from producers in my constituency asking for consideration of their problem, but according to the replies I have received from the commission this type of producer cannot be assisted under the regulations. I say to the government: This is not good enough.

I know one small grain producer in western Canada who is also a cow-calf man who produces some calves that go to feed lots in western Canada. He has to depend on his returns from the cream industry as well as from his calves in order to survive. Yet this state of affairs in western Canada today is being ignored. Representatives of the government of Manitoba attended one of the meetings of the standing committee and claimed that dairy producers were being discriminated against, that quotas were being transferred east.

Mr. Harding: The minister denies it but it is true.

Mr. Gleave: He may deny it. I am not interested in where quotas are transferred to. What interests me is that the needs of this type of producer are being totally ignored by the dairy commission. The minister must remember that western Canada does not have a one-crop economy; there are cattle farms, livestock farms, grain farms and mixed farms. The Meadow Lake area is not just a grain producing area; neither is Saskatoon-Biggar. Let the government remember this and look at farming in its totality instead of following the bits and pieces approach that has unfortunately been taken up to now.

I move, seconded by the hon. member for Regina-Lake Centre (Mr. Benjamin), the following subamendment:

That the motion be amended by inserting therein, immediately after the words "Canadian agriculture," the following words:

"which in the prairie provinces is due in the main to declining grain prices and reduced delivery quotas."

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to speak on the non-confidence motion of the Progressive Conservative party, which reads as follows:

That in the opinion of this house the government has failed to deal with the seriously deteriorating net income of Canadian agriculture—

I would also like to talk about the amendment of the New Democratic party which refers to the situation of agriculture in the Prairies.

I shall deal with the subject in general, while acknowledging the merits of the amendment of the New Democratic party. The subject is a current issue in our regions. Had it been possible, we would have liked to add the following words to the amendment: and has neglected to recognize the right of farmers to be consulted about government policies which are always arrived at unilaterally.

As soon as the dairy policy of the current year was announced, I warned the minister that it would give rise to protests.

Today, Mr. Speaker, since our allotted time is 20 minutes, I will not refer to certain notes which I had jotted down, in order to deal exclusively with the protests. I will speak only about the farmers of my area.

In my opinion, the government has the obvious proof that the farmers are really unhappy, and rightly so, under the circumstances. We have heard that the farmers' income has decreased. This will not please them. If any producer were dealt with in this manner, strikes would necessarily occur.

Fortunately, farmers are not completely given to protests and do not react as others in various fields. I congratulate them for holding on. I hope that the government will finally review its position and that the commissioners of the Canadian Dairy Commission will take my comments into account, because I note that since the minister's last statements on the farm policy, nothing has changed.

It is impossible to exert any influence on the Canadian Wheat Board, and make it understand that there are some marginal cases. The only thing that matters is the administration of the law.

Mr. Speaker, I think that we shall have to use judgment as far as the interpretation of the legislation is concerned instead of enforcing it indiscriminately. It is rather easy to enforce a legislation; it is more difficult to interpret it in such a way as to be fair with everyone.

Of course, we are the spokesmen of the farmers. They do send us their complaints. Some among them believe that we have the right to discuss the government policy. I shall point out to them that we do not have any more rights to do so than the back-benchers on the government side. The policy is all settled when it reaches us, without the opposition parties having been consulted. We are obliged to bear with the dictatorship of the department.

Then, when we go into our ridings, we are the ones who get it.

As a matter of fact, I have received so far more than 100 letters. I shall quote a few taken at random. They show not only to the minister but also to the Canadian Dairy Commission—since we are interested in industrial milk—the merits of our recommendations.

This is a letter dated April 18, sent to me by Mr. Jean-Baptiste Laprise, of Albanel, Quebec, and I quote:

Sir, as you have always defended the farmer in the past, I am asking you to do everything possible to intercede with the Prime Minister, Mr. Pierre Elliott Trudeau, and the Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Olson, who is primarily responsible for the new dairy policy which is for us, farmers, a disaster, an enormous reduction in our income which we cannot accept, considering the increasing cost of living, so that the latter will amend his dairy policy which, in my view, does not make sense.

I have before me another letter, this time from Saint-Félicien, which proves that I got some from almost all parishes. Here is what that letter says, and I quote:

Dear Sir:

Recently, I learned of the new dairy policy of the federal government for the year 1969-70 and I was taken aback by its lack of seriousness.

With the increase—

The letter goes on in the same vein and bears the signature of Mr. Rosaire Lavertu, of Saint-Félicien, Quebec.

I have here another letter, Mr. Lucien Leclerc, of Albanel, which I shall read also:

Sir:

I am extremely displeased with the new agricultural policy for 1969—

• (4:20 p.m.)

A similar letter is signed by Mr. Hilarion Charbonneau, R.R. No. 5, Mistassini.

And another one from Mistassini is signed by Mr. Florent Imbeault, Range No. 4.

I am quoting these letters to prove to the minister that protests have been made and if he does not receive any himself I think that I shall send him photostat copies of these letters, for his information.

Here is another letter from Albanel signed by Messrs. Henri and Lionel Marcil, and I quote:

I ask you to support the milk producers and their claims against the dairy policy ... of the government.

And finally this one from Girardville, another agricultural centre, and I quote:

Dear Sir:

Now that I have examined the new dairy policy for the year 1969-70, I must tell you that I am very disappointed and I wonder what will become of us.

They want more efficiency on our part and first quality products—

I have here a three-page letter which does not contain only sweet words, signed by Mr. Maurice Blais, from Albanel, and another from Sainte-Hedwidge, an agricultural area, signed by Messrs. Ulric and Armand Paradis, who protest along the same lines as also do Messrs. Édouard Fortin, Benoit Lavoie and Joseph Bouchard, from Albanel, as well as Mr. Élie Langlois, from Sainte-Hedwidge. They all think it is nonsense to reduce income while the cost of living is spiralling.

Mr. Speaker, the best supporting evidence of my allegations is the meeting held in Saint-Jérôme on Monday, April 28, 1969, to which the farmers had invited the area's four members of parliament. The conclusions of that meeting prompted me to direct questions today to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson).

Here is the wording of the document submitted on the occasion of that meeting, and I quote:

To the members of parliament,

The farmers of the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area were simply dismayed upon the announcement of the federal dairy policy for 1969-1970.

Such a policy meant above all for them a reduction of their incomes while almost every day they have to put up with an increase in their production costs or in the cost of living.

They disavow such a policy which they consider backward and discriminatory. The document we submitted today is a working document which we beg you to analyze thoroughly and which, we expect, you will use as a guideline for the steps to be taken in order to amend that policy, to the satisfaction of the manufacturing milk producers of the area, the province and the country.

The Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean farmers are happy that you have agreed to meet them and hear their grievances.

That document is signed by Xavier Fortin of the Saguenay Federation of C.F.U., Léopold Harvey of the Manufacturing Milk Producers Union, J. Arthur Guay, of the Saguenay Co-operatives, Paul-Émile Gagnon, president of the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean Dairy Co-operative Association.

And we are given tables which show the decrease, for instance, in the production of a farmer who usually produces 50,000 pounds of milk per year. Last year, his gross income was $3,945, whereas this year he will only make $3,735; this represents a loss of $210.

Looking at another table, we see that the producer upon whom a quota of 100,000 pounds is imposed, and who produces 200,000 pounds, will lose $420. As for the producer whose quota is 250,000 pounds, and who produces 400,000 pounds, he too will lose. Each one of them has added to his herds. For three years now, there has been a clamor over television and radio for economic units, for quality production. That is what our farmers have done.

Today, because our farmers have worked well, they are being punished. The one upon whom a quota of 250,000 pounds was imposed, and who produces 400,000 pounds, will lose $740 this year. The other whose quota is 250,000 pounds, and who produces 350,000 will lose $430.

Mr. Speaker, all these tables were given to us at the meeting last Monday. Those people added the following text to their report:

In the light of those examples, we note that:

1. The policy ensures a decrease in income for every category of producers, whether they be small, medium or large.

2. The subsidy quotas remain the same; this penalizes the most productive producer, because his surpluses of milk, above his quota, will cost 52c. to be exported instead of 21c. like last year.

3. The subsidies remain the same, paralyzing the efforts of the producer who had hoped to increase his production and productivity enough to enable him to live off his farm.

4. The present policy will eliminate many manufacturing milk producers, but the federal government does not announce any parallel policy allowing the farmer to make a reconversion or, in some cases, to get out of agriculture with any possibilities of integration into the labour market.

5. The federal government does not care about the farmers or the recommendations made by national agencies representing producers, in the formulation of its policies. For instance, how can the federal government announce a policy designed to assure $4.85 per hundredweight of milk for 1969-70, the same as for 1968-69, when for the same amount of milk the price of finished products remain the same and subsidies are decreased.

• (4:30 p.m.)

6. The present policy gives a good idea of the will of the government to abandon gradually the subsidy policy for manufacturing milk, and without taking any steps to insure maintenance of prices to producers.

7. The decrease of the subsidy means nothing else but a reduction of the amounts the Agricultural Prices Stabilization Board has decided to affect to the dairy industry.

8. Once more, the federal government has found the means of balancing its budget at the expense of one of the least privileged classes of society, when tremendous expenditures are allowed, because they are allegedly inevitable, for national defence purposes. Agriculture is also an essential sector of the economic life of a country.

9. The federal government allocates only 3 per cent of its budget to agriculture compared to 10 per cent in the United States.

Mr. Speaker, it seems it is high time for the government, which is always anxious to follow the lead of the United States in the field of agriculture, to do so in this case.

And this year, the federal government finds that 3 per cent is too much and cuts it.

Our position as to the dairy policy of the federal government:

1. Producers agree on control of their production; they also agree to provide for the needs of the market. They do not accept control without planning, which is cause that often, the best producers give up the job while the less enterprising ones stick to it.

Here is one question among others.

What is the specific purpose of the state when it grants subsidy quotas? Is it trying to arbitrarily discourage producers or to organize production on a rational basis?

2. We are not against the elimination of a certain number of farmers, but we want those who will remain in business to know where they stand.

And the second question:

What has the federal government done to give orientation to the manufacturing milk producers? And what is your program for the next five (5) years?

3. We are not against the elimination of a certain number of manufacturing producers.

Those, in some cases, will operate a conversion of their farming and, in other cases, will give up farming. We say that one who has to convert his farming must get satisfactory help to do it.

Mr. Speaker, I have not got the time to read in full this wonderful document because I know that my time is about to expire, but I wish to quote, in conclusion, what is added by the farmers:

We ask for a minimum price of $5.35 per hundred weight of manufacturing milk based on a test of 3.5 pounds of fat. This price represents the $4.85 price announced in 1968-1969, plus a reasonable percentage taking into account the increase in 1968-1969 of the production costs and the cost of living.

And with these words I end my speech, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity afforded by this debate today for two reasons. First, I think it is useful to have an opportunity provided to members of this house, after they have had a chance of assessing the situation with respect to agriculture, to give the government the benefit of their views as to what kind of policy, taking into account all of the consequences of adopting that policy and what would be most acceptable to the farming community. Second, I think it is useful because it is well for us to give consideration to the substance of the motion in such a way that we put it in perspective.

I know a little about this because I used to sit on the other side of the house. It is very easy to complain about everything without having to assume the responsibility for finding and administering solutions. I do not criticize members of the opposition, farm organizations or anyone else for taking that course, but I think it is fair and reasonable to say that when you have the responsibility for implementing policies you must look at the situation with a slightly different perspective.

At the outset, Mr. Speaker, I wish to say I concur in one statement that has been made so far in this debate, namely, the tremendous value of agriculture to the economy. There is no question in anyone's mind about that. We then go to the next stage and try to analyse the problem in sufficient depth so that we understand the root cause of the problem depressing the agricultural economy today.

I noted that the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave) borrowed the phrase, "the challenge of abundance", the task force in Ontario. I believe the greatest underlying reason for the present price structure and the low prices of many agricultural commodities in Canada today is the tremendous potential production in almost any commodity. It is so great, that whether it is cereals, dairy products, oil seeds or whatever, if there is an effort on the part of Canadian farmers to produce that product, in a very short time it will be in a surplus position which automatically damages the price structure. For some time after that we then continue to produce against the surplus. There are one or two commodities in the country that are exceptions to that rule, but generally speaking I think it applies.

I am sure hon. members will agree we not only have a tremendous capacity to produce as much as there is effective demand for but substantially more than that. Indeed, this is what has happened in Canada with many commodities. I might also say it is not only in Canada that this has happened. If one looks at the figures compiled recently by the O.E.C.D., one will see this production pattern taking place, in cereals and dairy products particularly, in many other countries of the world. The serious problem of over-production is also common to many fruits and vegetables. I wanted to say that at the outset, Mr. Speaker, because I do not want anyone to accuse me of saying that the farmers never had it so good. There are problems. We recognize those problems.

• (4:40 p.m.)

The motion this afternoon refers to "the seriously deteriorating net income for Canadian agriculture." It indicates that as a result farmers in all parts of Canada are "unable to obtain the necessary operating capital to finance the 1969-70 crop year." As I said, I think one would be less than realistic if one did not recognize that there are problems of farm income. These problems, of course, must be faced by agriculture from year to year, in many cases from commodity to commodity, depending on certain national aspects of the situation and also on the international context of affairs. However, to assert that farm income has seriously deteriorated and that Canadian farmers will be unable to finance their operations may, I suggest, in relation to recent history, not be quite consistent with the facts.

Unfortunately we do not have net farm income figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the first quarter of this year. However, we do have those for 1968, or at least we have a preliminary estimate. This estimate indicates that net farm income in Canada for 1968 will be about $170 million more than in 1967. In the absence of data in respect of farm income for the first quarter of this year, perhaps the best indicator of the present position of farmers is current farm prices. I am the first to admit that this is not always directly related to farm income, but I am sure hon. members will realize that there is a relationship. So I would like to place before the house certain information in respect of prices of various farm commodities in order that hon. members may judge for themselves whether the income situation is deteriorating in what is claimed is a serious, almost disastrous manner.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, the problem we get into is that I am sure that in any year since Confederation one could single out some commodity in some area, and sometimes more than one commodity in more than one area, and show that there was a very serious situation. But what I am trying to do in the few minutes I have available is to outline the whole of the picture, or as much of it as I can, respecting farm prices so that it will be in perspective.

Dealing first with livestock products, and I deal with them first simply because livestock and livestock products represent a total of 55 per cent of the income of farmers, as of today choice steers were selling in Toronto at $32.50 a hundredweight, up $3 or almost 10 per cent over a month ago, and up $5.20 per hundredweight over a year ago. I do not hear my hon. friends opposite cheering that, and at least that is something positive and good within the economy.

Mr. Korchinski: What about wheat?

Mr. Olson: I will get to wheat in a moment. For Grade A hogs the increases are not as great on a percentage basis but they are still significant. Grade A hogs today at Toronto were quoted at $32.25 compared with $31.08 a month ago, and $27.55 a year ago. This represents an increase over a year ago of $4.70 per hundredweight, or about 17 per cent. Eggs currently are returning 45.5 cents for Grade A to producers—this is at Toronto—compared with 33.5 cents on May 1, 1968.

Mr. Korchinski: Not in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Olson: I do not know whether the hon. member for Mackenzie is very interested in agriculture, Mr. Speaker, but at least he should keep his peace long enough so that he can hear some of the facts. If he has anything to contribute later, hon. members might be interested.

I do not intend to detail all the other commodities but, for example, apples are bringing higher prices than they did a year ago. Corn is up over May of last year, and butter is higher than it was a year ago. Cheddar cheese is one of the others that is up, just to mention a few. Since hon. members are interested perhaps I would quote some figures.

Lambs at Toronto on May 1, 1964—that is after the Conservatives had their chance to do something—were selling at $29 per hundredweight. On May 1, 1969, they are selling for $35.50. Grade A eggs, as I pointed out, are returning 45.5 cents to producers at Toronto and on May 1, 1964, they were selling for 29.5 cents. So far as apples are concerned, a box of fancy McIntosh apples was selling on May 1, 1964, at $4.38 and is now selling at $7.88. At that time butter was selling at 54.3 cents a pound and today the producer gets 68.2 cents a pound. Cheddar cheese on May 1, 1964, was selling at 35.3 cents per pound and today it is 46 cents a pound. On May 1, 1964, choice steers were selling in Toronto at $24.25 per hundredweight. By May 1, 1968, they had gone up to $27.25, by April 1 of this year to $29.50, and on May 1 had reached $32.50. I think these things should be drawn to the attention of hon. members—

Mr. Korchinski: Tell us about wheat.

Mr. Clermont: We have agriculture in eastern Canada too, and we want to hear about it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could we have order in the house? It is difficult enough to hear what the minister is saying, but it is even more difficult with cross-interjections.

Mr. Olson: Turning to cereals, Mr. Speaker, the situation is somewhat different, but it is inconsistent with the statement that farmers will be unable to finance the 1969 crop year. For example, the government took action last fall to double the amount made available to farmers in western Canada who had been unable to market their cereal grains. The extent to which farmers have appreciated this action is indicated by the extent to which they have taken advantage of it. To date this year some 83,000 farmers have received cash advances totalling $148 million—

Mr. Korchinski: Tell us about wheat.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the hon. member for Mackenzie could keep quiet long enough for other hon. members to hear these figures. As I was saying, to date some 83,000 farmers have received cash advances totalling $148 million. This compares with 45,000 farmers last year and an amount of $47,280,738.

The crop insurance program, which a short time ago was amended in order to provide a higher level of coverage, is proving to be, I think, somewhat of a boon this year to those who have met with crop difficulties, and has brought a measure of stability that will assist farmers in their financing. While total figures are not yet available, it is estimated that in 1968 approximately $16 million will have been paid to farmers under crop insurance schemes. This compares with $2.8 million a year ago.

The potato farmers of eastern Canada, particularly the Maritime provinces, this year are facing income problems brought about by heavy supplies and resulting low prices. The government has taken some steps to correct both the income and the supply situation through the institution of a starch diversion program. While to date the result in terms of price increases has not been what might be desired, the program will permit the marketing of a very significant tonnage of potatoes which otherwise could not be marketed at all. It is also encouraging to note there has been some firming up of the market price of potatoes in the last few days. So I think a review of these statistics is helpful.

Before I turn to comment on the solutions which have been suggested, perhaps I could substantiate the claim I made that Canada is not the only country in the world facing problems of this kind. For example, in the Globe and Mail of April 30 we find the heading, "Wheat Export Talks Fail In Australia." It states that an effort was made by the Australian Wheat Council and it has failed to agree on measures to restrict Australian wheat output to bring prices more in line with export demand. I am sure hon. members have read this story which is from the Financial Times of London. It reads in part as follows:

> In the absence of concrete action the federal minister has appealed to farmers to exercise restraint. He said any grower would be foolish if he went blindly ahead without recognizing the problem of disposing of what he produced.

The story continues in another place as follows:

> The United States has already reduced its wheat acreage allotment, and preliminary indications from Canada suggest that farmers have shown some restraint. However, without similar moves in Australia and Europe, a question mark must remain over the present international wheat price structure.

Since that story about Australia came out there has been another one. This is from the Globe and Mail and is a reprint from the New York Times service dated May 1. The headline is "Australia Announces Wheat Quota". It says:

> The Australian government last night announced its first wheat production restrictions as a result of the world glut and record Australian crops.

Farther along it says:

> The coming season was expected to break last season's production records, but the government could not afford more credit advances on production and storage facilities could not cope with any greater production.

So that is no great comfort; it does not add very much to the income of Canadian producers. But it does put the problem in its proper perspective. I suggest this is the way it should be viewed.

Mr. Korchinski: Are you going to talk about the farm income picture in Saskatchewan?

Mr. Olson: There have been some suggestions made. I should like, if I may, to deal particularly with the situation concerning wheat, but I think it is also fair at this point to talk briefly about some of the other problems that have been raised and some of the suggestions we are actively considering to deal with them. For example, there is the dairy surplus problem which has been raised by a number of hon. members. The fact is that we are providing a subsidy to the extent of $1.25 per 100 for 3.5 milk and something like $37.42 per pound for butterfat. It was discussed and agreed with the dairy industry several years ago that whatever costs were involved in taking the surplus in excess of domestic consumption and selling it on the international market—the difference between the support price and the actual price received—would be paid by the producers.

Mr. Korchinski: The minister has dealt with every problem but the real one and that is the problem of the grain producers.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I wonder whether the hon. member for Mackenzie would agree that in all fairness we should hear the minister and, hopefully, we will have the opportunity to hear the hon. member for Mackenzie later.

Mr. Olson: In anticipating the production levels, the trends we have for the ensuing dairy year would indicate there will be very serious increases in production that will lead to unmanageable surpluses. Indeed, if the production pattern set in March for skim milk powder changes over the next 12 months we could have a production of something like 420 million pounds. We use much less than half that amount in Canada. We are having great difficulty now selling our milk powder in the international market even at 35 per cent or less of what we are paying for it at the support price. What we hope will be the result of the policy we announced a few days ago is that we can maintain the same level as last year, that is, a $3.60 pay-out by the dairies based on 20 per cent powder and 65 cents for butterfat plus $1.25 which brings it to $4.85. We have to calculate and anticipate the cost of disposing of the surplus. We hope that by raising it to 26 cents for quota milk and 52 cents for over-quota milk as a disincentive to produce over-quota we will bring production in line with the demand. So this is the reason. I know it is not the most palatable kind of thing, but I think we have a responsibility to look into the future and try to rationalize the industry in line with effective demand.

The second point is that two speakers today, the hon. member for Kent-Essex (Mr. Danforth) and I believe the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave), raised as one of the problems involved in the dairy policy the matter of regional quotas and the fact that the prairie provinces, for example, were bringing in from other provinces a certain amount of butterfat and also milk powder. It was suggested there is something unjust about our not setting up regional quotas for dairy products. I remind these gentlemen that I have had representations for a long time from the maritime provinces urging that we do this for that area in respect of butter and milk powder from Ontario and Quebec. The question I must ask is whether this is simply for dairy products or are they willing to accept regional quotas and restrictions of this kind in respect of the marketing of other products. For example, would Manitoba like action of this kind in respect of eggs when they export a very large percentage of their total production? Would Prince Edward Island like to accept that policy in respect of potatoes when they export a very high percentage of their total production?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I see that the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar would like to pose a question. I remind him that the minister has the floor and it is up to the minister whether or not he will receive a question at this time.

Mr. Olson: I am sorry, but I do not have time to answer questions now. If there is any time at the end I shall be glad to try to answer them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar is rising on a question of privilege.

Mr. Gleave: Mr. Speaker, I wish to point out to the minister—

Mr. Olson: It is not a point of order to point out to the minister—

Mr. Gleave: Mr. Speaker, the minister referred specifically to myself. I merely wanted to point out to him that I placed the emphasis not on regions but on discrimination against the small cream shipper in western Canada.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Olson: Whether or not that is the interpretation, I understood the hon. member to suggest there was something manifestly wrong with dairy products going from one region to another. However, this is the principle that is involved. It is easy for him to take any particular area, pick out some particular commodity and say that we should have regional restrictions so that the whole market there can be guaranteed for the producers.

Mr. Gleave: I have not said that.

Mr. Olson: Perhaps the hon. member has not been saying that but many people have; the hon. member for Kent-Essex certainly has.

Mr. Danforth: No.

Mr. Olson: If we are going to set up regional quotas of that kind and restrict the market, if we are going to have legislation to make that possible, then it will not only be confined to such products as suit people in any particular region of the country. Right now we have been engaged in discussions with the provinces to see whether we cannot find a satisfactory basis for setting up national marketing legislation. Of course this is one of the problems that has been raised. However, the situation differs in different parts of the country. The maritimes would accept it for dairy products but not for potatoes. Manitoba would probably accept it for dairy products but not for eggs. Alberta would accept it for certain commodities, but I am sure it would not accept it for its beef, almost all of which is marketed some place in Canada.

I hope that together with the provincial governments, which under the constitution are responsible for supply management and quota control, we will be able to reach an arrangement so that the producers themselves will have a greater and more effective voice in the marketplace. I am convinced that if the producers have a more effective voice in the marketplace, for example, with regard to potatoes, the prices would not have to be as low in the maritimes as they are today. The two provincial governments which are primarily involved, namely, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, are attempting to introduce the necessary legislation. We hope that we can find some way in which this can be complemented by national legislation so that the end result will be effective. I see I am running out of time.

Mr. Horner: You have not said anything yet.

Mr. Olson: The only people who think I have not said anything must have their ears closed because I have been pointing out the general problems as I see them and putting them in perspective.

Mr. Horner: I am waiting for solutions.

Mr. Olson: These are not all of the problems. There are many serious problems in agriculture. I am sure the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) will agree that we are not having much of a problem with beef marketing these days.

Mr. Horner: You think not?

Mr. Olson: The question has been raised whether or not we should introduce a two-price system for wheat. When I sat on the other side of the house I said many times that I agree with that principle as long as other countries do it. We have the right to do it in self-defence.

Mr. Horner: In Alberta we have been waiting for the implementation of that principle for ten years.

Mr. Olson: I made this proposal to the Conservative government when they were in office. I did so time and time again.

Mr. Horner: We adopted the principle.

Mr. Olson: I still agree that we have the right to adopt the principle in self-defence. But I know also that it carries with it some problems. If we were to do this we would have to set up tariffs which do not exist today, with respect to bakery products, for example. There is no tariff on bread coming from the United States. We would have to set one up or we would put our bakers out of business. I am sure that my hon. friend across the way realizes this. We also have to consider what would be most advantageous on balance.

Mr. Korchinski: Acreage payments.

Mr. Olson: We have to consider the fact that only about 10 per cent of our wheat crop is used for domestic consumption.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the minister but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon in the short time allotted to me I intended to speak about some of the problems in western Canada, particularly in western agriculture, but after listening to the rosy picture painted by the minister I am wondering whether we are talking about the same part of Canada. In its recent tour of western Canada the Standing Committee on Agriculture heard expressed again and again what has been apparent to all western members for some time—the concern which exists in that part of the country today about the lack of grain sales and the corresponding desperate need for cash with which to carry on the necessary farm operations in the new crop year, operations which, by the way, will be commencing with the advent of spring weather.

The minister quoted figures to show that farm income for 1968 was reasonably high. He failed to mention that the cash advances last fall contributed to the income figure. He also mentioned that the number of cash advance payments made to the farmers last fall had doubled. The need for this money only proved that western agriculture is indeed experiencing a crisis. To compound the problem, this spring the final payments on wheat, oats and barley were almost the smallest ever. They will not be sufficient to pay the grocery bills from the first of January until the time farmers receive their cheques.

Because of the glut of wheat on the farms and in the elevators of the country our farmers have been advised by the task force on agriculture to switch their production from wheat to other crops. To our harried farmers this advice poses some serious problems. First, there is the very real danger that in switching to other crops they will only compound the problem by producing embarrassing surpluses in other cereal grains. Second, by reducing in favour of other than cereal grains wheat acreage, the quota on which the farmer may deliver his wheat is reduced, making it even more difficult for him to reduce the surplus wheat which he already has in store.

In view of the assistance which farmers have rendered the national economy by providing a much needed balance of payments in our foreign exchange, particularly in 1963 when, according to the Governor of the Bank of Canada, they thus averted an economic crisis—I think the foreign exchange thus gained amounted to $480 million or more—and in further consideration of the loss of wheat delivery quota that would result from any reduction of wheat acreage that is sown in other than cereal crops, surely it is incumbent upon the government at this time to assist farmers in their efforts to reduce the wheat acreage. This can be done, as has been done in the past, by a wheat acreage reduction payment. It can be achieved by making a payment to the farmers for each acre on which wheat is not sown, based on the 1967-68 permit book record, up to a maximum which the government considers necessary to achieve a wheat crop of manageable proportions. At the same time this would provide the farmers with necessary funds to help finance their spring operations. The land taken out of wheat production would either have to be left fallow or be sown to grass or forage crops in order to achieve this objective.

I feel that this action is not only justified on the basis of past experience but essential to the national well-being in that many of our competent farmers are being forced to the wall because of their inability to finance on a six-bushel quota that is now extended to a two-year period. With large stocks of unsold grain upon which cash advances were taken in order to pay harvest expenses, our farmers are entering a new crop season with their hands tied for lack of working capital.

I hope the government will give consideration to the proposal I have put forward, one which has been endorsed by farm leaders and farm organizations as a means of bringing temporary assistance to our farmers and of enabling them to finance the production of this year's crop. At the same time, I wish to point out that the regaining of our lost share of the world wheat market must remain the primary objective not only of our wheat marketing agencies but of the government itself. After all, it is the government which has the power not only to bring some flexibility to our marketing program but also to allow extensions of credit which could make all the difference in effecting sales. At best, the wheat acreage reduction payment proposal could be regarded only as an interim provision designed to assist western agriculture to maintain the stability necessary to overcome a period of extreme stress.

Having regard to the mounting cost of farm operations because of inflation, something for which the Canadian farmer can in no way be held responsible, I believe it is not only fair but in the best interests of the nation that further continuing compensation be provided to our farmers for helping to bear the brunt of the government's cheap food policy. There are many ways in which this can be done by means of government action. Surely the government has people who are smart enough to figure out ways and means of assisting our farmers through this difficult period. If not, it is time they allowed someone else to run the country.

The government should take another look at the value of our special crops in terms of reducing wheat acreage, and should provide the oilseed industry with long overdue protection against the flow of cheap vegetable oil and oilseed entering this country at prices which bear no relationship to the cost of production. This situation could be resolved by placing on the imported product either a value comparable with that placed on United States cottonseed oil or, as an absolute minimum, one equal to the Canadian price for soya beans. Sunflower seed growers in Manitoba and soya bean growers in Ontario will then have at least a chance to compete with a foreign product which is obviously being delivered in Canada at prices below an acceptable cost of production.

The hardship at present being experienced on the prairies is not just a figment of someone's imagination, and I am sure the minister must be aware of this despite the rosy picture he has painted. For the benefit of his colleagues in the government I think I should emphasize that a combination of circumstances beyond the control of our farmers has created a situation in which many of those engaged in agriculture in the west find themselves in a precarious position.

Briefly, these circumstances were as follows: First, there was a disastrous loss of markets which left Canadian producers with 20 per cent of the export market whereas they had previously held 40 per cent. Favourable whether conditions throughout the world's wheat producing countries and, indeed, in countries which do not normally enter the export market, added millions of bushels to the world wheat surplus. An unusually wet harvest caused further problems for Canadian farmers inasmuch as an estimated 350 million bushels of grain were harvested in a tough or damp condition. Our farmers did a Herculean job attempting to dry their grain, assisted to some extent by the grain handling facilities made available to them. There is no doubt, however, that a significant amount of this out of condition grain was lost as a result of spoilage, particularly in areas where frost had affected the quality. The cost of handling this grain has been out of proportion to usual harvesting expenses and has added a further burden to an industry short of cash.

For six long months, representatives of our national farm organizations, federal members, provincial premiers and other western leaders have been seeking an assurance from the government that something would be done to alleviate the effects of hardship on the prairies owing to loss of grain sales. Time is now running out for those farmers who desperately need help to finance their spring operations. Surely the minister will not shrug this off as opposition propaganda.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): I just have a few more words to say and I will be finished.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the house agree to allow the hon. member to continue?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): Surely the minister will not refuse to give credence to the word he is getting from some of the government's own supporters in the west that action must be taken and taken quickly to relieve a serious economic situation.

In conclusion I should like to add a footnote to my remarks a telegram which I received just before I entered the chamber. It reads:

April 30, 1969

Three hundred farmers attending meeting Manitou April 28 in resolution urge payment 15 dollars per acre on acreage taken out of wheat production as compared to 1968 permit holders record to maximum 100 acres.

F. E. Sprung
Secretary of Meeting

I think this telegram speaks for itself, and there is nothing I need add in this regard to what I have already stated.

Mr. A. B. Douglas (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I have a few comments to make on this motion. Statements have been made recently both inside and outside the house to the effect that the government is showing indifference and disregard with respect to farmers and agriculture in Canada. I should like to take a few moments in which to set the record straight. The time spent in this house on agriculture since the session began last September amounts to more than has been spent on any other sector of our economy or on any other subject. The debate today only continues this tradition.

We have passed a lot of legislation having to do with agriculture. I can name many of these measures. There was the measure providing for increased cash advances, and the figure was then raised for the special purpose of enabling farmers to dry grain. There was the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Farm Credit Corporation Act, the Farm Syndicates Credit Act, the measures concerned with pests and pesticide control and compensation to farmers for losses caused through the contamination of their crops or animals.

As a farmer and a private member on the government side of the house I think it is incumbent on me to draw attention to some of the services and assistance which are being provided on a continuing and in many cases an expanding basis for the farmers of Canada. A few of these services, I am quick to admit, were instituted by Conservative governments during those brief periods since 1930 in which the people of Canada entrusted them with the affairs of our country. But most of them were initiated by Liberal governments and are being continued and improved by the present government. Most fair-minded farmers will, I believe, be willing to agree that this is so.

I believe the Liberal government is guilty of not doing a better job of letting people know what has been done and what is being done. May I take just a minute or two, Mr. Speaker, to set out some of the services and assistance now being provided to the farmers of Canada.

They include a tremendous program of research and information, the inspection and grading of new products, marketing and production research, the programs of pest and disease control. The prices of a variety of products, including wool, eggs and hogs, have been stabilized at a cost of about $140 million a year if one includes the dairy division. There is the Canadian Livestock Feed Board which protects both our livestock and the feed grain industry. The Wheat Board has now been placed on a permanent basis as the result of the action of the Liberal government. The Board of Grain Commissioners provides services connected with the grading and inspection of our grain. The Prairie Farm Assistance Act provides assistance to farmers who have suffered partial or complete crop failure, to an average cost of about $9 million a year.

Then there is P.F.R.A. which provides for irrigation, community pasture projects, dams and so on. There is crop insurance, on which the federal government pays half the administration costs and 25 per cent of the premium costs. Then there are grants to a multitude of agricultural associations, such as the seed growers, the 4-H movement, livestock associations, plowing associations, various fairs and what have you. This represents a total expenditure of at least $300 million per year by way of assistance to farmers in all parts of the country.

Then there is the Canada Grains Council which was recently established by the government and which I think augers well for the future. Then there is the Canadian Congress on Agriculture and, last but not least, the tour of the western provinces just concluded by the agricultural committee of the House of Commons.

Then we have the emergency wheat reserves legislation which last year put at least $37 million into the coffers of the Wheat Board. Over the years it has put in amounts varying from 5.9 cents a bushel to 12.9 cents a bushel. These payments have been made ever since the Liberal party inaugurated that program in 1956 under the wheat reserves act. This year there was also put into the coffers of the Wheat Board at least $7 million on account of the support the government provided for the price of wheat during the 11 month period in 1967-68 when there was no effective international grains arrangement. If you add those two figures together, Mr. Speaker, a sum of at least $44 million or $45 million has been provided compared with the total final payment on wheat to the farmers of $60 million. In other words, if it had not been for those two payments to the Wheat Board in 1967-68, the final payment on wheat last month would have been not 12 5 cents a bushel but 4 or 5 cents a bushel.

Mr. Horner: That is the farmers' own money coming back to them.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): This storage payment comes from the pockets of the taxpayers of Canada, as does the floor price for wheat which cost $7 million.

The motion before us refers to the deteriorating net income of Canadian farmers. I hope you will forgive me, Mr. Speaker, if I refer in particular to the severe financial crisis in western agriculture but that is the area with which I am most familiar, one in which I think I can claim some experience and, I hope, at least a little knowledge.

Let me first outline some of the events leading up to the present situation. Farm marketings of wheat for export have varied a great deal in the past ten years, from the crop year 1958-59 to 1967-68 inclusive. In the first five years of that period exports of wheat and flour averaged 323 million bushels per year. During the next four years the average was 520 million bushels per year. Last year, the tenth year in this period, exports dropped to 335 million bushels.

On the strength of the forecasts and predictions made over the past several years by Canadian and international food experts, economists, government officials and politicians of various political parties, grain farmers have increased their efficiency in the production of grain. They have enlarged their units to make them more economical. They have purchased larger and more modern machinery and have built new and better grain storage facilities. In so doing, and on the strength of the advice that they received, many of them have gone into debt. Now, as a result of reduced markets, falling prices and rising costs, they find themselves unable to meet their debt obligations in a great many cases. They also find themselves short of cash to pay their operating expenses.

At one time farm requirements were relatively small. Merchants and machinery dealers 40 or 50 years ago used to extend credit to the farmers, and this helped them to finance their most modest requirements. This is no longer possible. The service industry has been forced to go on a cash basis to a large extent. Farm inputs have a much wider variety and a much greater volume now. I believe it is incumbent on the people of Canada to come to the rescue of our food producers and the industry that has contributed and does contribute far more to Canada than the ratio that its numerical proportion has to our national economy, as well as to our export trade. Agriculture is still one of Canada's most important industries, and maintaining this industry in a healthy condition is essential in order to keep our national economy from faltering, as history shows is the inevitable result of depressed conditions in the agricultural sector.

Before I enumerate some suggestions I should like to make, may I briefly expand on one suggestion. I refer to the so-called two-price system for wheat. I believe there is an overwhelming argument in favour of some such system which would give farmers a fairer return on at least that part of wheat production that is used for domestic human consumption. Other sectors of the economy, such as the manufacturers, professional people and labour, have effective methods of increasing their incomes, but these methods are not available to the farmers. Wheat prices are very little higher than they were 20 years ago, whereas the price of commodities and services required by the farmers has practically doubled in the same period. Therefore a special domestic price for wheat is amply justified.

There are, however, some possible difficulties associated with such a two-price system. For example, there is the possibility of our being accused of dumping. Other countries might impose sanctions on Canadian exports in other sectors of our economy if they successfully proved that we were dumping our agricultural products or selling them in other markets at a lower figure than we sell them at home.

There is also the question of bread imports. At the present time I am given to believe that in certain cities near the United States border U.S. bread sells at less than the price of Canadian bread. If we increase our bread prices and the United States does not, there will be a problem to be faced there. We might also expect to have policing problems with a two-piece wheat system, with a price differential of $1, so far as millers and other processors are concerned. In addition, the costs of administration naturally go up because a two-price system would have to be carefully administered. There would also be what to my mind is the most serious problem of deciding how to distribute the proceeds of a two-price system for wheat. I do not think the wheat producers themselves have agreed on how the proceeds should be distributed among them.

I have consistently spoken in favour of a two-price system for wheat at every opportunity, especially since I became involved in federal politics about a year ago. In my first speech in the house I called on the government to give early and sympathetic consideration to some such system of paying the wheat farmers a fair price for domestic wheat. I have mentioned this many times since and I renew my plea today.

My first suggestion, which is most necessary in order to find both a long and a short term solution to the farm income problem, is that sales efforts by all agencies concerned with marketing farm products should be increased by making maximum use of all selling techniques in both the domestic and export markets. To that end the government should support and strengthen the Wheat Board system of marketing by making whatever legislative changes may be necessary to allow the Canadian Wheat Board to expand its export sales.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the house would give me permission to conclude my remarks?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member does not have unanimous consent.

Mr. Stanfield: In fairness, Mr. Speaker, one of our members was given a minute extra, so it might be appropriate for the hon. member to have the same courtesy.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and hon. members. I suggest that the government support the floor price of wheat at the level of the minimums of the International Grains Arrangement. I suggest also that the government introduce a wheat acreage reduction program which would compensate farmers reducing their wheat acreage, with greater incentive to be given to those who convert that acreage to pasture and for the growing of forage crops. Greater incentives should also be given to farmers farming in areas in which grades of wheat low in protein are produced. Also, the government should provide farmers with higher returns for wheat used for human consumption in Canada by authorizing the Canadian Wheat Board to charge higher prices for such wheat or by such other methods as will achieve the same result.

As an interim measure to help in alleviating the current shortage of operating funds, I suggest that the government consider making an immediate payment of ten cents per bushel, in lieu of the two price system, on wheat delivered in the 1967-68 crop year. As hon. members will see, I am less optimistic than was the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave) who mentioned 20 cents per bushel. I suggest that the immediate payment ought to be ten cents per bushel, with a minimum payment of $250 to any farmer and a maximum of $500 per bona fide farm operator.

My further suggestions are that the government institute a special program of assistance on an interim basis to farmers operating small, uneconomic units; that the government provide for more research into the problems of agricultural markets and forecasting as well as into the problems of alternate uses for farm products; that the government continue and expand its support for credit sales of farm products; that the government take steps to prevent any increase in the tolls charged on the St. Lawrence seaway; that the government consider the advisability of placing the Canadian Wheat Board under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Agriculture and that the Wheat Board be asked to review the operation of its quota system with a view to making it more equitable and effective.

I shall suggest, too, that the government ought to take steps to insure the equitable distribution of box cars and the best possible use of our grain handling and transportation system; that the government continue to promote the improvement and use of the Hudson Bay route; that the government investigate the alleged dumping of vegetable oil on the Canadian market and take the necessary action to prevent it, and that the government take all necessary action to restrain rising costs and prices of products and services used in agricultural production.

My other recommendations are that the government take steps to provide for some direct producer representation on the Canadian Wheat Board and that the creditors extend extra time to farmers required to repay loans made under the Farm Improvement Loans Act and the Farm Credit Corporation Act. Of course, I am speaking of those farmers who will find it difficult to meet their payments this spring. These suggestions,

Mr. Speaker, may or may not form part of the recommendations contained in an early report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

My concluding remarks, Mr. Speaker, are to tell hon. members that an emergency situation is facing Canadian agriculture.

Mr. Horner: Why didn't the hon. member say that in the first ten minutes of his speech?

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): The emergency situation facing Canadian agriculture has been brought about through no fault of the industry. Its roots lie, in part at least, in national policy that has existed almost since Confederation. I have suggested some constructive measures that the government might adopt. I am fully confident that the government will take early and effective action, and for that reason I will not support the motion.

Mr. Stanfield: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I agreed to allow the hon. member extra time, thinking he would take half a minute or a minute at most to finish. He has taken longer. I think we should observe the limits of debate.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member actually took three minutes more than his allotted time. Perhaps that may be taken into account when another hon. member seeks permission to go beyond his allotted time.

[Translation]

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I was very happy to learn that today's sitting would be spent on a discussion of agricultural problems and especially of the Canadian farmers' situation.

I hope that our discussion, which I trust will be objective, will lead to some solutions, so that farmers may have the security to which they are entitled and to which they have aspired for a long time.

We have already heard the comments of several government members on the matter. We are told repeatedly that the government is trying to do something, that its intentions are of the best. The situation was the same seven or eight months ago. The speeches will go on, and the previous speaker will again take the floor. As a matter, of fact, he does not in the least think that the government has done nothing. In his opinion, it has accomplished a great deal. I agree, of course, that a government is always elected to do something.

[Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia).]

I suggest we should ask: has the government done enough? Can it do more and better? Even with the best intentions in the world, we remain convinced that what has been done is not enough. This is obvious when we study the farmers' situation.

I will be told: This is not easy, or; we have problems. But should we let things as they are just because there is no easy solutions? Should we let matters take care of themselves in due time? Should we be satisfied by simply saying that it is difficult?

As a member from eastern Canada, and more particularly from the province of Quebec, I hope that other Quebec M.P.'s, especially those on the government side, will take advantage of this day not only to recommend to the government to do something but also to compel it to act.

One could say that, from time to time, during the meetings of the caucus, members speak louder and express their viewpoints. But I think we have today a special opportunity to tell the government what the farmers need. I believe the people are expecting that not only opposition members but government members as well will put forward strong and specific proposals whereby farm people would be appreciated once and for all and would get the recognition to which they are entitled.

Considering that one third of the Canadian labour force is related directly or indirectly to farming and has to work under intolerable conditions at the present time, and considering also that the situation is disastrous for the national economy, I think we must find solutions to the problem and ensure that they will have lasting results.

The present problems are somewhat similar to those that prevailed four or five years ago. Travelling across Canada, one finds the same conditions everywhere. No doubt that production costs have considerably increased but income is not much higher, so we are finally faced with overproduction.

I would find it hard to understand that a country as well known as ours where the workers are willing, generally, to work towards their common goal, would let 30 per cent of its population live in poverty while it experiences overproduction it is unable to consume as it should in its best interests.

• (5:40 p.m.)

I have already said and I repeat it that there were problems of consumption and production in Canada.

In my opinion, if the government must make any effort, it must try to find some formula for the consumption of that production. It will also have to consider reviewing the matter of our imports. We should also perhaps ask the government to adopt another philosophy and compel it to act differently.

It will surely have to assert itself a little more forcibly from time to time, as far as high finance is concerned. Some agreements concerning imports were concluded a few years ago and as a result of some developments, it would be advisable to review those agreements. We are back from a trip in the West. Once more we noticed that there is overproduction in that region. Both the East and the West have similar problems, that is the cost of production and income.

Because of the importance of that industry in Canada, I feel that the government should now have a guarantee policy. It should guarantee the purchase of our production and find outlets for it. Maybe the role played by the agencies which promote the sale of our products abroad should be revised. Above all, we must ensure the security of our producers.

It is now impossible, since all the hon. members who made the trip acquainted themselves with the problems of farming, not to appreciate those facts.

In the circumstances, it would be useless for me or for the other hon. members to discuss that problem for weeks. It was said a while ago that much time has been devoted to agriculture since the beginning of this session. In fact, we have been content with wasting our time. We have passed some pieces of legislation, we have found a formula allowing our farmers to borrow on a larger scale, to get deeper into debt. They will need a long period of time to pay back their loans. We found it enough to grant them five or six extra years to reimburse the money borrowed. I do not think it fair. That is not the proper way to provide help to our farmers.

The government should establish a guaranteed price policy. I have already suggested that without any results. I had thought that we might be able to help our producers in getting labour from the Unemployment Insurance office, without depriving the unemployed from their unemployment benefits. This measure would enable the producers to get cheap labour, which would, by the way, reduce production costs.

It had been felt that the idea was not so bad after all, but, I have not heard about it since.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that together we should find a solution with the sole purpose of giving back to the farmers the guarantee and the security they need.

I do not believe that in view of the importance of the question, the present government can hesitate longer.

I still believe in the objectivity of everyone of those who represent the ridings of Canada. Thus, with a firmer and more objective attitude, thanks to this day of debate, which has allowed us to study the problem together and to find rapidly a solution, the minister will be able to announce us shortly what steps he intends to take and the farmers will be satisfied.

Mr. Ed Schreyer (Selkirk): Mr. Speaker, one of the purposes of this debate is to try to obtain from the government benches some indication of their opinion of the condition of Canadian agriculture at this time, and in particular the state of agriculture in western Canada. In this respect, the debate so far has been very confusing. Two members of the Liberal Party have spoken. One said he conceded agriculture in western Canada was in a state of emergency or crisis. The minister said he would consider the situation as "I wouldn't want to say the farmers never had it so good". This is a grudging admission by the minister that perhaps there is a small problem.

If the minister wants my opinion as to what the situation is, I say without fear of exaggeration that it is one of crisis proportions. Surely, the minister must be aware of that. The minister does not have to take only the word of members on this side of the house. He can ask his colleague from Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) or some of his colleagues who toured western Canada with the Committee on Agriculture. I recall that two weeks ago when the Wheat Board representatives appeared before the committee, two members from eastern Canada said in so many words that they considered the situation facing western farmers to be tragic and one of emergency. Those were the words they used. Surely, they must have meant what they were saying, unless they were playing to the press gallery.

The minister should admit it is time the government took some concrete action and presented to parliament some specific proposals on how to meet this serious situation. Quite frankly, the list of proposals the hon. member for Assiniboia put on the record a few months ago are, in themselves, all right, but I daresay this is probably the third time the hon. member has circulated that list. To what avail? What point is there in a supporter of the government enumerating a list of good ideas? He reads them into the record at a committee meeting; he reads them at a Liberal constituency meeting and probably appears before the minister on bended knees. The minister says, "I would not want to say that the farmers never had it so good". The hon. member for Assiniboia may as well save his energy.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Assiniboia is rising on a point of privilege.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member said I read this list of suggestions at a constituency convention, but that is not true.

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is not a question of privilege.

Mr. Schreyer: Earlier this afternoon, the minister put on the record certain figures indicating the number of farmers who were taking cash advances in western Canada. I will be one of the first to say that the cash advance legislation introduced by the Conservative government in the late fifties was a very worth-while piece of legislation. I think hon. members of the Conservative party will acknowledge that the C.C.F. had also been trying to impress on a former Liberal government of the late fifties that such legislation should be implemented. It was incredible that the minister would cite the figures showing how much had been taken up in cash advances as something of which to be proud. To me, that is one of the best means of showing there is a serious cash position on the prairies. The more that is taken by way of cash advances, the more we should be worrying and shuddering about the prospects for repayment.

The number of farmers in Manitoba who took advantage of the cash advance legislation last year was very small. This year, I am informed the number of farmers who have taken out cash advances has increased by a factor of 10, ten times as many as was the case in preceding years. To me, that is a sign of danger. The minister should not point to that as a defence.

I realize part of the problem facing agriculture in the west has to do with declining international sales, plugged markets and declining prices. I suggest to the minister there are some specific steps that should be taken. The government must try to help the Canadian Wheat Board in its task of promoting the sale of Canadian wheat. I suggest the sales staff of this organization should be supplemented. How many men are actually engaged as salesmen exclusively of the Canadian Wheat Board? It is a very small number. The number should be increased, either directly under the aegis of the Wheat Board or indirectly by using Canadian trade personnel at Canadian trade bureaus overseas as supplementary agents of the Wheat Board.

At a time of crisis, that is the least that should be done. For how long are we going to continue with a state of affairs in which the actual transactions for our entire export sales of wheat are dependent upon five or six international concerns? The minister knows to which ones I am referring—the Dreyfus Corporation, the Bungy Corporation, the Carghill Corporation of Minneapolis, and one or two others. To them, it is of little concern whether they are handling Canadian wheat or some other country's. The government has not taken the initiative to see that a Canadian corporation is established that would become engaged in precisely this kind of work. I suggest this should be done.

There is nothing to stop the minister from impressing upon his cabinet colleagues the seriousness of the situation, and the amount of money required to tide the prairie economy over this most difficult of times. There is nothing to stop him from getting the agreement of his colleagues to assist whatever entrepreneurship exists in Canada to set up an international trading agency.

I am sure the minister has enough facts and figures to back up his case. Why isn't he doing it? He is not in a weak position. He is one of the few Liberal cabinet ministers from the prairies. He is one of the few Liberal members of parliament from the prairies, and his colleagues must surely know that unless he is given some co-operation and authority there will be even fewer after the next election.

There is one other matter which I must refer to at this time. It is the way in which the minister, inadvertently or otherwise, distorted what was said by my colleague relative to the matter of dairy quotas. To my knowledge, no one in this party or in the party to my right suggested that we were in favour of regionalization of dairy production or wanted to see any barriers against the interprovincial movement of dairy products No one said that.

But the minister must admit that since the establishment of the National Dairy Commission something serious has come to light. I refer to the fact that over the past two years the prairies' share of the national dairy quota pool has declined by 11 per cent to 12 per cent. The minister may say that, relatively speaking, dairying is not all that important to the prairies.

Mr. Olson: I did not say that.

Mr. Schreyer: But what is important is that it is a complementary operation for many farmers, and in fact is a main operation for many western farmers. A year such as this shows the importance of a supplementary cream shipping or milk shipping operation. If this trend continues whereby the prairies' share of the national quota pool continues to decline, then fewer farmers out west will have an opportunity to continue in dairy farming as a supplement to their grain operation.

Mr. Speaker: I have to interrupt the hon. member because his time has expired.

Mr. Schreyer: I have just one or two more sentences.

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. member leave of the house to finish his final sentence?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Schreyer: I just want to point out to the minister that according to the quota summary issued 12 days ago by the Wheat Board, the most recent available to us, there are in the province of Manitoba even at this late date in the crop year 60 per cent of the shipping points still on a unit or one bushel quota. This is further proof that the hon. member for Assiniboia is right; something must be done, and done soon.

Mr. R. R. Southam (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak in this debate and second the motion of nonconfidence in the government on its agricultural policies, or I should say lack of policies, I wish to point out that I do so in all seriousness. There are many emergencies in Canada today. One can think of the housing situation and the recent resignation of the former Minister of Transport over lack of government action. I want to suggest that if immediate action is not forthcoming then the Minister or Agriculture (Mr. Olson) had better resign too. Then, perhaps the government will come to life.

Look at the unemployment situation, at the high cost of living, the water and air pollution problems, postal services and many others. But paramount and most important is the emergency facing our economy in the field of agriculture. Just recently our Standing Committee on Agriculture made a tour of the four western provinces. Some 35 briefs were presented to us, including representations from the premiers or ministers of agriculture of the western provinces. At this point I would like to congratulate in particular the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool on organizing one of the most effective tours of Saskatchewan with regard to agriculture for committee members, and on the work it did in bringing farmers' problems to the attention of the committee.

Not only did we hold meetings in some of the major cities, but we also went out to farm homes where representative farmers were even prepared to open up their books, show us their income tax statements, and demonstrate in general the standard of their economy. If nothing else beneficial came from this there was the effect of the tour on Liberal members of the committee who had been criticizing us for being too vociferous, and sometimes too partisan, over the past several months in bringing agricultural problems to their attention. This tour made them finally realize that there was a basis for our complaints. As we went from place to place, it was interesting to note the sympathy that developed in their minds for our points of view and for the problems facing western Canada.

I should now like to quote one or two passages from the brief prepared for the committee by the Hon. W. Ross Thatcher, Premier of Saskatchewan, whose comments I think are important because of his political affiliation. They give positive proof of the position of western farmers.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I understand the hon. member for Kent-Essex (Mr. Danforth) wants to rise on a point of order.

Mr. Danforth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My point of order is that since there is a time limit on our speeches this afternoon, and since the hon. member who has the floor has only a few minutes more left, maybe Your Honour would be disposed not to see the clock until he has finished.

Mr. Speaker: If this is the disposition of the house, the Chair will turn a blind eye to the clock.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Southam: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, my contribution will be short in keeping with the rules we have agreed upon. In his brief the Premier of Saskatchewan said:

> The economic circumstances of a majority of prairie producers are desperate.

He referred to loss of sales and said:

> The farmer's first problem is caused by an inability to market a large proportion of his grain.

He went on to state:

> Presently quotas at most elevator points are the lowest in a decade. Thus the cash position of the farmer is extremely serious.
> On the prairies, we must literally market or perish.

All the briefs received by the committee indicated that never before has the cost-price squeeze taken such a firm hold on our farmers. Some underlying causes are; (1) loss of markets, and particularly the temporary lapse of the International Wheat Agreement which brought about this serious situation; (2) high cost of machinery and repairs; (3) higher taxes; (4) lower farm prices; (5) tight quotas and low sales; (6) the burden of drying huge piles of damp grain; (7) higher interest rates.

• (6:00 p.m.)

The eighth cause, to add insult to injury, is the new Estate Tax Act. In fact, it was startling to note, in a recent position paper the task force prepared for the agricultural congress that completed its four day conference several weeks ago at the Chateau Laurier here in Ottawa, that the net income, on the basis of the average capital investment, for the farmer in Canada for the last full year under review was only 1.32 per cent. Putting it another way, it represents a return of only 40 cents per man-hour of labour to the farmer.

I was never one to criticize without making some specific suggestions to improve a situation. Therefore, I should like to make a few suggestions. These are some I have already outlined to the chairman of the agricultural committee who was with us on our recent journey across western Canada.

My first suggestion is it is my belief that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), accompanied by the Ministers of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin), Agriculture, (Mr. Olson), and possibly External Affairs (Mr. Sharp), together with several advisors from each of their departments, should immediately journey to Washington to have an emergency discussion with their counterparts with a view to setting machinery in motion to see to it that the terms of the recent International Grain Agreement be activated to the full.

I make this suggestion in all seriousness because our great neighbour to the south, during the Kennedy Round discussions several years ago in Geneva, was instrumental in persuading us to allow the wheat agreement to lapse. Then, they were the first offenders when in August 1967 they dumped a large amount of grain into some of our traditional markets at 22 cents below the agreed price. I think this was a gross violation. I think they should co-operate now by being the first to help us initiate this new world agreement.

My second suggestion is that various trade policies should be developed by our own Department of Trade and Commerce with respect to the sale of wheat such as long term, low interest credit arrangements, especially to emerging nations, and reciprocal trade agreements with prospective or current importers of our wheat.

Thirdly, I believe a close examination should be made at once of our Board of Grain Commissioners grading formula with a view to bringing it into line with the grading practices of our competitors and demands of our importers.

The fourth suggestion is that, as an immediate one year emergency measure, acreage payments should be made to the farmers under the quota and permit book system similar to the action taken in 1958, 1959 and 1961. A maximum of $60 million should be allotted for this purpose. This would assist a farmer in buying needed seed in those areas of the west where his crop was frozen or supplement the purchase of fuel or other necessities for spring planting.

As my fifth suggestion, I believe the principle of a two-price system should be inaugurated at once. This would supplement the temporary acreage payment in the future and the benefits from it would begin to be felt in the agricultural economy next year.

My sixth suggestion is that serious consideration should be given to establishing a fully Canadian based commodity sales organization to handle, on behalf of the Wheat Board, our wheat, oats, barley and rye, flax and rape seed for that matter, rather than depend on the several major commission houses situated in the United States and Europe that presently carry on this business for us.

I suggest as the seventh point that a transport controller or co-ordinator be appointed who would see to it that the agricultural industry got its fair share of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National rolling stock in times of emergency, similar to that which we experienced this fall and winter in moving grain to the west coast.

Suggestion number eight is: Consideration might be given to the establishment of one or two terminal elevators in Europe and Asia of reasonable grain carrying capacity which would provide storage for grain that would be readily accessible for the market, should speedy delivery be a factor in making a sale.

Suggestion number nine is that marketing research should be greatly activated.

I could go on to mention a number of others, but because my time is limited I shall conclude with this suggestion. I think if these suggestions were effected we would have a greatly improved industry. What concerns our farmers, in a state of sorrow and disbelief, is the apparent indifference to their plight. Liberal speeches always seem to leave the implication that the farmers never had it so good. An example was the speech by the Minister of Agriculture this afternoon and that of his colleague the hon. member for Assiniboia, (Mr. Douglas), although the latter in closing his remarks did admit there is an emergency in agriculture.

The Prime Minister is also callous and indifferent in respect of agricultural problems. We might remember his reply to the Liberal farmers in Winnipeg on December 20 in respect of the selling of wheat. We might think about his flippant answers in the house yesterday as recorded at page 8167 of Hansard regarding passports. In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let me say that we must have action now, not six months or a year from now.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate does not insist upon its amendment made to Bill C-155, An Act to provide compensation to farmers whose agricultural products are contaminated by pesticide residue, and to provide for appeals from compensation awards, to which the House of Commons had disagreed;

And also, a message informing this House that the Senate does not insist upon its amendment to Bill C-157, an Act to regulate products used for the control of pests and the organic functions of plants and animals, but insists upon the principle thereof and has substituted therefor a further amendment, to which the concurrence of this House is desired.

It being after six o'clock I do now leave the Chair.

At 6.10 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 58—NON-CONFIDENCE MOTION—FAILURE OF GOVERNMENT TO PROVIDE CAPITAL TO AGRICULTURE

The house resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Danforth and the amendment thereto of Mr. Gleave.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I rise to participate in this debate today concerning agriculture because of the concern I feel for this industry and this way of life in Canada.

Recently I took part in the tour of western Canada by the Committee on Agriculture during which we visited agricultural areas and saw many facets of this industry in the four western provinces. I should like to point out that this visit was to the grass roots level of agriculture in western Canada and that it was approved by the government. I believe that many of the cries which we hear that the government is not concerned with the problems of the people of western Canada, and of farmers, is just not true. The government members of this committee took an active part in the western tour, and I think it needs to be pointed out and emphasized, that it was the Liberal government that approved and encouraged this trip.

Mr. Stanfield: How pathetic can you get?

Mr. Foster: If the government were not concerned with the problems of western Canada, I can assure you that they would never have agreed to the visit by the standing Committee on Agriculture because this visit draws attention to the problems in agriculture.

In our trip to western Canada, I was particularly impressed by the diversification of agriculture that we saw in Alberta. Although grain farming is an important part of this industry in that province, agriculture there is generally much more diversified than in Saskatchewan. Dairying, beef farms, hog and poultry production as well as cash crops such as sugar beet, make for a more balanced agriculture in that province.

We visited the Kinsella experimental farm where important experiments in genetics are being carried out to develop more hardy strains of beef producing animals. These experiments are also aimed at improving the conversion factor of feed to beef. At Lacombe in southern Alberta we visited the federal government experimental farm where the federal government has spent millions of dollars over the last half a century to aid western agriculture. I say to the opposition: Is this the kind of federal government aid to agriculture in which you have no confidence?

Federal government aid to research has always been an important key to improved production. Surely, the members of the opposition who travelled with this committee cannot be voting against the federal government's policy of increasing aid to research in the production of better cereal grains. In British Columbia, the standing Committee on Agriculture visited the terminal elevators where millions of bushels of wheat are shipped annually to the Pacific rim countries of Japan and China.

At the Saskatchewan Pool elevators we saw a Toyota ship tied up which was loading wheat for Japan. A few days previously this ship had come from Japan loaded with a cargo of Toyota cars, and I think we should realize that trade is a two way street. Our foreign customers must sell to us in order to be able to buy from us. Perhaps we should spend a little time considering whether the jokes we make about small foreign cars are really appropriate in this day when we so desperately need world sales of wheat, especially to the countries that make small cars such as Japan, Germany and England.

In British Columbia, I was most impressed with the way the producers of agricultural products such as milk, eggs, broilers and orchard crops have organized their production and marketing more efficiently than in any other place I know in Canada. The term "supply management" was one that we heard most often in British Columbia, and perhaps this is the key to the future success of agriculture in Canada. We are a country that can produce a surplus of agricultural products beyond what we can consume ourselves or what we can sell on the foreign markets. I believe that the future success and stability of the agricultural industry in Canada depends on supply management, so that we produce what we can sell and we sell at a fair price which will reward the producer adequately for his labour and investments.

This is not to say that there are no problems in agriculture in British Columbia. We heard many briefs in this province, and the Committee on Agriculture will be making recommendations on these problems to the House of Commons and to the government. Perhaps the most important part of this trip was our visit to Saskatchewan because this is the province that produces a major share of Canadian wheat. The biggest problem lies in over-production of wheat and insufficient sales on the foreign market, coupled with excess moisture in last fall's crop.

I must congratulate the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool which organized for the 30 committee members some 24 meetings in small towns across the province which were attended by some 18,000 farmers. The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool field men were excellent hosts for the committee members and organized every detail of the tour in that province most satisfactorily. Not only did the committee members meet hundreds of farm people at formal meetings but they visited as well individual farmers to review their problems right on the farms. I visited farms where 30,000 bushels of wheat were stored.

I must say that in the hundreds of briefs that were presented in this province, many serious and practical suggestions were made to the Standing Committee on Agriculture. These included recommendations for a two-price system according to which the consumers of Canada would be asked to pay an extra 1½ cents for a loaf of bread so that some $50 million of added income could flow into the grain agriculture of western Canada. I note the minister announced, after the meeting with the Canadian Federation of Agriculture last week, that he is going to give this suggestion his serious consideration. The idea of the two-price system has found support in the three western legislatures of Canada as well as among farm groups and wheat pools which have advocated it for many years. Other suggestions included a floor price for wheat to the level of the International Grain Arrangement price. There may be merit in this solution on a short term basis. This was done successfully for some months in the interim between the last two international grain arrangements.

Other recommendations include the transfer of many millions of acres from grain production to the production of beef cattle and other crops. This solution may have merit and I believe it should be implemented on a controlled basis, with caution. Right now we have one part of agriculture in western Canada sick. I would not want to see the same fate befall other sections of agriculture because of over-production.

I believe that the best long term solution to the problem of wheat in western Canada lies in increased wheat sales to other countries. The Wheat Board has done a great deal to bring about orderly marketing of wheat in western Canada and everywhere we went we found support and encouragement for the Canadian Wheat Board. We must strengthen this organization. We must provide the necessary legislative changes to allow it to merchandize this product under present-day conditions in the market places of the world. If it takes more salesmen, let's get them. If it takes better credit arrangements, let's provide them. If it takes improved shipping and transportation systems, let's create them.

I am convinced from what I have seen in western Canada that most farmers have passed through the transition stage of establishing larger more economic units and now only require markets for their product to be in a sound position. By contrast, many of our eastern farmers in Canada are still not in this position. The Agriculture Committee will be making a tour of eastern Canada next month and I would like to speak to the problems of eastern agriculture in more detail after—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

An hon. Member: Carry on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Will the house give consent for the hon. member to continue?

An hon. Member: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): There is no unanimous consent.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, yesterday morning it was my pleasure to attend a meeting with representatives of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and to take part in a serious, earnest discussion of the affairs of an industry which appears to be in serious difficulties. This discussion took place with responsible representatives of an important industry. It is very hard to realize that this is the same industry as that which was discussed by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) in the house this afternoon. Having taken part in that discussion yesterday and having heard the Minister of Agriculture this afternoon, and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in the house yesterday, I have concluded that one of the most urgent needs in the country today is to wake up this government, if that is possible.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: Seldom a day goes by without a new example of the devastating impact of the brilliant intellectual approach of the government, including the Prime Minister and the Minister of Agriculture, on the economic problems of this country. Yesterday, of course, the Prime Minister left us all dizzy—I think that would be the word—by the succinct assessment he made of the state of the economy. When he was asked by my hon. friend from Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) when we could expect some decision concerning the deterioration of the economy of western Canada, the Prime Minister replied: "Mr. Speaker, as indicated by the increase in demands for passports, the economy is booming more and more." It is small wonder that the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Hellyer) has resigned because the Prime Minister is unable to understand the day to day problems of the Canadian people. As for the Minister of Agriculture, this afternoon he seemed to be second in complacency only to the Prime Minister of the country. I would almost go as far as to say that he was of more help to the government when he was in opposition, rushing to the defence of the government with points of order, than he is on that side of the house.

In his speech this afternoon, the Minister of Agriculture denied the very existence of the problem set forth in the resolution before the house.

Mr. Olson: I say categorically: that is false.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, the minister denied the existence of the problem stated in the resolution presented to the house.

Mr. Olson: I did not deny the existence of problems in agriculture, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Stanfield: I think the minister had better keep his seat if that is the best he can do. He is not charging that what I said was incorrect. What I said a moment ago was perfectly correct. The Minister can shake his head if he likes. Unfortunately for him, the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) shortly afterward pulled the rug from under his feet, such as it is. The problems in agriculture are admittedly complex. The minister said it is easy for the opposition to criticize. I admit it is easy for the opposition to criticize this government and its agricultural policies. But even that is not as easy as the practice followed by the government of keeping everything under review.

It is not a matter of producing policies and solutions. What the government does used to be called procrastination; it used to be called indecision. Now, they have initiated a new name for it, a review. Everything is under review.

Mr. Smerchanski: That is progress.

Mr. Stanfield: Take inflation, for example which places such a heavy burden on this country. What has the government done? About eight months after the election they produced a white paper which two or three people could have produced in two or three hours. This recommended, not a solution, not a real attack on inflation, but the appointment of a continuing study group to advise the government of the day on the question. Here we are, Mr. Speaker, some four or five months after the white paper was tabled in December, and the government even now has failed to produce the study group to advise it about what to do with regard to inflation. It is a fiasco rather than an orderly, meaningful program to cope with inflation. The only thing this government, including the Minister of Agriculture, has created so far is uncertainty and confusion.

Take the feed and grain situation, for example. Everyone is confused as to why—

Mr. Smerchanski: Is this in eastern or western Canada?

Mr. Stanfield: Eastern Canada.

Mr. Smerchanski: This debate is about western Canada.

Mr. Stanfield: What is the policy with regard to the dairy industry? It is, of course, to squeeze out the little fellow. But even so, they have not taken the trouble to produce a well-rounded program with some hopeful alternative for the little fellow to adopt, involving a useful place for him in the economy. It is a half-baked policy which the minister is pushing through. I shall not bother to discuss potato prices with him. I think he realized, judging by his feeble defence this afternoon, what the difficulty is. Farmers are going through a difficult period of adjustment, particular in the part of Canada from which I come. They recognize that changes must be made but they do not have substantial capital to help them make these adjustments, and they are well beyond the financial resources of the provinces.

When these matters are discussed with the Liberal government, however, the only answer we get is talk about conferences or task forces. The truth is, I am afraid, that those in charge of this government, those who are really in the seats of power, have what might be called an urban complex. They do not have an urban policy, but they have an urban complex. They believe farmers are on the way out, that farmers' votes will decrease and that by the time they appoint and work their way through two or three more task forces there will be no more farmers to worry about anyway.

Mr. Smerchanski: And that is progress.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Mr. Stanfield: Since the government has no policy, it sends the committee on a trip west. The hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) expects the other members of the agricultural committee and the house at large to be grateful for that favour conferred by this great Liberal government.

It may be that there is a necessity in some parts of the west to transfer, over a period of time, operations to some other crops, but this is a longer term problem. The problem now is how to get through this year. The hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas), as well as members on this side of the house, emphasized that point. We are facing problems because prospects for marketing are poor. We have lost our share of the international market over a period of years, and we are all familiar with the long, sad history of this.

We suggest, indeed urge, that immediate assistance for our farmers is necessary. Various forms of assistance have been proposed in order to keep them in business for this year. As far as the west is concerned, I understand the Richardson newsletter has indicated that the outlook this year for our grain markets is poor. I see that the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon (Mr. Lang) is in his place. I hope he will rise and do here what he said he would do when he was out west. He was going to come down to Ottawa and fight for the west.

Where is his colleague, the Minister without Portfolio from Winnipeg (Mr. Richardson), who announced that he would come to eastern Canada and tell the east what it should do about the west? Where are these paper tigers? I hope they rise in their places tonight and tell the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) what he should do about our agricultural problems. I am looking forward to hearing this brave spokesman for the west rise in his place to tell the government and the Minister of Agriculture what they should do.

Certainly, our agricultural industry is in a state of flux; there is no question of that. There is no need for anybody to minimize the difficulties. Although the Minister of Agriculture spoke in this house this afternoon, at a time when everybody realizes our agricultural industry is in a serious condition, he did not make one proposal or even recognize the need for making one proposal, with regard to coming to the assistance of our farmers in their present emergency. If we on this side of the house cannot do it, I at least hope that the Minister without Portfolio and his colleague the other Minister without Portfolio will succeed in waking up the Minister of Agriculture in order that he will take some action and put some proposals before this house.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the topic before us tonight is one of extreme gravity and seriousness for this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lang: I am pleased to know that, following the suggestion I made in the house the other day, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) has begun reading the speeches I made in western Canada and is beginning to understand what I had to say about the fundamental nature of this problem.

The truth of the matter is that when the opposition refer to the serious problem of farm income, they are indeed touching on a very real problem. The great tragedy, however, is that they do not yet understand the fundamental nature of the problem.

Mr. Horner: Go back to law.

Mr. Lang: They understand its superficial aspects. They understand that on a given day the farmer is short of income. But they do not realize how the problem that is really facing agriculture is a fundamental one that has been ingrained into our national society for fully 100 years. I say that in the hope, just a hope—a pious hope—that the opposition may perhaps listen to what I say, and also that the people of the country will listen.

The problem facing agriculture today is serious, but the pattern and the seriousness was just as great and as present in the days a few years ago when crops were good and prices were a little higher. The fundamental problem was there then, as it is here today. This problem was in no way tackled by previous governments, and I make no apology at all on behalf of the government for the fact that we are taking some months to consider appropriate steps to cure a problem that has existed for years and years.

The nature of the problem is really this, that the farmer, along with other unprotected segments of society—and I should like to emphasize that, for he is not alone—has been losing ground because of the power of those who are able to claim in our society more for themselves than justice alone would allow. This power that they have allows them to claim more for themselves than justice alone would allow.

I should like to refer to the kind of power about which I am talking. I am talking about the power in this society of ours to raise prices above their proper level.

Mr. Horner: Name them.

Mr. Lang: To attack this problem, my colleague, the minister—

Mr. Horner: Name the groups you are talking about.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. Hon. members know that each member is restricted to ten minutes, and I will ask for the co-operation of all hon. members of the house in this debate.

Mr. Lang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My colleague, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford), is introducing an income and prices commission which is designed, in its way, to attack this problem. All hon. members know how firm the long tradition of the Liberal party has been to work toward freer trade in this country and how more determined than ever the government is to move in this direction. And move in this direction we have, and this is not a small matter.

I speak also for other members of the house about other power groups in the country. I would remind hon. members about the powers, of the unions, the capitalists and the industrialists, with their patents, monopolies and control over resources, to demand a higher price than is reasonable, are the factors causing the fundamental problems of agriculture. These are the factors which are ever increasing the costs in the agricultural industry, so that although in recent years the farmer's cash income has been rising, his position has been growing steadily worse.

I remind hon. members of that because people in eastern and central Canada are apt to refer to the cash income position of the farmer as improving year after year. This does not reveal the fundamental problem that the costs farmers have to bear, either for the production of their income or for their own living, are rising at a much faster rate.

When the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) referred the other day to a labour dispute and to the fact that an income increase for one group above productivity must be borne by other people in the country, he was referring to the problem that is facing the farmer and other unprotected segments of society in this country

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. MacInnis: He did not say so.

Mr. Lang: I hear a member of the opposition say, "He did not say so." Perhaps that shows that members of the opposition have not begun to realize the gravity of the situation. They do not know the magnitude of the situation or the seriousness of the problem which must be tackled in a global way.

We have not been unmindful of the problem, Mr. Speaker. One of our first pieces of legislation during the current session increased cash advances available to the farmer. We hoped, to some extent, to pay him for the wheat remaining in the bin on his farm. I said at that time that that legislation was not a long term solution to the problem of the farmer. I said to hon. members opposite that the problem had to do with price. It was a question of income compared to rising costs. When I drew these facts to their attention hon. members opposite, particularly those from western Canada, complained about this or that or the other small difficulty, and I said that by not directing their attention to the solution of the fundamental problems they were doing a real disservice to the agricultural community of this country. I also pointed out that power to obtain a greater share of income than was fair or reasonable was a major problem to be tackled in this society. I was referring to those who could obtain increases in income as a result of their power in society and not as a result of increased productivity. That is the problem.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lang: I hear hon. members of the N.D.P. applauding. May I remind them that later in that debate I drew to their attention the fact that it was high time the trade unions of this country used their significant power not to demand higher and higher wages but lower and lower prices which, after all, they could demand just as easily.

This government is conscious of these problems and is attacking them in a steady and responsible manner. I do not apologize, as a member from the West, for having taken time in attacking problems which have been mounting in this country for too long. I am delighted to be a member of a government that is willing to tackle them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. The hon. member for Huron.

Mr. R. E. McKinley (Huron): Mr. Speaker, I, too, was a member of the standing Committee on Agriculture. When we toured the west and saw the situation out there, I was amazed. The position of western agriculture is very, very serious. Perhaps I ought to put on the record a few of the statements contained in briefs that were presented to the committee. The first brief read, in part:

The economic circumstances of a majority of prairie producers are desperate.

The farmers' first problem is caused by an inability to market a large proportion of his grain.

For the past several years, export sales have fallen off sharply. As a result, in the last crop year, farmers were only able to deliver six bushels per acre.

I understand that for the year previous to the last crop year deliveries were down to three bushels. The quotas are even lower now.

I continue quoting from the brief:

On the prairies, we must literally market or perish. We call on the federal government to take every conceivable step, to increase foreign sales.

In particular, we ask for an extension of export credit facilities.

The brief then referred to the cost-price squeeze:

The second problem of the prairie farmer is caused by the so-called cost-price squeeze.

Mr. Chairman, since the end of the war, annually throughout Canada, there has been a consistent upward trend in prices, wages and incomes. Year after year, sharp wage increases have been demanded and given, to virtually every union handling the farmers' products.

— the longshoremen
— the railroaders
— the maritime unions
— the dock workers
— the elevator operators, and so on.

One such settlement a few years ago, gave 30 per cent in one contract, to the longshoreman—and they have had substantially more since that time. Many of these wage increases were given after direct intervention, persuasion and pressure by the federal government. In every case, the farmer has been obliged to absorb a substantial portion of these huge wage increases. I think it should be realized by the committee, that in Saskatchewan since 1949, average wages and salaries have increased 146 per cent. The cost of machinery and other basic materials which the farmer must buy has doubled, in the same period—

But while all this has been happening, the farmers' selling price for wheat has remained almost static ... In other words, at a time when inflation and escalating costs have never been so serious, the farmer has had virtually no increased returns. The result of course has been, that thousands of our farmers have been obliged to leave farming. Thousands of others are caught in an economic squeeze, that monthly becomes more desperate ... Mr. Chairman, the very basis of the prairie economy is agriculture. We do not believe that the nation is treating the wheat farmer fairly.

I wish to quote also from another brief. It reads:

We are disturbed when we read statements made at the agricultural task force congress where Prime Minister Trudeau told those present that agriculture must choose now whether it wants more government involvement in agriculture and at the same time he also stated that the government of Canada does not anticipate supporting agriculture from the Treasury Department. Mr. Olson, Minister of Agriculture, also suggested that agriculture must look to its own salvation and must look forward to discontinuation of what government subsidies it now enjoys.

We ask why the government of Canada can give incentive grants or other assistance to large corporations or other industries but want to discontinue any assistance to agriculture.

I now wish to continue quoting from the first brief from which I read, at page 6:

Other governments provide vast and complex systems of holding up the price which the farmer receives. In the United States, the government actually pays the farmer for keeping land out of production. Almost every nation in the world pays the farmer, some kind of subsidy.

In France, for example their best wheat sells for $2.42 a bushel; in the Netherlands the price is $4.04 a bushel; in west Germany the producer receives $3.01 a bushel; in Japan the producer receives $3.56 a bushel; in India the producer receives $2.83 a bushel.

Mr. Côté (Richelieu): Is that in U.S. funds?

Mr. McKinley: I believe so. Normally, I believe we have enjoyed about 25 per cent of the world's export market for wheat. In 1952-53 we had about 40 per cent of the market, but in 1967-68 our share was down to about 18 per cent and the prospects for the future do not look bright. When visiting the west I saw grain stacked in bins. Those farmers had no money, having taken advance payments which they used for living expenses. At present, although they may want to plant their crops, they cannot do so because of lack of money. Some farmers could borrow the necessary money, but many cannot.

The Prime Minister and other ministers have said that the farmers of this country are always crying. Maybe that's true, but I do not believe it is. I think farmers know when they are well off. When our farmers are well off everybody else does all right, too.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. McKinley: And let me say this, Mr. Speaker. If it is true, the present agricultural situation reminds me of the story in which the boys looking after the sheep kept crying wolf. Most of the time there was no wolf, but one day the wolf came. The wolf is here now, and nobody is coming to help. He is about to eat up the sheep. In this case, the farmers of this country are the sheep.

When we were in British Columbia I was happy to be able to move a motion that affects Ontario farmers even more than it affects British Columbia farmers. It had to do with equalizing the tariff on eviscerated or dressed poultry and live poultry which is coming into this country at an increasing rate. I understand that Professor Cavers, the former head of the poultry department at the University of Guelph—and his opinions are respected throughout Canada—thinks that United States producers are gearing up to send increasing quantities of live poultry into Canada. They will do so because the tariff on live poultry is only two cents whereas on eviscerated poultry it is five cents. The standing Committee on Agriculture approved my motion unanimously, and agreed that this matter ought to be brought to the government's attention in order that immediate action might be taken. Such action would increase the two-cent tariff on fowl, broilers, turkeys, and poultry to 4 cents, equal to that on dressed poultry.

I am happy to know the Standing Committee on Agriculture is going to tour eastern Canada later this year, because everything is not rosy in this part of the country. I shudder to think what will happen to eastern agriculture if the western farmers, in order to get grain markets, feed all their grain to livestock. What will happen to eastern agriculture? Eastern farmers will be out of business, yet that is what western farmers are doing at the present time.

The eastern farmers have many millions of dollars invested in efficient equipment to handle this job. They are doing a tremendous job. If the western farmer is forced, through lack of grain sales caused by the ineffectiveness of the present government, to feed this grain to livestock the eastern farmers will be in serious trouble. If this happens, it will only be a matter of two or three years until the other segments of the economy are affected. This has been proven down through history.

Some people say only between 7 and 9 per cent of the people are employed in agriculture. I think in the production of agricultural products, processing, distributing and all down the line, approximately 40 per cent are engaged in agriculture. If agricultural products are brought in from other countries, either frozen or canned, 40 per cent of the people in this country will be unemployed.

I plead with the government to take action at the present time to avoid a future disaster. A small amount of action and real consideration of this problem will prevent any serious consequences that might be ahead for this country.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, as a member from a Quebec constituency, whose population is largely engaged in agriculture, I feel it is my duty to speak in this urgency debate on the agricultural situation.

In so doing, I am moved by a twofold feeling, Mr. Speaker. To begin with, I am rather pleased to take the floor because the farmers, in my region as in the rest of Canada, deserve that we give them our attention. But, at the same time, I am filled with grief when I see the extremely difficult situation which these people have been facing for a long time.

There is much talk in this house of the grain producers of the Prairie provinces and, undoubtedly, they are in a rather desperate situation this year.

However, the problem is not insurmountable for them, because some of them can take up cattle breeding and thus liberate that land used for grain-growing.

Mr. Speaker, such is not the case with the milk producers of the central provinces, particularly the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean region, which I represent in this house, along with three colleagues.

In my constituency, most of the farmers are engaged in the dairy industry, because of the difficult weather conditions. Indeed, they have to switch to dairy production or give up farming altogether.

Over the past years, various farm authorities have advised them to expand their operations in order to increase their production and to modernize it in order to improve its quality. That is what they have done.

In my constituency, over the past ten years, their number has decreased by half, so that today they number only about 2,300, with an annual production of about 235,000,000 pounds of milk, which represents approximately 100,000 pounds of milk per producer. They borrowed money to make improvements, and they badly need their income to hold out.

That is why, even though I recognize the difficulties which production surpluses cause the Department of Agriculture, I must protest on behalf of the 2,300 producers of my area and others in Canada, against the new policy announced by the Canadian Dairy Commission on March 31 last.

I protest all the more as this new policy seems to have been adopted without consultations with representatives of the producers concerned, as to other solutions which might have been applied in the circumstances.

I heard a moment ago the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) quote the brief submitted to us Monday by the representatives of agricultural associations in his area. I shall not quote parts of the same brief, but I must say that, in my opinion, most of the grievances expressed there are well-founded.

More than 400 dairy producers came to that meeting, Mr. Speaker, to support their leaders, and the least I can say is that they were not very happy. They said so very clearly.

Nobody questioned the fact that the price situation had greatly improved in the last years, especially since the establishment of the Canadian Dairy Commission, but the setback they will suffer this year because of the new policy seems unacceptable to them. For them and for farmers in my area, that represents a loss of about $280,000 this year, and that, in an area already suffering from an 18 per cent unemployment rate. That is not likely to solve our problem.

Mr. Speaker, if in the last two years some 39,000 farmers went out of business in the dairy industry, we could at least have tried to reduce the surplus production through some other policy than the present farm policy or migration from the farms by producers, which will certainly continue. Besides, we should ask ourselves whether every effort is being made in order to find markets for our milk surplus.

As I have only ten minutes left, Mr. Speaker, before concluding my remarks I would like to give an example of the disastrous effects of the new dairy policy. This applies not only to my district but to the province of Quebec and the country as a whole.

• (8:50 p.m.)

Four years ago, at Saint-Coeur-de-Marie, in the Lac-Saint-Jean area, a young man of 30 bought a 200-acre piece of land with money he had saved when working in the Chibougamau mines; he also acquired a herd. However, as he decided to increase it, the Canadian Dairy Commission came into existence. He was given a quota based on his first year of operation, that is a production of 100,000 pounds of milk. Now, with the new policy, after having increased his production to 300,000 pounds, this young man is placed in the position where he would have to pay the Dairy Commission $50 a year. He would thus not make any profit and would even have to pay in order to operate his business. This is inconceivable. I therefore wonder how it will be possible to solve the problem of milk surplus.

The answer is not easy to find, of course, and it is impossible to find a quick solution to this problem while trying to stay within reasonable costs. We are told that in 1969 the Canadian taxpayer will pay around $125 million in subsidies to that industry and that the population as a whole, will pay another $100 million, because prices will be higher, since there is an embargo on imports.

I suggest that, on a trial basis, a committee be appointed which would be made up of representatives of producers as well as representatives of the department, who would have the necessary powers to negotiate a reasonable agreement, at least temporarily, with a view to settling this problem. If the producers were a party to this agreement, they would probably be more ready to cooperate in the implementation of these directives. For a while, it would probably cost a few millions more, but one could hope, at least, for a final settlement of the problem. Perhaps subsidies could be further reduced, even eliminated; that would be ideal, of course, and the net income of the producer would not be reduced as much.

I strongly urge the minister to seriously consider the setting up of that mechanism of negotiation, at least as an experience, because it is imperative to find a solution to this problem.

I cannot close without commenting on the recent changes in the method of classification of hogs in my area. Under the previous system, 40 to 60 per cent of hogs were getting a premium, but since the new standards went into effect at the beginning of the year, this rate has declined to 35 per cent.

However, recognizing the value of the new system, producers have accepted it without too much opposition, hoping to adapt themselves to it rather quickly, that is over a period of 12 to 18 months. But hardly four months later, these requirements were changed, which resulted in getting premiums for only 18 per cent of the hogs at the slaughter-house.

Even if the price has substantially increased on the market, as everyone agrees, the fact remains that, because of the disastrous situation during the three preceding years, producers need this surplus to make up for accumulated deficits.

The least that could have been done would have been to wait a few more months in order to allow the producers to get used to this new system.

As I often get the chance to speak with the minister, I shall continue to use my influence with him, because, as I know him particularly well, I am aware of his great ability in the field of agriculture and of his very great concern for the human problem which the present agricultural situation implies. I believe that the human problem is primarily the one with which we should be dealing.

[English]

Mr. J. H. Horner (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to take part in this debate initiated by the official opposition, and pleased that the debate has taken place because of the minister's apparent lack of understanding of the exact conditions in western Canada. Of course, I mean the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson), although having listened to the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Lang) this statement could also apply to him.

Surely, when we see a Social Credit government in the province of Alberta, a Liberal government in the province of Saskatchewan and a Conservative government in the province of Manitoba combining their thinking, getting together, and coming here to ask for a two-price system for wheat, urging the federal government to take a look at the severe conditions in western Canada, the seriousness of the situation is underlined.

I wish to quote briefly from the brief presented by the Premier of Saskatchewan, a Liberal premier, to the Standing Committee on Agriculture during the course of its tour of the western provinces. The Minister of Agriculture, who has been a Liberal for only a short time, may learn something from this brief. In it the premier said:

> Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the government of Saskatchewan may I say that in our opinion the western grain industry faces a major crisis.

Could anyone make that more clear? Today, I listened to the speech made by the Minister of Agriculture. He dealt with the subject of livestock, and said how great that industry is. Good as it is, it is thanks to no help from him, and thank heaven for that. Surely, because the livestock industry is in good shape, this does not necessarily mean the whole economy is in good shape.

I see the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon-Humboldt (Mr. Lang) on the edge of his seat as if he had something knowledgeable to say.

Mr. Lang: Not to you.

Mr. Horner: He has just made his speech, and it was just as if he were lecturing some first year law students at his university. I don't hold it against him for retaining his ability to lecture law students, because I am sure his constituents will wish him back at university after the next election. He talked about the power blocs. Has he spoken to his colleagues, the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey) with regard to power blocs, after the great and generous wage settlements he made during the last number of months? I mention this in view of the fact that the longshoremen in Montreal struck for a 33 per cent wage increase a number of years ago and started a chain reaction among other labour unions. Now, the Minister of Labour has settled another dispute with them and given them another 21 per cent. In a period of five years, therefore, they have increased their income by some 54 per cent.

The Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Lang) talked about power blocs, their strength, and the economic advantage they have over the agricultural industry. I say to him, speak to your cabinet colleagues and retain your lectures for your law students.

Mr. Lang: Even you are learning.

Mr. Horner: The Premier of Saskatchewan went on to say:

> The economic circumstances of a majority of prairie producers are desperate.

So, beyond a shadow of a doubt we have a major crisis in western agriculture.

Today, I listened to a 30 minute wandering speech by the Minister of Agriculture, and after some pressure from this side of the house in the final two minutes of his speech he dealt with the subject of a two-price system. Until then he had dealt with apples, potatoes, the livestock industry, the hog industry, chickens and eggs. He skated around the main problem. I didn't even know he was a hockey player. He would not have touched on the main problem had there not been pressure placed on him by members of the opposition.

The Minister of Agriculture accused the Opposition of presenting the problems but never the solutions. We want some solutions from him. He should have some idea of what his capacities are, and the capacities of his government. He spent 30 minutes saying that there was no crisis, no problem.

Mr. Olson: I did not say that.

Mr. Horner: Then, he went on to say how great things were. I accuse him of being a second C. D. Howe. Everybody in western Canada remembers C. D. Howe's approach to farmers. He tapped them on the stomach and said, "It looks like you are doing all right." That is what the Minister of Agriculture sounded like.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): He sounded like Jimmy Gardiner to me.

Mr. Horner: Jimmy Gardiner is another typical example of someone who made that type of speech. The minister dealt at length with cash advance legislation, saying that 83,000 farmers had taken advantage of it and that the amount of money involved was $148 million. That, to me, vividly illustrates the problem.

Some ten days or two weeks ago the Standing Committee on Agriculture toured the province of Saskatchewan. Mr. Speaker, do you know that some 18,000 or 19,000 farmers turned out to the meetings, that 25 per cent of the farm population turned up at halls and heard the representations made to the Agricultural Committee?

Mr. Lang: What percentage?

Mr. Horner: Twenty-five per cent of the farmers of the province showed up at halls and spent afternoons and evenings trying to get to the root of the problem and see what solutions could be suggested. Certainly, this shows there is a major crisis in the industry. I was disappointed that the minister did not even recognize the problem, let alone attempt to solve it. He dealt in a vague way with the difficulty of a two-price system. I do not believe there ever has been a piece of legislation introduced in this house that did not confront the administrators with a problem. I well remember when the cash advance legislation was first introduced. It was said that it was impossible to administer and that it would undermine the Wheat Board. A two-price system would bring about problems, but the principle can be recognized and payment can be made under the two-price system. The two prices were paid in two previous cases and could be paid now. That is the number one solution I would like the minister to announce immediately. Then, he or the Minister of Trade and Commerce should announce an initial floor price for wheat of $1.70 a bushel, the same as it was last year, to restore some confidence in the industry.

Then, if the International Grains Agreement is not continued or is not reinstated, the government should announce that the minimum price in that agreement shall be the minimum price for Canadian producers, including the final payment they receive. The Minister of Agriculture could then make great steps toward lengthening the shipping season at the port of Churchill. This would mean another 11 cents a bushel for the prairie producers because of the lower shipping costs. Lloyds of London sets the limit on that shipping period. I think the Canadian Wheat Board should set the limit.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Mr. Horner: I beg the indulgence of the house to carry on for another minute.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Does the house give unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. John L. Skoberg (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I am not pleased to take part in this debate because it should not be necessary. I was not pleased to see some 20,000 people turn out at 24 different meetings in Saskatchewan. I was not pleased to see between 6,000 and 8,000 at the S.F.U. meeting at Saskatoon protesting the way this government is handling the feed grain situation. I think this would all be unnecessary if the government would face up to the situation.

I say that the position taken today by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) certainly was that of a very benevolent individual bleeding for the agricultural economy. This is the first impression and one that sets the stage for the great defeat of the agricultural economy. It is a double-cross from the word go.

Let us take a look at the record which indicates the reason given by an irresponsible government for not really meeting the crisis head on. We have only to look at what the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) had to say yesterday. The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) quoted the Prime Minister as saying yesterday that the economy is on the move and things never have been so good. I am sure the people in western Canada will remember this Statement for years to come. I am sure that the Liberal candidates in the next election will have to justify this statement many times.

Today, the Minister of Agriculture spoke like a great white father. He told us the farmers never had it so good so far as cash advances were concerned. If I understood him correctly, I believe he said 83,000 farmers have taken advantage of cash advances compared to 45,000 last year. These simple facts prove there is a serious crisis facing our primary producers which the government is not prepared, or does not want, to meet. I ask the minister and the government to do something now rather than gloat over what they have done in the immediate past.

The minister spent some time quoting glowing figures. He mentioned prices in respect of other products. If he would look at the facts, he would realize that good steers today should sell at $35.99 per hundredweight; that grade A hogs should sell at $53.85 per hundredweight; that wheat should sell at $3.27 per bushel and that shelled corn should sell at $2.10 per bushel. I ask whether the minister really has uttered any great, magic words of condolence to the people who are not receiving these amounts of money. I am sure the producers would feel a little more confident if they knew they could turn to other products, such as those referred to by the minister, but they would have no guarantee so far as prices of those products are concerned. The suggestion that the farmer should turn to these products at this time means absolutely nothing to him because he has no idea what he would receive on his investment at a future date. It is hypocritical for the minister to bring in such a suggestion.

I should like to move briefly to the subject of feed grain. I am sure the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon (Mr. Lang) is well aware of this subject. If he is not, he should be. In Saskatoon, when some 6,000 to 8,000 farmers gathered to protest the movement of feed grain between provinces, this minister stood up and tried to talk like a professor to practical people. This did not work and no one knows it better than the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon.

[Mr. Skoberg.]

This government, and particularly the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and even the Attorney General, stand accused in the eyes of the people of the west for doing absolutely nothing when they knew this smuggling was taking place. When these people gathered at Saskatoon on April 11, they produced documentary evidence that feed grain was being smuggled. This is going on constantly. We know that some 5,000 bushels per day of feed grain are going from Saskatchewan to Alberta at a price of between 40 cents and 60 cents a bushel. We know the Canadian Wheat Board is aware of this. We know there must be a directive from somebody in the government telling these people to turn their eyes away and do nothing about it.

I, personally, have phoned the department to ask what could be done about it. All that happens is that one is shoved from department to department; they have no intention of doing anything. Many people in the west are asking why something is not being done about the movement of feed grain. The people in the west are familiar with the fact that the ranchers, food processing plants and packers like to have this type of movement continue. This makes one wonder whether or not there is some collusion between these people and others to make sure that nothing will be done about it. As late as the 25th of this month, the following advertisement appeared in the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix:

> Required immediately 1,000,000 bu. No. 2 hard wheat. Will pay 70c cash per bushel delivered to nearest elevator.

Then, a box number is given.

I ask the minister whether he intends to sit there doing nothing while this type of procedure is being conducted. We do not know what elevator is being used to obtain this grain without permit books. If permit books are being used, it is illegal. I think it is only right that this government should stand on its own feet and do something for those people who are drawing this situation to their attention. I wonder how we could possibly say we support the Canadian Wheat Board when it has not really been given the authority to market the grain it should market. What the people in the west really want is that the Wheat Board be given the authority to market grain in an orderly fashion. The farmers want a fair return on their investment. I can assure you that under present circumstances in the west there is no opportunity to receive a fair return on any type of investment. I most heartily support the suggestion put forward by my colleague that an income sufficiency payment is needed now, not tomorrow.

• (9:10 p.m.)

The immediate need is for the payment of 20 cents per bushel of grain on a maximum of 5,000 bushels. At one of the meetings in Moose Jaw I believe one of the farmers put it very aptly. He said: "We have waited in vain with patience and too long now for promised programs that would provide some solutions to our problems". I should like to quote an article written by George Bain, which appeared in the Globe and Mail of March 11, 1969. It is headed, "A protest from the West", and reads as follows:

> Read Bruce Hutchison in Saturday's Globe and Mail: "...The people of the west are beginning to suspect that they have in Ottawa not a genuine national government but an Ontario-Quebec government too concentrated in the Laurentian centre, too French, and too careless of the perimeter, both Western and Atlantic".

I am sure those people in the other areas of Canada can subscribe to the idea that the west and the far east are not getting their fair share or a return on their investment. I am sure that the people will not stand by and accept much longer that which is being forced on them.

Before I conclude, may I put a question which I believe the government should answer: Does the federal Liberal party support the orderly marketing of feed grains under the quotas and pricing system of the Canadian Wheat Board? The Minister without Portfolio did not answer that question in Saskatoon when it was put to him. I believe it is an obligation of this government to tell the people of this nation whether or not they support the Canadian Wheat Board and whether or not they support the orderly marketing of grains. Nothing else will do at this time.

I am sure that all of us here are sincere when we ask the government to take immediate action to supply cash for the benefit of the western agricultural economy. I am sure that everyone here is sincere when they say it can be done and it must be done. If the government does not act now, they will forever know that they deliberately destroyed the entire agricultural economy of this country.

Mr. Florian Côté (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, may I be permitted to inform the house of my views on what I have heard since noon, of what I think of the motion of non-confidence blaming the government for its administration especially with regard to agricultural matters.

I was surprised to hear all those who supported this motion, especially the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) who surprised me all the more as he was the only one who did not propose any solution to the problem. That surprised me greatly.

I recall certain facts which may help me to explain later on why my feeling of surprise disappeared fairly quickly. I do it with much conviction, Mr. Speaker, because the lot of those who till the land in order to provide food for their fellowmen has never been easy except in times of famine or war, and it has been so in every country in the world. We must acknowledge that.

When efforts are made during difficult periods to improve the situation of agriculture, perhaps something else than what was done this afternoon should be tried. Instead of blaming, we must find solutions.

Was the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Danforth) who proposed the motion truly sincere? We shall analyse that problem together and thus we shall be able to decide whether or not we should support the motion. As for me, I feel that I do not even have the right to back it, but let us analyse the problem.

If my information is correct, the hon. member introduced this motion as a result of the policy of the present government to improve the dairy industry. Because time is limited, I shall try to limit myself to the dairy industry.

So, I told myself: Things are not too bad even now, for when the party of the hon. member was in power—there were then 208 members in the government—there was no policy, and I myself was a farmer at that time.

If one should decide to find out how serious the suggestions are that were made, including those of the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner), one could consult available figures and discover that in 1962—at which time the conservatives were in power—they were not led by the present Leader of the Opposition, who doubtless heard the unpleasant news—the Canadian dairy production was worth only $13,257,869. We see a change from 1963 to 1969: the dairy industry alone has now reached a production of $136,000,000.

A look at the total budget for 1961-62 reveals that $240,581,231 were allotted to agriculture. In the budget for 1969-70, over $280,000,000 are earmarked for agriculture alone.

In 1958, I was having problems on the farm, just as everyone else did in every sector of society in Eastern Canada, because support prices had gone down; that happened under the Progressive Conservatives regime.

I am hardly in a position to discuss the problems the West had to face in those days for I was not involved at that time as I am today. As for those of the East, I have experienced them myself. In fact, the price of bacon had gone down to the point that in 1958 and 1959 I was selling it at $17.80 per hundred pounds. That was not under the present administration.

If I mention this, it is in order to assess the arguments put forward today. If they are genuine, let us put the blame on those who were in charge of the country at that time, the same who are unable today to offer any answer to the increase in production costs.

I am certainly not too happy over that myself but those who can do no better than put the blame on others are not, in my opinion, very fair. And those who say that the government did not take the necessary steps are simply changing the terms of the problem. But when you say it has taken no efficient steps and is unable to take any, I think you are entirely wrong.

Mr. Speaker, when we were discussing the milk quotas, a member of the N.D.P. said that the Canadian Dairy Commission had penalized the farmers when fixing their milk quotas. Here again, in all fairness, all hon. members, to whatever political party they belong, should admit that many farmers are doing a job for which they are not fit, on land, in eastern Canada, which does not suit the dairy industry.

If you want to help us, get the money elsewhere, from the Welfare Department or the Unemployment Insurance Commission, but do not try to grant subsidies so as to induce the people to believe we are crying on their shoulders because the dairy industry will be facing the same problem ten years from now on.

Then, let us agree to impose quotas even if we run the risk of losing votes and even if the farm associations run the risk of losing contributions. But the first step is necessary. Now, the Canadian Dairy Commission has almost taken this step but it hurts to see young people finding it hard to follow suit. The farm associations, together with the Canadian Dairy Commission have asked that one should not let any more people engage in dairy production in order to help those who are now engaging in it.

Let us not forget that we have already imported butter from New Zealand. What was the policy before such imports were allowed? Today it is probably economic to import some but only as a guarantee and not for consumption. We must be assured not to run short. The Commission has two roles to play. It must promote the marketing of dairy products and protect the consumers to prevent the price of butter from becoming exorbitant.

Last year, 3.3 million pounds of butter were imported from New Zealand though we did not need it. It did not cost anything; it was simply resold. We did it in order to protect ourselves remembering what happened in 1962. The members of the opposition must remember, because there was no dairy policy concerning butter and we had to store in the government warehouses over 260 million pounds of butter in 1962. It cost the Treasury of our country over $60 million to get rid of this butter to resell it in any form, since we were forced to melt some of it.

The money was taken out of the pocket of the taxpayers, and we did not complain. The opposition did not complain either, despite the fact that there was no policy.

Today the situation is more stable. Because some butter is imported for protection, they complain and they cry shame.

Since this afternoon no hon. member has proposed any real solution. As for the quotas, as I said a while ago, we will all have to accept the government policy, whatever party we belong to.

This will hurt a few. Even for the small farmer who does not produce enough to make a living, we will have to implement policies like the present one. We cannot tell him that we should have helped him, because then that would be cutting our own necks. We should rather say, altogether: We know that we have to stop producing, and that it will hurt. We know that we will lose votes, in one party as well as in the other.

But if we really want to solve the problems of the dairy industry, we will have to fall into step.

I have a few solutions to propose to hon. members. First, about marketing: In my opinion, we must reduce in certain fields if necessary, if we are afraid to tax a little. Indeed, we should not forget that if we impose taxes to improve the situation, the opposition will be the first to criticize us. If we do not want to impose new taxes, if we accept to make a reduction in the field of scientific research and if we promote the marketing of the product, this would be very significant. We must continue the work that the government—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

• (9:20 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. A. C. Cadieu (Meadow Lake): I should like to begin by saying that I have had the pleasure of talking to a number of those who served on the standing committee as well as with Wheat Pool committee men. I am sure the Wheat Pool in Saskatchewan is to be commended on the wonderful job it did in organizing its business throughout the province of Saskatchewan. Above all, the members of the various pool committees are to be commended on the excellent briefs they presented to the Standing Committee on Agriculture. I am sure it would be a good exercise for the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) to read these briefs, if he has not already done so. I am sure he would not continue to hold the view that there is no problem facing western agriculture. I also believe it would be well for him to read the brief submitted to the Committee by the Liberal premier of Saskatchewan. He would then agree, I feel, that there are problems facing agriculture, not only in western Canada, but right across the country.

It is significant that it should have been left to the opposition to bring before parliament a question of basic social and economic concern, one which should have been assigned top priority by any government with a serious desire to tackle the real problems confronting this nation. In my view, one of the most serious weaknesses of the present administration is its failure to face up to the urgent problems weighing upon ordinary people in this country. As a member for a riding that is largely rural, and a rural western riding at that, I welcome this opportunity to speak on the problems facing the industry of agriculture because I have become increasingly aware over the past months of the growing gulf between that industry and this government.

When one considers the tremendous importance of agriculture to the Canadian economy as a whole, when one realizes the number of Canadians intimately affected by the state of agriculture and when one recognizes the full social and economic implications of a sick agricultural industry for our standard of living and development as a nation, it is remarkable that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and his colleagues should have allowed this gulf to occur and to widen. It is even more remarkable that no attempt has been made to bridge this gulf.

The evidence clearly indicates that the policy-makers of the Liberal party have weighed Canadian agriculture in political terms and have declared it expendable. I will not labour the evidence supplied by the present depressed state of the grain industry. This is already well known and the shameful record is clear for all to see—tons of dry, marketable wheat piled on farms across the prairies side by side with mountains of damp, unsaleable grain.

This government has failed all along the line. What measures were taken fall into the category of too little and too late. Inadequate assistance to farmers to meet the natural disaster of damp grain; chaos in the reception arrangements and shipment to the ports, bumbling in untying the railway transportation knot; too little of the right grain and too much of the wrong grain in terminal elevators; lost sales and failure to make significant new sales abroad. If it were not for the prior commitments to purchase made by Russia and China several years ago, the Canadian grain industry would today be bankrupt and in ruin.

Not once during its brief lifetime has this government brought forward one major piece of agricultural legislation. This house has seen a series of minor bills dealing with various aspects of agriculture, but the majority have been merely amendments to take the ceiling off various interest rates.

Not once has a senior minister mentioned the possibility of this government bringing forward a major measure dealing with basic agricultural policy. All we have seen has been a callous disregard for the very real problems of the industry and the depressed economic conditions now being experienced by those engaged in agriculture. This government has been responsible for parliament frittering away its time on minor matters such as the amendment to the Criminal Code.

The Canadian farmer is not interested in legally being able to engage in homosexual practices. What he wants is some assurance that he will be able to maintain a decent standard of living. The farmer with a glut of unsaleable grain on his hands, no credit at the bank and bills piling up disastrously, is not too concerned with legalized abortion or changes in the rules governing firearms.

Throughout the agricultural community today many thousands of solid, hard-working Canadians are beset by the devils of a real economic depression. They have every right to expect their government at least to recognize their plight. It is now obvious from the legislative plans of this government that there is no room for them in the "Just Society". They have been ignored by Ottawa, excluded from government policy and planning and sacrificed to other interests and other areas, and I speak of agriculture in all parts of Canada, not just in the west. It is almost as if the Prime Minister and his government were actively antagonistic to agriculture.

What little attention has been paid by the Minister of Agriculture to the farmers of Canada has been negative: "Don't do this, don't do that, don't grow wheat, grow something else, don't expect the government to sell your products."

There is much to be said for the suggestion of a two-price system for grain, but so far it is just another suggestion, a hint of something the minister may some day, just possibly, get around to discussing with his colleagues. What the Canadian farmer needs right now is reassurance that he is not forgotten, that he has not been written off. He wants to know that he can continue to enjoy the same standard of living as his fellow citizen in industrial Canada and that he will share equally in national prosperity, national development and national life.

The Canadian farmer needs some assistance from government. He needs this assistance to meet the uncertainties nature imposes, to meet stronger foreign competition and the radically changed market place for agricultural produce. He needs the same kind of degree of government assistance as any other segment of the economy.

The farmer needs guidance from government. If government is to make suggestions that mean a basic change in his mode of work and life, if government largely controls the purchase and marketing of his produce, then he needs government guidance to ensure his future. Above all, he needs government leadership; leadership that will reassure, uplift and inspire him. So far, this government has failed to supply any of these things.

I could get specific, Mr. Speaker, and go into detail about the deplorable state of dairy farming, for instance. I could give you chapter and verse with regard to cases of young, able and willing farmers who cannot start in the dairy business, the business of their choice, because of government policies that create injustice, inequality and impose an economic burden no young Canadian can shoulder.

I believe that this house today should be most concerned with the general question of agriculture as well as this government's abject failure to provide answers to its many serious problems. I believe this house should be even more concerned with this government's obvious determination to ignore the agricultural community.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, having recently visited western Canada I find it shameful that so many farmers are at a loss about putting in a crop this spring.

Mr. Ross Whicher (Bruce): Mr. Speaker, coming from an agricultural area as I do, and also having visited the west with the agricultural committee, I feel that during the next few minutes I should like to say something about this important subject. If I may get right down to the nuts and bolts of the situation, the problem is just this: As many speakers have said, we have an over abundance of wheat and other foodstuffs in this country. The solution to the problem is to get out into the markets of the world and try to sell this foodstuff.

I am not suggesting that a great deal has not been done in this connection in the past. I went out west as a greenhorn as far as western agriculture was concerned—perhaps I came back the same way—but I did learn certain things about the Wheat Board that I did not know before. I should like to go on record right now as saying I agree with the general feeling in western Canada that when the Wheat Board was created some years ago it did a most remarkable job in stabilizing the wheat situation, which was in chaos.

However, I suggest to the house tonight that as a sales agency the Canadian Wheat Board has not been as successful as perhaps it should have been. In the last few years, Canada sold wheat and grain to 118 countries. That figure is in the Wheat Board's report. Yet last year we called on only 36 countries. Is this the way to do business? Is this the way other companies that sell coal, baking powder or Red Rose tea do business? We have to get out and see people before we can sell them goods. If we are going to sell wheat to China, we will have to send to China people who are prepared to use chopsticks, drink Chinese wine and eat their rice. We must associate with them and become jolly good fellows so that, like private enterprise, we are able to sell our products.

In this regard, we have a fantastic advantage over our United States friends because we sell to communist countries. The United States sells very little to communist countries. As a matter of fact, the Chinese would sooner starve to death than buy United States wheat, so automatically they come to Canada. Last year we sold 133 million bushels of wheat to communist countries.

As all hon. members know, there is presently a world glut of wheat. Although Canadian officials tell me we cannot sell wheat, last year the United States increased its sales to foreign countries from 742 million bushels to 753 million bushels?

An hon. Member: Why?

Mr. Whicher: Because they went out and sold it. They went to work. You cannot expect the little farmers of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba to go out and sell wheat to Russia, Cuba, Hungary, France or whoever it may be. You have to have a sales organization to do that for you. It is the obligation of the government to set up this sales organization and to send it out to sell wheat.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Whicher: I regard as a downright shame the fact that last year we sold only 27 per cent as much wheat as the United States sold to the so-called free world. There seems to me something wrong with the way we are doing business. We have to go out and say hello to these people.

How does the Ford Motor Company, General Motors or any private enterprise business sell their products? What would Ford or General Motors do if they had too many cars? They would go out and sell them. This is what we have to do with our wheat.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Whicher: My hon. friends to the left are acting most raucously because they think I am criticizing the government, but I can say exactly the same thing about them, too. The fact is that when they were in office they too had the Wheat Board.

Mr. Horner: We had Alvin Hamilton.

Mr. Whicher: Yet they could not sell all our wheat. In fact, it was China and Russia that came to us and bought it.

Mr. Hees: Who sold wheat to China?

Mr. Whicher: Hon. members to my left might be able to speak English and French, but I do not think they understand Chinese. This they should be able to do if they want to sell goods to China.

Mr. Hees: When was the first Chinese sale?

Mr. Whicher: It was the Chinese who made that first sale because they came to us and bought.

In the few minutes that I have, I am suggesting that not only with regard to wheat but any agricultural products of which there is an over abundance in Canada we must go to the markets of the world before we can sell such products. For example, we have millions of pounds of powdered milk on hand at the present time. We should not wait for countries to come to us and ask us whether we have any milk for sale; we have to go to them and sell it.

I do want to be completely fair, Mr. Speaker. I understand a member of the Creditiste party, which has had only one speaker, wishes to say a few words, so I will relinquish the rest of my time to him.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to take part in this discussion on the non-confidence motion against the government.

We would not want to blame the government overmuch, but we have to upbraid them, because we are still looking for an adequate agricultural policy. The government, with a good Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson), have not yet found a solution to the serious agricultural problems.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to fight for the farmers of the Eastern Townships, because I am from that area and the farmers I represent are mainly engaged in dairy production.

Mr. Speaker, we have wanted reforms for a long time; we are trying to straighten out all sort of conditions, but the nostrums used up to now were of no avail. The Eastern Townships' farmers are in a serious plight; never in the history of this country have we seen them in such parlous circumstances.

A while ago, I heard the hon. member for Richelieu (Mr. Côté) say that this government had done many things. However, I would like to remind him that all the government has done bore no fruit; it did not solve anything, and there will soon be no farmers left in the Eastern Townships and in the province of Quebec. Indeed, farmers are on the verge of bankruptcy. Never was agriculture so near bankruptcy as it is today.

Mr. Speaker, since I have only a few minutes at my disposal, I should like to deal with the element missing to solve the problem. Farmers pay too much tax on building materials. They are overtaxed. Their machines cost too much.

Since agriculture is a basic industry in our country, interest rates should be brought down, because the farmers should not always be the ones who have to make sacrifices. The hon. member for Richelieu said earlier that if farmers are not able to pay a 10 per cent interest rate, they should quit. I think the hon. member for Richelieu is standing up for finance. Hon. member for Richelieu, you are not a farmer, even though you you have at one time tilled the land, and you do not know anything about farm matters.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member must direct his remarks to the Chair.

It being 9.45 p.m., it is my duty, pursuant to standing order 58(9), to interrupt these proceedings and forthwith put every question necessary to dispose of the proceeding concerning the motion now before the house.

[English]

The question is on the amendment to the main motion. All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: Those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the members.

The house met at 11 a.m.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

INDIAN AFFAIRS

STATEMENT BY MINISTER AS TO JUNE, 1969, POLICY ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the minister of Indian affairs. Now that the national Indian conference has been completed I wonder whether the minister would undertake to clarify the confusion surrounding the intentions of the government. Specifically, could the minister say whether legislation will be introduced in the month of June with respect to the Indian Act, or is he simply planning to issue a white paper or make some statement of policy instead?

At the same time would the minister say when the government intends to take action with regard to treaty rights? Will this be done before or after the introduction of legislation in regard to the Indian Act?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, even though the national meeting of Indians has not ended yet, I have decided to come back to the house because I am working on a statement I am to deliver this afternoon to Indians.

To answer the question of the hon. leader of the opposition, the government intends to make in June an official statement of policy regarding the Indians problems. We do not intend to bring forward a new legislation on Indians in June but in that declaration of policy we shall express the underlying principles of our future Indian program and explain the intentions of the government regarding claims and the way to settle them.

[English]

EXTENSION OF JULY, 1968, CONSULTATIONS TO PERMIT DISCUSSION OF INDIAN ACT AND TREATIES

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Now that the minister has moved further away from the Minister without Portfolio from Port Arthur, perhaps it would be appropriate to ask him whether the Minister without Portfolio from Port Arthur was speaking for the department on Wednesday when he said that government consultation with the Indian people followed the wrong priority, that more attention should have been given to the question of treaty rights?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I have not read that statement, but I must say that when the consultations began in July last, we were supposed to limit the discussions to the Indian Act. However, following the first two consultations, we decided to open the debate and we allowed Canadian Indians to air their views, not only regarding the future legislation on Indians, but also on all problems of concern to them, including the question of the treaties.

[English]

ANNOUNCEMENT AS TO PRESS STATEMENT RESPECTING RECENT MEETING WITH INDIANS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): One further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the department intend to accept the apparently unanimous request of the representatives of the Indian people meeting in Ottawa for financial assistance to conduct their own inquiry into matters that the Indian people themselves consider most important? Does the minister intend to accept this request or not?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to make it clear that our discussions drew to Ottawa spokesmen for Indians all over Canada. I must say that the meeting proved extremely useful and I am quite pleased by the fact that the Indian people are most happy with that type of consultation.

As regards in particular the request for research grants, the matter is now under study and I hope I can deliver a statement to the Indian people this afternoon and in the course of the next few weeks talk over the form that consultations may take in future with the Indian Affairs Branch.

[English]

REQUEST FOR SPECIAL CONSIDERATION OF B.C. NON-TREATY INDIANS

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the minister whether, in the statement which he said will be forthcoming in the future outlining government policy, he will deal with a peculiar and very serious situation affecting Indians in British Columbia. In the main they are non-treaty Indians who claim that until some satisfactory arrangement is made, they own British Columbia?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): That problem is quite complex, for British Columbia Indians have not signed any treaty. The same problem arises as regards Quebec Indians, and in our statement of policy in June we hope to announce the government's intention to seek a solution likely to allow them a full participation in Canada's economic and social life, and safeguard the national features peculiar to the country's first citizens.

QUEBEC—ATTEMPT TO FIND SOLUTION TO INDIAN-ESKIMO PROBLEMS

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): I should like to ask a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Would the minister make a statement with regard to the meeting held last Friday, at Quebec city, between the representatives of the federal and provincial governments and the Indians and Eskimos of Northern Quebec?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I have not made a report on that subject. It is an ordinary meeting between the Eskimos and the Indians of New Quebec with the representatives of the federal and provincial governments, in order to find some grounds of agreement to try to settle problems involving the two jurisdictions. Some aspects of their life come under the provincial authority and others under the federal jurisdiction. I am told the conference went off smoothly.

[Mr. Chrétien.]

[English]

ANNOUNCEMENT AS TO JUNE, 1969, STATEMENT ON CLAIMS COMMISSION

Mr. John M. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Now that the people at this conference have indicated they are more interested in treaty rights than in revision of the Indian Act, will the minister say when he will be introducing legislation to establish the long promised Indian claims commission?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, in June, when I make my statement, I am sure that we shall know where we stand with regard to the Indian Claims Commission. We shall probably be able to state at that time that we are proceeding with the establishment of that organization.

[English]

ANNOUNCEMENT OF APPLICATION TO INDIANS OF FARM CREDIT POLICY

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I note, according to a press release of yesterday, that the minister in collaboration with the Minister of Agriculture has obtained cabinet approval for an agreement in connection with farm credit. Can the minister advise us whether the terms of that agreement submitted to the Indian Conference held here were first considered and discussed with other representatives of the Indian people before the agreement was made and approved by the cabinet?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): At the meeting of the National Federation of Indians in Ottawa in December, we informed the Indians of this new policy and they seemed to think that such a policy was likely to help the Indians engaged in agriculture. In fact, they were quite happy about that decision. As from today, they will be able to borrow from the Farm Credit Corporation in the same way as any other farmer in Canada. The Indians are very pleased about this new progressive policy of the government.

[English]

Mr. Baldwin: Mr. Speaker, I asked the Minister if the terms of this agreement approved by cabinet were discussed with Indian representatives. I was not asking about general policy.

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: The government has taken an administrative decision in the best interests of the Indians, and they are very happy about it.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Shefford wish to put a supplementary question?

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): It is not a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

FINANCE

FUNDS FOR MUNICIPAL CAPITAL EXPENDITURES—SALES OF DEBENTURES

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the very serious difficulties municipalities of Canada are facing in securing funds for capital expenditures and in view of similar difficulties some provinces, particularly the Atlantic provinces, face, will the minister make a statement at an early date on motions outlining any plans the federal government is working out in co-operation with provincial governments to help to resolve the financial difficulties of our municipalities?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I will consider making a statement. I believe that all governments and people borrowing money for long terms at fixed rates are having difficulties. This applies not only to Canada but to the rest of the world also. Certainly it applies to the United States and Canada. This will be overcome only when we learn that we have to battle inflation and not expect more of the economy individually than we are putting into it through increased productivity.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that public bodies have greater difficulty raising money in the public than in the private sector, is the minister considering either in his white paper or budget in June providing some inducement to make it more attractive to secure capital funds for public projects?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure the original assumption that my friend put forward is correct, that it is easier to borrow in the private sector than in the public sector. Of course I cannot indicate what is to be done in the tax reform until I produce the white paper.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the Minister of Finance had any consultations with the provinces to ascertain the extent of the difficulties that municipal governments are having in financing the central projects through the normal sale of debentures?

Mr. Benson: Of course, Mr. Speaker, the municipalities are basically the responsibility of the provincial governments. As of this date no provincial government has come forward and asked for discussions in this regard.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance.

If he did not consult the representatives of the provinces with regard to the release of credit, will he ask the Bank of Canada to help municipalities and provinces?

[English]

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, I do not think it would be of any great help to simply have the Bank of Canada printing more money.

Mr. Stanfield: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the minister agrees that inflation is the main part of the problem, and since tax legislation proposed with regard to insurance companies is affecting their tendencies toward investing in fixed interest obligations, will the minister agree to do everything he can with regard to fighting this inflation? In particular will he do his best to persuade his colleague, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to act—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is argument rather than a question.

THE MINISTRY

INQUIRY AS TO POSSIBLE RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Prime Minister.

Since Mr. Dalton McGuinty, President of the Liberal Association of Ottawa-Carleton, constituency of the Minister of Justice, has resigned because of the government's attitude on abortion, can the Prime Minister assure this house that the Minister of Justice is not now drafting his letter of resignation, as the Minister of Transport did recently?

[English]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

NATO—STATEMENT BY GENERAL LEMNITZER ABOUT EUROPEAN REQUIREMENTS

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. Arising from the minister's statement in the house Wednesday that he would obtain a report on the interview given by General Lemnitzer, has the minister obtained such a report and is he now in a position to advise the house whether the Department of National Defence is in accord with the assessment of the military situation in Europe made by the NATO military command, under which Canadian forces are serving in Europe?

Hon. Leo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I believe that my good friend is enlarging the report that I saw of the interview of General Lemnitzer. I think General Lemnitzer's comments were to the effect that there should be no over-all military reduction of the capability overseas. I think we generally agree in the government with that kind of proposition, but we said all along that individual members of the alliance should have the opportunity of making adjustments to their own contributions after consultation with their allies. However it was never inferred that the over-all capabilities would have to be reduced.

Mr. Hees: As a supplementary question, does the minister believe that it is possible to maintain the over-all strength of the NATO forces in Europe if individual countries are going to be permitted—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's supplementary question, in my view, is argumentative. The hon. member for Abitibi.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order I submit that the Canadian government's position is contrary to that of General Lemnitzer. He stated that forces could not be withdrawn from the NATO Alliance.

Mr. Speaker: Of course I do not disagree with the hon. member; but in my view he is not submitting a point of order for the consideration of the Chair but rather is pursuing the argument which I thought a moment ago he was submitting for the consideration of the house instead of asking a question which, I suggest to him, is possibly about the only thing he can do at this time.

[Translation]

POSITION OF GENERAL ALLARD ON GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of National Defence.

I wish to ask him if General Allard is in agreement with the government's policy with regard to NATO and if the General has not already made some statement against that policy.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is a question for General Allard. Besides, at this time, the hon. member is only allowed to put questions to the minister.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

POSSIBILITY OF CLOSING FARM PRODUCING MOUNTS

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I should first welcome the solicitor general back from the United Kingdom.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: "My kingdom for a horse" has been somewhat changed: Now it is a horse for a Queen. I would ask him, as the titular head of the R.C.M.P., whether there is any foundation for the suggestion made in western Canada that the R.C.M.P. farm, which produces the horses that have been used by the R.C.M.P., is to be closed down?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I did not get the answer.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am not sure to what extent the question is urgent, but the Solicitor General appears to be very anxious to answer it.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, it is urgent.

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the best way of having a full answer to and full treatment of this important and interesting subject would be to have it dealt with on the estimates, when they are before the committee on Tuesday. At that time I shall be glad to give the right hon. gentleman full information on the subject.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I understand the closure is to take place before that, Mr. Speaker, and I want to raise strong objection to the last severance of the Mounted Police from horses.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have to impose closure on the right hon. gentleman.

AIR TRANSPORT

PILOT FATIGUE CONSEQUENT UPON AIR CANADA STRIKE

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, with your permission I should like to go from horses to air lines, and ask the Acting Minister of Transport the following question: In view of the serious problem of air safety and the concern of the Air Pilots Association, can the minister assure parliament that his department has not given any permission for an extension of the hours which air pilots are required to spend at work as a result of the pressures on air lines consequent upon the strike at Air Canada?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Yes, Mr. Speaker. The same conditions that apply at any time apply now to the granting of licences, and the same concern for safety and pilots' hours will be observed.

Mr. Lewis: Perhaps the minister does not have the information. In view of the fact that there are ways by which extension of hours may be made by his department, what I am asking him is to inform parliament, and if he cannot do so now would he undertake to do so on Monday, whether any extension of hours has been permitted either by the central department or by regional officers of his department.

Mr. Richardson: Yes, Mr. Speaker; the licences are not made by the Department of Transport. They are made by the Canadian Transport Commission. I know what I said earlier is correct, but I shall be pleased to discuss this matter again with the president of the commission.

EXTENDED WORK LOAD OF AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS

Mr. David Lewis (York South): I have a further supplementary, Mr. Speaker. In view of complaints by the air traffic controllers that because of a shortage of controllers they are required to work far too many hours for safety, can the minister inform the house what studies are being made of this problem, if in his view it is a problem, and what action is proposed to deal with it.

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Yes; I think we recognize a problem. We also recognize the public concern in this area. I should like to suggest this matter is of sufficient importance that it should be brought forward under motions some time in the near future.

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the minister, when he does bring this matter up under motions, if he will deal with the subject of whether there is in fact a national emergency under the terms of the act about which he has been speaking. In other words is what the Prime Minister said true, that there is not a national emergency, or is there one under the act under which the minister could take action in these instances referred to by the hon. member for York South.

INDUSTRY

AUTOMOBILES—INCLUSION IN AGREEMENT OF AFTER MARKET PARTS

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Acting Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Is it the intention of the government to include in the United States-Canada car pact what is commonly referred to as the after market car parts?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I will have to look into the present status of any discussions with regard to this. I am sure the minister would like to report more fully on this to the house when he returns.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

BAKER LAKE, N.W.T.—INQUIRY RESPECTING BORIS KOTELEWETZ

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. I welcome him to that end of the chamber which generates most solutions to the problems with which he is confronted. In the light of a request from the Eskimo people at Baker Lake that Mr. Boris Kotelewetz, who was once an arts and crafts officer within the department and no longer employed by the department, be returned, I wonder whether the minister would be prepared to act on that request, or whether in the absence of any effort to reinstate Mr. Kotelewetz he would be prepared to send whatever material he has in his possession to the Standing Committee in order that the committee might inquire into all aspects of this situation.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I must say first of all that I like the constructive suggestions of the opposition. In fact, their last one was that I should introduce a bill to abolish the Department of Indian Affairs and I have taken note of it.

As for that gentleman whose name I cannot repeat, because I find it rather difficult to pronounce, he worked in Baker Lake and I met him personally in my office a few weeks ago. I am now considering the problem and I hope to be able to report to the house within a few days.

[English]

TRADE

WHEAT—TWO PRICE SYSTEM IN INTERNATIONAL MARKETING

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister without Portfolio in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. Has the government inquired of its legal advisors if the institution of a two-price wheat system would be in violation of international trade agreements and would expose Canada to the charge of dumping, and if so what their opinion is.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the position with regard to the two-price system and its relationship to the international market is one which we have always had before us and understood well. I believe the hon. member is referring to a reference to it not long ago as dumping. No doubt in the strict sense it is, but that is purely in the strict sense.

It is also true, on the other hand, that the practice of two-pricing in the world is common, and remedies are not sought by countries receiving grain. Hence, in the strict sense it is not very meaningful, although on the whole it would no doubt be better for Canada if it were.

[Mr. Howard (Skeena).]

NATIONAL PARKS

GASPÉ—AGREEMENT BETWEEN PROVINCIAL AND FEDERAL AUTHORITIES

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development whom we welcome to this part of the house. It is hoped that his coming this way is a promotion.

Could he tell us what progress has been made in the talks with the province of Quebec about the possible development of a national park at Pointe-Forillon?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I have received representations in this morning from the Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, this very morning, and further talks are scheduled for next week. I am happy to see the minister has re-opened discussions. We shall probably get along quite well.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

Is the minister in a position to tell us whether he expects an early settlement of this problem rather than drawn-out discussions and serious difficulties?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I hope that, in the best interests of Gaspé inhabitants, we will find a prompt solution.

[English]

HOUSING

MUNDY POND, NFLD.—URBAN RENEWAL SCHEME

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Housing. In view of the fact that the government in reviewing its policy with regard to urban renewal has imposed a freeze on future schemes, can the minister say whether this freeze applies to studies that were in the process of being completed? I am thinking particularly of the Mundy Pond urban renewal scheme in St. John's West.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It seems to me that the hon. member is asking a question which was asked yesterday. I think however the hon. member was unsuccessful in his attempt yesterday; therefore in the circumstances I would allow the question today.

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for St. John's West is asking about an urban renewal project. I would like to advise him, as I advised the house yesterday or the day before, that Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is currently preparing guidelines for all urban renewal projects. As soon as these have been approved by the government they will be made known to all municipalities. Of course that will include St. John's.

REQUEST FOR GUIDELINES STATEMENT BEFORE END OF JUNE

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Acting Minister of Housing. In view of the fact that there is some uncertainty as to the direction in which this government is going, could the minister now assure the house that we will have these guidelines and the commitments for the various municipalities before the end of June?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): The guidelines are being studied and, as I have repeated many times, when they have approval by the government they will be made known.

Mr. Alexander: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, it is most amazing to me that after considerable questioning of not only the former minister of transport, whom I am very glad to see sitting in the house, as a result of which we had a sort of dialogue going—and I suppose I will now have to get a dialogue going with the Acting Minister of Housing—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the hon. member that he should have a dialogue with the Chair and indicate what his point of order is.

Mr. Alexander: I beg your indulgence, Mr. Speaker. I hope that after the numerous questions that have been asked in the house with respect to urban renewal programs and public housing schemes, the government will be able in the very near future, before the end of June, to give us some idea of what is going on.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Obviously this is not a point of order. The hon. member may be dissatisfied with the answer he receives, but that cannot be made the subject of a question of privilege or point of order.

Inquiries of the Ministry

WATER RESOURCES

PLACENTIA BAY, NFLD.—POLLUTION AFFECTING FISHERY AT LONG HARBOUR

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address this question to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry or to his parliamentary secretary. In reply to my question No. 1331, as reported in Hansard of February 24, regarding the pollution of fish at Long Harbour, Newfoundland, by the Electric Reduction Company, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Fisheries stated that it was an accidental contamination by the company and that there would be no further recurrence of this pollution. I now ask the minister, in view of the apparent continuing recurrence of fish pollution in the area by this company, what immediate action is his department taking?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, since I am acting for the Minister of Fisheries this morning perhaps I can provide the answer for my hon. friend. As was indicated in the statement yesterday of the Minister of Fisheries, there is strong circumstantial evidence that this plant is contributing to the pollution problem. There is a very definite question as to whether this can in fact be established in law, when of course it would be necessary for us to take action by way of appropriate legislation. However, because of the seriousness of the situation representations have been made to the company in question and they have agreed to close the plant, to instal additional equipment, and not to reopen except after consultation with both the federal and provincial governments, in order that more tests can be carried out to ensure that the problem is resolved. I understand the plant will be closed this week end as a result of the representations made by the Minister of Fisheries.

Mr. Harding: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Who sets the pollution standards for industrial waste before it is allowed to be released into the bay, and who enforces those standards?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The supplementary question is not in order. It is very general in nature, and cannot be asked at this time.

Inquiries of the Ministry

PLACENTIA BAY, NFLD.—COMPENSATION TO FISHERMEN FOR LOSS THROUGH POLLUTION

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, to the Acting Minister of Fisheries. In view of the fact that a large part of the Placentia Bay area has been forbidden to fishermen because of the pollution caused by the plant at Long Harbour, can the minister say whether the government will take action to pay compensation to fishermen affected?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware that it is forbidden by law at the moment. However, this may be a matter of semantics. We are examining what next steps will be necessary and whether it will be necessary to close portions of the area for a time. If that is the decision, consideration will also be given to compensating the fishermen.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I refer to the press release that the Minister of Fisheries released yesterday. Today, according to the Prime Minister's roster, the Minister of Fisheries and his parliamentary secretary should be in the house, and both are absent. It was for this reason that hon. members on this side of the house, including the hon. member for St. John's West and myself, did not direct questions to the minister, because obviously he was not here and we did not know that the Minister of Supply and Services was acting minister. My point of order is this: How can we on this side of the house direct questions of an urgent nature to ministers who are not even in their place when they are supposed to be here? Second, information about this matter, relating to the press release of yesterday, was given today to the Newfoundland legislature by the Newfoundland minister of fisheries, to the effect that certain bays were being closed by the federal Department of Fisheries until this matter was corrected. This information because of its urgency should have been given to the house this morning on motions, and because the situation could have a detrimental effect on our whole east coast fishing industry.

POLLUTION OF CANADA-U.S. BOUNDARY WATERS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Last Monday I drew the attention of the Prime Minister to the confidential report which was submitted to the International Joint Commission regarding the pollution of Canada-United States boundary waters. I asked whether the government would undertake to have that report made available to members of parliament and the public. I wonder whether the Prime Minister is in a position to give us some information about this matter.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I did inquire, and I was told it was a draft report only which was shown to the International Joint Commission by its international board. This draft report will be brought to more advanced stages and then presented to the commission. At that time the commission will probably want to have public hearings and make recommendations to the government. It is only at that point that the government will be in a position to act or not act on the recommendations of the commission. But this, according to the commission's information, is several months away.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister whether, when the report is submitted to the International Joint Commission and they have had an opportunity to study it, it will then be released to the public?

Mr. Trudeau: If it is in the public interest, Mr. Speaker.

[Later:]

POLLUTION—DESIGNATION OF RESPONSIBILITY TO ONE MINISTER

Mr. Louis-Roland Comeau (South Western Nova): A supplementary question to the Prime Minister with regard to pollution, Mr. Speaker. In view of the many aspects of pollution in the whole of Canada, would the right hon. gentleman consider designating one minister to be in charge of pollution problems rather than spread authority among various departments?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): We have considered this, Mr. Speaker.

FISHERIES

SHUSWAP RIVER DIVERSION—INQUIRY AS TO DECISION REACHED BETWEEN FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): On Wednesday, Mr. Speaker, I directed a question to the Minister of Fisheries. In his reply, he indicated that the matter in which I was interested came under the authority of the Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. With your indulgence, I should like to repeat the question now. Can the minister inform the house whether any decision has been reached between the federal government and the government of British Columbia over the Shuswap River diversion plan?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The negotiations in connection with the basin involved here are under way. They are in one sense at a preliminary stage. On the other hand, we are fairly optimistic that a conclusion can be reached in the not-too-distant future.

Mr. Rose: May I ask the minister whether the international aspects are being considered, since the water diverted will eventually flow into the Columbia River basin and become United States water?

Mr. Lang: It is the objective of what is essentially a planning survey to consider all aspects of the water and its use.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

USE OF CF-5 FIGHTER BOMBERS

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): My question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Now that the first deliveries are being made of the government's $212 million order for 115 CF-5 fighter bombers, will the minister tell us whether a firm decision has been made as to what use the government intends to make of them?

Hon. Leo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): We are studying all the new aspects of the defence policy. I think the hon. gentleman should not be too impatient. There are many complex problems but I am sure we are going to use the CF-5 for a very worthwhile role.

Mr. Nowlan: Can the minister tell us whether these planes are to be used in Canada, Europe or in Timbuktu?

NATO—DEFICIT IN STRENGTH THROUGH WITHDRAWAL OF CANADIAN FORCES

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a question for the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, following the statement made by the Minister of National Defence a few minutes ago. If it is the view of the government that the over-all strength of NATO forces should be maintained, is it the government's intention that our NATO allies should make up the deficit caused by the withdrawal of Canadian forces which the government has stated it intends to carry out?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I do not think I can add anything to what the minister said. We know that NATO is an alliance which arrives at collective decisions, but members within the alliance are of course permitted to redeploy their forces as they believe to be most compatible with the strength of the alliance and the peace of the world.

Mr. Hees: Can the Prime Minister explain how, if one member withdraws forces, the over-all strength can be maintained without the other countries making up the deficit?

Mr. Speaker: That is the question which I thought a moment ago was argumentative.

TRADE

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF DEFAULT IN U.S.S.R. AGREEMENT

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): My question is directed to the Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Speaker. I would ask him whether there is any foundation for the widely dispersed suggestion now being made that the U.S.S.R. is showing no indication of taking up the balance of wheat which it undertook to take under the agreement between Canada and that country.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce): The negotiations with regard to the long term agreement to purchase are still under way.

Mr. Diefenbaker: When the minister was in the west last week did he not say there was grave doubt whether the U.S.S.R. would take up the balance of 70 or 80 million bushels, as the case may be, and that the effect might be to bring about a very serious worsening of the wheat export situation?

Mr. Lang: No, Mr. Speaker, I did not say that. As far as I know I did not refer to that question at all. I certainly did not say what the right hon. gentleman suggested.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Everybody understood it that way.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

CONSULTATIONS RESPECTING PENSIONS OF RETIRED EMPLOYEES

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): May I direct a question to the Acting Minister of Transport, Mr. Speaker? I trust my hope, as a fellow member from Winnipeg, that he will be made a full minister will not hurt his chances.

An hon. Member: The kiss of death.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): In view of the assurance the minister gave me on September 24 and February 14 that consultations are taking place with the C.N.R. concerning increasing the pensions of retired employees, can he say what progress has been made in connection with this important matter?

Hon. James Richardson (Acting Minister of Housing): The consultations are continuing, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. During the time the minister is top man in the department will he step up these consultations, in the hope that something will be done?

WATER RESOURCES

PLACENTIA BAY, NFLD.—POSSIBLE CLOSING OF FISHERY THROUGH POLLUTION

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): I have a question for the Minister of Supply and Services. Has the government decided, because of pollution from a phosphorous plant, to close Placentia Bay to the fishing industry?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Supply and Services): No, Mr. Speaker. No definite decision in that regard has been taken. As I outlined a few moments ago, now that the plant is closed it is a matter of determining whether it is necessary to close the whole bay or any parts of it. This decision will hopefully be made over the weekend and an announcement could be made early next week.

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Tuesday, April 29, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 28, Mr. Laprise.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, last Wednesday we were studying the amendment relating to hospitals that should be accredited or approved so that therapeutic abortions may be performed in them.

The minister, during the debate on that amendment, imputed to us intentions which, in my opinion, reflect an unacceptable demagoguery.

• (11:50 a.m.)

We move an amendment providing that in order to be accredited, a hospital will have to be able to accommodate at least 400 patients. In doing so, and according to the minister, we would discredit every rural hospital or physician, including the very persons who voted for the members of the Ralliement Créditiste.

Mr. Speaker, to prove what I have just said, let me quote a statement by the minister, as reported on page 8185, of the official report of the House of Commons debates:

> The only hospitals the hon. member trusts are those in which there are at least 400 beds and which form part of a university.

At that time, the minister gave the following answer to the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin), and I quote:

> To my mind, he is prejudiced against rural hospitals, against rural ridings and against the small cities of Canada or the province of Quebec.
> I believe the Ralliement créditiste party does not trust rural hospitals!

That, Mr. Speaker, is a facile argument, which ascribes to us tendentious intentions. We are thus being discredited, and so are those who ask us to fight in this house measures which are obviously weakening the government itself more and more.

Mr. Speaker, we object to rural hospitals and doctors being authorized to perform therapeutic abortions, not because we have a grudge against them, but because—and this is much more serious—we are sure that if they are allowed to perform such operations, the situation will turn out to be as it is in England's hospitals.

I refer to an article published in the April 30, 1969 issue of La Presse, which reads in part as follows:

> Britain's Minister of Health and Welfare stated that the "seven abortion clinics which performed 4,522 abortions out of the 4,958 such operations performed in the last year, will have to improve their services or close down.

Mr. Speaker, is it not clear enough? It is obvious that if we leave it to the clinics or to the small hospitals to procure abortions, we would necessarily encounter abuses. Even if proud Albion renowned for its puritanism, a certain greatness of soul and exemplary spirit in this field, fell victim to such abuses, must we, in turn, fall in the same errors? We are preparing to make the same mistakes, which is far from comprehensible.

All that is needed is for a few practitioners to lack professional integrity and we will move towards similar results. It is well known that doctors are faithful to their professional ethics. But we must simply recognize that in all professions and trades, there are always less scrupulous people. That is a truism.

This is what happened in that clinic in great Britain. Indeed, in the said clinic, there was a physician who performed abortions. Some of them took advantage of that situation to swindle. The newspaper article read as follows, and I quote:

> Some physicians took that opportunity to swindle on a large scale. One of them charged $268 for each abortion and performed 62 in a single day.

If a physician performs 62 abortions on the same day, even if the hospital is accredited and is equipped with all surgical facilities required and even if every essential sanitary precaution is taken, at that rate, it is impossible to enforce the most basic principles of hygiene and medecine.

That is why abortions must be performed only in quite large hospitals so as to prevent such things from happening without anyone knowing about it.

Such is the purpose of the amendment, Mr. Speaker. We must not let things develop in a way likely to bring about disastrous results for the population. I revert once again to the demagogic remarks of the Minister of Justice. Last Wednesday, he imputed the same motives to us, and I quote:

> One must then conclude that under this amendment, the Ralliement créditiste does not trust small hospitals, does not believe that "an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics" can be found in small and/or rural hospitals.
> I humbly suggest to the Chair that this amendment reflects a bias against all rural, all small hospitals in the province of Quebec—
> Women living in small Quebec towns—

This is the kind of demagogic talk indulged in by the Minister of Justice resorted to. It is unbelievable, Mr. Speaker, to hear a responsible minister say such things.

Why do we say that abortions should not be performed in smaller hospitals? Because, according to doctors and scientists, perhaps only three therapeutic abortions might be necessary out of 10,000 cases. Three out of 10,000. Is there any need then to set up abortion clinics and hospitals throughout the country?

Mr. Speaker, this does not make sense. The minister strongly emphasized the term "rurals". People are in the habit of confusing "rurals" with "créditistes".

Mr. Speaker, the Ottawa region, particularly that of Ottawa-Carleton, is not a rural region, as far as I know. Yet in the minister's riding, the president of the Liberal Association who is a physician, recently, when announcing his resignation, said, and I quote:

> I have met many people, but not a single soul told me that, by voting for the Liberal party, he intended to support the new legislation on abortion. I do not know many people who support—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I must remind the hon. member, first of all, that he must limit his comments to the amendment before the house and, secondly, that his time has expired.

[English]

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, my comments in connection with this amendment will be very brief. Coming as I do from an area which, prior to redistribution, comprised almost one-third of the province of Alberta, stretching from the Northwest Territories hundreds of miles to the south and with a great many small communities, I can only say that I have to vote against the motion proposed by the hon. member. I understand, of course, the feeling that has animated him in moving it, and I give it full effect as I do all other amendments that have been proposed and await discussion.

Because I intend to make a motion at the end of my brief remarks, Mr. Speaker, I will not depart from the motion but traverse a collateral course. We are in the position of debating this particular and very important amendment at this time because the government has placed us in an impossible position as a result of its refusal to do what should have been done and divide this bill.

We in this house are waiting for an opportunity to deal with urgent and pressing questions such as housing—a very important matter—with matters affecting Indians, with agricultural problems and a great many other topics. The motion that I intend to move will not be for the purpose of inhibiting the right of members to proceed with amendments that have been moved on this bill and which should be the subject of discussion in the house. It is our view, and it always has been the view of members of this party, that there should not be any inhibitions of this sort, that those members who feel very strongly about this subject should have the right to move amendments and debate them.

• (12 noon)

In order that we may proceed with other extremely important business of the house I shall move a motion which I hope the government will see fit to accept. It might then consider setting apart one or two days a week for proceeding with this bill, with the rest of the time to be spent in considering measures which the government and we in the opposition consider very important. I therefore move, seconded by the hon. member for St. John-Lancaster (Mr. Bell):

That the said debate be now adjourned.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the members.

The house divided on the motion (Mr. Baldwin) which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. C. A. Gauthier (Roberval): Allow me to thank the Liberal party for allowing us to continue this debate, because in the course of his speech, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) accused us of filibustering. This morning, we have the confirmation that the government wishes the debate to continue, and we did not want—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member cannot deal with the vote taken a while ago; he must restrict himself to the amendment now under study.

Mr. Gauthier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I wanted to congratulate the Liberal party on his attitude towards this amendment. And before proceeding with my remarks, I want to deal for four or five minutes with the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise).

Mr. Speaker, I should like first to refer to some remarks made by the minister about this amendment. We told him we had received hundreds of protests against abortion and against the method of determining the conditions under which abortion will be authorized.

The minister said, in reply to the speech of the hon. member for Abitibi, as reported on page 8184 of Hansard, and I quote:

> First, I must point out that when this bill was considered by the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, several amendments were moved by members from all political parties and the government accepted about 25 of them.
> We are now at the stage of the committee report. This report has been prepared by the members of the four political parties involved and we have to accept or reject the report. The amendments moved by the members of the Ralliement Créditiste are not affecting this bill, but the committee report.
> Well, as I said, the committee accepted about twenty or thirty amendments—

We agree with the Minister of Justice on that point. However the committee did not accept all amendments since you allowed us to move the amendments before us.

In that connection, the Minister of Justice said and I quote:

> The standing committee on justice and legal affairs met 14 times in 30 days. It really meant business. The committee made inquiries, called witnesses, almost all the officials from the Department of Justice.

And I emphasize those words:

> —all the officials from the Department of Justice.

I will say a few words about that later on. The quotation goes on:

> After six days of debate on second reading, 14 committee meetings, and 8 more days of discussion in the house at the stage of the committee report, I can say we are very much concerned with this important legislation.

Those words are nothing but empty words because we heard, in committee several witnesses of whom officials of the Department of Justice. According to me, those officials need not have come before the committee.

We should have heard technicians, specialists. However, it seems everything was done to interfere with them and keep them from speaking up.

They were told: We are not asking you to come here to tell us whether you are for or against the bill, but to get a scientific data. I am wondering if all those witnesses did not come in order to tell us whether the bill made any sense or not. Indeed, the words pronounced by the minister, Mr. Speaker, are just words. The minister does not tell us what really happened at the committee meetings. What happened there was probably intended since no one wanted to present true reports, and call true technicians, true doctors and true surgeons. They were granted patient attention and once the evidence they had to give was collected, that was that. We remained convinced they had to follow the orders given to them, that is, encourage the bill on abortion.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but I have been listening very carefully and it seems to me he is discussing matters which took place before the committee. I remind him that the debate at the moment should be on the amendment of his colleague the hon. member for Abitibi, which as I understand it deals with the definition of an accredited hospital. I would invite the hon. member to try to confine his remarks as much as possible to the specific amendment.

• (12:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I knew I was a little out of order. I was quoting a statement of the minister on the amendment but I must point out the decisions the Chair must take sometimes.

I am not blaming the Chair for allowing the minister to discuss what I am dealing with now. I was reading his speech and I was ruled out of order. You did not tell him that he was out of order when he made this statement. I quoted his words to prove to the house that when a minister has the floor, he is not treated the same way as an ordinary member.

I knew I was out of order, but I was quoting the words of the minister on this amendment.

I recognize that you are right Mr. Speaker, but you should not have allowed the minister to speak.

Some hon. Members: That is right.

Mr. Gauthier: However, he was allowed to speak. He is the minister. He has every right. That is why I quoted his comments.

I come back to the matter at issue: the 400-bed limit. I want the people to know that something is going on in the house that we cannot tolerate. We have been elected to let them know.

As for the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi on the 400-bed restriction, I think it is an approximation because we have failed in all our efforts to reduce the bad effects of the bill.

We could have put down 300 beds. This amendment is moved to prevent the establishment of abortion clubs. Even if abortion is legalized, we could at least prevent in small villages the creation of clubs made up of three physicians.

In connection with the legislation on homosexuality, the first social cub for homosexuals was widely advertised in Montreal under the banner of the Prime Minister. This is, Mr. Speaker, what we want to avoid.

We do not want, as suggested by the Minister of Justice, to bring discredit on our hospitals. I am wondering what he means by rural hospital? In my constituency, hospitals are all located in cities. He is not aware, I believe, that in the province of Quebec, there are hospitals in other cities besides Montreal. It looks as if the minister has not been around enough. There are no rural hospitals administered by farmers. Hospitals are in cities, not in rural areas. The minister should stop laughing at the people.

There are highly qualified doctors in city hospitals. Those doctors are objecting to such a disgrace since they find that 98 per cent of the population in our rural constituencies are against this bill.

Now, we want to prevent any misuse of the bill by limiting authorized abortion to 400 bed hospitals. As I said before, we want to prevent two or three doctors from forming a board and starting an abortion business, as it happened in England. The doctor who performs 62 abortions daily, for a fee of $300 each, makes a nice income! Just figure it out. And to think that doctors are the very ones who pay no income tax!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gauthier: Doctors are the very ones who pay no income tax! Many interesting things are brought to light. Indeed, it is precisely such abuse, that we want to prevent the establishment of human butchery clubs, by authorizing abortions only in 400 bed hospitals. Such a restriction would no doubt restrain the activity of quacks—I was going to say of freaks—who want to earn a living by commercializing abortion.

I am sure that if this amendment were passed, the population would feel more secure, for there is some fear, in my area and in others, that abortionists clubs will multiply as well as homosexual clubs.

It is being said that we are not legalizing abortion. Abortion like homosexuality is in fact, being legalized. Clubs will be established. England is presently facing such a problem. She is starting to impose restrictions to it.

Then, why are we told that it is not an important question, and that we are using filibustering tactics? In my opinion, if we are dealing with the future of the Canadian race, the matter is important.

I would like to see any minister give us proof of the contrary. When a law permits the extermination of a race, that is important. Abortionists are about to exterminate the Canadian race.

To populate Canada, we will have to send for Chinese and Japanese. Today, the birth rate has dropped by 60 per cent, and continues to fall. It is time that responsible men stand up and face those who never do.

Someone has just said that silence is golden. In my opinion, silence is outside, and we will soon be thrown out of our country, for want of population, because of the legislation we pass and which is designed to destroy the Canadian population.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I will vote in favour of this amendment. It is not perfect. It would have been better not to introduce the bill, which contains a lot of stinking clauses. It is not pleasant to talk about this. It is disgusting, but we have to do it.

We must repeat what the Canadian people are telling us. It is imperative that a small group of members make the views of decent people publicly known. Once more this is why I shall vote in favour of the amendment.

If today the government had voted in favour of the motion presented earlier, we could have started dealing with another subject, leaving to doctors the discussion of this matter.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I had not anticipated to take part in this debate, but considering the turn of events and the views expressed in the house, I think it is my duty to intervene in connection with the proposed amendment moved by my colleague the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) and so well defended by most of my colleagues.

It is to be noted that our opponents, mostly the Liberal members, are trying to hold up to ridicule our efforts to stop the passage of this bill's clauses by saying, for instance, that we are doctors, that we possess great knowledge in medicine.

• (12:50 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, at this point I must call to the attention of the house and of the minister that this amendment to Bill C-150, proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi, says the following:

"For the purpose of this section an accredited hospital means a hospital containing not less than four hundred (400) beds and/or forming part of a university, in order that the therapeutic abortion committee may execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics."

The fact of presenting an amendment on a minimum of 400 beds does not mean that we accept the principle of the bill. All hon. members know that we are opposed to the parts of the bill related to abortion and homosexuality.

This amendment was proposed after conversations with Dr. Jutras, a pediatrician, of Victoriaville.

Dr. Jutras said to us and rightly so, and I quote:

"We want these therapeutic abortions to be performed only in large centres and not in small communities where everybody knows everybody else, so that people will not be able to point at well-known and highly respected doctor as being a professional abortionist. The purpose is also to preserve the identity of pregnant women who would wish to get an abortion.

That is the statement of Dr. Jutras who is himself opposed to this bill. However, to counteract the nefarious effects of this bill, we suggest a hospital with at least 400 beds because we believe that in big hospitals, the equipment, the training, the organization make it easier to deal with these things. I refer to the evidence given by the representative of the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards on this bill. It was then Bill C-195. However, the same remarks apply to Bill C-150. Here they are:

The therapeutic abortion committees mentioned in this bill should exist only in hospitals where there is a sufficient number of physicians and consultants in each department so that the decision arrived at may be the result of a just and impartial evaluation.

Those people are not members of Parliament but nevertheless they watch closely government legislation and proposals.

Mr. Speaker, our amendment to allow abortion in special cases in hospitals containing not less than 400 beds, as Dr. Jutras pointed out, will eliminate in my opinion possibilities of gossips and bickering in small localities. That does not mean that rural hospitals are no good and my hon. colleague from Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) has well emphasized that point. Nevertheless, one must recognize that hospitals in cities like Rouyn, Noranda, Chicoutimi or even other cities less important than Montreal, Quebec, Trois-Rivières, Sherbrooke, are not as well equipped as the others.

Mr. Speaker, in order to show this amendment is approved by many people from outside Parliament, I received this morning a telegram from Montreal—not from the constituency of Ottawa-Carleton, but from Montreal, where the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) used to live—which reads as follows:

We Liberals support your stand on omnibus bill.
Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Murphy
9729, boul. Rivière-des-Prairies
Montréal

I quote the name as the minister may know those people who are still Liberals. Those people support our objections against this bill.

Now, even where admission in a hospital is concerned, why not consult the people, by means of referendum?

We, from the Ralliement Créditiste, we have a basic principle under which we do not just limit ourselves to talking about the Bank of Canada. People charge us with having a bee in our bonnet which goes on bumbling about the Bank of Canada. Our basic principle is that the government is meant to serve the individual. The main duty of a democratic government, is to rule the country according to the will of the citizens.

In the present circumstances, the people have not been consulted, but rather the government wants to impose its will on the people which is contrary to the principles of democracy.

I am utterly dumbfounded, when I see the members of the New Democratic Party loudly calling: democracy, democracy! What are they doing, in practice? They object to a referendum through which the opinion of the people on this bill might be known.

Mr. Speaker, why are they so afraid? Because we are not the only ones to object. No later than yesterday, the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) was saying that he had received no request, whatsoever. What about this request bearing 6,000 signatures, and that other one with more than 70,000 names protesting against this bill as well as against the article presently under discussion.

Mr. Speaker, I will be told that we are drifting away from the amendment now before the house, but our arguments do concern it, and they are all intended to prevent the spread across our land of this abomination the government proposes through Bill C-150.

Mr. Speaker, a while ago an hon. member mentioned—and you called him back to order—the resignation of the president of the Liberal Association in Ottawa-Carleton, the riding of the minister. Mr. McGuinty is a close friend of the minister's; the minister tells us that he is a philosopher, a doctor of philosophy. If he is a philosopher, that is because he has common sense for, indeed, philosophy is good common sense. That is why he quit the Liberal party.

Mr. Speaker, what Mr. McGuinty says—

Mr. Paul Langlois (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Public Works): You would be willing to accept him—

Mr. Caouette: Of course, we would accept him in our ranks as a philosopher, but we certainly would not accept the member for Chicoutimi in the same capacity.

Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Langlois: There is not much danger—

Mr. Caouette: I know there is not much danger of it. The hon. member for Chicoutimi is especially good at playing Santa Claus during the Christmas season.

Mr. Speaker, may I call it one o'clock?

[English]

At one o'clock the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 2 p.m.

[Translation]

• (2:10 p.m.)

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, before the adjournment at one o'clock, I was saying that my friend from Abitibi, Mr. Laprise, had moved an amendment tending to authorize the practice of abortion only in 400 bed hospitals, and I quote > —in order that the therapeutic abortion committee may execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics.

Mr. Speaker, we have been accused of holding up the proceedings of the house, of objecting to this bill or to the introduction of amendments, merely to play politics.

But the other day, when the member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) told me: Your attitude will not bring you any votes, I asked him since when he was interested in our winning votes in the province of Quebec or elsewhere in Canada.

The other day, the member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) also accused the Ralliement Créditiste of filibustering with regard to the clause of Bill C-150 about the eligibility of hospitals, for example. As usual, the member for Trois-Rivières, taking to task the Ralliement Créditiste, acted like a fool and talked through his hat.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the proposed amendments is not to express our approval of the bill, even if it were amended, but rather —and I shall be quite frank with the house—to prevent, as long as possible, the passage of this bill. By so doing, we give the opportunity to associations, in Quebec as well as in the rest of Canada, to submit petitions and to bring pressure to bear on the government in order to prevent it from making too hasty a decision on a matter so big with consequences. That is the main purpose of our amendments.

Mr. Speaker, we readily admit that far more important and urgent subjects should be debated in parliament at this time, and we do not object to the government taking it upon itself to postpone the study of this Bill C-150 so as to enable the house to discuss other more important problems, such as unemployment and the plight of western as well as of eastern farmers. There are urgent problems that must be settled. And the Créditistes will be accused of delaying tactics because of their amendments to Bill C-150.

Mr. Speaker, we are going to discuss the amendments. We are dealing with the amendment relating to the number of hospital beds, after which we shall study another amendment dealing with something else. When we have gone through all the amendments, Mr. Speaker, we will reach the stage of the third reading of the bill. There are 14 of us and we shall deliver 14 speeches because the government would not give various Canadian organizations the opportunity to submit their intentions and their suggestions.

We demand that a hospital should have at least 400 beds in order to be accredited, according to the clause of the Bill.

We say again we repeat that we do not endorse the bill for all that. We want to minimize as much as possible the disastrous effects of the bill. If we are successful, we shall have rendered the people a service all the same. I only speak on behalf of my colleagues of the Ralliement Créditiste.

During the lunch hour, I had a phone call from Montreal, not from a Créditiste, but from Mr. Morois, a notary. I do not know him. I think he is the president of an association of Catholic parents in Montreal. He congratulates us on the stand we are taking in the house. We are not asking the notary if he is going to vote for us or not. We do not care about that.

We are greatly concerned, however, about the bill before us. Are we going to impose a legislation, even against the will of the people, across the country?

There is an old fable of La Fontaine about animals sick of the plague. I am wondering if we might not apply it to this government as regards Bill C-150.

In any case, Mr. Speaker, we have this amendment before us. We are opposed to the idea that, if this bill is passed, any hospital in Canada can be accredited.

We are sticking to our opinions concerning this amendment. We are surprised that members who consider themselves to be very democratic do not suggest that we go before the people in order to find out if they are in favour of the bill or not.

We are convinced that catholics, protestants, and people of other creeds are happy to see us adopt this attitude here. It is not as Créditistes that we have done so. It is not in the name of the Ralliement Créditiste that we have adopted that attitude, but in the name of Christian morals—for those of us who are Christians—and in the name of the Canadian people, which we must serve and not enslave, as is being done now.

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): I regret very much not to have been able, before today, to speak in this house in support of my colleagues of the Ralliement créditiste and object, as did all the others who took part in this debate, to the clauses concerning homosexuality and abortion in Bill C-150 to amend the Criminal Code.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I was unable to do so because of an absence of several days from the house; in fact, the committee on fisheries and forestry, of which I am a member, went to Vancouver, Victoria and several other cities in western Canada, to investigate problems in those fields.

• (2:20 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support the amendment moved by my colleague the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), which reads as follows:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting paragraph (a) of sub-section 6 of clause 18 on page 43 and substituting therefor:

"(a) For the purpose of this section, an accredited or approved hospital means a hospital containing not less than four hundred (400) beds and/or forming part of a university, in order that the therapeutic abortion committee may execute its functions in an atmosphere of perfect professional ethics."

I fully support that amendment which is of the utmost importance. I find it most important, because the matter at issue is to know whether the therapeutic abortion committees set up in hospitals will be able to consider and determine the opportunity of procuring the miscarriage of a female person, as the bill puts it.

This is why even large hospitals, with 400 beds or more, are concerned about the consequences of passing Bill C-150.

I recognize the importance of the amendment now before us; to illustrate my point, I would like to refer to a brief submitted by experts in hospital management. I am quoting:

The Canadian Association of Catholic Hospitals, representing the administrators of some 300 hospitals (making up about 35 per cent of all the hospital services offered to the Canadian public) recognizes the necessity of clarifying the present sections of the Criminal Code regarding abortion, but is opposed to proposals aiming to liberalize abortion.

This is why the necessary amendments to this law should not be adopted before the question as a whole has been thoroughly studied and before the government finds better ways to carry on research.

Our brief dealt mainly with the important question of administration that is to say with the real problem hospitals will have to face should Parliament hastily legalize, without having carefully considered all its possible implications, a practice which is not only considered repulsive by the majority of Canadians, but contrary to the common weal.

At present, the administrators of catholic hospitals follow rules of conduct which prohibit therapeutic abortion and therefore they cannot provide premises, equipment and staff for such ends.

Even though the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code do not make abortion mandatory but merely abolish all possible penalties in given circumstances, the conditions stipulated put the catholic hospitals in a new and extremely vulnerable position, since the provincial authorities can, under said amendments, require them to set up their own abortion committees.

I believe that point most important, since we have to decide on such a serious matter, in other words, whether abortion should be performed on a female person, and since the implications of such act can be very serious.

I have read evidence from several prominent doctors on abortion, as well as reports from doctors well aware of what goes on in hospitals at the present time. I should like to quote figures provided by Dr. Gregg Tompkins, who had this to say:

We have actively tried to discover the cases of therapeutic abortion. Their number varies according to localities. Very few in some centres, but quite numerous in others. In 1965, 17 therapeutic abortions were performed in Nova Scotia. In a maternity hospital where half of the deliveries occur, or which services about half of the province, three therapeutic abortions were performed.

Mr. Speaker, this quotes shows the difference between cases where abortion may be allowed and those where it must be refused.

I go on with the quotation:

In another locality about 70 miles away, where there are 500 deliveries a year, that is approximately one hundredth of the population, eight or ten therapeutic abortions are performed, I think. Now it is quite probable, I am sure, that those men have made such decisions in good faith, but it cannot be inferred that they were dealing with a proportion of the population where risks are greater than for the rest of it—

Here are Dr. Vant's figures, and I quote:

Dr. R. W. Lohner of Utah noted in a recent study effected over a 10 year period, that the frequency of therapeutic abortions in Salt Lake City was one out of 2,482 deliveries. He compared that figure with a frequency of one out of 160 over a 5 year period in Mount Sinai hospital in New York City and of one out of 6,416 over a ten year period, where there were 102,654 deliveries in the Los Angeles county hospital. He concluded that those figures reflect the mentality of the local people.

Dr. Patrick Beirne, of New York City, says this:

In New York City, two hospitals, a few streets away from one another, have abortion committees. In the first one, there is one therapeutic abortion per 16,000 deliveries. In the other, there is one abortion per 20 births.

It is most important to decide who, in the hospitals, should be appointed to such a committee. Therefore, committees are no guarantee that in our province serious consideration will be given as to whether or not abortion should be procured.

And I go on with the quotation:

One committee is not good enough. The matter should be cleared up, in my opinion.

On the other hand, Dr. Jack Walters says this:

If we consider the differences in the frequency of abortions in the world, we find that hospitals with the highest record of abortions are those that have the most lenient committees. In a hospital with 20,000 confinements a year, only a few abortions are procured to save the life of the mother. In another hospital with 10,000 confinements, there would be 40 times more abortions in a year and the difference is not in the frequency of these abortions, but in the fact that it is common knowledge that if sent to that hospital, a woman can procure her own miscarriage.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that for all those reasons I just mentioned, and especially on account of such evidence given by people who have several years' experience in New York hospitals and elsewhere, it is our duty to give this amendment the most careful consideration possible.

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi) moved motion No. 29:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting paragraph (f) of subsection 6 of clause 18 on page 44 and substituting therefor:

"(f) "therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee, comprised of not less than two qualified medical practitioners and one gynaecologist, appointed by the board of that hospital and approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned, for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

He said:

[Translation]

• (2:40 p.m.)

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, the amendment I am moving just now tends to amend paragraph (f) of sub-section 6 of clause 18 which reads as follows:

"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee, comprised of not less than three members each of whom is a qualified medical practitioner, appointed by the board of that hospital for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to termination of pregnancy within that hospital.

The amendment that I am moving states that the abortion committee for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than two qualified medical practitioners and one gynaecologist. The amendment moved by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) mentions three medical practitioners. Well, I move through my amendment, that out of these three medical practitioners, one gynaecologist should be appointed by the board of that hospital and approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned, for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

Mr. Speaker, in moving this amendment, I wish to point out that I am doing so, subject to the reservation that I object to the principle of abortion as proposed in Bill C-150.

I am therefore moving a new amendment to clause 18 in case that clause would not be rejected, and I want my position to be well understood.

The object of this amendment is to specify the nature of an abortion committee and to provide that the College of Physicians and Surgeons will have to approve the establishment of such committee. It will not only be the authorities of the hospital but the College of Physicians and Surgeons in each province which will be called to approve the establishment of each committee. The amendment also states that the committee will have to include a gynaecologist, that is a specialist in gynaecology which Larousse defines as the science of morphology, physiology, pathology and psychology of women.

Mr. Speaker, this is why we are asking that a gynaecologist be included in the therapeutic abortion committee, if such a committee is appointed and provided, of course, that Bill C-150 is passed in its present form.

Mr. Speaker, if we want that a gynaecologist be included in the group of three physicians which will be called to decide whether an abortion will be performed, it is to make sure as much as possible that they will take a serious decision.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment which I have moved is not my own, since I have introduced it on the request of gynaecologists who want to assure the presence of a specialist in the abortion committee.

Since Bill C-150 provides for the legalization of abortion in order to protect the mother's life, a small abortion committee will have the authority to decide whether the abortion will be performed. Finally, if the law is adopted in its present form it will enable two physicians within a three-member committee to authorize abortions as they see fit.

Mr. Speaker, considering how easy it will be for a small group of physicians to decide whether or not a being meant to live should be destructed, often in compliance with the fancy of some women, we do not hesitate to oppose the bill. We must face the fact: under the legislation presently before us, some women and young girls have the definite impression that abortion will be legally and readily authorized. That is why we insist that a gynaecologist be on the committee, because we know such a person has made extensive studies regarding the function of giving birth to children. All doctors do not know the matter as well, not even obstetricians.

According to some gynaecologists, this section of the medical science has greatly improved particularly in the last ten years. Studies have been made and others are underway, and the findings are surprising. It is becoming always easier to treat all diseases affecting pregnant women.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, they cannot be entrusted to doctors who are not fully qualified to treat women's diseases at the time of delivery or during pregnancy.

We have received many testimonies in this connection. To support my views I shall quote part of an article by Mrs. Claire Campbell in the February 1968 issue of Relations:

> Dr. Kaseki, a famed gynaecologist at Nagoya, Japan (known as the abortion land), made a survey among 525 women who had resorted to a therapeutic abortion. He found out that 73 per cent had felt anguished after abortion. Another inquiry revealed that out of 253 married women on whom a therapeutic abortion had been performed, 92 per cent felt the pangs of remorse. In addition, a survey conducted by a Mainichi newspaper produced 1,026 replies: 68 per cent said that abortion was intrinsically wrong and that they missed the child that had been destroyed.

We find that gynaecologists everywhere have made studies not only in an attempt to find a cure for diseases likely to affect expectant mothers, but also to learn more about the effects of abortions.

And we know, Mr. Speaker, that one cannot take a green fruit from a tree without injuring the branch itself. The very same thing applies to abortions. It has been proved by gynaecologists that childbirth is a natural process which, if terminated before maturity, affects the woman.

I feel it is important and necessary to look fully into those matters before accepting clause 18 as proposed by the Minister of Justice.

In support of my arguments, I shall quote part of Dr. Légaré's evidence—Dr. Légaré is another gynaecologist—when he appeared before the committee on justice and legal affairs on March 25, 1969.

I refer to page 622 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the committee, and I quote:

> I mentioned these matters a while ago, and of course, it is difficult to judge the value of our brief, but I was very careful to stick to the question in so far as the indications are concerned. As to these indications, I think that the comparison of the life of the foetus against the health of the mother is difficult to make in certain particularly questionable fields. I would accept therapeutic abortion in certain cases, where it is one life against another.
>
> For instance, I mentioned certain inoperable mitral stenoses, certain cases of renal insufficiency, especially those following chronic nephrites, and not those which are caused by acute phenomena, which are called acute glomerulonephrites, which can be fairly well treated with modern medication.
> But, as I stated, these cases should become more and more rare, because medicine is developing and progressing and we are finding more potent medication to treat these illnesses without having to have recourse to therapeutic abortion.

We have here another gynaecologist who testifies that cases where therapeutic abortion is necessary are very rare, because of the progress of medical science. That is why I deem it important that a gynaecologist be a member of the therapeutic committee. The hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) asked Dr. Légaré if, in his opinion and I quote:

> —according to your medical knowledge, are there cases of therapeutic abortion which are absolutely necessary?

Dr. Légaré answered:

> I must say that I have never come across any, but I do not have too much experience in this. I have been practising obstetrics for 13 years only.

To my mind, Dr. Légaré is extremely modest in this regard, for 13 years' experience is quite a lot. I resume my quotation:

> However, I think there could be doubtful cases, and to come back to that subject, I do not know if this suggestion to amend the Act is prudent or not, but it seems to me that it is not worthwhile upsetting the legislation, which might be risky, when the serious cases are covered at the present time.

Dr. Légaré does say that the present act, even before being modified, does cover—as he says—the few cases that can occur, because in almost every case the necessary medication and care can be given to restore the health of the mother and enable her to see her pregnancy through.

Mr. Rondeau followed with another question, and I quote:

In your experience has it ever happened that you had to perform therapeutic abortion as the ultimate means of saving the life of the mother?

The member for Shefford wanted specific information in this case. Here is Dr. Légaré's reply:

No, not personally. I come back to the evidence of Mrs. MacInnis—I am probably influenced, and even as a last resort, I do not have the right to resort to this. I multiply all the "other" means to solve these problems. But I think that, in fact, the problem can be discussed on the basis of statistics. Let us compare the statistics of places where therapeutic abortion is practised with those of places where it is not practised—

My colleague from Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin) gave statistics a while ago which show that there is a difference between those places where therapeutic abortions are practised and those where they are not.

—and check the results. This is where we shall be able to judge, according to whether the results are identical, higher or lower.

• (2:50 p.m.)

This can be proved by figures and not through philosophical arguments, you are right. But these are very infrequent cases—

And Dr. Légaré emphasized this aspect in almost every answer to questions that were asked him.

Mr. Rondeau got back to the matter again and I quote:

The therapeutic abortion committee that will have to decide in what cases there should be an abortion, could not this committee still be subject to medical error?

Dr. Légaré answered:

Yes, of course. Any human being can make a medical error, and that is why at the end of my brief I mentioned that the death penalty has been abolished because of the possibility of a miscarriage of justice and out of humanitarianism. We ourselves must be at least as humble as the judges and accept that we can make mistakes, that even a committee can make mistakes. And a life is at stake. This may be a matter of opinion but as far as we are concerned a life is at stake at the very outset.

Not at the moment of delivery in due time, but at the very outset.

Mr. Rondeau then asked another question and I quote:

Does medical progress call for abortion or does it not rather make it unnecessary?

Dr. Légaré answered:

There are a great number of indications, some that I have not even mentioned, that are now of lesser importance. Take for instance, uncontrollable vomiting, vomiting at the beginning of pregnancy on which medication had no effect. A woman could die from this or suffer an acute atrophy of the liver but this no longer happens because of serums and all the various means we have to maintain a patient's balance. These indications are no longer of first importance.

So, Mr. Speaker, these indications demonstrate the necessity to have one gynaecologist on such therapeutic abortion committee. Dr. Légaré went further to say:

Other indications which I mentioned are less important today because of progress. For instance, from the viewpoint of cardiology, there are fewer indications than previously. It is normal, I think, that as medicine progresses, it becomes increasingly medical instead of surgical.

So I think that this statement from Dr. Légaré indicates that there is a possibility in nearly all cases to find a solution, and even a cure, through medical treatments rather than surgery.

So Mr. Speaker, those are indications in favour of my amendment. I am more and more convinced that this amendment is valid and that it should be accepted by the Minister of Justice, to insure that a gynaecologist will be on this therapeutic committee and that every guarantee is obtained as to the decision to practise an abortion or not. Such decision must be taken wisely and with as few mistakes as possible.

So I think we are playing with the life of foetus, who can expect to live, and we should not neglect anything so that they will be born. We have evidence indicating that with today's medical knowledge most of those difficult pregnancies can be continued. This is what happens.

So for these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister of Justice should accept this amendment, as there is no doubt that it is really needed.

[English]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, although in committee we were able to accept well over 20 amendments, the government, as you know, is supporting the committee report participated in by members of the house from all political parties. We have to support the committee on this particular measure and reject the amendment just spoken to by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise). His proposal would inject the requirement that members of a therapeutic abortion committee of a hospital be approved by the provincial College of Physicians and Surgeons; it would also specify that at least one member of the committee be a gynaecologist.

In this as in other areas of medical practice, the responsibility for appointments should be with the board charged with the control and management of the hospital. In our view, to require approval by the provincial College of Physicians and Surgeons would constitute an unwarranted reflection on the good faith and competence of the boards of hospitals which are either accredited or approved as defined in the bill. After all, we are dealing with hospitals that are accredited or approved. An accredited hospital, in the bill, means a hospital accredited by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, and an approved hospital means a hospital in a province approved by the minister of health of that province.

We believe that the qualification of the hospital by either the medical profession itself or by the provincial minister of health is sufficient to maintain the standard of professional conduct we believe is required for the purpose of the bill. For that reason we have to recommend to the house that the hon. member's amendment be rejected.

• (3:00 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I feel compelled to speak on this amendment, because I realize that the hon. minister does not know what to say.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to have a correction made to the French Orders of the Day on page (i) concerning the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise). I quote:

—be amended by deleting paragraph (f) of subsection 6—

There is no such thing in the bill as a paragraph (f) in section 18. The "therapeutic abortion committee" is defined in paragraph (e), not paragraph (f). I presume, Mr. Speaker, that it must be a misprint.

To prevent my hon. colleagues of the government party from making a mistake when they vote, I would like this correction to be made.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to make a few comparisons for the minister's benefit and I would ask him to listen carefully to our remarks; he may be in a position to change his mind after that, since what he said in the speech he just made relates neither to the bill, nor to the amendment nor to what the hon. member for Abitibi said.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

Clause 18 (6) (e) of the bill defines "therapeutic abortion committee" as follows:

"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee, comprised of not less than three members each of whom is a qualified medical practitioner, appointed by the board of that hospital for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

However, this amendment gives another definition of "therapeutic abortion committee". In fact, the hon. member for Abitibi makes only two new suggestions. The committee would still be comprised of three members, but whilst according to the minister's proposal, these members would be three qualified medical practitioners appointed by the board of the hospital, in the proposal of the hon. member for Abitibi, one of the three qualified medical practitioners would be a gynaecologist. The amendment proposed by the hon. member stipulates also, as this is not in the bill, and I am quoting:

—approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned.

Why? Obviously because in our medical legislation the provisions differ from one province to another and that a certain latitude must therefore be provided.

Secondly, we should ensure that appointments of committee members are approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned. This seems quite logical and normal to me. However, the minister does not accept a gynaecologist on the therapeutic abortion committee, in spite of the fact that he himself proposes three doctors on the committee, not necessarily gynaecologists.

Mr. Speaker, I fail to understand why the minister's argument is so narrow and why he cannot admit that a gynaecologist would have his place on a therapeutic abortion committee. It seems to me that if you wish to have the automatic transmission of a car repaired, you do not go to the dentist but rather to a mechanic specialized in the repair of automatic transmissions. When you suffer from a headache, you could take the medical advice of the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle), but if it is a serious illness, you would see a specialist in that field, which is normal, in my opinion.

If a cancer patient went to seek medical advice from the hon. member for Hull, he would say: "I know more competent people than myself to treat that illness." Now, prompted by his professional conscience, the hon. member for Hull would send his patient to a specialist in that field.

In fact, specialization is everywhere today. There are pediatricians, gynaecologists, general practitioners, psychiatrists, specialists in political illnesses who could treat those of the Liberal party for example. This is why certain philosophers and physicians are resigning.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that each patient consults a specialist, according to the nature of his illness, because he will obtain a more adequate treatment. That is why we feel we must enlighten the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) in his consideration of abortion because he is not himself a specialist in this field. Experts in different areas must help each other. That is the reason why we take part in this debate.

The minister said earlier—I am sorry he is not here to take note of what we are telling him—that the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi was contrary to the views of the medical board. I think the opposite is true, because the amendment stipulates and I quote:

—approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons—

There is the word "approved", which indicates that there is no intention to make doctors fight against the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Yet, that is what the minister was suggesting earlier. He is wrong because the text says clearly, and I quote:

—appointed by the board of that hospital and approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons—

I do not find anything extraordinary in that and I cannot see how the minister can read the opposite of what is written.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi states two particular points, since it is necessary to repeat it. In short, it is a matter of defining what is a therapeutic abortion committee.

To analyse further the amendment and to explain the reasons why I support it unreservedly, I would like to remind the minister and his colleagues that the therapeutic committees, which are proposed for hospitals where abortion will be performed, that is all hospitals without exception, are the keystone of the entire law on abortion.

In fact, the whole question of abortion is based on the establishment of those famous therapeutic abortion committees. One understands right away the importance of a definition of the words "therapeutic abortion committee". Here, the question is not to define minor words used in the bill, but the very essence of the bill itself. In short, we have to make clear who will be responsible for the administration of the act, consequently for safeguarding the mother's life, it possible, and for enforcing the code of professional ethics.

Mr. Speaker, I could hardly imagine a dentist—since no definition is given of the "medical practitioner" performing an abortion; however, that might well happen if no such definition is available in the bill.

That is why we would like the words "qualified medical practitioner" to be clarified as meaning an expert in that field, as recommended by Dr. Légaré, from Quebec City, according to No. 13 of the minutes of the proceedings of the committee. He felt that the government should guarantee that the therapeutic abortion committee will include a gynaecologist.

Mr. Speaker, I believe this is a sound amendment and I cannot understand why it would be rejected.

I am coming back to this amendment to say that a therapeutic abortion committee means, and this is the definition suggested by the hon. member for Abitibi, and I quote:

—a committee comprised of not less than two qualified medical practitioners and one gynaecologist—

Well, the act states this:

• (3:10 p.m.)

—means a committee comprised of not less than three members—

And we, in this party, say:

—a committee comprised of not less than two qualified medical practitioners and one gynaecologist—

This is the first difference with which I dealt earlier. In other words, we accept the proposal that the committee shall comprise three medical practitioners, but we say that one of them shall be a gynaecologist.

I continue to quote the clause of the bill:

—each of whom is a qualified medical practitioner—

Therefore, it conforms with the definition.

—appointed by the board of that hospital—

Well, in our amendment, we say:

—appointed by the board of that hospital—

So, there is no difference at all, which means that Liberals can be Creditists or that Creditists can be Liberals.

—for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

As for us, we say:

—for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

Now, before that we have simply added:

—and approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned—

In my opinion, it is obvious, Mr. Speaker, that this proposal is clear and merely clarifies subclause (f) of the bill which stipulates that a therapeutic abortion committee must be established with a view to determining who will be appointed to it.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask those who are more familiar than we are with such matters why a gynaecologist should not sit on such a committee to supervise the operation required to perform an abortion.

I should be most happy to have the opinion of the hon. member for Hull, who is a capable doctor, on this matter.

In Hull, this morning, I met a few of his close friends. We were precisely talking of the important job he was doing as chairman of the health, welfare and social affairs committee, for which I commend him. But these same people were wondering, however, what he was doing regarding abortion.

Mr. Speaker, I should like him to answer that question himself and say why a gynaecologist should not sit on such a committee.

The object of this amendment is to specify the nature of an abortion committee and to stipulate that its membership must be approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons. According to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), the committee must include a gynaecologist, that is a doctor who has specialized in gynaecology, which Larousse defines as the science of the morphology, the physiology, the pathology and the psychology of women, or as a branch of medicine having to do with the diseases of women.

That is why we are asking that a gynaecologist be included among the members of the therapeutic committee.

Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to go further, but I would like to remind the house that consideration of this point is of the utmost importance.

Mr. Speaker, we are in agreement and we wish to make a positive contribution to the drafting of the legislation. One must admit that this is a very simple amendment, which is nevertheless important and essential in order that all persons seeking an abortion be ensured at least of adequate care and the help of specialists.

I dare not hope, however, that the amendment will be adopted; I would be very much surprised if it were, because they are so determined to have the omnibus bill passed at all costs that they are even ready to make it retroactive.

The logic of that clause is thus laid bare, and I blame the house for not saying anything. Indeed, this amendment calls for comments. I think the members of the New Democratic Party, who are true blue socialists and idealists, whose abode is in the clouds, should practice democracy and as they preach it and express their point of view. Whether we approve or blame the government is irrelevant; we want to know if people who apply to a doctor and whose case will be settled by the therapeutic abortion committee, will be treated by specialists or by unqualified persons. That is the gist of the matter, Mr. Speaker.

I am loath to believe that our older colleagues, whose white hair should command respect, do not have enough courage, nor firm enough convictions or ideas to stand up and be counted, to tell us whether or not they agree on a more adequate membership for the therapeutic committees. But no, they seem to be seated on six inches of Lepage's glue, and we do not hear a peep out of them—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please.

Mr. Fortin: And the members of the Ralliement Créditiste have—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

The hon. member had made a good start, and I would ask him to round up his remarks in the same vein.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for appreciating what is said and how it is said.

I shall close my remarks by saying that the atmosphere which prevails in this house is rather discouraging. If our constituents could see us, I feel that long ago we would have been left without a government, since the whole building would have been blown to smithereens.

From a medical standpoint, abortion means the expulsion, natural or caused, outside the uterus, of the product of conception.

There are two kinds of abortions. First, there is the abortion called a miscarriage, which is a natural phenomenon over which the human will has no power. That is not the one we are concerned with.

But there is also the voluntary abortion, which causes the expulsion of a live foetus. There can be no doubt that it is a human being, a living being. The expulsion is produced for different motives or reasons.

I would go even further, Mr. Speaker, and suggest that there should be a psychiatrist on the therapeutic abortion committee to study the motives of the women asking for an abortion.

I think that the hon. member for Abitibi does not go far enough.

At least one psychiatrist should be on this committee to examine the reasons which prompt a woman to ask for an abortion and show that there may be other means than the removal of the foetus from the uterus to solve her problem.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, the establishment of therapeutic committees is the cornerstone of this legislation—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

Mr. Fortin: —which asks—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Does the house agree to the hon. member continuing?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Isabelle: Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the hon. member.

• (3:20 p.m.)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The time allotted to the hon. member having expired, the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) will have to get the unanimous consent of the house to put a question to the hon. member.

Does the house allow that the hon. member to put a question to the hon. member for Lotbinière?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Isabelle: Mr. Speaker, I am rising both on a question of privilege and on a point of order. The member for Hull was mentioned regarding consultations for headaches. It was also suggested that the hon. old white-haired members of the house seem reluctant to act wisely.

In reply, I shall say that at our age, we still have our own hair and that if the hon. member continues to speak like this, he will not have any hair left in five years from now.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Hull on a point of order.

Mr. Isabelle: I rise again on a question of privilege.

If it is necessary to appoint a gynaecologist on the abortion committee, I do not believe that it has to be specified. I hope the hospital trustees will ensure that this specialty will be represented within the committee. On the other hand, I would like to say that in listening to speeches like those we have listened to for a week, I think that these people should consult a proctologist.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière rises on a point of order.

Mr. Fortin: The house gave unanimous consent to the hon. member for Hull to ask me a question, so I should be given unanimous consent to answer him.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Hull rises on a question of privilege.

Before I give the floor to the next speaker, I might say that the hon. member for Lotbinière, in opening his remarks, pointed out an error on page (i) of the order paper. He might perhaps point it out again to allow the Chair to decide whether there is an error or not.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. However, I realized during the debate that I had the first version of the omnibus bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Chair, having looked at Bill C-150, finds that there really is a paragraph (f).

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Lotbinière on a question of privilege.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege.

I felt the remarks of the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) were aimed directly at me. He hopes that I will lose my hair. I think that it would be more important to ask ourselves—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I think this is turning into a debate, which is out of order.

[English]

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, I believe in giving credit where credit is due, even when this means giving credit to the Creditistes. I have listened, as have all other hon. members, with considerable admiration to the members of that party in this house speaking in support of the moral issues involved in this legislation. As the leader of the Creditistes party said a moment ago, they have not taken that stand on a partisan basis; they have taken their stand on the common, ethical and moral grounds with which we can all agree. There is a moral factor involved in these questions, regardless of what hon. members opposite may say, and my hon. friends to my left at the far end of the chamber can be congratulated on bringing it out.

They represent a viewpoint common to many Canadians, regardless of which language they speak. Many issues of a similar nature have been raised where common ground exists, regardless of language or province of origin. My hon. friends have done us a tremendous service in bringing these matters forward. Certainly, some of the matters they have raised are worthy of our consideration. Are we to compel doctors to perform abortions against their will or to serve on abortion committees when they do not wish to do so? These provisions are like many others being brought forward as part of the attempt to establish a permissive society. The accumulated wisdom of peoples shows that laws like the present one do not work. They are divisive, they destroy and tear apart the fabric of society.

Consider for a moment, Mr. Speaker, what kind of society we shall have if we introduce relaxed divorce laws, if we permit abortions to take place, the smoking of marijuana and homosexuality. Why, it will be just one long, swinging ball. But do you build a nation and defend freedom by lowering the barriers against vice?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I hope the hon. member is coming to the point. I point out to him that we are considering a specific motion to amend a clause in Bill C-150, and I ask him to restrict his remarks to that motion.

[Mr. Fortin.]

Mr. Paproski: Mr. Speaker, I will come to the point. Next, we may expect the government to introduce a law legalizing graft and corruption.

During the debate on abortion, we have heard a great deal about permissiveness and the just society. Well, you cannot have justice for the few. After the legislation concerning abortion has been passed, we shall have a situation in which doctors will no longer be allowed discretion in refusing to perform abortions. On what grounds, Mr. Speaker, can a medical committee in a hospital refuse to grant an abortion? Will the grounds cover the mother's physical or mental health? These are so nebulous that, like charity, they cover a multitude of sins.

I submit that once you remove the child's basic right to live you have no leg to stand on in refusing abortions. I ask hon. gentlemen in this chamber this question: Do they honestly think that once this legislation becomes law, once this chamber has approved the principle of abortion, those demanding abortions will be satisfied with a simple "no"? They will not be so satisfied, and that has been the experience in countries like Japan, where abortions are allowed. In those countries it has been found in practice that the mere, simple request for an abortion is enough. The person requesting one obtains one.

• (3:30 p.m.)

Some will say, what is wrong with that? Actually, those favouring this legislation see nothing wrong with abortion as such; nor are they disturbed at the idea of abortions being as widespread as vaccinations are. Many of the advocates of this legislation would have adopted a position far more in line with their real views if they had said, "We favour abortion because there is nothing wrong with it." They simply do not believe in the rights of the unborn. They did not, however, say this, because if they had they would have trampled on the dearly held convictions of many thousands of Canadians of various religious denominations who hold that human life is sacred. Those who favour abortion laws leave out of their consideration entirely the rights of the child. A simple test will show that I am right. How many abortions would there be if the child had a say in the matter? Not very many.

There is a deep moral issue behind all the verbiage we have heard on this matter, that issue being the right to life. The unborn child has not illegitimately taken the life of another. The child has not transgressed any law. It wants to be born and under this legislation this becomes a crime.

With that closeness they have to the ordinary men and women of their province, my hon. friends at the end of the chamber to my left have determined the feelings of ordinary Canadians. They have raised this issue as a moral issue and that is the basis on which it must be approached. The framers of this legislation have chosen to ignore the history of experience and the wisdom of other nations.

We face the same problem with marijuana. Certain persons in this country are acting as though narcotics appeared only yesterday in our society. This shows a naïvety, Mr. Speaker, that among supposedly responsible persons is almost unbelievable. The nations of Asia have had a thousand years of experience with the anti-social and destructive effects of such narcotics and have seen fit to outlaw them, with very severe penalties for those breaking the law. In 1969 marijuana was outlawed in India, not for ideological reasons, but simply because the drug had a destructive and catastrophic impact on society.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I must interrupt the hon. member to remind him that his comments at this time ought to be related to the specific motion now before the house. I know the hon. member has followed this debate closely during the last few days and realizes that, on a number of occasions, the Chair has invited hon. members to limit their contributions to the specific motion being considered. If the hon. member is allowed to disregard that rule of relevancy, other hon. members must also be given similar treatment, and we might as well be prepared to stay here until Christmas.

I suggest to the hon. member that there will be other opportunities to make general speeches on abortion. Having said that, I hope the hon. member will now try to relate his remarks to the motion moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) which deals with therapeutic abortion committees.

Mr. Paproski: Mr. Speaker, may I just say this in closing? I cannot help thinking that all these initiatives of the so-called just society or permissive society have one thing in common. If carried out unchecked they will completely destroy society. That is why the older civilizations ruled out such things. The consequences will be on the heads of the members of the government. I will say nothing else.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, we are studying an amendment much similar to the one that follows, which refers more specifically to the famous hospital committees and requires greater guarantee than is offered in the present bill.

The hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) has just confirmed our assertions, for instance, that he would like to see a gynaecologist on those committees. We are not here to rely on what others will do. We must draft clear, definite and precise laws. If we admit that gynaecologists are the best experts in this field, we must not approve legislation which, at best, expresses the hope that a gynaecologist will be a member of those hospital committees.

The act should say "two doctors and a gynaecologist". In this connection, I agree with the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) who feels that the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) is still not definite enough, even if it stipulates that a gynaecologist must be a member of the committee. That is certainly not asking too much, because the bill could be much more strict than it is presently even with the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi.

Even in the latter case, the only guarantee would be that a gynaecologist would be a member of the committee on which there would still be some doctors, the majority of them actually, who are not gynaecologists and who could always reverse the decision, whether positive or negative, of the gynaecologist.

On this I am not referring to the expert witnesses we called, but to other witnesses called on the suggestion of members of the other parties. I am not questioning the value of the witnesses called; they were serious and knowledgeable. I am speaking here of Dr. George B. Maughan, chief obstetrician and gynaecologist of the Royal Victoria Hospital of Montreal, who is a highly competent gynaecologist, and who said, as may be seen at page 555 of the minutes of proceedings of the committee that even if two doctors told him to "shoot" a foetus, the doctors were making the decision but not the operation. It was in fact the gynaecologist who had to practise the abortion. As a result, he said:

It is nice to ask somebody else to take decisions when you do not have to do the work.

Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to interrupt my remarks but I notice that we have no quorum.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): I would ask the clerk of the house to take the count of the hon. members present to determine if we have a quorum.

The count having been taken, I believe that we have a quorum.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, it is a good thing that some members are staying close.

Dr. Maughan, on page 570 of the minutes of the proceedings, said the following in reply to a question asked by the member for Peel-South (Mr. Chappell). First, here is the question:

> Now, my question is: Do you not think quite a few doctors would feel better if it were written out that it was legal for them to do it and not to have that shadow of guilt hanging over them?

Here is Dr. Maughan's reply:

> I fully agree with you and I might add that the gynaecologist is the trigger man in this thing. He is the one who commits the murder. It is all right for the psychiatrist, or the internist, or the cardiologist to say: "Stand up and shoot that guy".

It is the gynaecologist who, finally, will have to perform the operation.

That is why we want the act to be more specific, if the gynaecologist is to do the work. Nothing in the act guarantees that the gynaecologist will have to take part in the decision before performing the operation. That is why we feel that the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi is excellent, even though it does not demand very much. We want the hospital committees to be protected, with regard to the competence of those who will make the decision and perform the operation.

This bill is odious. We regret that the government did not support this morning the motion for adjournment of this debate. We could have gone on to more pressing things.

Mr. Speaker, this bill says, for instance, that abortion must be performed. So, the therapeutic abortion committee will have to study the reasons for which the doctors will have to procure an abortion.

All the doctors and specialists who testified before the committee on justice and legal affairs told us that abortions cause more illnesses than they prevent. This means that by performing abortions we will increase the social problems. The health of our people is supposed to be protected, but by procuring abortions to all those who will request them, for health reasons, we will in fact be endangering their health.

Several doctors, several psychiatrists have proved beyond a doubt that when a woman has been aborted, a feeling of guilt seizes her, not a couple of months after the abortion but several years after, and her health is more seriously damaged than if she had not been aborted.

For the very reasons given in the bill, we claim that abortions will ruin the health of an undetermined number of persons. That is why we are fighting with so much zeal and conviction.

We do not do so on the strength of our own personal knowledge. But, every day we get phone calls about this. Last night, doctors came to see me to suggest arguments of which I had not thought. Why do they come to the Creditistes? Because the members of the other parties do not express in the house the opinion of the people.

If we look at the papers of the last 15 days, we can see that they do not deal with what is taking place in this house. We can quote the facts. In England, as far as committees on abortion are concerned, the Ministry of Health had to take certain steps for abortions were being procured quite extensively, for any reason.

So if the bill is not amended, it is the general medical practitioners—and not gynaecologists—those who cure colds, sore throats, who practise appendicitis or liver operations, who will take the decision to procure an abortion for a particular woman and to take the life of her foetus.

Mr. Speaker, since the bill is extremely serious and will affect the health and the morale of millions of Canadians, we feel duty bound to express the views of scientists etc, because the bill cannot be accepted. That is why we must fight. We shall keep on fighting, because we heard evidence which compel us to act. We would be held responsible if we failed to make the views of those people known.

It is all very well to want to pass legislation in the house but we must take into account those who will have to enforce the law and, who will have to perform abortions. And it is precisely because we want to take into account the evidence provided by the gynaecologists that we want one gynaecologist at least on the therapeutic committee. And it is hardly enough for two doctors who are not qualified in the field of pediatrics, psychology and gynaecology, to order the gynaecologist to kill the foetus.

I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that even if this amendment somewhat restricts the extent of the bill, it is not strict enough, especially where it concerns those who will have to tell the gynaecologist: Did you have any decision to makke in order to procure the abortion of this woman? You have no decision to make. We have made it, and you, a gynaecologist, you must procure the abortion, you must shoot the foetus you, a gynaecologist, you must commit a murder.

It is on behalf of the gynaecologists of the province of Quebec and of the whole of Canada, that we are requesting, for the sake of their own protection and in consideration of medical science, of competence, that the gynaecologists be consulted. It must be mentioned in the bill, so that justice be done to the knowledge and science of our gynaecologists in Canada. Why are they gynaecologists, if not to be consulted and make decisions on gynaecologic matters. Why are they gynaecologists? Why should we demand that a gynaecologist commit a murder? Let us protect the doctors. At this stage of the bill, it is a most important thing to do.

We trust medical science and we respect our doctors, specially the gynaecologists of Canada.

We ask the Minister of Justice (M. Turner) to trust gynaecologists and their judgment. Unfortunately, in a few months they will be called upon to commit murder by practicing abortions. Why should a gynaecologist be held responsible for murder or abortion, if he could not take part in the decision-making, since this bill does not guarantee that he may be consulted?

The hon. member for Hull said a while ago: We hope that a gynaecologist will sit on this committee. But how is this guaranteed? In the house, there is no such thing as trust. We have adopted a Criminal code, in the house several years ago, and we want to amend it in order to punish offenders.

The Criminal Code exists; but why should not we also protect the gynaecologists? Why should we not insert a clause to that end in the bill? Let us not say: we hope that a gynaecologist will sit on the therapeutic committee of a hospital. We do not trust in hopes because we have already seen that the government has failed to honour some of his written official commitments.

Since there is an important bill under study today, we are asked to hope that a gynaecologist will sit on a therapeutic committee. Let us not kid ourselves and entertain illusions, because tomorrow the gynaecologists will have to kill the foetus and commit murder. We want that the gynaecologists be consulted before they are forced to practise an abortion, before performing an act which will have serious consequences for our decadent society.

Mr. Speaker, some hon. members may believe we are fighting for the love of it. No, Mr. Speaker, we have no time to waste. It is our opinion that parliament has many much more serious pieces of legislation to consider. We blame the government for not having put this bill aside for a while, if there are more serious bills to be introduced or passed. That is the reason why we regret having caused such a loss of time in this house on a bill that should never have been introduced in this house.

This bill is of British inspiration and nowadays newspapers from England and from the whole world show that such laws that stem from socialist countries, without morals, are now introduced in the house.

It is because we are aware of the unfortunate experience in other countries that we know what happened abroad will happen here as like causes produce like effects in like circumstances. This bill will produce in Canada and before long the same effects as in England. On account of that, the British government must pass laws today in order to prevent extermination of the people.

I have here statistics on extermination of people due to stupid laws such as the one under consideration now. However, I will quote those statistics in relation with another amendment as they will be more appropriate then.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I think it is my duty to take part once again in the debate on this amendment. First, I want to point out the answer given earlier by the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) to the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) who asked his opinion on this subject.

In fact, as we all recognize his competence in this field, we were anxious to hear what he had to say. He replied to the hon. member for Lotbinière that he should be careful not to lose the few hair he has left! That is how serious the government members are.

That, Mr. Speaker, is one way to evade the real question with which we are dealing in this debate.

We could answer him that we are not quite ready to determine the seal of intelligence, and it would be better I think—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but I would suggest to him also to stay close to the amendment now before us.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to point out that what is under the scalp is much more important than what is on the top.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I come back to the amendment before us, and I would like everybody to understand the great significance of changing somewhat this paragraph (f), which reads as follows:

"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee, comprised of not less than three members each of whom is a qualified medical practitioner, appointed by the board of that hospital for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

Mr. Speaker, a few moments' reflection should suffice to realize that a committee of three qualified medical practitioners is not enough. Of course, it will be said off hand that one qualified medical practitioner is enough, provided he can meet the requirements mentioned by the previous speakers.

Comparing that paragraph with the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi, (Mr. Laprise), we see a world of difference between the two. Allow me to read the amendment:

"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee, comprised of not less than two qualified medical practitioners and one gynaecologist, appointed by the board of that hospital and approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned, for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

As I say, Mr. Speaker, such is the difference that it befalls us to take the necessary time and care to analyze every word of this amendment. A huge difference, first as to the standards that should apply to those who will have to practice this kind of surgery.

Then, there is another kind of specifications: those which empower not only the doctors of a hospital but also the organized medical staff of the province concerned to keep an eye on the members of its committee and on their decisions. The previous section which defines a "qualified doctor" does so under the laws of the province.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, we have here an extremely important difference. I shall not so much underline the points relating to the qualifications of the doctors themselves for my colleagues have very well indicated them. I shall deal rather with the provisions which require that not only should those doctors be with accredited hospitals but also be duly authorized by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned. This, Mr. Speaker, is a provision which should be added because it makes a huge difference. Thus, we shall eliminate the cases where a not too consciencious doctor might perform useless abortions, thus breaking the law.

The more, responsible people there will be to check the standards and decisions governing such surgical operations, the more we shall be satisfied that the law is well enforced. Why? Because it would need just one case where a doctor would not have taken his responsibility seriously to see the hospital committee under attack and also the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

They will therefore be more interested in seeing that the law is fully enforced. And that is how we shall achieve through this amendment something really sensible, and avoid all the abuses pointed out since the beginning of this debate.

Mr. Speaker, when legislating on a subject of such importance, before coming to a decision it is our duty, to give some thought to the consequences. There is nothing more inconsistent than to disregard the experience of others.

Why, Mr. Speaker, do they want at all costs to repeat the errors made elsewhere, under the false pretext of improvement or of human progress? We are quite convinced that we are in the right in opposing this bill. We are confirmed in our opinion by the fact that all those who make representations make them to the Ralliement créditiste.

Why? Because when somebody wants to speak about freedom, one addresses himself to free men. The hospital committees, the doctors belonging to various Quebec associations—not only in the areas in which we are more particularly concerned, we, of the Ralliement créditiste, but throughout the province,—ask us to intervene, to go on fighting this battle which will end only when it is at last understood that there is an advantage for the country to suspend consideration of the litigious clauses of the omnibus bill.

It is not for nothing that every day we receive letters, phone calls, from the Canadian electorate. They tell us that they cannot address themselves to their member, because there is nothing he can do about this matter.

It is extremely unfortunate, Mr. Speaker, to find that such things can exist today. We are not surprised to see that one of the closest colleage of the Minister of Justice decided to depart from the policy of a party which deprived him of one of the most indefeasible rights one can enjoy, that is, the right to freedom.

When the electors find that their representative is not even free to express his opinion, it is unfortunate. It is a fact that is worth considering.

If this endless debate resulted only in having this bill amended rather radically, we would have gained something.

Mr. Speaker, may I call it four o'clock?

• (3:50 p.m.)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. It being four o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely private bills, notices of motions and public bills.

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I might have your indulgence for a moment. There has been some discussion, and there is good reason to believe there might be consent of the house, to proceed to deal with item No. 1 under the item private bills, namely consideration of Bill S-27 as reported from the particular committee and then adjourn. I would so request.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is it so agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (for concurrence) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): When shall the said bill be read a third time?

Some hon. Members: Now.

Mr. Guay moved that the bill be read the third time and do pass.

Motion agreed to, bill read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Pursuant to special order made this day this house stands adjourned until Monday at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The house met at 2 p.m.

THE LATE MR. DONALD GORDON

TRIBUTES TO DECEASED PUBLIC SERVANT AND INDUSTRIALIST

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the house from my place that Mr. Donald Gordon, one of Canada's most distinguished public servants, died suddenly on Saturday. We are all well aware of his towering accomplishments as deputy governor of the Bank of Canada, chairman of the Foreign Exchange Control Board and, later, as chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. He was director of the Industrial Development Bank and, at the summit of his career, chairman of the board of directors and president of the Canadian National Railways from 1950 to 1966.

We have always regarded the late Mr. Gordon as the kind of person who personifies Canada abroad. He was large in stature and decisive in action. In his career we all have much to admire and learn. Following his appointment as president of Canada's largest railway, Mr. Gordon is reported to have said:

> All my life I had learned things from the bottom up. Now I am learning from the top down and I find it's a lot harder.

From either direction Donald Gordon learned fast and learned well; and Canada benefited as a result. I am sure all hon. members will join with me in expressing sincere sympathy to Mrs. Gordon and the Gordon family.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) and the members of this party I join with the Prime Minister in expressing our regrets to the family of the late Mr. Gordon. We appreciate what he did for this country. There are not many people of whom it can be said genuinely that they were builders of the country. Mr. Gordon did his share of building as deputy governor of the Bank of Canada and as chairman of the board and president of Canadian National Railways. Earlier in his career he did good work as chairman of the Foreign Exchange Control Board and of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. His accomplishments earned him the gratitude of his country.

He was a big man; he was the kind of man this country needs and it was our good fortune that he came here from Scotland. We did not always agree with what he said, but we always respected him for the vigour and determination with which he pursued his ideas. We hope that condolences of the members of this party will be conveyed to Mr. Gordon's family.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the members of this party join with the Prime Minister in paying tribute to the memory of Donald Gordon, one of this country's great public servants who over a period of years did titanic work as head of the Foreign Exchange Control Board, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, director of the Industrial Development Bank and chairman of the board and president of Canadian National Railways. For his work as president of Canadian National particularly this country is deeply indebted to him for his vision and for the vigour with which he discharged his responsibilities.

Although we did not always agree with him we could not help admiring the forcefulness with which he defended his ideas and the efficiency with which he carried out any task assigned to him. Here was a public servant who worked hard to do the job given to him by respective governments of this country. On behalf of this party I join with other hon. members in all parts of the house in expressing our deep sympathy to Mrs. Gordon and the Gordon family.

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the leader of our party and of my colleagues, I should like to join with the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the previous speakers to extend by deepest sympathy to the bereaved family of the late Donald Gordon.

Mr. Speaker, we mourn his death because Mr. Gordon was a great man who rose from the ranks to reach high positions in the government. As the Prime Minister said, his accomplishments in the service of his country and towards its development were towering. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

THE MINISTRY

ANNOUNCEMENT OF CHANGES

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I should like to inform the house of certain changes in the ministry which shall take effect as of today.

[English]

It has been my pleasure to recommend to His Excellency the Governor General the appointment of the hon. member for Burin-Burgeo (Mr. Jamieson) as Minister of Transport.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (2:10 p.m.)

Mr. Trudeau: May I carry on, Mr. Speaker? The portfolio of Minister of Supply and Services has been assumed by the hon. member for Winnipeg South (Mr. Richardson). The hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Andras) has been designated Minister responsible for housing. I wish to add, Mr. Speaker, that during my absences the hon. member for Eglinton will be Acting Prime Minister.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

TABLING OF TASK FORCE REPORT

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 41(2), I wish to table two copies in English and French of the first report completed by the task force studying the Post Office. It amounts to a 25 year environmental forecast for the Post Office. I would like also to say, Mr. Speaker, that this does not create a precedent, but it is our purpose to table as many reports as possible, especially those of general interest and those which are critical. I of course reserve the right not to table those which deal with internal matters such as management, personnel and financial matters.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

CROWN LIABILITY ACT REVISION

Question No. 1,118—Mr. Fortin:

1. Does the government intend to proceed with a full revision of the Crown Liability Act in order to correct some of the existing cases?

[Mr. Fortin.]

2. When will this new legislation be introduced?

3. During the past year, how many actions were brought against the government and what was the total amount of claims laid by claimants?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): 1 and 2. A full revision of the Crown Liability Act is not contemplated at the present time.

3. During 1968, 73 actions were brought against the Government by way of petition of right in the Exchequer Court of Canada, in which claims for a total of approximately $6,000,000 in addition to general damages were asserted. Claims were also made, of course, by way of appeals from income tax assessments, of which 550 were launched in the Tax Appeal Board, and 170 were launched in the Exchequer Court by tax payers during 1968. The amounts involved in the income tax appeals greatly exceed the amounts claimed by way of petition of right. In addition, approximately 200 other proceedings were launched during 1968 in the Exchequer Court and in the Tariff Board in which large amounts of public funds are involved.

FISHERIES TREATY IN NORTH PACIFIC

Question No. 1,433—Mr. Anderson:

1. Has the Canadian Government received a copy of the bilateral U.S.-U.S.S.R. fishing agreement covering the area off the coasts of Washington, Oregon, California and Alaska, which was negotiated recently?

2. Is it the intention of the Canadian Government to negotiate a fisheries treaty with the governments of the U.S.A., U.S.S.R., and Japan to cover other areas of the North Pacific?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. On January 31, 1969 the U.S.A. and U.S.S.R. signed an agreement at Washington which amended and extended an agreement of February 13, 1967, as previously amended and extended, in respect of certain fishery problems in the northeastern part of the Pacific Ocean off the coast of the U.S.A. The appropriate Canadian government departments have copies of the agreements in question.

2. The Canadian government is conducting negotiations with the U.S. government with a view to reaching an agreement on the continued exercise of reciprocal fishing rights by Canadian and U.S. nationals in the respective fishing zones established by the two countries. Japanese and Soviet nationals do not fish in the fishing zones established by Canada off the coast of British Columbia, and the Canadian government for the present has not entered into negotiations with these countries in respect of their fishing operations in the North Pacific.

STEPHENVILLE, NFLD.,—GOVERNMENT ACCOMMODATION

Question No. 1,705—Mr. Marshall:

What accommodation has been leased to the federal government in the Town of Stephenville, Newfoundland, under (a) location (b) area leased (c) annual rental, and (d) department of government leasing the accommodation?

STUDENT LOAN FUND REPAYMENTS

Question No. 1,808—Mr. McIntosh:

1. In light of the severely restricted opportunities for employment of persons graduating from Canadian universities this year, will the government amend repayment provisions of the Student Loan Fund, to take account of the inability to repay of those students who cannot find jobs upon graduation?

2. What other specific steps is the government taking to assist Canadian students who are graduating this year and are unable to find adequate employment?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Finance and Manpower and Immigration as follows: 1. The regulations made pursuant to the Canada Student Loans Act provide for a large degree of flexibility in setting repayment terms. They are capable of accommodating virtually every conceivable situation, including cases where students are unemployed following graduation and cannot commence regular repayments immediately following the expiry of their interest and repayment free period. Borrowers are required, however, in all cases, to discuss their particular circumstances with the bank to which their loans are owed, before agreement can be reached on appropriate repayment terms.

2. As the number of graduates entering the labour force has increased, a proportionate increase of effort to assist their placement has been made by the Department of Manpower and Immigration. Through 57 Canada Manpower Centres on various university campuses and in community colleges, students are being supplied with pertinent information on job opportunities and the labour market generally. A clearing system covering all 350 Canada Manpower Centres assures that student applications for employment can, when required, receive a wide exposure to potential employers. A Directory of Canadian Employers who have expressed interest in hiring graduates has been published by the department and made available to students through the campus centres. Additional information regarding job vacancies is fed back from the Canada Manpower Centre network to the centres on campus. Officers at all centres are maintaining, and as needed, increasing their efforts to seek out every possible job vacancy through their employer contacts.

So that students will receive as much assistance as possible in choosing university courses with a better knowledge of labour market demands and job opportunities, Canada Manpower Centre staff are intensifying their efforts to supply career and labour market information through the school guidance system.

Has the government either formally or informally held discussions with the Government of the United States regarding the effects on Canadians employed by U.S. firms or their subsidiaries operating in Canada of the quota restrictions now applicable to Canadians seeking entry into the U.S. as landed immigrants in order to continue their employment?

2. Has the government received protests from Canadian firms operating subsidiaries or branches in the United States that U.S. quota restrictions on Canadians entering the U.S. as landed immigrants are seriously hindering the normal movement and promotion of Canadian personnel in Canadian firms while U.S. citizens may enter or leave Canada for similar purposes without restrictions?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Yes, informal discussions with the appropriate United States authorities are now underway.

KINGSTON-CORNWALL WATER STUDIES

Question No. 1,959—Mr. Godin:

Did the studies of the quality of the water in the St. Lawrence River between Kingston and Cornwall, since 1965, reveal any danger to swimmers?

[Translation]

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): The studies carried out in the international section of the St. Lawrence river under the aegis of the International Joint Commission, since 1965, have been designed specifically to examine whether or not there is pollution being discharged on one side of the international boundary which is causing or is likely to cause a threat to health or property on the other side of the boundary. The studies were not conducted to assess the water quality in local areas near the points of discharge. The findings of the studies are currently being reviewed by one of the International Joint Commission's Advisory Boards on Water Pollution, with a final report to the Commission expected later this year.

A review of data collected by the Department of National Health and Welfare in these international waters indicates a water quality acceptable for swimming purposes and other water contact sports. These data cannot however be considered as representative of local conditions, though this may well be so. The control of water quality in the Canadian portion of these waters is under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, and the determination of whether or not waters in specific areas are suitable for water contact sports is the responsibility of local health authorities.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. Shenandoah Oil Corporation; Gage Canadian Oil and Gas Corporation; Global Marine Drilling Company.

The repeal came into force by Order in Council P.C. 1968-1337 dated August 1st, 1968.

The repealing of this section took place at the time when both the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories had adequate legislation to assume this responsibility.

[Translation]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): 1. Canada has taken part in the Eleventh Session of The Hague Conference on Private International Law which was held at The Hague from October 7 to 26, 1968. The Hague Conference normally meets every fourth year. On September 4, 1968, Canada was admitted as a member and its instrument of acceptance was transmitted on the 7th day of October. Due to its form of government, Canada has found it difficult up to that time to seek membership in the Conference.

2. No agreements binding on the participating government are signed at these sessions but delegates agree to submit to the appreciation of their governments draft conventions. At the conclusion of the 1968 session the following draft conventions were thus signed: (1) Convention on the recognition of divorces and legal separations; (2) Convention on the law applicable to traffic accidents; and (3) Convention on the taking of evidence abroad in civil or commercial matters. These conventions have not yet been ratified. Decision as to their ratification must await the conclusion of studies now being made of their import.

2. August 8, 1967, at Ottawa by the Ambassador of the United States for the United States and the Secretary of State for External Affairs for Canada.

3. The agreement provides for consultation and co-operation in civil emergency planning between the two countries. The purpose of this consultation is to ensure that national plans formulated independently by each country are as compatible as is considered desirable and possible by both countries. The agreement does not provide for integrated planning, and the two countries retain national control over their own civil emergency plans.

4. On the Canadian side the principle participants in the discussion on this matter were officials of the Canada Emergency Measures Organization and the Department of External Affairs. Other Canadian departments concerned with civil emergency planning were associated with these discussions. On the United States side the principle participants were officials of the Office of Emergency Planning, the Office of Civil Defense and the Department of State. The draft agreement was concurred in by the U.S.-Canada Civil Emergency Planning Committee, and subsequently approved by the Canadian Cabinet.

5. The agreement does not provide for a joint emergency board, but rather provides for a joint committee designated the United States-Canada Civil Emergency Planning Committee. Hon. ## ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

TRADE

WHEAT—SALE BY FRANCE AT CANTON FAIR

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, in view of the absence from the house, for very necessary reasons, of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, I direct this question to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that it is vitally important for Canada to sell its surplus wheat, and as France is reported to have just received an order for 800,000 tons from Mainland China at the China Spring Fair in Canton, at which fair it is reported that no member of the Canadian Wheat Board has been present as yet, would the Prime Minister take the opportunity on motions tomorrow to report to the house first of all on how it was that Canada let this very important order for wheat slip through its fingers and, secondly, why there has been no member of the Wheat Board at this very important fair, where obviously deals of this kind are made?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will ask the minister answering for Industry, Trade and Commerce to reply to this tomorrow.

[Mr. Nielsen.]

WHEAT—SALE BY FRANCE TO MAINLAND CHINA BELOW I.G.A. PRICE

Mr. J. H. Horner (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. Has he, as the leader of this country's government, made a strong protest to the French government for selling this grain to China at what is substantially below the International Grains Arrangement price, the price toward which we are trying to reach agreement?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I will ask the minister to consider this at the same time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I ask the Prime Minister, the leader of this country's government, if he has made an official protest to the French government for substantially cutting the International Grains Arrangement price at the very time we are trying to reach agreement on that price.

Mr. Trudeau: I heard the question the first time.

Mr. Horner: Well, I want—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Vancouver East.

AGENCY TO PROMOTE SALES ABROAD OF AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary or related question to the Minister of Agriculture. In view of the fact that the United States government has set up a new export marketing service to sell agricultural products in the various countries of the world, and in view of the fact, as has been pointed out, that we have lost a very valuable customer in Mainland China at the Canton fair, is the Department of Agriculture considering the setting up of an export sales agency in order to promote the sale of Canadian farm products abroad?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I could not agree with that part of the question in which the hon. member says that we lost a sale. There have been other sales of wheat, and indeed of other grains, made by France to China. But if the hon. member is asking if we are prepared to take action to strengthen our selling agency for agricultural products, I think that that has been under consideration. Indeed some positive action has already been taken, although we do not claim that all that could be used usefully in promoting export sales of agricultural products has been used.

WHEAT—STEPS TO RENEW AGREEMENT WITH MAINLAND CHINA

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): In view of the fact that our wheat agreement with China expired in July of this year may I ask the minister whether his department or the government generally is taking any steps to have that agreement renewed or extended, and if so what those steps are.

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Yes. The Wheat Board of course is involved in this, that is the extension or renewal of an agreement; but I should like to remind the hon. member and members of the house generally that the actual sales and contracts to Mainland China have I believe exceeded the agreement signed three years ago.

GRAIN

REQUEST THAT HANDLING BE TRANSFERRED TO ANOTHER MINISTRY

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. In view of the deplorable situation that has developed with regard to the handling of grain under the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce will the Prime Minister now consider taking that responsibility away from the minister and placing it under some minister who will give us action, perhaps the Minister of Transport.

VANCOUVER—REPORTED SHORTAGE OF WHEAT FOR SHIPMENT

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a supplementary question dealing with wheat, and I hope that perhaps tomorrow I too can have an answer on it. In view of the fact that the port of Vancouver does not want to see a recurrence of the grain ship tie-up that we experienced a few weeks ago, will the Prime Minister see to it that tomorrow the house is informed on what action is being taken to correct the situation in Vancouver where, we are informed, eight ships could well be tied up in the next few days because that port is short four and a half million bushels of No. 2 Northern Wheat?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I am sure the minister will note the question, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

APPEAL TO RAILWAYS TO MOVE WHEAT

Mr. J. H. Horner (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Transport. Will he assure the house that he will make it his first official duty to see that both railroads make every possible effort to move to Vancouver as quickly as possible the required 4½ million bushels of grain.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, may I with your indulgence express a word of thanks to hon. members for their good wishes. I assure my hon. friend I will be more than pleased to look into this matter. I am sure he and other members will extend to me the usual courtesy of allowing me time to find my way in the new department—not too much time I expect.

TRADE

WHEAT—FAILURE BY CANADA TO SEND REPRESENTATIVE TO CANTON FAIR

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether he would tell the house and the country why Canada is not represented at the Canton fair, in view of the fact that prospective sales of wheat could be anticipated? Would he also say whether the government will make a statement setting out the sales that have been made by the Wheat Board internationally in the last two months? I realize the Prime Minister has said, "Do you expect me to sell wheat", but I suggest that the western people have a right to an answer to this question.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I should like to thank the right hon. member for Prince Albert for indirectly giving support to the efforts being made—

Mr. Diefenbaker: You have no success.

Mr. Sharp: —to establish diplomatic relations, which are being carried on between Peking and Ottawa. Sometimes, to judge from his questions, I am not quite sure on what side he is. I always assumed he would concede that this operation has some beneficial result in terms of trade.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Now I ask the minister, whose government has been in authority and the ministers of which government have been on opposite sides of almost every question, whether there is any difference among members of the cabinet on the question of ensuring western markets for wheat.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

IMMIGRATION

DESERTERS—GUIDELINES ISSUED TO OFFICERS AT CANADA-U.S. BORDER

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. In view of his continued reference to the guidelines issued by his department to immigration officers at the Canadian-United States border and in view of his citation from those guidelines on a television program last night, will the minister now reconsider his decision and undertake to table the guidelines and make a statement on motions on this whole matter at the earliest opportunity?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I understand my friend has a motion on the order paper requesting the production of these guidelines. When that motion comes before the house it will be possible to state the attitude of the government on this point.

Mr. Lewis: I rise on a question of privilege in respect of this entire matter. For some months now requests have been made of the minister by members that he make a statement on motions on the question of the admission of military deserters to Canada.

We have asked him on numerous occasions to table the directive of July 29, or whatever is the date, and he has now on at least two occasions outside this house—one in his reply to the moderator of the United Church, and the other last night on a television show—referred to guidelines and told the people of Canada some of the things which they contain. I did not see the show last night but I am informed that he actually quoted from the guidelines.

I respectfully submit that this is either a disregard of the rights of the members of this House of Commons to know about these policies, especially when they have asked for that information or it is a determined and deliberate attempt by the minister to make statements outside the House of Commons so that we on this side of the house cannot say anything about those statements.

If in press statements and on television shows the minister is going to refer to directives that we have asked him to tell us about in this house, then I say he has a duty to rise on motions and tell us what is in these directives, so that members of the opposition may make comments on them.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the minister wish to speak to the question of privilege?

Mr. MacEachen: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: I would be inclined to rule that there is no question of privilege. There may be a serious grievance. This is also an argument which I assume the hon. member would want to advance when the matter is considered, or when the motion to which the minister has referred is put to the house but I doubt very much whether anything can be achieved by pursuing the matter further at this time.

Mr. Lewis: With respect, Mr. Speaker, if I may take one more minute, I suggest we have had a number of examples of this sort of thing. One of these days we have to decide whether ministers are going to treat us with respect in this house.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacEachen: On the question of privilege, Mr. Speaker: The hon. member, in his customary way with synthetic indignation, has made a series of charges that the house has had no opportunity to discuss the substance of these guidelines. If he had been present when the estimates of this department were before the house he might have listened to one of his colleagues ask for a clarification of this policy, and he might have listened to a reply in clarification, and then might have listened to the total silence of himself and his colleagues. I am not impressed by the synthetic manner in which the hon. member has attempted to abuse the rules of this house.

There is a motion before the house in the regular way asking for the production of these guidelines. The hon. member knows that by long tradition it has not been possible for any government to produce directions to staff. That has been stated in this house by ministers pre-dating anybody sitting in the house.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact we have had a debate on the motion, perhaps the hon.

member for York South will want to withdraw the motion when it comes before the house.

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister whether these guidelines are used when immigration officers are interviewing prospective immigrants to Canada from countries other than the United States?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, the guidelines are in general application to applicants from all countries.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): How do we know?

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, will the minister give a firm date as to when parliament may expect a statement describing either present policy or proposed changes?

Mr. MacEachen: As I have stated, Mr. Speaker, the estimates of the department will be before the committee this week. There will be a full opportunity to discuss every aspect of the policy, the practice, how it developed and any charges that have been made against the administration.

Mr. Fairweather: By your own backbenchers, too.

Mr. MacEachen: I hope that members of the committee will take advantage of that opportunity to clarify this issue, which has been distorted beyond measure in many quarters of this country.

NATIONAL PARKS

GASPÉ—AGREEMENT BETWEEN PROVINCIAL AND FEDERAL AUTHORITIES

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, I shall direct my question to the Prime Minister.

Could he tell the house whether the hon. Gabriel Loubier, Quebec Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game, has accepted the conditions set by the federal government for the development of a national park in the Gaspé peninsula?

The Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): As the hon. member knows, Mr. Speaker, the minister concerned is supposed to answer questions tomorrow in the house.

[English]

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

CONVICTION OF CAPITAL MURDER—GOVERNMENT POLICY ON COMMUTATION OF DEATH SENTENCE

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the Minister of Justice. As the first conviction of capital murder since the new act was passed has been upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada, is it now the policy of the government to apply the royal prerogative and commute that sentence? Is this policy still to apply under the law as it stands?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I think that question had better be left for the minister directly responsible for recommending any action to cabinet, namely the Solicitor General.

Mr. Woolliams: Then may I refer my question to the appropriate and wise Solicitor General, Mr. Speaker?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, the exercise of the prerogative of mercy is not a matter of policy that is announced in advance, but is something that has to be dealt with in each individual case as it arises.

Mr. Woolliams: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that this is the first such conviction which has been upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada since the new act set out that one can be convicted of capital murder only in the case of the death of a policeman, which was the case here, is it the policy of the government to still apply the royal prerogative of commutation of the death sentence to a sentence of life imprisonment?

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Speaker, the exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy is not a matter of policy of this or any other government.

Mr. Woolliams: It is still the law.

PUBLIC SERVICE

INQUIRY AS TO RATES OF PAY INCREASES TO BE GRANTED

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of reports that a number of top civil servants are to receive pay increases of up to 29 per cent, can the Prime Minister say whether it will now be in order for unions representing public servants at lower levels to seek pay increases at the bargaining table higher than the 6 per cent or 7 per cent that has been set down by the government?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not expect the hon. member wants me to give guidelines to the unions bargaining for employees.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Prime Minister explain how it is that with government guidelines which limit pay increases to 6 per cent or 7 per cent, 300 who are a favoured few can get increases of up to 29 per cent?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The supplementary question is argumentative and cannot be received.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

POSSIBILITY OF SEEKING SUPREME COURT DECISION ON CONSTITUTIONALITY OF MEASURE

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. Is he in a position to say when the amendments to the official languages bill will be placed before the house? Furthermore, in view of the view expressed somewhat widely that one section in particular which would appear to amend section 133 of the British North America Act should be referred to the Supreme Court for its opinion before the bill comes before the house for consideration, has the government given any consideration to making such reference in order to determine the constitutionality of the bill or any part thereof?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, we have taken the position that the bill is constitutional and is within the power of parliament to enact, and we would not of our own initiative refer the bill to the Supreme Court. As for when the house will again debate the matter, I should think that would be very soon indeed.

Mr. Diefenbaker: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister say whether the amendments of which he spoke when in western Canada are now ready, have received the approval of the cabinet and are available for early introduction to the bill as originally placed before the house?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, the way in which the right hon. member has put that question would force me to break an oath if I were to answer it directly. I cannot tell him.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I would not ask the government to break its word on anything, although it does it regularly.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON FIFTH AND SIXTH REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the new Minister of Transport. In so doing I would like to compliment the Prime Minister on his choice of a Minister of Transport.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. McGrath: My question is this: Will the minister use his considerable influence with the house leader to bring forward debate on the fifth and sixth reports of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, so that the new minister can have the views of the house on the very serious problems of transportation facing the Atlantic provinces?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I was expecting that question and getting ready to rule it out of order.

GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS

AVAILABILITY TO HOUSE OF INFORMATION SERVICES REPORT

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the attention of the Prime Minister and ask if he can say when the report of the task force on government information services is expected to be completed?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I at no time stated that the report of this task force would be made available to the house, so I do not understand the import of the question.

[Translation]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MAINLAND CHINA—INQUIRY RESPECTING CANADIAN RECOGNITION

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Would the minister tell the house whether Canada is disregarding its political role in the Pacific by turning to Communist China? Would he also tell the house what progress has been made in the steps taken towards the recognition of Communist China?

Mr. Speaker: The first part of the question is probably out of order, but the minister may wish to answer the second part.

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think I have told the house already that we are expecting this month to begin substantive discussions in Stockholm between the representatives of the People's Republic of China and the Canadian government.

HOUSING

MINISTER RESPONSIBLE FOR ANNOUNCING N.H.A. INTEREST RATES

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister. Which minister will be responsible for informing the public regularly and periodically of the average interest rate for housing coming under the National Housing Act?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the house can always ask the newly appointed minister or the Minister of Finance.

AVAILABILITY OF HOMES TO PERSONS OF MODERATE INCOME

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the great interest the Prime Minister has recently taken in housing, I know he will be familiar with the situation described yesterday in Edmonton by the president of the Canadian Real Estate Board, when he said that two thirds of those who needed housing in Canada could not afford it—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hees: I was just getting to my question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I hope so.

Mr. Hees: I figured that just about then Your Honour would want me to do so, so I shall. In view of this very serious situation, is the government planning to introduce any new initiatives in the near future to bring the cost of housing down to a point where people on moderate income can afford it?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): That will depend on the level of the debate the opposition sets when it discusses the bill now before the house.

HARBOURS

VANCOUVER, B.C.—APPOINTMENT OF SECURITY GUARDS TO REPLACE EXISTING FORCE

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question of an urgent nature to the Minister of Transport. In view of the fact that he has just taken over his new position, perhaps he would take the question as notice and let us have an answer as soon as possible, because of its urgency. In view of the decision of the National Harbours Board in Vancouver to appoint a special force to police the port of Vancouver, consisting of 15 or 20 trained peace officers under a retired Mountie as chief, replacing the existing National Harbours Board force of non-professional security guards, will the minister inform the house as to the position of employment of the present security guards, most of whom are war veterans of 17 years service?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would think this question could be placed on the order paper, or if the hon. member prefers he could debate it at the time of adjournment. If there is urgency, it will be given preference for discussion at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Winch: There is certainly urgency, Mr. Speaker, so I will bring it up at ten o'clock.

THE MINISTRY

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO TO RELINQUISH INDIAN AFFAIRS DUTIES

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): I have a question for the Prime Minister which arises out of his announcement about ministerial changes. First of all I wish to congratulate all those who have been the recipients of honours. Can the Prime Minister indicate whether the Minister without Portfolio from Port Arthur will be relinquishing his responsibilities in connection with his special duties with regard to Indian affairs?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Baldwin: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of all the changes which have been announced—and I hope a new day may dawn—will the Prime Minister not consider reviewing the iniquitous roster system, so that on matters which, like running sores, afflict this country continually, such as agriculture, housing and Indian affairs, we will always have a back-up minister in the house to answer questions?

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Perhaps this is just a technical question, Mr. Speaker, but may I ask the Prime Minister whether it is proper for us to address the hon. member for Port Arthur as minister of housing or just as Minister Without Portfolio?

Mr. Trudeau: Perhaps we should seek the advice of the legal counsellor of the house, but if I were asked for my opinion I would say the proper title would be Minister Without Portfolio from Port Arthur.

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): I have a supplementary question for the right hon. Prime Minister. Has he appointed any parliamentary secretaries in recent days?

Mr. Trudeau: No, Mr. Speaker.

INDUSTRY

DEVCO—COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF MINERS

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): I have a question for the Prime Minister. Now that the Prime Minister knows what Devco is—

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): And now that he has forgotten.

Mr. MacInnis: —will the Prime Minister make representations to that corporation to see that they carry out their obligations to their former employees and their dependants, as laid down in the legislation?

Mr. Trudeau: Perhaps I will be better advised to see what the employees think rather than to listen to the representations of the hon. member.

Mr. Woolliams: Is that ever arrogant!

Mr. Hees: The boiling point is nearly reached.

Mr. MacInnis: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker, so as to clear up the matter for the Prime Minister. I should like to call his attention to the fact that my question was not about employees, but about former employees with regard to whom this corporation has an obligation under the legislation laid down by the government. There was no question whatsoever about the employees, and if the Prime Minister wishes to be up to date on what the employees think he should catch up on the press reports.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): I should like to direct my question to the new Minister of Transport, and may I add my congratulations to the other new ministers. Although I might normally hesitate to ask this question, in view of the minister's own suggestion that we go easy on him at first, I should like to put this perhaps minor but serious and certainly urgent request—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member ask the question.

Mr. Saltsman: I have just received a call from Halifax indicating that the washrooms are not functioning—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's question is out of order.

WATER RESOURCES

BAY ST. GEORGE'S, NFLD.—POLLUTION OF FISHERY

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Will the minister advise whether his department is conducting investigations regarding evidence of pollution reaching the Bay St. George's area in western Newfoundland, with characteristics common to those found in Placentia Bay, causing danger to the fishing industry there?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Officials of the department are in the area now examining the matter, and I expect a report momentarily.

Mr. John Lundrigan (Gander-Twillingate): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the fact that the minister will receive representations on the investigations momentarily, will he give an undertaking to make a statement on motions tomorrow indicating the results of the investigation so that he will clear up this business once and for all and eliminate any unnecessary concern?

Mr. Munro: I do not know when the full information will be at my disposal. I am hoping it will be perhaps this afternoon or sometime tomorrow. I imagine I may be able to give that information to the house in some way other than through a statement on motions. If the situation is more serious than indicated, I will consider making a statement on motions later on.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, most hon. members realize the urgency of the matter and the threat posed to a very important industry. Based on that, my supplementary question to the minister is as follows: Will he perhaps take a number of hon. members who are concerned and directly involved into his confidence, rather than making a statement on motions?

Mr. Munro: I would be pleased to do so.

PLACENTIA BAY, NFLD.—COMPENSATION TO FISHERMEN FOR LOSS THROUGH POLLUTION

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Fisheries. In view of the fact that the waters of Placentia Bay and St. Marys Bay have been placed off limits to the fishermen of that area, could the minister inform the house whether the government will assist the fishermen, and when we can expect an announcement in this respect?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The waters of Placentia and St. Marys have not been excluded totally. Only a portion of Placentia Bay has been barred so far, and we hope that this is the maximum action that will have to be taken in that regard.

On the question of tending to the financial needs of the fishermen who are affected, may I say that this is a matter of cabinet decision and will be brought to the attention of the cabinet at the earliest possible moment, in view of the extreme urgency of the problem.

Mr. Carter: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that this problem could very well reach international proportions, and in view of the fact that it has taken this government and the Department of Fisheries and Forestry six months to study the matter, and the cause of pollution has not yet been determined—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member ask his question.

Mr. Carter: —is the government considering seeking outside assistance to find the cause and the solution to this pollution problem?

Mr. Jamieson: We will take advantage of any form of assistance open to us. As the hon. member knows, it is an extremely difficult matter to pin down the cause of pollution. As for its becoming a matter of international importance, I should like to suggest that it may well depend upon the action of some of my friends in dealing with this matter.

POLLUTION—REPRESENTATIONS BY U.S. FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION

Mr. John Lundrigan (Gander-Twillingate): I have a further supplementary question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Could the Secretary of State for External Affairs indicate whether in fact representations have been made by the United States food and drug administration regarding the extent of pollution and the concomitant results on the fishing industry on the east coast?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I will make inquiries, Mr. Speaker. These representations have not come to me personally, but they may have come through the embassy to various departments, and I will make inquiries.

FLOODS

TRAIL, B.C.—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON FINANCIAL AID

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Public Works in regard to the recent disastrous flood situation in Trail, British Columbia. In view of the urgent need of the disaster committee to have information as to the funds available for the victims of the flood, is the minister in a position to inform the house about the financial assistance which the federal government will contribute to the rehabilitation of the area? If the information is not available today, when may we expect to receive it?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Public Works): I am fully aware of the urgency of the situation in this area, as expressed by Mayor DeVito of Trail. It is our hope to have the report, not only on the flood damage there but on that in Manitoba and other provinces as well, at which time a decision will be taken by the government. I must reiterate that there is at present a disaster fund set up by the province of British Columbia for such purposes in the sum of $20 million or $25 million. It would appear to me that the damage in Trail would be within the competence of the province of British Columbia.

Inquiries of the Ministry

GRAIN

ACTION ON PRICING OF DOMESTIC WHEAT

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): I wish to direct my question to the Minister of Agriculture. In view of his earlier statements to the house that a two price system on sales of domestic wheat is one of the policies under review by the government, what action does the government propose to take on the request by the National Farmers Union for a basic price of $2.75 per bushel of domestic wheat?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): We received that particular recommendation with a number of other obervations and suggestions from the National Farmers Union this morning. That particular suggestion is also part of the review included in the proposals that we are considering relative to a two-price system.

WHEAT—POWER OF BOARD TO NEGOTIATE IN WORLD MARKETS

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of our difficult position in regard to wheat sales, will the minister and the government give consideration, as requested by the National Farmers Union, to their suggestion that the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board be extended to enable it to enter directly into world markets in the negotiation of sales, as does the Australian wheat board?

Mr. Speaker: Order. It seems to me that the supplementary question is so wide in scope as to require a statement which should, in my view, normally be made on motions.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

INQUIRY AS TO FURTHER RATE INCREASES

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Postmaster General. It is prompted by the futuristic report tabled today which forecasts rapidly increasing operating costs for the post office. Will the minister advise whether his weekend revelation at Sudbury that 10 cents is the true rate on first class mail is the first phase of a movement toward more increases in postal rates?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Mr. Laing.]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

REPRESENTATION OF CANADA AT FUNERAL OF PRESIDENT OF INDIA

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Prime Minister. Who will represent Canada at the funeral of the President of India?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, our high commissioner in India will represent Canada. May I call the attention of the house to the fact that that is the reason the flag is at half mast today.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

CONSULTATIONS RESPECTING PENSIONS OF RETIRED EMPLOYEES

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. I too join in the congratulations that have been extended to him. Since the house seems to be making up his agenda for him today, may I ask him to put high on that agenda the question of increasing the pensions of retired employees of the Canadian National Railways?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

DRUGS

TERMS OF REFERENCE OF STUDY OF NON-MEDICAL USES

Mr. Louis-Roland Comeau (South Western Nova): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare concerning the proposed committee of inquiry into the non-medical use of drugs. Is it the intention that this committee will examine the relationship between the use of the drugs stated in the minister's announcement, and the use of or addiction to so-called hard drugs, such as heroin and others? If this is the intention, why is it not stated specifically in the terms of reference?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I think it is quite clear that the terms of reference do not include hard drugs in the sense of drugs such as heroin.

Mr. Comeau: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister advise whether the reports and the hearings of the committee will be public, and when we can expect the names of members to be announced?

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is a question that should be considered by the committee itself and should not be asked at this time.

SHIPPING

SALVAGE OF TUG "EMERALD STRAITS"

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, in an endeavour to assist the Minister of Transport in getting busy, may I address a question to him. I should like to ask the minister whether, as a result of the sunken tug Emerald Straits, lost off the British Columbia coast, having been located as a result of the employment by his department of a mini-sub research vessel, any attempt is being contemplated to salvage the tug and find the bodies of those who lost their lives? If so, when and under whose auspices will the tug be salvaged?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be pleased to look into this question and see that an answer is given as soon as possible.

THE MINISTRY

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO TO RELINQUISH INDIAN AFFAIRS DUTIES

Mr. Rod Thomson (Battleford-Kindersley): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Did the Prime Minister consult with the Indian brotherhood before he took responsibility for Indian affairs away from the member for Port Arthur?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I doubt that this question is in order.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Friday, May 2, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 29, Mr. Laprise.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, last Friday I was explaining the necessity of taking all necessary steps in order to avoid errors likely to create conflicts between the various parts of the country, as well as to prevent the medical profession from falling into disrepute.

If ever abortion committees are established in hospitals, it is essential to do so only after a very judicious selection of members, and after due consideration of their personal and professional qualifications.

That is why this amendment provides that the committee includes one gynaecologist. In fact, it is highly irregular that no thought was given to that matter at the outset.

• (3:00 p.m.)

That provision is fully justified for the committee thus made up will ensure that mistakes are avoided. According to that amendment, the committee will be approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province. This is a point which, in my opinion, deserves careful consideration, for how can it be hoped that the College of Physicians and Surgeons can ensure that the physicians who sit on the committee will be conscientious enough not to recommend useless abortions, that they will bow to undue pressure which could be somewhat logical from a social point of view, but would not be based on scientific data?

I do not in the least doubt the good faith and the competence of the doctors as a whole, but one is never too cautious.

Is it conceivable that the College of Physicians and Surgeons on which would reflect the errors made will not ensure that the members of the committee are appointed judiciously.

Mr. Speaker, if this amendment on abortion ever comes to a vote, we might support it, but under certain conditions. When we realize that our speeches are not taken seriously, it is discouraging and we are asking the minister why he is not at least trying to give us the real reasons why he is rejecting some very logical amendments.

Even this morning, we received another document on abortion describing what has happened in other countries and pressing the government to avoid the errors that have been committed elsewhere.

The legalization of abortion opens the door to many abuses and could lead to abortion on request and that is why the minister does not accept any amendment liable to restrict further abortion cases.

Before concluding my comments, I would like to say why we are asking for more details. I quote a paragraph of the above-mentioned letter:

In Canada, the leaders of the campaign in favour of abortion started a few years ago to demand only restricted amendments to the legislation. One of them, Mr. Stanley Knowles, stated before a parliamentary committee in 1967 "that a limit should be set somewhere". Today, however, he is asking that any reference to abortion be striken out of the Criminal Code.

We have there an example where even if the amendment were rejected or even if abortion were not legalized, some hon. members have already changed their mind and are ready to accept a liberalization of the legislation which would lead to abuses—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I feel duty bound to support the amendment moved by the member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), which reads as follows:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting paragraph (f) of sub-section 6 of clause 18 on page 44 and substituting therefor:

"(f) "therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee, comprised of not less than two qualified medical practitioners and one gynaecologist, appointed by the board of that hospital and approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the province concerned, for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

The purpose of the amendment is to define the abortion committee and to have its membership approved by the College of Physicians and Surgeons. The amendment also stipulates that a gynaecologist must sit on the committee. For that reason, we ask that such a specialist be appointed to the therapeutic committee.

I believe the amendment is a very important one, in that it requires medical specialists in this field to be almost infallible, because the question at issue is the right of a foetus or a child in his mother's womb to live or die.

In support of my arguments, I should like to quote the testimony of Dr. Benoît Légaré, a gynaecologist at St. François d'Assise Hospital in Quebec City, before the parliamentary committee on justice and legal affairs, on March 25, 1969. In the following words, the specialist expresses his concern:

Moreover, even if it were liberal enough, to find that where abortion laws have been liberalized—

[Mr. Matte.]

Either by creating committees of specialists or others in several countries, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association, of April 1961, —these laws have not changed the figures relating to criminal abortions at all.

Some years ago, you abolished the death penalty out of humanitarianism and so that fatal miscarriages of justice would be avoided. Physicians also consider with fear this infallibility conferred upon them by allowing them to decide whether or not an innocent and defenceless being has the right to live.

The legislator's prime concern is to protect the citizens through the laws he enacts. Therefore, it is normal for him to show the greatest concern for the most ill-favoured, the weakest, the weakest of us all, namely the foetus, which is already legally accepted in society since according to sections 338 and 608 of the Civil Code it is already entitled to inheritance rights.

• (3:10 p.m.)

We therefore ask you to humbly strike the clause dealing with abortion from the omnibus bill, though it might be submitted later on, amended after consultation with the different medical circles in the country.

If, per chance, we do not reflect the opinion of the majority, we would request you to consider as essential that the advisory committees set up to that end, be accepted by the College of Physicians of the different provinces or by a national body such as the Canadian Medical Association.

Those words definitely prove that this medical expert was puzzled about the legislative proposal. He added, and I quote:

We do not question the good intentions of the legislators. That is why we wanted to get in touch with the legislators. Perhaps legislators hope, through this bill, to limit the untold number of illegal abortions which are now performed throughout the country. However, they should not have too great expectations since the bill is not sufficiently liberal to hope to achieve this.

For all those reasons, I suggest that it is advisable to support this amendment so that responsible specialists be made members of the committee and be the ones to decide whether or not the foetus should be destroyed.

Mr. C. A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, a few words only to tell the house that I am in favour of this amendment, although I already know that they will not carry much weight with those who have been instructed to pass the bill.

The responsibility of the therapeutic abortion committee is to protect the mother's life. In fact, all decisions will be taken by that committee. I do not like its name. It sounds like that of a committee of executioners deciding among themselves whether or not the victim should be put to death.

When people suffer from illnesses, especially from serious ones, the doctors consult each other on the advisability of operating. Two or three of them talk a person's case over. I have never heard that in serious cases just anybody was consulted.

Abortion is very grave since it means the suppression of life. It is extremely grave and, in my opinion, the advisory committee should be made up of experts, namely gynaecologists.

This is a rather good amendment. If I had been called upon to bring in one, I would have demanded two gynaecologists instead of one on the committee. But as I have said, the amendment is quite broad. It is simply asking that the therapeutic abortion committee of a hospital should comprise at least two qualified doctors and one gynaecologist named by that hospital's council.

If we carry things to the extremes—as they will be in certain circumstances, on account of the love of money—I cannot conceive of a gynaecologist, if two general practitioners make a majority decision, being able to impose his opinions. In such a serious case, which would be the responsibility of specialists, the committee should be made up of gynaecologists. A general practitioner is less qualified as regards abortion.

The paragraph of Bill C-150 that the amendment would change reads as follows:

"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than three members each of whom is a qualified medical practitioner—

In order to be a qualified medical practitioner, one needs only to have taken a medical course and obtained a general medical science degree. In considering this amendment. We must examine the question thoroughly, so as to avoid the abuses and consequences of the passage of this bill.

As regards the prejudicial consequences of this bill, if the committee is allowed to make extreme decisions, all members received a few comments from the Alliance for Life, that I should like to quote:

To what extent are you ready to "liberalize" the Canadian legislation on abortion?

In the opinion of certain members, the government's present proposals may seem deceptively moderate. In fact, however, it appears that such transformations are only a first step.

To my mind, this paragraph of Bill C-150, in its present form, is only a first step and a great one toward excessive liberalization of abortion. I continue quoting the comments:

In Colorado, for example, such a law has done much to increase the number of abortions in hospitals—without reducing the number of clandestine abortions.

They think that will reduce the number of clandestine abortions; yet there is proof to the contrary in the countries where abortion has been legalized. Moreover, it is only the beginning of the stampede. I go on quoting:

Some countries have adopted more permissive laws; they went as far as legalizing abortion at will.

It is what will happen if this paragraph is maintained. Quite naturally, this will lead to abortion at will. I continue quoting:

Most of them however have started by legalizing abortion for so-called reasons of health.

It is precisely what we say and what will be said by the members of this committee. It is likely that the pregnant woman can be sick. Likely, indeed. Let us say that three medical practitioners belong to the therapeutic abortion committee. This will not be the case in every hospital, but it is possible that committees of abortionists will be appointed. I have already spoken of it last week. The committees of abortionists will choose a small hospital where they will establish a committee make up of non-qualified doctors to perform abortions.

• (3:20 p.m.)

And further on:

So did Sweden in 1921. Later on, in 1938, abortion on social grounds ... and others became possible. In 1946, the law became still more permissive.

In Sweden, now, abortions are performed on request. Within a few months, Canada will be one more country where abortion will be performed on request, because of subclause (f) which allows anybody to sit on the committee.

I go on quoting:

In Poland also, abortion was first legalized on vague "medical" grounds. In 1956, those grounds were extended to cover social reasons. Today, Polish laws on abortion are among the most permissive in the world.

The permissive British law was enforced last year, following, however, a series of legal decisions which actually resulted, in making abortion legal for health reasons.

The first of those decisions was made in 1938 and since then, more and more pressure is being exerted in favour of abortion on request.

In my opinion, this bill, and especially the appointment of the committee, is paving the way to abortion on request. I am sure the minister is aware of it. For Canada, this is only a beginning where abortion and homosexuality are concerned. We made a first mistake by agreeing to the introduction of those two measures in the house.

I am entirely against the present wording of subclause (f) and I shall vote in favour of the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi because it provides a means of ensuring the presence of a gynaecologist on this committee. I am sure that if the government accepted this amendment, it would be commended instead of being criticized.

He would at least have understood what kind of amendment to the Criminal Code the people want. He would have understood also that the population is against the massacre of innocents.

Mr. Speaker, I say again that our society is going to pass a legislation which will allow the most shameful acts a people could be guilty of. I am sure that we will have to pay some day for such acts and for this legislation that should never have been introduced.

I shall be brief, because I want to give the government and government members the opportunity to vote for their fine bill they love and cherish so much. However, I repeat that I shall feel duty bound, as a Roman Catholic and a human being, to vote against this bill which will allow every licence in the future.

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, it must be stated specifically that the committee should be made up of competent gynaecologists, as stipulates this logical amendment intended to safeguard the life of human beings, to allow them to grow and develop normally.

In Canada, the population is not large enough for the debts we have to pay. Instead of turning to massive immigration, we should protect our population, allow it to increase at the rate Providence would have it. If the hospitals do not have competent committees, we will not reach the goal set by Providence.

Providence placed us in Canada and asked us to grow and multiply. The rules that are about to become law with regard to abortion cannot meet divine requirements. In Canada, the population should increase according to the views of Providence.

That committee should protect any being that is intended to live, that has the right to exist. I believe the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) would certainly be held in higher esteem if instead of introducing such senseless rules as those on abortion, he suggested that an amount of at least $1,000 be given to every mother of a family who brings a child into the world. In so doing, we would accomplish an eminently human act, while enabling the family to develop.

The committee to be appointed should include a gynaecologist. In fact, such an important committee should include two gynaecologists, as the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) said.

I feel we should consider that logical amendment. I wonder why the minister of Justice does not intervene and approve this highly logical and commendable amendment.

It is time we tackled the amendments to the bill on abortion proposed by the government. Is the government truly concerned with the protection of a woman's life and health? If so, how can we be sure that the proposed amendments would achieve that purpose?

The committee whose establishment we recommend would be quite in a position to safeguard the health and the life of human beings. Never has the health of Canadians been as well protected as today. In Canada, the rate of maternal mortality is one of the lowest in the world, that is approximately three deaths out of 10,000 births. Can we really believe that the proposed amendments would bring an even greater improvement? The debate has failed to prove as yet that such an improvement would be ensured. It is rather surprising that nobody has raised that question yet. It is also significant that no doctor has shown that it would result in some benefit.

The committee we are proposing would take direct action to protect the human being, who is so great and noble. If the human being did not exist, not much else would in this world.

We need such a committee and we want the assurance that the Minister of Justice supports this amendment. But he did not, and he is content with a status quo which is not good enough because it is beyond all bounds.

In Japan, abortion is legal and is granted on request. According to the United Nations's statistics, the rate of maternal mortality in Japan is more than three times as high as in Canada.

Yugoslavia, which passed such a legislation, has a rate of maternal mortality more than four times as high as ours.

Can it be inferred that legislation making abortion easier promotes health?

• (3:30 p.m.)

Canadians must provide themselves with committees made up of doctors of unquestionable ability.

Canada needs such committees and the services of gynaecologists in order to protect human beings and to ensure that all the requirements of our country are met. We would then thank Providence for protecting us from such acts of cruelty designed to reduce the population.

What we are doing today, every communist country has done before and I think that the legislation we are bringing forward is the most communistic and barbarous we have ever seen.

If various communist countries have committed such barbarous crimes, we do not have to imitate them. Since I do not believe the Minister of Justice is a communist, I am asking why he refuses to listen to our arguments in favour of those amendments.

The amendment now before the house is one of the most logical that has been moved. If we cannot avoid the barbarous acts that we are seeking to prevent through this Committee, the people would feel reassured if skilled men were to make such decisions. Those people, like the Minister of Justice, have been brought into the world to serve the population.

The gynaecologist and the other members of abortion committees must be highly qualified to ensure the protection of our nation. We must make sure that modern technology is made available as much as possible to every matter.

We need such committees and I do not see why the minister would deny society the presence of a gynaecologist on them. We have to sympathize with the Liberal member who lost his wife after refusing an abortion. The Canadian law cannot be blamed for it.

Let us keep in mind also that the tremendous advance of medicine since then has reduced the rate of maternal mortality from 10 to 1 in one generation. Medical authorities recognize that fact which is statistically proved. So it is ironical to claim that the amendments regarding abortion proposed by the government reflect the needs of our modern society.

What is the real purpose of that amendment? What is really going to be protected? Here are the comments of the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle), as reported on page 825 of the proceedings of the committee on health, welfare and social affairs, and I quote:

> This is exactly what we want; to reduce any cause for perplexity in the legislation, mainly to protect the doctor.

Now, Mr. Speaker, since we had no such legislation in Canada and we were faring rather well, since medicine is more advanced I would say, than in several other countries, and since the number of deaths due to abortion in Canada is about 3 out of 10,000, we do not need a legislation such as the one brought in and I consider once again that the minister should at least be quite frank and tell us: I want the best, I want a committee to be set up. I do not believe the minister should oppose this amendment, which is a social, moral, human, and above all, life-protecting measure.

Then, why does abortion disturb people so much? If only the destruction of tissue, were involved, any objection to the proposed changes in the abortion legislation would seem quite inconsistent and irrational. Do we believe abortion merely destroys tissue? Is that what the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Minister of Justice think?

Indeed, there are many who believe that abortion consists in getting rid of something similar to a blood clot.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am somewhat reluctant to tell the hon. member he is out of order, but in my opinion, his speech would be more appropriate in a debate on a motion for second or third reading. I would therefore ask him to confine his comments to the amendment moved by his colleague.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, in all respect, I shall submit to your decision.

As the members of the parliamentary committee on health, welfare and social affairs could see, this point of view is generally accepted by the medical profession. A famous Scotch surgeon, Dr. Ian Donald, a professor of gynaecology at Queen Mother's Hospital of the University of Glasgow, expressed the same opinion:

> There is no excuse, today, for anybody who has studied this much debated question and surely even less for any member of parliament, to think that a human foetus is only a kind of gelatinous and lifeless mass that can be curetted and thrown away.
> As soon as a woman is known to be pregnant and, of course, when the operation is being performed, there is actually a human being, a genetically complete entity and we can even say if it is a boy or a girl, a genius or a retarded child, if she or he is gifted for music, mathematics or sports, since all those qualities already exist.

This unborn child even in the first few weeks is perfectly human, or is there anyone to pretend that it is a rat or a guinea pig?

Mr. Speaker, those reports show once again there is a great need for the most logical and the most advisable committees. Members of such a committee should be highly respectable and have a wide knowledge of medical matters, since the decision to perform an abortion must be made by the most highly competent committee ever seen in the history of medicine.

• (3:40 p.m.)

We have those specialists. We only have to find them. We only have to bring them together and set up those committees. We shall then have at least a semblance of justice and be able to give the people related services, proficient services.

I believe that the Canadian people will have confidence in such a committee and I believe also that the mother, who has to go through this, will at least be sure of getting the proper care, thanks to such specialists. The mother surely has a right to life, and the child also. Such things must be protected, because they are the most natural, the most noble—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Mr. Romuald Rodrigue (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, I fully support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) designed to specify how the famous committee appointed in every hospital will be set up.

I also support this amendment for several other reasons.

First of all, in places where therapeutic abortions are performed according to official statistics they are performed much more for questionable psychiatric reasons, and also with questionable results, than in order to save the mother's life. In fact, the bill on abortion compels us to ask ourselves whether we are ready to accept certain forms of murder.

According to the conclusions of a survey conducted by the Association of Quebec Hospital Medical Boards, the number of therapeutic abortions performed in the hospitals of the province is now very restricted and nil, in most cases.

Because of the very limited number of medical indications, the passing of the bill before us would increase very little the number of therapeutic abortions; there would only be an increase in requests for abortion, with their dilemma.

Therapeutic abortion committees mentioned in that bill should only exist in hospitals having an adequate number of specialists and consultants in every branch, so that the decision may be the result of a just and unbiased judgment.

That inquiry—the report of the Association says so—revealed that most medical boards and boards of directors of Quebec hospitals officially and formally objected to the establishment of therapeutic abortion committees in their own hospital.

In view of professional ethics and the constant orientation of their profession, hospital doctors are very reluctant to be part of such committees, and moreover they personally refuse to perform any therapeutic abortion.

What would happen if one or more doctors refused to participate in the work of the abortion committee? Paragraph (f) of subsection 6 does mention "a committee of at least three members".

In view of the decisions taken by the said committee and the implications of such decisions for the committee members as well as for the patient, numerous questions come to mind.

Is it worth taking the risk of upsetting, by legislation, a state of balance arrived at in the status quo? Is it worth setting up a mechanism which could very well go beyond the intentions of the legislator?

Would it not be better to undertake a wider consultation open to all layers of the medical profession, to medical associations, specialists, etc.? Would it not be preferable to learn at this stage all the distinctions capable of improving the legislation even before it is adopted?

Amendment No. 20 of my hon. friend from Abitibi suggests that the said committee be made up of two doctors and one gynaecologist.

In every hospital, there are already research committees whose main aim is to improve medical practice and to allow consultation between specialists. In some hospitals, there are sometimes up to 10 voluntary committees.

However, the committee referred to in paragraph (f) of subsection 6 tends or aims to authorize the medical act. The terms used leave the door open to problems and to discussion. The main problem with therapeutic abortion committees is that psychiatrists, many of whom will accept any psychiatric indication, will ask gynaecologists to perform an abortion when the latter has refused to do it. This provision will also contribute to bargaining between female patients and their doctors.

Will the doctors and gynaecologists appointed by the hospital to form this abortion committee be working on a voluntary basis? According to a doctor's opinion, these voluntary committees and the work that would be assigned to them would not be considered as seriously as the measure suggests.

At this point, I am taking the liberty of quoting an extract from the proceedings of the committee on justice and legal affairs to show how the problem may be dealt with differently in each hospital.

In New York, an inquiry has been made in two hospitals located a few blocks from one another. It appears from this inquiry that in one of them there is one abortion per twenty deliveries and in the other, one per 6,000. Therefore, I think the proposed amendments would cause rather serious problems.

In the province of Quebec in particular, none of the small hospitals are interested in performing abortions. The doctors firmly believe that such accreditations are useless, a view that is supported by medical science itself. It should not be forgotten, besides, that the majority of Quebec doctors see no need for the proposed legislation or the institution of such committees.

As proposed, the institution of committees opens the door to all kinds of problems.

Psychiatric indications as grounds for abortion are rejected by the majority of doctors and psychiatrists. However, a few psychiatrists admit limited indications. We have to ask ourselves if, while amending the act and allegedly settling one problem, we are not creating another one.

Those are some of the reasons why doctors object to abortion.

• (3:50 p.m.)

There is also another aspect to be considered. What will be the position of physicians with regard to the committees created in the hospitals? Will they be compelled to comply with the decisions of the committee in the name of social order?

If the bill is passed in its present form, I expect two possible effects.

On the one hand, if the abortion committees strictly interpret the terms "the life or health" very few abortions will be allowed and the problem of illegal abortions will remain the same.

On the other hand, if the definition of the word "health" is somewhat broad, it will always be possible to find a reason to consider the pregnancy as dangerous.

A piece of legislation which lends itself to various interpretations and offers no more guarantees is incomplete.

Those are the reasons why I sincerely support the motion of the hon. member for Abitibi, the object of which is to strike out subsection (f) in paragraph 6 of clause 18 of the bill and to have it replaced by the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the house ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred until after consideration of motion No. 30.

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris) moved motion No. 30:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting paragraph (f) of subsection 6 in clause 18 on page 44 and substituting therefor:

"(f) "therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual adviser where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

He said: Mr. Speaker, the amendment I am sponsoring this afternoon is somewhat related to the amendment we have been discussing. It adds what I regard as an important dimension to this discussion in that it broadens the scope of interest and concern of those who will have the responsibility of making the very critical and vital decision when abortion shall take place.

One of the disturbing aspects of this long extended debate on the amendments to the Criminal Code, which has concerned me as well as many other hon. members and, judging from my mail, the majority of the people of Canada, is the direct antagonism expressed in some of the amendments to what has become known down through the centuries of western civilization as the Judaeo-Christian ethic. Up until fairly recent times, this century as a matter of fact, this has been the basis upon which our system of jurisprudence has been established; it has been largely the ethical and value basis upon which we have made moral decisions.

The amendment brings into abortion this vital question: Who will make the decision as to life or death with respect to a human individual? We know that the Judaeo-Christian ethic regards as of fundamental importance the value of an individual human life. My amendment brings into focus the advice of a psychiatrist. I think this is a very necessary and important dimension in a decision of this kind because the science, if I may use that term, of psychiatry has become pretty well established in the practice of the healing arts today. I shall be dealing with this matter later in my remarks.

But most important, where the individual wishes it the amendment makes it possible for the person concerned or, if it is a family problem, the family concerned, to call in a clergyman or spiritual adviser to deal with this vital and broader dimension in a life or death decision. I know that certain churches in this country have become quite concerned that we are moving toward a humanistic, secular, materialistic attitude toward life. Once the dikes are breached, of course, the value of individual life, as has been the experience in other countries where humanism is rampant, becomes constantly reduced until there are episodes, such as we recall within recent memory, of whole nations dedicated to the principle of genocide, the extermination of human life, because individuals or groups of individuals have been regarded as less than human and, like pests, should be eliminated because they are no longer serving any useful function.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) has argued—and I hope I am not unfair in this statement—that legal matters of this kind do not have any moral overtones or moral implications; in other words, the law does not concern itself with questions of morality. If I am wrong in this respect, he can correct me when he enters the debate once again. It is my strong view that law is very firmly based on morality, particularly law as we understand it in western civilization. We used to call it western Christian civilization. Our law stems from the decalogue which, as we know, has strong moral and religious overtones. If the humanists want to say that law has no direct relationship to moral codes, I think even the sociologists would agree that it at least has some relationship to the mores. These patterns for human behaviour have moral overtones even though they are not as firmly based as those which have undergirded the common law and even our criminal law practice.

There is a fundamental shift taking place in this amendment and other amendments in that, instead of the relationship of man in his society being anchored to concepts that derive from our values which stem from our Judaeo-Christian traditions, it is shifting in the direction of humanistic moral relativism. When that happens in a society I think it is fair to conclude that we are entering into a moral morass and a sea of confusion. I believe—and my mail has testified to this fact—that the majority of Canadians are still on the side of a moral basis for our legal system. This is why I think the Minister of Justice should at least accept this attempt to preserve some of the traditions that have been a vital part of our civilization up to the present time. All it is doing is to add a spiritual dimension so that it will not only be medical doctors—after all, they are specialists trained in a very narrow field—who will make this life and death decision.

If we are going to use the law to change and shape the social order, I suggest we are moving in a dangerous direction. I spoke in this vein a week or so ago with reference to gross indecency, and some of the pundits referred to my comments as being social jingoism. This merely underlines the moral and social confusion rampant in our society when the values and traditions of our Judaeo-Christian civilization, with the experience of centuries behind it are referred to as social jingoism.

It might be proper to ask at this stage how our society has become so deeply saturated and penetrated by the moral relativism that is indicated in some of this so-called reform legislation. I suppose that the chief sources of influence have been the academic scribblers of the last century, most of whom were concentrated in the last half of the 19th century. The press has popularized science or pseudo-science, and today the process goes on apace through the tremendous social impact of the mass media which have sometimes been referred to as chromium-plated madhouse generating myths, folklore and a reality of its own, a sort of instantaneous electronic folklore because it has no connection either with the past or with the future.

The chief architects of some of these ideas have been men like Darwin, Marx, Herbert Spencer and Freud. As one who has been through the process of higher education, both on the giving and the receiving line, I freely admit that the ideas which stem from these four gentlemen and many other academic scribblers of the last half of the last century have become the guiding stars and the intellectual illumination for much of contemporary society. Darwin gave us the theory of biological evolution, and Marx gave us the doctrine of political and economic expediency, sometimes called atheistic communism or scientific socialism.

An hon. Member: Hear, hear.

Mr. Dinsdale: I hear a "hear, hear" from across the way, but these are the terms that apply to these systems. We debate today whether God is dead or alive, but we forget that it was Marx who first explicitly stated in modern pseudo-scientific, social, jingolistic terms that God was quite definitely dead, and he gave us a political and economic system based on this thesis. Herbert Spencer combined biological evolution with humanism to produce his theory of social evolution or social Darwinism which said that in every way and every day we are getting better and better. Of course this was not borne out by the events of the first half of the 20th century.

I have given credit to psychiatrists already so I must not depart from that thesis, but Freudian psychology and the Freudian interpretation of human behaviour have strongly saturated our society. Someone has described a Freudian psychologist as the odd examining the id, and there may be some truth in that description.

Science, or perhaps I should say pseudo-science, has become a sacred cow, and belief in progress because of human perfection has been accepted almost universally, at least in institutions of higher learning.

I recall that Harold Innes, who was a great puncturer of academic balloons until recent times at the University of Toronto, called this process the new mysticism. I think that was a very apt description of the system. It is sometimes referred to as Fabianism or the inevitability of the perfect man, man in his natural state breaking through the corruption of his social institutions and achieving a peace and perfection out of the process of change that is going on apace in society. Perhaps I should resort to doggerel to simplify it so that he who runs may read. I came across this little poem which oversimplifies but which I think expresses the thought. It goes as follows:

> Man used to be a tadpole learning how to swim,
> And then he was a frog with his tail tucked in,
> And then he was a monkey hanging from the tree,
> And now he is a professor with a Ph.D.

His strength is as the strength of ten because he has taken 600 hours in social science and he knows all there is to be known about everything. He is omniscient and omnipotent and is exercising all the functions that we used to attribute to God.

• (4:10 p.m.)

To come back to the point I wish to make, which I think is a vital one, these trends marked by the new social jingoism that I have outlined briefly this afternoon inevitably result in social and political action. This is exactly what is happening in this legislation. The ideas of creative individuals in society, the academic scribblers, eventually penetrate down through society to our social institutions and are implemented in the form of social and political action.

Legislation has been brought before this house, as I have already indicated, that is not based on values enshrined within our Judaeo-Christian past but is an attempt to shape our society in terms of the new secularism, humanism and materialism. This is the motivating principle behind the legislation with which we are confronted at the present time.

If we carry this through to its logical conclusion, it results in some of the episodes that are a blot on 20th century civilization. The Nazis, those madmen in authority, without a doubt twisted the science of eugenics to develop a theory for the establishment of a pure race, a master race. They introduced a "very interesting" dimension into the process of social change, if I may quote a popular television program.

Until this century social change involved man changing his environment for the general benefit of man. We are now moving into a new, more critical and dangerous area of man changing himself in biological terms in order to adjust to his environment. This was first predicted by Aldous Huxley in his "Brave New World", when by means of pseudo-scientific and test tube methods he first satirically conceived of the possibility of biological engineering as contrasted to social engineering.

When the Nazis came to power in that great civilized nation of Germany, they introduced a master race theory that was based on the misapplication of the science of eugenics, hoping thereby to produce a generation of supermen. Some of the overtones of this idea, which involves misuse and abuse by means of pseudo-science, I think are the motivating principle behind this legislation. This legislation is designed—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but being a senior member of this house he will know the rule of relevancy very well. I do not think he is addressing himself to the amendment that he has moved.

Mr. Dinsdale: I am right on the button here, Mr. Speaker. As I said in my opening remarks, I am introducing the new dimension of inviting a clergyman or spiritual adviser to consult on this question of life or death. I am indicating exactly how we have reached the present situation where we are negating what used to be a vital and fundamental part of our western society. With great respect to Your Honour, it is within this background that I think it is necessary to make this particular point. However, I am almost at the end of my remarks.

Our own society is deeply saturated with these new values, and they have a devastating impact on basic social institutions, which we know are the family, institutions of education, the church and the state. Had I time this afternoon I would perhaps have gone into this matter a little more. We all know that social and moral confusion is rampant in our own society as well as in many other parts of the western world, and this confusion is directly related to some of these pseudo-scientific notions. This social jingoism has so saturated our society that it has become the motivating principle behind our own pattern of life without our hardly being aware of it.

What this amendment is asking, Mr. Speaker, is that at least we nostalgically recognize that there are dimensions other than the purely physical, that the members of the therapeutic abortion committee examine more than the physical and medical problem. Certainly we should make obeisance to the science of psychiatry and bring such a gentleman into consultation on this important matter, because he does add a psychological dimension. More especially, where the patient so desires, she should have the right to request the attendance of a clergyman or a spiritual adviser.

We now recognize the psychosomatic dimension. In the science of medicine, therapy involves the treatment of the whole person. If we are going to avoid some of the harsher aspects of the amendment that is being proposed by the government, we should at least recognize that we are talking not just of a physical and a medical problem. I am sure that those of us who have been involved in social work know from personal knowledge and experience that abortion, concerning as it does human life, leaves deep-rooted psychic and spiritual scars that are often not healed no matter what therapeutic approach is taken later.

Therefore I urge without further words that the minister accept this amendment, that he at least recognize and acknowledge that while we are moving in a dangerous, new direction in our outlook toward the nature of man and society, we are nevertheless looking nostalgically to the past and admitting that what has gone on in the past in terms of our Judaeo-Christian approach to life has not been entirely wrong.

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the very sincere presentation of the amendment by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale). Although I will not reply to him in philosophical terms at this stage, if we ever get to third reading I might well discuss again the relationship of law and morals as it affects this bill.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): We will all be older and wiser by that time.

• (4:20 p.m.)

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): We are getting older every day, in any event.

Mr. Dinsdale: But not much wiser.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): And acquiring the added virtue of patience. What the amendment of the hon. member strives to do is to make specific provision for the membership of the therapeutic abortion committee. When the bill went through the committee stage before the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs the government, and I on behalf of the government, considered over 30 amendments and accepted about 25. What we are dealing with is the committee's report at the report stage of the proceedings. Our position will once again be that we accept the committee report and accept even those parts of it that went against the government's position. Since we accept the report I am afraid I must recommend to the house that we reject the hon. member's amendment. I shall try to explain why.

Under proposed section 237 (6)(f), as contained in clause 18 of the bill, the requirement is that a committee such as is here being considered shall consist of not less than three duly qualified medical practitioners. Subsection 4(c) of section 237 involves purely medical considerations. We argue that the make-up of the therapeutic abortion committee ought to be that of medical practitioners. The therapeutic abortion committee must by certificate in writing state that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of a female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health. That appears to be a medical decision. It is a medical assessment of whether the life or health of the mother is endangered. The doctors must assess whether her life or health is endangered. That being so, there appears no justification for having persons on the committee who do not have the necessary training and qualification to serve on it. In other words, members of the committee must have medical training and medical qualifications.

The hon. member's motion speaks of a psychiatrist. One can conceive of a great many cases where a woman seeking an abortion is doing so because of a heart or a kidney condition or some other physical ailment. There is no need for psychiatric help in such circumstances. Such matters are best left to hospital boards. It is our position that in establishing these committees hospital boards ought to be given as much flexibility as possible in order that they may make use of all available medical expertise needed to pronounce upon the life or health of the person involved.

The hon. member also suggested that a clergyman ought to be a member of the therapeutic abortion committee. Here again I say to him that the decision to be made by the committee is a medical decision. That does not stop a woman from seeking spiritual help.

Mr. Dinsdale: This is straight humanism.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): But there is nothing to bar a woman from consulting her own spiritual adviser before she sees the doctors. She can consult her spiritual adviser about the moral decision involved in order to assess her moral position before she approaches any doctor or hospital. So far as I am concerned I would encourage a woman faced with such a problem to obtain whatever spiritual advice and guidance she may to assist her own judgment and conscience. But having done that and having decided she wants an abortion, she then comes under the terms of this proposed section. The judgment whether continuation of the pregnancy will affect the life or health of the mother is a medical judgment, and I say that prior to seeking medical advice the woman is entitled at all times to consult her own spiritual adviser. I encourage her to do so. But, with the greatest respect, a spiritual adviser cannot contribute to the medical judgment contemplated by the clause.

Mr. Dinsdale: Practitioners of psychosomatic medicine would not agree with that.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): As to whether any member of the committee should be a specialist in any field such as psychiatry, that, once again, ought to be left to the judgment of the board of the hospital. There might be circumstances in which no psychiatrist at all is needed. A psychiatrist might be of no assistance whatever on the committee. Boards of individual hospitals have been left with plenty of flexibility to designate the specialists needed on any therapeutic abortion committee. We would prefer to leave the judgment in these matters to the hospitals and to the medical profession.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to enter this debate this afternoon, but I feel compelled to do so because I must answer some of the minister's suggestions. As I said before, the entire bill is window-dressing and the minister knows it. Every hospital has a committee of doctors. Operations, whether for the removal of an appendix or for an abortion, are reviewed by these hospital committees. Any doctor who does not meet the standards of the committee may be disqualified. The minister knows this.

What the minister has done, and I emphasize this, is to try to please two segments of our population. One segment wishes to see greater flexibility in our abortion laws and the other wishes the law to remain as it is. This particular amendment to the Code is being brought in with a view to pleasing those who want the grounds for abortion to be extended; yet when one scrutinizes the bill closely one sees that it does no such thing.

The provisions setting up therapeutic abortion committees are an insult to the medical profession, and I say this seriously. Doctors practise in good faith. If any doctor thought an abortion was necessary to preserve the life or health of the mother, I am sure he would act in good faith. Adding a committee does nothing. It is utter nonsense.

Sometimes I blame the minister for the length of this debate although, to be fair, one must blame the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). Here the minister is piloting the Prime Minister's ship.

Mr. Gibson: Here we go. The same old speech.

Mr. Woolliams: I think the hon. member says a great deal without making a speech, just like his father.

Mr. Gibson: We have heard it all before.

Mr. Woolliams: Well, I will not answer the hon. member's remark because I know he cannot help himself. He exercises his greatest eloquence when sitting down.

I return to the subject matter about which I was speaking. If the government had amended the Code as we suggested and had added the word "unlawfully" in the requisite section, it could have amended the law very simply and satisfied those who want to see more liberal abortion provisions. As I said, we must assume that doctors act in good faith. But, of course, that has not been done. Except for the provision setting up a therapeutic abortion committee, the basic law affecting abortions has not been changed and the minister knows it. He is trying to bluff the public. He hopes the public will think the government is trying to do something concrete. What makes me sick is that the business of the nation is being unduly delayed because of this piece of nonsense.

[Mr. Woolliams.]

An hon. Member: The opposition is holding it up.

Mr. Woolliams: On Friday we moved a motion to adjourn this debate but government supporters voted against it.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Woolliams: Protracted debate on this bill is holding up the business of the nation. We ought to consider the problems of western Canada; we ought to get on with the nation's business. When we consider all the problems facing us, inflation, the high cost of living, no housing and the mounting economic crisis, we realize that parliament's time is being wasted with this nonsense. The government is introducing window-dressing. I will say no more. I hope I have made my position clear.

• (4:30 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I have been waiting for quite some time for the opportunity to speak on the motion of the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale).

I must say, at the outset, that I fail to understand and regret the anti-parliamentary attitude of my colleagues across the way who manage to bellow when a member starts to speak.

This having been said—and I trust they will understand—I should like to say that I regret infinitely, on my behalf and on behalf of my colleagues of the Ralliement créditiste, that the minister should not have deemed it advisable, in his reply to the hon. member for Brandon-Souris, to say at least that he would study seriously the proposal, before stating that he is opposed to it.

The proposal of the hon. member for Brandon-Souris would define the therapeutic abortion committee of any hospital as follows:

—"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

Mr. Speaker, we have had the opportunity, on the motion of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) which preceded this one, of studying its motives or reasons.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask for your co-operation—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please.

[English]

I ask the co-operation of hon. members in order that the remarks of the hon. member for Lotbinière may be heard.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Now, where was I? It does not matter. I will continue my speech.

We had the opportunity when considering the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi to study the motives that induced hon. members, particularly those of the opposition, to examine another definition and another composition of the therapeutic abortion committee of a hospital. Why, Mr. Speaker?

Quite simply because we believe that the definition in the omnibus bill states very vaguely that this therapeutic abortion committee will be composed of three doctors. Nothing more.

That is all the bill says concerning the therapeutic abortion committee. It says that it will be a committee accredited by the accreditation committee but it does not say what will be the competence, the specialization and the scientific affiliation of the members of this committee.

The government's proposal does not give any definition of competence and does not give any indication of the competence of the members of this committee. It says simply: appointment of a therapeutic abortion committee accredited by the accreditation committee. I assure you, Mr. Speaker, I am of the opinion that we are going far with these vague definitions—I could even say "woolly" but I will hold my tongue—which really do not represent a safeguard for the patient, the family, the hospital and particularly the doctors who will be on that committee.

Mr. Speaker, we, of the opposition, are making several attempts to define more clearly, more comprehensively and more safely this famous expression: therapeutic abortion committee.

Let us not forget, Mr. Speaker, that the expression therapeutic abortion committee and the creation of such a committee is the basis of this legislation on abortion, in short, the cornerstone which supports all the legislation on abortion.

We must remember that this therapeutic abortion committee will have the responsibility of applying this legislation, of studying the interests of the patient, the interests of this committee as well as those of the common and individual good.

One should not forget, Mr. Speaker, that if the therapeutic abortion committee, in a hospital, is not competent, does not work well or cannot perform its work adequately, scientifically and in the safest possible way, this definition of a therapeutic abortion committee is no longer a definition but almost a condemnation of the efficiency of this committee.

As for us, we are most concerned about this definition suggested in the legislation, especially by the words: and made up of three qualified medical practitioners. I certainly agree that doctors are all qualified practitioners, as the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) said. Besides, it does not necessarily mean that we are meeting the needs.

Having said this, we should also remember that the patient who comes to see the doctor or the therapeutic abortion committee comes there for several reasons. I would be out of order if I elaborated on that, but may I be permitted to say, very briefly, a few words about the various reasons that bring a patient to a doctor.

Among those reasons, the first one that comes to our mind is reluctance to have children. One can well realize that this reason requires the presence of a psychiatrist or a psychologist who will be able to help the woman understand that maternity is a good thing for her, that it would be against the law of nature to reject maternity on the ground that she does not want a child, that maternity is a natural need and that, all in all, it is a good thing for her.

• (4:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, it is not every qualified medical practioner who could participate in this discussion, in this extremely important and fundamental dialogue, or bring about this atmosphere of confidence that should unite a patient and her doctor. We should act immediately upon this reasoning, which seems to me most logical and justified, and see to it that on this therapeutic committee also sit a qualified person, able to consider with the patient this specific subject, that is, rejection of maternity. Of course, there are other reasons that also demand the presence of the same qualified medical practitioner, for psychiatric or psychological matters.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased with the proposal of the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), who says that there should be two qualified medical practitioners and a psychiatrist, appointed by the board of the hospital. And, I find it marvelous that the hon. member for Brandon-Souris has not only defined in his amendment the expression "therapeutic committee", but has also asked that a psychiatrist sit on this famous therapeutic abortion committee; I find this necessary and most desirable.

As such a committee undergirds this legislation on abortion, as it is the corner-stone of therapeutic abortion, this safeguard clearly becomes imperative; all potential patients who could appear before the therapeutic committee, should rest assured that they will be understood, and helped, that they will find friendly and competent people to help them. This does not necessarily mean that the committee will accept every application for abortion.

But, if we do not appoint to this committee on therapeutic abortion a psychiatrist chosen by the board of this hospital, there could quite clearly where a patient will appear before the therapeutic committee and apply officially for a therapeutic abortion. And as the committee would comprise qualified medical practitioners—not necessarily a psychiatric, not necessarily a specialist in another branch, but qualified medical practitioners, for instance—we can see at once what could happen if that patient came before the committee, asked for an abortion and has to deal with three qualified practitioners that might not have the required competence to study the motives—not to pass judgment, for who has the right in this house to pass judgment—and the reasons prompting her to procure her miscarriage.

If her request, Mr. Speaker, comes from the fact that her pregnancy may endanger her physical health or her life, then, I say that the qualified medical practitioners or others are competent. But should those motives impair her mental health, will a qualified medical practitioner be able to give that patient the same co-operation, help, understanding, as a psychologist or a psychiatrist?

Mr. Speaker, I say that if the minister cannot understand that—something which is so clear, in my opinion, that common sense shows through in every way—then he is a blind man who yields only to socialist forces, whose aim is to reduce human beings to mere numbers, with the result that nobody can or tries to understand them. Instead, they are all to be tarred with the same brush, put in the same basket without anyone seeking the reasons or the circumstances concerning those particular persons.

[Mr. Fortin.]

Mr. Speaker, it is of vital importance, I think, that a psychiatrist be on a therapeutic abortion committee. We must urge the minister and this irresponsible government to make at least one intelligent move before refusing to study this amendment or its effects.

A psychiatrist will easily understand the reasons for an abortion. I was talking earlier of a mother's wish, for instance, to refuse maternity.

There are many other cases. Let us take for example that of an unwed mother.

Let us consider the woman who has three children and who does not want a fourth one for the simple reason that she has already too many with three, that her time is already too much taken up. Would that be a serious reason, Mr. Speaker? The therapeutic abortion committee has not the psychological or psychiatrical skill to co-operate with the patient in order to get to know her reasons—not to judge but to help her—and maybe to avoid then certain useless abortions.

In short, basically, this is the real issue, to avoid useless abortions, especially when we know that abortion is the rejection of a human being and, indirectly the death of a human being. Consequently, this constitutes an infanticide or an homicide, depending upon one's point of view.

Mr. Speaker, if we cannot prevent this general butchery, let us at least make sure that useless abortions, those requested for no serious or justified reasons, will be prevented.

This is why we, in this corner of the house, are particularly happy to support this part of the amendment moved by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris which tends to ensure on the therapeutic abortion committee the presence of a psychiatrist appointed by the board of the hospital in order to give a better service to the woman who will appear before it.

According to the hon. member's proposal, the committee will comprise a "clergyman"—whatever his faith—or "a spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient".

It should be noted that the hon. member respects the freedom of the individual, and this cannot always be said of the members opposite. And the amendment says:

—for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

Mr. Speaker, this means clearly that two things have to be borne in mind, quite different although connected, when the therapeutic abortion committee is set up:

On the one hand, the psychological aspect has to be considered, or the reasons why abortion would be granted or rejected, and, on the other hand we must think of the moral problems possibly deriving therefrom.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest the hon. member for Brandon-Souris is right when he asks for the therapeutic abortion committee to be comprised, on an optional basis, of a clergyman or a priest, but only where this is requested by the patient. A clergyman or a priest should be permitted to come to the committee and study the case of the patient.

Mr. Speaker, everybody agrees that the abortion bill may have serious moral implications. We do our best however to avoid any comments on that point, for we did not come here to preachify.

However, it is an awful thought that we may pass a legislation knowing full well that it may raise serious moral problems for some people.

Then, we must be sincere enough to provide a way out in the legislation which would give the patient—and, in that, she will be protected by the law—the additional guarantee of being able to consult a priest or a clergyman officially, if she feels a moral problem is involved.

Besides, if the therapeutic abortion committee feels that the case of a given patient raises a moral problem rather than a psychiatric or a medical problem, then it could officially on its own call in a clergyman or a priest in order again—and we now come back to the subject-matter of the amendment—to provide the patient with an adequate and complete service, in short, to show her more understanding and give her greater assistance. I think this is essential.

To sum up, Mr. Speaker, the government would certainly be unwise to reject the amendment without giving it serious consideration and going to the root of the matter, as one general would put it.

Mr. Speaker, there are in this committee, in brief, two qualified medical practitioners, a psychiatrist, plus—if it is the wish of the committee and if the patient finds it advisable—a clergyman or priest, for a maximum of four persons or a minimum of three.

Such a membership guarantees adequate service and understanding from the point of view of science and professional ethics—with the two qualified medical practitioners—also moral and mental intelligence of the problem and causes, and a study of the deeper motives of a patient, and in addition, with the presence of a clergyman or a spiritual advisor—at the request of the patient—comprehension and, perhaps, an encouraging dialogue for the patient.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I say that in most cases of abortion, rejection of motherhood or quite unnatural reasons can be noticed. Quite often, such people have failed unfortunately to understand the meaning and the great importance of motherhood, they did not wish a pregnancy which may have been accidental, and consequently—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but the time allotted to him is expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are the following: The hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale)—National Parks—Alteration of land tenure principle; the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Foster)—National Defence—A.B.M. system—Missile site in Michigan area; the hon. member for Vancouver East (Mr. Winch)—Security Guards—National Harbours Board—Vancouver.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 30, Mr. Dinsdale.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the house ready for the question?

Mr. Beaudoin: Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to speak on this amendment, but in view of the eloquence and the common sense shown in the amendment moved by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), I feel duty bound to give it my wholehearted support as I think it is the only amendment, or almost the only one, which is directly related to morality.

The amendment now under consideration reads in part as follows:

—be amended by deleting paragraph (f) of subsection 6 in clause 18 on page 44 and substituting therefor:

"(f) "therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

In that amendment I note a reference to a clergyman or spiritual advisor. Moreover, in his short intervention following the explanation given by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris, the Minister of Justice said that in the bill there is nothing to bar a woman from consulting her spiritual adviser or requiring his advice or guidance. He even went further and said that he would encourage a woman faced with such a problem as abortion to see her spiritual adviser, a clergyman or anyone of her own faith, an expert in moral or religious matters, who could be of assistance to her in the decision to be made.

I extend warm congratulations to the Minister of Justice whom I recognize, through his remarks, as a believer and a Christian. But if the minister is a believer, why does he not show it in the bill?

In my view, that would eliminate once and for all—it is not very much trouble, only a few sentences to change—all suspicions or all that is going counter to morals, in such an important decision.

It would not be such a difficult problem to amend this clause. That would prove the minister is sincere about this bill and that he feels a moral responsibility in this regard. In fact, the government would take upon its shoulders the moral responsibility for this bill

At this stage, I would like to say that if we, the Créditiste members, have been speaking as often as we have on the proposed amendments, it is because we love our country very dearly, as I think we have proved it. We have set our heart on keeping intact our inheritance. The population of Canada does not exceed 21 million. The situation would be entirely different if our country was overpopulated as in the case of India.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard).]

I think that what we are now trying to prove—like some other members who have also spoken, for instance the hon. member for Brandon-Souris whom I congratulate—is that our heart is set on preserving our cultural and moral inheritance which accounts for the fact that we are a responsible people.

I also believe that we love our children including those yet to be born.

I say here that it was extremely important, because if, for more or less trivial conditions or reasons, a girl or a woman requests an abortion on psychiatric grounds, for a matter of mental health, I think that a psychiatrist will have to decide the question.

That is why I find well-founded and called for this amendment. It asks or requests the Minister of Justice, as well as the present government, to accept that a psychiatrist and also a clergyman be included in the therapeutic abortion committee for the purpose of safeguarding morality.

I believe our sense of responsibility impels us almost to heroism at this time. Today, it is very distasteful to me to speak, in this house, about the morality of abortion because, when one defends true morality, the morality which is practised by the majority of Canadians, we are called mentally retarded.

As for me, it does not bother me at all; indeed, I do not care in the least. When someone or other calls me what he wants, it does not bother me at all, but I know that the future always belonged, in Canada to the people who could stand up—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I would ask the hon. member to kindly restrict his remarks, as he did at the outset, to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris.

Mr. Beaudoin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I said that we, Canadians, have always shown a sense of responsibility.

About the minister's remarks or about the amendment to the bill, namely, that those therapeutic abortion committees would be more complete, more just and better assured of avoiding mistakes, I fully support this measure designed to amend Bill C-150 by providing that such committees include a third member, that is a psychiatrist and a third spiritual advisor or a clergyman.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words to congratulate the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale) who introduced an amendment, which is the contribution of the members of the Progressive Conservative party in order to make this bill more acceptable.

Mr. Speaker, I think the argument put forward by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris is serious. He did not elaborate very much but I think the outline he gave us while presenting his amendment to paragraph (f), concerning the composition of this therapeutic committee, deserves some consideration.

I think he has presented us with a picture of the Canadian society based on the accomplishments of the State and the Church, but I am most surprised at the answer and observations of the minister who, as usual, defends the pluralist society that I would rather call the socialist and communist oriented society. We are presented with a legislation that protects one or two per cent of the population at the expense of the 98 per cent others who as I said, represent the society based on the State and the Church.

I simply wanted to congratulate the man who has had the courage to introduce this amendment.

As for the observations of the minister, who told us that we are simply accepting the report of the committee which says that the only requirement should be the appointment of three doctors, they bewilder me.

Then, Mr. Speaker, if we consider the minister's remarks and if the house finally agrees to accept nothing but the report of the committee, what is the purpose of this fight? What is the purpose of all these amendments accepted by the Chair? The whole thing is a farce.

The minister informs us that only the committee's report will be accepted. What does it contain? I really wonder, what we are trying to do and why does the Chair accept amendments such as the one before us. The minister should have been consulted to find out whether it was really worth being discussed. That may help explain the attitude of the hon. members; I believe they were clever enough to accept the information of the committee and to disregard all those amendments which are being submitted and which the Chair sees fit to accept. Does it mean that the Chair accepts amendments which it knows beforehand to be unacceptable to the government? In that case, our efforts are futile. In my opinion—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I would like to remind the hon. member that the Chair is the servant of the house and not of any party. Moreover, I would like to ask him to limit his comments to the amendment before the house and not to discuss all the other amendments which have been disposed of.

Mr. Gauthier: I am talking on that very amendment, on paragraph (f). I am quoting the minister's words and saying that the amendment submitted by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), according to the words of the minister, no longer has any meaning.

Why are we discussing this amendment? That is what I am wondering about. We are indulging in a child's play, according to the minister, who made that statement forty-five minutes ago. In that case, let the department be firm and put an end to it once and for all. Let us proceed with the vote. To put it very simply, it is quite useless to submit an amendment of that kind, for instance, which is meant to do justice to the whole population, to all Christians in Canada, and not only to communists and socialists.

I asked earlier that there be two gynacologists. This amendment reads partly as follows:

"therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members—

I agree with the hon. member. If the medical group must be represented, very well. But man is not only an animal; he is entitled to have representatives, he has the right to resort also to spiritual doctors. That is why I find this amendment wonderful, because it meets a need in our society, a need which a certain group of Liberals may dispense from today, probably because their leader's favourite authors are Karl Marx and Mao Tse-tung.

But we are not in that case and we must try to meet the needs of the people by means of an amendment, and I think this amendment is consistent with the wish of the majority of Canadians. I dare say a "majority" because I wonder whether, when discussing in this parliament, we are still in a democracy. But I hope the government will come back to democracy and will think a little more of complying with the majority's wish, instead of 1 or 2 per cent of the population.

This is why I feel we should adopt those amendments without the slightest hesitation. Speaking about the clergyman, the hon. minister adds quite ingenuously that he would encourage women to consult clergymen; but the point is that there will be no clergymen on the committee. This is what our argument is all about.

There will be no counsel on the committee. A member may recommend to the future mother to confer with a clergyman, but I can assure you that, under the circumstances, and considering the way the measure is drafted, the pregnant woman will find it rather difficult to consult the clergyman who sits on the committee, because there will not be a clergyman. Perhaps there will be some socialists, but there will be no christian representative.

Mr. Speaker, these are the two main arguments which struck me in the remarks of the minister. When he says that it is to dispel widespread fears, it does not make any sense; people are justified in fearing the present bill because we are heading for a society of absolute licence where socialism and communism will prevail. That is where we are heading.

The socialists are happy. They laugh. They triumph.

The minister said earlier that he learned a great many things since the beginning of this debate, to be patient for one. I think that tomorrow he may learn something else. He will learn that society is angry at him. Let him be careful. It would be a good thing for him—though I do not wish it—if he were a little jostled, because the amendment we are discussing has been well thought. It has been proposed by a capable man, an old hand at politics. Moreover, I believe we should adopt it even though all the amendments, like the bill, should never have been brought at the political level. However, such is the case. We are not those who have brought it up and this is why we are strongly opposed to the bill being carried on for the benefits and particularly for the glory of socialists, since tomorrow we shall be shedding tears of blood for having let this happen.

Once more, I say that I shall vote in favour of this amendment, which requires that at least four members be appointed on the therapeutic abortion committee, to allow the greatest majority of our people to have access to legislations we are supposed to vote in their name, not only at the medical level but at the moral and social levels as well.

[Mr. Gauthier.]

• (5:10 p.m.)

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, the amendment now before us which deals with Bill C-150 and more especially paragraph (f) of clause 18, ranks among the most important we have seen up to now.

If we consider that the role of an elected and responsible government is to provide the people with the results that they wish to obtain in the management of public affairs and as long as it is normally and morally advisable, it is necessary to establish and maintain a democratic formula promoting life in society based on equitable laws through which each individual would enjoy social, political and religious freedom as far as the unprejudiced application of the laws is concerned. An individual and collective effort is necessary to ensure prosperity, security and cultural progress.

The amendment under consideration today proves however that we have a long way to go before attaining a high degree of civilization. The family, on which society, is founded is nowadays forgotten, neglected, humiliated and scorned. Whether it is pleasant or not to be reminded of this, nevertheless it is a fact. Today, we are studying an amendment dealing with the status of woman in our society.

On April 15 last, the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale) put motion No. 30 which is simply meant to protect the mother, the main member of the family. This amendment will probably have opponents, especially men who claim to be the liberators of women, but who speak of their liberation through abortion. This is simply to slight them.

The 70,000 Canadian women who took the trouble to write to the Prime Minister last week did not do so to demand abortion. On the contrary, they objected to that legislation about which most of them have never been consulted. With a few exceptions, Canadian women have never demanded abortion. Regarding those exceptions, Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote from an article published in Le Soleil, on Friday December 6, 1968, under the title: "Une femme qui désire avorter n'a pas à se justifier devant un comité".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I remind the hon. member that the article he wants to read, in order to be accepted, must have some connection with the amendment of the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale). Otherwise, I shall be obliged to call him to order.

Mr. Godin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are talking about an amendment that provides for the setting up of a four-member committee. Now, the article I want to quote deals with the exceptions, those Canadian women who are against such a committee and in favour of abortion. I want to prove, Mr. Speaker, that they are very few and I hope you will allow me to quote one of their statements. So far, only the statements of those who are against have been submitted. Today, Mr. Speaker, I would like to read the statement of a lady who is for abortion and I hope that will be agreeable to you.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I told the hon. member he has to deal with the amendment before us and from the information he has just given, his comments are not related to it. Very kindly, I would ask him to restrict his remarks to the amendment.

Mr. Godin: Mr. Speaker, I thank you once again for your observations, but I have not yet started to read the article. I find your ruling rather premature. Finally, who knows what I have here?

It concerns a former secretary of state who is still invited to address university students. She is not a criminal woman, but a former minister and former cabinet member who once said about this problem:

Miss Judy LaMarsh, former secretary of State, said Wednesday night that if she ever became pregnant, she would prefer illegal abortion rather than an appearance before a committee to claim that she should be procured legal miscarriage.

Miss LaMarsh, who was speaking at the University of Toronto at a students' debate on abortions stated that she was personally against the proposal requiring a pregnant woman to appear before a board of psychiatrists, doctors, barristers and priests, if she wanted abortion.

"If I were pregnant I would prefer miscarriage with a spoon and a knife in a dirty kitchen," said Miss LaMarsh.

Mr. Speaker, you know that a pretty and desirable woman has much more chances than Miss LaMarsh of becoming pregnant.

I go on with the quotation:

She added that restrictions on abortion should be removed from the Criminal Code and that women should have the right to discuss only with their attending doctor the possibility of an abortion.

This supports what has just said the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier), namely that clause 18 should not have been included in the Code. I go on:

When a student suggested that women wanted abortions merely for the sake of decency, Miss LaMarsh replied: "I wonder if he would think in this way if his girl friend or his sister were in that position—at 17 years old, maybe, without any money and without a husband."

Miss LaMarsh said that it should be "easier" to have an abortion than to give birth to a child.

She has also stated that the amendments to Criminal Code permitting therapeutic abortions, as introduced by Prime Minister Trudeau, were not going far enough.

This is terrific, Mr. Speaker. I continue the quotation:

In fact, these amendments would allow therapeutic abortions where pregnancy would endanger the life or the health of the mother, but would require the written consent of a special committee in an approved hospital.

Miss LaMarsh said later during the interview that, although she does not believe that a woman can really do anything she likes with her own body, she fieels a woman has the right, if her doctor agrees, to procure herself an abortion, and the state has no business limiting her freedom by legislation.

During her 20 minute speech, she stated that the proposed amendment to the Criminal Code "makes very little account of the social problems of the great number of married and unmarried persons involved".

"A stirring error".

Miss LaMarsh added that she was not interested in knowing if the "stirring mistake" in the pregnant woman was a human being or not.

"What I am concerned about, are the parents of that mistake. I am worried about the young men who become the fathers of those mistakes, and the young women whose lives may be destroyed".

When one of the panelists suggested that abortions should be covered by medicare and by the health insurance scheme in Ontario, Miss LaMarsh struck the seat beside her, saying—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. It is quite clear that the article referred to has nothing to do with the amendment under consideration.

Mr. Godin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In conclusion, I should like to express my gratitude to you for allowing me to read that much of it all the same.

At any rate, Miss LaMarsh points out again that it should be easier to have an abortion than to give birth to a child.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if I were pregnant—again a conjecture—what would I do? Before whom did Miss LaMarsh express her opinion? Before doctors, heads of families, experienced people? Indeed not. The only person in favour of abortion in the country who dared come out and speak out, chose to do so before inexperienced students.

This is what such people think.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Since the human being is the most valuable creature in any organized society, it has undeniable rights to the spiritual as well as the temporal good, and these should be fully respected and safeguarded.

If natural law confers rights, at the same time it imposes corresponding duties. In fact, the right to life, for instance, involves the duty to preserve life. The right to a decent life involves the duty to behave with dignity moreover, if the right to have a family derives from man's natural right to freedom in the choice of a state in life, it is incumbent on a member of parliament to take social, cultural and moral measures of such a nature as to increase stability and assist man in fulfilling his particular role.

The abortion legislation as proposed would allow abortion in cases where the health of the mother would be endangered. This is given a wide interpretation. As will often be the case, women will now have a legal means to get aborted at the slightest excuse. Indeed, we will have abortions at will and this may come in direct relationship with the decline in the birth rate which is due to the pill. It will more or less amount to self-extermination for the human race.

Mr. Speaker, we know that reproduction does not stand as the No. 1 problem for the Canadian people. So, I wonder why we deal with abortion since there is no problem there. Why do we talk about abortion, when the main problem has to do with distribution, and this has been proved?

The government sends ambassadors and workers throughout the world in order to find customers, to find consumers for our products. So, why do we talk about abortion, why do we try to pass this piece of legislation which will as a result destroy the next generation, the generation of tomorrow, that could have taken advantage of our surpluses and thereby become our best consumers?

[Mr. Godin.]

Using charity and goodwill as a pretext, we have entered into special arrangements with the bad Russians who were against us in the last war.

In the past few years, we have entered into contracts, we have granted subsidies and advantageous loans for purchases of Canadian wheat by the Chinese who are getting ready to wage war on us. To what nation must we give way?

At this point, may I be permitted to quote an excerpt from a speech delivered in Prague in 1869. I quote:

> Let us not prevent marriages between our men and Christian girls; because, through the latter, we break into the most inclusive circles.
>
> But, mainly, let us invade the teaching field. In this way we shall spread the ideas that are useful to our cause and we shall mold the minds as we see fit.
> Let us spread the idea of common-law marriage, in order to destroy in Christian women their devotion to the principles and the practices of their faith.

It is obvious that, if the idea of common-law marriage has been advocated for a hundred years, abortion would be rather helpful to those people, who have practised it more freely than within marriage.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I ask the hon. member to let us know, after those comments, in what way he intends to deal with the amendment now before us. Otherwise he shall have to be called to order again and the hon. member is well aware of the rules in this regard.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. The hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Allmand: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. During the course of the speech being made by the hon. member you have risen four times to bring him to order on the point of relevancy. I fully support you in this respect and I want to cite to you Standing Order 34 (2) which reads as follows:

> Mr. Speaker or the Chairman, after having called the attention of the House, or of the committee, to the conduct of a member who persists in irrelevance, or repetition, may direct him to discontinue his speech, and if then the member still continues to speak, Mr. Speaker shall name him or, if in committee, the Chairman shall report him to the House.

We in the house have had enough of irrelevance and waste of time, and I would ask you to enforce this rule if the hon. member continues to be irrelevant. I ask you to direct him to discontinue his speech if he continues to be irrelevant. You have interrupted him four times already and have asked him to be relevant but he has flagrantly disregarded your remarks. I ask you to enforce the rule, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I thank the hon. member, that is exactly why I made certain comments on the last call to order.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand), I refer to the same standing order which reads:

> Mr. Speaker or the Chairman, after having called the attention of the house, or of the committee, to the conduct of a member who persists in irrelevance—

• (5:30 p.m.)

I should like to emphasize another side of the question, as the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce has not done so. When the hon. member for Portneuf (Mr. Godin) rose to speak, he asked the Chair's permission to make a quotation. You called him to order without knowing what the hon. member for Portneuf (Mr. Godin) wanted to say or quote. I believe it is one of the first calls to order that could not come under standing order 34(2).

This call to order may have caused the hon. member for Portneuf to lose the thread of his ideas, of the matter in hand, since psychologically speaking, it is more or less what usually happens.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask you to kindly allow the hon. member for Portneuf to pursue his very interesting and brilliant remarks.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Both hon. members made their remarks very clear to the Chair. I thank them most sincerely and ask the hon. member for Portneuf who still has a few observations to make, to kindly limit his remarks, this time, to the amendment.

Mr. Godin: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for having thanked my colleagues and I am coming back to the amendment through a last quotation, which is the most important of all, and I am still quoting from a speech delivered in Prague in 1869. There are only three lines, I quote:

> At the appointed and predetermined time, we shall unleash the revolution which through the ruin of all classes of Christendom, will enable us to enslave all Christians once and for all.

That is why, I asked a while ago for the benefit of what nation shall we have to yield? Are modern wars, with the modern weapons we know, putting the authors of that speech in fear of a revolution in Canada? Is it to be feared that Canada will be actually destroyed before being taken over? Would that be the means they have found—abortion—to prevent us from reproducing ourselves, so as to be able to seize the country without any trouble? Is Canadian parliament the tool of those people?

Those are the questions that come to my mind in the face of the statements of the minister who again opposes a very simple amendment which reads:

> "therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor.

The minister told us that he actually urged people, women, to see a psychiatrist or their clergyman.

Now, if the minister agrees, we do too, and we want to make even surer. Promises and unwritten commitments are not good enough. That is why the hon. member for Brandon-Souris moved this amendment, merely because he wanted the wishes of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) to be spelled out in the act. It is nothing else. That is why I still support the amendment in question.

Now—as I repeated a while ago—is there anything more drastic than abortion to complete the infamous work of the pill? Since it is related and precedes abortion, I feel that it is closely related to the amendment in question, and considering the fact that the pills are not entirely satisfactory, might the bill not be designed to help pharmacists?

When we know that a woman can conceive only 60 days a year, why all the publicity, for instance, about the famous pill and why speak about abortion? Why speak about abortion for a period of 60 days per year? And considering that a woman—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Godin: Mr. Speaker, I need only one more minute.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Godin: It is very brief, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The time of the hon. member is over.

The hon. member for Champlain (Mr. Matte).

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be called to order too often, because we realize that on the other side of the house, even if they do not want to listen to our speeches carefully, seriously, they watch us closely in an effort to catch us up.

And your role, Mr. Speaker, becomes extremely difficult, I agree. You cannot possibly know every thing. You are not a walking encyclopedia and consequently how can you judge every technical, medical, scientific or other question, while saying at the same time that we are within the subject or not? That is far from easy.

It is quite understandable, Mr. Chairman, that we should sometimes get away from the subject, at this stage of the debate that has been lasting for weeks. We are so deeply involved in the subject that even for a simple amendment we have at the tips of our fingers all the relevant arguments.

While considering the amendment introduced by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), we are still in the realm of the subject I believe, when we bring forth all possible arguments to prove that it is very important that the advisory committee, in an accredited hospital, should prove that it has all the required qualifications to perform abortion. We want this committee to make decisions but only when we are reasonably sure—I do not say absolutely sure, but reasonably sure—that it will be able to avoid making mistakes and yielding to sentimental pressures and blackmail.

The purpose of the amendment now before us and which is closely related to the amendment discussed earlier is just to avoid that.

I want here to congratulate and thank the hon. member for Brandon-Souris for having considered the question of abortion from a point of view which is very much the same as ours. He certainly deserves to be congratulated for his amendment goes, at least in some ways, a little further still than the previous one and I quote:

> "Therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

Mr. Speaker, we realize, in reading this amendment, the continuing concern of those who, in this house, radically oppose abortion as such. They want to protect people, to the best of their ability, so that if, unfortunately, abortion were accepted as such, we would know at least that every care has been taken to avoid every kind of abuse.

We understand very well the recommendations made a moment ago by the minister when he said that, personally, he was quite in favour of the suggestion, but that there was no need of including it in the bill since it would be done through a simple advisory board without it being indicated in the law.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether the minister thinks he is smarter than the law but it is unfortunately common knowledge that i's should be dotted and that t's should be crossed—and more particularly so here, taking into account the experiences undergone elsewhere. It is essential to dot the i's, rather than rely on the fact that there will be advisors, people who will have to think things over, to sound their conscience and to ponder upon a possible abortion. Will qualified physicians then go and take the advice of clergymen and psychiatrists? Are we to expect such a thing? This is not good enough, not by a long shot. That is why the amendment becomes important, if not essential, for who will agree to abortion?

It has been said ever so often—and I will say it again—that according to duly qualified medical practitioners, cases where the mother's life must be weighed against the life of the fœtus she bears in her womb, are extremely rare; there may be three cases out of ten thousand. Consequently in 20 cases of abortion, consideration and advice will not be sought for purely medical and scientific reasons. Therefore, the committee that will have to decide must be apprised of all the factors, in order not to be tricked by those who would try by every possible means to procure a legal abortion.

Out of a hundred cases submitted to a physician to secure abortion, at least 95 per cent will be unwarranted. Yet since people will go and see their physicians for that purpose, they will naturally do their utmost to succeed.

That is why, with pressures brought to bear upon him from all sides even though he is well qualified, the poor physician will be in an extremely complex situation and most of the times, his decision will be contrary to his own conception of his patient's condition. If he is alone, it will be extremely difficult for him to arrive at a decision. On the other hand, by adding two members to the committee, we would partly relieve him of the responsibility.

Once he is able to consult a psychiatrist the latter becomes perhaps the most important person, more than the clergyman, because according to the representations we received from the various Churches, namely from the Roman Catholic Church, we know they are opposed to abortion. Moreover, I do not think the woman requesting an abortion would be disposed to consult her parish priest or a spiritual advisor.

Now the fact remains that even a clergyman or a spiritual adviser can give sensible advice which would surely not be prejudicial to the diagnosis which the senior physician will have to make.

I say that the most important individual in that case will be the psychiatrist and I refer again to that famous number which impresses me very much. As there is practically no case when abortion has to be performed to save the life of a woman, the reason of health has been added. Now, the psychiatrist becomes the key man in such a case, because the person who will go before the therapeutic abortion committee is already somewhat mentally affected and ill, since she is ready to accept something which is unnatural. The fact that she started by asking medical advice for an abortion while being comparatively healthy indicates that her mental health is especially affected. This is why I feel that, when he suggests a psychiatrist, the hon. member for Brandon-Souris realizes quite well the disastrous consequences of the problem which has been before us for some time.

The problem is extremely serious, because a pregnant person is perhaps not in a position, especially on account of her special condition, to judge matters adequately by herself. We only have to remember the peculiar behaviour of a pregnant woman; she is somewhat disturbed—and this applies to all women—and then her reasoning and her judgment are not as logical as they would be in other circumstances.

This pertains to psychology, to the mind and to mental health. Nobody would then be in a better position than a psychiatrist to advise most judiciously and most objectively the attending doctors on the person wanting an abortion.

I find therefore this amendment most appropriate. I find it serious. I find that once again it fully supports us in our fight and we shall keep on fighting until the minister can or will decide to take our comments into account.

A four member committee still better than one comprising only two members, since there will be four persons to look after the interests of the patient. I am also in favour of a committee made up of properly qualified people, that is, who know the human mind because they have made a special study of the subject and who are familiar with all the possible distortions it may present due to various circumstances.

I therefore think that by specifying that a psychiatrist will be consulted, we do not repeat what is normally inferred when we refer to qualified doctors. That is what the minister said just now, that it was necessarily inferred. But we take that precaution knowing human nature as it is and knowing also that the easiest way out has many supporters in the world.

We therefore know that there may be a whole string of reasons, besides the real ones, which can bring someone to ask for an abortion. That is why if ever abortion was accepted, we would want the law to be very specific so as to discourage those who would want to resort to it. As the hon. member for Portneuf (Mr. Godin) pointed out, there is no reason why we should be in favour of such a thing.

I do not think that the problem is worse from the population point of view. On the contrary, our country does a lot of publicity to attract immigrants. At this time, I would like to make the distinction—once again, people may think that it is my hobby, but I feel very strongly about it—between the province of Quebec and the other provinces.

It could be that in the other provinces people are not so much opposed to abortion because they depend on immigration.

Mr. Speaker: I hope that the hon. member will see to it that his remarks are relevant to the amendment.

I believe that he has already indicated for the information of the hon. members the difference between the province of Quebec and the other provinces, as regards this bill, inasmuch as the general principle of the legislation is concerned. I feel however that his remarks, at this time, should bear on the matter before the house, and I know that the hon. member will manage to present his argument in this context.

Mr. Matte: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

What I was trying to say is that, to me, the amendment is restrictive. I am in favour of the amendment because it will reduce the number of people resorting to abortion. And if we do not accept the amendment, the result will be that many people, throughout the country, will appeal to the advisory committee to be authorized to get an abortion. I find that extremely unfortunate for Quebec especially because, even though other provinces can rely on immigration, Quebec can rely only on its own progeny, and the problem is now quite alarming: in the last ten years, the Quebec family has dropped to 1.9 children.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member puts forward the very argument I was afraid to hear in the house. He knows that the subject now before us is an amendment to the legislation designed to increase the number of members on a special committee, including the appointment of a psychiatrist and a spiritual advisor. The hon. member should direct his remarks to that.

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, this time I will try not to depart from the subject, because being called to order like that is likely to give us a complex and force us to resort to a psychiatrist.

So I simply say, to conclude, that I think the quality of the members of the committee should be specified, and not be indefinite as it is now with the committee having to be comprised of qualified medical practitioners. The term "qualified" seems adequate to the minister but, as far as we are concerned, this amendment specifying the exact quality of those who are called upon to be members of the committee is necessary to limit the scope of this clause of the omnibus bill.

Even if both amendments, Nos. 29 and 30, which are of a similar nature, were lumped together, that would still mean 4 or 5 members. But if, moreover, it was specified that one of the two qualified medical practitioners must be a gynaecologist, there could then be a gynaecologist, a medical practitioner, a psychiatrist as well as a clergyman and a spiritual advisor.

Then, we would take a much lesser risk, and we would meet the wish of the people who would see that we are really concerned with protecting the life of the mother, and not satisfying a certain group of people who would like to have such freedom that it would become licentiousness.

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I wish to avail myself of the few remaining minutes to support the amendment of the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale). I think this amendment is logical and goes to the heart of the matter. We are about to pass a bill which will have very serious consequences, as it affects the very basis of human nature. It is as the root of the tree. If we want the tree to be in good condition, in good health, we must take care of its roots. If the roots become sick, the tree will die. If the nation is in danger, if the very basis of the nation is undermined, it will be the fault of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), the fault of the government. This bill might shake them. I believe that we should recognize that this amendment is moral, logical, social and that it must not be rejected on any ground.

This amendment should be accepted because the one who moved it deserves all our congratulations. I am asking the hon. member, once again, if it is possible, to ask his friends to support his amendment because up to now only one member has supported it.

This amendment certainly deserves a lot of support, because it carries a lot of weight. Moreover, it is so logical, so moral, so social, that I think it is impossible not to take it into account.

The Minister of Justice said in his statements, that he was ready to advise mothers to turn to a spiritual advisor, a moralist, a psychiatrist. If the minister is ready to do that, why does he not include it in his bill?

The minister stated publicly that he was ready at least to recognize that this amendment is logical. Why not include it in the bill and have it inserted in the Criminal Code? After a bill has been passed, it comes into force and then that legislation is maintained by the State. If that amendment does not appear in the Criminal Code, those who have to enforce the law will not bother about it. Therefore, the minister implies only that the amendment, though logical and commendable, cannot be accepted.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Latulippe: I should like to point out that it is six o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but, it being six o'clock, I do now leave the Chair.

[English]

At six o'clock the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, before recess we were discussing an amendment which I called just and tremendously great.

That amendment is more complete than any of the preceding ones, because it asks for, and I quote:

> —not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy—

Mr. Speaker, as this question deals with morals, since it is impossible to appeal to conscience without touching morals, I should like to say a few words and broaden the outlook on the question of morality. Indeed, it is the greatest, the noblest thing, since morality ensures our inner balance and nurtures hope. It is the same thing for the population as a whole.

Since the population is made up of individuals, if we can preserve in each person the sense of morality, on the human and social plane, society itself will be stabilized, thanks to this morality, to this fundamental moral law needed by every man. Without such a law, no person is stable. Therefore, a nation without morality is an unstable nation heading for anarchy and ruin. No morality means no hope.

This is partly why this amendment, tending to allow the patient to request a spiritual advisor seems to me essentially logical, human, and commendable, for I will say it again, moral laws are essential to any nation.

We must withdraw contemporary societies from the influence of artificial, legalistic rules and bring them into the vivifying world of duty and moral obligation. So we have a moral obligation to protest against this bill, because this is a matter of conscience.

Never before, I believe, has Parliament been faced with such a matter of conscience. Those who have no conscience, who follow like sheep, who let themselves be lead to the slaughterhouse, we cannot blame them, neither can we blame those who have a conscience, who wish to upgrade the nation, who want to ennoble the human being, who wish to protect individuals, to protect the nation, and who are against anarchy.

We are against anarchy and the legislative proposals on which we are to vote will surely and definitely lead us towards anarchy, because nations that have adopted similar legislation, similar positions, have known anarchy, have lived in terrible anarchy.

Every society and every nation should then be ruled by the same basic law: the respect of man. That is what I am driving at. The respect of man for man and of the state for the individual is at the very root of the social and human order.

Now, this amendment leads us directly into such moral considerations. It makes us turn our minds to morality for the protection of our society, for its very survival, and for its development and its future growth. We need such a high moral law.

Order postulates a law which sets a goal and which requires means to attain that goal. In nature, goal and means blend into one, because things and people are subjected to a vigorous determination. Whether it be the physical universe, the vegetable or animal kingdom, the goals and the means are summed up in the universal law of self-conservation and of respect for man.

A society established on the principle of respect of man must not confuse the end and the means. The state must not embody the end as well as the means. It is impossible to be both instrument and purpose and that is precisely what the present government is proposing now. It brings forth the instrument, while the purpose of the bill before us is to make abortion currently and generally obtainable and to remove all scruples about abortion. That is exactly what makes abortion so valuable, because once more it is concerned with the very essence of individuals, of life and of the human beings who will come after us. We shall not live forever and after we have been replaced things may be better. After our times, new, better, perhaps more sociable and natural things will come up because of our accomplishments, and if we have misbehaved, we will pay for it in the other world.

In our society, the role of the State is to legislate and to administer the law. It is up to the State not to embody at the same time—it must not do so by a strict application of the law—the end and the finality of society, that is to be enclosed in a specific institution. It is therefore necessary for the basic law of the human society to be embodied in a specific institution which would hold the supreme power above the State and out of its reach.

The motion under consideration leads us directly once again to a matter of conscience and ethics. It also shows that it is necessary to put that institution out of the reach of the State. A moral law is powerless in itself. It would be too easy for the State to abolish it or to violate it to its own advantage if it felt like it. Of course, the State always and necessarily has authority since it is in power. Then, having regard to that power, what will the Minister of Justice do?

The minister acknowledges that the bill must be based on morals, but he does not want morals to be part of the Criminal Code. He does not want such a written law. Then, what are we to think of the minister? What about that Minister of Justice? Perhaps he should be called the Minister of Injustice, for he advocates or accepts certain reforms or certain moral laws only in principle, whereas he actually refuses to accept them.

So, such a minister reflects supernatural hypocrisy; it is not even natural hypocrisy. The basic law of society must not be violated by anybody and above all by the State. If everything is relative as far as humanity is concerned, in this case this is an absolute imperative. Otherwise, all would be lost.

Mr. Speaker, just as the means must be subordinated to the end, so the State must be subordinated to moral power. This is natural and necessary in the order of things. There is no denying this, Mr. Speaker.

Embodying the supreme law of the nation, the moral power must be a real power. Life is not sufficient. It must have moral power and not material power. The only real immaterial power is justice. Moral power and judiciary power must be one power only.

[Mr. Latulippe.]

However, this becomes a matter of conscience, Mr. Speaker.

The amendment now under study should certainly be accepted by a great many hon. members, by the hon. members on the other side of the house, by those who, up to now, have refused to accept any amendment to this bill.

And yet, the amendment under consideration is one of the most complete, most human, and most social-minded ever seen. So, humanity will be what man makes of it. Man harvests what he sows. Therefore, if he spreads disorder in our society, if he prevents society from multipling itself by immoral laws, like the one we are now considering, we shall be subjected to dreadful calamities.

As far as I am concerned, I shall not take that responsibility. If the minister and members opposite want to accept such a responsibility, they can do so. We are here as conscientious objectors. We want peace and happiness for the nation. We want the nation to progress; we want to be replaced by others who are logically supposed to replace us according to the destiny of creation. And, we have no right to interfere with such things.

The world that is dying under our very eyes is that of ideologies, objections, myths, of right supported by force, of false values or false ideologies; when in contact with reality, these degenerate into material values.

People consider only the material point of view, for they do not care for the spiritual point of view. They do not care about morals. There are no more morals, there is no more conscience on the other side at the present time. However, I feel that all government. members cannot be deprived of a conscience.

Among our friends opposite, some are still conscientious. I ask them to stand up and defend the bill, so that we can at least have that logical, great and ultimate amendment adopted.

That amendment should at least be inserted in our Criminal Code, so as to provide some measure of protection, a little conscience, a little hope, for our nation, today and tomorrow.

The world of quality and of masses, the world of all those who, avid for power or money built their empire on the traffic of men, of their flesh, of their mind, of their conscience or of their faith, the world of the ignored, despised, crushed man, used as an instrument, the world of pride, of violence, of fanatism and of war, is an inhuman world.

Therefore, this is what we are in the process of giving the people, the future nation: an inhuman world. Yet we were not elected to indulge in inhuman things. We are human beings and so, we must know what is moral, what is a human being, an individual. We must recognize its greatness, its sublimity.

So, the break of dawn, the new-born world will be the world of reality and of living men, the world of genuine human values, both material and spiritual. That is what we want, that is what we stand for, with this bill and with the amendment proposed in it. The world of quality is the world of the elite, of all those who, on this earth, are the most worthy of our times, in short the world of moral law, of tolerance and of peace. It is the world of the man who is understood, considered, respected, treated as a human being, the world of the happy city, built by free men for free men who are masters of their own destiny.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Richard): Order. The time allotted to the hon. member has expired. The hon. member for Shefford.

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, we are studying, clause by clause, the amendments which have been introduced in this house concerning bill C-150.

Some similar amendments have been tabled previously, but we must still express our views on each of these amendments which are, I think, very important.

If we have a close look at the amendment No. 30, introduced by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale) we notice that it is rather similar to the previous one. We sincerely regret that the minister does not seem willing to accept any of those amendments which were not been moved for fun, or for mere pleasure.

Each of them is important if one takes trouble to study the documents, the briefs, to read the medical books and to learn from the experience of other countries which have already enacted such bills.

The main purpose of this amendment is to clarify in bill C-150 the wording of the provision which compels us to appoint abortion committees where this wording would specify in advance the members who would be appointed to these abortion committees.

Now, the hon. member for Brandon-Souris suggested that a psychiatrist be appointed with two doctors and a clergyman of the religion or the belief of the female person who wants to have an abortion. Well, the main purpose of this amendment is to specify in the legislation who within the abortion committee, will have the final say from the psychiatric point of view.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Why should there be a psychiatrist on this committee? Because medical science proves that in the case of abortion a psychiatrist is very important because of the many psychiatric symptoms which induce women to go to certain doctors to get an abortion.

How could a doctor study the reason a woman has to want an abortion if he is not himself a psychiatrist? I have here, in front of me, books written by doctors who give hundreds of psychiatric reasons for which a woman might want to get an abortion.

The legislation does not specify anything; it does not oblige the hospital board to have a psychiatrist on this committee. That is where we find the legislation is not clear enough, it is incomplete, ambiguous, it will open the door to a lot of abuses.

I am shocked to see that the minister is stubborn to the point that he will not accept any of the amendments proposed in the house.

Mr. Speaker, I simply have to mention the books published on the subject by doctors, books sold by the Éditions du jour and written by Dr. Serge Mongeau, in collaboration with other doctors. Speaking of psychiatric conditions, he says this, at page 45, about unwanted pregnancies. He emphasizes cases where the psychiatrist alone could tell if such or such a woman is right or wrong to get an abortion.

Unwanted pregnancies

That reluctant approach can appear at the very beginning, for instance in the case of the bachelor girl who cannot foresee any way of keeping her child.

Further he is more specific:

Except in some very rare exceptions, the majority of women appear to be more or less in two minds when pregnant. At times the child is seen as a threat, at times as the object of tender love. The psychological state of the woman, her environment, her health, her relations with her husband, all condition her attitude towards the child she bears.

Those are some psychiatric reasons—and I shall enumerate others—which induce a woman at the start of her pregnancy to either want or reject her child. Statistics prove, however, that a woman who wanted to be aborted because she did not want her child, later on, after one, two or three months, had changed her mind and from then on wanted to bring her child into the world.

Mr. Speaker, those are psychiatric reasons for which a woman wants to be aborted or not. How are those psychiatric reasons to be judged if there is no psychiatrist on the committee?

Dr. Soddy, another expert in the field of psychiatry, has this to say:

> Soddy distinguishes two forms of non-wish, in the face of pregnancy: "the absence of a positive desire for the child for his own sake, as an individual with his own rights; a negative attitude towards the child or even his rejection". Depending on the category, the character of the mother-to-be, the social possibilities and numerous other factors, four alternatives can be considered:

He goes on to explain, for instance, why a woman may finally accept her child, even though she may in the first instance have rejected it and wanted to be aborted, because the psychiatrist convinced her to have the child.

I continue:

> Even when the discovery of pregnancy has caused the future mother to be slightly dismayed, it can happen, particularly when she receives adequate help, that the child who was first regarded as undesirable becomes fully accepted. In Yugoslavia, where abortion is legal if approved by a committee created to study the requests, this intervention is refused to 10 to 20 per cent of the women who request it. In 1960-61, an inquiry revealed that out of 762 women who had not been granted an abortion, 52.5 per cent in 1960 and 42 per cent in 1961 carried their pregnancy to its term. Out of that number, 92 per cent accepted their child normally—

And women who had first asked for an abortion, were convinced with advice and help from the psychiatrist on the abortion committee, to carry their pregnancy to its term. However, how can the doctors on the abortion committee judge the psychiatric reasons a woman may invoke for having an abortion, if they are not psychiatrists themselves? Therein lies the illogical and nonsensical attitude of the minister regarding the scientists, medical authorities in Canada who have submitted briefs, who have given us everything we need to draw up legislation which will meet fully the needs of the public, of the pregnant women, and of those desiring abortion.

> We believe, he goes on to say, that it is necessary to try everything to motivate women to want maternity and through effective help, to make maternity acceptable to them as soon as possible. Social workers play an increasingly successful role in the special centres established for that kind of work.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

But how can we convince the women who want an abortion for psychiatric reasons if there are no psychiatrists on the abortion committee? How can doctors who know nothing about psychiatry say: Madam, for such and such a reason, you should continue your pregnancy to term. That shows that our legislation is absolutely senseless and unsuitable for the Canadian people.

I would like to give another reason, a psychiatric one, put forward by a woman who wants an abortion. What can a doctor who is not a psychiatrist decide about that? Here is the case:

> I am pregnant. I want an abortion but I can find nobody to do it; the only one who would be ready to do it charges $600, but I do not have that money. I cannot wait any longer; I will do it myself. My mind is made up.

That is a woman who could surely be psychiatrically treated.

> —I will use a knitting needle. It is dangerous, I know; I risk a lot, I know; but I cannot do otherwise. Why do doctors let a person destroy herself? You help those who want to commit suicide, but you incite people to kill themselves perhaps. Is that human?
> Isabelle, 20 years old.

Here is another psychiatric case which shows another reason why someone wants an abortion.

> I think that in any case, if a woman wants an abortion, she finds the means to get it. And in what conditions?
>
> Having myself had that experience, I can assure you that the steps you have to take, the refusals you have to suffer, fear and everything, are causing as much traumatism as the abortion itself. If abortion was allowed, with some restrictions, of course, there might be fewer serious consequences, physical as well as mental.
> A single woman, 27 years old, Montreal

That is a riding represented by a Liberal member in this house, and not a single Liberal member has spoken for or against this proposed legislation. And the article goes on to say:

• (8:30 p.m.)

> I have known two "professional" abortionists. The first one: two girls died after abortions; he was acquitted for the first one but for the second one he got eight months in Bordeaux, plus $11,000 costs.
>
> The second one: a girl died and her nude body was found in the alley of Drolet Street about 10 years ago. He was indicted; he got away without a prison sentence, thanks to his money . . . He told me that about 50 per cent of the girls who think they are pregnant—

And here we come to the psychiatric point.

—50 per cent of the girls who think they are pregnant are not and in those cases he uses some red liquid and chicken liver that, after being dipped in the liquid, looks much like a foetus. When he had a new customer he sent a chauffeur to get her and who would then get him in a hospital lobby, and this patient believed he was a doctor. He aborted 20 girls or women per week. The price varied from $200 to $300. He gave $25 to anybody who brought him a good customer.

That was a long time ago; nowadays it goes much faster.

But, Mr. Speaker, if we look at the statement of this girl and the reason why she wanted an abortion, again we find psychiatric reasons. In the bill introduced by the minister there is no guarantee that a psychiatrist will be appointed. The minister does not want to accept psychiatric indications which would allow a woman, whether she is right or wrong, to decide whether or not she will go to a psychiatrist.

I will add here that there are other reasons, and I have many more:

If I hope that abortion will be allowed, it is because it is an obsolete, hypocritical and irrealistic legislation; it is also for the rich and not for the poor.

Wife of an unemployed worker in Mont-Laurier, 36 years old.

Mr. Speaker, further on we are also told that abortions vary according to each hospital. And yet, it is more or less the same people, the same women, the same diseases, the same psychiatry, the same pediatry, the same foetuses that are born.

The proportion of therapeutic abortions varies ... according to each hospital.

And in the United States, Mr. Hall, who has made a survey of those problems in various hospitals, says this:

Hall counted in one hospital one abortion out of 20 deliveries and in another none out of 24,417 deliveries.

It is estimated, generally speaking, that there are about 100 illegal abortions for every therapeutic abortion, and that illegal abortions are the cause of great medical risks for the mother's health or life.

And from the point of view of psychiatry too.

Further, when we are told how the committees are formed, we may wonder who the members are. Here is what is said about the committees.

The woman herself must make an application to secure a legal abortion. A special abortion committee within the Royal College of Medicine, a committee composed of a physician usually an obstetrician—

—or a gynaecologist. The law does not mention a gynaecologist. Beside that gynaecologist——of an ordinary citizen, preferably a woman—

It would be normal that a woman should decide on the fate of another woman, of a person of the female sex, such as the one who wants an abortion, it would be normal that a woman conversant with that matter should be on the committee.

I carry on:

—and of the head of the Social Psychiatry Board, has to determine the value of the indications to decide for mentally retarded women and to appoint doctors who will be able to decide themselves whether they should perform an abortion. Those doctors, officially appointed, will be able to decide whether an abortion should be performed, if their decision is supported by another doctor, the one who usually performs the abortion.

In the present legislation, we are not told that the doctor who is to perform the abortion will be on the committee. A doctor may decide on the abortion and another doctor, who will have no decision to take on the case, will have to perform the abortion or the murder.

Mr. Speaker, in Denmark, where they like to speak about other countries, they say, and I quote:

—the legislation provides ... "that a woman can obtain a miscarriage in special cases where physical or mental troubles—

Further on, they specify who is to be members of the hospital committees in Denmark, and I quote again:

—three members appointed by the Department of Social Affairs. Two of them are doctors and one must be a specialist in psychiatry—

A specialist in psychiatry! Denmark requests only a psychiatrist and a general practitioner. In addition, it is said, and I am still quoting:

—the third member of the committee is always the director of an agency ... called "Assistance to the mother".

The minister proposes a legislation on abortion but he does not intend to set up committees of "Assistance to the mothers". He suggests the establishment of abortion committees, but not committees to assist the mother. Nothing is said in this respect. There is no mention of it in the legislation while in a country like Denmark, committees have been established to help the mother. Why? Because a woman is refused an abortion for psychiatric reasons. At the same time, she is referred to a psychiatric committee to help here reach her term.

I have in hand a very interesting table on this subject, Mr. Speaker. Who knows today, in the world as elsewhere, what are the main reasons why abortions are requested? It is for the same reasons that we, of the Créditiste party, say that to want to allow abortion in Canada for health reasons is a false pretext. Such reasons do not exist.

Here are some figures:

In Yugoslavia, for instance, in 1965, here are the reasons why abortions were requested: 23 per cent of the women who secured an abortion have done so, not for reasons of health but of housing.

The Canadian government is not solving anything now and the minister responsible for housing has been compelled to resign because the government would not accept his views nor his proposals.

In Yugoslavia, Mr. Speaker, 23 per cent of the women who have asked for an abortion have done so because of lack of housing; 30 per cent, for economical and social reasons, because they did not have enough money to live. Moreover, 16 per cent of them have invoked family relationships; 6 per cent, illness in the family, but not their own; 3 per cent, marital relationships; 4 per cent, alcoholism; 9 per cent, various reasons, of a personal nature, and 2 per cent, various other reasons.

Well, this means that in Yugoslavia, 95 per cent of the women have secured an abortion for reasons completely different than those invoked in Canada to legalize abortion.

• (8:40 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired. The hon. member can only proceed if he has the unanimous consent of the house. Is there unanimous agreement to allowing the hon. member to continue?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry, but there is no unanimous consent. Is the house ready for the question?

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, following the very sensible statements we have just heard from the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) I feel that the house and the people across Canada should read the page of Canadian history that the Ralliement créditiste is writing just now, showing, with the help of concrete examples, that the experience of some Communist countries among others did not bring the results expected when the legislation or amendments were passed.

Therefore, the page of history now in the process of being written in Canada should be read by the whole population.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, I should like to congratulate the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale) who has moved an amendment to the effect that the bill on abortion > —be amended by deleting paragraph (f) of subsection 6 in clause 18 on page 44 and substituting therefor:

> "(f) "therapeutic abortion committee" for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital."

Now, in support of such a logical amendment, I cannot imagine we could not secure a majority in the house, which should not defeat the government, but could at least prove to the entire population that dictatorship does not exist in this parliament and that government members are ready to vote according to their conscience, if they have one.

Some Conservatives, and we see it now by this amendment, are free to bring in amendments which undoubtedly would relax the omnibus bill, especially if that amendment were accepted since it asks that a clergyman be appointed on a patient's request.

As for myself, being a Catholic, if members of my family with the upbringing they had, either my wife or even my daughters, if they want to have, in addition to a psychiatrist, a clergyman of any religion whatever, I believe that in a Christian Canada first of all, and then because we are Catholics in Quebec and because others belong to other denominations, we must have at least the right to consult a minister in order to enjoy through such an amendment a certain freedom in our country.

Then Catholics in Quebec, especially government members, will have, as of today, to take into account one thing, namely that the amendment which is brought in by the Conservative member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale) is also backed up by all the Knights of Columbus of the province of Quebec.

Members on the government side will have to keep that in mind.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) must also take into consideration that the amendments brought in up to now, and the one moved today, are supported by the 70,000 Catholic parents who have asked for the withdrawal of the omnibus bill or at least for the acceptance of the amendments moved by the opposition.

With such an abundance of protests, do you know what I was told by my constituents whom I met during the week end. They told me: "There is only one solution left to the Liberals, especially the Quebec Liberals who do not even dare to assert themselves: either to accept the amendments as such or to resign." You have the choice, my good friends, if tomorrow the government members reject that sensible amendment, because I know that in their midst, there is a large number who every day come to tell us in the lobbies or elsewhere: "Continue to fight, because we cannot say anything." The coward who hides behind the curtains does not have the courage to rise and to seek justice for his fellow citizens.

We taxpayers are in favour of such sensible amendments, because they would allow us to include in the committee a clergyman whom we represent as the members of any denomination in Canada. The passage of such an amendment would give us a little more freedom in Canada and we are convinced in advance that when the question will be put, the authoritarian vote of a Prime Minister who establishes a dictatorship will compel all members of his party to follow him and come back to the fold. Moreover, when the time comes to close the door of the sheep-fold, those people, instead of listening to the voice of truth, will still object.

I am not an expert in medicine, but I am a legislator who has been elected by his constituents and in that capacity, I maintain that we must rely on competent persons, such as those we met in the committees as well as those who lodged some protests—I have submitted to the Minister of Justice more than 8,000 names—those who gave some explanations and who inspired us as they are now inspiring the hon. member for Brandon-Souris to put amendments which would tone down the omnibus bill a little.

But no, under a dictatorship, the tables would be turned and still a government who would claim a majority, could get a legislation passed as it wanted it, without amendment.

Mr. Speaker, as legislators, with our conscience and the courage of our convictions, we must express aloud what the people think but do not say, and if, in this house, the dictatorial muzzle imposed on government members unfortunately prevents the truth from being known, we of the Ralliement créditiste, shall go on fighting to bring it to light. We support unreservedly the amendment moved by a Conservative member.

Mr. J. A. Mongrain (Trois-Rivières): Mr. Speaker, I only rise to ask your permission to read an editorial from a Catholic French-Canadian newspaper which was founded by the Oblates Fathers. I am referring to Le Droit of Monday May 5, 1969, and for the enlightenment of those of our friends who have no opportunity to read this newspaper, I should like to put this article on record. It is entitled: "Le bill omnibus et les créditistes".

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I suspect the hon. member if rising for the same reason that I am rising, that is to remind the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) that at this point the debate should be directed to the amendment. If the editorial deals with the amendment specifically, then it is in order. However, I invite the hon. member to confine his remarks to the amendment.

• (8:50 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, I have been listening for two long weeks, and in order to explain my position—

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order please. The hon. member for Lotbinière on a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, we are very glad that the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) is taking the trouble of reading that stupid editorial. Besides, he will thus show that he is as stupid as the editorial.

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

The hon. member says that I am as stupid as that editorial. But I do not want to have anything in common with the hon. member.

I go on—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I might point out to the house that we could go on at some length dealing with points of order and points of privilege, but I would caution hon. members against using this type of device to prolong discussion. If I may make an observation, this sort of thing does tend to diminish the importance of a point of order or a point of privilege, both of which are important parts of our procedure. The hon. member for Trois-Rivières.

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, after listening for two weeks to a lot of things being said by our colleagues in the Créditistes party who have referred to all kinds of reports, books, booklets and editorials, I should like to put forward something in rebuttal. This amendment proposes that there be various types of doctors on these committees which decide who should be aborted and who should not. To prove their point, these hon. members have referred to a lot of things over the last two weeks. I am now trying to prove my point.

I contend this amendment is not justified because its objective is already met in the bill presented to the house. I want to read two paragraphs to help prove my point. Since they are in French, I will read them in French.

[Translation]

Several people will hold the Créditistes' filibuster of Bill C-150, known as the omnibus bill, to be highly virtuous. But we should not make such a mistake when they only pursue political interests—

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I can entertain only one point of order at a time. I recognize the hon. member for Shefford.

[Translation]

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I wish to point out that I and my colleagues have stuck to the amendment under consideration which deals especially with the members of the committee, the psychiatrist in particular. I should then ask the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) to stick to the subject and, more especially, to the psychiatrist whom he should consult more often.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I certainly appreciate having the support of the hon. member for Shefford, in this matter but I point out to the house that under our standing orders we are restricted at this point to a specific amendment. I know the hon. member for Trois-Rivières is as much aware of this as I am. If the editorial in question relates to this amendment, I would certainly be pleased to hear him; otherwise I caution him against referring to it because not only would the reading of it be a violation of our standing orders, but it likely would precipitate the sort of situation we would want to avoid.

[Translation]

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, I intend to be as calm and objective as I can be. I intend to follow the fatherly advice that you have just given us, that is not to stray from the subject of the amendment.

I have respectfully listened during twenty minutes to the hon. member for Compton (Mr. Latulippe). He said we were against morality.

The other day, one of his colleagues said we were murderers and we did not protest too much.

I would simply like to take a few minutes to read two paragraphs tending to show that if we refuse this amendment, which calls for a psychiatrist, a pediatrician, etc., it is not because we are for vice and against virtue. On the contrary, our attitude is justified, and I want to prove that I am not the only one to say so. If I were, my friends the Créditistes would not believe me. I shall, therefore, be brief. I need only a couple of minutes, Mr. Speaker. I quote:

Those who approve this bill know as well as do the Créditistes that morality condemns and will continue to condemn certain practices opposed by Réal Caouette's followers. One needs not be a theologian to understand that. The legislation under study does not condone vice; it states simply that the State will not longer act as the conscience of the citizens.

The Creditistes know very well what is involved and their filibuster seems much more political than virtuous.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

An hon. Member: The offended virgins.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Shefford on a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your kindness.

Please note that we shall allow the hon. member for Trois-Rivières to read any editorial he wishes to read, but we shall read ours and you have not heard the last of them.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I point out to the hon. member for Shefford that the Chair has in the past tried to be as generous as possible within the confines of the rules. I would say that that generosity has been extended in ample measure to the hon. members who represent the Ralliement Créditiste. At the same time, I point out to the hon. member for Trois-Rivières that the editorial, in so far as I have been able to hear it, does not really fall within the four corners of the amendment. I wonder therefore, whether it is not in the interest of the house to forgo it at this point. I have not heard very much of the editorial and I do not want to prejudge the issue, but I would caution him along that line.

[Translation]

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Speaker, I fully agree that it is your duty to maintain order here. I would be the last one to waste the time of this house. And to show my co-operation, my full co-operation, I will read only five lines and then I will resume my seat. I will not even make any comment. After that, you will be able to decide whether I was out of order.

I quote:

> The créditistes know very well what is involved and their filibuster seems much more political than virtuous. They want to annoy the government and have the closure imposed to them, in the hope of posing as martyrs in the eyes of the public and gain new supporters.

Mr. Speaker, I resume my seat. That is enough.

Mr. Charles-Eugène Dionne (Kamouraska): Mr. Speaker, I understand your difficulties in applying the rules sometimes, but I will do all that is humanly possible to keep to the amendment now before us.

I do not know if it is through an oversight or through inadvertence but what would normally be likely to make those who will have to tackle the problems arising out of this legislation, proceed more carefully has been overlooked in this bill.

I realize that the amendment moved by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris, seems fully justified under the circumstances.

It proposes to replace paragraph (f), clause 6 of the bill now being discussed by the following:

> Therapeutic abortion committee for any hospital means a committee comprised of not less than four members, two of whom shall be qualified medical practitioners and one a psychiatrist appointed by the board of that hospital, as well as a clergyman, or spiritual advisor where this is requested by the patient for the purpose of considering and determining questions relating to terminations of pregnancy within that hospital.

The mover of this amendment to the clause of the bill, and all those who approve it are showing their wisdom. It is quite in order and logical that all precautions be taken.

The member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) has also moved an amendment along the same lines which was discussed this afternoon. I do not understand at all why the sponsor of the bill is not more understanding when it is a question of taking precautions which he would be quite ready to recommend in another field. It looks as if the clauses of this famous omnibus bill are dictated by some occult influences which try to achieve their nefarious purpose, to amend and to undermine the natural established order.

I do not want to leave the hon. members under the impression that I consider the bill unacceptable, even with this amendment to clause 6. But we could however perceive in the mind of the supporters of this legislation whose inspiration is doubtful that they are not quite deprived of practical sense when it comes to appointing a therapeutic abortion committee, but that they can at least give as many guarantees as possible about the women who would have to undergo an operation in circumstances that are never desirable, but reluctantly accepted in special cases.

The amendment recommends that the committee be made up at least four members. Among the members of the committee, there should be a clergyman or a spiritual advisor at the patient's request. It is not asking too much except that the promotors of the new morality find in this a drawback to the pursuit of their aims.

In any case, I am not influenced at all by the scientific humanists, and I am of the opinion that every precaution should be taken in order to fully respect the individual freedom of every person.

And since we talked about editorials, I have here one that was published in a Quebec newspaper on April 22, 1969. Here is the last part of it:

> Let us think it over carefully before it is too late. Some observers said recently that England has reached the stage where abortion is practised on request and that people are now campaigning in favour of euthanasia. In Yugoslavia, the National Society of Gynaecology estimated last year that the number of abortions was then greater than the number of births in that country, that is 500,000 abortions against 400,000 births yearly.
> They did not believe either when they decided to legalize abortion that this would happen.

That article is signed Roger Bruneau. So, under the circumstances, I support the amendment wholeheartedly.

paragraph (f) of subsection 6 of clause 18 on page 44 and substituting therefor:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

[Translation]

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I was paired with the hon. member for Terrebonne (Mr. Comtois). Had I voted, I would have voted in favour of it.

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi) moved motion No. 33:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the word "female" on lines 28 and 29 on page 42 and the word "female" on lines 3 and 23 on page 43 and the word "female" on line 39 on page 44.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I should like, at the outset, to express my appreciation for the way in which you announced the recent vote, by asking for the "oui" and the "non" in good French. This pleased us very much. It was a very interesting, very intelligent move, but comparable qualities are not to be found in the bill before us.

We are now considering amendment No. 33, moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), asking among other things to delete from the bill, the word "female" wherever it appears.

It goes without saying that such a useless expression bears out our opinion: section 18 is ridiculous, and I see that the members of NDP are laughing with me. I am happy to see that for once, they support us.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) proposes to amend paragraphs a), b) and c) of a subclause 4 by deleting the word "female". to find out why we want to delete the expression

[Mr. Speaker.]

"female" from this bill, let us see what it is doing there. I quote paragraph a):

(a) a qualified medical practitioner, other than a member of the therapeutic abortion committee for any hospital, who in good faith uses in an accredited or approved hospital any means for the purpose of carrying out his intentions to produce the miscarriage of a female person—

Here then, for the first time in this bill, we find the famous, ridiculous and useless expression "female". I cannot possibly imagine how a person of the male sex could be aborted. Nor can I possibly imagine how a person of the third sex, a member of the club Gimini 1st in Montreal, for instance, could be aborted.

It seems to me that when we speak of abortion it goes without saying, it is simply normal, that a female is involved. The least that could be done perhaps is to mention it once at the beginning of the clause then delete it further on. It strikes me as ridiculous. As the whole bill does, to my mind. I resume my quotation, paragraph b)

(b) a female person who, being pregnant,—

How interesting for a male person to be pregnant. You see how ridiculous this bill is. It seems to me it goes without saying that the expression is pointless. To come back to paragraph b), further on one reads:

—and at a meeting of the committee at which the case of such female person has been reviewed,

Every third line, this redundant word "female" crops up again.

In paragraph (c), we read:

(c) has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person—

Any pregnancy is necessarily the pregnancy of a female person. I do not understand the wording, but I can venture a guess. Maybe if we search for a reason for the inclusion by the federal government of those words in the bill we will discover that the majority of Liberals in the house do not understand that a male person cannot be pregnant. That may be why it is necessary to dot the i's, especially for the benefit of the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain), and why the expression "female" must be used.

If that is the explanation, we are ready to withdraw the amendment, because we all agree to help enlighten the hon. member for Trois-Rivières, lest his feeble glimmer of understanding flickers out again.

Under Subsection 5(b), it is said, and I quote:

Mr. Mongrain: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. For once I hear my hon. friend say sensible things and I am inclined to vote with him. But if he upsets me, I shall vote against him.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, we shall take him at his word and stop teasing him, so he will vote with us. I would ask my hon. colleagues to welcome him with a good hand because for the first time in this debate he has said something intelligent.

Mr. Speaker, there remains the same unnecessary expression in paragraph (b) of subsection 5, and I quote:

(b) require a medical practitioner who, in that province, has procured the miscarriage of any female person named—

Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) has said, it is horrible and it reflects the nonsense of the clause.

It seems to me that the matter is self-explanatory, because one cannot imagine the pregnancy of a male person.

Mr. Speaker, I see several of my colleagues from all parties in the house are laughing. It is precisely because that clause is ridiculous. My colleague from Abitibi has seen fit to clarify the situation and to strike out from clause 18 that term which in our opinion is superfluous.

Mr. Speaker, let us summarize to see why we are using that term.

In subsection (4) of section 18, it is stated:

—any means for the purpose of carrying out his intention to procure the miscarriage of a female person—

In my opinion, there should be a period after the term "to procure the miscarriage."

• (9:50 p.m.)

Why? As I was saying, it is ridiculous to repeat that expression. If one asks: What is the meaning of to procure the miscarriage of a female person? The meaning is obvious and, from that point of view, both the French and the English language give the expression a precise meaning. In both languages you can find the expression "female person". Then, why after "the miscarriage of a person" use the expression "female person"? It seems to me that it is useless and ridiculous and that that expression could be avoided. It is merely a repetition. It does not clarify anything.

In paragraph (b) one can read and I quote:

(b) a female person who, being pregnant—

As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, let us try and imagine that that expression is removed.

There may be another reason why the expression "female person" is used. It may be that the author of the bill did not know exactly what the female sex was, unlike the hon. members who are married, and that it was important for him that it be added.

Mr. Speaker, again it strikes me that the expression female person who, being pregnant, permits a qualified medical practitioner to use. . ." is pure repetition.

One reads further on, and I quote:

—of the committee at which the case of such female person has been reviewed—

However, Mr. Speaker, it is useless to belabour the point. It could be summed up in this way: if the hon. minister wants at all cost to distinguish between the three sexes, that is the male, the female and the other sex, it should be mentioned once at the beginning of the section and, from then on, this useless expressions should be deleted.

The hon. member for Chambly (Mr. Pilon) says that it is against maturity. It may be true; I have the impression that we are simply showing common sense, that we are reasonable. It is ridiculous, it is stupid, and I am almost ashamed to speak of such a thing. It seems to me that that goes without saying.

Mr. Speaker, on that matter of abortion, the bill says: "to procure the miscarriage of a female person" and further, in paragraph (5) (b):

—require a medical practioner who, in that province, has procured the miscarriage of any female person named in a certificate—

We recognize in principle that we cannot logically be in favour of that clause 18, because that is ridiculous, and the word "female" proves it.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to show, that we are not the only ones to think along these lines; we sincerely regret that the previous amendments, aiming to appoint specialists on abortion committees, have not been adopted. We do not see why the government is once more refusing the amendment which is proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi.

It may be my turn to read an editorial; it was published by the newspaper L'Union des Cantons de l'Est dated Tuesday April 29, 1969. This is a most interesting leading article. I require the attention of the house and particularly of the cabinet members. They will see into what problems they are pushing us headlong, as well as the Canadian population.

They will see that if some editorialists find the position of the Ralliement créditiste ridiculous, there are other, much more able and talented who believe that our position is not only acceptable, but that it should be accepted.

Why have we moved this amendment about the word "female"? It is to show how ridiculous this legislation is, how superficial it is, and how it has been ill conceived, without taking into account standards which should insure the security of the person, of the patient, who will go before a committee.

The editorial writer, Mr. Marcel Rivard, had this to say in L'Union des Cantons de l'Est and I quote:

Mr. Trudeau's majority government was carried away by its own momentum of legal liberalization; it is on the verge of taking a false step in passing Bill C-150, better known as the omnibus bill. First of all, this bill is inadmissible on account of its approach—

And I would point out to you that it is a Liberal newspaper. If you check its Liberal membership cards, you will see. I continue the quotation:

First of all, this bill is inadmissible—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I draw the hon. member's attention to the fact that under the Standing Orders he must confine both his own comments and relevant editorials to the specific amendment before the house. I have had to interject on more than one occasion tonight to point this out, and I would invite the attention of the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) to this rule.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your kind remarks. Now I should like to come to the aforementioned matter.

Our editorial writer, Mr. Marcel Rivard, had this to say, and I quote:

First of all, that bill is inadmissible by reason of its presentation.

I appreciate that such expressions as "female person" are useless. The bill deals with too many subjects, and here the writer adds—

Mr. Speaker, I would rather continue tomorrow; then we shall be in fine fettle and I should like to show the hon. members on the government side that we, the members of the Ralliement créditiste are indefatigable. Mr. Speaker, I should like to call it ten o'clock.

[Mr. Fortin.]

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being ten o'clock, it is my duty to put the questions to be debated.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

NATIONAL PARKS—ALTERATION OF LAND TENURE PRINCIPLE

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, the question I wish to discuss tonight arises from an exchange that took place last April 18 when I inquired of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Chrétien) whether the same leeway would be granted the western parks, particularly the mountain parks, with respect to the application of the rigid terms of reference of the National Parks Act as was now being negotiated with respect to the proposed new park in Gaspé.

I mentioned particularly those national parks areas that had been established before 1930. That point, of course, refers to the fact that prior to 1930 the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta did not have control of their resources. The minister, very facetiously—and this is one of the characteristics of a great deal of ministerial response—said that the code Napoleon did not apply to the province of Manitoba but if Manitoba wished to adopt it he would give consideration to that desire. Of course, the Minister was begging the question completely, because this matter does not apply to the province of Manitoba at all.

I want to use this occasion to press once again, as I have pressed many times in the house, the urgent need for the expansion of parks of all kinds, including national, recreational and historical. The present administration has now been in office since 1963. During the six year interval they have repeatedly indicated that they are going to proceed with a crash program to meet the urgent recreational demands which inevitably accompany the growth of leisure time and which particularly arise from the process of urbanization that has created a good many of our social problems. These problems, of course, are also related to our booming and developing tourist industry. There has not been one new national park established during that time. The last national park established was the new park in Nova Scotia called Kejimkujik. I am not sure whether that is the correct pronunciation, and there is no member from Nova Scotia here to guide me in that respect. That park was launched in 1963 under a former administration and it is the last development since that time. A federal-provincial conference on parks was established—and incidentally this arose out of the Resources for Tomorrow conference—so that there might be continuous consultation between the provinces and Ottawa with respect to the jurisdictional problem arising from the provincial control of resources.

This particular group has not been functioning to any great extent. A recreational parks program was set to roll but nothing has happened with respect to recreational parks. We all realize that our national parks are under extreme pressure from a growing demand, and if we are going to preserve our national parks as museums of natural history, we will have to expand. We will have to double the number of parks and supplement park facilities by a very aggressive recreational park program. I will mention here, in particular, the Cyprus Hills park on the Saskatchewan and Alberta border which provides an opportunity to preserve for posterity a typical prairie land area where, as says the old song "Home on the Range", the deer and the antelope play. That land is still available, but urgent action by the federal government is needed.

So far as the mountain parks are concerned, the great difficulty has been the bureaucratic attitude toward the basic rights of the people, particularly in Banff and in Jasper. In 1962 a zoning policy was established and was well accepted by the residents of those two mountain parks as a means of preventing any further encroachment on the wilderness area. Since the new government came into power, there have been repeated attacks on the residents of these mountain parks, describing them as greedy, self-seeking despoilers of nature and resources. That, of course, is hardly designed to win friends and influence people. From my knowledge of these people I can say that they are just as anxious as are Canadians elsewhere to preserve Canada's natural heritage.

We need more parks. We need them in Quebec, where there are no national parks, and we need them in Ontario where there are no national parks worth mentioning. Members on this side of the house are not the only ones to take issue with the government's neglect in this regard, and also with its bureaucratic approach. The Edmonton Journal of April 10 had this to say about national parks:

> Edmonton Strathcona MP Dr. Hu Harries returned from Jasper Wednesday "appalled" at the conditions under which Jasper Park residents and businessmen must live and operate.
> He said he found townsite businessmen "insecure and fearful of the government bureaucracy", which he termed "quite an unreasonable oppression".
> Dr. Harries, a Liberal MP, spoke to a Jasper Chamber of Commerce meeting Tuesday night and told his large audience national park residents "should go to Ottawa to present their case at every possible opportunity".

The hon. member from the Rocky Mountain constituency (Mr. Sulatycky) also made the same accusation about the bureaucratic attitude of the government toward the fundamental rights of these people. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) recently said that the government has taken control of the decision making process from the bureaucrats. Here is an opportunity to demonstrate that fact. I say the government should accept its responsibility in this matter.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat surprised to see that the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale) did not actually deal with the problem he raised in the House of Commons, on April 18, 1969, when he made remarks as to the possible establishment of a national park in the Forillon peninsula, in Quebec. I would have liked to have his opinion on this. It would have been very useful for the matter of clarifying the debate, to know how he stands—

[English]

Mr. Dinsdale: That was my last statement. I am all for it.

Mr. Chrétien: Good.

[Translation]

Then if he agrees with that, I thank him for his support and must give him the assurance we are making progress at this stage.

The Quebec Minister of Tourism will be in Ottawa tomorrow and I hope we come to an agreement as to the establishment of a national park in the province of Quebec, which will complete the series of national parks we have created in Canada. Unfortunately the province of Quebec is not in on this.

The hon. member made a remark to the effect that no new national parks have been established in Canada since 1963. It may be true, but I am happy to tell him we are negotiating about the establishment of such parks in many parts of Canada, and particularly in Quebec.

There will be another national park in New Brunswick.

He has heard members of his own party ask me to create another park in Newfoundland.

We are in the process of negotiating with the western provinces, especially with Manitoba, to have another national park.

Negotiations are under way with Saskatchewan and Alberta with a view to creating a truly Prairies park.

There is some controversy, at the present time, with regard to the possibility of having national parks in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories.

To my mind, it is imperative to have some immediately in those areas, which are extremely vast. The natural sites are absolutely fantastic and we should not miss the opportunity of setting aside, for future generations, sizeable areas for conservation programs.

I know many Canadians are interested in that policy. I can assure the hon. member that we hope, within the next few months, to have three, four or perhaps five new national parks in Canada. A few months ago, I made a speech in which I said that in the next 25 years we should have the courage and the foresight to create at least 30 to 40 new national parks in Canada.

I thank the hon. member for his remarks.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—A.B.M. SYSTEM—MISSILE SITE IN MICHIGAN AREA

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question in the House of Commons on Wednesday, April 23, was to the Minister of National Defence and involved an inquiry as to the location of the anti-ballistic missile site for the Michigan-Ohio area of the United States. As you are aware, a large part of northern Ontario is immediately adjacent to the upper peninsula of the state of Michigan.

Indeed, in the past we have become accustomed to large United States defence installations being located immediately adjacent to the Canadian border. This is because the Sault Ste. Marie locks are one of the most important shipping canals in North America, handling more tonnage per year than the Panama or Suez canals.

The strategic importance of Sault Ste. Marie in wartime cannot be over-estimated because of the large quantities of iron ore which are shipped from the Lake Superior area into the blast furnaces of Cleveland and other points in the United States. Historically, Camp Lucas and the U.S. forces located there have protected these locks. This was graphically illustrated in the second world war when large barrage balloons hung over the Sault Ste. Marie valley on both sides of the Canada-United States border. During the past several years there has been located at Raco, a place west of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan and in the upper peninsula a Bomarc missile site which, I suggest, belongs to the age of nuclear bombers. Its equivalent in the age of intercontinental ballistic missiles is the A.B.M. system.

Within the past year it was announced that Kincheloe Air Force Base, located 20 miles south of the Canada-U.S. border in Michigan, would be phased out. This base was not only a strategic air command base but served as a base for a fighter squadron also. The economic repercussions of closing this base, on which thousands of men were employed, could constitute a serious economic set-back for Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. It would not surprise me if some pressure were brought to bear to put an A.B.M. site at Kincheloe Air Force Base in order to restore the economic fortunes of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan.

Having made these few remarks about the history of the area, Mr. Speaker, I submit that unquestionably this area could be very important strategically in time of war. When the decision to establish the A.B.M. system was made by President Nixon two locations, including Malmstrom Air Force Base and Grand Forks Air Force Base, were specified in the mid-west; however, the exact location of the base in the Michigan-Ohio area has not been specified. Considering the past tendency to locate defence bases in the vicinity of Sault Ste. Marie, it is natural to suspect that this site may be chosen as well for the A.B.M. system.

Considerable concern has been expressed in western Canada about the effects of radioactive fall out from nuclear warheads of A.B.M. system missiles intercepting in-coming I.C.B.Ms. Naturally, I share this concern with the other people from Ontario, especially if an A.B.M. site is to be located in upper Michigan. I am aware that our defence department has had secret consultations and briefings with the United States department. My question is, where is the A.B.M. site for the Michigan-Ohio area to be located?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), perhaps it might be well to read to him some words President Nixon spoke when he asked Congress on March 14 to deploy a modified ballistic missile defence system. In reviewing the various options open to him he said, in part:

> To begin a measured construction of an active defence of our retaliatory forces.

He went on to say:

> We will provide for local defence of selected Minuteman missile sites and an area defence designed to protect our bomber bases and our command and control authorities.

So far as the Department of National Defence is aware, the United States authorities intend to proceed with two Safeguard sites: one at Great Falls, Montana and the other at Grand Forks, North Dakota.

In announcing this Safeguard system President Nixon said:

> The modified system has been designed so that its defensive intent is unmistakeable. It will be implemented not according to some fixed, theoretical schedule, but in a manner clearly related to our periodic analysis of the threat. The first deployment covers two missile sites; the first of these will not be completed before 1973.

SECURITY GUARDS—NATIONAL HARBOURS BOARD—VANCOUVER

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question this evening is based on the question I asked earlier during the oral question period. May I repeat the question? I asked:

> —In view of the decision of the National Harbours Board in Vancouver to appoint a special force to police the Port of Vancouver consisting of 15 or 20 trained peace officers under a retired mounties as chief, replacing the existing National Harbours Board force of non-professional security guards, will the minister inform the house as to the position of employment of the present security guards, most of whom are war veterans of 17 years' service?

I thought the question was urgent when I asked it and I think it still is. It is for this reason I am raising it now.

May I draw to your attention, Mr. Speaker, that Captain Johnson, the Manager of the Vancouver Harbour Commission, stated that the Vancouver port has a reputation for a low pilferage and damage rate. This reputation is the result of the security guard system of the Vancouver Harbour Board. Someone has now decided to get rid of the security guard system and establish a special police force to be headed by a recently retired R.C.M.P. officer. There is no need for a special police force because, the security guards have built up a wonderful reputation. However, a policy decision has been made which I understand will involve the employment of between 15 and 20 trained police officers. They will replace an existing N.H.B. force of approximately 14 non-professional security guards. I am interested in knowing why this policy change is necessary in Vancouver. I am particularly concerned with the position of the security guards to be replaced.

It is my understanding that not one of the security guards can meet the age requirement for re-employment on the new police force. The majority of the security guards are war veterans, some having up to 17 years service with the Vancouver N.H.B. security force. I hope there is some degree of sentimentality, in the Liberal government. I insist on having an answer from the minister and may I say how proud I am to see him here personally to answer a question on his first day as Minister of Transport (Mr. Jamieson). I insist on having an answer concerning the provision being made for the employment or security of those employed as security guards. They have served their country in war and peace and are now being displaced as a result of a change in government policy.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can well understand and appreciate the concern of the hon. member. I want to assure him at the outset that I will make a thorough investigation. I am sure the hon. member will appreciate that there has not been time since he raised this matter this afternoon for me to get a full briefing. I have had an opportunity to discuss it in a general way with officials of the department.

The information I received is that this is not a change of policy that is confined to the port of Vancouver. It is a part of a national plan. Changes with regard to security regulations are being made at a number of ports. In so far as the port of Vancouver is concerned, the information I have received is that recruiting of the new force is not yet completed. Every opportunity will be given to members of the existing force to see if they can qualify. If my hon. friend is correct that the qualifications as laid down are such as to prohibit the former members from engaging in these positions I shall be more than pleased to see if there is some other arrangement we can make, some way we can ensure that their employment is continued is some form, or perhaps that alternative jobs are found for them.

• (10:20 p.m.)

I am sufficiently sympathetic, Mr. Speaker, to the needs of war veterans and of men who have punched in a great many years of service to assure my hon. friend that I will do all I can. I hope I can give him a reasonably satisfactory answer within a comparatively short time.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10:23 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, May 6, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

PRIVILEGE

MR. BURTON—FAILURE TO GIVE REASONS FOR WITHHOLDING INFORMATION IN RETURN RESPECTING DAMP GRAIN

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege affecting all members of the House of Commons. In doing so I wish to make specific reference to a motion for papers moved by myself on March 4 and approved on that date, and tabled in the House of Commons on Friday, May 2. I did not raise this matter yesterday, as transportation difficulties prevented me from returning at the appropriate time.

On March 4 this motion, placed on the order paper by myself and asking for a copy of correspondence between the government of Saskatchewan and the government of Canada with respect to the processing of damp and tough grain in Saskatchewan and the transportation of grain during the period of October 1, 1968 and January 31, 1969 inclusive, was called for consideration. The Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Forest) told the house that this notice of motion was acceptable to the government, subject to the usual reservations concerning privileged papers and authorization of the government authorities concerned. Subject to these reservations or conditions the motion was adopted.

I think all members in this house will recognize that there are privileged papers from time to time which the government may wish to reserve, although there may be disagreement on specific cases from time to time. There is also no question, with respect to correspondence between the government of Canada and other government authorities, that authorization must be obtained for the tabling of such correspondence. However, Mr. Speaker, when these papers were tabled in the House of Commons on May 2 there was no indication whether any documents had been reserved either because they were considered privileged or because authorization had been refused by the other government authority. I have noted this practice on other motions for papers which I have submitted in this session, and I am certain that the same thing has happened to other members.

The point that I wish to draw to your attention, Mr. Speaker, is that, in my view, members have a right to know whether documents have been reserved for either one of the reasons already noted. I submit that consideration be given to making provision for reporting of this particular matter when papers are tabled in the House of Commons. I hope that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) will give this matter his attention in order that the appropriate steps might be initiated.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AND NATIONAL DEFENCE

Sixth report of standing committee on external affairs and national defence—Mr. Wahn.

IMMIGRATION

ALLEGED SECRET GUIDELINES NEGATING EFFECTIVENESS OF REGULATIONS CONCERNING U.S. DESERTERS—TABLING OF PRESS RELEASE

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I promised the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) that I would table copies of a press release which I issued, and with the leave of the house I should like to do that.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

TRADE

WHEAT—SALE BY FRANCE AT CANTON FAIR—PRESENCE OF CANADIAN REPRESENTATIVE

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Acting Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. May I ask him whether the minister intends today to answer the questions which were turned aside yesterday by the Prime Minister concerning the setbacks suffered by Canada in international grain markets? In particular I direct his attention and replies to the questions relating to the loss of the sale of some 800,000 tons of wheat apparently secured by France in dealing with Mainland China. Would he also explain why Canada apparently was not represented at the China Spring Fair in Canton where this sale seems to have been announced?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that in one swoop I can answer all the questions to which oblique reference was made by the Leader of the Opposition. But I will try to deal with one or two.

First of all may I assure hon. members that the government of Canada, through a member of the Trade Commission Service, was in fact represented at the fair in question. I would also like to assure hon. members that the discussions between the Canadian Wheat Board and the Chinese authorities are in fact going on at all times, that there is very close contact for specific discussions at all times for the sale of wheat by Canada to China, and that our interests in that regard are being very well protected by the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, the minister of course did not explain why Canada missed this sale, but could he tell the house the rank of the official who represented Canada at this fair?

Mr. Lang: I do not have the specific rank of the official, Mr. Speaker, but I shall be glad to obtain it. The Leader of the Opposition said I did not say anything about this particular sale. Of course sales by France to China are not by any means new. They have been going on ever since 1961. Australia, Canada and France have been prime suppliers of wheat to China during that time, and the fact of a particular sale by France to China does not affect sales of wheat by Canada to China.

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, in my original question addressed to the Prime Minister yesterday I asked whether the acting minister would take the opportunity on motions today, 24 hours later, to give information concerning why Canada let this specific order slip through her fingers. The minister has had 24 hours in which to obtain the information: I ask him to give me information now. If the Canadian Wheat Board, as he has said, is in constant touch with these matters they must have known several days ago why we lost the sale, and how much.

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, I believe I have really covered the situation of sales, but I regret indeed not having responded in exactly the way the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings asked his question, if in fact the other day he managed one that was in order.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, the minister obviously is following the example of the Prime Minister in getting smart in his answers.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Hees: I would ask him now to get that information and would he please report tomorrow on the question I asked yesterday.

[Later:]

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward Hastings): Mr. Speaker, would the Prime Minister see that the minister answers tomorrow the question he assured me would be answered today; would he do that? Come on; you can stand up.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

WHEAT—SALES BY FRANCE TO MAINLAND CHINA BELOW I.G.A. PRICE

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Minister without Portfolio. Can he tell us at how much below the International Grains Arrangement price was the wheat offered that was sold by France to China, and has the government protested officially to France or to those officials who are responsible for administering the International Grains Arrangement?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, precise details on the sale to France from China have not been divulged. When these details are received by us we will certainly look at them in the light of the collective undertaking by exporters to strengthen international wheat prices, and we will take any appropriate action necessary to see that I.G.A. prices are implemented.

Mr. Gleave: As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, can the minister tell us whether at present or in the very immediate future talks are or will be held between the signatories to the International Grains Arrangement so that this international agreement will be an effective instrument instead of a piece of paper?

Mr. Lang: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The exporters meeting was held some time ago, and just very recently the prices review committee met. I am happy to tell hon. members that there was an expression of determination on all sides to work towards the maintenance of the I.G.A., and specifically to take strong action to examine those devices and techniques which had made it difficult to judge the exact prices being charged at times by the various participants.

WHEAT—CRUSADE FOR SALE OF SURPLUS

Mr. P. V. Noble (Grey-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Is he taking any cognizance of the many suggestions emanating from this chamber that he organize a crusade immediately to sell wheat or other surpluses anywhere in the world.

GRAIN

VANCOUVER—ARRIVAL AT PORT OF GRADES IN LESSER DEMAND

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a further supplementary question, related to the suggestion made by the minister in Vancouver yesterday that the port of Vancouver is headed for a new grains tie up. Will the minister tell the house what is being done to avoid that further difficulty confronting the farmers of western Canada?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Yes, Mr. Speaker. The Vancouver situation again developed into a problem with the arrival at Vancouver of grades and types of wheat which were not as much in demand as the types for which ships were in fact waiting. This resulted in large measure because of the failure of the authorities in loading box cars to load into those cars the appropriate wheat, and the Wheat Board has taken strong action in the form of indicating to the elevator companies involved that storage will not be paid on wheat which arrives there improperly when contrary orders were in the hands of the company.

This has been done in order to correct the situation and assure that the wheat which the Board wants to arrive will arrive at the proper time.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister if he would really give us some solid bit of information and report to the house concerning who did represent Canada at the Canton Fair? Would he also say whether he meant to indicate that the railways had shipped to Vancouver grain of a different sort than that which had been ordered or requested.

Mr. Lang: I have indicated to the hon. member that I will do as he asks in respect of the first part of his question. The railways of course carried the grain to Vancouver which was carried there. The actual placing of the grain in the box cars is done by the local elevator agent, in accordance with orders supplied to the local agent. In many cases those orders were not filled accurately, with the proper grain going in the cars.

VANCOUVER—REPORTED SHORTAGE OF WHEAT FOR SHIPMENT

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question of the acting minister. I appreciate the background information he gave about the situation. I should like to ask the minister what immediate and remedial action is being taken to make up the shortage in respect of the 4½ million bushels of No. 2 Northern which is required at the port of Vancouver.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I believe I did cover that as well. The Canadian Wheat Board has issued the appropriate orders to the elevator companies this week and has taken steps to ensure that those orders will be followed so that the cars which go to Vancouver from the local elevators will carry the required wheat.

INQUIRY AS TO APPOINTMENT OF TRANSPORT CONTROLLER

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon. In view of the fact that we are now experiencing our second tangled grain mess in Vancouver is the government, even at this late date, considering appointing a transport controller who could iron out these situations?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): No, Mr. Speaker. Indeed on the last occasion when the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce was asked about this he said he himself would act as the controller. I am happy to note that the tie-up was cleared away somewhat faster than many members opposite thought was possible. I am sure the matter is well in hand under the direction of the Canadian Wheat Board. Under their direction as well there are under way certain experimental systems of handling grain which may in the long run improve the handling of our grain between the local elevator companies and Vancouver.

WHEAT—LOWER GRADES SUPPLIED BY ELEVATORS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Minister without Portfolio could advise the house what proportion of this grain that was shipped by the elevator companies was not of the grade ordered, indicating whether it was of a grade lower than 2 Northern, and whether it was damp or tough?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, as I understand the situation, the grain in demand is No. 2 and the grain shipped in excess was No. 4.

HOUSING

REQUEST FOR GUIDELINES ON URBAN RENEWAL

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the new minister in charge of housing. If I may I should like to congratulate him warmly on his appointment and express the hope that I will be able to congratulate him on his performance.

Is the minister in a position to inform the house when we may expect to receive guidelines in respect of the public housing and urban renewal policy of his department or the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, as I imagine the hon. member would expect, I am not in a position to give him a precise date in that regard. I have spent the last several hours in briefing sessions and I hope to be able to be a little more definitive on these matters in a few days. I am very conscious of the need for this kind of decision to be made and enunciated very quickly.

[Mr. Muir (Lisgar).]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, while the minister was being briefed on this matter did he have an opportunity to discuss the following matter and, if not, will he consider it: I refer to the question of a supplementary estimate to add to funds available for public housing and urban renewal, since only the availability of finances can make this program effective?

Mr. Andras: I am conscious of the representations the hon. member has made.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I express the hope that the minister will not be influenced to a great extent by the unimportance the Prime Minister apparently attaches to these problems.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): I wish to ask a supplementary question of the minister.

According to what the Prime Minister said last Sunday on the program "Deux plus un", there is no housing crisis in Canada. Would the minister responsible for housing tell us whether the government is thinking of drafting a bill on housing, which would allow peoples in the lower income group, that is those who earn $5,000 to $6,000 a year, to buy a house according to the plan suggested by the minister?

[English]

Mr. Andras: Mr. Speaker, the proposed amendments to the Housing Act are now on the order paper. I hope we will be able to deal with those in the house and refer them to the committee very shortly. At that time and following then I hope the policy answers the hon. member is seeking will be articulated.

POSSIBILITY OF MEETING WITH PROVINCIAL MINISTERS

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I should also like to congratulate the minister responsible for housing, and I hope that we will have further dialogue. In view of the fact the Canadian Welfare Council has indicated to the Prime Minister that opportunities remain largely untested for federal initiative in promoting a socially just housing program in partnership with the provinces, can the minister now state wher he will be meeting with provincial ministers responsible for housing?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I will be meeting with provincial ministers responsible for housing as soon as time permits. In fact, I have had one or two phone calls, and some appointments are in process of being set up.

THE MINISTRY

REQUEST FOR MINISTRY OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address my supplementary question to the Prime Minister. As I understand it, a telegram was sent to the Prime Minister expressing an interest in the establishment of a ministry of housing and urban development. In view of the fact the Prime Minister has placed housing in charge of the Minister without Portfolio, can he now indicate whether he is considering the establishment of a separate ministry of housing and urban development?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no steps are being considered beyond the ones that were announced yesterday.

[Translation]

NATIONAL PARKS

GASPÉ—AGREEMENT BETWEEN PROVINCIAL AND FEDERAL AUTHORITIES

Mr. Alexandre Cyr (Gaspé): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Could he tell us wether he has found some new machinery for consultation which could lead to an agreement with the province of Quebec for the development of a national park in the Forillon peninsula?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, the Quebec Minister of Tourism, Fish and Game called on me this morning. We discussed this matter and I hope that we will find a solution in the best interest of the people of Gaspé.

Mr. Cyr: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Does the minister think that a 99-year agreement could be concluded before May 15 as requested?

Mr. Chrétien: I am very confident, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): During the course of this meeting, did the Minister of Tourism repeat the words heard on the program "Les Couche-Tard" Saturday night to the effect that the minister had gone wrong in becoming a Liberal?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I certainly have not—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Chrétien: —gone wrong enough to become a Créditiste.

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—INQUIRY AS TO LEGISLATION TO END DISPUTE

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and has to do with the Air Canada strike which is now in its third week. In view of the right hon. gentleman's statement that the offer of settlement made to the union, or to the workers, was a most generous one, will the Prime Minister say whether following the course taken by previous administrations the government is now prepared, in the interest of the Canadian people who are sometimes forgotten during these strikes, to introduce legislation to parliament to end the strike?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, we are not considering such steps. I believe we have stated on other occasions what the approach of the government was: that so long as the process of free collective bargaining has not completely broken down, and so long as there is no national emergency which calls for government intervention, we prefer to allow the process of free collective bargaining to proceed.

Mr. Diefenbaker: In view of the fact that both sides, according to radio reports, are not even meeting, what does the Prime Minister mean by saying "so long as the processes of negotiation or collective bargaining are continued"?

Mr. Trudeau: As everyone knows, Mr. Speaker, during strikes there are periods when there are no meetings, and sometimes this is part of the process of negotiation.

Mr. Diefenbaker: It is time the Canadian people were thought about.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

ALLEGED INVESTIGATION INTO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHING

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister which is prompted by a shocking and disturbing Canadian Press report of a visit by members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to at least one United Church in Otawa for the purpose of interrogating the clergy on the content of a Sunday school program devoted to an understanding of Mainland China, and the pupils' response thereto. Can the Prime Minister advise whether the R.C.M.P. now have a place in the Sunday schools of the nation; and if so, are the Presbyterians next?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles).

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member may have a related question, but I doubt that his supplementary question is acceptable.

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Speaker, this is an urgent question to the Prime Minister. In view of the negotiations Canada will be conducting in Stockholm to recognize the People's Republic of China, will the information to be gathered in this exercise in participatory democracy with children be communicated to the Secretary of State for External Affairs as a possible aid to such negotiations?

HOUSING

REQUEST FOR PRIORITY IN DEBATE

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister without Portfolio in charge of housing and is supplementary to exchanges of a few minutes ago. In view of the minister's expressed hope that the bill to amend the National Housing Act will be dealt with soon, may I ask him whether he will make representations to the government house leader that this be the next item of business before the house, after we have finished with the Criminal Code?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I have been in consultation with the house leader. We are now working out the timetable, and I am sure he will be advising all hon. members about it shortly.

INCOMES REQUIRED TO PURCHASE HOMES

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): A supplementary question to the Minister without Portfolio in charge of housing. Will the minister undertake to make a statement reporting to the house the average market price of the 200,000 houses of which the Prime Minister is so proud, with a breakdown of the incomes required to buy houses in each of these brackets?

EXTERNAL AID

RATE OF INTEREST ON LOAN TO INDIA

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance.

Could the minister tell the house, following the announcement that a loan of $30 million is to be granted to India, what will be the terms and conditions of such loan and, in particular, what interest rate will apply thereto?

[English]

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not have the information at hand. I would like to take the question as notice.

[Translation]

Mr. Dumont: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Finance.

With respect to the loan granted to Jamaica last week, could the minister tell us what arrangements were arrived at or what terms were agreed to?

Mr. Speaker: I suggest both the hon. member's original question and supplementary question call for technical and statistical data and should normally be put on the order paper.

AIR TRANSPORT

PILOT FATIGUE CONSEQUENT UPON AIR CANADA STRIKE

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. I have not had an opportunity in the house to congratulate him on his appointment until now, so I should like to extend my congratulations and express the hope that he will live up to the expectations which I believe all members of the house have for him.

Last Friday the hon. member for York South questioned the Acting Minister of Transport concerning the extension of flying hours permitted to pilots by the Department of Transport. At that time the acting minister undertook to answer the question. My question to the minister is whether pilots in Canada have been allowed extensions of monthly duty hours as a result of the Air Canada strike.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the answer is no, there have been no applications to the department for any change in the maximum hours which form part of the current regulations.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport. Last Friday the Acting Minister of Transport in reply to my question suggested that it was the Canadian Transport Commission that dealt with this matter. Is this so, and if so can the minister tell us that the commission has not received any such applications?

Mr. Jamieson: To be honest, I am not quite certain myself whether it is the C.T.C. or a group within the Department of Transport. However, I am satisfied that no group that has the necessary authorization to extend hours has done so.

AIR CANADA STRIKE—EXTENSION OF CANADIAN PACIFIC AIRLINES FRANCHISE

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport. In view of the length of the strike of Air Canada, in regard to which nothing is being done, is the government considering extending the franchise and giving more routes to Canadian Pacific Airlines at this time?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): I believe that the information on that has been given to the house on a number of occasions. Any air line is quite free to make application to the Canadian Transport Commission for an extension of routes during the period of the strike, and these applications will be entertained.

Mr. Woolliams: I would ask then whether the minister has received any applications from C.P.A. for a permanent extension. I am not merely referring to temporary extensions.

Mr. Jamieson: As an hon. member said, this is a different kettle of fish, and I will be glad to look into it.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport. Will the minister cause to be re-examined the question of permitting a second coast to coast carrier to operate east of Montreal?

Mr. Jamieson: The answer is the same as the one I gave to the hon. member for Calgary North.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Failing this, would the minister and the government give consideration to issuing a D.F.C. to Canadians who have used third class carriers?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether hon. members do not think we might go on to another subject. I see many hon. members are anxious to ask questions. I hope that the next supplementary question is one that can be accepted by the Chair.

SUGGESTED HALIFAX LANDING TO ACCOMMODATE ATLANTIC AREA PASSENGERS

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): I did not extend congratulations in the house to the minister on his appointment, nor have I done so outside the house, so I will not say anything further on this matter at this time. I should like to direct a question to the minister not in regard to C.P.A. but in reference to a question which was directed to the Acting Minister of Transport last Tuesday. If the minister does not have an answer today perhaps he could take it as notice. My question relates to overseas carriers flying over Halifax. Has there been any effort made by C.T.C. or any applications made by these carriers for permission to land in Halifax, now that they are taking off from Montreal and by-passing the east?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I understand that invitations have been given to overseas carriers, or carriers other than Air Canada, that if they wish to apply for landing rights in eastern Canada the C.T.C. will give sympathetic consideration to such applications. Subsequently I asked today that representation be made to such carriers asking that they land not only in Halifax but also in Gander, Newfoundland.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Inquiries of the Ministry

POSSIBLE STRIKE OF CANADIAN PACIFIC AIRLINES MACHINISTS

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, but first of all I should like to congratulate the minister on joining one of the two best departments in the government. My question is: In view of the fact that there is a distinct possibility of the machinists of Canadian Pacific Airlines also going on strike, has he been in touch with his colleague, the Minister of Labour, urging him to set up a conciliation board or a conciliator to avoid such a possible catastrophe?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): I do not think it should be my initiative to suggest what the Minister of Labour should do. He is perfectly capable of taking care of himself in these matters and I have no doubt he will do whatever is necessary.

Mr. Hees: He did not get on too well with the strike he is trying to handle now.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

FEDERAL ACTION TO REDUCE FATALITIES

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): I should like to offer the Minister of Transport my supplementary compliments on his appointment, and direct a question to him in his capacity as the minister reporting on road and vehicle safety. Considering the very heavy casualties and the warlike toll taken every week on our highways, would the minister consider making an early statement on what federal action will be taken to curtail or reduce this heavy toll of life on the highways?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Yes, at the appropriate time. As my hon. friend probably knows, studies are going on within a special branch of the Department of Transport, as well as consultations with the provinces. Draft legislation is being prepared, and when all of these elements have been brought together I will be pleased to consider whether the appropriate procedure will be to bring it before the house in a statement made in the house, or whether it might not be preferable to refer it to a committee.

INCOME TAX

APPLICATION TO OLD AGE PENSIONERS

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): I should like to address a question to the Minister of Finance based on the problem of the old age

pensioner who has been granted supplemental benefits on a means test and who finds himself having to pay income tax on his meagre pittance, as a result of which he loses his free hospitalization and half of his OMSIP premium—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member ask his question.

Mr. Rynard: —would the minister consider the abolition of this iniquitous tax imposed on people who are on welfare?

[Later:]

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I consider this a very urgent problem and I would like to discuss it at ten o'clock.

FITNESS AND AMATEUR SPORTS ACT

DELAY IN QUEBEC PARTICIPATION

Hon. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Prime Minister.

I would like to know whether during the visit of the minister Mr. Loubier in the national capital, the representatives of both governments have concluded an agreement to promote amateur sport and recreational centres?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I understand, Mr. Speaker, that Mr. Loubier had some discussions either with the minister or with the officials of his department today. I could not say if both ministers met, but I can add that some negotiations have been launched in this connection by the representatives of both governments.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MAINLAND CHINA—CANADIAN RECOGNITION TO PROMOTE TRADE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I have a question for the Prime Minister. In order to improve the possibility of grain sales to China, will the government of Canada now press toward immediate recognition of mainland China and establish diplomatic relations?

INDUSTRY

DEVCO—COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF MINERS

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): I should like to direct my question to the Prime Minister and ask him whether he has received any urgent communications from the United Mine Workers with respect to the meeting held last week with the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, I have received no communication from the mine workers beyond those on which I commented in the house a few days ago.

Mr. MacInnis: Has the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion received any urgent communications? I ask this question today primarily because the urgency of any question cannot be dictated by the presence or absence of any minister in the house.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacInnis: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I have been trying to follow up this very urgent matter with the government and I have asked questions in respect of this matter only to receive off-the-cuff and snide answers from the Prime Minister.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacInnis: I think the situation of the Cape Breton miners which has been imposed by a Crown Corporation deserves the attention of and some answers from this government. After all, it was the Prime Minister's idea to promote a just society.

GRAIN

WHEAT—APPLICATION OF PENALTIES FOR SHIPMENTS OF IMPROPER GRADE

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): I wish to direct a question to the Minister without Portfolio in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. He may already have given an answer to it, and I might have misunderstood him. In his earlier answer the minister mentioned penalties whereby payments for storage of grain shipments of improper grade would not be made. Are these penalties now to apply to the shipments already made ,or are they to apply to any shipments that might be made in the future? Have farmers only been given a warning, or will the penalties be imposed on previous shipments? Secondly, can the minister advise the house whether he has any information on the number of carloads of No. 2 Northern now on track or en route to Vancouver?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): I do not have the specific information for which the hon. member asks but I shall be glad to obtain it for him.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

MEXICO—APPLICATION OF MIGRATORY BIRDS CONVENTION ACT

Mr. R. R. Southam (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development related to the conference recently held with the Indian people in Ottawa. Has the minister taken part in an informal discussion with officials of the government of Mexico concerning the Migratory Birds Convention Act?

Mr. Speaker: I wonder if this is not a question which might well be debated at the time of adjournment.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CONSULTATION WITH TEACHERS OVERSEAS BEFORE CONTRACT CHANGE

Mr. Gaétan-J. Serré (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of National Defence.

[English]

In view of the telegram received this morning from the Ontario Teachers Federation requesting further consultation on terms of agreement covering overseas teachers, will the minister advise the house whether such consultation is under way and, if so, what progress has been made?

Hon. Leo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): I think I should explain to the house that the contract for teachers for the year 1969-70 has already been approved by the Department of National Defence. However I have had a request from members for a consultation in connection with the next contract, and I undertake to have these consultations whenever the time is ripe.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): I would ask the minister whether the changes in the contract were made without consultation with the Canadian Teachers Federation, which has been designated as the national organ for the teachers of Canada. If the answer is in the affirmative, why should the Government of Canada refuse to deal with the federation on questions concerning salary and other terms of teachers' contracts?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): First of all, I think we should get together as to the date of the contract. What Mr. Nason of the Teachers Federation was talking about at the press conference was the 1967 contract. That contract provided for no change in the 1968 contract and there was therefore no room for discussion.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I would join in the applause, but the answer does not cover the situation. The contract which the minister mentioned—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Would the right hon. gentleman ask his question?

Mr. Diefenbaker: The question I ask the minister is: Why should the government of Canada refuse to deal with the Teachers Federation? Why was it not consulted?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): For the simple reason that there are two aspects involved in this situation— an agreement and a contract. The contract is one between the school boards who lend the teachers, the Department of National Defence and the teachers themselves. We agree that on general conditions of work, or general conditions of the contract, or questions concerning over-all agreements we should consult with the Teachers Federation, and this is what I have just undertaken to do.

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): A supplementary question. If teachers working for the department have a grievance, to whom do they look for redress?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): A teacher working for the department is assimilated in the rank of officer, and he has the same recourse as an officer. If he has a grievance he has the right to go before a board of inquiry, just as an officer has.

SALVAGE OF TUG "EMERALD STRAITS"

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I had the privilege of addressing a question to the Minister of Transport about the sunken tug Emerald Straits. Today I received information that seamen on the Pacific coast may decline to man steel tugs of the same design as that of the Emerald Straits, which sunk recently, unless action is taken to rectify apparent construction defects. Can the minister tell us whether a decision will be made to salvage the tug in order to find out the reason for her sinking, and possibly to recover the bodies of the men who drowned?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Following the hon. member's question yesterday I asked for information on this matter and I hope I shall be able to provide it before the end of this week.

POTATOES—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON ASSISTANCE TO P.E.I. GROWERS

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Speaker, arising from disturbing reports over the last few days as to the number of farm auctions and disposals in Prince Edward Island. Has the minister initiated inquiries in Prince Edward Island as to the number of potato growers who, because of deplorable prices in the industry, will be prevented from planting this season, and would he tell us whether certain steps may be taken to alleviate this situation?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): We have not initiated a survey to gather the information in those precise terms but we are nevertheless aware of the economic and social problems associated with low potato prices.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Since the industry is the backbone of the economy in Prince Edward Island, will the minister agree to make such inquiries, in order that the full extent of the problem might be appreciated, and possible action taken?

Mr. Olson: I am not sure I should agree at a moment's notice to undertake a survey such as the hon. member has outlined. However, the department and the government are deeply interested in this problem and we have held a number of meetings in an attempt to find some way of meeting this difficulty which recurs all too often in connection with the marketing of potatoes.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the right hon. Prime Minister.

According to Mr. Nadeau, a Montreal newspaperman, who says he is well-informed, there has been a Trudeau-Caouette agreement to fight Quebec separatists. As I am not aware of the terms of such an agreement, is the Prime Minister in a position to tell us about it?

AIRPORTS

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE—ANNOUNCEMENT OF FINAL CHOICE OF LOCATION

Mr. Roch La Salle (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister a question.

As some municipalities of the north shore of Quebec will be meeting tonight to discuss the famous location of the airport, and as some Quebecers are still hoping for a reversal of the original decision, would the Prime Minister, in the interest of all those who wish to take a constructive attitude towards this project, state clearly whether the choice of Ste. Scholastique is a final one.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker it has been stated several times by members of the cabinet, that the choice of this site was final and I need say only that the decision was the result of very long and numerous consultations with the authorities of the province and of the City of Montreal.

ACTION ON MEASURE RESPECTING MARITIME FREIGHT RATES

Mr. Charles H. Thomas (Moncton): My question is directed to the President of the Privy Council in his capacity as leader of the house. Now that one of the few men opposite who understands maritime problems has been appointed Minister of Transport, will the hon. gentleman assure the house that this breakthrough will be followed by calling as the next order of business Bill C-182 to amend the Maritime Freight Rates Act?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): The hon. member will have observed that there is a certain difficulty in connection with that proposal, namely the fact that an extensive filibuster is going on in connection with the order of business presently under consideration. I understand that some hon. members have inquired earlier about the future of the National Housing Act proposals. We hope to pring these forward at an early date. In all probability the next order of business to be considered will be the official languages bill, followed by the bill to amend the National Housing Act.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

MARITIME FREIGHT RATES—REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): When does the hon. gentleman propose to bring forward for consideration the committee report of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications which is now before the house and which deals with this subject?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): We have heard enough filibustering on the Criminal Code bill, and I do not think we want to hear again from the hon. member.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

AGRICULTURE

POTATOES—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON ASSISTANCE TO P.E.I. GROWERS

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. A moment or two ago, when the Minister of Agriculture was being questioned, I asked a second supplementary question to try to clear up a confusion which seemed to have been created between myself and the minister on this matter. I tried to ask the minister whether through his officials in Prince Edward Island there would be initiated the kind of inquiry—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the confusion is between the hon. member and the minister it can be cleared up after orders of the day have been called. Orders of the day.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Monday, May 5, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 33, Mr. Laprise.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order with respect to the amendment now before the house. I am sure the record will show that I am ready and prepared to defend the procedural right of private members to move amendments or motions even when I do not agree with those amendments or motions. I submit that it is also appropriate for me to object to a motion even when it happens to contain ideas to which I take exception.

I believe that the amendment now before the house is leading us into a somewhat frivolous debate, is irregular and should be ruled out of order. We ought not to debate it any further. As to my right to raise this point of order at this time, I rely on citation 70(2) of Beauchesne's fourth edition. I will not take the time of the house to read that citation, as I doubt that there is any argument as to my right to raise this point of order at this stage.

The basis of my argument against the admissibility of the amendment is to be found in citation 203(1) of Beauchesne's fourth edition. The important sentence reads as follows:

> Every amendment proposed to be made either to a question or to a proposed amendment should be so framed that if agreed to by the house the question or amendment as amended would be intelligible and consistent with itself.

I contend that if the amendment of the hon. member for Abitibi were adopted we would have as a result an amended section of the Criminal Code which would not be intelligible or consistent with itself. That is the first of two main reasons I wish to put forward to support my argument that the amendment is not admissible.

My hon. friend from Abitibi seeks to move a motion to amend clause 18 of Bill C-150, which refers to abortions of female persons.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): The laughter I hear demonstrates my point. We are having a frivolous debate and we ought not to consume the time of the house with it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): May I say that I indicated to my hon. friends next to us that I would be raising this point of order this afternoon, so they would be ready to reply. The hon. member for Abitibi wishes to remove the word "female" wherever it appears in clause 18 of Bill C-150. He wishes the language of the amendment to refer only to a person, not to a female person.

I listened last night to the arguments that were advanced. My friends said that a person is a person, whether male or female, and that in the case of an abortion the reference would obviously be to a female person. Nevertheless, I suggest that if this amendment were passed there would be an inconsistency in the amended section and, second, the amended section would not be consistent within itself in that the amended part of the section would not be consistent with the original part of the Criminal Code. For example, if my hon. friend's amendment were carried the amended section in one place would contain the word "person" and then later would talk about "her intention" or "her own miscarriage." I do not wish to press the rules of English grammar too far but it is a rule of English grammar that when you talk about a person you must then say "his" this, or "his" that. If the language of the section is to refer to a person the obvious inference to be drawn would be the section should then refer to "his intention" or "his own miscarriage", which is ridiculous. That just shows the ridiculous situation we should find ourselves in if this amendment were passed. I submit that these inconsistencies in the amendment itself make the amendment one that should not be before the house.

Even more serious than that is the fact that if this amendment were passed it would become an amendment to section 237 of the Criminal Code. Section 237 of the Code already contains three subsections, two of which refer to a female person. If the amendment were passed it would apply to the new subclauses or subsections 4, 5 and 6, but no change would be made to the original, unamended part of the Code. As a result a state of confusion would arise. Section 237 would contain six subsections, some of which would refer to a female person and others to a person. Confusion would be inevitable.

Even worse than that, if the amendment were to carry someone would have to change the language in the original, unamended subsections of section 237. If we did not do it here it would have to be done by the officials who revise our statutes from time to time. The net result of passing this amendment, therefore, would be that we would effect an amendment in the original statute; we would alter section 237 of the Criminal Code of Canada.

May I remind Your Honour that on Friday, April 25, you ruled out of order three amendments that were proposed. I refer to amendments Nos. 17 and 18 proposed by my colleague, the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway, and amendment No. 20 which was moved by the hon. member for Calgary North. Your Honour's argument in ruling out those three amendments was that the amendments went behind the bill and amended parts of the original act which were then not before us. May I take a moment to read what Your Honour said, as found on page 7970 of Hansard for Friday, April 25. These were your words:

> If we look at section 237, with its three subsections, we find that they are not, as I understand it, before the house at the present time except in a very indirect way and I cannot see how, by an amendment, the hon. member can attempt to alter or amend them. This is why with much regret I have to reach that decision in connection with Nos. 17 and 18.

Later Your Honour used the same argument as the basis for ruling out of order amendment No. 20. Having read what Your Honour said, I confess I agree with your ruling even though I might have argued the opposite side of the case had I taken part in that debate. However, since Your Honour ruled that we cannot by an amendment at the report stage go behind the bill then before us and introduce language that would change the basic statute, I submit that the present amendment should not be allowed. If this amendment were to carry the wording of the original statute would be changed, and it could not be otherwise. A change would be made at least in subsections 1 and 2 of section 237 of the Criminal Code. If that were not done we should have a totally new section 237 which would be nonsensical, without meaning and without any clarity at all. Somebody would have to make the changes, and the result would be that my hon. friend from Abitibi would have been permitted to effect changes to the basic act, a right that was denied the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway and the hon. member for Calgary North.

• (3:00 p.m.)

I realize there has been some frivolity about the amendment, but not all of the arguments of my hon. friends in the Ralliement Créditiste are frivolous by any means. Even though I disagree with them, I respect what they are trying to do in regard to this proposition. If they are called to order when I believe they are in order, I will again rise to their defence. In this case, however, I think they not only do their own cause harm but they are taking parliament for a ride by presenting a frivolous motion, and this should not happen. I admit I cannot find among our procedural authorities anything that says we cannot spend the day in frivolity, but there is a citation that says that we cannot move an amendment so framed that it is not consistent in itself, an amendment so framed that the net result would be a proposition unintelligible and inconsistent.

For these two reasons, because of the inconsistency that would result and because of the fact that this amendment would, in effect, amend the basic statute, I believe Your Honour should find this amendment to be out of order.

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): I listened with great interest, Mr. Speaker, to the comments of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and I should like to say that I certainly do not agree with him when he says that our debate is frivolous, that we are constantly out of order and that our remarks are vain.

With all due deference to you, Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member's point of order might be procedurally valid in substance, when he says that the proposed amendment could give rise to problems in connection with the drafting of section 237 of the Criminal Code. But as to his point of order and his comments on the tremendous job done by the members of the Ralliement créditiste, I think that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, who is very competent in procedural matters, is out of order himself.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the amendment moved by the member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) which tends to delete certain words in clause 18 of Bill C-150 is in order, as I said last night, since its purpose is to prevent inconsistencies, which is quite the opposite of what the member for Winnipeg North Centre was saying.

Even more—and I would like to emphasize this point in concluding—our ultimate and fundamental purpose is to avoid useless repetitions. Indeed, as I said last night, the word "female", for instance, in paragraph (a) of sub-section 4 of clause 18, which reads in part as follows:

> —for the purpose of carrying out his intention to procure the miscarriage of a female person—is unnecessary, for it goes without saying that a male person cannot be aborted.

My remark applies also to paragraph (b), and I quote:

> —a female person who, being pregnant, permits a qualified medical practitioner—

It seems that the word "female" which appears almost every third line in clause 18, is absolutely useless.

Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to elaborate further on that amendment except to say that our fight is not a frivolous one. While carrying it on, we are not trying to obstruct the business of the house uselessly, but rather to improve this piece of legislation, so that it may serve the best interests of the Canadian people.

As for the minister, if he thinks that we are engaged in useless work and that the debate is dragging on, he need only withdraw the clause on abortion and we will vote in favour of the bill while voting against it, and then the house can proceed to a more serious piece of legislation, if any.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Unless other members with to contribute to the debate on the point of order that has been raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, I am prepared to give a ruling at this time. I should like to assure the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre that the point he has put to the house is one that worried me when the proposed amendments were considered, which is already some weeks ago. With my advisers, with the gentlemen at the table and with parliamentary counsel a very close look was taken at all of the amendments, including the one now before the house. I had some reservations about it but, as has been said before, the policy adopted in connection with these amendments was to be as lenient as possible so that there might be a full discussion of the amendments. I realize that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, along with his present seatmate, might feel—

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): You had better identify her, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: —that if this policy is followed in this instance, all other hon. members might enjoy the same leniency. However, we did feel that, speaking generally, we should not allow an amendment that sought to go behind the amending legislation, an amendment which would directly amend the original legislation. This is why a number of these motions have not been put to the house.

The suggestion made by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre is that although the motion now before the house does not directly affect, amend or modify the original bill, it would do so indirectly. I would think that perhaps this is going just a little too far. I think there is a substantial difference between a proposed amendment that obviously seeks directly to amend the original legislation and one that, by way of consequence, might require amendments which, as in this case, are not of a substantive nature.

The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre contends that the adoption of this amendment would mean that the gender of some pronouns might have to be changed in consequence. I am not sure whether this would be sufficient reason for the Chair to refuse to put the amendment that is before the house.

I realize that in practice this particular amendment might result in a debate that perhaps is frivolous in its nature, not because of the hon. members who are taking part in this debate but because hon. members perforce have to be relevant in their remarks to the subject matter of the amendment to be discussed and decided on.

Having said that, and since the House has already spent some time considering an amendment which in my view, although perhaps borderline, was in fact accepted, I think it would hardly be in order at this stage to hold that this amendment is not acceptable, that it should not have been put to the house because it is out of order. I doubt that this is the decision that should be made at this late time. I should like to suggest that we allow the amendment to go forward, that hon. members who take part in the debate on and consideration of this motion take into account the fact that it is perhaps borderline, and that they limit their remarks on the amendment so we can move on as quickly as possible to the next one.

• (3:10 p.m.)

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest to your ruling on the matter of the admissibility of the amendment and—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I believe that the hon. member for Lotbinière had the floor when the point of order was raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre. The hon. member for Lotbinière participated in the debate on the point of order, and I would think that we should at this point go back to the hon. member for Lotbinière. Unless the hon. member has completed his remarks. If so, the Chair will recognize the Minister of Justice.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I tried to combine my answer to the point of order made by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre with the end of my speech, so as not to uselessly delay the debate, and also for the purpose of concluding at the same time.

We will be happy to hear the Minister of Justice.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I gather in that event that the hon. member has concluded his speech, and I think the house will welcome your remark that because of the very narrow context of this amendment hon. members should confine their speeches to the very narrow point of whether it should be "person" or "female person" in the bill.

What the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) attempts to argue in his amendment is that since only a female can be aborted therefore the word "female" is superfluous and should be deleted. I venture to say, Mr. Speaker, that if we had put in only the word "person", members of the Creditiste party would have argued that only a female can be aborted and therefore it should read "female person". In fact their amendment would be drawn either way, depending on how the bill had been drawn.

I want to say briefly to hon. members opposite, grammarians that they are, with their subtle knowledge of the English and French languages, that "female person" is the broadest concept we know to cover the connotation woman, girl, female adolescent, and certainly in the part of the country from which my hon. friends come, lady. But the reason that the words "female person" are used is quite simple. Section 237(1) and (2) of the Criminal Code, to which clause 18 relates, use the words "female person" and section 238 also uses the words "female person". This is the section relating to the supply of noxious things, and I will read it:

> Every one who unlawfully supplies or procures a drug or other noxious thing or an instrument or thing, knowing that it is intended to be used or employed to procure the miscarriage of a female person, whether or not she is pregnant, is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for two years.

Going through the Criminal Code I would like to draw the attention of hon. members to Section 135 relating to rape, which reads:

> A male person commits rape when he has sexual intercourse with a female person who is not his wife—

Section 138 reads:

> (1) Every male person who has sexual intercourse with a female person who
> (a) is not his wife, and
> (b) is under the age of fourteen years—

Section 140 reads:

> Every male person who, under circumstances that do not amount to rape, has sexual intercourse with a female person
> (a) who is not his wife, and
> (b) who is and who he knows or has good reason to believe is feeble-minded, insane, or is an idiot or imbecile, > is guilty of an indictable offence—

Section 141 reads:

> (1) Every one who indecently assaults a female person is guilty of an indictable offence—

So there are plenty of precedents for the proper drafting that we believe was used in the bill.

Mr. Caouette: May I ask the minister a question?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Certainly.

Mr. Caouette: Is the minister trying to make it clear that a female is not a male?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I want to make it clear that the drafters of the Criminal Code knew the difference between a female and a male long before the Creditiste party was ever born, and I want to suggest to Your Honour that not even the fertility of imagination with which we have been faced for the past 20 days is sufficient to stray beyond the confines of this amendment. I hope we hear hon. members opposite talk about the amendment in that narrow context of person and female person in the hope that we can then get on to a more significant amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to dwell on these remarks, because I was the first, I think, in the committee on justice and legal affairs to ask the minister questions. At the time, the only answer he gave me concerning the inclusion in the bill on abortion of the words "of the female sex", was that experts would be called in to try and find an explanation.

Well, today in this house we will not take very long to discuss this amendment, because we realize that it has been prepared by the minister's experts who have not provided him with the reasons why they have included in the text relating to abortion the words "of the female sex".

One understands the minister when he speaks, for instance, of the rape of a female person. One can explain the reasons why in the Criminal Code the distinction is made between the male sex and the female sex as far as other matters except abortion are concerned. But in connection with abortion itself we still do not know how it is possible that a person of a sex other than the female sex may get an abortion. Medically speaking, nobody has proved to us yet that a person of another sex may secure an abortion. And that is why we find that this legislative text is ridiculous, not serious, and we feel obliged to bring in amendments that are not serious to make comprehensible a text we would have liked the minister to change between the committee report and second reading of the bill.

So we seriously and sincerely regret that the minister should go on sponsoring a bill that the public and even his fellow lawyers find ridiculous and stupid and in which mention should only be made of abortion and not of abortion of a female person.

I believe that on this point at least the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) could accept to amend the Criminal Code. If up to now that text has been the laughing stock of the public, he should try not to be responsible for the continuance of a wording which is preposterous. Let us have at least legislation which is logical, shows common sense and corresponds to the views of doctors, who have asked us to remove from the Criminal Code the words "female person" in 12 or 13 different places when speaking of abortion.

We recognize that we must limit our remarks to the topic, the abortion of "a female person" and that we must express ourselves concisely. But when we speak of female persons, we speak of more than half the population. That is why we were pleased to support the remarks and the amendments of the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) aimed at removing from the Criminal Code such ridiculous, stupid and senseless words which show a lack of maturity on the part of the Liberal party. It claims to be a serious party; yet it introduced in this house a bill which was prepared by God knows whom. It was prepared not by hospitals, or doctors, or medical associations, but by civil servants who kept on repeating, in the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code or in the bill on abortion, the same stupidities we had before concerning the abortion of a female person. The expression existed way before the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) came to this house, way before the friends of his predecessor, who introduced the bill, thought of protecting themselves by asking the government to amend the Criminal Code with regard to abortion and homosexuality.

I support in all seriousness the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi. It may not seem serious in the eyes of the minister but, otherwise, the matter will continue to be a joke in our society and especially for those who will have to plead before our courts, when they must speak of "the abortion, Your Honour, of a female person".

Again, this will prove that the Liberal party goes by what experts say in introducing amendments to the Criminal Code, in this omnibus bill, in introducing changes which basically are not serious.

• (3:20 p.m.)

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, just a few words about the expression of "the female sex", that my colleague from Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) would like to see eliminated because it is understood, according to the clear and precise explanations of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), that this expression should be used when speaking about abortion.

This is likely a result of Bill C-150 dealing with homosexuality. By speaking of female persons, it establishes clearly that homosexuals shall not have the right to get an abortion. These are undoubtedly the explanations the minister meant us to understand a while ago by referring to the Criminal Code, to the law that has always existed, so that it would be clearly established in everybody's mind that a man has no right to get an abortion even if he is in love with another man.

That is why the expression "of the female sex" is maintained. So in my opinion, Mr. Speaker, all explanations are unnecessary. Everybody knows that abortion is for women and not men, as far as the operation itself is concerned. So, the Minister of Justice probably knows the rules, the law, the Criminal Code and so on. By using this expression, he wanted to spare men difficulties that could happen some 20 years from now in Canada.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I should like at the outset to set the record straight. Although I interject remarks on each amendment, it is not to do any filibustering on this bill, for our party did not ask for such a discussion.

Not only we did not ask for it, we actually asked for the very opposite, and last Friday, we voted with the Progressive Conservative members on a motion to adjourn the debate on Bill C-150, in order to proceed with more serious matters. So if people pointed a finger at us because the debate drags on, they would be labouring under a tremendous misconception.

The amendment before the house is a very short one. I will try, therefore, as on similar occasions, to be very brief, and to limit my remarks to the regular 20-minute period.

Mr. Speaker, I am not a lawyer, and I would not like to get entangled or lost in the maze of legal terminology. Many people act as if they were paid so much per word, which often results in the fact that their language in a written form, in its attempts at precision, becomes gibberish or, as in the case in hand, simply ridiculous and stupid.

Simple souls and laymen like myself have to smile when they read the various paragraphs under section 18, and come across things like this:

—a qualified medical practitioner, other than a member of a therapeutic abortion committee for any hospital, who in good faith uses in an accredited or approved hospital any means for the purpose of carrying out his intention to procure the miscarriage of a female person—

When we find this kind of language in one paragraph after another, we cannot help but be amused. The repetition of this ridiculous specification gives us some doubts. Many stout, corpulent members of this house should feel their bellies, just in case.

Did a woman's ovum ever go into orbit and drive a permatozoon back into the body of a man? This is what this useless specification would lead us to believe. My remarks will be found very stupid and yet the wording of the subsections of clause 18 does imply such stupidities.

One would think that the authors of this clause in the omnibus bill were so concerned with the fate of these poor Canadian women that they wanted to show them that this provision legalizing abortion was a precious present being offered exclusively to the mothers and future mothers of families, those who are indeed responsible for one of our greatest national resources, that is, the generations which will succeed us in this country which is as big as a continent. Our motto "from sea to sea" could become "mother at sea".

These abusive specifications could also be construed as justifying the legislator who would have thus become a kind of Pontius Pilate who washes his hands so well that he dares determine, self-consciousness, without that he is quite in favour of abortion for persons of the female sex but, on the other hand, he certainly does not want the same authorization for persons of the male sex, like him.

All sorts of other interpretations could be put forth. May I be allowed to underline the most serious ones, those which would be likely to bring about confusion.

Let me take again paragraph (a) of section 18, which reads partly as follows:

—a qualified medical practitioner other than a member of a therapeutic abortion committee for any hospital, who in good faith uses in an accredited hospital any means for the purpose of carrying out his intention to procure the miscarriage of a female person.

Mr. Speaker, someone might give to the term "a female person" the following interpretation: a person still in embryo, that is a child in his mother's womb. If someone gave that interpretation, the legislation would mean that abortion is right provided the mother expects a girl. You see that that term may be confusing.

When the bill refers to:

—the miscarriage of a female person—

does that mean that if the unborn child were a male person, miscarriage could not be procured? You can see that that could be interpreted in such a way. I do not say that such is the purpose of the bill but it could be interpreted in that way by someone, and abortion would not be valid, then, if it were a boy.

And what would happen, Mr. Speaker, if some smart aleck came to see the doctor and requested an abortion for his girl-friend, basing his request on his own interpretation of section 18 (b) which reads as follows:

—a female person who, being pregnant, permits a qualified medical practitioner to use in an accredited hospital any means described in paragraph (a) for the purpose of carrying out her intention to procure her own miscarriage.

Mr. Speaker, it could be interpreted to mean that a female person cannot request the authorization, but a male person can. For an abortion to be authorized, the request would have to be made by a male person.

We might call this splitting hairs, Mr. Speaker but such an interpretation is possible.

Therefore, our "smart aleck" could say: "She, of the female sex, cannot, but I, I am not of the female sex, therefore, I can get the necessary authorization.

Often, we refuse to believe that people may be so stupid. It is the kind of objection that the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) could put forward, for instance. I would answer that if we see eggs, there must be a hen around. And we, in this house, since we are discussing idiocies, there must have been some idiots to lay such rotten eggs. If we bear in mind the consummate skill of the law artists—of those people who know how to evade legislation or to use it to their benefit—such a hypothesis might appear quite likely.

Mr. Speaker, it has been common knowledge since time immemorial that the greatest thieves are as free as a bird and that the law is unable to catch them. I would be tempted to add that, sometimes, having caught them, it lets them get away again. I am thinking at this very moment of Lucien Rivard's famous evasion.

• (3:30 p.m.)

All such interpretations, though they may seem crazy, are nevertheless plausible. We are puzzled by this heavy insistence on "female person". How many sexes are there? Was it the intention in this way to spare the pretty boys who, instead of being normally constituted, are cracked in the head?

Mr. Speaker, may I refer to a definition of the sexes to be found in the works of Plato. I quote:

> Formerly, our nature was not what it is today; it was quite different. First of all, there were three species of humans—

May be it is to that text that the author of the omnibus bill was referring.

> —and not two, as is the case today: the male, the female and, in addition, a third species made up of the first two. Only the name survives today, the species has disappeared. That was the androgynous species which combined the forms and the names of the two other species, male and female; it no longer exists today; only the name survives as an expression of scorn.
> Moreover every man as a whole was round-shaped, with a rounded back and rounded sides, four hands, as many legs, two faces quite similar on a round neck, and on top of those opposite faces, a single head, four ears, two generative organs and all the rest accordingly. He walked erectly, as we do now, in whatever direction he wanted, and when he started running fast, he did like showmen who turn in circles while throwing their legs up in the air; leaning on their eight members, they turned somersaults in rapid succession. And those three species were thus shaped because the male originated from the sun, the female from the earth, and the mixed species from the moon which has the characteristics of both.

[Mr. Matte.]

Mr. Speaker, it is true that I am young, but I have yet to meet such beings as those I have just described.

So, we only know two kinds, and we know only one sex that can transmit life, that can bear the foetus which will result in a normally shaped human being. There is only one sex.

That is why when the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) stresses the fact that this provision should be deleted, I think that he is quite right. It is altogether useless. However, the amendment might not cover all the clauses adequately, as the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) pointed out, because the same expression recurs in other clauses.

If the minister agreed, he would simply eliminate the expression every time is met and in all sections on abortion.

But the interpretations I just pointed out may exist. The main interpretation, at least according to the French version we have here, would be that the abortion of a person of the "female sex" might not be really that of the person because we understand the embryo, the foetus is a human being, a living being and consequently abortion could be interpreted as being that of the foetus itself of the female sex, which would create tremendous confusion.

Were we expected to understand that since the result of these masculine affairs, of the feminine gender, could not affect life or health, the fact of clearly specifying the "female sex" was meant to eliminate this kind of sex? This specification was useless as science is not advanced enough to know the nature of the young of this new race. Will they be aqueous or terrestrial creatures?

Finally, what will happen to these persons of both sexes physically? We have here all kinds of problems which, as ridiculous and stupid as they may seem at first sight, are nevertheless a very eloquent demonstration, in my opinion, of the uselessness of the present debate.

Before I conclude my remarks, I would like our motives to be understood and I want the government to consider the fact that we do not want to delay this debate in any way and that we would be very happy if the minister were able to convince the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or the cabinet to put an end to this debate, to adjourn it indefinitely, so that we might pass to other much more important matters, in short, that we might discuss projects for which the people of this country have been waiting a long time and which they would rather hear about than what we are now discussing.

We are not and will not be blamed for it since we are still being urged to continue this gigantic struggle we have undertaken and which we will continue in order to prove that our attitude is supported by the majority of the people, at least those we are trying to represent with dignity in this house.

Mr. Speaker, I apologize for having taken so much time in trying to explain a difference of a few inches only.

[English]

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, for a number of days we have been debating a series of amendments to the government's proposals in respect of abortion as put forward in the bill. I have lost track of the number of days we have been discussing this matter.

Some of the amendments put forward oppose any provision for abortion within the Criminal Code. Other amendments placed before the house embody the stand that in the event this bill is passed by the house certain improvements should be made. I think it is perfectly proper that a confrontation of debates should take place on this particular matter, and that adequate provision should be made for such a debate.

During previous debates in the house I have made my own stand very clear. I am unable to see my way clear to support the government proposal as it is now before us. There are some amendments I feel I can support; yet there are others to which I cannot lend that support. In respect of this amendment I find it difficult to conceive—or possibly I should say I find it difficult to perceive its exact purpose.

• (3:40 p.m.)

I do not pretend to be enough of an authority on the French language to comment on particular problems that may exist with respect to the French version. However, in trying to arrive at a possible explanation of the English translation and the English version of this amendment, the only thought that came to my mind was that it might refer to the type of case that I read of a number of years ago, where a 14 year old boy developed pains in his chest and after a period of time, examinations and x-rays it was decided to operate. When the operation was carried out it was found that in fact there was a developing embryo in the boy's chest. Subsequently it was concluded that this was in fact a twin of the boy, the development of which had been arrested in the prenatal stage, that the foetus that was eventually born enveloped the retarded foetus and that with the physiological changes and developments at the stage of puberty the embryo had once again commenced its development.

I thought this might be an explanation of what the hon. member had in mind when he moved the amendment. However, after listening to some of the members who have presented their case in favour of the amendment I find that this is not their concern at all; they are not concerned about a male person ever developing a state of pregnancy. Consequently, Mr. Speaker, I find that I cannot lend any support to this amendment, and I hope the house will proceed with the other more important aspects of the abortion issue now before us.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I should like first to thank the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin), my colleague, who was kind enough to move this amendment yesterday on my behalf. I had to stay up North to attend the funeral of a very dear friend, and that is why I was absent when that amendment was moved in the house.

Mr. Speaker, it will not be necessary for me to speak at length in order to make the purpose of this amendment clear, for the hon. member for Lotbinière, as well as my colleagues who spoke in support of my amendment, have already done so fairly well.

However, I should like to add that I wanted to delete those words in clause 18, in order to avoid repetitions and also complications in our Canadian laws, as my colleague from Champlain (Mr. Matte) mentioned. We know that the legal officers who draft the laws always manage to complicate them to such an extent that the same pieces of legislation often mean two or three different things, and this gives rise at times to some quibbling between lawyers, but always at the expense of the client, of the little people.

Now, I would like to explain very clearly how I understand maternity. We know that the feminine nature implies a possible maternity. That does not mean that all women must be mothers or must go through motherhood. I think a woman can be a mother without experimenting maternity and giving birth to a child. That is a happy and glorious experience which all women, I think, should hope for, but a woman can also be a mother through adoption.

I think that it is an altogether different thing that the man's body has in itself the possibility of being a father, but he cannot, I think, experiment maternity.

For those reasons, I think it is not necessary to complicate a legislation by giving so many details, when everyone knows that many of our Canadian statutes should be clearer to prevent complications. Maybe such details have been deliberately omitted from our legislation.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think that my amendment is well-founded and justifiable, and I cannot understand why the minister and the government would not agree to this amendment which could prevent complications and perhaps heavy expenses later.

Earlier, in his opposition statement, the minister led us back to the question of rape. He spoke about rape itself. I think that as far as rape is concerned, today we cannot consider it in the same light as we did in the past. Today a man can be raped just like a woman because, if I understand correctly, to rape someone is to force that person to perform a sexual act against his or her will.

It can happen to a man. One has only to read the proceedings of certain lawsuits in our largest cities to see that sometimes the charge of rape made against a male person is rejected and the latter, who was charged with rape, is freed. One therefore wonders whether the male person had not been driven to rape.

I think the minister's explanation does not make sense and I still think my amendment—the one we are supporting—is justified and acceptable.

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, following the amendment moved by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise) to the effect that the omnibus bill —be amended by deleting in clause 18 the word "female" on lines 28 and 29 on page 42, and the word "female" on lines 3 and 23 on page 43, and the word "female" on line 39 on page 44,

We realize, Mr. Speaker, that the drafting of this bill was done too hastily. We have been saying so since this debate started. Because of this, there are errors and almost inconceivable nonsense in the bill. Furthermore, that is exactly why 70,000 Catholic parents have asked for a royal commission in order to determine who is responsible for the drafting of this bill and for the gross errors it contains.

• (3:50 p.m.)

A while ago, I was listening to the hon. member for Regina East (Mr. Burton) and with him I recognize that, from time to time, some changes take place in the patterns of human life.

Last week, we were told of a human heart living outside the chest of a human body. That probably shows why some people with their heart not within their chest but without, are against an amendment to defend Christianity.

Therefore, in the face of such changes, we are not surprised either to discover in that bill, which was prepared and reproduced too hastily, enormous mistakes such as the use of the word "female" throughout.

I have discussed that famous omnibus bill at home with my own family, and my wife, seeing the word "female", asked me whether the Minister of Justice was afraid that women would change their sex, as some of them have. That happened last year, but it does not occur very often.

However, since it was deemed advisable to repeat the word "female", I believe that it would be more logical, as requested by those having a clear mind, to delete that word from the bill. Before we believe that women will change their sex, we have to await proof that such things will happen more quickly.

Besides, I discussed the matter with my daughters—they are students in a convent—who were wondering in what respect that bill was serious. They asked me the following question: "Is it true that men could imagine that other men would need to be aborted?"

Together with the Serena teams, which studied recently the amendments we have moved, the spokesmen for the University of Sherbrooke support us and state this: Your amendments could at least mitigate the omnibus bill, make it less ridiculous and allow this representative of justice to discuss it better.

Besides, these Serena teams have sent over 238 letters of protest, 7,378 signatures regarding all the amendments and also 49,175 signatures to the Senate in order to kill the bill once and for all.

In the face of such a general outcry, I will not let anyone say that we are not defending something serious here. On the contrary. When we find something ridiculous in a bill, we ask that it be changed. We must decry such absurdity in the house in cooperation with these teams, with Catholic parents, with all those who now want us to go on with the battle we started, because what is taking place in parliament reminds me too much of the time when we had a Prime Minister just as uncompromising as the present one. He would force his members and his ministers to vote like him, without any other obligation than to dictate to parliament. I say that this reminds me of the time of Sir John Macdonald who said about Riel "A man to hang".

Today, we can say that there are lives to be protected. When in this ridiculous bill we see such absurd words which are repeated at every turn, such as "female person", thus giving the impression that there could be others than female persons who could procure miscarriage for themselves, I say for the last time to my Liberal friends—who accept such intransigency, who vote unanimously as they did yesterday on sensible amendments which we introduce but who reject them all because of the dictatorship existing in this parliament—please do not repeat those mistakes for which the Canadian people have suffered because right now we are forging the destiny of Canada and we are going back a hundred years.

For a better and just Canada, for more explicit laws, I therefore beg you, as a brother-christian of all Canadians, to accept the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Abitibi.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the house ready for the question? The question is on the motion by the hon. member for Abitibi amending clause 18 of Bill C-150. All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my view the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 75 (11), and a special order of the house made last Wednesday, April 30, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred until after consideration of motion No. 19.

We will now proceed to the consideration of motion No. 34 in the name of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce.

Mr. Cafik (for Mr. Allmand) moved motion No. 34:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to endanger her life or health" on lines 4 and 5 on page 43 and by inserting the following words: "endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health".

He said: Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the amendment of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) to Bill C-150, and I would like to explain the reasons for my position. First of all, I wish to make it clear that I realize that many members of the House of Commons, many people in Canada and many people in my riding are divided on the position they take with regard to the legalization of abortion. I hope they will try as hard to understand the position I am taking as I have tried to understand theirs.

When considering abortion I believe that the main question is whether the fœtus is in fact a human being and, if it is a human being, at what stage it becomes one. Obviously, if one were to conclude that the fœtus is not human, there would be no reason for not granting abortions on either request or demand. If, however, it is concluded that the fœtus is human, then people might be inclined to come to a different decision. I believe that this central question takes the problem of abortion out of the realm of religion and belief because I do not think it is solely a religious question but rather one on which legislators should decide on scientific grounds. In doing so we must ask ourselves the following question: If a fœtus is a human being, do we as members of the House of Commons have any responsibility to protect its human life? This is a serious question which affects all people, regardless of their religious, political or other beliefs.

A great deal of evidence was put forward to the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare in the 27th parliament by a number of witnesses who indicated that there is no question about whether or not a fœtus is human. I should like to quote some of the evidence put forward at that time. One of the witnesses was Dr. L. L. de Veber, assistant professor of the Department of Pediatrics and Pathological Chemistry at the University of Western Ontario. In conjunction with two other doctors he submitted a brief to the committee, which is to be found at page 556 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the committee for January 30, 1968. I quote:

> The foetus is a unique and distinct individual from the first few weeks of life with its own circulation and its own blood group, separate tissues, and by 20 weeks or even earlier, capable of existing outside the mother. This is not to deny that the mother is the supremely important individual in the life of the foetus and that she is intimately connected with the foetus. However, to speak of the foetus as being part of her such as other organs is simply not logical or scientific.

Does the foetus become a human being at the moment of birth? In answer to this question the doctor said:

> This seems hardly logical since this may occur at 10 weeks, 20 weeks, or 40 weeks. There is nothing magical or mystical about the passage of birth process except for its independent circulation and breathing of air.

The doctor went on to ask:

> Is the foetus human when the mother can feel it kick and move? This is a very subjective assessment and would vary from mother to mother and we know scientifically that the foetus can move and react to pain long before the mother is aware of its presence.

The next question the doctor asked was:

> Is the foetus human at the period of viability? The problem here is that the period of viability is changing continually. At present it is usually assessed at about 20 weeks gestation. However, obviously as medical science advances, this period will become much earlier and it is also possible in the future that the foetus could be maintained outside of the mother from the very earliest weeks of gestation. Thus, again, we are on slippery ground in attempting to award the quality of being a human being at the period of viability.
> Does the fact that the foetus can cry after delivery, before viability, make it human? It is interesting to note the extreme reactions of people to the concept of the foetus crying after an abortion.

• (4:00 p.m.)

He is speaking here about abortions which take place prior to three months of pregnancy. Scientific evidence indicates that the foetus is living well before the time at which most abortions are carried out. Dr. de Veber continued:

> Very few doctors who perform therapeutic abortions find it a pleasant task. Many of them have stated they realize they are destroying a human life with the operation.

[Mr. Cafik.]

I go on to quote from evidence by Dr. Jack Walters who is a professor of obstetrics at the University of Western Ontario. He says:

> The definition of human life depends on the finding of certain factors characteristic of life as opposed to death. The factors are: 1. Heartbeat. 2. Blood pressure. 3. Maintenance of body temperature. 4. Production of carbon dioxide. 5. Utilization of oxygen. 6. Respiratory activity.

In Stockholm, Sweden, experiments were conducted on aborted children. I wish to quote the results of these experiments:

> The recording of the data concerning these aborted foetuses should demonstrate to anyone that life is present at this stage of development. The foetus has a heartbeat, produces an electrocardiographic pattern, utilizes oxygen, produces carbon dioxide and maintains body temperature.

Utilizing what is called the Doppler effect, heartbeats have been recorded in foetuses nine weeks of age.

This kind of evidence certainly leads me to believe that the foetus is in fact a human being. And if it is, what right have we to authorize some other person to take its life? I think there are situations in which this could be permitted. There is, I believe, a longstanding argument that a person has the right to protect his or her own life—the right of self-defence. This argument would justify an amendment to the Criminal Code allowing a mother to abort if her own life is, in fact, directly in danger. On the basis of this principle I believe most people would grant the right to an abortion in cases where life was endangered by the continuation of pregnancy.

In what other circumstances could we possibly permit an abortion? Bill C-150 as presently drafted says that, in the opinion of the committee set up to consider these things, an abortion could be carried out provided the continuation of the pregnancy would, or would likely, endanger life or health. The problem here lies in the definition of the word "health". Does it mean, as many would interpret it, merely a matter of convenience? Can abortions be allowed when the mother finds it discomforting to have an other child. Perhaps when she has four or five already, perhaps when the home is not large enough, or possibly when a girl is unmarried and social pressures are brought to bear upon her, producing mental attitudes which cause her to seek an abortion?

If we allow abortion for reasons of this sort, Mr. Speaker, we are surely not correcting the real problems. Suppose an unmarried girl is led to seek an abortion because of the pressure of society upon her. Is the fault that of the innocent unborn child or is it the fault of the society which is so critical of her? Suppose a mother does not want her child because she is economically poor or inadequately housed. Do we solve this problem by allowing her to have an abortion or should we, as legislators, do something to provide conditions in which such a woman would want to bring her child into the world? I do not think we solve problems such as these by creating another. Many of those who submit to abortion find themselves in a much worse condition years or even months later. They find that the abortion weighs on their consciences. They regret what they have done. Anyone who is married and has children realizes that a wife is very often in a depressed state during some stage of her pregnancy. Are we to judge what should happen to an unborn child because of what may, after all, be only a temporary condition? I do not think so.

The amendment put forward by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce makes a significant change in the wording of the bill before us. The operative words are: "to endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health." In my opinion this may be a justifiable condition for abortion in line with the consideration of self-defence which I have mentioned. Simply to say that life or health could likely be endangered, or could be endangered, is putting the matter far too broadly. We have been told that from a legal point of view there is no difference between the original wording and the wording of the amendment. I submit there is one real difference, leaving aside the legal implications. The original wording would create a climate for abortion in Canada; people would believe that abortions were very easy to obtain. It may be we are doing many women a disservice by seeking to pass the legislation in its present form, because I do not think they will find abortion quite as easy to obtain as they thought it was going to be.

It would have a far better effect in Canada if we were to change this legislation in such a way as to avoid any impression that there is nothing wrong with taking the life of an unborn child or that it is permissible in any and all circumstances. I do not think it is, and I do not think this legislation should suggest that it is. If those who drew up this bill feel that the foetus is not a human being, then I believe they have drawn up bad legislation. If they say it is a human being, then we should be very careful about the conditions under which abortions are allowed to take place.

For these reasons I support the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. In no way do I feel that I have any responsibility to legislate morality, nor that the government has any responsibility to do so. That is not the question. I would certainly not subscribe to that view. But I strongly feel that we are under an obligation to protect the lives of our citizens, including the unborn child.

I should like to put on record one further quotation, this time from the Declaration of the Rights of the Child adopted in 1959 by the General Assembly of the United Nations. I presume Canada subscribes to this declaration. The preamble states in part:

> Whereas the child, by reason of its physical and mental maturity, needs special safeguards and care, including proper legal protection before as well as after birth—

• (4:10 p.m.)

It is interesting that here is a recognition by a world body in which we participate of the rights of the child both before and after birth. From that body emanates a declaration that there is need to protect the child both before and after birth. I feel that, without question, the foetus, at the stage of its development being considered here in connection with abortions, is a human being. I feel that abortions should only be permitted under very strict control for the purpose of protecting a woman's life or if her health will be seriously and directly impaired. Such an abortion would be, in my view, a case of self-defence.

[Translation]

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to rise and talk about the amendment proposed by the previous speaker and I think it is quite important at this time to draw the hon. members' attention and to express my ideas on this amendment.

We should consider whether this amendment goes any further, goes far enough or goes too far in its attempt to make the bill more explicit. The amendment reads as follows:

> That Bill C-150 . . . be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to endanger her life or health" on lines 4 and 5 on page 43 and by inserting the following words:
> "endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health".

I do not think there should be any uncertainties as to the reasons behind the position of the previous speaker who spoke in support of that clause or that amendment for allowing therapeutic abortions. This is not a probable, a hypothetical or a future matter; it is an immediate question.

When you read this:

—would or would be likely to endanger her life or health—

I suggest that the clause should be more explicit and the amendment more realistic.

This may not seem very important, but just read the clause again in another way, and I quote:

—would or would be likely to endanger her health—

Most often this is how it will be construed and this will leave us open to all kinds of problems. Doctors will have to deal with women that will play on words, who will think up any reasons to get a therapeutic abortion.

Mr. Speaker, the present section of the Criminal Code is much too evasive and vague. I think the amendment, as worded, certainly supplements clause 18 to some extent, but fails to make it specific enough.

In my opinion, a matter of such importance should not provide a means of playing on words.

Physicians will face women who will play on words. This was confirmed in every country that adopted such legislation.

As it appears in the Criminal Code, the section now contains the following expressions "would or would be likely" and "her life or health".

I think too wide an interpretation is possible, and as I said, serious problems will crop up because of the way in which some expressions of the bill will be understood.

Those who wish to solve the problem of an unwanted pregnancy, are not consumed with scruples, but with an obsession: to get rid of the foetus they carry in their wombs. Those women or young girls have the impression that their problems will be solved by the death of the foetus and that, in this way, they will trifle with the conscience and good faith of physicians and gynaecologists. They will even threaten to commit suicide, but very few ever do it.

Physical health is easy to ascertain but hard to define in order to determine whether health is endangered or not, because it is closely connected with the morale of a person who claims to be sick because of a pregnancy.

[Mr. Beaudoin.]

It is more difficult to determine the moral or mental health, especially of unscrupulous persons who will resort to tricks or intrigues.

Mr. Speaker, the mistake made in section 18 of the Criminal Code has been noted and studied by Dr. Lavigne, president of the Quebec hospital medical boards, who referred to it, when he appeared before the committee on justice and legal affairs on March 20 last, in the following terms, and I quote:

We are against the present text of the bill and we wish to see it amended to limit the reasons for abortion to cases where there is a serious danger to the life of the mother. The problem is stated in the bill on page 43.

Mr. Speaker, I will not quote the wording, because I know that most hon. members know it by heart, especially those who took the trouble to study the bill and to come here to discuss its consequences clause by clause. I will go on:

Now, this leaves a door open to all social, psychiatric or other reasons that people will choose to give. There will always be a way of obtaining pseudo-psychiatric or pseudo-social reasons to obtain an abortion. Now, this is the equivalent of what the clause on abortion requests. At the present time, the bill reads as follows: Would or would be likely to endanger her life or health.

In my opinion, the proposed amendment does not go far enough, is not specific enough, and offers no guarantee, or nothing more than the provision of the bill when it was first introduced in the house.

Dr. Lavigne who is aware of the dangers of a wrong interpretation made the following suggestion, which I would like to quote:

We would prefer this to be limited to "to endanger her life" or at least "to endanger seriously her health."

The terms used leave the door open to problems, and discussions. The major problem regarding these therapeutic abortion committees is that psychiatrists, among whom some admit any kind of psychiatric reasons, would ask the gynaecologists and obstetricians to carry out abortions when those physicians have refused to perform them.

• (4:20 p.m.)

—This provision would also allow for a certain amount of bargaining as far as the patients are concerned because they will try to find a doctor who will agree to such an abortion. This will bring problems that will give rise to a double standard in certain cases.

In New York I know two hospitals that are located just a few streets from each other. Now one hospital carries out one abortion for every 20 deliveries and the other one carries out one abortion for every 6,000 deliveries. Therefore, I think that this situation would be creating a problem that is just as serious.

Mr. Speaker, these findings are very important, because the legislation itself on abortion already constitutes an evil, and the acceptance of such an indefinite clause, that changes almost nothing, such as the amendment under consideration,—that could be qualified as unfinished—constitutes a challenge to the interpretation of the terms of the law.

Such women who would ask for an abortion will thus be free to resort to all tactics, but they would be unaware of the actual psychological consequences which will result.

By trying to get out of an unpleasant situation for themselves, by playing upon words, they will get involved, that is, they would not know, and neither the psychiatrist nor the specialists would know exactly where they stand. Well-known doctors came to that conclusion, and one of them, Dr. Walsh, when he appeared before the committee on justice and legal affairs on March 20 last, added:

> It may impose tremendous strains on her health, it may impose tremendous economic and other strains, and in the case of the unmarried mother, which we must always keep in mind, it imposes the tremendous problem of giving up her baby.
> One of the problems that is not properly investigated yet is the following. In respect of a woman who has an abortion ... our experience is that a woman can tolerate giving up her baby much better than feeling that she has deprived it of its right to life.
>
> This is something that is very deep in a woman makeup. It is psycho-biological. We cannot prove it to anyone statistically. It is an intuitive observation. It is something that doctors who work with patients find all the time.

I think that for all those reasons we must be extremely careful before accepting all the amendments, especially the one now before us.

Some hon. members believe that the new legislation on abortion will only legalize abortion for serious reasons, for instance to preserve the life of the mother, even if it is seldom necessary.

It is generally recognized that abortion for such reasons is already legal. The changes proposed in the bill, on the whole, open the door a little more. That is why I submit that this amendment does not restrict enough the scope of the bill nor the meaning of its wording.

Bill C-150 proposes to legalize abortion to protect the mother's health. The decision here is left to the sole discretion of a small abortion committee.

In fact, this legislation will allow two doctors, a majority in a three-member committee, to authorize abortions for the purposes they decide upon.

In a television program on the CTV network on December 27 last, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) confirmed our apprehension concerning abortion committees. Let the abortion committees make the law, he said. He stated that the word "health" would not be interpreted by the courts of justice but by each therapeutic abortion committee. In other words, the decision of such committees is above and beyond the law.

We have noticed that in our hospitals abortions are now made for reasons of life or death, and not on psychological grounds. The immediate, rather than the future, physical health is more important. There is no gambling, no shillyshallying and consequently doctors are not blamed for such operations. If there is an emergency, an operation is performed but only with the mother's consent. Such cases are extremely rare, and are becoming more so, because of progress in the medical field, but when they happened, the mother more often than not chose to sacrifice herself in order to give birth to her child.

Why then should the government pester us with "probably" and "maybe" or with amendments like this one, which is incomplete and does not change much? What is taking place now is simple and gives rise to abuses. Why do this on purpose?

I believe first of all that a bill such as this one should never have been introduced. Now that the harm has been done, we, in the Ralliement Créditiste, are trying to limit the disastrous consequences by trying to induce the government to adopt a firm and clear-cut attitude, which will not let the moral health of pregnant women be adversely affected by an abortion.

Moral health is very difficult to define; even doctors have no definite views on this and find it difficult to explain this moral health, which cannot be endangered by a pregnancy, which is a normal process for women. Several physicians who appeared before medical boards have found it quite difficult to explain and establish the nature of moral health for a pregnant woman.

I hope that my intervention on this amendment will be more successful than those of the previous speakers, but as I do not expect any comprehension from the hon. members opposite, I ask them for once, since that amendment seems to be rather reasonable, to vote in favour of it and show for once at least that the bill can be improved.

It is therefore time for the government members to find a specialist who like the famous Dr. Barnard will graft on them what they need following the vote on the abortion legislation.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take part in the debate once again, first to congratulate the mover of this amendment. He has proved that we are not fighting alone and that at least many people are beginning to wonder, as this amendment clearly shows.

I cannot say that I agree entirely with the motion. The fact remains that the hon. member deals with the real problems when he asks for a more precise definition and evaluation of the health factor, so as to leave no room for abuses.

• (4:30 p.m.)

Such are my first reactions to this amendment which clearly shows that many people are thinking things over and wondering how far it is permissible to go in order to save the life and especially the health of the mother by resorting to abortion?

That is why I congratulate and praise the hon. member who moved this amendment. I perceive here his desire to protect the people against the possible abuses which will certainly occur.

I say "certainly", for there is abundant proof in all the countries which as a first step, passed legislation similar to the one we are discussing. It started in a very low key: Merely a measure to legalize abortion when the mother's life is endangered.

It seems quite reasonable, at least in theory. But then applications are so numerous that the meaning has to be broadened to "life and health". And thus, scores of people resort to abortion, even when unjustified.

And so, down the slippery path, for soon new amendments are brought in to make abortion still easier to get. Today, in Japan, an abortion upon request costs $4.85, while British hospitals practise mass abortions and a British physician has procured up to 62 abortions in a single day, for $288 each.

Legislative measures on abortion passed in different countries irrevocably lead to fantastic abuses. It is on account of that, I believe, that the hon. member who moved this amendment was prompted to restrict the meaning of the word "health".

When we say "—endanger her life", if we stop there, what happens? I have said it again and again, and I am going to repeat it once more, for I think it is worth saying it again, since it is an extremely important detail: the mother's life may be endangered three times out of 10,000 deliveries, and yet they want to extend the permission to procure miscarriages to all the hospitals in the country. It is awful when you think of it seriously. Three times out of 10,000, and nobody denies those figures. They are official figures.

And even in those three cases out of 10,000, the physician cannot positively state that abortion will save the mother's life. When her life is really in danger, the mother is as likely to die from the abortion as she would be due to her normal pregnancy.

And very often nature can correct things far better than the best physician.

What do experience and facts prove? That there are fewer risks for a woman to die if her pregnancy is continued to the end.

Very definite cases have been explained. We took the trouble to consult serious and competent people; we were even shown slides, films, which prove beyond doubt that nowadays, with the tremendous progress made by the medical science, no doctor can be absolutely sure that abortion will save the mother's life. And that is only for the first part.

Being aware of such facts, how could we not object to abortion? How could we go against what is so natural, so logical? In the final analysis, we wonder why we are discussing such things when the facts are so obvious.

We, of the Ralliement Créditiste, have not undertaken this debate lightly, for it is only after spending week-ends with doctors, gynaecologists and psychiatrists that we have come to the conclusion that an alarm had to be sounded across the country so that people would realize that they were going to be fooled with a bill introduced quietly and without warning.

If the facts are not as we describe them, we would be pleased to stand corrected. We would like nothing better. Will all the acts be turned upside down to promote the pernicious consequences of the countless abuses which are possible? Will essential principles, that are not necessarily and basically moral principles, but simply human ones, be upset to that end?

And since we specialize, so to speak, in promoting the liberty of the human being, its complete development and fulfilment, we take care of it from the first moments of its existence, which starts as soon as impregnation takes place or, in more precise terms, as soon as there is implantation of the impregnated ovum in the uterus.

Consequently, there are no cases where pregnancy endangers "her life".

A doctor told us of a quite frequent occurrence: cancer of the uterus. When a pregnant woman is struck by such a disease, what happens? She seeks the advice of her doctor who prescribes treatments against cancer and not against the life of the foetus. This is not regarded as an abortion. Besides, it is done even in Catholic hospitals. It happens in three cases per 10,000.

As for renal or cardiac deficiencies, there are as many chances, if not more, of the woman dying through abortion as there would be if she were allowed to reach the term of her pregnancy.

It is facts like those which prompt us to hold our own and we shall continue to do so. And that settles it for "her life".

So, with regard to life, it does not happen. This occurs only occasionally and then a pregnant woman will never be left to die because in giving her such and such care she can be saved. When a patient has a doctor and is in the hospital all attempts are made to cure her and save her life. If that person represents two persons, because she has a foetus in her, a baby, if you prefer, in her body, then what is the doctor's role? It is to save both lives. He must try to save them both.

• (4:40 p.m.)

If, when one tries to save both, the foetus dies, we shall not oppose this. And if abortion was practised in this case, we would agree entirely.

We do not agree about the consequences, and the consequences of abortion are especially shown in the second part of this amendment: "or seriously and directly impairs her health."

The wording is as follows: "or would endanger her life." Of course, I can understand the concern of the hon. member who brings us this amendment when he wants to specify "seriously and directly impairs her health."

At first glance, it seems fine, and I would be inclined to support him if I were formally assured that a serious and direct health impairment were determined beyond question.

Mr. Speaker, if abortion practically never helps to save the life of the mother nor her health, the consequence is even greater, that is to say that all discussions, all suppositions are possible.

It is for this reason that adding the expression "seriously and directly" does not change anything. There will always be a doctor, a gynecologist, a psychiatrist or a member of the committee authorized in the hospitals to suggest that a girl or a woman who absolutely wants an abortion will always find a way to say that her health is or can be "seriously impaired".

There will always be somebody that will find that her health is threatened "directly" while we know quite well, thanks to medical science, that it never happens.

There may be indirect consequences; a person could become insane, mentally ill, as a result of her pregnancy. Then, this person would have become insane for entirely different reasons, Mr. Speaker. Destroying the foetus will not solve her mental problem.

This again was demonstrated very clearly and decisively: a psychiatrist has indicated that the consequences of abortion, from the psychiatric and psychological points of view, were more serious than those of a normal pregnancy, even when it was not wished for. Although a person could be pleased momentarily with having been aborted, this was only temporary; sooner or later she would develop a guilt complex that would affect her mental health for years.

Mr. Speaker, are we going to vote for something that is so unscientific, so illogical? Are we going to vote for something that is going to increase the number of mentally unbalanced? For, Mr. Speaker, as the number increases of the institutions where abortions are performed, we will also have to enlarge our mental institutions. If anything affects a person mentally, abortion certainly does.

Are we to believe that a normal pregnancy, a most natural thing, related to one of the deepest instincts of the human being, the instinct of reproduction, could really affect the mother's health? We know of no such cases. There are all kinds of treatments, and new ones are discovered every day to help the pregnant woman.

Mr. Speaker, we even heard about a woman who had German measles in the first months of her pregnancy. The popular belief was that in 90 percent of the cases a woman affected with German measles would necessarily bear malformed children. As a result, in many countries a woman who caught German measles in the first months of her pregnancy could get an abortion. This was 15 or 20 years ago.

Today, following experiments in laboratories, experiments in hospitals and the discovery of hard facts it was found, Mr. Speaker, that 10 to 15 per cent only of women with German measles gave birth to malformed children. It can thus be said that by authorizing abortion in all those cases, 80 to 85 per cent of the fœtuses killed could have become perfectly normal people.

The newest developments in medical science do not allow us to legislate today on things we do not know about with certainty. To postulate that health is seriously or directly impaired would encourage abuses, though this amendment was brought in with the best intentions.

There will always be some woman or other who considers that her health is seriously impaired or that her health is directly impaired. That is why it does not behoove us to determine this point, under the pretext of doing away with illegal abortions. This has been pointed out and doubtless others will mention it later. It has been pointed out that it does not solve the problem in any way. In every country where abortion has been legalized there has been a fairly marked increase in illegal abortions. It is quite understandable. Most of the female persons who are waiting for the passing of this bill, in order to resort to abortion, have some hope for they do not understand what reservations the act may stipulate. They hope that once the bill has been passed they can go and consult the therapeutic abortion committees and have their abortion authorized. That is what they are hoping, Mr. Speaker. And when the bill is passed, they will want that hope to be fulfilled. They will try to be aborted, even if their health is neither seriously nor directly impaired. What will they do? Resort to illegal abortion.

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 34, Mr. Allmand.

• (4:50 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Ovide Laflamme (Montmorency): Mr. Speaker, I shall deal briefly with the amendment under study, the purpose of which is to qualify the word "health" in connection with permissible abortion, that is, abortion that will not be considered a criminal act in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I have already expressed some doubts about leaving the word "health" unqualified in the legislation. That could lead to abortion on request and could also lead to legal abortion for psychiatric reasons.

I respectfully submit, Mr. Speaker, that the purpose of qualifying the word "health", used in conjunction with other words as suggested by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand), as follows:

"endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health."

is to avoid future abortions for psychiatric reasons which the act, as it now reads, might legalize.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, this is the crux of the matter with regard to this whole clause, because if the word "health" is not qualified, there will be, both medically and legally different interpretations of the legislation as between hospitals, and thus, all kinds of illnesses, even indirectly related ones, will make abortion possible, that is non-criminal.

Mr. Speaker, if I do not agree with the views expressed by the hon. member for Champlain (Mr. Matte) concerning this matter, I respectfully submit to the house that we should qualify the word "health" as proposed in a similar formula, in order to prevent any intervention of psychiatry, and by leaving the general term "health", it might be inferred that, from the medical point of view, since the expression "or would be likely to" has already been added, a mental illness might be sufficient for a hospital therapeutic committee to deliver a certificate authorizing an abortion.

And in this field, Mr. Speaker, I feel that psychiatry has proved that the effect of abortion is absolutely contrary to the patient's purpose.

I think psychiatrists or psychiatry have never been able to determine one way or the other whether abortion had any remedial effects on the person seeking an abortion on psychiatric grounds. The amendment states, and I quote:

—seriously and directly impair—

It is my opinion that doctors who will eventually have to interpret those words could not conclude to the possibility of psychiatric abortions, if it is stated and if it has to be proved, by way of a certificate or through a diagnosis, that this would seriously and directly impair her health. An abortion will then have to be performed.

At that time, with respect to psychiatric abortions, we should think it over seriously so as to leave it to doctors, as suggested by the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle), to interpret the word "health" which includes both physical and mental health. Various hospitals thoughout the country would give it various interpretations. I think what is good in one part of the country should also be good in another part.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Laflamme: Mr. Speaker, I have had the opportunity of looking into this matter. I personally talked about it to several gynaecologists even within hospital groups, and I sincerely think, as I have already said in my own constituency, that I would be not only agreeable to the bill but also satisfied with it, provided the word "health" is qualified, specified and defined.

And the clarifications brought in by the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) meet, in my opinion, the real objectives that the legislation should seek, namely to avoid considering in future as criminal acts the medical acts performed at present in a good number of hospitals in this country, and not open the door in such a way that it would be possible from now on to have abortion upon request, on the pretence of psychiatric diseases, even simulated ones, to which a patient could resort, at a given moment, in presence of her doctor, to show that her health would probably be impaired, when we know that this could also include mental health, for if mental health could be impaired, one must nevertheless take into account the life of the individual which must also be protected.

Given those circumstances, I will support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, and I agree with the remarks made by the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Cafik) on that point for, in my opinion, it is essential that the word "health" be defined and described in a way similar or identical to the one proposed.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme) for the opinion which he put forth about the amendment introduced by one of his colleagues, the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand), removing from the clause the words "or probably" and adding:

"endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health."

The proposed amendment improves a little the meaning of the clause; only, in our opinion, it is not sufficient. We are going to accept the amendment which establishes that the health would be seriously impaired and, if it is seriously impaired, that the abortion be accepted.

Mr. Speaker, as was mentioned by my colleague from Champlain (Mr. Matte), it is proved beyond doubt that death or seriously impaired health were deplored in only three cases out of 10,000 pregnancies.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment stipulates that pregnancy would endanger the life of the mother or impair seriously or directly her health, and everybody agrees that the pregnant woman is from the beginning rather ill, although it is natural. This lasts as long as she is pregnant. I have among my relatives the mother of a family who, when pregnant for the first time, was practically condemned to death. She was told that she would not reach her term and so on. Today, this mother has seven children. She did not die. Her health is even better than ever.

And how many Canadian mothers of families with a delicate constitution, have we not seen bearing families of 10, 12 and 15 children. And yet, they were ill everytime they gave birth to a child. From the point of view of health, people said: She is ruining her health. However, nothing prevented those mothers of families from raising large families.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, if 50 years age a bill providing for the termination of pregnancy, when it engangered the life of the mother or seriously and directly affected her health, had been introduced, it is probable that we would not have those brilliant men in parliament at the present time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Caouette: The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) might not be here today, if such a legislation or regulation had been passed 50 years ago. That is what I think.

In the name of civilization, such bills are introduced while those who will vote in favour of them might not be members of parliament. They would have been rejected because their mothers' life was in danger or the birth of these particular birds would have seriously affected her health.

[Mr. Caouette.]

It is all absurd and confusing. The minister, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or any member are unable to cope with the matter. The bill is introduced even if it is a known fact that the majority of the people object to it and nobody says a word of what the people are expecting to hear.

If such a bill had been passed 50 years ago, the Chinese would perhaps have taken over our country. How many members would be here? We are told that we would help the Canadian people by passing such a legislation. This means that we are attacking and betraying future generations through that bill.

Mr. Speaker—I said it earlier and I repeat it now—they rely heavily on the concept of civilization to introduce in Parliament such a bill and such amendments as provide that abortion could be procured when the mother's life is "endangered or her health seriously and directly impaired".

Mr. Speaker, to hear such lines of argument is unbelievable. Particularly among Liberals, the services of psychiatrists are called upon. Before psychiatrists existed, there were women who gave birth to children. Psychiatrists have never helped anyone from losing his reason if he was meant to. Psychiatry has seldom cured the insane. We realize it when we look at the other side of the house.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): You should look at yourself in a mirror.

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Justice tells me to look at myself in a mirror. He probably knows from experience, because he has seen his own reflection.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, the services of psychiatrists are requested. We have nothing against psychiatrists. No. But since Canada and the world exist, there have been all kinds of such people. For awhile there were "wise women", who were first replaced by psychiatrists, then by "wise ministers". Nonetheless, we cannot determine, exactly and completely, as the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme) said earlier, that such a person will die, or that her health will be affected or ruined by pregnancy, or bearing a child.

In my view, the amendment—and I repeat the words of the hon. member for Champlain—partially improves the legislation.

However, the fact that we reject the bill as it is does not mean that we accept abortion when the mother's life or health is endangered. We are against such a thing, we want nature to be respected.

Nature was not created by psychiatrists, nor by the Minister of Justice nor by the Prime Minister of Canada. Nature was created by a superior being, who is not the Minister of Justice. We must conform to that nature. Of course, there are ups and downs, tragedies, and death.

Mothers are not the only ones to die. I wonder if the minister will not eventually introduce another bill dealing with fatherhood, on behalf of male fathers of families.

And so it goes: we go off our rockers in the name of civilization. In the name of civilization, we no longer know what to do. In the name of civilization we allow all kinds of organizations to push us around, organizations which are absolutely unknown to the Canadian people, unknown to Parliament. A few people only understand what is going on; the others are all at sea.

We seldom see members speak up on the government side, as the hon. member for Montmorency did, and openly take a stand in favour of the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. The minister does not seem too pleased with his attitude, coming from a Liberal member, and does not seem pleased either with the support of the hon. member for Montmorency with regard to the amendment, because he does not want to change the law.

A bill is introduced and we are told: Follow the leader and vote in favour of the whole caboodle. This is a "package deal" as they say in English.

Mr. Speaker, the few Liberal members who get on their feet will be praised by the people more than those who remain stuck to their seat with Lepage glue. This is obvious. The people of Quebec will commend them too, because this is not a question of religion. We are Catholics, it goes without saying, but we have gathered evidence from people who, though they are not Catholics, are strongly opposed to this bill and against statements such as: "the life of the mother is in danger or her health will be directly or seriously affected".

Mr. Speaker, it is not just a question of religion, it is a question of Christian morality. There are Christians not only among Catholics, but all over Canada.

We sincerely believe that the government has no right to open doors which will give rise to abuses, to more or less justified abortions. The government is aware of this, and the minister also, and nevertheless he is good and patient. Sitting at his desk, he is listening, he is thinking and he calls us doctors from time to time. We do not speak on behalf of medecine at all, but on behalf of life that no man has a right to jeopardize. That life may be only embryonic, but it is a life there and thereafter. The nonsense of such a bill is that we are about to permit murder.

We are asked in the Criminal Code to spare from the rope those who have taken the life of others. But those who are about to be born, let us kill them under the pretext that the life of the mother is endangered or her health will be seriously impaired.

Now, neither the Minister of Justice, nor I know anything about the subject. As a matter of fact, even physicians do not agree. The hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle), who is a doctor, says something and another doctor who went to medical school with him, says the opposite.

When one speaks as a Liberal rather than as a physician, then one repudiates medicine.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): When you speak of credit, what do you repudiate? Credit?

An hon. Member: We serve the country.

Mr. Caouette: Even if we lose credit, we nevertheless work for our country, and if credit is lost, Mr. Speaker, it is not the fault of the Ralliement créditiste, but of the Liberals, because they are the ones who play with credit. The credit of the whole country. The credit of the whole nation good for the others.

Mr. Speaker, those are the remarks I wanted to make on that matter because I do not think that someone can prove beyond doubt that a mother will die in child-birth.

Mr. Speaker, nobody can be sure, not even the greatest scientist. So, how is it possible to be absolutely sure that the mother will die? Furthermore, neither the doctor nor anyone else can decide of the place or time of a person's death.

So I think the Minister of Justice who pilots this bill through the house should withdraw it, and stop saying all the time that we are filibustering, as the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) said this afternoon. That is not the case. Let them introduce other pieces of legislation. Let them cast that one aside; the minister should reintroduce it in 50 years, when he has more experience than he has now; during that time, our mothers will not rack their brains wondering whether they will die or not in giving birth to a child.

Therefore let us get down to work, let us improve health conditions for our mothers so that they can give Canada, our native land, sturdy, robust and intelligent children, so that we may be able, in a few years, to replace the present Minister of Justice.

• (5:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce): Mr. Speaker, first of all I must apologize to the house for not being here earlier this afternoon when my motion was called. I was obliged to be at a meeting of the Transport and Communications Committee at that time and did not know that the preceding amendment had been dealt with. In the meantime I believe the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Cafik) filled in for me and gave an excellent explanation of my amendment.

In any case I would like to put forward some of the reasons why I propose this amendment. Last year when the government stated its intention of amending the law on abortion and referred the matter to the Health and Welfare Committee I asked to become a member of that committee. I did so because I felt that this question was a very serious one and I wanted to listen to arguments on both sides and to all experts on the matter. I approached the subject, like most other people, with preconceived opinions. All of us form certain opinions about certain things and I, like others, had certain opinions about abortion. However, I had made up my mind, because I had been approached by many of my constituents, to try to look at this subject as objectively as possible and to consider all arguments as openly as possible.

I was made a member of the Health and Welfare Committee which sat for three and a half months during the period from October 1967, to March, 1968, studying the question of abortion. During that time we had 29 meetings, received 35 briefs, heard 93 witnesses, and prepared two reports. We prepared an interim report which was presented on December 19, 1967. I shall summarize briefly what the report said. It recommended that the Criminal Code be amended to allow therapeutic abortions under appropriate medical safeguards where a pregnancy will seriously endanger the life or the health of the mother. I agreed to that interim report which was prepared before we had heard all the evidence.

Later we prepared a final report which was presented on March 13, 1968, after we had heard all the witnesses. The report we made at that time was somewhat similar to the interim report. It said that the Criminal Code should be amended to read—and again I summarize—that when the continuation of the pregnancy of such a female person will endanger the life or seriously and directly impair the health of the mother an abortion may be performed. This was the opinion of the parliamentary committee which sat for three and a half months and seriously considered the evidence of all the experts in Canada on the subject. As a matter of fact, we heard not only experts but women's groups, theological groups, journalists and anybody who wanted to say something on the subject. We requested all those who we thought might have something worth while to say to come before the committee.

The wording that I propose in my amendment is the wording that was suggested by the Health and Welfare Committee. What it in fact does is to restrict the grounds where an abortion might be granted for reasons of health. We think that abortions should only be allowed when the continuation of the pregnancy will seriously and directly impair the health of the mother. As I said, I came to this conclusion after much soul-searching and after questioning and re-examining my initial position. It was my feeling that this question should not be decided on theological grounds but rather on scientific and social grounds, and I tried to reach a decision on those bases.

The arguments that led us to this conclusion were that the foetus is a human being in the process of development. There was discussion among the doctors as to the exact nature of the foetus. Some gave it more human characteristics and others gave it less, but finally I concluded that if there is doubt as to the humanity of the foetus, then surely that doubt should be resolved in favour of its humanity. If I had a gun in my hand and was trying to decide whether to fire it down a dark corridor without knowing whether or not somebody was there, I certainly would resolve the question in favour of the possibility that somebody might be there and I would not engage in foolish behaviour which might endanger someone's life.

As I say, there are arguments on both sides as to the humanity of the foetus, and this disagreement is found among doctors. Some doctors firmly state that the foetus is fully human right from the moment of conception. Others state that whereas its humanity develops as the foetus develops it is uncertain whether or not it is fully human in the early stages. If there is this division of opinion, I state that we should resolve any doubt in favour of the human being. We should not take chances if there is any doubt whatsoever that a human life is involved.

For that reason we say that this life can only be terminated for extremely serious reasons. The only reasons that we feel are acceptable are when the life of the mother is in danger or when her health will be seriously and directly impaired. We take this position for humanitarian and social reasons. Those who object to it and would like to deny any protection at all for the foetus state that the foetus does not deserve any protection whatsoever. They state that it is just a part of the woman's body and therefore, if she wishes to have it removed, she should have the right to have this done. In other words, they say that it is no different from her appendix or her kidneys.

• (5:20 p.m.)

I must say that the vast and overwhelming majority of the informed witnesses who came before our committee denied that contention. To begin with, none of these other organs develops into a baby. The foetus definitely and necessarily does. That alone would lead one to believe that it is not like any organ in the human body. Second, doctors, and especially Dr. Jack Walters, professor of obstetrics at St. Joseph's Hospital and the University of Western Ontario, put forward six tests for human life. These tests are: 1. Is there a heartbeat? 2. Is there blood pressure? 3. Is there maintenance of body temperature? 4. Is there production of carbon dioxide? 5. Is there utilization of oxygen? 6. Is there respiratory activity? These are the tests used habitually to determine whether there is human life. The witness stated that scientific tests he and other obstetricians had carried out showed that as early as nine weeks the foetus gave evidence of satisfying all these criteria. In other words, the foetus has met these tests used to determine whether human life is present. Dr. Walters concluded as follows, as found on page 559 of the evidence before the committee on January 30, 1968:

> In discussion before this committee relative to changes in the abortion law for Canada, statements have been made that the foetus is a "potential human", "not living" or a "protoplasmic mass". The foetus, on the contrary, is living, is human and this must be taken into consideration in modifying the abortion laws of this country.

This doctor did not reach these conclusions on theological grounds or on grounds of prejudice. He arrived at them following the evidence of six scientific tests which he and others had carried out.

Another doctor who appeared before the committee on the same day, Dr. de Veber, a pediatrician, has carried out operations on foetuses as early as 14 weeks after conception. He referred to cases where the foetus had been taken out of the womb, operated upon and replaced in the womb where it developed normally until born as a child in due term. His comment was that if the foetus is not a human being and does not deserve human rights at this early stage, what are its rights after it has been taken out of the body to be operated on in one of these operations? Does it acquire human rights when it is outside the womb, only to lose them again when it is put back?

I confess I approach this subject with certain ideas about it. But the law itself, over many long years, has also recognized that the foetus has human rights. I could cite many examples of the way in which the law has recognized this. For example, in those dark days when we retained capital punishment a woman was never executed while she was pregnant. The reason was that the state recognized that although the woman might have committed murder there was living inside her another person who was innocent and who should not be executed for the crime. Thus, whenever a convicted person was pregnant the execution was stayed.

There are many countries in which pregnant women are exempt from imprisonment because it is recognized that they must care for the human being developing inside them. In addition, civil law has recognized that an unborn child has certain civil rights. Such children are given rights to succession and inheritance from the time of conception, and a curator can be appointed by the courts to protect their financial interest. In other words, if a woman is pregnant the child within her body is considered to be human for succession purposes should the father, or some other person, die leaving legacies to the woman's children.

Civil law has also recognized that the foetus has a right of action for damage caused to it. This was illustrated in cases involving what have been called thalidomide babies. Action was taken on their behalf on account of damage done to them as foetuses because certain drug companies or doctors had acted or prescribed negligently. The courts upheld the right of action on the part of the foetus.

All this seems reasonable to me. These are principles which the law has recognized for many years. Now we are being asked by some people to dispense with these rights, to do away with this protection. I have a lot of respect for those who put forward arguments in favour of the proposals now before us. I have examined these arguments but after serious consideration, and, still with great respect, I cannot accept them inasmuch as I feel it is the duty of the state to protect innocent persons.

It is said by some that parents should be free to do whatever they want to do, that this is a question for them alone to decide, and the state should not intervene. Well, Mr. Speaker, we do not take this attitude with respect to cases of non-support by a father or in cases where a mother or a father batters a minor child. We do not take this attitude with respect to education. The state has decided that regardless of the wishes of the parents children should be educated to the age of 16; free and compulsory education is provided for them and we feel this is in the interest of the children no matter what the mother or the father might prefer. There are many other questions which the state decides because it wishes to protect children against the damage or intrusion upon their human rights which may be occasioned even by parents and those closest to them.

There are those who say, in support of arguments in favour of a wider amendment than the one I am now suggesting, that no one should be forced by law to have unwanted children. It is argued that families should have the right to limit the number of their children. Few of us would disagree with that proposition. I, myself, support the principle that families should have the right to limit the number of their children. I call attention to the fact that the government has put a bill through parliament, Bill S-15, legalizing contraception and the sale of means of contraception. I fully support that bill. But to say parents should have the right to decide the number of children they want to have does not conflict with the principle that we ought not to countenance abortion on any condition whatsoever.

[Mr. Allmand.]

I maintain that we must make up our minds whether we want the child before it comes into existence. Once it has come into existence we have forfeited any right to dispose of it for any reason whatsoever. Those who say we have a right to dispose of the child surprise me. Many hon. members have suggested that you must protect human life, and even animal life; yet, at the same time they suggest we can deprive a child of existence. This Criminal Code omnibus bill contains amendments which will make it more difficult for some to abuse animal life. Those are good amendments. On the other hand, I maintain that the grievances of a woman seeking an abortion can often be dealt with by means other than the performance of an abortion. Society can help to cure some of her grievances.

I could say many things on this matter but we are limited to speeches of 20 minutes. May I wind up by saying that I moved this motion to amend because I was a member of the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare which worked hard to bring out a report on this matter. I thought it was a good report. In no sense did I move this motion as a motion of non-confidence in the minister. I have full confidence in the minister. I think he is a good minister and in bringing forward this omnibus bill he has done good work. Only on this one point do I disagree with him.

My only regret is that the Creditistes may use my amendments as a pretext to continue their filibuster. Their behaviour here has been deplorable. This is the first time I have spoken in this debate. I did not speak on second reading or on any of the other motions to amend, thinking other members would wish to speak. I feel that the Creditistes, in carrying on a frivolous debate, have been undemocratic. I feel uneasy when they support me on this motion. I am uneasy about giving them an opportunity to talk more, because I completely disagree with their reasons for supporting my motion. I feel they are acting most undemocratically and they are paying lip service only to the principles of democracy. After I have spoken on my motion I will sit down, hoping to have the support of other members in this house. In any event, I wish to see the vote come as quickly as possible so that we can dispose of the matter. Hon. members here will determine whether they wish to support my motion. After that, we can consider other things.

May I also say that certain reasons which cause a woman to seek an abortion—I am speaking of poverty, adverse social conditions and so on—should be cured by society. If a female wants an abortion, that is, wants to do away with the life of a child because of certain social reasons or because she cannot afford that child, then surely it is the duty of the state to give that family the necessary assistance to take care of the children. If bad social conditions, improper housing, or slum conditions cause a woman to seek an abortion, then I think it is the duty of the state to correct those underlying conditions. I say that many of the conditions put forward by persons as reasons for an abortion are conditions that may be and should be corrected by society. Of course, if the continuation of the pregnancy endangers the life of the mother, we cannot do anything; she must have an abortion to protect her own life. The same thing applies to her health. But if she wants an abortion because she is poor, because she is living in adverse social conditions or simply for personal convenience then, surely, we have civilized and humane methods of dealing with those problems.

I submit strongly that we should allow abortions under controlled conditions. At present the law is totally inadequate and confusing. There are conflicting sections in the Code, and the law must be changed. There ought to be reforms and I suggest the reforms should state clearly the conditions under which an abortion may be granted. Those conditions should be serious conditions. They should be related to serious threats to the life or health of the mother.

Mr. D. Gordon Blair (Grenville-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I intend to speak briefly on this motion. Having listened carefully to the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand), I rather feel that he has set up a lot of straw men which are not in issue at all in this motion to amend. He made a case against permitting what might be termed abortion on demand or request, but he did not say anything which persuaded me that the proposed wording of his amendment in any way improves upon the present wording of the bill.

I think all hon. members realize that it is necessary, in providing for therapeutic abortions, to deal with questions not only of life and death, but of health. This was made clear by the great case of Rex v. Bourne, decided before the war in Great Britain. In that case the medical evidence made it quite clear that it was impossible in many cases for doctors to decide whether life or health were involved. Indeed, they might never know that life itself was involved unless the mother died. So, I think all hon. members supporting the principle of therapeutic abortions realize that the distinction which is sometimes made between the life of the mother and the health of the mother is a false distinction. They realize that medical men, in the exercise of the awesome discretion which they now have and which we will confirm with the passage of this bill, require the protection of the law.

I invite the attention of hon. members to the wording of the present bill and to the wording of the amendment proposed by my colleague for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. The present wording is to the effect that a therapeutic abortion will be lawful if it is found that the continuation of the pregnancy would be likely to "endanger her life or health". I submit that the word "endanger" is a good, old Anglo-Saxon word. It is strong, forceful and carries great significance. That wording means that the medical men must find—

An hon. Member: Probably, you mean.

Mr. Blair: The medical men must find that the continuation of the pregnancy will endanger health, in the same way as it may endanger life.

Now, let us consider the proposal made by way of amendment. Instead of using one verb, it uses two. The test as to life will continue to be whether it endangers her life, but the test as to health becomes merely whether it will "impair her health". Actually, the full wording of the amendment is:

—endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health.

• (5:40 p.m.)

I submit for the consideration of all members that, on a proper reading of these two texts, the test "endanger her life or health" is a much more serious test than "impair her health". I submit further that the addition of adverbs to the word "impair" does not improve its force or position. It is suggested that the test should become the endangering of life or seriously and directly impairing health. If this kind of section ever had to be construed by a court, I would say that the court would look at those two verbs—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Adverbs.

Mr. Blair: Verbs and adverbs—and would say that the test as to life is endangering life, but the test as to health is merely the impairing of health, qualified by whether health is seriously or directly impaired. I suggest for the consideration of all hon. members that the original text of this bill imposes at least as strict a standard, and in my submission a more severe standard, than that proposed by this amendment.

I also make the submission, which I think will carry some weight with members of my profession in this house, that if we wish to have a law that is clear and incapable of undue confusion in interpretation and administration, the fewer words we use the better. I submit that by using the original text of the bill and retaining the phrase "endanger her life or health", we are going to have a more clear and understandable law than if we confuse the situation by suggesting that the test for life is whether it is endangered and the test for health is merely whether it is impaired.

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to speak on the amendment now under study, but after all that happened, I feel it is my duty to clear up certain points.

First, I shall like to congratulate the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) for his amendment.

As I was listening to him, he taught me a lesson, that we should never judge someone before having listened to him. In order to show that we are gentlemen, I would like to congratulate him, in spite of everything he said against us, for the reasoning he developed and for the arguments he put before the house.

He is accusing us of delaying the business of the house, but I think that we are getting our reward today. After two weeks of fighting, we feel that government members are beginning to move, are beginning to express themselves. If it were only for some amendments, as the ones we are studying presently, our struggle would not have been in vain. While endorsing the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce who is urging his colleagues to vote for this amendment, I must tell him that I cannot understand why he is the only one in his party to oppose those amendments.

I was listening earlier to one of his colleagues and I tell him frankly that he could at least have been honest when he was opposing the amendment. He has brought out arguments against this amendment, and he has not been honest about it, because he has not quoted all the words spelled out in the present legislation. He merely read paragraph (c):

(c) has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would ... endanger her life or health—

But, that is not the case, it is not the truth. Let us read the whole of this paragraph which says:

—that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely—

There lies all the difference, there is the heart of the matter. That is why we are fighting with all our might.

—would or would be likely to endanger her life and health—

And it is this word "likely" I am sure, that incited the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme) to say what he did say and for which I want to congratulate him. It is with this word "likely" that we will come to abortion on request. All the people, all the members who are thinking, who want to pass judgment on this clause, agree that tomorrow, in a few years, with this clause, we will have abortion on request.

The hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair), to oppose his colleague, read this clause three times, and each time I said to myself: Since he is a lawyer, will he end up by reading the clause in full?

I am not a lawyer, and he read it in English, but then he did not say "likely". Hon. members shouted "likely". He would not say it, and it was intentionally. Hon. members shouted it twice at him—

One hon. Member: Dishonest.

Mr. Gauthier: —"likely". It is simply dishonest.

• (5:50 p.m.)

An hon. Member: In the English version, the word "probably" does not appear.

Mr. Gauthier: The French version that I have here says "probablement". I speak French. I cannot help it. If there are two bills, I am not to blame. Two flags, two bills, two Ministers of Justice.

Again, I should like to congratulate the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, since be bothered to sit on the health, welfare and social aflairs committee; when he learned that that subject would be discussed, he asked to be named on that committee and his report is simply marvellous, as well as the work he did to get information and pass an equitable judgment.

He says that in both reports he tabled in the house, it was clearly stated: "provided that the pregnancy worsens the mother's condition and seriously endangers her life or health".

That is what struck me. While he says that in both reports tabled in the house, he suggested to the minister of Justice not to forget to insert that word, no account has been taken of that suggestion in the text of the bill. The sentence: "probablement en danger la vie et la santé de la mère", has certainly not been written by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, not by the hon. member for Montmorency, nor by the hon. member for Gatineau.

I note that the amendments moved by those hon. members always aim at defining the word "health", and the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce has just provided us with striking evidence that the committee reports, since the beginning of this session, do not weigh much in the leaders' decisions.

We must remember that that bill was prepared long before—I am not talking about the present Minister of Justice—but the picture has not changed, because the chief said so. It cannot be changed. When I look at this task as a whole, I commend those members who were responsible, who worked seriously.

They are a little roused themselves since they are bringing us these amendments in order to try to correct the situation, to come back to the terms of the committees' reports.

Those who helped draft this bill, according to me, and to the evidence just given us, did not take into account the two committees' report regarding subsection (c). And this is why we see some members, despite the orders given to them, rise, protest and say: We have reached the limit; it does not make sense anymore.

And I understand that their social conception is rebelling. It looks as if their present leader compels them to destroy the Canadian nation. An infernal spirit which I am unable to describe is behind that.

That is why today, after the member for Gatineau who wants to delete the word "likely"—and it was quite clear in his amendment—the word "likely" must be taken off. Had such a word been left out, we could not have talked about it.

We missed that, we missed another amendment. I am wondering if we shall not miss the third, that of the member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. And yet, these are three fine testimonies from the government side and not from just anybody.

The points made by the hon. member for Montmorency were not frivolous. I know personally the hon. member for Montmorency and usually, he knows what he is talking about. I am convinced that his reasoning today was based on the fundamental principles concerning the child's right to live, because if we deny here all rights to a child, we might as well shut up shop and go home, for this affects the future generation, our heirs of tomorrow. I will admit that the amendment is not quite perfect yet. But at least it might bring some comfort to people when they read the following words:

—endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health.

Those words, will in my opinion be of great help, though it is still far from perfection. It is not a hundred per cent in accordance with our idea yet, but we approve of a middle course. That is why we have been fighting for many days, in order to find a middle course.

Such a course is being indicated to us this afternoon, but some proclaim it to be futile. They forbid their colleagues to change the idea for the sake of which we are fighting. Yet they are not shallow-minded; let us tell them so, let us praise them. We are braver than people on the government side; say "thank you for a job well done" and this has nothing to do with politics. The future of the Canadian people is at stake.

As the hon. member for Montmorency pointed out a while ago, if we do not accept this amendment, with what is allowed by the law, we shall see in a few years from now abortions upon request, which is a very dangerous thing. And that is precisely what we do not want; we do not want to be like some other countries, like England and all the other countries mentioned since this fight began. We want to avoid the extremes to which other countries have gone.

Mr. Speaker, may I declare six o'clock?

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock this sitting stands suspended until 8 p.m.

At 6 p.m. the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, before recess, I was making a few comments on amendment No. 34 moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) who wants to specify a certain detail in the act, of much concern to us, in clause 18 of the bill, by deleting the words:

"or would be likely to endanger her life or health" on lines 4 and 5, on page 43, and by inserting the following words: "endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health"

As I said earlier, we will vote for this amendment, even if it does not achieve our aims. It is a lesser evil. It specifies the case of an abortion, when the board of a committee appointed will have to make a decision, because the terms of the present act which the hon. member wants to delete make all the difference in the world.

When we write "would be likely to endanger her life or health", I am of opinion that the words "would be likely to" will allow some doctors to go very far, and even, as the hon. member for Montmorency suggested, to allow abortion on request. This is exactly what we are trying to avoid through our amendments. I believe that amendment No. 34 does not go as far as those we have moved, but at least it sets some limits for the committee which will have to make the decision.

The hon. member for Grenville-Carleton as well as the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce were sincere this afternoon in their discussion. The latter seemed somewhat sorry to have moved the amendment, though he told us frankly that he did so because he thought some of his constituents wanted him to define more clearly the limits of the legislation. He blamed us for extending this debate on the bill now under consideration.

This extension, Mr. Speaker, if it is an extension, has a purpose. We want to achieve an aim. We wish to draw the attention of the government and stir it up. We probably have not quite succeeded today, by moving that amendment, but the intervention of the hon. member for Gatineau and of the hon. member for Montmorency, whom I would like to congratulate once again, have helped us.

I think that our comments were not entirely lost and if we could carry on, in a few days most of the government members would support us, in order to respect the wishes of the people.

Mr. Speaker, as I have little time left, I am going to bring my speech to a close. I would like to appeal to the conscience of all government members—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order!

• (8:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I have not previously taken part in the debate on the abortion clause of this bill or the amendments, but this particular amendment seems to be the one which gives an opportunity to make some brief comments. The various stands which have been taken in respect of this amendment indicate how much this whole subject, and the amendment relating to abortion, have been misunderstood.

As a piece of social legislation, I would agree with those who have suggested that this particular part represents a fraud. Current practices in most hospitals go much further and are much more reasonable than this particular amendment would allow. Rather than being a progressive piece of social legislation, this really is a step backwards.

The impersonal hospital committee which is to be set up, busy as it will be, will not meet the situation. The hospital committee which will have to make the decision will not have personal knowledge of the patient, her family background, mental or physical problems. This amendment is intended to permit that committee to give serious consideration to more than just the danger to the life of the patient. For that reason I would support it.

I am advised that at the present time hospital practices in most, if not all, of the provinces take into account many more conditions than those set forth in the bill we are now considering, and many more than those incorporated in the amendment we are now discussing. I should like to outline these considerations by reading from an article which appeared in the April, 1969 edition of Canadian Doctor. Those of us who are not medical people must rely upon the opinions of those who are in practice, particularly in respect of what is currently being done in hospitals regarding abortion. Let me read from this article which is entitled "Forum":

If an abortion law has to specify indications for abortion, rather than leave the decision to the woman and her physician as is done with nearly all other decisions to operate, then the indications must include all conditions for which termination of pregnancy is required. These should encompass all physical diseases in the mother that would jeopardize her health, or that of the baby, should she continue with the pregnancy. They should also include obstetrical indications, if carrying the pregnancy to full term would be hazardous to either mother or baby.

Furthermore, the law should include psychiatric indications where continuation may result in a psychotic episode or depression severe enough to engender suicidal thoughts or affect the woman's personality. It should be made possible for the woman to be relieved of responsibility for continuing with a pregnancy that would result in an unwanted child and the adverse effects such an event may have on the emotional health of the mother, the child, or on pre-existing children in the family. Similarly, there should be no question when abortion is requested in the case of known rape or incest, or in the case of a high risk pregnant child under the age of 16. It would also be reasonable to expect that abortion be permitted, in case of a gestation which may result in a physically or mentally incapacitated offspring. Bill 150, when looked upon in this way, is inadequate.

That outlines briefly what the people in the medical profession seem to feel is an absolute minimum. In fact, these are the conditions under which abortions are presently performed in hospitals. If you consider all the conditions set out in the article I have just read, you will find that the proposed definition we are being asked to consider is completely inadequate.

Many others during the debate have spoken about these inadequacies, particularly in respect of rape and other incidents which are not covered by the bill. For that reason, I think the amendment now proposed moves in the right direction, or at least in a more reasonable direction, toward making abortion a medical matter rather than a legal matter.

The legislation we are now asked to consider, even as it would be if the amendment before us were adopted, is much too narrow to be workable. As I see it the result would be that the hospital committees, when they have been established, would have to rule against many abortions which are now being performed in our hospitals. In other words, rather than enlarging the grounds or making them more reasonable, this bill will narrow those conditions and make it more difficult for the committee to rule in favour of abortion. This is another case of defining by narrowing the meaning and making the law less reasonable than was intended.

These committees must follow the definitions in this bill. If there were nothing said at all I think these committees would be in a better position than they will be with the present narrow definitions. In other words, if the hospital committee were set up, and if it were given general directions that abortions might be performed in accordance with the practices heretofore prevailing in that hospital, or any hospital in the province generally, it would be a better bill. I say this because here we will have the situation of the committee having to apply the law which has been laid down and refusing cases which are perfectly legitimate and logical. After it has refused one or two of these cases, patients will stop going to the committee and instead will turn to illegal abortions, which this bill is trying to avoid.

• (8:20 p.m.)

I found it necessary last night to vote against the amendment of a colleague. I shall not comment upon the vote because that is not permitted. However, I found it necessary to vote against that amendment because it would have tended to increase the number of persons on the hospital committee, which I think would be a bad practice. In my view, the more people that are placed upon a hospital committee the more difficult it will be to get the committee together in order to make decisions, and the more difficult it will be to consider the act and its application to a particular person.

I think the present practice, amended slightly, of permitting the family physician and the surgeon involved to perform the abortion, with perhaps advice from another surgeon, would have been much more preferable. However, we are confined to the narrow amendment before us. Therefore, I rise to indicate that I will support the amendment because it moves a little further toward the situation where the committee can make a broad and reasonable decision upon the facts. I hope the government will give consideration to some of these amendments and will allow them. We have here an amendment moved by a member of the government party. It goes a little way toward improving the bill, and I hope the government will accept it.

Mr. John M. Reid (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, because I spoke briefly on the question of abortion during second reading of this bill I shall be very brief tonight. I was impressed by the speeches of the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Cafik) and the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand). It is very seldom that I have been able to say I have been impressed by a speech I have heard in the House of Commons, but as a result of those speeches I am prepared to change the position I took on February 25 with regard to the question of abortion.

I am now able to vote for the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. I reserved an open mind on this question until I had read the deliberations of the justice committee, which might indicate that I should change my mind. I was not sure that I should vote against the government on this issue. Since that time I have not seen, read or heard anything that would lead me to change my position. However, the speech of the hon. member from Notre-Dame-de-Grâce and that of the hon. member for Ontario have moved me to change my position somewhat, and I shall support this motion.

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this amendment. I think it will make what is not a very good piece of legislation somewhat better. It will allow the medical profession and those dealing with this question a little more leeway in their interpretation of danger to the life or impairment to the health of a pregnant woman. The problem with this legislation is that it is too restrictive; it devolves upon the abortion committee alone to decide whether an abortion shall be carried out. The question is whether a woman should be admitted to hospital and have this procedure carried out before the eighth week of pregnancy.

In these days of tight hospital beds and the fact that the pregnant woman rarely sees the physician before the sixth week of pregnancy, it makes it difficult to do the operation before the 8th week which is the optimum time.

I support this amendment because it will slightly broaden the terms under which abortions may be carried out. The amendment provides that an abortion may be carried out if continuing the pregnancy would endanger a woman's life or seriously and directly impair her health. If such a provision were not made, I think the abortion committee would degenerate into a largely routine and poorly functioning type of body, in that you would have on it three physicians none of whom might have anything in common with the patient, who might not know the family, and the family would not be very familiar with what was going on. This would be a very poor way of proceeding, and there would not be the necessary consultation between doctor and patient.

It seems foolish to have an abortion committee just to guard the rules and practices of a hospital when there is a general medical committee in every hospital that inquires into the standards according to which abortions are carried out and which studies the indications in respect thereof. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I support the amendment. It makes a small improvement to what is a very poor piece of legislation in respect of establishing a cumbersome abortion committee.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, we are considering the amendment of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) which seeks to replace the followings words:

—or would be likely to endanger her life or health—

by those:

"endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health"

I feel nonplussed. On the one hand, I would like to support the amendment without reservations. But on the other hand, the bill proposed by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) reads as follows:

—would or would be likely to endanger her life or health—

By that expression, the Minister of Justice opens all the doors to every pretense and to every case without exception and would allow abortion under any circumstances and without any limits.

Since I formally object to that proposal, to this shabby piece of legislation proposed by the Minister of Justice, dealing with abortion, I would be inclined to support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, which is a little more specific and which gives a little more security to the patient and to the legislators, to the doctors and to the therapeutic committees, when it is said:

—would endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health.

But when I consider the abortion problem in its true context, I wonder why we should permit abortion? Is it really necessary? Are we compelled, because of the great number of cases, to pass a law on this matter? Is the problem so big that we should allow abortion? Will the fact that we adopt a measure and that we permit abortion do away with clandestine abortions?

After considering both the bill and the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, I remain puzzled. The reason is that I am not at all sure that the amendment I have just mentioned or the bill can solve the problem of secret abortions, or of therapeutic ones, in short, that they can bring any long-term solution to the problem of the rejection of motherhood and of the meaning of motherhood.

Secret abortions constitute a very serious problem, not only in Canada but in a large number of countries. Its consequences are disastrous, because more than half of all secret abortions give rise to serious complications, to permanent sterility in 25 per cent of all cases.

Even in those countries where abortion is legal, the number of secret abortions—and this should really give us food for thought—does not appear to have been substantially reduced.

As a matter of fact, in France, 88 per cent of all abortions are secret, although abortions are authorized by law, and in 80 per cent of such cases, married women are involved.

In various countries, the reasons put forward to justify abortion pertain to physical health: health of the mother, to mental health: depression, psychoneurosis, overwork, etc. These reasons are closely related to socio-economic factors, financial troubles, especially poverty, alcoholism of the husband, housing problems, lack of information on birth control methods, etc.

When we know these things, when we stop to think in a sensible manner, and with common sense—it is not necessary to have as much education as the hon. Minister of Justice—we then begin to wonder about the advisability of the legislation of the omnibus bill, and in particular, of clause 18 designed to legalize abortion, and we wonder even more about the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce which is only another way to flounder in a system that a strong-minded majority government wants to force on the Canadian people.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, everybody knows that this legislation will not really solve the problem of illegal abortions, nor will it help the woman who asks for an abortion.

We are worried more than puzzled when we read in the bill terms as vague as "would be likely", "would," "to endanger her life" or "health", especially when no definition is given of the word "health".

I have here a book entitled "Famille et réalités contemporaines" published by the Foyers Notre-Dame editions and an article written by Mrs. Fernand Ouellette, entitled:

—"Réflexions sur l'avortement".

She says on page 77, and I quote:

Therapeutic abortion in hospital seems to involve less pernicious consequences. On the other hand, there is no evidence that pregnancy aggravates psychic and other disorders, nor that it eliminates them.

Therefore, on what are we legislating, Mr. Speaker? In allowing abortion, will we solve the problems or aggravate them?

That is what I want to know. And I continue the quotation:

It would be preferable, it seems—

This is an extremely interesting and positive factor that I am duty-bound to mention in this house and that hon. members have forgotten since the beginning of this debate.

Mrs. Ouellette says and I quote:

—it would be preferable, it seems, to provide the pregnant woman with psychological, technical, financial assistance—

I hope the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Cantin) understands me.

—to enable her to accept her womanliness as a whole, including her fecundity.

This government would like us to pass retrograde legislation. It wants to legalize the rejection of maternity, to have the public accept the legalized rejection of motherhood. It wants us to admit and to recognize that such is the way of progress and humanism, that in such a way the respect of the human being and of life may find expression.

I say that this is a retrograde legislation, which makes no sense at all and which is unbearable in a society such as ours.

Mrs. Ouellette goes on—and this is very interesting indeed:

—This might be the crux of the matter: the serene acceptation by woman of her real mission, which is maternity taken in its broader, more human sense. Several thorough studies on the nature and behavior of woman have led us to the conclusion that maternity gives woman her greatest sense of achievement and allows her to actualize her fullest virtualities on all levels.

Mr. Speaker, I think that we are dealing here with an extremely important aspect of the question and the discussion of such stupid matters as the omnibus bill, legalizing abortion, caused us to displace the problem. When our basic values: maternity, fecundity, love, relationship between husband and wife within the family, are already deteriorating, this government is making himself an accomplice of an entirely socialist ideology, which does not respect the human being and contributes to degrading women, to degrading men and to eliminate values which are the basis of our society.

The hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) and the hon. member for Chambly (Mr. Pilon) or some others, are unable to see—

Mr. Mongrain: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Fortin: —that this legislation—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Is the hon. member for Trois-Rivières rising on a question of privilege?

Mr. Mongrain: No, Mr. Speaker. On a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Trois-Rivières on a point of order.

Mr. Mongrain: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Our friend from Lotbinière is speaking for the fifth time on general abortion, while we are considering an amendment that proposes to change certain words in the bill, and I quote:

—"endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health".

Therefore, I would like to ask the hon. member for Lotbinière to keep to the rules. We have heard that sermon 50 times.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): I thank the hon. member for Trois-Rivières. I noticed that the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) was more in order than usual. The hon. member for Lotbinière.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for recognizing that I was more in order than usual. But with all due respect, I do not like your way of implying that generally I am out of order.

It seems to me that the hon. member for Trois-Rivières, instead of remaining glued to his seat, should rise from time to time and participate in the debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order please. I would ask the hon. member for Lotbinière to speak only to the amendment now before us.

Mr. Fortin: If I must speak exclusively to the amendment, I would ask the hon. member for Trois-Rivières to play his part as a parliamentarian and to give us his views on the matter. If he has the courage of his convictions, Mr. Speaker, let him rise.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order please. The hon. member for Lotbinière has the floor and I would ask him to stick to the amendment before us.

Mr. Fortin: I know, Mr. Speaker, but, with your permission, first I would like to make the following remark: I wish the hon. member for Trois-Rivières would stop interrupting me with his nonsense because it puts me off the track.

As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, maternity is the road to a woman's greatest development and to her full potential in every way.

However, the amendment now before us is avoiding the issue, going around in circles, a foolish and a mad system into which the Minister of Justice wants to drag us. He sets the problem in an utterly different way and proposes minor values just to upset our basic principles.

Mr. Speaker, our responsibilities are far more serious. This amendment would be valid if there were many problems, many cases originating from the fact that a woman is pregnant or that it is a matter of maternity.

But could the hon. member for Trois-Rivières, or another one, tell us the number of cases, among all abortion applications, in which the life of a person is really endangered and how, for a woman, the fact of having a child can endanger her life?

Would the hon. member, or another one, have the courage to tell us the proportion? He does not ask himself the question because if he did, he would agree with the Ralliement créditiste and say that we are meeting a need that does not exist, a problem that does not exist.

How many cases occur in which a woman is pregnant and dies in childbirth? How many?

I do not know how many hundreds—perhaps even thousands—of cases, because of the progress of medicine have incited doctors Légaré and Jutras from Victoriaville to testify before the committee.

The minister is always saying, when he rises in the house, that he is in favour of adopting the report of the committee. I wonder whether he has read what went on in the committee, what Dr. Jutras and other specialists said.

We are not the ones to say so. Specialists say that when termination of the pregnancy is requested, it is not always a matter of the pregnancy endangering the life or the health of the mother, because with modern progress of medicine and technical developments, those cases are very few, they are practically non-existent.

Dr. Jutras even said in this regard, and I quote:

> The progress of medicine is such that tomorrow we will have the following problem; we will have legalized abortion, we will have allowed abortion. Doctors will procure an abortion under the pretext that the pregnancy probably or certainly endangers the health or the life of the mother. The foetus will be expulsed from the uterus but, Mr. Chairman, thanks to medical progress, the foetus will continue to live.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Is that strong enough, to speak like the Canadian people, to be understood by the hon. member for Trois-Rivières? Is that strong enough?

The foetus will live just the same. Those words are not from me but from specialists. This goes to show you the stupidity of this amendment, and of the section for all that, that wants to make us believe that the fact of being pregnant, for a woman, necessarily means that it impairs her health or her life. It is ridiculous, it cannot be.

Therefore, not only can I not accept the clause of this bill, for it is a lame measure, but what is more, we are floundering in a system which deflects us completely from the subject, namely the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce.

I would like to congratulate him just the same, for having the courage of his own convictions and for having expressed them. That may be a lesson to other members. I hope like him that he will not be taken to task by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), his leader, and should he need help, we can offer him our services. We are free on this side.

Mr. Speaker, when we say, for instance, that we must not wonder from the subject, namely the fundamental values, I do not believe the objections the minister could raise could be valid. In fact, the therapeutic committee of each hospital—and there I should like to set again the problem—will make a decision depending upon the possible danger in which such or such a woman could find herself from being pregnant and not upon the social, family, civic or other circumstances in which that same woman could find herself.

The therapeutic committee takes into account only the fact that the woman requesting an abortion wants it actually. The committee does not have to judge the intentions of the patient or the social or family consequences of such an abortion. We are entitled to consider the following case, to compare and examine the possible consequence of the amendment of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce.

Let us take the case of an unmarried mother. The therapeutic abortion committee will not consider the fact that this pregnant woman is married or not. But the committee will consider the fact that she is pregnant, that the law tells her that, for this reason, her life or her health is or likely to be in danger. Consequently, the committee will take its decision, which will be favourable.

Therefore, there are here two things to consider, not to say, at least, two important things. The first one is the fact that this woman is pregnant. It is quite obvious. Therefore, the committee does not have to judge the circumstances that have made this woman pregnant. One does not have, therefore, to judge the unmarried mother. But one must judge the consequences. As in the case of a mother, does the fact of being pregnant impair her health? No, because when she asks for an abortion, in 99 per cent of the cases, it is a refusal of motherhood, as I said in the beginning.

Secondly, the fact of being pregnant would or would likely endanger her life or her health, and this is what the bill says. If this was to be adopted, the committee would be entitled to decide whether an abortion is advisable in relation to the broadening of the legislation. But here again, there is so much latitude left by the words "would" or "would be likely to" and by the words "life" or "health", which have not yet been defined, that here again, the committee would create a bad impression if it was to refuse a doctor permission to perform an abortion.

This is why I said in the beginning of this very short speech that, from certain points of view, I was in favour of the amendment of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. He said that it was at least necessary, for the committee, to authorize an abortion, that the fact of being pregnant would impair seriously and directly the health of the woman involved, which is a little more precise—but still insufficient—than what the bill itself says.

Indeed, the therapeutic committee under the law will always be able to contend that the abortion will be done by a recognized qualified doctor and that consequently the danger of sequelae from such abortion are limited and practically nil.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

[English]

Mr. Mark MacGuigan (Windsor-Walkerville): I rise to say a few words in support of the amendment put forward by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grace (Mr. Allmand). It is the same as the amendment I proposed on March 27 in the committee when the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs had this important bill before it. At that time I referred to it as the "two adverbs amendment" because by using two adverbs, "seriously" and "directly", a change would be made in the bill without changing its substance which would be important in limiting the terms of the legislation and determining its interpretation before the courts in years to come.

I am sure I need not give this honourable house a lecture on jurisprudence, or talk about extended judicial interpretation which sometimes takes place over the years despite the best intentions of the legislature. As a matter of fact, I do not disapprove of this idea of judicial interpretation. The fact remains, however, that in a bill as important as this, one which in the opinions of many people involves life and death, it is important we should state clearly what we mean, and use words whose meaning is unlikely to be extended by the courts in years to come.

I believe the insertion of those two adverbs in the bill would not limit the effect which the government intends the bill to have. On the other hand, they would constitute a safeguard against the extension of the provisions of this bill in years to come into areas which are not now contemplated. It would not be wise for us to attempt to define the word "health". Health is a medical concept which it ill behooves lawyers to attempt to express in words. Although we cannot express directly any satisfactory definition of health, I believe we can achieve satisfactory results by the use of these adverbs.

[Mr. Fortin.]

• (8:50 p.m.)

I know some hon. members feel that because the bill in its present form was, so to speak, approved by the electors of the country, we are therefore committed to it. May I remind hon. members that during the election campaign two forms of this proposed legislation were before the people of this country. One of those forms was the bill introduced in the previous parliament in December of 1967, the other being the recommendation of the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare which had advocated use of the two adverbs. It is that version I support. I am speaking of the version of the bill recommended in the second and final report of that Standing Committee on Health and Welfare. May I point out that that report was made subsequent to the introduction of the bill in the House of Commons by the then minister of justice. Actually, it was made after opportunity had been given to that committee to consider the import of the words used by the government in the bill. The committee considered that it would be useful to have the two adverbs included. I am of the same mind as the committee was last year, and I urge the house to adopt the motion now before it.

[Translation]

Mr. Dumont: Mr. Speaker, will we be allowed to speak after the Minister of Justice?

[English]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the debate this afternoon and to the very able way the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) explained his reasons for presenting this particular motion. Of course, the motion reflects the wording of the report of the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare of the last parliament of Canada. That committee studied this matter for some time.

The hon. member is supported by certain members of the Creditiste Party who oppose certain parts of the clause absolutely. I assume they are willing to accept any limitation of that clause if their acceptance means they will obtain the support of the house.

I was impressed by the speeches of hon. members on this side of the house, and particularly so by the speeches of the hon. members for Ontario (Mr. Cafik), Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme), Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Reid) and the hon. member who has just spoken, the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. MacGuigan).

Mr. Aiken: There were a couple of other good speeches, too, while the minister was out of the chamber.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I heard speeches from all sides of the house, but I was particularly impressed by the speeches of the hon. members I have mentioned. Not only was the eloquence of the hon. members attested to but, as I said previously, the remarks of the hon. members underline our position that while this is a government bill, neither the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) nor I intend to trespass on the conscience of any member of the party we represent.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Every member of our party is free to look at this issue and free to consider his own private conscience. I think the speeches made from this side of the house bear ample testimony to the correctness of what I have said.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I think the house should analyse with care what the motion proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce really means.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I entirely agree.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): What the motion suggests is that clause 18 should be amended and that the test presently proposed relating to therapeutic abortion should be taken out and the test contained in the report of the last Parliamentary standing Committee substituted. The hon. member suggests that we should adopt the test recommended by the previous standing committee on health and welfare.

Let us analyse the two tests, the test in current Bill C-150 and the same test called for in the predecessor Bill C-195, introduced in the house on December 21, 1967, during the previous parliament. That bill has been under the scrutiny of the people of Canada for over one year and a half.

The test under this bill is this: Can the continuation of the pregnancy endanger the life or health of the mother? The test proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce in his motion is this: Would the continuation of the pregnancy endanger the health of the mother or seriously and directly impair the health of the mother? Despite the philosophical under-pinnings for his argument, the only difference in the two tests relates to the health of the mother.

For both the motion proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce and the bill, the test is whether the pregnancy will endanger the life of the mother. But, whereas the bill says "endanger her ...health", the hon. member's motion says merely "seriously and directly impair her health". In point of fact, we are comparing the significance of "endanger" with the significance of the words "seriously and directly impair" as they relate to the mother's health. That is the substance of the proposed change. So, any discussions relating to the life of the foetus, to morality of abortion itself or to some of the issues which have been rejected in the bill, namely, whether abortion should be permitted for eugenic reasons because of the possible deformation of the child, whether abortion should be permitted for sociological reasons because of possible dislocation of the family, whether abortion should be permitted if the pregnancy results as a consequence of the criminal sexual offences of incest or rape are irrelevant. All these issues are irrelevant. The bill has rejected the eugenic, sociological or criminal offence reasons. The bill limits the possibility of therapeutic abortion to these circumstances: It is to be performed by a medical practitioner who is supported by a therapeutic abortion committee of medical practitioners in a certified or approved hospital, and the abortion is to be performed only where the health or life of the mother is in danger.

The only departure of the amendment from the wording of the bill is this. The hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce proposes to substitute for the word "endanger" as that word relates to the health of the mother, the words "seriously and directly impair". So, with respect, I suggest to the hon. member and to all those who supported him that the philosophical under-pinnings to the motion were probably irrelevant in this debate. What the debate really ought to concentrate on in considering this specific motion to amend is the difference between the effect of the word "endanger" and the effect of the word "impair", when that word is preceded by the words "seriously and directly". It was to that latter question that the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) addressed himself earlier this afternoon.

The word "endanger" as used in the bill imports or connotes the elements of hazard, peril or risk. In the opinion of the law officers of the Crown the meaning of the word "endanger" is every bit as clear and significant as is the meaning of the words "seriously and directly impair". It appears to us that the elements of seriousness, directness and impairment are all present when a person's health is said to be in danger. The word "danger" in itself implies the existence of direct peril or risk.

• (9:00 p.m.)

I submit to the house that everything sought by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce in this amendment is covered by the words in the bill. As the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton put it, the more adverbs we put in to qualify the verb, the more confused becomes the language of the bill. The more confused the language of the bill, the more difficult it is for members of the medical profession to assess the situation within which they are to discharge their responsibility.

It is our submission that it is far more difficult for a doctor or a medical committee to attempt to evaluate the significance of the words "directly and seriously impaired" than it is for them to evaluate in medical terms what the word "endanger" means.

I suggest to the house that the sense of immediacy sought by the hon. member is there, that the sense of peril is there and that the sense of risk is there. If we compare the words "endanger" and "impair" the word "endanger" does far more to further the intent of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce than does the word "impair". It casts into far sharper relief the directness of the risk that is meant within the terms of the bill. To introduce qualifying adverbs makes it far more difficult for members of the medical profession to discharge the responsibility that is cast upon it within the terms of the bill.

I have the greatest respect for the work the members of an earlier parliament did in the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare. I know the number of meetings that were held. I know the number of witnesses that were interviewed and I know the turmoil in terms of private conscience that the members went through. But I also know that the words that finally evolved from that committee's deliberations were a—

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): They were a compromise.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): —were an intensive compromise. The words "seriously and directly impair" did not represent the unanimous view of that committee in the parliament which preceded this parliament.

The votes were not recorded, but from my own private research and conversations with members who sat on that committee I know that the vote was either 10 to 8, or 9 to 6, or 10 to 6, depending on with whom one talked. So that the value of that committee report in terms of its weight and influence upon this parliament should be limited by the controversy and division among the members of that particular committee.

On the other hand, the words that are found in clause 18 of the bill are the original words that were contained in Bill C-195, tabled in this House of Commons on December 21, 1967 by the then Minister of Justice, the present Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Trudeau). They were available to the scrutiny of that former parliament and to the people of Canada. They were debated in public across this country for over a year and a half. Their meaning is quite clear, and it is embedded in the understanding of the people of Canada.

Weighing those words, which contain the very clear verb "endanger", against the words proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, which are qualified by two adverbs and supported by a divided committee of the earlier House of Commons, the conclusion of the government can only favour the present wording of the bill, especially in view of the fact that the former bill and this bill have survived public scrutiny. In this regard, representations have been made to me as Minister of Justice from every quarter of the country. My door has been open to these representations and so has my telephone. Petitions on both sides of this delicate issue have been received. The words in the bill to which I refer are clear to the people of Canada and they deserve the support of this house.

In addition, I believe that what the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce seeks to achieve in terms of imprinting upon the minds of the people of the country—upon the women of the country, if you will—and upon the medical profession in the country, that there ought to be a direct or serious risk or peril to the life or health of the mother, is adequately and more precisely met by the word "endanger" than it is by the word "impair", qualified as it is in the amendment by the adverbs "seriously" and "directly".

An amendment in the same terms as the one moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce was proposed in the standing committee on justice and legal affairs of this parliament on March 27 last. It was proposed by my good friend the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. MacGuigan). The standing committee considered that amendment and rejected it. So that in supporting the bill as it stands I am supporting the committee report as it stands, that standing committee of this House of Commons having rejected an identical amendment.

As minister responsible for this bill I want to say that there were parts of the bill that did not survive that committee. I have accepted those parts of the committee report that went against the original bill.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): It is because I believe that members of parliament on both sides of the house should have their day, that they should have an opportunity to scrutinize the legislation, to cross-examine the minister and his officials, to question the witnesses and to make it a collective decision in their own good judgment, that I submit that the committee decision of this parliament, as opposed to the decision of the committee of an earlier parliament which was hopelessly divided on the issue, ought to govern the will and wishes of this House of Commons.

Mr. Aiken: Would the minister permit a question?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): I will in a minute. It is for that reason, despite the obvious sincerity and the wealth of argument introduced by hon. members who support this amendment, that I urge them to support the justice committee report and to support the bill as it stands. I suggest to the members who are supporting this amendment that the words in the bill itself more adequately and conclusively convey the meaning that they themselves wish to convey than do the words that they are offering to the house.

Mr. Aiken: Would the minister now permit the question that I was going to ask him. Does he feel as strongly about the report of the committee on transport as he does about this one?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am glad I did not take that question in the course of my speech.

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to inform the house that we are not the ones who delayed the debates of the house since, as soon as this bill was introduced, we asked that the clauses on abortion and homosexuality be withdrawn. Everything else would have been passed in three days. As the government refused to listen to the voice of truth, we have to acquaint the people with that truth.

That is why I begin my remarks by answering to the minister who just made remarks on the difference between the clause in this bill and the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) which, in my opinion, is but a drop in the ocean.

He would have the whole Canadian people believe that by changing the word and adding "seriously her health", that could bring about some changes. We still say that we object to abortion as it is advocated by the bill, as well as to the clauses concerning homosexuality. Let these two clauses be deleted from the bill, and then you can go on discussing wheat, housing, etc.

Therefore, with regard to the bill before us, we must define what is meant by the word "health". I think that this bill was meant to clarify the Criminal Code. Would this purpose be achieved by a legislation allowing abortion on "health" grounds? I think that is the main question we should ask ourselves.

A study of the 880 pages of the minutes of proceedings and evidence of the standing committee on health, welfare and social affairs, enables us to make various interpretations of the word "health"; interpretations given by witnesses who were defending one position as well as the other.

You will not mind, Mr. Speaker, if I do not quote all of them, because I know I have only 20 minutes, but I shall take the liberty, at least, to point out a few statements made by authorities on the matter.

That is why I am wondering why the minister and the members who pretend to be justified in voting in favour of a bill that would promote abortion, have not travelled across Canada and repudiated the amendments we are moving. Why are there so many protests to the effect that these amendments should be deleted from the omnibus bill? Once and for all, why not establish a royal commission of inquiry so that the truth may be made known to the public.

I have in hand a statement printed on page 601 of the minutes of proceedings and evidence of the standing committee on health and welfare. Dr. Patricia Whyte stated, and I quote:

Yes, I believe it should include psychiatric conditions.

Speaking of health matters—

—I realize this is a very difficult area to define and those who have had to work with this definition have had a problem.

• (9:10 p.m.)

In some people's minds it can even include social health. It can be a complete disruption, for instance, of their way of life.

At page 695, Dr. Whyte also states:

That is a very hard word to define, I agree; you can define it as meaning happiness if you like.

Before such statements, where can we find the word health and how can that word provide information in a bill which in our opinion, Mr. Speaker, should not even be agreed to?

Then, at page 716, we have evidence from Dr. Mongeau and I quote:

Because when you qualify it by saying: "seriously", you are at the mercy of the definition given to "serious".

That is why here, yesterday, I stated that I am not an expert. I am not a doctor, nor a lawyer; however, I am a legislator, and our purpose in parliament is to make legislation clearer, so that the public is not mystified that the great Christian world that we have always defended is not destroyed but, on the contrary, strengthened and at last gets the last word, Canadians having joined forces towards that goal.

And Dr. Mongeau adds:

This is where I say there is a danger of interpretation. There will always be a psychiatrist who can say that from a psychological point of view the health of the mother will be affected.

Then we can continue with the evidence of Dr. Beirne. He said:

To define help, if you will allow me that expression, we refer to two definitions: the conservative one and the liberal one. The conservative or negative one is the absence of illness; the positive or liberal one includes well-being, absence of tension and goes as far as nutrition, housing, education and so forth. There lies the danger. What interpretation shall we give?

[Mr. Dumont.]

We could go on to quote a statement from the representatives of the Hôtel-Dieu du Sacré-Cœur de Jésus of Dolbeau:

—We believe that the mother's health is a flexible criterion that might lend itself to a rather broad interpretation of the law especially when psychiatric reasons are taken into account—

Dr. Quigley replied and I quote:

—We maintain that your committee and the government have proposed an amendment to the act so as to include health grounds without being well-informed on this vital question and without having defined the word "health".

For that reason, we cannot accept the amendment because we would then have an abortion bill which the Canadian people do not want.

I was listening to the minister telling us that neither him nor the Prime Minister were gagging anybody. I must say that many Liberal members tell us in the lobbies: You must go on with the battle because we are prevented from speaking the truth.

And that truth is still being expressed on page 487. The public must be told, must be informed, and then the people will rise in protest and we shall know exactly where the truth lies. On page 487, it is stated and I quote:

I am not being entirely facetious when I state that somebody could say: "I am—

—"I am so upset; I am so nervous about this pregnancy that you have to abort me." Now her health at this particular moment is interfered with. She is a nervous, upset, anxious, possibly depressed woman. Is this going to be sufficient justification for terminating that pregnancy?—

The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis) said and I quote:

—I gather that you are not happy about the inclusion of the words "and health", the health of the pregnant woman, as proposed in the Criminal Code.

Dr. Quigley replied and I quote:

I am very unhappy because I do not know what is meant;—

Now if such authorities ignore what it means, how can we believe that we can impose our views to medical authorities as competent as Drs. Jutras and Légaré who testified before the committee and put forward such sound arguments.

On page 540, Dr. Walters stated and I quote:

—How you are going to change this law is something that disturbs many of us.

I think the omnibus Bill, which has already been submitted, extends it into a field which is going to be very difficult to interpret, and I would submit that we are getting out of a frying pan into a fire. "Health" as defined by the World Health Organization or by a final year medical student on an examination paper, entails a tremendous area—economic, social and emotional... Again, it is going to come down to interpretation of what you mean, what we in London mean, or what somebody in Ottawa means by "health"... This is going to be the problem in including "health" as well as "life".

In this definition, have we not the true way of thinking of an expert who wants the bill on abortion and homosexuality to be withdrawn, so that a Royal Commission of Inquiry can define, first of all, what is "health"?

Dr. Walters added further:

—There is difference of opinion in the medical profession. When you have a group discussing this in a specialty, or a multi-specialty—the general practitioner group—you have differences of opinion on a purely medical basis. If it could be established only on the life of the mother being endangered there would be much firmer solidarity. As soon as you get into health you are into a very grey area again.

And in order to make myself quite clear, since in this house, on the government side, some hon. members are physicians I shall quote a statement published in the March 20 1963 issue of Le Soleil and made by the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) before the Richelieu Club—and I am thinking of the government members who are muzzled and cannot cast a free vote in the house, because it was explained by the hon. member for Hull—and I quote:

If in the past the province of Quebec has protested against the federal regime, it was because the Quebec members in Ottawa have not sufficiently emphasized the Quebecers' stand—

If the hon. member for Hull, who doubles as a doctor, is able to make such a statement and can say that the "deputation" who, most of the time, was a liberal "deputation", did not achieve its purpose, we should not be surprised that even today not one member from the province of Quebec dares to express the slightest opinion.

That is why I feel some sympathy for the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce who spoke a very good English but delivered a very good speech a short while ago because he has at least the courage of its convictions and he told the house what he had in mind. The same cannot be said of the one we refer to as the whip of the Liberal party. The members of the house have experienced—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order.

Mr. Dumont: —Caouette's whip.

• (9:20 p.m.)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I believe the hon. member for Frontenac is wandering away from the amendment now under study and I would ask him to come back to it and to stay with it as he did at the start.

Mr. Dumont: Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to say that the Liberal party whip, who has felt Caouette's whip, is unable to obtain from all government members a precise definition of the word "health". I have received a six-page letter from one of his electors in which he expressed his opposition to the omnibus bill and stated that there were strong supporters of proposals that would at least have watered down the omnibus bill which, in my opinion, should not be accepted. I shall read a few lines from it:

The party whip received my communication on April 2, during the long session and the holidays and as he is a cipher in Ottawa, I wonder if he suffers from locked jaws—at first I had read blocked—whether he is deaf and dumb or whether he is stuck to his seat.

So, in the six pages, this elector defines accurately a government member who prevents the house and the whole country from knowing what is meant by the word "health". We know that the hon. member for Chambly is very efficient, that he fully understands the problem. So, we simply ask him to have the courage to give an answer to his electors and to speak up in the house and define, as we are doing, the word "health".

At page 548 of the standing committee on this bill, we find this and I quote:

I know what life is, but I am not sure what health is..."health" is a very ambiguous term, I think it is fine for the legislature to use it, but somebody else is going to have to interpret it. This is the problem with many laws. I think "life" is clearly defined. We all know what we are talking about and we can, as a profession, say that this woman's life is going to be lost.

We deal with housing, with food, with education, we deal with so many things we know very little about. We know it affects the life of the mother, but it is a very difficult problem to decide that you are going to snuff out one life for a nebulous thing called "health", which we all would like to have so that we do not lose our life.

And on page 553, we find this:

I think the doctor could give medical evidence concerning the life of the patient under such and such circumstances, but I would submit it is leaving too much to the medical profession to interpret the word "health".

Considering all those objections, all those things that the Canadian people need to know, again I ask this house, by means of a free vote that should take place tomorrow, to refer all those amendments, to refer this bill on abortion and on homosexuality—as at the present time only 1 per cent of the people are in favour of the amendment—to a royal commission of inquiry, so that the Canadian people may know the truth.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

MOTION TO EXTEND HOURS OF SITTING

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in order to give hon. members a full opportunity to express their views on this matter, I should like to recommend to the house that it might be a useful idea to extend the sitting another couple of hours. Therefore, pursuant to section (5) (a) of Standing Order 6 I move:

That this sitting be continued until midnight this day for the purpose of considering all aspects of the "Report Stage" of Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, including any or all proposed amendments and the motion to concur in the said bill, as amended.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: It is the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those who object please rise.

And more than ten members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: As more than ten members have risen to oppose the motion, it may not be put before the house.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 33 (Mr. Laprise).

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I should like to speak to the amendment of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce because I do not agree fully with it.

For once I agree, partly, with the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner). But as one of my colleagues has an amendment with which I am in total agreement, and which will be discussed later on, probably tomorrow, I cannot accept the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, because I feel it does not go far enough.

It would still leave room for doubt in the bill, which might lead to far more complications. Therefore, if we are to amend clause 18, I feel it should be amended properly to avoir any ambiguity.

Having said this, Mr. Speaker, I want to mention again that although if I speak at this stage it is not to say that I am for or against the bill. In principle I am against the liberalization of the legislation on abortion and I shall have the opportunity during the debate on third reading to object once more to this bill.

At this time, I do not want to stretch the debate too much; I think that it might be possible to have done with the amendment of the member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce tonight.

But before I resume my seat, I want to emphasize the objection I have against the term it is proposed to add to Bill C-150 in section 18, and which would allow abortion not only when the life of the mother would be endangered but also when her health would be likely to be endangered they are not quite sure about it, but they are ready to accept it, even in doubt.

As the minister said in his statement, he is ready to accept doubts in regard of the health of the woman. So the minister, as a lawyer, might not have as much sensitivity and knowledge as the doctors or specialists in this field.

And, tonight, I want to emphasize the evidence given by Dr. Marcel Boisvert, a Montreal psychiatrist who spoke readily and very clearly, on February 6, 1968, before a seminar organized and prepared by the Foyers Notre-Dame which had then invited people such as members of the bar, of the medical profession, of the clergy and of family organizations.

So here is what Dr. Marcel Boisvert had to say on the subject, and I quote:

As a psychiatrist, I believe that this bill on abortion would not be likely to promote health but, on the contrary, it might have a detrimental effect on the health of both individuals and society.

Clause 18 of Bill C-150 is intended to make the legislation stipulate that physicians will be able, if they think that the woman's life may be endangered, to perform an abortion.

According to the wording of the clause proposed by the minister, it is intimated that a certain proportion of medical cases could give the right to procure miscarriages.

And now psychiatrists, gynaecologists, highly qualified physicians, are saying the contrary, and the statement by Dr. Boisvert that I have just stated is further evidence of it. I go on:

He carried on, appealing to psychological arguments: "Biology, as it progresses, is more and more positive as far as the human character of a fecundated ovum, as early as its origin, is concerned. Thus, it is clearer and clearer that to procure a miscarriage means for everybody: to destroy a human being.

And this is the beginning of the psychological problem. To improve the physical or mental health of the mother can we destroy this human ovum? I answer that from the psychological point of view, every abortion is unhealthy in itself;

It is a psychiatrist who is speaking.

—to want and to perform an abortion is a neurotic symptom and cannot be considered as therapeutics."

To back his argument, the psychiatrist asserts that every action is accompanied with and followed by psychological reactions: it is the principle of the equation action-reaction with a proportional value. "Thus, he says, the value of abortion includes the suppression of the existence of a human being—a very important value—which must bring about a reaction of an equivalent value. The fact of destroying a human life brings about a reaction which originates from the instinctive depths of every individual. So, to facilitate abortion, is to facilitate repression, deviation of feelings towards a pathological evolution."

According to Dr. Boisvert, by permitting an abortion for doubtful health reasons much more evil will be created than cured. I continue:

After having also put forward psycho-sociological, professional and practical arguments, Dr. Boisvert concluded: "During my 18 years of medical and psychiatric practice, I have never heard anybody speak highly of abortion as a therapy. Neither our fellow-members nor our colleagues, nor even my patients have ever reported any kind of improvement as a result of abortion. But I could observe regularly deep and serious complications of all kinds resulting from abortion.

That is the testimony of a very famous psychiatrist who is against adding in the legislation on abortion, that abortion may be allowed for health reasons, especially if they are doubtful reasons, as stipulated in clause 18 of bill C-150.

Mr. Speaker, I think we are right in opposing the principle of this bill.

As for the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, I had the pleasure, a few minutes ago, to notice that other members had finally decided to express their views, but some are upbraided by the Minister of Justice who defends his argument and his bill.

When he said in his statement that the members of his party are free to study the bill, we never doubted it, but he did not say that they were free to vote according to their convictions.

He said the opposite when he presented the bill on second reading. I said so at the beginning of the debate and, if need be, we will mention it again on third reading. The indications then given by the minister left no room for doubt.

Mr. Speaker, I for one am not completely satisfied with the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce. I would prefer that the word "health" be completely deleted from clause 18.

For that reason, when another amendment on the subject will be moved, and at the first opportunity, I will speak again.

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I know that some people are quite anxious and would like us to proceed with the vote on these amendments. Let them not worry, we will come to that, and even if the government does not want to change its mind, we must say everything we have to say on each amendment.

I do not blame the minister for being impatient, because we are also.

Mr. Speaker, we want to take advantage of the procedure which allows us, not to filibuster but to put on record our objections, because history will prove that this debate was ridiculous and should never have taken place here.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: I draw to the attention of the hon. member for Shefford that what we are discussing now is not a debate, but an amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Mr. Rondeau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I said that we were getting hot under the collar because it seems the hon. minister and his government do not want to admit that anyone of our amendments is logical. We want the arguments we have been putting forward to remain in the records of this Parliament so that we shall be able to say that we have foreseen the odious effects of this bill, and that we, at least, have not let the bill pass without saying a word in protest.

Mr. Speaker, some members do not seem to be able to determine when life begins. What is a human being?

I would like to base my remarks on a book which was published by the federal government and made available to Canadian mothers—I did not say "mayors" but "mothers". The title is "The Canadian mother and her child". At page 24, we read, and I quote:

When one of the spermatozoa and the ovum meet and unite, a new life begins.

On the government side of the house, they tell us that life begins when the child is born or when it is 4 months old. However, doctors have proved during the hearings of the committee that there is no doubt—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I wish to remind again the hon. member that he must address himself to the amendment before us. The hon. member says that it is important to air his views and those of his colleagues on the subject. Under the present circumstances, we are only studying an amendment proposed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce.

It seems to me the argument submitted by the hon. member for Shefford goes somewhat beyond the narrow limits of the discussion and therefore I am asking him after he has completed his introductory remarks, to address himself to the question before us.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I thank you once again for your usual kindness, and because of it, I shall try to restrict myself to the amendment before us, dealing with the health of the mother when it is endangered.

Well, Mr. Speaker, this afternoon, the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Cafik) wondered when life began.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

In support of my argument, I referred to the above-mentioned to prove that today, there is no doubt about it, even in the house, or in the books that the federal government makes available our Canadian women.

It is strange to find that on the opposite side they do not seem to want to put forward the arguments of our scientists or medical associations who, regarding the proposed amendments have given us very good suggestions.

As far as I am concerned, I shall not be able to vote for the amendment moved this afternoon by the hon. member for Ontario, because that would mean we are in favour of abortion.

Since the beginning of the fight we are putting up in the house, we cannot accept the arguments concerning the threat to the life of the mother, because Quebec or Canadian doctors are not quite sure that if the abortion is not carried out, the life of the mother will be endangered.

Now, we cannot accept the argument of life against health, that is to say that to protect the mother's health, we have to kill the foetus. Such arguments do not weigh enough in the balance and are not sufficient to convince us of the worth of that amendment.

That is the reason why I shall abstain from voting for or against that amendment, because from now on we will recognize that abortion should be procured in Canada, in some cases, to protect the life or health of the mother.

Mr. Speaker, in this house, some hon. members have quoted various authorities, but the major part of their evidence has been put aside by the Association of the medical practitioners of the Hôpital Laval in Quebec, whose representative told us the following, and I quote:

Any abortion is homicidal, for the foetus is a human being.

Here, in the amending bill, that fact does not seem to be acknowledged. And I continue the quotation:

Some allege that the foetus is not a human being as long as it is not viable. Now, the notion of viability of the foetus outside the mother's womb is dependent upon medical knowledge. At the present time, we consider that the foetus is viable outside the mother's womb, in practice, only from the twenty-eighth week of gestation (that is to say when its weight reaches 1000 grams); however, that period might be reduced through acquisition of new knowledge and the elaboration of proper techniques. The viability outside the mother's womb actually depends on the maturity of the foetus. However, can we define a being as human according to a more or less obvious degree of maturity especially when that maturity requires years for achievement?

On the other hand, the fact that the foetus is totally dependent upon its mother—

And here we get closer to the opinion expressed by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce, when he spoke of the mother's life which could be endangered. I go on:

On the other hand, does the fact that the foetus is totally dependent upon its mother give her or those who look after her health the right of life or death over it? The dependency of a living being on its surroundings is a general biological phenomenon. The child developed to term is as dependent as the foetus, but in a different way.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when the child is a foetus, it needs its mother to live.

But furthermore, when the child has become, according to the Criminal Code, a human being, that is after its exit from the uterus, it is still dependent upon its mother's care. Outside the uterus or inside, the foetus depends upon its mother's care, and that is why we cannot impair its life either outside or inside of it.

I go on.

In fact, it is only a difference of surroundings and birth is but the passage from one to the other, without any appreciable modification in the degree of dependency. Would it be the respiratory assistance and the special type of nutrition needed which would render the foetus unfit to become a human being?

The human being's dependency decreases in time—

We know that a six-month old infant is more independant than one of three months. We know that a three-month old infant is more independent than one of three months. And, we also know that a foetus needs its mother to survive. I shall go on:

The dependence of the human being diminishes with time and is in inverse ratio to the degree of maturity.

We cannot accept, considering all the medical and scientific information we have been given, the killing of the foetus, when the latter would "endanger the life of the mother or seriously and directly impair her health".

As my hon. colleagues and as some government members have admitted this afternoon, we cannot accept such health grounds to justify abortion.

On the other hand, this amendment states that abortion is acceptable if the pregnancy endangers the life of the mother and, for that reason, I could not vote either in favour or against it. The reason is that subsequent amendments will enable us to prove once again that we are against abortion not only on moral grounds but also on scientific grounds.

I proceed with the quotation:

Legally, the foetus is considered as a human being as its rights to inherit are recognized.

As the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce said this afternoon.

And I go on:

An abortion for the purpose of improving the health or the welfare of the mother or of preventing the birth of a deformed infant is euthanasia. If it is permitted to kill a deformed infant while it is in the mother's womb, why should it not be permitted to do so after its birth?

Among the various forms of murder, abortion appears to be the one against which the State should intervene most strongly. The role of the State is to protect the rights of every citizen, all the more so when the aggrieved citizen is less able to defend himself and to see that his rights are respected. If the law is written for the protection of the weak, the child still in the mother's womb is entitled to the protection of the State, which should be in proportion to its weakness.

Mr. Speaker, the minister is wondering who is the author of those words. It is the medical board of Laval Hospital, which the minister does not want to hear, nor to listen to, giving scientific arguments.

An hon. Member: An established hospital?

Mr. Rondeau: Yes, an established hospital which can certainly treat the sick. There would be a large number of patients to be found across from me.

I continue:

• (9:50 p.m.)

If abortion is performed when the life of the mother is endangered by pregnancy, it can then be considered not as euthanasia but as a case of self-defence. To warrant self-defence, however, the act of defence and the act of aggression, should be comparable and the defensive act must be the only possible method of protecting oneself. But cases when, in order to save the mother's life, it is obviously necessary to kill the foetus—

And here we think of the amendment under consideration.

—are extremely rare according to experts.

But not according to the minister. And not according to Liberal experts, but to medical experts.

Dr. René Simard, Director of the Obstetrical Department at Laval University, stated he has never met any such cases. On the other hand, Roy J. Hefferman, a famous American obstetrician, says that to perform a therapeutic abortion is to disregard the new methods of treating troubles inherent to pregnancy or to begrudge the patient the time such methods require.

These amendments are setting back the medical clock; they imply that today's medicine is not advanced enough to save the foetus while protecting the life or health of the mother.

The Minister of Justice is showing his contempt for physicians by defending his bill so stubbornly and by turning down the advice of experts. This is to laugh at the physicians who during the past 25 years have made fantastic progress and have cured illnesses which 50 years ago were incurable and to suggest that since medicine is now advancing, we want to hold it back.

The government members are unable to accept the scientific arguments which are put to us and which we receive in the mail every day. Moreover, the inefficiency of the therapeutic abortion is proven by an American study which indicates that on 1,600,000 deliveries, the death rate is 0.98 per cent on 1,000 in the hospitals where abortions are performed and .087 on 1,000 in the hospitals where they are prohibited.

Considering the scarcity of the cases where the therapeutic abortion is necessary to save the life of the mother, we can ask ourselves if legislation to allow it is justified. Thus, if the legislator wants, through legislation, rule on those extremely uncommon cases, he should include in that legislation some very strict guide lines similar to those advocated by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists.

Mr. Speaker, we have moved in the house some amendments similar to the provisions included in the abortion legislation by the American College of Obstetricians. No amendment accepted in the United States and included in the American legislation has been accepted by the minister.

Why? They are experienced and have been performing the so-called therapeutic abortion for years and today in the light of experience, they say to us, with figures to support their claim, that this legislation is inoperative, that it was not supposed to save the life of the mother or to take care of her health, but rather to protect the thousands of physicians who want to perform abortions openly and do not want to be affected by the legislation.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

It is mainly for that purpose that the Minister of Justice fights for his bill with such stubbornness, because some physicians will benefit from this legislation. They will no longer be indictable.

But no attention is paid to medical experts, hospitals, health officials in Canada. The intent is to protect those business or medical swindlers.

Mr. Speaker, I have here the newsletter of the Catholic Nurses of Canada, for March-April, and at page 56, it says:

Cases when pregnancy—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Minister of Justice on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Perhaps instead of reading this document, the hon. member could be encouraged to table it to save the time of the house.

[Translation]

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I shall table those papers, and I accept the minister's suggestion with pleasure. But, at the same time, I would ask him to table in the house, all the letters of protest that he has received from physicians. If that is agreeable to him, I am willing to produce those papers and letters of protest. Is he prepared to do so? I am waiting for his answer.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to call it ten o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member has called it ten o'clock. I would like to point out to him that there are only a few seconds left before his times expires. The house might perhaps allow the hon. member to use up the thirty seconds he has left to finish his speech.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Rondeau: I am extremely touched by the kindness of the minister.

On page 56, one reads, and I quote:

There are so few, if any, cases where the pregnancy really endangers the life of the mother, that legalizing abortion in those cases would not constitute, quantitatively, a serious menace to the common good.

Mr. Speaker, I have here many more documents. I shall use them another time.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

SUGGESTED VOTING PROCEDURE FOR CRIMINAL CODE BILL

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact there is already one deferred vote and there may well be at least one more, it might be to the benefit of hon. members if Your Honour, acting on the discretion which is granted to you under the appropriate Standing Order, asks the house to agree to an order that all deferred votes up to the time of orders of the day on Thursday might be taken at that time. It seems that Thursday is a propitious time for such a vote since a larger number of members will then be present for the ritual of the vote. The added advantage will, of course, also be that hon. members will know when the vote will be taken.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): We would be agreeable to that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: It is so ordered.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Let us hope there will be some to take.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS—LUMBER—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF PRICE INCREASE

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, about two weeks ago I asked a question about housing. The then minister of transport, who was in charge of housing and was on the roster, was out of the house. On the advice of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), I directed my question to the Minister Without Portfolio from Manitoba who did not attempt to answer me. Then you, Mr. Speaker, advised me I could assume that my question had been noted.

• (10:00 p.m.)

After notice of this length, I still want a reply. The question was one which, in my opinion, simply required "yes" or "no" for an answer. It was this:

> In view of the sharp rise in the first quarter of this year in the profits of Canadian lumber producers in British Columbia, coupled with a sharp increase over the past year in the price of lumber and other building supplies, will the minister urge upon the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs the need for action to roll back the price of such building materials needed to meet the housing shortage?

Since I did not get an answer, I followed up with a supplementary question:

> Will he himself undertake to discuss with these British Columbia lumber firms the need for restraint in the matter of the prices of their product, to keep down inflation?

Again, I got no answer. I suppose this was because—though I had not heard so at that time—there is no housing crisis. But I still want an answer and I would appreciate one, now.

My question arose from the following facts. On April 17, shares of MacMillan-Bloedel Limited of Vancouver, Canada's largest lumber producer, rose 50 cents to a four-year peak of $36.50 on the Toronto Stock Exchange reflecting expectations that the company would report a sharp rise in first quarter profits. The stock has gained 30 per cent this year, from a low of $28 in January. Two other Vancouver based forest producers had already reported big gains in first quarter profits. One was Crown Zellerbach (Canada) Limited with a rise from $1.9 million a year ago to $3.1 million, a 63 per cent gain. The other was British Columbia Forest Products Limited, which reported a rise from $1,545,000 a year ago to $2,609,000, a gain of about 70 per cent.

Meanwhile lumber and plywood prices had risen to record highs by the beginning of 1969. One large Vancouver producer, Weldwood of Canada Limited, reported that average lumber sales in the first quarter of this year were at prices $25 per thousand board feet higher than a year earlier. After a period during which prices dropped somewhat they are now on the way up once more.

On April 30, David Satok, President of the Toronto Home Builders Association, declared that the January and February price increases added about $500 to the cost of a small house. No wonder the rate of housing starts dropped from 307,200 in February to 266,100 in March. In the face of such a situation, it seemed to me logical to ask that the minister in charge of housing should urge on the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) the need for a roll back in the price of materials used for housing. Will he do so now? I address these representations, of course, to the new minister in charge of housing. Will he discuss the need for restraint with these British Columbia firms which have made such profits?

The government appears to be on the edge of setting up a prices and incomes commission whose main function, in the words of the white paper called "Policies for Price Stability" will be to rally a sense of public responsibility leading to voluntary restraint. Its first job might be to urge price restraint on the lumber kings of the British Columbia forest empire. Will the Minister without Portfolio, the minister now in charge of housing (Mr. Andras) urge this labour of Hercules on the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): In reply I should like to say that I share the hon. lady's concern about the high cost of building materials such as lumber. We are also concerned about the high cost of other things such as money, land, services and labour. Hon. members know that the government is well aware of recent developments in the lumber market and that appropriate action has been taken by federal cabinet ministers to ameliorate the situation. The government's position was clearly outlined a month ago in this chamber by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin). After having consulted his colleagues in cabinet he announced the steps that were being taken, namely, that the former minister of transport had made representations to the railways urging that enough box cars be made available for the movement of wood products. He announced also that the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry (Mr. Davis) had launched discussions with the provincial governments concerned on the matter of additional supplies of timber to be made available to industry until such time as a more stable supply-demand balance is achieved. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) has assured us that the officials of the Combines Investigation Branch are vigilantly watching any threat of anti-competitive developments in the present special market circumstances.

The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce himself made an appeal to the lumber industry to safeguard the requirements of traditional customers, both domestic and foreign, and to resist any tendency to neglect Canadian demands in favour of speculative, short term exports.

[Mrs. MacInnis.]

PUBLIC SERVICE—UNDUE EXTENSION OF BILINGUAL REQUIREMENTS

Mr. A. D. Alkenbrack (Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, I bring forward this matter because of the ludicrous, self-admitted political posture of this government on questions of bilingualism in the public service. My remarks pertain to the question I asked of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) on April 24 which arose from some statements made extramurally by his parliamentary secretary at the time he was speaking at the Grenville-Carleton Liberal Associations annual meeting on the Saturday previous.

With regard to his remarks, may I now quote from the Ottawa Citizen on Monday, April 21. They carry a report of the remarks of the hon. member for York Centre (Mr. Walker). The article is headlined, "Bilingualism situation critical" The main text of the article is as follows:

> Departmental directives have pushed Civil Service bilingual requirements beyond the intent of Parliament's legislation, says James Walker, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau.
>
> "As a result, we are getting legislation by regulation and something must be done about it."
>
> Elected representatives should have veto power over these regulations which are issued by senior public servants to interpret the law, Mr. Walker said.—
>
> The intent of the legislation, he indicated, was set out in a speech by former Prime Minister Lester Pearson which, among other things, assured the job opportunities of unilingual public servants would not be adversely affected.
> "I believe it is time we took a look at the situation again. I think the regulations have had a stronger effect on people than the legislation intended.
> "Some people may believe their judgment is better than that of the politicians, but I believe in the democratic system and that means rule by the elected representatives, be they good or bad."
>
> Leslie Barnes, executive director of the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, warned that the bilingual question ranked with superannuation as the most critical in government-employee relations.
> The difficulty arose out of administrative application of the policy, he said.

The ruling in favour of bilingualism for all positions in the national capital area reduced job advancement opportunities for many from outside areas, he said.

The government, if it had the will, could ensure that its intent was carried through in application, he said.

"The cabinet cannot duck responsibility for the situation".

I agree with the parliamentary secretary. Something is wrong and unfair in our bilingual and bicultural regulations as they apply to the salaries and job opportunities of our public servants. That is why I asked the following question on April 24, as reported at page 7900 of Hansard:

Was the parliamentary secretary to the Prime Minister stating the view of the government when he said that departmental directives have pushed civil servant bilingual requirements beyond the intent of the legislation by parliament?

I also had a supplementary ready to ask. I did not ask it on April 24, but it would have been as follows: "Arising from the statement made by the parliamentary secretary that elected representatives should have veto power over regulations which interpret the law issued by senior public servants, will the Prime Minister indicate whether the government has any specific measure in mind to provide for the exercise of such veto power?"

What a strange anomaly now exists as a result of Mr. Pearson's legislation applying to bonuses for bilingual and bicultural public servants. Since the Prime Minister is the sponsor of the next big jump this country may take into more legislation respecting the status of the official languages of Canada—I refer to Bill C-120—why do not the opinions and remarks voiced by the parliamentary secretary come from the Prime Minister himself? This would be far better, since it is now agreed and stated by his able parliamentary secretary that mistakes have been made. This legislation does not make for a just society; it does not even amount to participatory democracy, both so-called unique and vaunted ideals of the Prime Minister. Why cannot this country now have some leadership from the Prime Minister?

We need a reconsideration of the legislation put forward by the previous government. We need a reconsideration of the 7 per cent bonus to bilingual public servants because of its trouble making and divisive results in our public service. No one can deny this, Mr. Speaker; ask any member of this house, any member of the Senate, any member of the public service.

I have spoken out against this measure several times. In this connection I cite Hansard for November 18, 1966, November 22, 1966, November 23, 1966 and particularly November 24, 1966, where will be found opinions regarding public service regulations respecting bonuses for bilingual employees. This government has had ample warning about this, warnings that they would not heed. Now, the parliamentary secretary makes a strong protest and agrees with me as well as with all others who have argued against this measure. The parliamentary secretary recommends the typical Liberal dictatorial method of dealing with it, saying that elected representatives should have veto power over the very regulations that a Liberal government has created. Mr. Speaker, none other than parliament should straighten out this mess and amend this error.

While I am on my feet I want to warn the Prime Minister that he be very careful in his advancement of Bill C-120, especially regarding the provision pertaining to linguistic minorities of 10 per cent having lingual parity with the remaining 90 per cent of a district. What about the other ethnic minorities in this country which I mentioned in my remarks in 1966?

Yes, we are thankful for men who will fearlessly state their opinions, as the parliamentary secretary has done in this regard. I want the Prime Minister to know that the people of Canada will not swallow his hodgepodge of bilingual legislation in Bill C-120 with regard to the public service, such as the people of Canada were forced to swallow by the former Prime Minister and which they have now regurgitated.

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am very flattered that the hon. member agrees with what he thinks I said. In all friendliness, I must tell him that I do not agree with many of the things he has just said. Frankly, I prefer to quote myself and to make comments, rather than refer to the Ottawa Citizen, however good that paper may be.

I am very pleased to have this opportunity to reply to the hon. member. I simply say that because of my deep interest in parliament and in the vital role of the elected member in our system of parliamentary democracy, I recently expressed the view that the time might well be at hand when parliament itself should periodically or regularly review various departmental regulations and directives to see if there were any cases where such regulations or directives went beyond the scope and intent of the actual legislation upon which they were based.

It is quite conceivable to me that prior approval by a group or committee of knowledgeable members of parliament of the effect of these regulations might be desirable. As a former municipal councillor, I can attest to the fact that this problem occurs at that level of government. I believe the provincial area would not be immune to this problem either. The view I expressed did not deal with any one particular government department or piece of legislation, but if there were cases that anyone wished to bring to my attention, including regulations or directives relative to the administration of government policy on bilingualism in the public service, I said I would be interested in hearing about them.

In answer to the first part of the hon. member's question on page 7900 of Hansard, may I just say that I doubt that the Prime Minister has attached any conditions to my particular job as his Parliamentary Secretary that would make it mandatory for him to agree with everything I think or say.

My concern in respect of government policy regarding bilingualism in the public service is that the laudatory aim of the government in making federal services available in the two official languages to all Canadians be administered in such a way and these services provided in such a manner that there is no bar or hindrance to any public servant who wishes to perform such services.

FINANCE—NORTHERN ONTARIO—ALLEGED INVESTMENT DISCRIMINATION

Mr. Ralph Stewart (Cochrane): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) and his Parliamentary Secretary have to be away, but I believe someone else is here in the minister's stead and I am sure the Minister will take cognizance of my remarks when he returns.

Last Wednesday, as recorded at page 8173 of Hansard, I asked this question of the Minister of Finance.

Since the minister has announced that there will be new regulations governing the trust companies can he assure the house that there will no longer be a double standard on the part of lending institutions, which discriminates against capital investment in Northern Ontario?

[Mr. Walker.]

When I speak about this discrimination on the part of the lending institutions, I do not necessarily speak about willful discrimination against Northern Ontario. Rather it is something that is unconscious. It is because of a lack of knowledge of the north and of the great wealth and the future that we have in that area. However, the net result is a double standard because a loan for a project in the industrialized southern cities is relatively easy to obtain, but a similar loan in Cochrane, Kapuskasing or Hearst would be impossible to obtain.

I know that most hon. members of this house who are not familiar with Northern Ontario are not aware that this is actually the case. There is no one who will admit that this kind of double standard exists, but nevertheless it is there.

I do not suggest for a moment that the Minister of Finance can advise the trust companies and other lending institutions to whom they must make loans, but I wonder if it is not possible for a certain percentage of the funds of trust companies to be placed aside for the development of such areas as Northern Ontario. A certain percentage could be put aside and not used in the large cities of the industrialized south.

Perhaps the minister could use persuasion, if not legislation, in this regard. As I say, I believe this is an unconscious thing because people do not know about Northern Ontario. For this very reason, Mr. Speaker, I intend to have an economic conference in Northern Ontario which may perhaps partly solve this problem. At least it will bring businessmen from the industrialized south to the north so that they will become more familiar with our problems.

I have organized a two day conference which will bring forward the top executives from the financial community in general, from large industry and from government, who will come to Northern Ontario and spend those two days discussing these problems. There will be present the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion, (Mr. Marchand) who will make a major speech in Cochrane, putting forward his ideas on the regional development of Northern Ontario. There will also be present the Minister of Transport (Mr. Jamieson) to speak about matters of transportation and freight rates which are so vital to our area.

But there is nothing we can do in the North without proper capital investment. This is why I have invited a number of these people to come and look at our problems, to see what vast wealth there is in the north, to see what the potential is, and perhaps change their methods of lending. It is not only one group that can look at this problem. For example, if it is tourism that we want to promote, tourism in the area of Moosonee, it is not possible to do that without capital investment.

• (10:20 p.m.)

So it goes in respect of a number of things. If we want secondary industry in northern Ontario we must be able to ensure that the product will be brought to market at a reasonable rate. Therefore, the transportation commission should be concerned about freight rates. All these problems are interlocked. This is the reason these various people must get together to hold a meeting of this type. Perhaps this would serve to make the companies more aware of the problems of northern Ontario.

Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member for Cochrane (Mr. Stewart) should be commended for making all hon. members of this house aware of the lack of capital investment which at present is the reason for the slow growth and development of northern Ontario. I should like to assure the hon. member that all of us in this house share his concern and that I personally will bring his recommendations and suggestions to the attention of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson).

Mr. Speaker: It being after ten o'clock this house stands adjourned until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.25 p.m.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE OF AIR CANADA REPORT, AND REPORTS OF AIR CANADA AND C.N.R. AUDITORS

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the house will recall that last week we made comment on the reference to the Standing Committee on Transport of the report of the Canadian National Railways for 1968. It has been suggested that it might also be useful to have the report to parliament of the auditors on the accounts for the C.N.R. for the year ended December 31, 1968, tabled on April 30, 1969, and the report of Air Canada for the year ended December 31, 1968, and the report to parliament of the auditors on the accounts of Air Canada for the year ended December 31, 1968, both tabled on April 1, 1969, referred to the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications. If the house is agreeable perhaps that could be made an order of the house.

Mr. Speaker: Is it so ordered?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

CAPTAIN FELIX HATCHER, NORTH SYDNEY, NOVA SCOTIA

Question No. 1,789—Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys):

1. Was an application for one year's extension of service received by the Department of Fisheries from Captain Felix Hatcher of North Sydney, Nova Scotia, and, if so, on what date?

2. Was a similar application received by the Department from Chief Officer Herbert Lukeman and, if so, on what date?

3. If such applications were received, what was the final disposition in each case and what was the justification for the decision in each case?

4. Were these two applications dealt with by departmental officials at departmental headquarters in Ottawa and, if not, at what departmental level were they disposed of?

5. Is bilingualism a consideration in deciding whether or not to grant an extension of service on ships operated by the Department of Fisheries in the Atlantic region and is it a consideration in filling positions on such ships?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): 1. Yes. On August 8, 1968.

2. Yes. On September 12, 1968.

3. Captain Hatcher's case was reviewed in the region and a decision made that a recommendation to continue his services could not be justified, since qualified persons were available to succeed him.

In Mr. Lukenan's case, it was considered to be in the Department's best interests to continue his services for one further year since the First Officer on the vessel on which he serves was not in good health and Mr. Lukenan had been temporarily replacing him. The one year period would also permit the third Officer to up-grade his certificate of competency so that he would be qualified to replace Mr. Lukenan.

4. Captain Hatcher's case was dealt with regionally, although there had been one consultation with headquarters officials. Mr. Lukenan's case was approved by the Deputy Minister.

5. Where bilingualism is considered desirable, it is taken into account when filling positions on ships or in considering reasons for extension of service.

DISCIPLINARY ACTION FOLLOWING INSURANCE OVERPAYMENTS

Question No. 1,806—Mr. MacEwan:

1. Is it intended that any disciplinary action will be taken against officials of the Unemployment Insurance Commission or other public servants in consequence of the discovery that overpayments in unemployment insurance during the 1968-69 fiscal year amounted to some 3 million dollars?

2. Has any disciplinary action been taken so far and, if so, what is the nature of the disciplinary action?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): The Unemployment Insurance Commission advises: 1. No, since this is not a matter which can be entirely controlled by the Commission and its staff. From its inception, the Commission has always exercised enforcement and control measures to ensure that the payment of benefits is made to people who are entitled under the law. In programs of this type, however, a degree of loss through overpayments is inevitable because of false or erroneous declarations on the part of claimants which are initially accepted at face value in order to make payments as quickly as possible and with a minimum of formality. The Commission attempts to keep the loss within one or two per cent of the amount of benefits paid, which is a rough guide used by agencies in this type of operation in other countries. The Commission's efforts have been particularly evident since the end of last year when a major campaign of public education and benefit control was launched to reduce the loss to the Unemployment Insurance Fund to a minimum. Although this new program has been in operation for only a few months, substantial improvements have already been achieved.

J. WALTER MILLER—FRENCH LANGUAGE COURSE APPLICATION

Question No. 1,843—Mr. Paproski:

1. Did J. Walter Miller, supervisor, Laboratory of Hygiene sub-registry, Registry Services Branch, Department of National Health and Welfare, make application for a French language course given by the Public Service, and, if so (a) was his application accepted (b) if not, by whom was this application rejected and on what grounds?

2. What is the policy of the Public Service Language Bureau with regard to enrolment of public servants in French language courses?

3. Is the administrative support category of public servants, of which Mr. Miller is a member, listed outside of the preferred categories for French language training?

4. Is bilingualism currently a required qualification for appointment in Public Service administrative support categories?

5. When is it estimated by the Public Service Language Bureau that administrative support categories will be permitted to enroll in French language courses in order to qualify for promotion within that category?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Public Service Commission as follows: 1. The Department of National Health and Welfare submitted an application for Language Training for Mr. John Walter Miller on December 18, 1967. The type of training course requested was for either two hours three times a week or one hour daily. (a) The application was accepted and Mr. Miller's instructional level was the beginning of the first level; (b) Mr. Miller could not be put on course at that time because the courses he requested had started in September 1967, and students were already 40 per cent of the way through the year's work. Beginning in September 1968 one-hour daily and two-hours three times a week courses were mostly replaced by intensive courses. Only those students participating in slow-paced courses as at July 25, 1968 who could not be integrated in the intensive courses were permitted to continue training in this type of course.

2. The policy of the Public Service Language Bureau with regard to enrolment of public servants in French language courses is: (1) First order priority for language training is given to members of the Executive and Administrative and Foreign Service categories (or the equivalent in agencies not subject to the Public Service classification system).

Next in order of priority are first (lowest) level supervisors in the Professional and Scientific and Technical Categories who supervise both unilingual English and unilingual French employees. (2) If training capacity is not taken up by the two above groups, members of other groups will be taken, in order, from the following categories: (a) Professional and Scientific; (b) Administrative Support; (c) Technical; (d) Operational.

(3) However, if circumstances arise which, in the view of departmental officials, merit special consideration of a higher priority for a particular employee, departments are free to submit nominations with supporting explanations. The number of special cases that can be accepted is small.

(5) While those participating as at July 25, 1968, at Levels 1, 2 and 3, in slow-paced courses are permitted to continue training, no further nominations are accepted for these courses. To ensure the attainment of the Government's objectives in language training, all nominations from the Executive and the Administrative and Foreign Service categories and from the first (lowest) level of supervisors in the Professional and Scientific and the Technical categories are assigned to: (a) Complete immersion courses; (b) partial immersion courses.

(6) Employees from other occupational groups and levels are assigned, as space is available.

3. See answer to Question 2.

4. The selection standards approved by the Public Service Commission pursuant to Section 12 of the Public Service Employment Act provide that proficiency in both official languages may be either an essential or a desirable qualification. The determination of whether proficiency in both official languages is a desirable qualification, an essential qualification, or neither in the case of a particular position, is made in accordance with Section 20 of the Public Service Employment Act and Sections 4 and 5 of the Public Service Employment Regulations.

5. Employees in the Administrative Support category are permitted to enroll in French language courses at the present time as indicated and under the conditions stipulated by answers (2), (3) and (6) to Question 2.

LICENSING OF LOBSTER FISHERMEN

Question No. 1,884—Mr. Comeau:

1. Were new regulations regarding licensing of Maritime lobster fishermen and boats recently promulgated and, if so (a) what is the main objective of such regulations (b) what were they designed to achieve (c) what motivated such regulations?

2. Were these regulations made solely on the basis of departmental ideas and experience or was there prior consultation with individuals or groups within the lobster fishing industry as to economic and other conditions and the possible results such regulations might have upon the lobster fishing industry in the Atlantic Region?

3. What steps are planned to control marketing (buying and selling) of government lobster licenses?

4. Is it government policy to encourage centralized operation in the Maritime lobster fishing industry and, if not, what steps are planned to ensure economic justice and equality of opportunity to individual lobster fishermen?

5. Is an early re-assessment of the new regulations provided for and has provision been made to revise the regulations to protect individual fishermen and the principle of free enterprise should experience indicate such revision is necessary?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): 1. Yes. A licence control program in the lobster fisheries of the Maritime Provinces was announced on January 20, 1969: (a) To place an upper limit on the size of the fleet harvesting the lobster crop. Eventual elimination of casual or part-time fishermen will result. (b) To strengthen the earnings of the lobster fishermen; (c) The lobster fishery is fully exploited at the present time and growth is limited by biological factors. It is evident that there are too many participants in the fishery, and that their capital and operating costs are high. This has resulted in generally low incomes.

2. There has been a demand for several years by the bona fide lobster fishermen in the Maritimes that there be restriction of entry to the lobster fishery, and the subject has been discussed many times with fishermen's organizations and individuals.

3. In 1969, no one, be he an individual or a company, can license more lobster fishing vessels than he had registered with the Department of Fisheries last year. The Department will keep record of all changes of ownership and a new owner must register his purchase of a lobster fishing boat with the Department within 30 days or face loss of the valuable lobster fishing privilege.

4. The steps outlined in the answer to question number three will prevent centralization of lobster fishing operations.

5. The new licensing policy will be reviewed in 1970 and such revisions made as deemed necessary. The principle of free enterprise is protected in that anyone who can purchase an existing licensed lobster vessel can enter the fishery provided there is no increase in the number of vessels.

COOK DECKHAND ON FISHERIES PATROL VESSEL

Question No. 1,886—Mr. Crossman:

1. Has an appointment been made recently to fill a position of Cook Deckhand on the Department of Fisheries patrol vessel 11A 5831?

2. If so, what is the name and the address of the appointee?

3. Were the services of the Department of Manpower and Immigration used?

4. What are the names and addresses of the applicants?

5. Was priority given to applicants residing in the area served by the vessel?

6. If not, for what reason?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): 1. Yes.

2. Robert R. Cameron, R. R. #1, Pugwash, Nova Scotia.

3. No.

4. Not applicable.

5. No.

6. Priority was given to Mr. R. R. Cameron because of previous employment with the Department in another capacity, and because a commitment had been made to find him alternative employment.

[Mr. Whelan.]

Hon. Otto E. PETROLEUM IMPORTS EAST OF OTTAWA VALLEY

Question No. 1,896—Mr. Mahoney:

What was the average daily consumption of refined petroleum products in that portion of Canada, east of the Ottawa Valley during 1968?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Acting Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): National Energy Board reports as follows: The estimated daily consumption of refined petroleum products in Regions 1 and 2 in 1968 was 619,700 barrels.

Region 1 is comprised of the Atlantic Provinces and Region 2 is comprised of the Province of Quebec and that part of Ontario lying east of the "Ottawa Valley line".

CORPORATION PRE-TAX PROFITS

Question No. 1,906—Mr. Skoberg:

What are the total and percentage increase of pre-tax profits reported by Canadian corporations for the years 1967 and 1968?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports that: The pre-tax profits of corporations in Canada, less the losses of companies incurring losses, in 1967 and 1968 are estimated to be $5,020 million and $5,877 million in the two years, respectively—a year-to-year increase of 17.1 per cent. This information is based upon a sample of corporations, and may be revised when more complete data become available at a later date. This measure of profits is a component in the measurement of gross national production and excludes dividends received from other Canadian companies to avoid the overstatement of profits on a national basis that would result.

AURELE DE FOY SUZOR-COTE STAMP

Question No. 1,914—Mr. Nesbitt:

For what reason did the Post Office issue the Aurele de Foy Suzor-Cote commemorative stamp in a fifty cent denomination rather than in one of the lower and more frequently used denominations of six to ten cents?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: Canada Post Office has been issuing commemorative postage stamps in various denominations periodically since the Diamond Jubilee issues in 1897. In 1967 following the release of the current definitive eight cents to $1 stamps illustrating the works of such renowned Canadian artists as A. Y. Jackson and Tom Thomson, criticism was directed at the monochrome reproduction of these paintings, which was a manufacturing limitation at that time. The Aurèle de Foy Suzor-Côté commemorative stamp was produced by a new printing process which enabled the reproduction of his painting in its natural colours. It is considered that this stamp is one of the most colourful and attractive postage stamps issued by the Post Office and it was felt that a 50 cents denomination would be much more appropriate than one of the lower denominations.

2. Did any other member countries of NATO express their concern regarding activities of the military Government of Greece?

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Pierre Goyer (Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs): No. In the view of the Government, the Washington meeting was not a suitable occasion on which to comment on such matters.

There was no specific reference to Greece or its government in the statements of any of the representatives at the Washington meeting.

HEALTH AND WELFARE PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION

Question No. 1,967—Mr. Lundrigan:

1. Has the Department of National Health and Welfare moved field officers in the Programme Administration category to the Head Office of the Canada Pension Plan Administration in Ottawa?

2. If so (a) are these transfers of a temporary nature (b) for what reason were they made (c) are these officers filling the terms of reference for which they were hired, and (d) what was the total cost of these re-assignments in travelling expenses and other related costs?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. The Department of National Health and Welfare did not move field officers in the Program Administration category to the Head Office of the Canada Pension Plan Administration in Ottawa on a permanent basis.

2. (a) For about a year, however, it was necessary to utilize the services of some field officers in Ottawa for short periods of time. These assignments usually lasted for three weeks and usually involved eight to ten officers at a time. (b) This temporary assignment of field officers was authorized so that they might assist in processing the large backlogs of applications which occurred after survivor benefits first became payable in February 1968 and when the eligible age for retirement pensions was reduced to age 67 in January 1968, and to age 66 in January 1969. If this had not been done substantial delays would have occurred before payments could have been made to applicants. This was also the only way in which these temporary backlogs could be cleared quickly without hiring additional permanent staff. A secondary reason for bringing these field officers to Ottawa was to expose them to the detailed procedures involved in the processing of claims and to give them some insight into other operations at Headquarters. (c) It is not considered that these temporary assignments at Head Office were in conflict with the terms of reference under which the field officers were hired. Rather they were beneficial in the sense that the field officers increased their knowledge of the legislation and claims processing and thereby improved their abilities in dealing with the public on Canada Pension Plan matters. The Plan is quite new and there is still much to learn. (d) The fiscal year which ended on March 31 1969, is the only significant period during which field officers were assigned to Head Office operations. For that year there were a total of 77 field officers so assigned for temporary duty and the cost involved is allocated as follows: Transportation, $11,005.12; Meals and Accommodation, $36,201.65; Total, $47,206.77.

Question No. 1,974—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

2. From whom were they purchased and at what price?

3. Are they new and, if not, how old and what is their approximate worth?

4. What did it cost to transport these trailers to Prince Edward Island and was that cost included in the selling price?

5. Was any attempt made to purchase them on Prince Edward Island and were tenders circulated to prospective contractors in this regard?

6. Are these trailers of American or Canadian construction?

7. Are they considered to be constructed and insulated for all weather Canadian use?

8. What is the expected life of service of these two trailers?

9. Have any repairs been made to these trailers since purchase or is it expected that any repairs will be made in the immediate future?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): 1. Yes.

2. Woodlawn Mobile Homes & Parks Ltd., Ottawa; total price $13,350 F.O.B. Ellerslie, Prince Edward Island.

3. No. One unit was a 1968 model used as a demonstrator; the original price was $9,450 F.O.B. Ottawa. The other unit was used approximately six years and was refurnished; the original price of this unit was $7,650 F.O.B. Ottawa.

4. Haulage from Ottawa to Ellerslie, listed at $500 per unit, was included in the selling price.

[Mr. Munro.]

5. Tenders were not called, but prices were checked in the Halifax area and, after a review of available units and prices in the Ottawa, Montreal, and Cornwall areas, it was considered that the two second-hand units purchased provided an economic purchase arrangement.

6. One unit was of Canadian manufacture; the other, American.

7. They are considered to be of adequate construction for the area in which they are to be used.

8. As these two units were purchased to house summer students, it is extremely difficult to estimate their life expectancy.

9. Minor damage which occurred during transportation from Ottawa to Ellerslie will be repaired and paid for by Woodlawn Mobile Homes Ltd.

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN SEED GROWERS AND DEPARTMENT

Question No. 2,079—Mr. Corbin:

1. What is the working relation between the Canadian Seed Growers Association and the Canada Department of Agriculture?

2. On what basis is a $44,000 annual grant made to the CSGA and is the CSGA accountable for this grant?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): 1. The Canadian Seed Growers' Association is the seed pedigreeing agency as authorized by regulations of the Seeds Act. The Association prescribes the crop standards while the Department sets the grade standards for seed of the various pedigreed classes. The Department inspects the growing crop and reports its findings to the Association. Acceptable crops are granted pedigreed status and recorded by the Association. The Department controls the labelling and sealing of pedigreed seed.

2. To help defray the costs associated with the granting and recording of pedigreed seed crops. The CSGA is not accountable for this grant.

3. No.

3. Research Institutions, colleges and universities, high schools and individuals.

4. (a) Numerous genera and species within the class Insecta, mostly of non-quarantine significance; (b) Numerous species of fungi and bacteria, mostly of non-quarantine significance; (c) A limited number of virus cultures.

5. (a) That the insect or disease organism would be maintained by qualified personnel in such a manner as to prevent escape from the laboratory in question, or (b) That the specimen did not present a risk to Canadian agriculture, or; (c) That the specimen was useful or beneficial as a biological control agent.

6. Voluntary—There have been intended liberations of insect specimens for biological control purposes. Accidental—There have been no reports of accidental liberation or of injury to Canadian agricultural crops which could be attributed to pests granted entry for the purposes indicated.

1. Did the Department of Agriculture participate with the Province of New Brunswick in setting up the Bon Accord Potato Seed Farm and, if so, in what way?

2. Is the Department presently participating in the project and, if so, in what way?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): 1. Department of Agriculture participation in the setting up of the Bon Accord Potato Seed Farm was confined to providing technical advice in the field of seed potato production.

2. Seed potatoes produced on this farm are inspected by Department of Agriculture staff.

2. Who are the president, vice-president, the secretary and the treasurer of this Society and what are their addresses?

3. For what specific purposes is this grant given?

4. What are the activities of the Society?

5. What is their membership?

6. How many foundation mares were inspected and registered under the Society's programme in 1966, 1967 and 1968?

7. How much money has this Society received since the start of these grants from the federal government?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): 1. Yes. An annual grant of $5,000 is provided by the Canada Department of Agriculture to the Canadian Hunter, Saddle and Light Horse Improvement Society.

2. Officers of the Society are: Mrs. J. G. Holbrook, President, R.R. 3, Dundas, Ontario. L. J. McGuinness, 1st Vice-President, Algoma Street, Mimico, Ontario. 7. Since 1927, the Department has provided an annual grant of $5,000 to the Society.

*ALLEGED DIVERSION OF NATO AID TO SOUTH AFRICA

Question No. 2,109—Mr. Broadbent:

1. Does the Government of Canada obtain assurances that the materiel offered as military aid to NATO countries is not later supplied to Rhodesia and the Union of South Africa?

2. Is the Government of Canada aware of a statement by the Secretary General of O.A.U. at the meeting of that organization, February 17-22, 1969, that stated (a) the Government of West Germany and the Government of The Netherlands are supplying military and financial aid to Rhodesia and the Union of South Africa and (b) that West Germany is aiding the Government of Rhodesia to build a missile system?

3. If the answer to part 2 is yes, has the Government of Canada taken steps to confirm or deny these assertions?

4. If the assertions have been confirmed, has the Canadian Government communicated with the West German Government or The Netherlands' Government on these matters and what have been the results, if any?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. The only NATO countries receiving Canadian military aid are Greece and Turkey which receive small amounts of spare parts for aircraft previously donated by Canada. I have no reason to suppose that this equipment is not used exclusively within the NATO area by Greece and Turkey.

2 and 3. It is understood that the report of the Administrative Secretary General of the O.A.U. made in February, 1969 contained assertions that Western countries, including West Germany and The Netherlands, have increased the volume of their exports to Rhodesia and that West German scientists were assisting South Africa to establish a missile system. There is no indication that the Administrative Secretary-General referred to (a) the supply of military and financial aid to Rhodesia and South Africa by the West German or Netherlands governments or (b) West German aid to Rhodesia to build a missile system.

4. It was not considered necessary to communicate with any government regarding the assertions actually made in the report of the Administrative Secretary General of the O.A.U. A report (dated December 30, 1968) of the United Nations Committee on Sanctions against Rhodesia established by Security Council resolution 253(1968) of May 29, 1968 indicated that, while West German exports to Rhodesia had increased, those of The Netherlands had decreased, not increased, over a period under review. This report is a public document, circulated to all member governments by the United Nations.

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. Yes. INVESTIGATION OF MISLEADING ADVERTISING

Question No. 2,166—Mrs. MacInnis:

Is the Combines Investigation Branch of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs investigating misleading advertising practices of car and appliance leasing companies?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): In reply to questions asking whether inquiries have been instituted under the Combines Investigation Act, the general practice is that no information is given out as to whether a particular inquiry has been or is being pursued with respect to a particular group or company unless or until a report is published or some legal proceeding of a public nature is taken. If the Honourable Member has any information or evidence which indicates to her that there may have been a violation of the Combines Investigation Act, this information should be sent to the Director of Investigation and Research.

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House copies of certifications issued by a representative of the Government of Canada pursuant to section 9(1) of the Agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of the Province of Ontario, dated June 14, 1961, approving claims for contributions to the cost of acquisition and development of certain lands for water conservation and flood control purposes in the Toronto area.

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the reservations and conditions expressed by the parliamentary secretary, is it the pleasure of the house

RESEARCH STUDIES ON LABOUR RELATIONS

Motion No. 86—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of each of the research studies commissioned and completed by and for the Labour Relations Task Force.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, these documents fall into two categories. As was previously announced the government has decided in due course to publish approximately 20 of these studies. These are to be published by the Queen's Printer. The government would be quite agreeable to these being tabled at once, subject only to the understanding that the reports when ultimately published may contain the normal prepublication editorial changes with regard to grammar, references and reorganization of material.

The second category of studies includes those which the government has itself decided not to publish, but under the arrangement the authors were entitled to make their own private arrangements for publication. Leaving aside the question of copyright, the motion would be acceptable subject only to obtaining the consent of the authors in question to have them published. If the hon. member is in a position to accept those two bases we would be in a position to honour his notice of motion.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): It is agreeable.

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the reservations and conditions expressed by the minister, is it the pleasure of the house that notice of motion No. 86 be deemed to have been adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

[Mr. Speaker.]

NATIONAL BALLET OF CANADA

Motion No. 96—Mr. Osler:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of Annual Reports and Annual Financial Statements of the National Ballet of Canada for the years 1964-68 inclusive.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to information provided to the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Osler) to the effect that there is no such corporation known as the National Ballet of Canada, he has agreed to withdraw this notice of motion.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that the notice of motion be dropped?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

REPORTS TO SENATE COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE POLICY—PAGES 4385 TO 4387

Motion No. 106—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of each report referred to in the submission of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development to the Senate Special Committee on Science Policy on February 26, 1969, listed on pages 4385 to 4387, No. 31 of the proceedings of the Senate Committee.

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Chrétien) I wish to report the following: Because the surveys mentioned in this motion resulted in the publications the hon. member has requested in his motion for the production of papers No. 105, I wonder whether the hon. member would consent to withdrawing the notice of motion.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, if the government previously agreed to tabling the information requested in motion No. 105, I am agreeable.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that this motion shall be transferred for debate?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Transferred for debate.

NATIONAL BALLET GUILD

Motion No. 111—Mr. Osler:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of Annual Reports and Annual Financial Statements of the National Ballet Guild of Canada for the years 1964-68 inclusive.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Corporate and Consumer Affairs): Mr. Speaker, notice of motion No. 111 asking to issue a copy of annual reports of the National Ballet Guild of Canada for the years 1964 through 1968 inclusive is acceptable. However, corporations such as this one, incorporated under Part II of the Canada Corporations Act, are not required to file or deposit any annual financial statements with my department. With this reservation the motion is acceptable.

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the reservations or conditions expressed by the minister is motion No. 111 acceptable?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

PUBLIC RELATIONS CONTRACTORS MEETING

Motion No. 112—Mr. Howard (Skeena):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all papers, information or other documents presented at the public relations Contractors meeting held in the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development Headquarters in Ottawa from November 27 to 29, 1968 inclusive and a copy of all notes made at the said meeting.

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development I wish to report as follows: As the papers the hon. member for Skeena is requesting in this motion for the production of papers were included in motion for production of papers No. 77, which was tabled on March 19, 1969, I wonder whether the hon. member would consent to withdrawing this motion?

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): I think I would, Mr. Speaker, subject to the caveat that I may put it back on the order paper. I have read the particular document to which the hon. member has referred and there are no such papers included.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that the motion shall be dropped?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

INDIANS—WORKING GROUP TO RECOMMEND STRATEGY AND POLICY

Motion No. 116—Mr. Howard (Skeena):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the document entitled "Report of Working Group I—Indians to the Executive Committee" which Working Group had its terms of reference set out in February, 1968 and which was formed to examine and outline the problems relating to Indians and to make recommendations concerning strategy, policy and programming.

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development I wish to report as follows: The hon. member for Skeena requested this same information in his motion for the production of papers No. 82. The hon. member was informed then that the document he requested in the motion for the production of papers No. 82 could not be identified. On April 23 the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, on behalf of the hon. member for Skeena, agreed that this motion be withdrawn. As the motion for the production of papers No. 116 is identical to the motion for production of papers No. 82, and the document still cannot be identified, I would ask the hon. member to withdraw the motion.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre was misled by the reply given on an earlier occasion. Perhaps I could assist the efficiency of the government by tabling the particular document in question now. This might help them find it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is it agreed that the motion be transferred for debate?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Transferred for debate.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining notices of motion stand?

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I should like to pose what has become almost a weekly question. Has the President of the Privy Council had any success in getting permission from the provinces in respect of documents relating to the Northumberland Strait Crossing?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I should like to apologize to the hon. member because I am afraid I do not have the report today. I will make an inquiry.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining notices of motion stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Business of the House

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

SUGGESTED RE-ARRANGEMENT OF SCHEDULE

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in view of the statement attributed to the President of the Privy Council that there are only 18 sitting days left to deal with government business and that some legislation may have to be put over, I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether he will agree to putting the Criminal Code amendments over until the end of the session, and immediately bringing forward legislation on housing and other urgent matters? Will he, in any event, undertake that the house will not adjourn for a summer recess until the housing and other legislation has been dealt with by the house?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Thank you very much.

An hon. Member: More?

Mr. Trudeau: Why not? Mr. Speaker, I can give neither of those undertakings. On the first point, I do not see how the question would be solved or how the motion would be adopted any more quickly by putting it later in the session. I think we all realize that the Criminal Code omnibus bill has been dealt with sufficiently and that it would be a mistake now to risk postponing its adoption to some other session. On the second point, the government intends to introduce concepts of planning into the use of legislative time, and as much as possible we will stick to our goal of adjourning before the summer is too advanced. I think it is up to the house to take its responsibility; when there is a filibuster such as we are now seeing, I hope that all responsible parties will unite in conceiving some way of allocating time for bills, when that time is obviously being wasted by some members of the house.

Mr. McCleave: What about the Liberal members who spoke yesterday?

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, without being in any way provocative, will the government not accept responsibility for having introduced the Criminal Code legislation in the manner in which it was introduced, and will the government not accept responsibility for getting important legislation before the house before we adjourn for the summer recess?

[Mr. Speaker.]

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. If it is the government's intention to stay with the Criminal Code bill until it is finished, will the Prime Minister give the government house leader freedom to discuss with other house leaders which of the other items of legislation we shall deal with after the Criminal Code bill is finished?

Mr. Trudeau: I believe it is up to the government to decide the priority with which it wants to introduce bills which are on the order paper, or which should be dealt with at this session. Of course once this priority has been established by the government, it should be discussed and tested with the opposition to see if we have cause to change that priority.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SUGGESTION THAT A.B.M. SYSTEM BE UNDER NORAD CONTROL

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Burnaby—I mean, the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

An hon. Member: I am glad we have that fellow identified.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I can understand your having difficulty knowing who is the hon. member for Burnaby-Seymour. I understand the Prime Minister had the same difficulty.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): The voters knew the difference.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): May I direct a question to the Prime Minister. Having in mind the statement made by the deputy commander of NORAD, General F. R. Sharp, to the effect that on a purely military basis the anti-ballistic missile system should be brought under NORAD, will the Prime Minister assure the house that no commitment will be made by the Canadian government to bring the anti-ballistic missile system under NORAD without the matter first being referred to parliament?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the most I can say on that is that General Sharp obviously implied that it was a matter for political decision and not to be decided only by military considerations. It is of course the intention of the government to take its political responsibilities in such matters. But it may be that the government will not want to discuss this question in front of the house, if it does not feel it has to come up with a decision.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I ask the Prime Minister whether parliament will have an opportunity to discuss this matter before the government takes the political decision which is now under review.

Mr. Trudeau: I do not understand the question very well, Mr. Speaker. The matter is before the committee, and General Sharp is testifying before it. Members of the house can express their opinion before that committee, and we hope they will.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): May I ask the Prime Minister if, in the government's review of the anti-ballistic missile system, he will undertake to see that the comprehensive report commissioned by Senator Edward Kennedy which is now completed is included in the study, and when does the government expect to complete that study?

Mr. Trudeau: We have been pressed by the house to make some announcements as soon as possible on phase 2 of Canada's defence system, and I believe we will give that top priority before deciding on the defence systems of other countries.

Mr. Stanfield: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Having failed a moment ago to get an assurance from the Prime Minister, I wonder if he would give the house an assurance that he will not make an announcement regarding the NORAD policy the day after the house adjourns.

NORAD—POSSIBLE EXTENSION OF NORTH BAY INSTALLATION

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister in connection with NORAD and the statement made by Lieutenant General Sharp, deputy commander of NORAD. Is the Prime Minister in a position to inform the house on the correctness of the statement that the government is now considering an extension of the NORAD headquarters at Colorado Springs to a supplementary command post at North Bay?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, this sounds like a rather complicated question. I will have to refer it to the minister to see whether we can give the hon. member an uncomplicated answer.

Mr. Winch: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I will take with pleasure the advice of the right hon. Prime Minister and direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. I should like to ask the minister if his department is now considering the extension and expansion of North Bay as a supplementary headquarters to the NORAD headquarters in Colorado Springs as was announced by General Sharp.

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): First of all, the question does not involve an extension of the facilities. As conceived and as operating now the installation at North Bay could be used as an alternative base to Colorado Springs. The only thing that would be new in this particular case would be for the government to accept the proposition and formalize an arrangement with the United States government to use the North Bay base as an alternate base in case Colorado Springs is knocked out.

Mr. Winch: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it now being considered by the government as outlined by the minister?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): No, Mr. Speaker.

A.B.M. SYSTEM—COMMUNICATION WITH U.S. AUTHORITIES

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the Prime Minister returned from Washington and reported on the conversation he had with regard to the A.B.M. system I wonder whether he or his colleagues have communicated any position, even of an interim nature, to the government of the United States with respect to the establishment of A.B.M.s.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): When I came back from Washington I reported in general terms that I had expressed some concern over the A.B.M. system and its consequences on the equilibrium of forces of deterrence between the Soviet Union and the United States of America. As I reported to the house, we also received certain explanations from the United States government concerning that system, but no specific decision has been taken beyond that and therefore no representation has been made based on such a decision. I merely want to repeat that, of course, the A.B.M. system is of importance to us but it is important to the whole world, and we are one of the countries considering it.

NORTH BAY—POSSIBLE REMOVAL OF BOMARCS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I have a further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the minister whether the Bomarc missiles at North Bay are are going to be removed.

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): There are no plans at present to remove the Bomarc system. This is a phase that is envisaged with the development of O.T.H. and AWACS, and I think it is slated for some time in the mid 1970s.

AIRPORTS

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE—INQUIRY AS TO THE COST OF LOCATION

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Prime Minister.

Is it his intention to rectify the mistakes he made, according to an editorial in Le Devoir, regarding the cost of the site of the Montreal international airport?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, in due time I would be very happy to correct those mistakes, and I am a little surprised that the editorial writer concerned did not get information from Ottawa as he surely did from Quebec sources, before writing his article.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

DRUGS

NON-MEDICAL USES—DISCUSSIONS AS TO PERSONNEL OF COMMITTEE

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): I should like to address a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, Mr. Speaker. Has he discussed with the provincial premiers and with the Alcohol and Drug Research Foundation the make up of the committee which he proposes to establish?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No I have not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Rynard: Does the minister not consider it worth while to tap the reservoir of experience and research available in this foundation?

AIR TRANSPORT

LANDING RIGHTS AT TORONTO FOR INTERNATIONAL CARRIERS

Mr. Barney Danson (York North): My question is intended for the Minister of Transport, Mr. Speaker, but in his absence I will address it to the minister who is answering for him. Since authorization has been given to international air carriers en route to and from Montreal to seek landing rights at Halifax and Gander I should like to ask the minister whether similar authorization might be given for landing rights at a point where some 75 per cent of the passengers originate and terminate their flights—Toronto.

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): This is the sort of question which is being reviewed by the Transport Commission. I shall be pleased to pass this suggestion along to the Minister of Transport.

Mr. E. B. Osler (Winnipeg South Centre): I should like to ask the minister whether at some time consideration could be given to using, as a gateway, Winnipeg International airport where people are willing to work—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

POSSIBLE STRIKE OF CANADIAN PACIFIC AIRLINES MACHINISTS

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Central Nova): Could the minister tell us whether he has received a request to set up a conciliation board in the matter of the differences between Canadian Pacific Airlines and the machinists union?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): I understand that such a request is on its way, though I have not received it yet. There is no particular reason why such a request should not be granted. The procedure, as hon. members know, is for the minister to take a week or ten days in which to study the matter and decide whether or not such a board should be set up. If he reaches the conclusion that it should, the next step is to set up the board and appoint a suitable chairman. After the board has examined the situation a report is made to the Minister of Labour and he either accepts it or rejects it, depending on whether he thinks it is complete or incomplete.

FLOODS

ASSISTANCE FOR AREAS IN WESTERN PROVINCES—USE OF ARMED FORCES

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Is the Prime Minister in a position to say whether or not the premier of Saskatchewan has placed before the Government of Canada any claim for assistance in connection with the recent flood damage in that province? Second, has any estimate been made by the Department of Agriculture, officials of P.F.R.A. or any other federal authority as to the extent of the damage?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Without getting into details I can say that the premiers of several western provinces have applied for federal assistance. We are waiting to learn the extent of the damage and to receive more concrete figures before deciding in what way we can answer such requests.

Now that the danger of the floods has receded it might be worth while to point out that the federal government did play an outstanding part in providing needed assistance. Hundreds of members of the Canadian Armed Forces were at some time or other manning the dykes, and other departments, such as the Department of National Health and Welfare, and P.F.R.A. officials were involved in the operation.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I agree entirely with what the Prime Minister had to say in the latter part of his statement. We are all very grateful for what was done. I would ask him now to answer the second question: Has there been any estimate made of the damage in the province of Saskatchewan? When he mentions other provinces he must be referring to the province of Manitoba.

Mr. Trudeau: And British Columbia.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Yes, and British Columbia. Has there been any estimate as yet on the part of the federal government as to the extent of the damage?

Mr. Trudeau: To my knowledge the costs involved have not yet been fully appraised but I shall check to find out whether there has been some later development.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): While the federal government is considering making contributions in respect of flood damage, will it not also consider contributing toward the cost of flood prevention? I am thinking specifically, now, of the town of Lumsden in the Qu'Appelle Valley, and of similar areas.

Mr. Trudeau: At various times the federal government has taken action to help prevent floods. I believe the Canada Water Act will have something to say about that; it is due for introduction before the end of the session.

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): In connection with the use of the armed forces to restrict the danger of flooding in the provinces, would the government consider refraining from making the usual charge to the provinces for such services?

Mr. Trudeau: In view of the fact that the charges are seldom paid anyhow, Mr. Speaker, it might be worthwhile looking into that suggestion.

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—ATTENDANCE OF MEDIATOR

Mr. David Lewis (York South): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Labour arising out of the welcome news—I hope it remains true—that Air Canada and the International Association of Machinists are again in negotiation. Is the minister considering steps to have a mediator present in order that the second round of negotiations during the strike might be more productive than the first round?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): I am happy to say that the machinists and Air Canada have been meeting since two o'clock this afternoon. I am particularly encouraged by the fact that the meeting was arranged on their own initiative. I hope these talks are productive and that they will bring an end to this strike, because I can assure both Air Canada and the union concerned that if they do not settle it of their own volition at this particular round of talks they can be prepared for a long strike, if they expect the government to step in and put an end to it through legislation.

Mr. Lewis: I agree with the minister's last remark—that the government will not attempt to interfere in that way. However when a striking union and the employer get together for a second time during a strike, the result must be satisfactory or there will be difficulty for a long time, and in these circumstances I ask the minister whether he is considering stepping into the picture himself, or getting someone else to do so on his behalf?

Mr. Mackasey: I apologize for not having answered the original question fully. I think it is in the best interest of both Air Canada and the machinists, at least for a few days, that they should negotiate in the absence of any representative of the Department of Labour. They concur in this particular philosophy. Since this meeting was arranged mutually, I am hopeful that the spirit of co-operation will continue and that they may be able to arrive at a collective agreement on their own initiative.

Mr. Lewis: I should like to ask the minister this supplementary question. Since the parties are meeting of their own volition, and in view of his decision, which I am prepared to accept without qualification as a wise one at this stage, to let the parties meet on their own, has he arranged for machinery to keep him informed of the progress of the negotiations, so that should there be any danger of a breakdown he will be in a position to intervene before a breakdown actually takes place?

Mr. Mackasey: Both parties have been particularly co-operative in this matter and are aware that the full resources of the Department of Labour are available to either or both sides, if such services are felt to be needed.

CANADIAN CONFEDERATION

MANITOBA—PARTICIPATION BY OTTAWA IN CELEBRATION

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): My question is directed to the Secretary of State and it relates to an important event in Canadian confederation. I refer to the entry of Manitoba into confederation in 1870,—the first "in" province—making possible a Canada from sea to sea. When will the Secretary of State and the government be in a position to announce the extent of Ottawa's financial participation in this historic centennial occasion.

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, this matter is being looked into and I hope to be able to inform the house at an early date in this connection.

[English]

Mr. Dinsdale: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder whether I could ask the Secretary of State, the Prime Minister and indeed all members of the house if they have completed their personal plans to participate in this important event in the keystone province?

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Secretary of State.

Could he tell us whether it is the intention of the government to subsidize the erection of a monument commemorating Louis Riel, in front of the Manitoba parliament buildings?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think this question should be put on the order paper.

[English]

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

H.M.C.S. "BONAVENTURE"—AUDIT OF DAVIE SHIPBUILDING BOOKS

Mr. Norman A. Cafik (Ontario): I should like to direct this question to the Minister of Supply and Services. Would the minister make available to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts the report of the audit team that audited the books of Davie Shipbuilding in regard to the cost of the Bonaventure refit?

Mr. Speaker: Order. It seems to me that this is a question that should be considered by the committee itself rather than by the house.

THE MINISTRY

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF REVISED LIST

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Prime Minister. Would the minister table for the information of the house the revised list of ministers, acting ministers and second acting ministers, as he did earlier in the year, so that we can have a complete rundown?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I would be glad to do that, Mr. Speaker.

AIR TRANSPORT

EXTENDED WORK LOAD OF AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS

Mr. Charles H. Thomas (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport, but in his absence I will direct it to the minister acting in his place. Will the minister undertake to make a statement next week to outline the action that he intends to take to reduce hazards caused to the travelling public by the shortage of air traffic controllers at Montreal, Toronto, Edmonton, Moncton and other important air centres in Canada?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): I will be pleased to convey that request to the minister, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Thomas (Moncton): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Recognizing the fact that it takes five years to train a controller, and that five years from now we will need twice the number we presently have, will the minister undertake to make a second statement on motions in the near future to outline his plans for increasing the number of men training to be air traffic controllers?

WATER RESOURCES

PLACENTIA BAY, NFLD.—COMPENSATION TO FISHERMEN FOR LOSS THROUGH POLLUTION

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries. Can the minister say whether consideration is being given by the government to assisting fishermen in the St. Marys and Placentia Bay areas whose livelihood has been affected by the pollution problem there?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): The answer is yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Carter: Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Can the minister inform the house whether officials of his department have reported to him as to their findings regarding the same problem?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes, Mr. Speaker, they have. I presume the hon. member is referring to the Placentia Bay area. I am hopeful that members from Newfoundland will meet with those officials later on this afternoon.

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the minister of health. Would the minister advise as to the results of the investigations made by his department in the St. George's Bay area in western Newfoundland in regard to evidence of possible pollution?

Mr. Munro: Mr. Speaker, I may have misled the house yesterday when I indicated that my officials were in that area. They were in the Placentia Bay area rather than St. George's; but they do advise, as the hon. member will learn this afternoon, that the situation in St. George's Bay is not serious.

FISHERIES

SALT COD—IMPLEMENTATION OF NEW POLICY

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I have a related question for the Minister of Fisheries. Is the minister in a position to announce whether or not the advisory committee under the new salt cod policy has been established, and when can we expect implementation of this new policy?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): All of the members of this committee, Mr. Speaker, have been approached by letter. Most of them have already agreed to serve; the others, I hope, will do so very shortly. The committee will be meeting within the next ten days. The policy, as the hon. member knows, has already been announced, and it will be implemented in that form.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

DANGER ARISING FROM DISPOSABLE BOTTLES

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a question that I should like to direct to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In light of the recent decision by the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations to ask the provincial government to ban the sale of beverages in one-way bottles, can the minister now report on the outcome of his promise to try to get co-ordinated action with the provinces to deal with this dangerous, expensive, unsightly and increasing problem?

Mr. Speaker: Order. It seems to me that the hon. member is raising a question which, in my view, should be discussed by way of a statement on motions. I hope the hon. member will agree with me on this point.

Mrs. MacInnis: With great respect, Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question was going to point to the fact that we are just at the edge now of the litterbug season, and both from the standpoint of public safety as well as unsightly littering—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Had I known what the supplementary question was going to be I would have allowed the question.

Mrs. MacInnis: Then may I put that question to the minister.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there was some discussion of this subject with the ministers concerned at the recent federal-provincial conference. As the hon. member undoubtedly knows, the Consumers Association of Canada is conducting a widespread inquiry into the whole question of disposable bottles, and I would not want to take action until they had completed their study and I had had the benefits of the views of the Consumers Association.

Mrs. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a further supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would suggest to the hon. member that the question has been asked. We are running out of time, and if there is an urgent supplementary it might be discussed at the time of adjournment.

Mrs. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, all I want to know is whether the minister knows when this study is likely to be complete and the results made public.

Mr. Basford: I cannot speak for the Consumers Association of Canada, Mr. Speaker.

INDUSTRY

TIMMINS, ONT.—SUBSIDY TO TEXAS GULF

Mr. Walter Deakon (High Park): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is obvious we cannot have the last word because the girls take precedence. My question is directed to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. Can the minister advise the house whether the federal government has provided for, or intends to provide for a subsidy to the United States firm, Texas Gulf, for the purpose of erecting a smelter in the Timmins area?

Mr. Winch: Author?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think it has already been announced that we are going to give a grant of, I do not know the exact amount but I think it is over $1 million.

[Translation]

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ABITIBI—GRANT FOR INDUSTRIAL ASSISTANCE

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion.

Could he tell us whether consultations are taking place between his department and the Quebec government for the designation of Abitibi as a special area with regard to the granting of financial assistance to promote industrial development in that area?

Mr. Speaker: I feel that the question should normally be put on the order paper or discussed at the time of adjournment.

Mr. Laprise: At ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

SEARCH AND RESCUE

SUMMERTIME NETWORK MANNED BY STUDENTS

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday last the minister of manpower told the house that the government had a plan for summer employment of students, though he did not say what that plan was. My question is to the Minister of Transport. As part of the government's drive to provide jobs for students, is the Department of Transport going to establish a summertime network of search and rescue co-ordination centres in the inland waters of Canada to be manned by students?

Is the minister considering hiring students for the summer months to run routine checks on the large numbers of pleasure craft to ensure that the provisions of the Canada Shipping Act are carried out, plus relieving the police of these additional time consuming duties?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I am certain that the new Minister of Transport will want to consider that question.

NATIONAL SECURITY

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF ROYAL COMMISSION

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. What progress is being made to provide parliament with the expurgated edition of the report on security procedures which the right hon. gentleman has promised from time to time?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): I will not surprise the house by saying that progress has been slow. There has been progress. I hope to be able to announce the date soon.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO SETTING UP OF PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to ask my good friend the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs whether the extraordinary delay in announcing the appointment of the commission on prices means that the minister has abandoned this idea? Does he believe the government has already licked inflation or is he actually going to set up a commission?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): I would like to tell my good friend the Leader of the Opposition that the government has not abandoned its policies to establish a prices and incomes commission. I am most anxious to have this established as quickly as possible. I have had some difficulty in the selection of personnel for the commission. I expect this difficulty will be resolved very shortly.

An hon. Member: Jim Tucker is still available!

Mr. Basford: I am delighted to hear a nomination from members of the opposition. However, under the circumstances it is one I cannot accept. I hope to make an announcement shortly. The prices and incomes commission will be part of the program of this government's determination to beat the inflation problem.

Mr. Stanfield: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I have had bad luck with assurances today, but could the minister assure us the commission will be announced and appointed in 1969?

Mr. Basford: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the difficulty the minister is having in recruiting members for the commission, would he consult with the Leader of the Opposition, who will be most helpful in this regard?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

FLOODS

TRAIL, B.C.—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON FINANCIAL AID

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Public Works. In view of the continuing and disheartening delay of any firm commitment from either the provincial or federal authorities in respect to the flood disaster in Trail, B.C., may I ask the minister what recent discussions, if any, his department has had with the provincial authorities in British Columbia on sharing the costs of the disastrous Trail flood?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, we have had no discussion with the province of British Columbia. That province has not asked us for aid. As the Prime Minister explained, the matter of floods in three provinces is under study and a report is expected momentarily. In the meantime, we have not turned down the possibility of giving assistance in Trail. We are waiting for the report to assess what would be proper.

Mr. Harding: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that federal assistance has been given to other areas, such as the city of Alberni where similar disastrous floods hit, what guidelines for cost sharing have been laid down by the federal authorities—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REQUEST FOR MEASURE RESPECTING CRIMINAL RECORDS

Mr. D. R. Tolmie (Welland): I wish to direct a question to the Solicitor General. Will the minister be bringing forth legislation at the next session of parliament pertaining to the subject of the sealing of criminal records?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member referred to the next session. Perhaps the question might be asked then.

Mr. Tolmie: I think it is rather urgent, Mr. Speaker, that the government should start this legislative program. It is a matter of urgency.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

ENLISTMENT GOALS FOR ARMED SERVICES

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. To answer shocking rumours in Nova Scotia, have the goals for the number of personnel in the armed forces remained approximately the same since April of last year?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question should be placed on the order paper.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

LEGISLATION RESPECTING DESIGNATED AREAS

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): My question is for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. Will he be bringing in any new legislation concerning designated areas before this session expires?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): I hope so, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

DELAY IN ISSUING PASSPORTS

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Could he tell us if he intends to take other means than those he announced last week in the house to correct the deplorable situation that exists at this time about the issuance of passports at the passport office in Ottawa?

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me the hon. member's question was considered by the minister last week, but it is possible that the minister may want to answer it.

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): As a result of the measures taken, the volume of passports being issued is increasing very rapidly. Yesterday for example 2,674 passports were issued. We are gradually overcoming the backlog.

STUDENT UNREST

ROLE OF ACTIVISTS OUTSIDE CANADA

Mr. John Lundrigan (Gander-Twillingate): My question is for the Solicitor General. Could the minister make a statement on motions as to the extent of evidence and information obtained by the R.C.M.P. with respect to student activists outside Canada and their role in precipitating student unrest?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I will consider the suggestion and statement. I regret the hon. member did not put the question yesterday in the Estimates Committee when this subject was before the committee. Appropriate officials with detailed information were available at that time to answer detailed questions.

[Mr. McCleave.]

Mr. Lundrigan: A supplementary question. Could I ask the minister what action has been taken by his department in trying to curtail such infiltrated activist movement which is precipitating this student unrest?

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the information sought by the hon. member might be included in the statement which the minister may make to the house.

Mr. Lundrigan: The minister did not mention he would make a statement; he said he would take it under advisement. We are not all members of this committee he referred to.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

EFFECT OF INTEREST RATES ON COST OF LIVING INCREASE

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Does the minister intend in the interest of consumers to have his department undertake a study of the effect of skyrocketing interest rates on the cost of living?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): This is really a question for the Department of Finance which is responsible for financial matters in the country. It could be a suitable subject for the prices and incomes commission to look at.

[Translation]

SPORTS

REQUEST FOR REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON AMATEUR SPORTS

Mr. Herb Breau (Gloucester): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the minister of National Health and Welfare.

Could he tell us when the special committee on amateur sport will table its report?

[English]

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I expect to be in a position to table the report of the sports inquiry next Monday, May 12.

THE MINISTRY

HANDLING OF MATTERS SPECIFICALLY RELATED TO INDIANS

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Can the Prime Minister advise the house whether he intends to name another Minister without Portfolio with duties specifically related to Indian affairs, beyond those carried out by the present minister, in response to the legitimate aspirations of all Indians in Canada who have now reacted to the last changes in the cabinet?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker. We are responding to those legitimate demands in a very effective way.

[Translation]

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ATLANTIC DEVELOPMENT BOARD—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Louis-Roland Comeau (South Western Nova): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a question to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion.

Does he consider the reports of the Atlantic Development Board, published recently, since the winding up of this agency, as valid as far as the formulation of the policy of its department is concerned?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is requesting an opinion from the minister. I do not think that the question such as formulated is acceptable.

[English]

AIR TRANSPORT

NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN C.P.A. AND TRANSPORTATION AND COMMUNICATIONS EMPLOYEES

Mr. Ray Perrault (Burnaby-Seymour): I have a question for the Minister of Labour. Have Canadian Pacific Airlines and the Transportation and Communications Employees Union completed their negotiations?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): I am pleased to say, Mr. Speaker, that not only have they completed their negotiations, but they arrived at a settlement which I believe was ratified yesterday. This is a very important union representing close to 800 key employees of Canadian Pacific Airlines. I congratulate both parties.

Mr. Perrault: I wonder if the minister is in a position to tell us the nature of the wage settlement.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether this is the kind of information which ought to be given. If hon. members wish to hear the information they might indicate so, but I really do not think this is the time. I believe this is the kind of information which normally is given by way of a statement, but if the minister wants to make a statement perhaps we might take thirty seconds to allow him to make it.

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, I bow to your wisdom. I do not think I should elaborate on the statement, other than to say the basic settlement is 8 per cent in the first year and 7 per cent in the following year.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the House Leader. Is there anybody attending Liberal caucus meetings these days?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

PRIVILEGE

MR. DOUGLAS (ASSINIBOIA)—INCORRECT POLITICAL DESIGNATION IN RADIO PROGRAM

Mr. A. B. Douglas (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. On a C.B.C. radio program "Sunday News Magazine" last Sunday I was referred to as a Conservative member of parliament. Mr. Speaker, I waited two or three days thinking the Conservative Party would register a protest, so now I feel it desirable to inform the house that I am still a full-fledged member of the Liberal party.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CRIMINAL CODE

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Tuesday, May 6, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 34, Mr. Allmand.

[Translation]

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, while considering the previous amendment, I dealt generally with the word "health" which is used in a vague sense in clause 18 of Bill C-150.

As motion No. 34 tends to qualify the word "health" used in respect of abortion, I am glad to congratulate the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) who laid down and defended so eloquently his approach to the problem. I was quite astonished, however, to see the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) throw cold water on his enthusiasm.

Not so long ago, the hon. member for Gatineau (Mr. Clermont) also moved an amendment. You will remind that it was beaten all hollow. I thought then that perhaps the amendment was not of a swinging type or that it did not get the approval of the new Liberal members since the hon. member for Gatineau belongs to the old guard.

At any rate, in so far as the amendment now before us is concerned, that cannot be the case, since it is moved by a Montreal lawyer, a new member of parliament, a member of the young team.

Mr. Speaker, during the last election campaign, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) took pleasure in emphasizing across the country the importance of dialogue. Since the election, he has proved his point by hiring defeated Liberal candidates; in fact, many offices have been opened. Several of those defeated candidates are meeting people across the country. Several of them have been mobilized and they travel across the country to carry on a dialogue with the public. In the meantime, in this house, the members normally elected by the people, such as the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce and the hon. member for Gatineau, are ignored. The views of those members, the views of even the Liberal members are of no interest whatever to the Prime Minister.

The proposal of the member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce is rejected in advance. The Minister of Justice made it clear yesterday, as reported on page 8399 of Hansard, and I quote:

> Despite the obvious sincerity and the wealth of argument introduced by hon. members who support this amendment ... I suggest to the members who are supporting this amendment that the words in the bill itself more adequately and conclusively convey the meaning that they themselves wish to convey than do the words that they are offering to the house.

How stupid can you be?

In Poland, where abortion is commonly practised, any reason is good. Health grounds are also recognized. In order to set women free, any reason is valid. For health reasons, women undergo abortion and a week later, those very women are engaged in road building like men.

Everyone will agree that is the way to recover quickly. It was certainly advantageous for the Polish government to legalize abortion since the legislation in that regard, passed without opposition, is profitable to the state, which is the main employer. Polish women are not healthy enough to have children, but they are in perfect health to work for the minister of highways at $13 a month.

In that socialist country where there is a guaranteed monthly salary of $11, the department of highways is so generous that it pays as much as $13 a month to women working at the construction of roads. Not healthy enough to be wives, with everything that is involved in that state of life, but in perfect health when it comes to working in plants, building highways and bridges and farming. One third of Polish farms are owned by women. In approving abortion for Polish women—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must interrupt the hon. member and beg him to come back from Poland to Canada and more especially to the amendment before us.

It seems to me the hon. member's comments of these last few minutes have nothing to do whatever with the amendment under consideration.

Mr. Godin: I thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

I shall get back to the matter since, for all kinds of reasons, people talk of abortion in that country.

I was in Poland and I wish here to thank the Canadian government for having given me the opportunity of making such a trip.

Abortion is accepted in order not to lose three months of work.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it important that Canadian women should know what the future has in store for them when this famous bill is passed or when, unfortunately, clause 18 is passed.

I wish to point out, once again, that so as not to lose three months' work, women agree to resort to abortion. Yet, the average salary in Poland was $25 per month. In that country, where a 9 cubic foot refrigerator costs $450, you can imagine how many months one has to work in order to buy one, Mr. Speaker.

Here in Canada, the government's refusal of the amendment moved by the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce proves that clause 18 of the legislation before us is a totalitarian measure.

Maternity leaves will become non-existent, for the benefit of Insurance companies which have been collecting fees for those leaves, for several years.

The Minister of Justice has said that he is against the amendment proposed by his colleague. May I go back to the amendment, of the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce which proposes to modify Bill C-150, and I quote:

—by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to endanger her life or health" on lines 4 and 5 on page 43 and by inserting the following words:

"endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health".

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Justice is against the amendment because pregnancy, childbirth, would not be considered as an illness by the Canadian government and consequently does not endanger the life of the mother.

Through his contract as an employer, the Canadian government proves that pregnancy does not endanger health because the Canadian government does not even grant a maternity leave to his "female" employees.

Generally speaking, female employees are fairly well treated. Regular work, time off for lunch, time off for coffee, weekends off, leave on important feast days, annual leave, accumulated leave, call it what you will, they benefit from them. All in all, we can say that the working conditions are fairly good. We are glad to work with secretaries in top condition and who retain their youth.

Mr. Speaker, it is clear that when a human being is well treated, he or she stays healthy longer.

Mr. Speaker, none of the secretaries of the House of Commons, 80 per cent of whom are married have maternity-leave clauses in their contract. This shows that the government recognizes that pregnancy is not a sickness but a natural event.

In the legislation now before us, why give so much importance to pregnancy? Why try and educate by pointing out inexistent dangers?

Who else but the financiers would profit from section 18, legalizing abortion?

• (3:20 p.m.)

Maternity leaves are disappearing, the birth rate is falling and, as a result, there are less family allowances to pay, and all this is profitably replaced by taxes deducted at the source. So the question of abortion should not be raised in the parliament of Canada. Everything should be done to help the married woman to play her role in our society. It is well known that childless married couples not only are less costly to the state, but they pay more taxes as well.

Collecting taxes is important, but to make investments is a necessity. And for the survival of the country, the Canadian government should first take into consideration the opinion of the 70,000 Canadian women who expressed their views to the right hon. Prime Minister a few days ago.

It is obvious that the proposed amendment tries to clear things up and I hope that the government will take the opportunity to clarify this ambiguity and, hence, will prove that the participation of the people, the dialogue recommended by the head of the government not so long ago on the hustings was not a promise made in jest.

Mr. Speaker: Is the house ready for the question?

[English]

The question is on motion No. 34, (Mr. Allmand) which reads as follows:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or would be likely to endanger her life or health" on lines 4 and 5 on page 43 and by inserting the following words:

"endanger her life or seriously and directly impair her health".

Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion? All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it. I declare the motion lost on division.

Motion No. 34 (Mr. Allmand) negatived.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford), on behalf of Mr. Rodrigue, moves the motion No. 35.

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or health" on line 5 on page 43.

Mr. Speaker: Does the house agree to adopt the said motion?

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, because of the absence of the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue), who has just got visitors in good health in his office, I would like to sponsor this motion.

Amendment No. 35 aims to delete from section 18 of Bill C-150 the words: "or health".

This would only mean deleting two words but would change the whole meaning of the bill and would be in line with the principles we have already put forward in this house.

In the course of my remarks, Mr. Speaker, I shall try to confine myself to the subject of health. Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, that you look the picture of health today. Generally, a healthy person has a ready smile. We hope that good health will long keep you smiling in this house.

Mr. Speaker, we want to speak about health. Health is not easy to define. What is health? Where does it start, where does it end?

It is a subject which, according to medical books, does not require long developments, since health can be defined as the absence of illness.

It is the absence of all forms of illness, because often even a healthy man is a sick one who does not realize he is sick.

The present bill provides that for health reasons abortion may be allowed. Well, the word "health" has not been defined. We have not been told, clearly what illnesses pregnant women could contract due to pregnancy.

We have not been given in the bill what health reasons a doctor or an abortion committee could invoke to carry out an abortion. That has not been defined.

Books on medicine are all wrong when they deal with health, because it is a difficult subject to define.

In the Quillet dictionary, page 5175, health is defined as a state of a living being where all organs perform their functions freely.

[Mr. Speaker.]

In the Larousse Dictionary, at page 586, almost the same definition of health appears; it is the state of a person whose body functions well.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is not easy to define health, unless we say that it is an absence of illness.

In the text of the bill, we are not told which are the illnesses that abortion could cure.

On the other hand, while studying medical books, we find that the illnesses pregnancy may bring about in a woman cannot be stated. However, some illnesses that pregnancy can correct in certain cases are specified.

I do not intend here to mention all the medical experiments of the past which have shown that some women who had been suffering until then of various illnesses had been cured for ever on the occasion of their pregnancy.

Personally, I have known a lady who had always worn glasses until her marriage. The moment she was pregnant, the doctor told her: as soon as you have your first child, you will no longer need glasses. Why? Because pregnancy brings maturity to a woman and involves unique biological, psychological and physical consequences.

Now, in certain cases, pregnancy corrects illnesses that otherwise a woman could not get rid of.

Since no such reference is made in the wording of the legislation, Mr. Speaker, we cannot accept minor ailments as diseases. A person might have an indisposition without necessarily being ill. One may feel indisposed one day, have a headache. Those are discomforts—not diseases. The wording of the legislation does not clearly specify what is health, was is illness, what is discomfort.

So because of everything we are told about health, because it is vaguely defined or even not at all, women will be able to claim they suffer minor ailments and still get an abortion.

And here, I refer to a doctor's testimony, that of Dr. Marcel Boivin, who says about such discomforts, and I quote:

In the name of such subjectivism, must the doctor or all professionals concerned readily comply with their patients' requests who are in a state of stress, because this is actually the case in point. Are doctors usually ready more or less to prescribed penicillin to every patient who asks for it?—

• (3:30 p.m.)

Does a physician give penicillin to any woman as soon as she feels unwell? Is morphine given to any patient who asks for it? Are X-rays, laboratory tests or hospitalization recommended for no reason at all?

If it is therapeutic to comply with a request or a wish, to yield to feelings of freedom or immediate compassion for anything related to medicine, we only have to rationalize all our sympathy and compassion, to cry with depressed persons, to be frightened with those suffering from phobia, anxiety or obsession and to give them at any time the therapeutic care they ask.

I therefore suggest that medicine should be really, adequately and efficiently organized to take care of all underlying conflicts of those who believe that an abortion is essential.

A physician has said in the logical way of scientists:

It seems that medical science has always tended to prevent rather than to cure. There may be circumstances when abortion appears necessary, but all things being considered, we realize it is a desperate solution. I do not think medicine should endorse despair, but by basing its actions on symptoms, incite a re-organization of the patient's global energies. Who, in his medical or personal conscience, has not often considered abortion as a therapeutic solution but has finally found other possibilities? The function of a physician has never been to deny pain or suffering, or to prevent death, but rather to help and release recuperative powers, to stimulate curative powers on the physical, psychological and mental planes.

Mr. Speaker, this is a proof that we cannot accept at first hand, the definition of health given in this bill and that it has been impossible for the Minister of Justice and even for physicians to say what is meant by health, when it starts and where it ends.

And when, for instance, the employees of the various health departments are sworn in, before serving in various health services, here are the words they utter about health:

Faced with the abortion problem, employees in health services turn more and more to the code of ethics which says, among other things:

Any health services employee must consider abortion as something harmful biologically, medically, psychologically and sociologically. The principles of socialist humanism and of medical knowledge require that human life be respected from its very beginning. Consequently, the health services employee should strive to consider the human privilege of motherhood as of greater value than the privilege of abortion. As a health services employee, it is his duty, in each individual case, to seek the professional help which is likely to be to the best advantage of the woman and of the family. At the same time, he must, because of his profession, work towards making useless, through responsible parenthood, such extreme measures as abortion.

That is the code of ethics by which health services employees must abide, whatever the services they are called upon to give to the sick.

Prevention more than cure is the object of medicine. If we accept abortion on grounds of health, it would mean that we are putting aside the principles of medicine, that we are saying that physicians are not sufficiently skilled to cure the discomforts of pregnancy. I do not say the ills of pregnancy because pregnancy is not an illness.

There are no ilnesses either that can justify abortion during pregnancy. To accept abortion for reasons of health is to deny the beneficial effects of medical science, to deny medical science, to deny also that there is now on the market good and efficient medicine to cure various indispositions and, if need be, real illnesses.

It is to deny also that our hospitals have at present to provide medical care to sick people and pregnant women, when the removal of the foetus is decided upon for reasons of health. To do that is to want to kill instead of curing. To want to kill instead of caring for. To want to kill instead of providing treatment.

For those reasons, Mr. Speaker, we cannot accept that because the words "or health" are not defined in the Criminal Code, abortion should be permitted. I wish the provincial governments, that are now against the abortion legislation, could pass a law in order to define health and prevent the Criminal Code from being used in such cases as a means to procure an abortion.

Mr. Speaker, we do not accept abortion for reasons of health. First, because it is an act of folly, it is pure nonsense and it runs counter to real medical science. It means admitting a pregnant woman is right by accepting to procure her miscarriage instead of giving her the proper care, so that the pregnancy may be completed in due time.

Unfortunately, in the Liberal party, even outside that party, no doctor has given clear, definite and precise grounds as to health or illness that could be used for resorting to abortion.

There was but one instance in the past, which was the most frequent one, where abortion had to be automatically performed: in the case of German measles. But nowadays, German measles can be very effectively cured, because medical science has developed efficient vaccines against it. Besides, we have no more cases, no other medical indications according to which a doctor can, today, practice an abortion for true reasons of health.

Therefore, we think that this amendment, notwithstanding what the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) says or what is said by the government members, is most serious because we want to remove from the Criminal Code reasons that cannot be defined, diseases that are not specified, discomforts even that could be put forward in order to get an abortion, though it would be a matter of discomfort and not a disease.

Because abortion is a very important subject and because people tend to use spurious reasons to save the mother's health such futile or commonplace reasons seem unacceptable to us.

Mr. Speaker, I would still like to mention testimonies of physicians who have studied all aspects of medicine, they are to be found on page 6200 of the book "Biologie et médecine" which deals with what is normal, and statistically normal. I quote:

In very general terms, it can be said that the majority of human beings for most of their lives, are not prey to conscious sufferings. This state is subjectively that of good health.

And a little further:

One day, in Geneva, some young women asked surgeons whom they trusted to remove unsightly tumours from the anterior part of their necks; these tumours were goiters.

First stage: goiters suddenly become a pathological phenomenon. It did not happen until the middle of the XIXth century, in an enlightened Western society, because these goiters, in fact, were undesirable only from an esthetic point of view.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Formerly, a person with a goiter was said to be ill, but the medical science says it is nothing but an esthetic flaw. I resume the quotation:

Third phase: a surgeon is sure enough of his technique to allow himself to operate goiters.

Today, surgeons have confidence in themselves, and statistics prove that goiters can be operated on with good results. What used to be considered as an incurable disease can now be cured by a minor operation.

Third phase: The patients present a special pathological picture, resembling certain states of cretinism with cutaneous infiltrations, the nature of which was unknown.

I could give other examples of illnesses which used to be incurable but which to-day, thanks to medical science, have become curable.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

Wanting to kill a foetus because a pregnant woman believes she is ill, is contrary to medical knowledge, medical science.

Further on under the title Standards and Time in the same book, one reads, and I quote:

A normal man is indeed an infant, then a child, an adolescent, an adult and an old man.

Still, it must be recognized that certain organic crises such as puberty or menopause, certain periods such as pregnancy, although they must be considered as physiological and normal—

No longer, in this day and age, as illnesses but as discomforts.

But, Mr. Speaker, this amendment deals with "health",—it was mentioned earlier that certain illnesses were considered as discomforts—and we cannot accept to kill a foetus on the basis of temporary discomfort.

For instance, if a woman at the beginning of her pregnancy had discomfort, she might have applied for an abortion pretending that she was sick. And, because pregnancy is something natural, normal, after two or three months, everything is back to normal. The discomfort disappears but not the illness, as she was not sick; the discomfort disappears and from then on she begins to love her child and afterwards the idea of an abortion gets off her mind.

But, Mr. Speaker, when we look at this bill we find that it is not based on any scientific or moral principle. It is not based on any biological or scientific fact. On what is it based then? On the protection, not of medical skills, but on the fact that some doctors, with this bill, will have a free hand and will have no concern because they will be protected by the Criminal Code. They will be able to allow abortion on request, not on the basis of sickness, but of discomfort.

Mr. Speaker, that is why these proposed amendments are absolutely in order, logical, and should be accepted by the minister.

If for any discomfort the foetus should be eliminated for such trifling reasons, I would not want to have on my shoulders or on those of future generations, the heavy responsibility of a stupid act, of an abominable killing which, for the sake of "health"—which is not defined—will lead to the elimination of foetuses in this country. To reduce the population and even be finally threatened with extermination, as is now the case in Japan where the number of abortions exceeds that of births, is a terrible thing. Within ten years, the Japanese race will be altogether exterminated. Why? Because any disease, which actually is not a disease but a minor ailment justifies an abortion.

That is why this amendment is most serious, because we do not want to allow abortion on request for mere reasons of health.

The government members should speak on this bill, because they are concerned with the same people we are concerned with, and instead of sitting there, sucking their thumb, as the Liberal party whip (Mr. Pilon) does, they should now and then give their opinion on such an important amendment.

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) has absolutely no idea of the government's position, simple and clear as it is.

The government wishes to leave the practice of medicine to the doctors. The government wants them to look after the health of Canadian citizens. The government believes that this health will be in better hands than in those of our Créditiste friends. After all, it is rather surprising that these would-be defenders of life are willing to wait until a woman is at the point of death before a medical committee can decide whether or not a therapeutic abortion is necessary.

I wanted to give in a few words the position of the government and the reasons why this amendment is unacceptable to the government.

Mr. Romuald Rodrigue (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, I moved this amendment to make it clear that it is the mother's life that will be endangered, and not only her health, if therapeutic abortion is not performed.

Paragraph 18 (4) (c) of Bill C-150 reads as follows:

—has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health.

This paragraph may be interpreted in various ways, and have quite a wide scope according to the person interpreting it.

Some people think, it seems to me, that the new legislation on abortion will only legalize abortion on serious grounds, namely to save the mother's life. Even if that is seldom necessary, it is generally admitted that abortion made on such grounds is already legal. The changes proposed in the bill opens the door much wider.

Bill C-150 proposes to legalize abortion to safeguard health. The decision on such a matter is left to the discretion of a small abortion committee. In fact, the act will allow two medical practitioners to authorize abortions on grounds of moral, physical or mental health.

During a television program, on December 27 last, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) said that the abortion committees would lay down the law. He stated that the word "health" would not be interpreted by courts of justice, but by every therapeutic abortion committee. In other words, the decision of those committees lies beyond the scope of the legislation and could have a different meaning according to the members.

In Colorado, in California and elsewhere, the result of legislation similar to the one which is proposed to us has been to increase the number of abortions. Up to 90 per cent of abortions performed in hospitals are made on so-called "mental health" grounds, a term which is used abusively to cover anything.

If there are more abortions in hospitals this does not mean that the number of criminal abortions has decreased

In Great Britain, for instance, under a liberalized legislation, the rate of deaths due to criminal abortions is higher than in Canada.

In 1966, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported only nine deaths due to criminal abortions in Canada, whilst in a six-month period, sixteen were reported in England. This amounts to 32 deaths a year.

Then what is the reason which could justify the change? To clarify the present legislation? In fact, it is not through the use of words which we are unable to define that we will reach that goal.

Could it be to meet an urgent medical need? Doctors recognize themselves that such need does not exist and our decreasing maternity death rate proves it. Today, it stands at only 3 deaths on 10,000 living births, which is over ten times less than the 1940 rate.

On February 7, 1968, Dr. FitzGibbon stated to the Committee on health, welfare and social affairs the following, and I quote:

As it has been said on several occasions during the audience of the above mentioned case, there is no sound medical reason to interrupt a pregnancy. Abortion requests addressed to doctors are almost invariably of a social nature—

Could the proposed amendments to the law be a concession granted to a small pressure group of doctors who want to free themselves from all legal restriction?

The main justification put forward is that the bill will clarify the existing law on abortion. The spuriousness of this claim may be demonstrated thanks to the evidence gathered by the parliamentary committee on health, welfare and social affairs.

Abortion, we are told, should be legalized for "health" reasons, but what does the word "health" mean? In the Minutes of the Proceedings of the said committee, it is obvious that there was no consensus on the significance of that word. This ambiguous term can be taken in its broad or narrow meaning. According to an Ottawa doctor, "health" may even mean "happiness". How can a word that nobody can define clearly help clarify the law?

In reading the evidence given to the Standing committee on health, welfare and social affairs, we found that generally speaking, everybody agrees that abortion is an attack on human life. Out of the 26 doctors who have appeared before the committee, only one has tried to deny this. Will the broadening of the law on abortion increases the necessary respect for a human life or will it lessen it?

It is time that we should get down to the facts concerning the amendments to the abortion law as proposed in Bill C-150.

Is the government really anxious to protect the life and health of women? If so, where is the evidence that the proposed changes will achieve this goal?

Never was the health of Canadian women as well protected as it is today. At the present time Canada has one of the lowest mother death rate in the world.

Can we really believe that the changes as proposed in paragraph (c) of the bill will bring still greater improvements?

During this debate on abortion, there was nothing to show that such improvements would take place. It is somewhat surprising that nobody up to now has thought of asking that obvious question. It is significant also that no doctor has tried to prove that some social advantage would be forthcoming.

In Japan, as in many other countries, abortion is legal and is granted on request, even for sanitary reasons, according to a broad interpretation of the facts. Now, according to U.N.O. statistics, the death rate among mothers in Japan is three times as high as in Canada.

In Yugoslavia, with a similar legislation, the mother death rate is four times as high as ours.

[Mr. Rodrigue.]

How are we then to believe that permissive abortion laws promote health?

• (3:50 p.m.)

Let us keep in mind also the tremendous medical progress achieved over the last ten years. The maternal mortality rate has decreased from 10 to 1 in a single generation.

Today, there are less medical indications than ever before. Medical authorities accept that fact and statistics prove it. So it is ironical to claim that the amendments to the abortion legislation proposed in the bill now before us reflect the needs of modern society.

On the matter of saving the mother's life, I should like to quote part of a document prepared by the Medical Council of Laval Hospital, and I quote:

> An abortion performed because the mother's life is endangered, may be considered not as euthanasia, but as a case of self-defence.
>
> But before an act can be considered to be in self-defence, there must be, on the one hand, some proportion between the defensive act and the aggression and, on the other hand, the defensive act must also be the only possible means of protection.
>
> Now, according to experts, cases where the foetus must be killed in order to save the mother's life are extremely rare.
>
> Dr. René Simard, director of obstetrics at Laval University, states that he has never seen any.

For his part, Dr. Roy J. Hefferman, a famed American gynaecologist, states:

> To perform a therapeutic abortion, is either to overlook modern methods of treating pregnancy complications or to refuse to take the time required to apply them.
>
> Moreover, the inefficiency of the therapeutic abortion is proved by—
> —several studies.
> Considering the scarcity of the cases where therapeutic abortion is necessary to save the life of the mother, we can ask ourselves if legislation to allow it is justified. Thus, if the legislator wants, through legislation, to rule on those extremely uncommon cases, he should include in that legislation some very strict guide lines similar to those advocated by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists.

Through the ages, several persons have tried on many occasions to define the word "health". Health cannot be defined by a legal term and this is the reason why I have proposed this amendment striking out the words "or health", in order to clarify paragraph (c) in subsection (4) of clause 18, in this bill amending section 237 of the Criminal Code.

In order to make more clear the views of certain physicians, I would also like to quote Dr. Whyte:

> I am not aware of the World Health Organization's definition. That is a very hard word to define, I agree; you can define it as meaning happiness if you like. But I would certainly say that in my opinion the words "physical and/or mental health" would cover what normally we have in mind.
> It is therefore commonly recognized that the word "health" as used in the bill concerned will have the necessary extension to encompass physical and psychic health and the socio-economic grounds which certain persons of means could include under the term "psychiatric indication".

Mr. C. A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, just a few comments on the remarks made by the hon. member for Louis-Hébert (Mr. Cantin) because quite frankly I had decided, not to speak on this amendment. But in view of the comments of the hon. member for Louis-Hébert, I feel compelled to challenge his statement.

Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for Louis-Hébert says we do not know what we are talking about, I simply want to tell him that, on the contrary, we have understood the bill full well for having read it line by line, and it is because we have understood it that we move amendments like this one.

The hon. member for Louis-Hébert says that the government wants to leave it up to doctors to settle abortion matters. This is all very well and so do we, but what kind of doctors, that is a different story, and what kind of problems is another one too.

We ask for a better definition of those very aspects in amendments such as No. 13, for instance, which seeks to remove any mention of the health of the mother, because we are in favour of a full protection of the life of the mother, but—I repeat as I did yesterday—we reject a measure that allows abortion in cases when pregnancy "would be likely to endanger her health".

We are also opposed to such expressions in the statutes. Considering that in the medical profession as in any other there are profiteers, it is easy to imagine that it will always be possible to find two doctors to say that the life of the mother or the unmarried girl "would likely be" endangered.

For those particular reasons, we want to remove this question of "health" from the bill, because while the government insists on being vague regarding the life of the mother, we wanted to replace "likely" by "indirectly" in danger. Nobody can blame us for requesting the clarification of a text so obscure and so permissive on the matter of abortion.

Instead of debating the subject in direct relation with abortion, it would have been more profitable to pass a law against abortion in order to protect the health of the mother, because I think a pregnant woman enjoys the best of health, and the fact that she is pregnant is sufficient proof. I think it is a natural state for her; it would be abnormal to reject maternity. A pregnant woman is one that is living a full life.

I do not see why we should be trying to pass legislation today in order to make abortion easier, when we should be legislating abortion out of existence, as far as reasons of health are concerned. It appears as if we were striving for the past few months, and especially since the coming to power of the new government, to adopt laws against nature. We shall soon have to change direction, in order to pass legislative measures aimed at protecting not only pregnant women but society as a whole, and to stop legalizing this or that and permitting everything in the end.

Mr. Speaker, my only purpose in rising was to warn the house that I shall vote in favour of this amendment, which is very sensible, because it states exactly what is expected of the bill, and that is full protection for the life of the mother. By protecting the life of the mother, we oppose life to life.

But, we have no right to sacrifice a life on grounds of "probable health". It is useless to discuss the question of saving two lives; one must choose the lesser of two evils. Two lives are threatened at a given moment, that of the mother and that of the child. Which one should be saved? We say that of the mother. That is our intention. But if the choice is between the health and happiness of one person and the life of the other, we do not have the right to sacrifice life for some small happiness or some uncertain health.

And when we are told that we did not understand anything, I think that there are some in this house who do not want to understand, who do not want to be logical, not only on a legislative point of view but on a rational point of view. I think that everybody will admit it.

It was even said in this house that if such a woman—and examples were given—had not been aborted, she would not be dead. This is perhaps true. But, as for me, I know by experience that if a certain woman, a close relation of mine, had not been aborted she would not be dead. But, here again, I do not blame those who did it. The doctors acted according to their conscience.

• (4:00 p.m.)

But, all this means it is relative. I want to stop quoting these factual examples suggested by fatherly, motherly or brotherly love. It is only normal. But, let us stop all these comparisons because it would never end. We have cases where if nature had been left to take its course, it would have accomplished its work marvelously well. But nature was violated, was acted against, and death occurred.

I think that there is still the great doctor, as an old doctor in my area used to say. The great doctor is still good old nature.

Let us stop acting against nature in this parliament. Since this government came to power, the only pieces of legislation I have seen were against nature. Are we finally going to act like men and stop reversing the natural processes?

Mr. Speaker, I want to make it clear that we must restrict ourselves to the matter being discussed, and deal with equations rather than with impressions. Let us discuss the problem of two lives or two healths, but let us not discuss one life and one probable health. It cannot be discussed.

We simply say that when the probable health of a person is involved, that such a term should not appear in the legislation on abortion, which is a murder, which is the murder of an innocent being or the murder of another person. But that we must choose between two lives, that is fine. The middle course between two lives? There is no middle course between life and probable health. And I want to draw the attention of the house and of the members to this point. It is more serious than the members of the other side might think, and even if they play politics, that is enough, because this is the crux of the matter. And I wish the people will pay them back in their own coin.

Mr. Speaker, without being a physician, a lawyer, one can be a head of family, human and logical; we can judge, of course. Are we going to be called idiots because we are neither physicians nor lawyers?

Mr. Speaker, as someone said in a letter I received yesterday, the world, with that type of professionals, will not often go very far.

Once again I urge all the members to study this amendment, to consider it seriously; this is no joke. We must consider the health of the mother, 100 per cent. We must protect her life 100 per cent, but it is different to say that we probably should also protect her probable health, that of the pregnant woman, when the word "health" cannot even be defined. I cannot see it. Does the word "health" apply to her social relations, her sports activities or social function? It has not been defined.

That is why I feel that certain groups of doctors, that I admit, will use this act with reservations; on the other hand, others may use it for financial purposes. We will have them, just as they can be found in every other country, the world being what it is.

In England, an attempt is being made to pass legislation designed to restrain abortions, because 20 years ago mistakes were made. We are plunging head first into the same errors which were made in the old countries and which they are now trying in every way to correct.

We need not go into the details of every other country but it seem to me it is often wise to study what went on in other countries in an attempt to avoid making the same errors and to do better than they did. History should serve that purpose, amongst others.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, I ask sincerely and openly to those members who have a conscience, who are humane, who want above all the good of the Canadian people, to think of the life of the Canadian mother.

As the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Laflamme) said yesterday, we are going towards abortion on request. Canada will err in this as England did and other countries where they started with a small insignificant act. They are caught now and they are wondering how to get out that trap.

I think the best way to get out of it is not to get into it. I have full confidence in the medicine of sincere doctors. Doctors are like businessmen. In fact, they are businessmen. Some of them are honest, and some are crooked. The laws are not made for honest people. Laws must be made for crooks.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Gauthier: I have always thought so.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, the doctors will think of the health of the mother, and seriously, but there might be 50 per cent of crooks among them, who will take advantage of the flexibility which is allowed.

Even for 20 per cent, even for 15 per cent, it is necessary that restrictions be clearly mentioned in the law.

I hope that I made myself understood, and that the government members will stop shouting at us that we do not know anything about it. I think that when one has raised eight children and when one wants them in good health—our daughters and boys too—I believe that we have our word to say, and the government will realize that the Canadian people of Quebec have still a lot to say in these decisions and in these laws, these two laws against nature which are going to be voted on in a few days.

Mr. Pierre De Bané (Matane): Mr. Speaker—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. If the hon. member wants to speak he must be in his seat. I recognize the hon. member for Richmond, and possibly I will return to the hon. member.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Since my speech was meant for the members of the Ralliement créditiste, I wanted to get on the same level so as to be better understood.

• (4:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I must remind the hon. member of the rules of this house. He must speak from his seat.

[Translation]

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to delay the business of the house, but I believed I ought to speak for a few minutes in order to support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) and explained by our colleague from the Ralliement créditiste, the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau).

First, so as to set the problem in its proper perspective and emphasize the absolute necessity of this amendment, one must know its true nature. The amendment says in part, and I quote:

> That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code . . . be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or health" on line 5, on page 43.

One needs only to know what health means here. Where does it begin? Or is it possible, certainly possible, or probably possible, to lose health?

I believe that word implies many things and especially a lot of ways of thinking. In order that doctors may come to a positive and sure diagnosis, one must, know, when analyzing the word "health" as regards pregnancy, if such a pregnancy is or will be successful, as far as the mother's health is concerned.

Here again, Mr. Speaker, looking at the words "or health" in the wording of the bill before us today, such wording must determine the right of the therapeutic committee, comprised of three members, to decide whether abortion is to be performed or not so as to protect the mother's health.

Mr. Speaker, I think that to make a positive diagnosis, with sufficient certainty, and to decide whether to practice or order an abortion, doctors certainly need much instinct and knowledge, because they have told the hon. members of the committee on health, welfare and social affairs, that it is very difficult to decide whether a pregnancy is likely to undermine the health of a woman.

The bill before the house, which we want to amend by eliminating the words "or health", in terms of science and medicine and according to the doctors who have come before the committee, is very difficult to understand and even more so to explain.

This is a very serious question, to decide whether prejudice should be caused to a living being, be it a foetus or even a child, one or two weeks before term. I think it is very important to know where we are going. That is the substance of what many doctors or specialists told the committee on that subject.

Neither the gynecologists nor the specialists in any field could come up with a certain and definite conclusion.

First of all, regarding moral health, it was often mentioned by previous speakers that there can be no psychological reason for prescribing a therapeutic abortion.

It was also mentioned times after times that a nervous breakdown or other psychological troubles cannot be cured by an abortion. It is the abortion itself which causes theses troubles and not the pregnancy.

We cannot kill a child in his mother's womb because she suffers from psychological problems.

Why should innocents pay for others' diseases? If this bill is passed as it is now, if it is not amended, psychological grounds will often be invented out of whole cloth to justify the decision or, perhaps, a divided decision of the medical practitioners making up the psychiatric committee.

All hon. members know that, but only those of the Ralliement créditiste dare to say it, and even claim it. Members of the government, of the Liberal party, why have you not express your views? I apologize, one or perhaps three or four out of a large number did so. It would have been easier to circumscribe the problem had some of you stated what they think of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, the passing of the bill as it is means that if a mother gives birth to a child, she always suffer from psychological troubles from the very beginning of her pregnancy.

As I said earlier, this is as if we were saying that the infant must be killed as soon as he is born, because many people suffer from psychological troubles.

Now, as far as physical health is concerned, how many times does this situation occur? I have been told that the ratio of 1 to 10,000 was close to the truth. I do not have on hand that doctor's statement, but I know he quoted these figures before the committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

When the pregnant mother catches some disease, the doctor ordinarily prescribes an immediate treatment to neutralize it, so that the mother can have a normal delivery.

Mr. Speaker, owing to the great advance in the field of medical science, the emergency cases where it is necessary to make a decision as to the life of the child are becoming less and less frequent.

• (4:20 p.m.)

It is therefore useless to include in this bill the words "or health". How many times have you seen a mother suffer from any illness after a childbirth? That happens very seldom and I have explained why. I firmly believe, for those are my convictions and my principles, that there are only the most urgent reasons—and they are very few and far between—that can justify be it even a discussion on a possible abortion.

I don't like the words "or", "if", "perhaps or likely". I would like to feel myself on firmer ground. That is why I favour the amendment in order to remove the words "or health".

In so doing, we would prevent innumerable abuses and protect medical practitioners. That is very important, because if a committee of doctors decides to prescribe a therapeutic abortion and a patient makes up her mind to institute proceedings against the doctors, because she suddenly felt remorse, or for any other reason, she will damage the reputation of the gynaecologists, of the specialists of this hospital, of the therapeutic Committee or even the reputation of the hospital itself.

Mr. Speaker, if the hon. members want to participate in the debate, I invite specially my friends,—I have several among the Liberal members,—in order to see if any Liberal members in this house know exactly the importance and the seriousness of the bill under consideration. That would make me very happy.

For all these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I am in favour of deleting in clause 18 of Bill C-150, the words "or health".

Mr. Pierre De Bané (Matane): Mr. Speaker, I should like first of all to point out on the occasion of that nth amendment introduced by my colleague from the Ralliement créditiste that our parliamentary institutions, through the Créditiste's fault, is becoming a laughing-stock.

Mr. Speaker, when I see people who, for the sake of their conscience, their moral principles, their scruples, in the name of democracy, have been paralysing the business of this house for 19 days—

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: I believe that the hon. member is not speaking to the amendment.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I think it is only fair to the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) that the Chair at least hear his opening remarks. As I have explained to other hon. members of the house, the Chair has tried to be as generous as possible in applying the rules of relevancy, sometimes possibly too generous in the case of some hon. members.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would say that we have been particularly generous in terms of the Ralliement Creditiste. I think it is only fair that we hear the hon. member for Matane for a while and I hope that eventually, or may I say very quickly, he will get to the amendment itself.

Mr. De Bané: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: I thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was saying that for 19 days now, the Ralliement créditiste has brought the work of this house to a standstill with innumerable amendments, including this one, in order to paralyze this democratic institution.

You will undoubtedly recall that this bill, which is brought again without too many changes before the house today, has already undergone the test of an election. The Ralliement créditiste then concentrated all its forces and the people backed up the government.

Mr. Beaudoin: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Beaudoin: Mr. Speaker, I should like to point out to the hon. member that those amendments have been accepted by the Speaker before they were discussed. Therefore they were in order.

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, the Ralliement créditiste is entitled to its opinion and I respect it, but what I do not accept is that a minority try to impose their opinion to a majority, and to a majority of people from the Province of Quebec.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. De Bané: In the same way, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Gauthier: What have you done since you have been in office?

Mr. De Bané: —Clam up and let me finish!

In the same way, Mr. Speaker, that I respect their opinion and that they are entitled to it as well as to their conscience and morals, I say, however, that a minority has no right to impose its way of thinking to the majority.

Mr. Speaker, all kinds of bugaboos are thrown at us, when it should be realized that the proposed amendment to delete the term "health" is a ridiculous argument, because the term is found in all laws on abortion, in all Western countries, and mostly in Latin America where 99 per cent of the population is Catholic.

I would go even further, Mr. Speaker. The newspaper Le Droit which is owned by the Oblate Fathers, has said that it was shameful to see people—

An hon. Member: It was not an Oblate Father who said that.

Mr. De Bané: —use religion to serve political ends.

You no doubt recall that the Governor General in the Speech from the Throne at the beginning of the year said that Canadians no longer had any confidence in their parliament.

Mr. Speaker, it is through demonstrations of this kind that a group, in the name of democracy—which respects the views of all—tries to paralyse this democratic institution. Mr. Speaker, it is through such manoeuvres that we shall destroy our institution.

I wish to blame the government for not having forced upon us rule 16A as amended of the standing orders because of fossils and demagogues.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to say once again that the members of the Ralliement créditiste are entitled to their opinions which I respect, but they cannot impose their views on the majority.

An hon. Member: Cut if off, then.

Mr. De Bané: This is precisely what I am saying. I regret that the government did not impose it. But what the members of the Ralliement créditiste are trying to do is to paralyze the government and then they will tour the province of Quebec and arouse the passions by what I would term disgusting means in order to get re-elected. Those are the methods they resort to.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I wonder if the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre is rising for the same purpose as I am.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Very likely, Mr. Speaker. I am wondering what the remarks of the hon. member have to do with the amendment before the house.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That is exactly the reason I was rising myself. I do remind the hon. member for Matane that during the past few days the Chair has tried as faithfully as possible, yet as fairly as possible, to administer the rules of relevancy. They, of course, apply to both sides of the house and I would invite him at this stage to restrict his remarks to the amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The point I wanted to make was of course that, since it would be ridiculous and untimely to take part in the discussion on every amendment, I wished to express my views on the whole of them, and, in particular, at the end of my remarks, if I am permitted, I wish to comment on this specific health issue.

I was trying to say, Mr. Speaker, that, for one of the few times in the history of our country, we are studying a bill which went through the test of an election and which, because of the Ralliement créditiste in particular, has become a controversial issue in the province of Quebec.

• (4:30 p.m.)

Abortion was the main topic in my constituency during the whole election campaign. It was the same thing elsewhere.

Some people voted for the Créditistes, others voted for the Conservatives, some voted for N.D.P., and the majority voted for. the government.

[English]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, you and I seem to be rising together a few times. I wonder if the hon. member should not be asked to relate his remarks to the amendment before the house.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I would point out to the hon. member that the rules of relevancy restrict debate at this point to the specific amendment which is before the house which deals with the deletion from clause 18 of the words "or health". At this point, speeches must be confined to this specific amendment. I would suggest to the hon. member that possibly some of the remarks he is anxious to make now—I do not want to interfere with his right to make these remarks—might be made on third reading. If the Chair is to apply the rules of relevancy, they have to be applied to each hon. member. I think it is in the interest of our procedure that we should restrict our remarks as much as possible to the amendment.

Mr. De Bané: I would respectfully submit, Mr. Speaker, that in my remarks I might deal not only with the amendment but with the speeches which have been made by members of the Ralliement Créditiste on that amendment. They have supported the amendment with arguments which I would like to rebut, if that is in order.

[Translation]

What I mean, Mr. Speaker, is this: I am of course unable to speak on each of the 38 amendments. We are now dealing with health, on which I spoke specifically earlier in the day—and I say this for the member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) who was not in the house when the hon. members of the Ralliement créditiste spoke and who did not hear the arguments they used to justify their own amendment. I would like, at this point, to speak on this sensitive matter.

As I was saying, our debates here have become irrelevant, because, as the Speech from the Throne indicated at the beginning of the year, the people have nearly lost confidence in an institution paralyzed by a minority. A minority is tyrannizing us.

Mr. Gauthier: Hold a referendum, then.

Mr. De Bané: With regard to the referendum, that is precisely what you had in the province of Quebec at the time of the last elections. What did you talk about if not of homosexuality and abortion?

With regard to health, Mr. Speaker, let us put things back in their right perspective. To do so, with regard to abortions for reasons of health, those who would speak in the name of their conscience should be reminded that never in the history of Canada has a doctor ever been prosecuted for having performed a therapeutic abortion. If the members of the Ralliement créditiste had been well informed before turning to demagoguery, they would have known that if a topic is that important, it is high time it should be regulated. Go around the hospitals in the province of Quebec and you will see that therapeutic abortions are performed there. But no, you are not interested in that; what you want is demagoguery, you want to paralyze a democratic institution.

I say, therefore, Mr. Speaker, to those who do not have the time to study comparative law and to see what goes on in the Western world, that we are one of the last countries in that world to adopt an act on abortion. Contrary to the recommendations made to Parliament by the Canadian Medical and Bar Association to the effect that the government should accept therapeutic abortions for various reasons, we have one of the most strict acts of all.

But once again, that is not the point I want to make. I am not interested in those people who would deliberately paralyze a democratic institution and then go beg for votes in the province of Quebec, through false representations and demagoguery.

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): I am most pleased to contribute in a positive way to the discussion on this amendment, moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue), amendment to delete from the bill the words: "or health".

I would like to ask the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) not to run away, to stick to his seat. It is the first time we see him since the beginning of this session. I should like him to have at least the courage of his convictions, and to remain here.

Mr. Speaker—

Mr. De Bané: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. De Bané: On a point of order—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: —when the hon. member for Beauce—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: —moves his amendment—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member resume his seat? That is not a point of order. I would make the observation again to hon. members that points of order and questions of privilege are important parts of our procedure. If hon. members use them in an exchange with each other, that only serves to diminish their importance. I would caution against this kind of exchange which has occurred before. If the hon. member has a point of order and would cite the relevant Standing Order which pertains to his point of order, I would be pleased to hear it.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

I think that in the course of his remarks the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané), who was often interrupted, was telling a few home truths to the members of the Ralliement créditiste, and—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Such truths were not taken into account—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the hon. member rising on a point of order or a question of privilege?

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: I rise on a point of order.

The members of the Ralliement créditiste have constantly interrupted the hon. member for Matane while he was making his speech, which shows a lack of decorum at this stage of the debate, and I would have this to tell them: For about fifteen days, I have seen them in the house wearing a white beret, and I think this shows a total lack of decorum. Let them take off their white berets.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, after these remarks,—

Mr. C. A. Gauthier (Roberval): Stupid—

Mr. Fortin: After these remarks—which the member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) rightly said were stupid, to respect the decorum of the same member—I would like to come back to the proposed amendment.

I appreciated the remark of the hon. member for Matane when he told us that the Ralliement créditiste is wasting the time of the house, that the Ralliement créditiste is boycotting or filibustering the debates. I will tell him that when he makes such statements, he is entirely wrong. What we have been doing, for over fifteen days, or nearly nineteen days,—time is not important in this house, what counts, Mr. Speaker, is the legislation we pass and not the stupid speeches that can be made by the hon. member for Matane.

It will take all the time required, but when we are through, the Canadian people will recognize that the Ralliement créditiste has the courage of its convictions, that it is faithful to its constituents, and that it has made its best sincerely and honestly—and not paid to be here doing nothing, like the member for Laurier (Mr. Leblanc)—to improve the legislation so that it may meet the needs of the Canadian people.

Mr. Speaker, I think this was the first speech made by that member since he came to the house, and he had to launch his political career with such an irrelevant speech.

Mr. Speaker, I greatly appreciate your leniency. The hon. member for Beauce moved an amendment to delete the expression "or health", an expression which can also be found in the bill, in the clause concerning abortion, a clause which was recommended by the very member for Matane, who used to be the secretary to the Prime Minister when he was Minister of Justice.

• (4:40 p.m.)

Let him stand up and tell us what his motives were. He does not have the courage of his beliefs, all he can do is rail against the others.

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, if it is to raise a point of order as foolish as the others, I have a right to my 20 minutes and I intend to use them.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, my hon. colleague has asked me to get up and answer a statement he just made—

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, he is wasting my time. I have much more serious things to say.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member can only rise on a point of order, not on the invitation of the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin). Is the hon. member rising on a point of order?

Mr. De Bané: It was on his invitation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I point out to the hon. member that simply because the hon. member for Lotbinière invites him to make remarks, that does not give him the right to make those remarks.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How can the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané), know the standing orders when he has never read them and is never here.

So the hon. member for Beauce—I will be able to make my speech if they stop interrupting—proposes to delete the words "or health" from the clause on abortion.

Mr. Speaker, I shall start all over again and I hope that will not be counted on my time. So the hon. member for Beauce wants to delete the words "or health". The bill before us says:

—would or would be likely to endanger her life or health—

We should then ask ourselves sincerely, and not with preconceived and narrow-minded ideas, as some hon. members opposite can show, but ask ourselves sincerely and seriously—if the hon. member for Matane could remain in his seat, Mr. Speaker, we might have a chance to complete his education—if the fact of being pregnant for a woman can endanger her health.

As for the first part, "would endanger her life", I am inclined to believe that in certain border-line cases, this can happen. This is why, when I made my first speech in this house on the omnibus bill—that was some time ago, and the members opposite still have not understood anything—I stated that I would perhaps be in favour of a therapeutic operation to terminate a pregnancy in certain border-line cases, provided it was a proven fact that the woman's life was seriously and directly in danger.

Now, in the same bill, even if I wanted to vote in favour of abortion in the case where the life of the mother would be in danger and support those provisions, I cannot do so for the very simple reason that, at the same time, the expression "would endanger her health" would be included.

What is meant by "health" and "would endanger her health"? The other day, the Minister of Justice gave his own definition of the word "health". He said: We do not know the exact meaning of "health". Besides, the hon. member for Portneuf (Mr. Godin) made that point very clear.

They cannot give a definition. That is why the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Justice, the hon. member for Louis-Hébert (Mr. Cantin) could not say more than a sentence in reply to the suggestion, because he does not know either what he is talking about.

Mr. Speaker, before adopting or rejecting the amendment, I think we must ask the following question—before I go any further I would ask the whip of the Liberal party to count his members, because there are less and less Liberals in the house.

Mr. Boulanger: Stop those platitudes!

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, the member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) wastes his time saying that we utter platitudes! Let him stop being so dull and still in his seat. Let him rise and speak! That would be interesting.

As for me, Mr. Speaker, in view of the many questions that we can rightly ask ourselves concerning the liberalization of homosexuality—when I see Liberal members, the word "homosexuality" comes to my mind, Mr. Speaker—but I mean the liberalization of abortion, in view of the number of questions we are entitled to ask ourselves as to the definition of the word "health", if we take into account all the evidence we can find in libraries, the briefs which were submitted by the Medical Association, etc., and the consultations we had in our respective committees, and this, Mr. Speaker, throughout Quebec and Canada, one realizes that it is not a minority which is imposing its views to the majority. I would rather say it is a majority government which wants to impose its views to a majority of Canadians which are against the bill. Let us not reverse the roles, Mr. Speaker, let us be honest and recognize facts.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Fortin: In support of what I say I will add this: a brief from the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards contains a few interesting things regarding the bill on abortion. I would like the attention of the hon. members on the other side of the house, should they still be courageous enough to listen to us. I hope they are because up to now they have been rather narrow minded. At page 11, under the title: Medical data regarding the "health of the mother in abortion cases", I quote:

> The so-called therapeutic abortion is an abortion which is performed in order either to save the life of the mother, or to safeguard her health. Various laws use shades of meaning such as:
> danger to life > danger to health > grave danger to health > danger to physical and mental health > certainty of foetal malformation > probability of foetal malformation, etc.

Before pursuing that most interesting and important quotation, I should like to tell this house which problems may crop up if we allow the words "or health" to remain in the bill.

As you can see, Mr. Speaker, many problems can arise; they are not imaginary or minor points but major ones. If we intend to fight and induce hon. members to examine the matter thoroughly, it is precisely because we believe that the words "or health" bring about problems, and not because we would promote political interests. We have no electoral fund and, on our side we do not land in helicopters to kiss girls.

> First of all, let us say that cases where abortion is the only way to save the life of a pregnant woman have become exceedingly rare—

I repeat that point, Mr. Speaker, because it is extremely important.

> First, let us say that cases where abortion is the only way to save the life of a pregnant woman have become exceedingly rare, not to say inexistant, because of the therapeutic means available.

I am not quoting the newspaper Le Droit, nor the Liberal or the Progressive Conservative parties, nor the Ralliement créditiste, Mr. Speaker, but the Quebec Association of Hospital Medical Boards. And I continue the quotation:

> On the other hand, some people give a broader interpretation to the words "danger to life" and take into account the cases where it can be presumed that continuance of pregnancy might shorten the patient's life.
> As concerns danger to health—

And this is where it becomes most interesting. As members of parliament, Mr. Speaker, it is extremely important that we hasten to study thoroughly the meaning of these words. I quote:

> As for the danger to health, it presents a whole problem of interpretation, if we refer to the definition of health given by the World Health Organization: State of physical and mental well-being.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, I should like to have your co-operation in order to silence the hon. member for Mercier or to ask him to make a speech also. Only, I am tired of being interrupted unnecessarily and stupidly.

Mr. Boulanger: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Mercier is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Boulanger: Mr. Speaker, it was precisely one of his colleagues who was speaking to me. I would ask you to turn on the lights for him also.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I would ask the co-operation of all hon. members so that we may go on with this debate in an orderly fashion.

Mr. Fortin: I thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like the hon. member for Mercier to read the Standing Orders and to be more often in the house. Perhaps he would then be able to understand them and above all to value them.

The legal definition of health—and this is acknowledged by specialists—given in the Criminal Code is extremely vague.

And this is why they go on to say:

In many concrete cases, it is quite difficult for doctors, confronted with the various shades of meaning listed above——to take a stand.

Those are not my words, Mr. Speaker, but those of physicians.

We do not ask for anything as members of the Ralliement Créditiste, but rather as legislators taking a positive part in this discussion. We must specify or, if we cannot do so, let take those words off the act, as you will agree that when we leave in the Criminal Code expressions which are impossible to define, this opens the door to every pretense and every possibility.

That was experienced by other countries because of the interpretation that was given to legislations purported to be restrictive. For instance, the phrase "in danger of death" includes cases where—

And we could go on, but I do not want to carry on quoting what anybody can refer to.

But we should have enough courage, goodwill and sincerity to look into the matter and reflect upon it.

The amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce is a real contribution to this debate compared to that of many members opposite.

We are entitled to ask questions. This is a strong argument—and I was struck by the point—when listening to the speeches delivered by my hon. colleagues of the Ralliement créditiste who are also doing a tremendous job.

Mr. Speaker, when one says: Delete the word "health", the consequences are extremely serious. In fact, should a woman appeal to the therapeutic abortion committee, if the bill were adopted, the doctor and the patient would have to choose between the life of the woman and the life of the foetus or between the health of the woman and the life of the foetus. Whatever the case, in a request for an abortion, more lenient, since that evidence that is threatened. The foetus is an innocent being and unable to defend itself. The mother can, if she argues that her health is endangered. She weighs the pros and cons and she places her health in the balance, something that cannot be defined. The minister of Justice himself is unable to define it.

She then on the other hand weighs her health against the life of the foetus.

Mr. Speaker, I said it at the start that personally, I would not be against therapeutic abortion, by a committee of specialists, in a recognized hospital, when the life of the mother is threatened and when there must be a choice between the life of the mother and the life of the foetus.

It will be agreed, in all honesty, Mr. Speaker, that these are border-line cases and that, consequently, in order to legislate on those border-line cases, it is not possible to propose clauses 14 etc., concerning abortion and so open the door wide to all kinds of pretexts, and accept as valid reasons every alleged disease, because this results in jeopardizing the health of the mother. Let the therapeutic committee decide whether her health is really endangered, since it is not even possible to define what is health.

On the other hand, when the foetus is killed, Mr. Speaker, everybody admits that it is a case of homicide, it is a crime, since a human being is killed.

Therefore, I think that all the talk about the just society, is sincere. One cannot compare the life of the mother—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

I suppose I have still three minutes left, because of the number of interventions and of points of order which were not valid.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member knows that he must get the unanimous consent of the house since his time is up.

Does the house give its consent.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): There is no unanimous consent.

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I am told that I am about to make the same speech. I speak about my hon. friend for Vancouver East (Mr. Winch). I wish he could do the same thing. He has been here a long time, and when he defends his bills he can do it very well.

So, as far as this bill is concerned, I am against it. I am defending an amendment and I think I have the right to do so.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) who earlier made to this debate a contribution he thinks important. I, for one, do not feel that he should be proud of it. He gave us new arguments, should we run short.

But when the hon. member for Matane has acquired a little more experience, first, he will know that he can speak only to the Speaker and he will know also that he cannot speak from anywhere but from his seat. Any member has to know that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I want to remind the hon. member that the Chair exists specially to call hon. members to order.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) introduced an amendment to the effect that the words:

"or health"

be deleted from clause 18 of Bill C-150.

I support this amendment, Mr. Speaker, because I sincerely believe that if these words are left in the bill, they would open the door to many abuses and give rise to fantastic interpretations and to complications which we might regret some day, and perhaps soon, after this bill is passed.

I objected yesterday to an amendment of that kind, but I objected because yesterday's amendment did not go far enough, while the one before us now would completely delete the words "or health" so as to make the bill very clear.

As for me, Mr. Speaker, I accept the idea that whenever the mother's life is endangered, the medical practitioner, who must procure the abortion, or the doctor who has attended that woman during her pregnancy, could perform an abortion.

• (5:00 p.m.)

People speak at length on such a broad subject, on health, a word that is by no means defined in the law. It is liable to the most fanciful interpretations, as indeed has been the case up to now, since in the evidence given, in favour as well as against Bill C-150—or Bill C-195 previously introduced—or also as regards certain bills submitted by the members in order to make the law on abortion, more lenient, since that evidence has shown that doctors, lawyers or social workers allowed themselves the most fanciful interpretations of the word "health".

Besides, we know that wherever abortion is performed on request, some women will seize upon any excuse to justify abortion.

Mr. Speaker, one could ask certain questions. Why are some women sickly? Why should or would certain women tend to ask termination of their pregnancy for reasons of health?

Let us put the question frankly, sincerely: In what situation do too many of our Canadian homes find themselves at the present time?

Let us just look at the results of surveys made by our unions who follow closely the situation of our workers. A fantastic number of people, for a country as rich as Canada is supposed to be, have to content themselves with living in an unbearable situation, in the type of situation found in the so-called underdeveloped countries.

For instance, let us look at the housing problem. How many housing units are clearly inadequate, for Canada, to house families properly, to house the families we are entitled to have?

Our housing system or economy clearly does not meet the needs of Canadian families. First of all, there is a housing shortage. That is a fact. A lot of housing units are no better than slums and while some of them might be considered as decent, comfortable houses, they only have one or two bedrooms, and seldom three. Under those circumstances, how can children develop properly in houses that are much too small?

When a family finds itself in such a situation, they ask themselves: Should we have more children?

Mr. Speaker, economists and social workers have looked into the matter. Problems have been found to exist but adequate solutions have seldom been proposed.

There is another point which is very important and must not be overlooked. Since the family income is too often inadequate, the young wife must work.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The remarks of the hon. member are very interesting, but I cannot see how they are related to the amendment moved by his colleague for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) to delete in clause 18, line 5, page 43, the words "or health".

Soon the housing bill will be dealt with in this house and it will then be proper to discuss housing in Canada.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, I think I am not out of order, because I am seeking the reasons which would prompt women to request an abortion for reasons of health. Those are the reasons I am trying to set forth in order to make my point.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Laprise: If the income is inadequate, then the woman worries all the time. She will not be able to feed her children properly, and give them a decent home.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I see no relation between the mother's health and the arguments put forward by the hon. member.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I accept your remarks, but the amendment makes it quite clear, as you said yourself a while ago that it is meant to delete from clause 18 of Bill C-150 the words "or health", to avoid ambiguity in this legislation.

So I think that we have the right to express or explain our interpretation of health. If not, the debate on the bill is as good as over. These are grounds that may lead a woman to ask for the termination of a pregnancy, on grounds of health.

Another excuse can be put forward: the danger of mental deficiency. Yesterday, in another debate, I stated the opinion expressed by Dr. Marcel Boisvert in that respect. I am not going to quote him all over again. It is all in yesterday's Hansard.

But, I have in hand another interpretation from another doctor just as prominent, who can very well understand women's behaviour in such a situation, since this doctor is a women, Dr. Suzanne Carreau. She states and I quote:

—if we refer to the most recent biological data, all the characteristics of life are found in an embryo of less than four months, the period during which abortion is usually carried out.

The abortive methods then applied are, in general, curetting or injections designed to bring on the miscarriage.

[Mr. Laprise.]

But I think that the fact that abortion is ten times more dangerous than childbirth is not emphasized enough.

There, Mr. Speaker, is the evidence of a woman doctor on the matter. If we make it easy for any woman to get an abortion for health reasons, Dr. Suzanne Carreau warns of the risk involved when she says, and I quote:

—abortion is ten times more dangerous than childbirth. Moreover, since health is a state of physical and mental well-being, it leaves a very large margin of interpretation. For a doctor, it is sometimes difficult to make a very clear diagnosis as to the state of health of the patient faced with another pregnancy.

That is the question, Mr. Speaker. Sometimes we hear doctors tell a woman that her health will be endangered if she pregnants again. But in that case, every time, and I believe rightly so, the doctor gives the necessary advice to prevent another pregnancy. It is right at that time that the question should arise.

Those are the reasons why I support the amendment of my colleague, the hon. member for Beauce, in order to prevent any misunderstanding and so that the legislation on abortion will not be jeopardized, but given all the required scope, as I hope we are willing to do. That is why I said a while ago and am repeating now that, personally, I accept that a pregnancy be interrupted if the life of the mother is in danger, because it is a potential life at that moment. We must also respect that one.

For those reasons I accept the amendment on the question of life, but I object to the inclusion of the health clause, because I believe in the conscions developments of medical science, and I feel there are other ways of improving the health of a woman apart from taking a life or terminating a pregnancy.

• (5:10 p.m.)

I believe it is easier to provide medical care than to perform surgery and that is why, Mr. Speaker, I support the amendment of my colleague the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue).

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, it was not my intention to speak, but after listening to the nasty remarks, the wrong interpretation given by the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané), I feel it my duty to bring out some facts. We, in the Ralliement créditiste, are the champions of the truth and of christianity—and we have been so since we came into the house, because we are not backed by an election fund. We therefore want to speak up in this parliament for those who are afraid to do so.

The hon. member for Matane has been interfering in several occasions during your absence, Mr. Speaker, and he tried to ridicule the Ralliement créditiste which represents the voice of truth.

I shall say it over and over again. We would have passed the omnibus bill in three days, if the government, that is to say the Prime Minister, through the dictatorship he is exerting on his ministers and on the government members, had accepted to delete the provisions of the bill regarding abortion and homosexuality. For this reason, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I believe the hon. member will agree that since he took the floor, he has been completely out of order, since he has not dealt with the amendment under consideration, and I should like to remind him that the Chair has been informed that the hon. member for Matane had also been called to order.

Mr. Dumont: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe it was only normal that in my opening statement, I should explain why I would have spoken of the word "health" in the bill before us.

Then, we have here an amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) which reads as follows:

That Bill C-150—

We find the quotation somewhat long, whenever we have to refer to it, and some people have even called that legislation the "autobus". The amendment ends as follows:

—be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "or health" on line 5 on page 43.

We have to admit that the word "health" has been interpreted by many people in many ways. Few problems compare with "health", for, in that case, the lives or deaths of thousands of human beings are at stake. Few problems are more important since, on that question, Parliament will be called upon to reject or to maintain ways of thinking on which our legislation and our social values have been based so far.

Has the problem been really thought out? Whenever an important and complex question confronts our nation, we spare nothing, indeed, whether in money or personnel, to achieve a complete study and reach proper decisions.

It is a serious problem to define the word "health"; has it been studied with all due care? What funds were devoted to such a study? What experts were hired and what subjects were they experts in? What amount of time would have been devoted to debate on that point, if the Ralliement créditiste had kept its peace? What amounts of money have been spent to inform the people properly?

In accordance with his own representations, why did not the hon. member for Matane visit his constituency, tour Canada all over to explain the meaning of the word "health", so that the people, by means of a referendum, as requested by us, might decide on the amendments we have moved and on the one just introduced by the hon. member for Beauce. We might then have a chance to get to the truth once and for all, for, at the present time, we receive too many protests from everywhere and we would not want to witness in Canada a re-enactment of the century-old Riel affair.

People have said, and the hon. member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) has repeated some time ago, that the French Canadians had adequately represented the province of Quebec in Ottawa. For once there are free members who can rise and speak according to their conscience. This is the favour that we are asking, to be in a position to resort to every authorized democratic procedure, because on the government side, we know that closure has been imposed by one of the most intransigent prime minister we have ever known in the last 100 years and who was called Macdonald.

Therefore, coming back to the clause on "health", I will say that no solution is proposed to the problems of illegal abortions, the causes of which are not well known unless the word "health" could be given a rather broad interpretation to include the grounds put forward by women who want to be aborted.

Would it not be better for the common good if before enforcing a legislation which would endanger human life, our leaders would devote five to ten years to study thoroughly the problem and to find out if such a legislation is necessary?

In some cases, we need ten years to realize what is being asked, but why when Christian life is jeopardized in Canada, would we not accept to discuss the word "health" in order to find a good definition of it so that the legislators will be recognized as responsible people. Tomorrow, the lawyers will have to interpret the laws which we will have passed. And as mentioned by the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier), there will always be some falsifiers to misinterpret the law, enabling unscrupulous people to be heard and backed up.

Is it not the responsibility of the state to sanction the respect of life?

Because life is the first human right and that our fundamental social values are based on respect for it, I would think it is the duty of Parliament to protect any life and to make this known in its laws, and to give the term "health" a definite, precise and clear meaning.

If, by allowing abortion, we ruin the health of people as a matter of fact, with a confusing law, how could the entire population fail to find as anything but irresponsible.

Some physicians may question the value of life, but value judgments are not medical decisions, and physicians are no more competent than others to pass them.

In medical terms, they know the problem and the situation. That is why, at present, too much responsibility is given to physicians who want the automatic rejection of the bill or, at least, mitigating action through which amendments would clearly define the law.

There could be special cases when the mother could die unless an abortion were performed. It would then be impossible to save the child, since the mother's death would kill them both.

But every time the child can be saved, he is entitled to our protection because, tomorrow, under the protection of our laws, which will be sensible laws we hope, this healthy child will keep the democratic institution of parliament going—if there still is a parliament; indeed the present dictatorship makes one wonder if tomorrow our country will not have turned socialist.

This eliminates abortion for any other reason than for the purpose of saving the mother's life. For instance, abortion is ruled out as a means to increase the mother's life expectancy. To justify an abortion by putting forward such a reason is to deny that all human lives are of equal value, because it is to take for granted that the few years added to the mother's life are more important than the whole life of the child.

[Mr. Dumont.]

• (5:20 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, I have only a few words to add, but I should like, as a last recommendation, to ask once again the 264 members of the house to listen to the voice of truth calling for a referendum in Canada and for the immediate rejection of all these abortion and homosexuality measures. I urge that all our amendments concerning the word "health" or any other terms be taken into serious consideration.

Members of the Comité d'action Hull-Gatineau—some are very familiar with this organization which is against abortion—are asking and I support them:

1. That a serious study be undertaken on the abortion problem before the legislation is amended; —by considering, for instance, amendments such as the one tending to delete from the text of the legislation the word "health".

2. That positive and immediate steps be taken to reduce the social pressures which drive women to seek an abortion and that enough time be devoted to the review of the findings arrived at before condemning a life;

We are convinced that this amendment aimed at deleting the word "health", would give an automatic opportunity of studying more seriously the recommendations we have brought forward:

3. That all necessary services be set up for the purpose of educating the people in the fields of family life, sexuality and birth control before replacing by the so-called "remedial" measures the preventive methods not yet existing;

4. That, in the meantime, the respect Canadians have towards life be reaffirmed by Parliament by clarifying the wording of the law and by refraining from extending the grounds for legal abortions; —which could ipso facto jeopardize completely the health of a person, but if the word "health" were allowed to be deleted, we could then, ponder seriously over the amendments we are proposing and which have been quite serious from the beginning.

We are not the ones who have wasted the members' time. If the two amendments I referred to earlier had been scratched, those dealing with abortion and homosexuality, the bill known as the "autobus" bill would have been carried, because, three days ago, we were willing to accept the other amendments. But, in our minds, we can never accept abortion, let alone homosexuality.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, we have had the opportunity, in the course of th eafternoon, of hearing numerous arguments having regard to health. That proves, I think, that the problem of health may be considered from many angles.

To say that we are simply repeating ourselves may not be entirely accurate, since what we are discussing now, that is health, is such a vague word that it may include many different things. And, judging by the exclamations heard from government members, we have seen that the health of the members themselves could be affected.

We have reached one of the most important aspects of clause 18 of the omnibus bill, for the simple reason that the matter gives rise to a flow of protests. And it is precisely because of this word "health" that the protests have arisen and continue to rise from all sides.

That is understandable, since everybody is almost ready to accept therapeutic abortion, that is an abortion that is necessary because, in the opinion of the physician in charge of the case, there is no other way to save the life of a pregnant mother. We do not object to that, to that kind of abortion where it is a choice between the life of the mother and the life of the foetus. Surely no one, even among members of the Ralliement créditiste, is opposed to that. That is what is being done now when a therapeutic abortion is authorized. In such cases, the abortion is self-defence, I repeat self-defence for the mother, the woman in question.

It is her life or that of the foetus; in those cases, therapeutic abortion is acceptable, but not without reservations, since even in such a case, we must admit that the role of a conscientious doctor is to try to save both lives, if possible.

Even with regard to the mother's life, there are some reservations, some doubts, and it is not every day that a case occurs where the mother's life is weighed against that of the child. Such cases do not occur every day. That was emphasized yesterday, and I will not dwell on that.

But, when we come upon the second expression to be found in the bill, when it is no longer just a question of life, but the question of "health" is added, especially when one reads "likely to endanger her health", that is the substance of the whole discussion about abortion. It is the main element, the reason why so many public as well as private organizations have protested. They have realized that the only free spokesmen in this house are the Créditistes, and it may be that they have entrusted us more specifically with their submissions because they knew that we had the greater freedom of action.

Mr. Speaker, we are now playing a role as essential as that which some are trying to suppress, the role of doing away with the normal transmission of life. Some will say I am exaggerating. This goes entirely beyond the purpose of the legislator.

• (5:30 p.m.)

We do not have to discuss the purpose of the legislator, because we are known for having both feet solidly on the ground and not to get lost into the clouds. Consequently, we know very well that the intentions of the legislator, as noble, as logical and as admissible as they may be, are nevertheless something else in practice.

That is why we are fighting. On some points we might be inclined to say: In theory, this is true, it is not funny to be sick, to lose one's health because of a pregnancy and all that.

We are often charged of playing morality and sentimentalism. This is sentimentalism. That is where sentimentalism is.

When one wants to permit abortion under the pretense that the health is affected, that the pregnant woman will miss a series of social events, and that she wants to get rid of the product of conception, of course she will get sick.

It took only a few days of discussion to make the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) really sick.

This essential point raised in this amendment deserves that we look at it most seriously and perhaps,—I said perhaps,—if the words "or the health" were deleted and if the clause was limited to life, that the present discussion would end and that we would be most happy to deal with something else.

Amongst the organization which got in touch with us, there are excellent ones which will be called upon to apply the act we are now discussing.

Those organizations are the hospital associations to which will be entrusted the duty of applying the act on abortion. Now those organizations are doubtful, to say the least, that clause 18 is justifiable. They have doubts to the extent where if we refer to the amendments to the Criminal Code proposed last year, when Bill C-195 was studied, and to the 880 pages of Proceedings and Evidence of the standing committee on health, welfare and social affairs, we see that the various interpretations of the word "health" given by the witnesses uphold one position as well as the other.

Mr. Speaker, when the committee on health, welfare and social affairs sat in 1967, many doctors, many specialists, could have discussed at least as long as we have on the definition of the word "health".

We must realize that if numerous doctors, who know what they speak of, and numerous specialists do not agree on the meaning that should be given to the word "health", especially with regard to abortion, how are intentions ever to be justified, even the best of them?

There is only one possible solution, the only one on which we should have dwelt: to amend the Criminal Code in such a way that the doctor who, because of his diagnosis, must treat his patient in such a way that it finally leads to abortion cannot be prosecuted under the law.

If ever, following the treatment which he gives the patient who is really ill, he decides to perform an abortion, it is because the doctors or the hospital wanted it that way.

That is why when we see the extremely broad meaning that they want to give—I will be told that it is not, in fact, broad, that it has indeed a lot of good sense, life and health—we know, of course, that there are millions of people who are ready to broaden the meaning of the little word, and who are ready to extend it in such a way that inevitably, as all those who lived through the same experience—I mean here all the countries that had the same experience—and that we will automatically reach abortion on request.

That is what some people foresee and that is why we are asked to be far more precise in regulating abortion. We are requesting for tighter regulations. We are requesting in fact, that the doctor, the surgeon, the gynaecologist have no responsibility which they could not assume. And even the psychiatrist does not want to be compelled by all kinds of pressures coming from the patient herself, from her parents, from her family, from her neighbours and friends. The psychiatrist does not want to be confronted with this frightful problem in which he will find a patient who, in the beginning, is not at all ill, but who wears herself out slowly and surely to reach at last a real state of illness.

They do not want to have this problem on their shoulders, simply because the law is too broad, simply because the word "health" has not been defined. And I understand them, because it is very easy to understand.

And the time must come for every member in this house to understand the meaning of such findings, which are not merely those of the Ralliement créditiste as some are led to believe, because we are the ones who defend life, because that is a part of our concern about the freedom of the individual and because we do not want to impair our country's development through inadequate laws that I would go as far as to call terrible.

If we look at the series of definitions given by doctors, agencies, hospitals, we realize that the interpretation of the word "health" becomes a major problem.

And strange as it seems, hon. members do not realize that, if a group of experts cannot agree on such a meaning, we, even if we are from Matane, are not any wiser than all those people put together and cannot claim the right to decide, in a field as vital and essential as the right to live, that the foetus itself cannot defend.

And when we talk about "health", it should not necessarily have to do with illness. One may talk about good health and one may talk about health in jeopardy.

The word "health" may mean many things, and it may mean among others, to be in good health.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Motherhood, pregnancy is precisely the state, in the highest sense of the word, where we see a woman blossom, where we see a woman really in full possession of all her potentialities. It is perhaps the only occasion that a woman has to reach her maximum of fulfillment.

Mr. Speaker, I am most happy that my wife is now pregnant. I already have three children—it will then be my fourth one—and I assure you that it is an extraordinary pleasure for me to see my wife blossoming because she is pregnant.

I would like to stress the positive side. Health, it is precisely that which is health, because it is natural, and many old women and young ladies have difficulties, precisely because they have not had a taste of motherhood. They lack something to enjoy life fully.

Thus, why say that an instinctive thing, that a natural phenomenon, a really true phenomenon owing to which we are all here, is something which is connected with illness? Here we make a serious mistake. It is unfortunate that we should not insist more on the "good health" aspect of the thing and that we should linger on some very particular exceptions in which "health" could be affected owing to pregnancy. That would be extremely strange, and I would say it does not exist.

As a matter of fact, the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) was pointing out earlier that he could see cases in which a woman who did not enjoy good health could recover owing to her pregnancy.

That is why I am in complete agreement, for instance, with the "Serena" teams who talk about love and fecundity, and who, as regards abortion, said as was reported in the newspaper La Presse of yesterday:

The "Serena" teams believe that abortion was not considered with the attention such a serious question deserves. The members of the congress, convinced that abortion is a direct aggression against the developing life of a human being, beg the government to withdraw from the Omnibus Bill clause 18, dealing with abortion and to refer that subject to a Royal commission of enquiry.

The leader of the Ralliement créditiste, the hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette), also asks for a referendum and we give him of course our full support.

The Serena teams point out that over 50,000 signatures of protest were sent.

In order to prevent abortions, the members suggest as positive measures:

Let us stop talking about disease, let us stop talking negatively. Let us stop trying to allow indiscriminately something intended for only a very small part of the population. And let us think positively.

Various medical services sponsored by the Quebec government intended for all expectant mothers so that they will find solutions to the problems caused by pregnancy.

We know that we can help—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Has the hon. member the consent of the house to continue?

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. There is no unanimous consent.

Is the house ready for the question?

All those in favour of this motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): All those against will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): In my opinion the nays have it.

Pursuant to standing order 75, paragraph (11) and a special order of the house agreed to last Tuesday, May 6, the recorded vote on the proposed motion is deferred until the report stage of this bill is resumed tomorrow.

Mr. Fortin (for Mr. Rodrigue) moved motion No. 38:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "a majority" in lines 38 and 39 on page 42 and substituting therefor the words: "unanimous decision"—

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak to amendment No. 38 moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) and which essentially provides that when the therapeutic abortion committee will meet to decide and discuss the specific case of a patient, it will have to make a unanimous decision as to whether the abortion will be approved or if a certificate authorizing the abortion of a patient will be issued.

Mr. Speaker, it is an honour for me to support the amendment of the member for Beauce, in order to better safeguard the work of the various therapeutic committees in the hospitals where such committees will be established. In short, the amendment is easy to understand, the bill provides that a mere majority of physicians on the committee can decide if they will deliver a certificate stating that the continuation of the pregnancy would or would be likely to endanger the life or health of the pregnant woman.

Through our amendment, since the provisions of the bill are extremely indefinite, since we are unable to define the word "health" and extensive academic discussions are still going on among physicians as to whether a pregnancy can endanger life or health, since there is no unanimity in most cases, since some doubts remain not only in our minds but especially in the minds of experts, we suggest an amendment providing for the agreement of three doctors, since a life is at stake.

I think, and this is the principle of the amendment, that since a human life is the most fundamental value, the members of a therapeutic abortion committee of a hospital should agree, from a scientific viewpoint, and consent unanimously, regarding the issue of a certificate allowing or refusing abortion.

Therefore, from the physicians who are members of a therapeutic abortion committee, we do not expect a majority vote, but rather, and still better, an unanimous decision so that there will be no possible mistakes. Human life will be protected and the rights of foetuses will be recognized.

• (5:50 p.m.)

On the other hand, supposing the members of the therapeutic abortion committee admit that pregnancy endangers the woman's life then, Mr. Speaker, it would not be difficult for them to agree unanimously.

But for cases when one or more of the three members doubt that the life or health of the mother is threatened on account of pregnancy, we must legislate in favour of the preservation of life, and avoid murders or homicides that might otherwise be encouraged by irresponsible legislation which did not receive thorough consideration.

We are seeking unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, for security purposes in every respect, and I should like, with your permission, to touch on those points.

The first important point we have to deal with, with respect to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce, is the following.

Mr. Speaker, if the mother's life is really endangered because of her being pregnant, then it would be easy to obtain unanimous consent within the committee.

However, Mr. Speaker, all cases that are likely to come up will have to be considered and studied by the committee. The therapeutic abortion committee will have to consider each individual case. It will have to consider scientific data, documentary information, X-rays, etc. in order to determine whether the life of the woman is threatened by the pregnancy.

So, the therapeutic abortion committee would not base its decisions on all kinds of considerations not directly related to the life of that woman, but on scientific considerations, to determine whether or not the life of the woman is in danger.

The members of the committee will have to be in agreement. Each one has his personal experience. Each one has his own skill. Each one has acquired knowledge in those fields and is able to give an opinion in which confidence may be placed I think, in the majority of cases.

Mr. Speaker, if two of the members of the committee say: "We are in favour of issuing a certificate allowing the abortion of such and such a person" that is legitimate because her life is in danger. They have established that, through examination. If the other doctor does not agree—we have every right to suppose that he too is competent, that he too is respected and respectable from the point of view of professional ethics—he must therefore have personal reasons to oppose the abortion.

Now it will be very difficult for him to defend his case if the other two can give scientific proof of their stand, that the life of the mother is really in danger.

There might then be some discussion within the committee and probably, or rather certainly, the two doctors who agree will manage to convince the third, who disagrees, that obviously the life of the mother is in danger. That carries a lot of weight in the decision.

That is why we say that, in such a case, where the life of the mother is really in danger, unanimity will force the doctors to seek out scientific reasons, to seek out scientific proofs.

We do not request unquestionable evidence—nothing is certain in this world, particularly in the scientific world. Everything is developing and progressing, so that it will be more and more possible to determine and to establish if really the life of a woman is endangered because of her pregnancy. Therefore, it will be easy for the members of this committee to decide unanimously whether the mother's life is really in danger.

In another case—it was the second point I wanted to discuss—the woman can go to a doctor and ask for an abortion. She can put forward all sorts of reasons. She can refuse her husband because she disagrees with him, she wants to divorce, she does not want to be encumbered with another child, or because she does not want to stay attached to the house. Or if she is unmarried, she can refuse motherhood.

There might be an infinite variety of cases. Let us just take one case that every member could imagine: if a woman presents herself before a therapeutic abortion committee, and asks them to issue a certificate, then, the committee would have to establish whether scientifically, from the medical point of view, the life or the health of this woman are probably and certainly endangered.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this committee will not be able to establish scientifically that the life of this woman is in danger, because, scientifically professionally these doctors will not be able to establish that in some of the cases which I was enumerating a while ago that the physical health of the mother or her health, as the minister wants to define it, are endangered. The therapeutic abortion committee will still be responsible for a crime and will be answerable for it if they grant a certificate authorizing an abortion without scientific considerations.

And we can hope that, of those three physicians, at least one will be conscientious enough, will respect his professional ethics enough to say: Hon. members of the committee, we cannot deliver a certificate allowing the abortion of this patient, since neither from the scientific point of view nor from another point of view is the life of the patient or her health really in danger. We have no evidence of it.

Then, Mr. Speaker, in that case, this physician who is conscientious enough to do his duty according to his professional ethics, will protect not only the foetus but the woman as well, whose abortion could have been a danger and a misfortune rather than something good, because absolutely negative reasons or psychic disorders induced her to seek abortion.

And that doctor will have protected—and that is the joint I am interested in and which I want to emphasize—not only the foetus but also the patient, because her motives were negative.

The important point is that the therapeutic abortion committee of that hospital will also feel secure, will also be protected, for the simple reason that it could not be made responsible of a decision that was not in accordance with the law.

Mr. Speaker, may I call it six o'clock and call an ambulance for the Liberal members?

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. It being six o'clock the house stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock.

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

JUSTICE AND LEGAL AFFAIRS

Fourth report of Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs—Mr. Tolmie.

[Note: Text of above report appears in today's Votes and Proceedings.]

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 26

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

ALLEGED UNPRECEDENTED INCREASE IN COST OF LIVING—MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER STANDING ORDER 26

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, I ask leave, seconded by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin), to move the adjournment of the House under Standing Order 26 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely the unprecedented and very serious increase of more than 1 per cent in the consumer price index, the cost of living, during the past month—the culmination of the steady rise in the cost of living which has been taking place for the past several years because of the failure of the government to take steps to deal with this critical situation, and particularly the refusal of the government to arrange for this house to discuss and debate the economic problems which have brought about this serious situation.

Mr. Speaker: The motion proposed by the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Hees) is based on a Dominion Bureau of Statistics report which indicates an increase in the consumer price index. As hon. members know similar motions have been proposed earlier in the course of the current session, motions which dealt with D.B.S. reports on unemployment.

Standing Order 26 requires not only that a problem be important, urgent and national in scope but that the discussion of such a matter be a matter of urgency. Even under the new rules the relevant factor in Standing Order 26 is urgency of debate rather than urgency of the matter itself.

It would appear that a motion such as this one can be allowed only if the ensuing debate could be expected reasonably to affect the course of the urgent situation or to result in immediate corrective action. I doubt that this could possibly be achieved by an adjournment debate dealing with a continuing situation such as unemployment or the international balance of payments or the volume of exports or inflation.

Since the beginning of the session we have had a number of debates dealing with economic matters. These debates have ranged far and wide, touching particularly on unemployment, taxes and inflation. It can be expected that a number of similar debates will occur before the end of this part of the current session. I have in mind particularly the debate on the anticipated presentation by the Minister of Finance.

For the moment I do not think I would be justified in allowing this additional debate in preference to the planned business of the house.

PRIVILEGE

MR. SERRÉ—IMPROPER POLITICAL INDENTIFICATION OF MEMBER

Mr. Gaétan-J. Serré (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, last Tuesday I put a question in the house to the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux). Now, in yesterday's issue of Le Droit, I am referred to as a Conservative member of parliament.

I consider that a serious insult not only to me but also to the people who elected me.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Serré: I would point out that even though I am surrounded—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Serré: —by Conservative members—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member. He stated his question of privilege, but I must remind him that according to Standing Orders he should have given notice of it to the Chair.

I have always tried to insist on this point and I believe that if I made an exception in this particular instance, it would be very difficult for me in the future to apply or to enforce the rules which stipulate that notice must be given.

Under these circumstances, I do not think that the hon. member should be allowed to carry further the question of privilege he has just raised.

Mr. Serré: Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that even though I am surrounded by Conservative members, the latter have not yet had enough influence over me, not even the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis)—

[English]

Mr. Baldwin: On the point of order, Mr. Speaker, I am sure this party would be willing to give unanimous consent because our social standing is being seriously endangered by this sort of thing.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacInnis: On the point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have ruled that there is no question of privilege. The hon. member on the original point of order was actually pursuing a question of privilege. If hon. members want to debate this kind of point they are free to do so, but as far as I am concerned I think we should go on with the business of the house.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, obviously some people never know when they are lucky.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

POSSESSION OF ATOMIC BOMB BY ISRAEL—CANADIAN NON-PROLIFERATION EFFORTS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to change the tone of the discussion by asking the Prime Minister a very serious question arising from the apparent confirmation that Israel possesses the atomic bomb and that Arab states are seeking nuclear weapons from the Soviet Union. Will the Prime Minister say whether Canada, as one of the signatories of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, will consult with our allies in an effort to keep the nuclear ingredient out of the already tense situation in the Middle East?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I might be permitted to reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition. Of course, we have no means of knowing about the accuracy of the reports which have appeared in the press. The Israeli government has affirmed that Israel would not be the first to introduce nuclear weapons in the area. In a press report Mr. Gideon Saggi said:

> Israel is not a nuclear state and, just as has been stated in the past, will not be the first to introduce atomic weapons into the area. The reports are speculative, inaccurate and unauthoritative.

That is the statement of the government of Israel. As far as the Canadian government is concerned, we share the hope of the Leader of the Opposition and, I am sure, of all members of this house that these reports are not true. We hope that Israel is not acquiring nuclear weapons. Canada, as one of the first countries to ratify the non-proliferation treaty, has urged nations, including Israel, to sign and ratify that treaty, which should preclude the acquisition of nuclear weapons by additional countries. We would hope that Israel would accede to that treaty and we are urging her to do so. This would of course, effectively end all speculation.

Mr. Stanfield: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether he will seek to verify directly whether this report is correct and whether, as a good friend of Israel, he as a representative of Canada will make direct and forceful representations in this regard. I ask also that renewed efforts be made by the government of Canada to strengthen efforts being directed toward the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. But even if this report turns out to be untrue, as I hope it does, it surely warns us once again of the grave danger of the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I can reassure the Leader of the Opposition on this point. We have the greatest concern, which I know reflects the concern of all Canadians, about this development. May I add that Canada itself has not been participating in any of the scientific work that has been going on in Israel relating to the nuclear bomb. There has been no co-operation between Canadian and Israeli scientists in this field, and we have not been providing any uranium that could be used for this purpose.

MAINLAND CHINA—NEGOTIATIONS TOWARD CANADIAN RECOGNITION

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Would the minister tell the house what progress has been made in the talks with the Peking government with regard to the recognition of Communist China?

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that our ambassador in Stockholm will shortly be meeting with the representative of the People's Republic of China in Stockholm.

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): I have a supplementary question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Inasmuch as the negotiations with Mainland China may take some time, I wonder whether the minister or the government are giving consideration to the establishment of some interim contact, either in the nature of cultural delegations or possibly of student exchanges in the coming months?

Mr. Sharp: We would welcome in general these kinds of exchanges and if, as the hon. gentleman suggests, these negotiations are prolonged, I think this might be a very useful initiative for Canada and for the People's Republic of China to take.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a supplementary question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Can the minister assure us that the house will have an opportunity to express its views on the recognition of Communist China before the government makes a decision in the matter?

[English]

Mr. Sharp: I hope that as many members as possible will express their views so that the decision of the government, when taken, will reflect the opinions of hon. members.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT STEPS TO CURTAIL INCREASING COST OF LIVING

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister regarding the figures released today, indicating that the cost of living for the month of April increased from 123.2 to 124.6, which represents an increase of 1.1 per cent for a single month. This is a sharp increase in the cost of living for the balance of this year, if continued at this monthly rate. What steps does the government intend to take to stop this spiralling cost of living which is having such an adverse effect on people generally and particularly those on lower and fixed incomes.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have the opportunity to indicate a series of steps which will be taken and we hope will have the support of this house, because the matter raised by the leader of the New Democratic party and the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings is a very serious one. Apart from the continuing steps we have taken to curtail expenditure and to keep collective bargaining within reasonable limits, we on this side hope that in the budgetary debate, which I take it will take place in a few weeks time, when we announce the composition of the commission on prices and incomes and when we announce to the country our further expenditure cuts, we will have the support not only of the opposition but also of the various sectors of the community. There will be a need for the government to introduce some very severe expenditure cuts which will hurt different vested interests in the country. We hope we will have the support of the opposition parties on that.

Mr. Baldwin: Why have you taken so long?

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the Prime Minister's statement yesterday about an adjournment of the house in the early summer, can he give the house an assurance that before parliament recesses legislation will be introduced to place some restraint on unjustifiable price increases, in order that the Canadian people may know that the government is seriously trying to stop this spiralling cost of living?

Mr. Trudeau: I doubt very much that any type of legislation has ever been suggested, including that from the N.D.P., but may I remind the house that we did introduce several cuts in very important areas across the country in the past months, and in each case the opposition parties have told us to re-establish these vast expenditures which we had to cut down.

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. He stated in the house on September 13 that the government's attack on poverty could be centred on an attempt to control inflation. Can he tell the house with any assurance that he expects in the months ahead the government's attack on poverty in this regard to be a great deal more successful than it has been since last September?

Mr. Trudeau: I cannot venture to prophesy the effects of our future actions. I will just remind the house that had we heeded the opposition pleas and not proceeded with the cuts, inflation would have been a great deal worse.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Hees: Does the Prime Minister not agree that what he just said is a further example of his many attempts to mislead the Canadian people on most of the important matters?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the further supplementary question is argumentative.

Mr. Hees: It is just a statement of fact.

[Mr. Trudeau.]

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Témiscamingue wish to ask a supplementary question?

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a supplementary question of the Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that he just said that new restrictions would have to be imposed in various sectors of the Canadian economy, is the Prime Minister considering the serious suggestions made in the house by the Ralliement créditiste?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I think that all those who know about such things agree that the suggestions coming from the creditiste system are, essentially, of an inflationary nature and inflation is precisely what we are trying to fight.

[English]

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wish to ask the Prime Minister whether he does not think it is possible to overdo restraint, as appears to have been done now for some time by his associate, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Again I think that this supplementary question is argumentative.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether, keeping in mind financial priorities and keeping in mind the increasing cost of living, he has any ideas or policies to assist senior citizens who cannot live on their meagre pensions?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the hon. member is asking now for a general statement of policy. If the question were allowed we would be getting into a debate which, as I suggested a moment ago, should not be allowed.

Mr. Hees: This is simply not included in the just society.

TRADE

WHEAT—DISCUSSION WITH MAINLAND CHINA RESPECTING SALES

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, whom we welcome back from his extensive pilgrimage.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Baldwin: We hope he has returned a wiser man, from the east. Will the minister take up with his colleague the Secretary of State for External Affairs the possibility of a representative of the government discussing with representatives of the government of Mainland China the question of wheat sales, unless, of course, this runs contrary to the indicated views of the Prime Minister on government involvement in the sale of Canadian wheat?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I thank the hon. gentleman for welcoming me back. I promise to keep my Asiatic smile.

On the subject of communications with China, I wish to rectify what seems to be a false impression on the other side of the house. We are in touch with China. We had a trade commissioner at the Canton Fair. As a matter of fact the trade commissioner was good enough to meet me in Bangkok to report to me on what was happening there. In the second place, the assistant chief commissioner of the Wheat Board was in Hong Kong recently discussing wheat sales with the interested parties on the communist China side.

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF DEFAULT IN U.S.S.R. AGREEMENT

Mr. J. H. Horner (Crowfoot): Would the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce end the uncertainty and confusion sweeping the Canadian grain market by advising this house, and indirectly western farmers, whether the U.S.S.R. has in fact cancelled a substantial part of its order and is considering whether it should even pay for wheat it has already received, citing grain damage.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): This is not so. Negotiations between the Wheat Board and Export Khleb, the agency of the U.S.S.R. government, are continuing. The situation in the U.S.S.R. is not such, however, that they have found it possible to live up to their commitment to Canada, but there is no reason to believe they will not honour that commitment.

[Later:]

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Do I understand from the minister's answer with regard to the commitment of the U.S.S.R. that there is a question whether this long standing agreement—a matter of three years—will be honoured?

Mr. Pepin: That is not what I said. I said there was no reason to believe that the U.S.S.R. would not honour the commitment it has with Canada with respect to wheat purchases.

[Translation]

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF BROADENING LIST OF PURCHASERS

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

As he just said, he must have talked about wheat here and there during his trip. Did he find in other countries or on other continents new customers for our wheat surpluses?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, everywhere in the world today there are wheat surpluses. In Australia, for instance, the government just took steps to restrict the production of wheat. The Australian government will not take the responsibility of selling more than 350 million bushels and everything produced in excess will be at the farmers' own risk.

I just want to point out that overproduction of wheat in the world at the present time affects not only Canada but all the exporting countries also.

[English]

WHEAT—STATIONING OF SALES REPRESENTATIVE IN MAINLAND CHINA

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of trade and commerce. Will the Canadian government consider stationing a permanent sales representative of the Canadian Wheat Board in China once diplomatic recognition has been achieved?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I wonder whether this is the type of question that should be asked now.

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF ADDITIONAL SALES RESULTING FROM VISIT OF MINISTER TO ASIA AND ANTIPODES

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I should like to find out from the minister of trade and commerce, following his safari in Asia, whether he would inform the house about possible increases in sales of wheat that have been obtained as a result of his presence for so long in that very productive area in which he travelled?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, this trip once again gave me the occasion to witness how extensive was the sales promotion system of the Canadian Wheat Board. I met the wheat board people in Bangkok doing research into the wheat requirements in the area. I had the occasion of witnessing how good was their sales promotion.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I do not think—

Mr. Speaker: Is the right hon. gentleman rising on a supplementary?

Mr. Diefenbaker: I do not think the hon. gentleman understood my question. As a result of this visitation and his meetings with the Wheat Board representatives, is the minister in a position to say whether any country in Asia is going to increase the amount of wheat that it purchased last year. Have new purchasers been secured or potential markets obtained?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I am not in the habit of claiming credit for selling wheat, as was a previous government. I can tell the house that I did have useful discussions on the I.G.A. with Australian ministers and with the Australian wheat board. While I was in Singapore a sale of wheat was made by the Wheat Board. However, as I was on the spot I did not find it possible to board a plane back to Singapore to sign the contract.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must bring to the attention of hon. members that perhaps we should pass on to another subject and resume tomorrow the debate on this particular topic. I had already started to recognize the hon. member for Swift-Current-Maple Creek.

WHEAT—REASONS FOR LOSS OF MARKETS

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder whether the minister, following all his discussions in regard to the wheat situation, can inform the house, and particularly the farmers of Canada, why Canada lost 33 per cent of her markets last year?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest to the hon. member that this question is not the type that can be asked.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

BEEF—REASON FOR STATEMENT ABOUT NEW ZEALAND EXPORTS TO CANADA

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Is the minister going to make a report to the house on the results of his long trip to Asia and the Antipodes? Secondly, would he explain why and on what basis he told the New Zealanders that they would have a greatly expanding market for beef in this country?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. While the first question might be in order, the hon. member knows he cannot ask the minister to comment on statements that even he has made outside the house. I believe the first question was whether a statement should be made, and perhaps this might be answered.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, being a very humble person, I would not want to take the time of the house to make such a statement today, but I think I did make a good speech in Vancouver the other day, of which I will send the hon. member a copy. On the subject of beef, which is an important subject—

An hon. Member: The question was ruled out.

Mr. Pepin: Was it? O.K. Then—

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. member rising on a supplementary question?

Mr. Harkness: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I thank the minister for his offer to send me a copy of his speech, but he has already done so. It is on this basis that I asked the question about beef. I would respectfully point out that if a member of the government makes a statement that is of great importance to one segment of industry in this country, then I think it is quite in order, and always has been in this house, for members to ask that minister for the basis upon which he made the statement.

Mr. Speaker: Order. That is not my understanding of the rules. It is certainly not what the book says.

GRAIN

WHEAT—ASSISTANCE TO CANADIAN FARMERS TO REDUCE ACREAGE

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): In view of the fact that there is such a large surplus of wheat in exporting countries, has the government given any consideration to assisting our farmers to reduce their wheat acreage?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Western farmers are used to making their own decisions. I understand there will be a reduction of 12 per cent in wheat acreage in the coming year.

WHEAT—INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF TWO PRICE SYSTEM

Mr. J. H. Horner (Crowfoot): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister inform the house and the western farmers whether or not he, his department and the cabinet are seriously considering the inauguration of a two-price system to allow the farmers to stay in business?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, the cabinet is very conscious of its responsibilities in this matter.

Mr. Horner: Are you?

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

BAN ON TOBACCO ADVERTISING

Mr. H. E. Stafford (Elgin): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State. In the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's ban on tobacco advertising on its radio and television networks, Dr. Davidson, president of the C.B.C., referred to the continuous deliberations of the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs which has been considering this subject and related matters.

Did the C.B.C. consider that it was prejudging the possible results and conclusions from those deliberations, and did it consider that it was acting on a matter which is under active discussion by a standing committee of this house; that it had insulted—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Stafford: —that committee by taking this action before the tobacco industry—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have to interrupt the hon. member's speech. Will the hon. member resume his seat. I suggest to the hon. member that he may like to discuss this matter at the time of adjournment.

Mr. Stafford: Ten o'clock.

Inquiries of the Ministry

INDUSTRY

FAIRBANKS MORSE (CANADA) LTD.—ATTEMPTS TO AVOID CLOSING OF PLANT

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, just to continue the pattern. In view of the government's efforts to ensure that foreign owned companies in Canada act in Canada's interests, would the minister attempt to dissuade Colt Industries, Inc. of the U.S.A. from closing down Fairbanks Morse (Canada) Ltd. in Kingston?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think the question might be put on the order paper.

HOUSING

ONTARIO—ALLEGED DELAY IN PROVINCIAL PROGRAM

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister without Portfolio in charge of housing. In asking the question might I call his attention to the fact that in the legislature of Ontario a day or two ago the minister of trade stated that a substantial part of the province's housing program had been held up due to the lack—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member must ask a question directly.

Mr. Brewin: My question is this: I know that the minister is new to his responsibilities, but will he answer the request of the provincial minister?

AIR CANADA

STRIKE OF MECHANICS—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. In view of the expansive statement of the Minister of Labour yesterday in reply to the hon. member for Burnaby-Seymour on the settlement of the dispute between Canadian Pacific Airlines and the Transportation and Communications Employees Union, can the minister say what progress is being made in the much more important dispute between the machinists union and Canadian Pacific Airlines and Air Canada?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the parties met yesterday very briefly to discuss the procedure they would follow. They have agreed to that procedure and I understand the meetings continued last evening, that they were quite productive and are carrying on today.

I might mention to the hon. gentleman that it is a matter of opinion which strike is the more important at any time.

EXHIBITIONS

PARTICIPATION OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IN OPERATION OF "MAN AND HIS WORLD"

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Mr. Lucien Saulnier, president of the executive committee of Montreal, during a long interview granted to the Montreal Star on Tuesday last, has invited the federal government to participate permanently in "Man and His World". Could the minister tell the house whether Lucien Saulnier or His Honour Mayor, Jean Drapeau have communicated with him in this connection and whether the government intends to answer in the affirmative to that urgent and important invitation?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have received verbal representations in this connection from Messrs. Drapeau and Saulnier. However each department of the government is entirely free to take its decisions in that field and in the past as this year also, a certain number of departments and organizations of the government, for instance, the National Film Board, the Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation, the Travel Bureau—have participated to "Man and his World" in one way or another, but I do not have time to elaborate.

I wish also to point out that the government has recently taken part in a tripartite negotiation with the Quebec government and the City of Montreal which has indirectly resulted in a grant of more than $1 million to "Man and His World".

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a supplementary question.

Would the minister tell the house whether various departments of the federal government intend to participate in "Man and his World", especially the Secretary of State?

Mr. Speaker: Order! In my opinion, the supplementary question is much too general and cannot be asked at this time.

[Mr. Mackasey.]

[English]

VETERANS AFFAIRS

CANADIAN PARTICIPATION IN TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF D-DAY

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Veterans Affairs. I wonder if he will make a statement to the house about the extent of Canadian participation in the twenty-fifth anniversary of the D-Day exercises. Also, to what extent will Canadian personnel be participating in that exercise?

Hon. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, at the invitation of the government of France a Canadian delegation will commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the D-Day landing on French soil. The names of those who will be on the delegation have already been announced. Two members of the House of Commons are included, as well as the Sergeant-at-Arms and other distinguished persons who will well represent the government of Canada and the veterans of this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister indicate which two members of parliament are to be on the delegation?

Mr. Dubé: Yes, Mr. Speaker. One will be the hon. member for Northumberland-Miramichi (Mr. Smith) and the other the hon. member for Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe (Mr. Marshall).

Mr. Speaker: I draw the attention of hon. members to the time. There are only four or five minutes left in the question period. Perhaps we might go to other subject matters.

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

SERIOUS ERRORS AND INADEQUACIES IN RECORDING OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, may I address a question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. It relates to the government of the Northwest Territories. What action has the minister taken as a result of the Auditor-Generals' findings that there were such serious errors and inadequacies in the records of expenditures and revenues of the Council of the Northwest Territories that no reliable financial statement could be prepared therefrom.

Is anything being done to correct what might be a very awkward situation.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I must advise the hon. member that I am not aware of that statement by the Auditor General, but I will inquire immediately and report as soon as possible.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

REQUEST FOR REDUCTION IN RATE ON "MONTREAL" MAGAZINE

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Communications.

It can be foreseen that, following the increase in its postal charges from $28,000 to $55,000, the magazine Montréal, which made Canada known throughout the world, will disappear. Does the minister intend to grant a reduction in postal rates to that magazine?

Mr. Speaker: The question should be put on the order paper.

Mr. Dumont: Ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

HEALTH AND WELFARE

TOBACCO—RESEARCH TO REMOVE HARMFUL INGREDIENTS

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent-Essex): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. Because the action of the C.B.C. in curtailing tobacco advertising has serious implications for Canadian tobacco producers, will the minister advise the house if the government has advocated any stepped-up research program so that alleged harmful ingredients of this Canadian product might be removed either at the production or refining stage?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure what action has been taken since the C.B.C. made its announcement that the hon. member referred to. Our department has a continuing research program to identify the harmful ingredients.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PASSPORTS—SUBSTITUTION OF NEW APPLICATION FORMS

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington): Mr. Speaker, may I change the subject matter we are discussing and direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs about passports. In order to avoid many errors being made on applications, will the minister withdraw all the old application forms and replace them with new forms; or would he see to it that government agencies and persons handing out these applications will at least change the price from $5 to $10?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I will certainly take these suggestions into consideration. This however, has not been the main source of trouble. It has been the incomplete filing of information.

An hon. Member: People pay $5 too little.

Mr. Hales: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister ask his colleague, the Postmaster General, to advise his staff not to hand out forms on which there is printed the $5 figure. The $5 figure should not be on the form, but should be changed to a $10 figure.

NATO—GOVERNMENT POSITION ON OVERSEAS CAPABILITY

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. Is it the position of the government of Canada that there ought to be no over-all military reduction of NATO capability overseas.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. I wonder whether the Leader of the Opposition is not asking for a statement of policy. I doubt whether that kind of statement can be made now.

Mr. Stanfield: May I rephrase the question, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister can answer in a word. Was the Minister of National Defence speaking government policy on Friday when he said that the government, generally, agrees with the proposition that there should be no over-all military reduction of NATO capability overseas.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): It is part of the government's policy, Mr. Speaker.

An hon. Member: What part?

ARTS, LETTERS AND SCIENCES

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE—PRODUCTION OF "ANNE OF GREEN GABLES"

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, may I address a question to the Secretary of State. Considering the tremendously enthusiastic reception London is giving the Canadian play "Anne of Green Gables", will the minister consider bringing the cast to Ottawa so that this great play can be included in the opening festival of the National Arts Centre.

An hon. Member: It's too clean.

Mr. Baldwin: Bring Don Messer to the hill.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION FOR BAN ON TOBACCO ADVERTISING

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Secretary of State. May I ask him to express our appreciation to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for the excellent example it has set to other media by announcing last night that it will discontinue all cigarette advertising.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Translation]

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

LAKE MÉGANTIC AND COATICOOK—ESTABLISHMENT OF MAIL DELIVERY

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Communications.

In answer to requests by the municipalities of Lac-Mégantic and Coaticook, could he say whether those cities will soon by provided with letter carrier delivery as the government has been promising for three years, considering the representations and the expenditures those municipalities have made to meet the requirements of the department?

Mr. Speaker: Such a question should normally be put on the order paper.

[English]

GRAIN

WHEAT—REQUEST FOR ACREAGE REDUCTION PAYMENTS

Mr. R. R. Southam (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and is related to the question asked a few minutes ago by the hon. member for Lisgar. In light of short wheat sales and the resulting low income of western farmers will the minister and the government give consideration to introducing acreage reduction payments?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, the previous answer covers that question.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE IN TRAINING OF NURSES

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Since the Canadian Nurses Association has pointed out that the attitude of the federal government to nurses' education has been one of lethargy, bordering on antipathy, may I ask whether it is the intention of the government to increase resources devoted to educating nurses, especially at the baccalaureate, masters and doctorate levels.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. I venture to suggest to the hon. member that that is a question touching on general policy and normally it ought to be put on the order paper.

FINANCE

DEPARTMENTAL SPENDING SUPERVISED BY BUDGET BUREAU

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Is it his intention to set up a budget bureau modelled on United States lines in order to place departmental spending directly under the control of the Privy Council?

Mr. Speaker: I would suggest that that question too should be placed on the order paper.

HOUSING

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the minister in charge of housing. Will he be introducing amendments to the housing legislation before the house, as a result of the persuasive arguments of the members of the housing committee of the Liberal caucus on Wednesday morning?

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Mr. John Lundrigan (Gander-Twillingate): On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, may I request that tomorrow you turn your eyes in this direction during the question period, because we are not part of the Liberal rump.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will cast both eyes in the direction of the hon. member tomorrow.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order may I direct a question to the government house leader in connection with the business of the house. He did not announce in the business for the balance of the session before the summer recess whether or not the government intended to bring forward legislation to deal with the Maritime Freight Rates Act, but will he bring forward for debate the fifth report of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is not a point of order. The hon. member might have asked that question during the question period. I regret that I did not have an opportunity to call on him but I will do so tomorrow.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

REPORT STAGE

The house resumed, from Wednesday, May 7, consideration of Bill C-150, to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and motion No. 38, Mr. Rodrigue.

Mr. Speaker: The house will now proceed to the deferred divisions on proposed amendments Nos. 33 and 35. The question is on motion No. 33 (Mr. Laprise):

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting in clause 18 the word "female" on lines 28 and 29 on page 42 and the word "female" on lines 3 and 23 on page 43 and the word "female" on line 39 on page 44.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder whether it would be possible, for the convenience of all members of the house, that when there are deferred motions to be voted upon they be printed in the one place where hon. members naturally look to find the order of business, namely, Routine Proceedings and Orders of the Day. We have had to hunt for these amendments. It is true that we can find them in Votes and Proceedings of a day or so ago or in the Special Notice Paper that was printed a few days ago, or a few weeks ago, because it seems that long. I think some hon. members have had difficulty in finding precisely what they are voting on. I may say, without mentioning names, that one hon. member thought he was voting on something else. I think my suggestion would clear up a lot of confusion.

• (3:30 p.m.)

An hon. Member: That was the Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker: I must say that we attempted to produce a paper which would help hon. members. However, we will look at the situation again and consider the very valuable suggestion of the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order which has been initiated by what the Prime Minister indicated. I rise now to draw Your Honour's attention to the fact that the votes of the Secretary of State for External Affairs and one other member should be set aside because they obviously broke the rules and procedures of the house in taking their places when they did.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have to rule on the point of order raised by the hon. member. I cannot agree with his suggestion. The Standing Order which the hon. member should consult says that an hon. member cannot take his seat once the question has been put. Of course hon. members will recognize that the hon. member sitting to my left came in before the question had been put. Both hon. members voted according to the rules.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, in all fairness I think that the member whom Your Honour identified as a member to your left should not be identified as a Conservative but as a member of the N.D.P.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not think the matter should be discussed further. I appreciate the fact that the hon. member thought he had a legitimate point of order but the fact of the matter is that the Standing Order permits members to come in and take their seats as long as the question has not been put. Of course the moment the Speaker starts to put the question it is a well known rule that members cannot take their seats.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on exactly that point of order. Your Honour was on your feet and had started to speak before the minister took his seat.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre De Bané (Matane): Mr. Speaker, in the same vein as my hon. colleague, I think that all those votes are not important any more because this institution has become the laughing-stock of the population and a minority is destroying it—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr Speaker, I do not think parliament is becoming a laughing stock, but that could happen if we ever have too many incompetent or irresponsible members, such as the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané).

Mr. Speaker: I would ask the hon. member to think before he speaks. In my opinion, the hon. member has no right to use the kind of words he just said. I suggest to him to use discretion in the choice of his words, and above all to keep his remarks to the motion now before us.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, that is just what I intend to do, and I thank you kindly for your relevant remarks However, it would be easier for us to keep to our remarks if we were not interrupted all the time.

It should be noted, first of all, that the bill now before us would authorize abortion when the life or the health of a woman is endangered, whether this can be determined with certainty or not. This excludes abortions on any other grounds, such as refusal of motherhood or misunderstandings with the husband.

That is why the government proposes the establishment of a therapeutic abortion committee whose duties would be to determine such questions and issue a certificate to authorize an abortion.

What can one say about such a legislative proposal? We believe it is not enough to provide in the bill that there will be in each institution a therapeutic abortion committee whose function will be to decide when abortions should be authorized.

We think that this mere fact is not sufficient to ensure a greater guarantee, more security to the patient, to the doctor who will perform the abortion and to the government legislators who will pass this legislation.

In our opinion, it is definitely not enough to require a majority vote within the committee, for the sole purpose of authorizing the abortion, in view of the many doubts and the numerous cases which may occur from one patient to another.

Therefore, we think that the amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) is acceptable and desirable, for all the reasons I stated briefly yesterday.

I would like to take a few minutes to explain the reasons why we believe the decision of the committee should be unanimous for every abortion, rather than taken by a majority.

As I said yesterday, there are a great many academic discussions among doctors, which indicates that opinions are divided and that the same yard-stick cannot be applied to everyone when considering the various cases.

We have heard last night about all kinds of cases: the unmarried mother, the married woman pregnant with an adulterine child, the woman taken unaware by a pregnancy, the female worker who wants to get rid of the child to pursue her work unimpeded, the society woman, the artist, who would consider giving birth as a catastrophe, the woman who suddenly panics and becomes neurotic.

Those are some cases that I chose, among others, to demonstrate what problems the therapeutic abortion committee will have to face and also that very likely the members of the committee, for similar reasons, may be unable to arrive at a unanimous consent.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, the advantage is that the grounds on which a woman requests an abortion may not always be acceptable and it might be difficult in many cases to establish whether or not her life or her health is really endangered.

Consequently, we want a unanimous decision, so that if a woman falling under the categories I have just mentioned applied for an abortion to the therapeutic abortion committee, of course, two doctors might say: We are prepared to allow an abortion and issue a certificate. However, the other doctor who, in accordance with his code of professional ethics, his conscience and his knowledge, has more misgivings than the two other, might discover that the applicant is an unwed mother, that she rejects motherhood, and that abortion would not solve her problem but rather aggravate it.

Consequently, that physician would be justified in objecting and his refusal could convince the other two not to deliver a certificate authorizing abortion, so that they could then consider the case of that woman and help her otherwise and better than by procuring her abortion.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to see in today's issue of Le Droit an article on abortion by Dr. Noel Walsh which is entitled: "A psychiatrist's opinion"

This psychiatrist backs us up fully, Mr. Speaker, when we say that physicians are far from having, unanimous views. In almost 80 per cent of cases, an abortion is not a solution to the problem of the pregnant woman, but rather worsens her condition and such is the opinion of a majority of physicians.

In this regard, Dr. Noel Walsh said, and I quote:

> There are many aspects to the problem of abortion that I cannot consider due to lack of space. In conclusion, I would like to sum up the main ideas I developed:

You must agree with me, Mr. Speaker, that this psychiatrist shares our view that termination of pregnancy is not a solution but a complication and that we must consider each case in particular. He does not say there must be unanimous consent of the committee, but his conclusions indicate that we must take every possible precaution in order to protect the physical, mental and physiological health of the woman, to ensure the full and safe enforcement of the law and to secure understanding and a code of professional ethics within the therapeutic committee.

The first conclusion drawn by Dr. Walsh is as follows:

> In the present state of psychiatric knowledge, there are to my mind no psychiatric grounds to justify abortion and, on this point, my opinion is shared by many psychiatrists. I even believe that I have demonstrated that abortion, in the views of psychiatrists, is always harmful.

So, Mr. Speaker, if Dr. Walsh, an eminent psychiatrist, is able to say that in almost all cases, abortion is harmful, and that the patient's case is aggravated, by it, we must take into consideration this expert's view and ask ourselves the following question: Would it not be better to stipulate that the therapeutic abortion committee must be unanimous in its decisions and that such decisions must be based on scientific and medical information and not on sentimental grounds in order to avoid the risk of allowing an abortion that could be more harmful than beneficial to the person in question?

• (3:40 p.m.)

Dr. Walsh states as a second conclusion:

> There is every reason to fear that this bill does represent, in the structure of Canadian justice, a first crack which gradually could lead to a deterioration of human rights.

Here again, because I ask myself the question with regard to the amendment, I wonder whether these therapeutic abortion committees will not be in fact—as I have said earlier—the corner-stone of this legislation concerning abortion and therefore will have to ensure the enforcement of the law and of justice for each human being, each patient, and if they cannot implement the legislation in accordance with medical and scientific standards, a deterioration of justice will follow and once again Dr. Walsh would have been right.

And to eliminate this problem and put all the chances on our side, because we are referring here to a guarantee and not a filibuster, the unanimity which should prevail, in our opinion, within the therapeutic abortion committee would be a tremendous guarantee for the patient, for the therapeutic abortion committee, for the government and for the administration of justice.

Dr. Walsh comes to his third conclusion and I quote:

> The legislation will have adverse effects on the Canadian woman, Canadian family life and the quality of Canadian life in general.

Mr. Speaker, this does not necessarily relate to the amendment.

The fourth conclusion is really interesting and I quote:

> The legislation will have a detrimental effect on the medical profession.

Mr. Speaker, one can see that we have here an interesting conclusion:

> The act will have a harmful effect on the medical profession.

Therefore if we ask and demand that the therapeutic abortion committee make not a majority decision but a unanimous one as to the approval of abortion or the issuing of a certificate allowing abortion in the case of a patient, this will oblige doctors to perform abortions willingly only when it is really in the interest of the patient and in accordance with the ethics of the medical profession.

Short of that, we are in danger of minimizing the role of the medical profession.

That would justify Dr. Walsh who is afraid that the act will have a harmful effect on the medical profession.

We must maintain the confidence of the Canadian people in their doctors and protect the doctors themselves through certain safeguards in the law, with respect to their patients, in order precisely to strengthen the confidence that should be established between doctor and patient.

In his fifth conclusion, Dr. Walsh says and I quote:

> The act will not reduce the number of criminal abortions.

Mr. Speaker, we believe that if we do not ask the therapeutic abortion committee to make a unanimous decision, it would mean, in the case of a majority decision only, that many cases would obviously occur where an abortion would be allowed that would really be on a pretext, because the bill in itself has too broad a meaning.

When it is said that abortion would be allowed in all cases when pregnancy would probably or would be likely to endanger the life or health of a woman, the number of such patients would be pretty high because the word "likely" is so difficult to define, so wide, and opens the way to so many reasons, as well as the word "health" which is impossible to define. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) himself recognizes the fact.

• (3:50 p.m.)

Thus, all the cases which could be covered under the expression "would be likely to endanger her life" should be scrutinized by the therapeutic committee, and a certificate could not be delivered unless the decision of the committee is unanimous.

I would not like to give more details, since I think I put forward the main arguments which make me support the motion without any qualification. That is why I shall vote in favour of the motion moved by the hon. member for Beauce.

I think it is a constructive amendment which actually changes but one word in the bill, "unanimous decision" being substituted for "majority". I am convinced that the minister will certainly object to that, or is likely to.

I find it hard to believe he will oppose it, and to understand his motives. But I should like to urge him strongly to study our proposal to ask that each committee reach an unanimous decision in every case submitted to it, because he will surely agree with me that if abortion is a problem, we must not aggravate it through a law that is incomplete, too vague, which opens the door to every pretext; which would not consequently create justice but would contribute to degrade the justice we want to establish.

Mr. Speaker, I should like the Minister of Justice to reflect seriously on the matter, and to make his comments, in the hope that he might tell us he agrees with us for once.

As for us, we are convinced that this is a positive measure and that the house would be well advised to support it.

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, in the standing committee on justice and legal affairs, we considered many amendments, because the government received almost 25 of them.

But now we have reached the report stage, and the government supports the bill as drawn up and amended by the standing committee of the house. Because we support the report, I therefore feel, for good reasons, that we must reject the amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue). I shall explain why.

When he spoke in the house, the member for Hull (Mr. Isabelle) a doctor, reminded us, and rightly so, to my mind, that medical science is not an accurate science. It is, precisely a matter of judgment, a matter of experience, a matter of delicate medical analysis, which goes beyond the qualifications of the doctor.

Thus it would be unreasonable to insist and to demand unanimity of a medical council, where medical art founded upon human judgment. And I think that we should not expect unanimity concerning the symptoms which tell whether the health or the life of the mother are in danger. It is not a mathematical question. It is not an exact science. It is an art pertaining to professional judgment.

This is why I regret to have to say once again that the government cannot recommend to the house acceptance of the amendment presented by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue).

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words, to second the amendment of my colleague from Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue), who has just supported my colleague from Lotbinière and, at the same time, to comment on the statement which has just been made by the hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner).

He quotes the statement of his colleague from Hull (Mr. Isabelle) to the effect that the medical science is not infallible and that it is rather an art than a science. On this point, I would be inclined to agree with him and it is precisely that which led the member for Beauce to present this amendment.

If the doctors, with all their science, can err, it stands to reason that two doctors can err in a worse way than three.

As a therapeutic committee made up of three medical practitioners is required—not by us but by the government—it seems important that these three highly qualified doctors should be enabled to cut short a human life only if all three are agreed.

Mr. Speaker, in other fields of human activity, where committees, such as arbitration or legal committees, made up of several members, are required to render a decision, there is always a difference when a unanimous or a majority decision is reached.

That is why we insist on providing in the bill, if clause 18 is passed, that a unanimous decision is reached by the therapeutic committee concerned.

A few minutes ago, the Minister of Justice referred to the comments made a few days ago, in a similar situation, by the hon. member for Hull. During evidence he gave before the committee on health, welfare and social affairs, as is recorded on page 11 of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, No. 1, the hon. member for Hull said in answer to a question by the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis), and I quote:

> Mrs. MacInnis, there is one general observation I want to make on your bill. First, I am not too sure that we can achieve a change. I am for change, but how are we going to achieve this change?

At that time, the hon. member for Hull was asking himself that question.

> Another thing is this: you are aware of the fact that for the past 25 years many countries, especially the Scandinavian countries, Russia and some other countries, have widened their legislation on legal abortion and since this legislation has been brought along, strangely enough there has been an increase of illegal abortions in those countries. This is something that we cannot understand, but it could be easily understood in the light of Mr. Stanbury's point of view that therapeutic abortion committees—

Mr. Cantin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The parliamentary secretary is rising on a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Cantin: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is entirely outside the bounds of the amendment. He is taking us through various countries, reading us quotations 25 years old and talking a little about everything. The question is whether or not a committee should be unanimous in its decision. I suggest that he should be called to order and that he should speak only on the meaning of the amendment.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I was listening to the hon. member for Abitibi very carefully, but sometimes it was difficult to know whether the argument he was developing was leading to a point that was related to the amendment. I was trying to give him the benefit of the doubt. However, I hope he will observe the point raised by the parliamentary secretary, that he is required to confine his remarks to the amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I think I am as conversant with the Standing Orders as the Parliamentary Secretary of the Minister of Justice.

I only wanted to speak about the conclusion reached by the member for Hull in the committee of health, welfare and social affairs. I was just coming to that conclusion in which the hon. member, who is himself a doctor, reminds us that even therapeutic abortion committees, judges, lawyers, doctors etc. are at odds on such matters, which accounts for the fact that the number of therapeutic abortions has decreased while the number of illegal abortions has increased.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, when a woman or a girl comes before a therapeutic abortion committee to request an abortion on physical or mental health grounds, apparently there will be three doctors to pass a judgment, but only two of them will have to decide whether her health is in danger.

But the hon. member for Hull answers the question we are likely to ask ourselves. As the hon. member for Champlain (Mr. Matte) was asking him: "Doctor, is the mental health of a person easy to determine?", the hon. member for Hull replied: From the medical viewpoint I think two doctors are not enough to make such an important decision. This is exactly what the amendment is aiming at. It sees to it that two doctors will not be able to grant an abortion, if the third one is opposed to it.

In closing I shall refer to the remarks made by the hon. member for Hull who said that if there are too many of them, there will be chaos then.

Therefore, if we must accept a therapeutic committee to decide whether or not an abortion will be carried out in the case where the health of the mother would be in danger, I would have preferred that one of the three practitioners on this committee to be a gynaecologist. Since we ask that the committee be composed of three doctors to decide if the abortion will be carried out or not, I believe we should state in the legislation that the decision for or against the abortion should be unanimous. Then there would not be any possible ambiguity.

As the hon. member for Hull pointed out, the danger in this amendment lies in the fact that in cases where the committee will refuse an abortion in the light of the reasons given, then the woman or the young girl requesting the abortion for health reasons, whether physical or mental, will probablement go to a quack and that will not settle in any way the problem we want to solve by this amendment.

Mr. Speaker, it is for these reasons that I support the amendment moved by my colleague from Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) and I believe the other members should do the same when the vote is taken.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, we are once again considering an amendment which the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) could have looked at from another standpoint.

We support this amendment on the ground that doctors themselves have a great deal of difficulty reaching complete agreement on the nature of abortion and that the law would protect them further if it required unanimous agreement within the committee whose duty it will be to decide whether or not a female person should be aborted.

Mr. Speaker, by demanding unanimity, we feel sure that the committee will not be faced with a situation which would result in decisions based on uncertainties. The amendments increasing the number of responsible members within the abortion committee have been written off so that the committee will be made up of three members, instead of four or even five.

Therefore, it is most important, if only three doctors remain on the board, that those three be unanimous in their decision, so that in a field as serious as human life, a less conscientious doctor should not be left to influence the others unduly.

Mr. Speaker, that is perhaps the reason why, some time ago, the editorial writer Claude Ryan, of the newspaper Le Devoir, referred to those sham practitioners who, for a year or a year and a half now, have flooded radio and particularly television—mostly our national system—with their views on abortion. For one doctor who favours abortion, and on request, there are thousands of others who have had no opportunity to express their own opinions publicly. Those sham practitioners were the ones alluded to by the journalist.

Now, the very same newspaper Le Devoir, mentioned by my friend the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) a while ago, has published also a letter from Dr. Maurice Jobin, who supports abortion. In that letter, Dr. Jobin took exception to Mr. Ryan's condemnation of sham practitioners.

And Mr. Ryan, in a foot-note to Dr. Jobin's letter said this, and I quote:

> I wrote and I repeat that too many sham practitioners flood the air with their superficial talk on extremely complex and delicate subjects such as abortion.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but I must remind him that the motion we are considering deals with the question of whether the decision of the therapeutic abortion committee ought to be unanimous. I do not wish to restrict the right of the hon. member to speak on the motion but, so far as possible, I feel he ought to confine his remarks to the specific motion now being considered.

[Translation]

Mr. Matte: Mr. Speaker, thank you for your remarks, but the purpose of my intervention is to show it is important that the committee be unanimous, because doctors do not all share the same views and we require unanimity to avoid a situation where two doctors on the committee might be in favour of abortion for some women, while the third would be against. Such a situation, if it arises would be exceptional and would be frowned upon at first.

It is impossible, when human lives are concerned, when the right to live is involved to ignore 33⅓—since one out of three would represent 33⅓—who might be right, and to leave it to two out of three to make that decision. It would be a serious mistake to leave things as they are, since an indefeasible and unquestionable right is involved the right to live of a person of 90, 100, 101, as well as of a person of 50, 10, 9 years and that right also exists for a human being still in his mother's womb. This is our opinion and many physicians, especially those who have studied genetics, agree with us. They tell us that life begins at the time of impregnation when the impregnated ovule is actually implanted in the womb.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, as far as unanimity is concerned I would like to denounce, along with the editor of Le Devoir, Claude Ryan, the sham practitioners. There will always be a few who will exert influence on such committees; it is therefore quite important to distrust them. By requiring the unanimous consent of the abortion committee in accredited hospitals, we would thus secure a better guarantee than by leaving the clause in its present form.

I did not say that those sham practitioners were physicians, even if it is possible for physicians to turn quickly into sham practitioners when they take cover under their specialization to uphold views which strictly have no direct or causal connection with their competence. As for the argument about figures put forward by Dr. Jobin in his letter, it is entirely his own. It is not with such computations that we can prove the basic truth of a statement.

Dr. Jobin can also claim full ownership of his gratuitous innuendoes about his medical colleagues who do not think as he does on the question of abortion.

As you can see, Mr. Speaker I was in order.

I wanted to show the present disagreement among physicians. A great number of them, and the majority in Quebec, are against abortion. They have various reasons but one of them is that therapeutic abortion is no longer necessary today. That is what Dr. Noel Walsh said and I quote:

> This leads me to refer to the relationships between psychiatry and abortion. As you may know, according to obstetricians and physicians, medical and obstetric indications justifying abortion have practically disappeared and mostly, favourable indications to be expected in the future will be of a psychiatric nature. The question we must ask ourselves, then, is: Are there any psychiatric grounds for abortion?

Here again, you can appreciate the problem, Mr. Speaker, since there is no longer such a thing as therapeutic abortion. This is one of the main reasons why we are so much opposed to the present bill. The way we have insisted and come back to the same subject these last few days proves we are dealing with blockheads—if I may use the expression. All obstetricians and all physicians quoted are not Créditistes, Mr. Speaker, but people who are mainly concerned with this important problem of abortion. We have no objection against therapeutic abortion, provided the bill has no serious consequences.

We do not object to therapeutic abortion, Mr. Speaker, for the simple reason that it no longer exists. With medical progress, abortion is now uncalled for. If it were a matter of life and death for a pregnant woman, if a choice had to be made between the life of the foetus and her own life, we would not be opposed, then, to the doctor making use of all treatments required to try to save the life of the mother and at the same time the life of the foetus. We have no objection to that and we do not understand why so much time must be wasted on a question that medical science is on the point of solving definitely.

If doctors themselves hold such opinions, you will readily understand that they have some doubt as to the usefulness of the bill as it now reads. It would have been possible to legislate about abortion but in an acceptable manner.

It would have been sufficient to delete one small thing from the Criminal Code, that is the possibility of instituting proceedings against a doctor who, because of the treatments given by him to a pregnant woman, has caused an abortion.

At the present time, nothing prevents that woman or some other persons from suing the doctor. That was the only point that needed to be dealt with. There was no need to authorize or to legalize abortion on such and such a pretext.

As I just said, several doctors were in favour of abortion. Others are much more broad-minded, and claim that individual freedom would allow a woman to get rid of a foetus she is bearing, just like having a tooth pulled.

Mr. Speaker, there are all kinds of people in any profession, including the medical profession. It is to be wondered why they are more influential, and why their opinions are mostly retained.

That medical committee could always find somebody who would be either against or for abortion. So, it would then be necessary, in order to ensure an accurate diagnosis, to require unanimity. That would be a formal guarantee which, in my opinion, should have been considered much more seriously.

In so vital and so essential a matter as the one under consideration, it is extremely unfortunate to see some members take it so lightly as to call this debate a public mockery. I think it is extremely disastrous for the house to find that for some members the right to live of future generations is not worth anything more than that.

As far as we are concerned, it is to think of the people of the future, of the thousands or millions of people of the future who will not come to life because abortion is being legalized, is much more serious than just a mockery.

Our position is justified. As regards an amendment such as this one, when we ask once more the Minister of Justice and urge him to seriously consider this question, we abide by the standing orders. It is quite logical and it delays in no way the business of the house.

I repeat what I already said on several occasions, Mr. Speaker. Should the minister want a little more time to consider this, should he like to receive other briefs, or obtain further information, let the house adjourn and let us wait. Why such a hurry? Why do we have to pass the bill to legalize abortion? What is so urgent about it?

Who is urging us on? Is there at present such a great number of women at grips with that problem and who are waiting for this legislation to be able to get rid of their foetus?

We wonder why we are being accused of filibuster since we were not responsible for introducing the bill. Since the minister has just told us once again that he would not accept this amendment—and this time he seemed to be a little sad in telling us that—and if he thinks that he is not yet sufficiently informed—we should like once more to adjourn this debate, to wait and to proceed with some other business.

The bill on the official languages should be one of highest priority for the government and I think that the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is very pleased to see this debate drag on because it enables him to set aside the bill on the official languages and it provides him with a justification for not introducing it. He will say: the Ralliement créditiste did not want it because they drew out the debate on abortion.

We anticipate all these things and even though the matter we are discussing now might embarrass us politically this is not why we fight for our point of view; our inspiration is the significant principle of life.

• (4:20 p.m.)

That is our position and there is no political capital involved. We are not claiming to be defenders of morality, but defenders of life, of human rights, of freedom and of the human being. And as far as we are concerned, human life begins within a few days after conception.

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, the amendment we want to incorporate today in Bill C-150, reads as follows:

That Bill C-150, an act to amend the Criminal Code . . . be amended by deleting in clause 18 the words "a majority" in lines 38 and 39 on page 42 and substituting therefor the words: "unanimous decision".

I think it is important to know the big difference between "a majority" and "unanimous decision". This amendment is very serious because the question is whether to end life or not. The difference between "a majority" and "unanimous decision" is most important, because I feel the terms are contradictory, if a decision is to be made by the therapeutic committee in hospitals and clinics for or against abortion. There must be no doubt as to the health condition of the person on whom an abortion is to be performed, because, in my opinion, "doubt" means "a majority".

In this case, I think that "majority" is contrary to "unanimity" because in such a vital matter it is most important that the committee take a unanimous decision. A doubtful decision can be prejudicial to the health and probably to the life of thousands of people.

I would not want, because of some "nearly" or "perhaps", my progeny, which I value more than anything, to be in danger. I have ten children, which makes me very happy, and I would like to have more. Not for anything in the word would I want a therapeutic committee to decide, without being unanimous, the abortion of some of my progency.

For those reasons, I want such a committee be very serious and its decisions to be unanimous. That is why I fully support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue).

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the house ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on motion No. 38 (Mr. Fortin, for Mr. Rodrigue). Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion? All those in favour please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my view the nays have it. Pursuant to section 11 of Standing Order 75 the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Romuald Rodrigue moved motion No. 37:

That Bill C-150, An Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Parole Act, the Penitentiary Act, the Prisons and Reformatories Act and to make certain consequential amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, the Customs Tariff and the National Defence Act, be amended by deleting paragraph (c) of sub-section 4 in clause 18 on page 43 and substituting therefor:

"(c) has by certificate in writing signed by the three members of the Committee, stated that in its opinion, the life of the mother cannot be kept safe from danger with the continuation of her pregnancy."

[Translation]

He said: Mr. Speaker, I shall try to be brief in introducing amendment No. 37 since we have already discussed related subjects when amendments No. 26, 33, 35, 36 and 38 were discussed.

The purpose of the amendment I have moved is to replace clause 18 (4)(c) of the bill by the following:

"(c) has by certificate in writing signed by the three members of the Committee, stated that in its opinion, the life of the mother cannot be kept safe from danger with the continuation of her pregnancy."

Therefore the legislation would allow two doctors representing the majority, such as mentioned in paragraph (b) of subclause 4, on a three-member committee, to authorize abortion on health grounds, such as specified in section 18 (4)(c) of the bill now before us.

Some people may have different views on this subject, and the same may be true of abortion committees.

The community will soon find out which committees are more broad-minded. That is one of the reasons why I am inclined to think that the bill, as drafted and submitted, will lead people to believe that abortions will be performed on request.

Some doctors may question the value of the life destroyed by abortion. However, judgments of value are not medical judgments, and doctors are not any more competent than others to pass such judgments. In any event, Bill C-150 would confer upon them the supreme authority to judge what a human being is worth before his birth.

The establishment of committees does not provide any guarantee that the law will be properly interpreted, that this legislation will safeguard the common good and will be observed.

If we consider the differences in the frequency of abortion in the world, we find that the hospitals where the greatest number of abortions are carried out are those where the committees are the most tolerant.

I sincerely believe that in so amending the legislation, committees called upon to take such a decision will be respected.

If the majority reports is accepted as such, the reasons put forward by the third member of the committee who will refuse to sign the report, would probably be as sound as those of the majority.

The decisions to be made by the committees are most important and we must take all the necessary steps to prevent lives from being destroyed, or health endangered, because of a hasty decision.

It took the medical profession many centuries to gain the trust and the consideration of the people for its devotion to life and the relief of suffering. The best medical tradition has always showed deep concern for the life of innocent defenceless, weak or crippled human beings.

• (4:30 p.m.)

Now, we are asked to change all that and to renounce one of the main provisions of the Hippocratic Oath, which reads as follows:

I will give no deadly drug to any, though it be asked of me, nor will I counsel such, and especially I will not aid a woman to procure abortion.

Modern medicine provides us with hospitals and techniques which surpass anything mankind has known so far; nonetheless, we are constantly told that the progress of medical sciences dehumanizes the patient. The patient has become a "heart case", a "brain case" and so on.

We feel sure that the legislation on abortion will speed up this process. The doctor recommending abortion will become, reluctantly perhaps, a sort of quality expert. As his counterpart in industry, his responsibility will be to reject substandard, abnormal human beings.

There is no easy solution to the abortion problem and it is a mistake to try to solve it through a vague legislation.

Because of its complexity, we cannot hope to settle the problem easily.

The procedure to follow is quite different. Respect of human life throughout its various development stages should be promoted through education and educational laws. A serious study should be undertaken on the frequency of illegal abortions and on the measures to be taken to eliminate them. Such a procedure must promote medical research and really attempt to make available to mothers in trouble the resources of medicine and psychiatry. It must ensure a greater understanding of unwed mothers and of their children and actually meet their needs. It must promote research and the implementation of a more adequate social and family policy.

Everybody seems to agree on the meaning of the word life. But we are unable to define health, because this term is quite ambiguous. It is all very well for the legislature to use it, but somebody else will have to interpret it. Numerous pieces of legislation give rise to the same problem. I think the world life is clearly defined. We all know what we are talking about and we can actually tell if the life of such or such a woman is in danger.

Mr. Speaker, it is wise for the legislation to require that three doctors sign the certificate, and such is the main purpose of this motion. Doctors will enjoy some protection, patients will be assured that their case will receive serious consideration and will not be treated as mere correspondence.

Doctors who have authorized therapeutic abortions are certainly no criminals.

I feel this motion will clarify the legislation under consideration and that it will be approved by the house.

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, the comments which we could have made on that amendement were similar to those made when amendment No. 35 was under consideration. I had the opportunity yesterday to say a word on that amendment and the same remarks apply, but I would add that this afternoon, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) set forth the reasons why he rejected amendment No. 38.

Now, amendment No. 37 has the same meaning and the same motivation as amendments Nos. 35 and 38. Then, the same arguments apply and for the same reasons, the government cannot approve that new amendment.

Mr. Pierre De Bané (Matane): Mr. Speaker, as mentioned by the hon. member for Louis-Hébert (Mr. Cantin), the amendment now under consideration moved by the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) is a rehash of the one discussed yesterday.

Through a legal expedient, the Ralliement créditiste has decided to destroy the democratic mechanism which is Parliament.

Mr. Speaker, that the amendment brought in by the Ralliement créditiste is obviously a method, a means to snatch away from the Canadian people the exercise of democracy, that is—

[Mr. Rodrigue.]

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Shefford on a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This afternoon, we have strictly confined ourselves to the amendments before us. We have been most conscientious. We are making rapid progress in the consideration of the amendments and we find the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) is not justified in making such remarks, because they are out of order.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. If the point of order the hon. member is making is that possibly the hon. member for Matane is out of order, I must say that from what I have heard so far I am in agreement. I have been paying fairly close attention to the debate this afternoon and endeavouring to apply the rules of relevancy in order to expedite this matter. I would now invite the hon. member for Matane, if he wants to contribute further to the debate, to restrict his remarks to the amendment before us.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre De Bané (Matane): Mr. Speaker, the Ralliement créditiste has been out of order for 19 days. I dare them to say how—

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. De Bané: I would ask the hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette) to wait until I am finished.

Mr. Caouette: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. De Bané: All right, go ahead.

Mr. Caouette: I think this is no business of the member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) who is presently behaving like a clown. He is out of order, and to show how smart he is, he is constantly picking on Créditistes. The member for Matane knows we are ready for an encounter anywhere, because we can settle the hash of a hundred like him.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. As I pointed out to the hon. member for Matane, it is sometimes difficult to apply the rules of relevancy. In the first instance the Chair must respect the rights of hon. members to express their points of view, and one must hear that point of view before one can judge whether or not it is relevant. At that point it is sometimes apparent to other hon. members that the remarks go beyond what appears to be relevant. The Chair attempts as far as possible to apply the rules with fairness to all hon. members. I think it is in the interest of the application of these rules of relevancy that hon. members restrict their remarks to the matter before the house.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, all I can say is that it will not be the member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette) or the admirers of Hitler and Mussolini who will teach us the rules of democracy.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I again point out to the hon. member for Matane that the Standing Order and the citations are very specific in respect of relevancy. I am wondering whether, if we continue to proceed in this way, we will advance the legislation before us. I can caution the hon. member only so many times.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: That minority is trying to—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, I am going to deal specifically with the amendment under consideration, but I cannot refrain from saying a word, apart from the amendment, about the supporting arguments put forward by members of the Ralliement créditiste. And it is with that in mind that, before dealing with that specific point, I wish to say that the Ralliement créditiste is holding up the business of the house after its members tried to secure the voters' support which failed them at the last election.

I remind you that, in the Matane constituency, Créditistes did not muster 10 per cent of the votes while the whole campaign hinged on the abortion problem, and they were defeated on that particular issue—

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I think this is the third time I have pointed out to the hon. member that the rules in respect of relevancy are very specific. Remarks of hon. members must be directed to the amendment. I intend to enforce these rules as forcefully as I can, but I should also point out to the hon. member that if I were to allow him to continue in this fashion I would then have no option but to allow other hon. members to pursue the same course. This would only produce disorder in the house, and my responsibility is to maintain order. Let me point out to the hon. member that he must confine his remarks to the specific amendment before us. The rule of relevancy applies to him as it does to all other hon. members, and I intend to enforce it in respect of all hon. members.

• (4:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, I congratulate you for the shrewdness and the fairness with which you are presiding over the debates of this house. As for the amendment before us, it is, once more thanks to a legal fiction, the repetition of the motion which has just been defeated this afternoon by 90 per cent of the members.

Mr. Speaker, what is the Ralliement Créditiste trying to achieve with this amendment? We have just heard the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) repeat a lot of platitudes and nonsense, while the bill is the first attempt to regulate therapeutic abortion in Canada. Never has a physician who had performed a therapeutic abortion been prosecuted in Canada in the last 100 years. An effort is now being made at last to regulate this vexing subject.

In view of the democratic system, that is to say of the equality between men, I respect the opinion of the hon. member for Beauce (Mr. Rodrigue) since no one has the right to thrust his opinion on someone else. But when a minority has been trying for 19 days with amendments such as today's which is a repetition of yesterday's to make its opinion prevail, I submit that those people are trying to have the minority rule the majority. And I fear the day when these disciples of Hitler and Mussolini would have the majority, for we can see how they act, although they are but a minority today.

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, you called the hon. member to order at least four times and he has overlooked your remarks. I would therefore invite you to name this member and to expel him from the house.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. There was a moment when I thought the hon. member for Matane was dealing specifically with the amendment. I would suggest, however, that his latter remarks tended to drift away from the amendment. I point out to all hon. members that the difficulty the Chair has is that we have the Standing Orders and the citations in Beauchesne, and we can only operate with the co-operation of hon. members, short of naming them. That is exactly the problem we face. I point out to the hon. member for Matane that the house proceeds best with the co-operation of hon. members; that is the only way we can really proceed. If the hon. member persists in being out of order, he puts the Chair in a very difficult position.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to remind the house that it is not I, yesterday, who interrupted the Ralliement créditiste when the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) allowed himself to say that the Liberal party was made up of homosexuals. But I let them say these dirty things, Mr. Speaker, because I know that the worst thing these people can do is to underestimate the intelligence of the people. I want to come to this precise point: the amendment of the hon. member for Beauce. He knows very well—

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette: I rise on a point of order.

First I hear that the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) is now speaking without the permission of the authorities of his party. Nobody expected that.

Furthermore, as far as the point of order is concerned, we do not appeal to the intelligence of the member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) no more than we did yesterday, because we know he is deprived of any.

Mr. De Bané: The remarks which the member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette) has just made prove that his stupidity can only be matched by his demagogy. This is what he just proved.

[Mr. Rondeau.]

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I would invite the hon. member to continue on the amendment specifically or I will be in a position where I must refuse to recognize him.

[Translation]

Mr. De Bané: Mr. Speaker, as I said, the bill as a whole is the first attempt to regulate a most serious act which has been carried out for the past 100 years without any regulation. The regulation found in the bill contains several checking and supervisory mechanisms, namely that of enabling the provincial department, in each province, to check whether the legislation has been enforced to the letter, and not as the member for Beauce attempted to suggest, that it would become abortion on request.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude with these words. This bill led to a referendum in the province of Quebec in the last election and the Ralliement créditiste wanted it that way. I find that the tactics used by that group at this time are absolutely unworthy of our democratic system.

Mr. René Matte (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I might have been caught off my guard to speak to this amendment which is almost identical to the preceding one, I agree. Fortunately, the hon. member for Matane (Mr. De Bané) came to the rescue. (Untranslatable pun on "débaner"—(De Bané) and "dépanner" (come to the rescue.)

Mr. Speaker, it might be advisable to explain why we come back with amendments which are so similar, yet the wording of which is different. There is a very logical, very clear reason for that. We have been telling ourselves that if the government, and in particular the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) feel, for instance, that the wording of amendment 38 where the words "unanimous decision" would replace the word "a majority" is not acceptable, then we offer him an alternative through another amendment which this time the minister might find more acceptable more in conformity with legalistic terminology. That is why we return to the charge. There is nothing alarming in that. We are not trying deliberately to hold up the business of the house. We are merely trying to find a formula to help us accept more readily the legislative measure on abortion.

It may be, Mr. Speaker, that there was an error at the start, when amendment No. 19, was placed at the end. Had it been studied at the beginning of the debate, all the other amendments would have been cancelled automatically, which might have been more logical. Whereas now we are discussing small changes, to be made in the various paragraphs of clause 18, while we will soon be discussing the last amendment which proposes the deletion of clause 18. It must be understood that we are merely seeking the most suitable formula to the greatest number of members in this house. That is the only reason why we have a series of amendments the general purpose of which is the same.

An amendment on the official languages cannot be moved when we are dealing with abortion. It is obvious that all the amendments deal with abortion; and I cannot understand why some members cannot see that. It is obvious that the amendments are repetitious. We are dealing with abortion and all the amendments deal with it. One does not have to be exceptionally bright to understand these nuances.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, paragraph (c) of subsection (4) reads as follows:

(c) has by certificate in writing stated that in its opinion the continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health,

Mr. Speaker, we have tried to get the term "likely" deleted. Since we failed, if the word "certificate", were followed by "in writing signed by the three members of the Committee, stated that in its opinion, the life of the mother cannot be kept safe from danger with the continuation of her pregnancy", as far as we are concerned, the amendment would solve the problem on abortion, and would make the law acceptable to us.

Far from being an empty measure it is something extremely specific. For someone who can read and understand, it is obvious that this amendment would provide us with all the guarantees which we are seeking, that is to prove to all Quebecers including the hon. member of Matane that this is no idle talk. If the hon. member for Matane wants to stake his seat I would be the first one to go and fight him in his constituency on that matter.

Mr. Speaker, to prove to you that we are sure of what we are saying when we maintain that we represent the public opinion and that of people we know quite well, people we took the trouble to consult, people who have responded to our calls and who have sent us loads of letters and documentation of all kinds, we take the liberty of discussing a problem which is not foreign to us but which we know quite well. This matter is so important to us that we do not think we are mistaken in defending the very right to life.

Mr. Speaker, if the minister would give serious consideration to this amendment he would realize that it summarizes the opinion of the Ralliement créditiste as a whole, which is at least the opinion of the whole province of Quebec. And when it is requested that such certificate allowing abortion be signed by the three members of the committee, this makes it slightly different. Some people may not realize it, but it is different indeed. It is clear, Mr. Speaker, that through this amendment, which makes all the difference in the world, we are doing away with all the possible interpretations of the word "health". Abortion must then become justified within strictly defined limits: the danger to the mother's life. Consequently, by means of that amendment, we wish our position to be clarified as much as possible; and we are not the only ones who should show goodwill.

Goodwill should be shown by the government. Of the 44 amendments initially moved and later grouped together this amendment at least should be studied and given more consideration. If the minister were not content to kill time and wait for the end of this, we would long ago have proceeded to something else.

The decision authorizing an abortion must be reached in the most adequate manner possible, and, in this regard, even the authority of the doctors may be questioned. That is why the committee must be unanimous in its opinion that the continuation of the pregnancy would endanger the life of the mother. That gives the guarantee that we are looking for. The amendments to the Criminal Code that have been submitted would legalize abortion for various health reasons, that are not clearly defined, but that favour a wide interpretation. The effect of those amendments is to say to the medical profession: this is your problem, do what you want with it, we do not care.

Mr. Speaker, that is not the right way to deal with a problem as serious as this one. The question has been debated for a number of months, not to say a number of years, and the people appear to be bored with it. The reason is that, during the election campaign, the present Minister of Justice, as I clearly remember, had given to understand that amendments would be brought to the bill as submitted by our present Prime Minister who was then Minister of Justice. The people relied on the government to introduce the amendments that would give the guarantees they wanted.

That is why at one time, people were not concerned with these problems of abortion and homosexuality. During the election campaign, our major issue was to object to abortion. So we are consistent with ourselves because we have been given the mandate to object to the abortion legislation. We abide by it, and we take—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Again I caution the hon. member that he is going beyond the specific amendment that is before the house. In any event, it is five o'clock.

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In keeping with the wisdom and restraint of the New Democratic Party during this debate, I respectfully suggest to hon. members that we dispense with private members' hour and continue with this debate so we can finish it, complete the bill tomorrow and start with new business on Monday morning. I am sure that we have the co-operation of all members of the house.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Apparently there is no unanimous consent.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have the honour to inform the house that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate have passed Bill C-165, an act to amend the Income Tax Act and the Estate Tax Act, without any amendment.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the house that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles)—Post Office Department—request for return of six-day mail delivery and counter service the hon. member for Waterloo (Mr. Saltsman)—Combines—failure by sugar refineries to obey court order; the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau)—Canadian Broadcasting Corporation—"Don Messer's Jubilee", replacement by Canadian folklore program.

It being five o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely, private bills.

PRIVATE BILLS

AETNA CASUALTY COMPANY OF CANADA

The house resumed, from Friday, February 7 consideration of the motion of Mr. Wahn for the second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs of Bill S-11, to incorporate Aetna Casualty Company of Canada.

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): Mr. Speaker, I think that the position of the N.D.P. on this kind of private member's bill is well known, especially to the various sponsors of like bills on the government side of the house. This is the third time this bill has been before us for consideration and a great many of the members of our party have spoken on it at considerable length. I think that the words of the hon. member for Broadview (Mr. Gilbert) were certainly worthy of our consideration, and I might, with your permission, paraphrase some of them during my discussion of the bill today. Perhaps the most outstanding speech on this bill was made by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard), a colleague of mine from British Columbia. His remarks have given us all a great deal of inspiration and cause to consider where this sort of activity is leading us so far as the direction of our financial institutions is concerned.

I feel that the bill before us is another example of a United States company attempting to get into that very lucrative, legalized racket, the insurance industry in Canada. This measure, which originated in the other place, is an attempt to have this company incorporated as the Aetna Casualty Company of Canada. We note with interest that it is a direct subsidiary of a United States company whose home office is in Hartford, Connecticut. It is well known that this company, under another name, has been doing business in Canada for a great number of years in the life insurance field. Now it wishes to expand into a great variety of other types of insurance coming under the heading of general insurance. I notice that the company would like to increase its capitalization in order to enable it to take part in the general insurance business which would include among other things, fire insurance, various types of accident insurance, aircraft and automobile insurance, credit insurance, even earthquake insurance, as well as boiler insurance and falling aircraft insurance.

I do not understand the difference between aircraft insurance and the special type of insurance known as falling aircraft insurance but I am sure the company would be delighted to furnish this type of insurance if it were possible to make money for its shareholders by doing so. I notice also that the company is interested in extending its business into forgery insurance. It has taken an interest in the farm problems of this country because I notice it wishes to get into the hail insurance business. Community service clubs and similar organizations which arrange outdoor celebrations in our country and run the risk of losing money should the weather turn out to be inclement might well be interested in hail insurance.

The company is also interested in real property insurance. Again, despite the fact that we are well on the way to bringing medicare to most Canadians it wishes to become involved in sickness insurance. Apparently the company feels that coverage under the medicare plan will not be sufficient; it wants to expand its business in such a way as to bring greater security to the average Canadian. This is an altruistic move and an example of good corporate citizenship.

I see the company also wishes to provide sprinkler leakage insurance. This brings up all sorts of erotic connotations. I would be pleased if the hon. member who sponsored this bill would indicate what this type of insurance actually means. If it is needed in our country and if it provides a service which Canadians do not enjoy at the present time it would certainly be a point in favour of the bill. Theft insurance is well known to most of us; it is applicable as long as we make certain that we lock our doors. If we neglect to do so, I am told that in order to collect theft insurance the thing to do is to smash the lock with a hammer as soon as you get home in order to indicate to people in official circles that a theft has really taken place. Then there is water damage insurance. I suppose the need for that arises as a direct result of sprinkler leakage. As to insurance against wind storms, this is something in which all members of the house will be interested, judging from the debate here in recent days.

It is all very interesting and helpful but I think it begs the real question. The real question with regard to insurance in Canada, as in other parts of the world, is the influence which the insurance industry has on our financial institutions. I propose to read briefly from a book called "The Mortality Merchants" by G. Scott Reynolds, which is obtainable from the Library of Parliament. I am going to read, in fact, from the jacket. These words are presumably by the author, though I cannot be sure:

> Insurance companies today have such swollen reserves that they own or control 67 per cent of the nation's wealth—assets which are doing nothing to increase the death benefits the public is getting.

The book goes on to describe some of the things insurance companies are doing generally to mislead and rook the public.

A great many people are involved in the insurance industry and I am sure that a large number of them are providing an adequate service. I do not think we could do without various types of insurance. Certainly we have to accept some risk ourselves—and the "deductible" clause provides for this—but we cannot insure ourselves against all losses. There is a definite need for insurance in our country, and if we damn the activities of the various insurance companies this does not necessarily mean we are damning the concept of insurance in general. What is of particular concern to most people who are interested in the subject at all is the fact that insurance companies do not really provide the protection they say they do. There is very much in their selling techniques which is left to the imagination of the salesmen or may be implied by the efforts of the salesmen.

Then again, it seems to me there is almost endless duplication of the various services we have in Canada already. I cannot for the life of me understand why we should need any more of them. It is beyond my understanding that Aetna could come up with the statement that the public would benefit because competition within the industry would be increased. I have never seen this happen before, and there are a great number of insurance companies operating today. We find company after company, salesman after salesman, running around doing essentially the same things and, what is more, at the same price. I would be prepared to sit down and relinquish the floor if anyone in this house can show me how the multiplicity and variety of insurance companies has led in any meaningful way to lower rates of insurance to the general public. It seems to me it will do just the opposite. If you have ten men running around doing what one man can do, then it seems to me that comparative costs will be somewhere in the neighbourhood of the power of ten. I do not see how this leads in any meaningful way to a reduction of costs or the provision of better protection for the Canadian public or, for that matter, the citizens of any other country.

• (5:10 p.m.)

This is not the only instance of duplication. Constantly, one company after another is vying for the consumers' dollars, and we are told that this will lead to lower prices. I do not think this is the result. When companies merge we are told it is an attempt to improve efficiency. I cannot see how one can contend on the one hand that rationalization brings about efficiency, and on the other hand that extra competition brings about efficiency. This is a contradiction in terms. You cannot have it both ways. It seems to me it has to be either one or the other

I should like to give an example of a related activity that has a great number of outlets and different brand names, namely, the gasoline industry. A great number of companies seem to feel that they should direct their best efforts to putting a gas station on every street corner in the country. This is done under the guise of competition of some sort. I think most of us here have noted that, with the exception of a few cut-rate places, most of the gas companies seem to arrive at precisely the same price for their products. As a matter of fact, it has been suggested that perhaps there really is not very much difference between their products. However, I think that marginal differences and services tend to be overemphasized in this field, as they do in the insurance field.

Another example of how the public is being misled is in the operation of the deodorant market. People seem to feel that if they buy a particular kind of deodorant they can come up smelling like a rose—no personal pun intended. There is an endless duplication of various types of deodorants on the market, and this seems to spur competition. However, I am not certain that it accomplishes much more than that, unless it is to line the pockets of the manufacturers of such commodities. Soaps are another example. Many—

Mr. Wahn: On a point of order, Mr Speaker, I would question whether the hon. member's remarks are directed to this bill, which relates to an insurance company. I realize he may be having difficulty in saying anything that has not been said before, but nevertheless we are very much interested in hearing remarks that are directed toward this particular subject matter. I submit that the hon. member's remarks about soap and deodorants are hardly relevant to the field of insurance, this type of insurance at any rate.

Mr. Rose: Mr. Speaker, I agree with the hon. member for St. Paul's (Mr. Wahn) that perhaps I did indulge in a mild excursion, but I felt it was necessary to do so in order to clear the air, as it were. I also felt that perhaps this was a collateral example of the kind of thing that is happening in many other industries However, let me assure the hon. member that I will desist from following this line because I certainly do not want to make him uncomfortable. I think the hon. member is entitled to hear a discussion of the merits of the particular bill he is sponsoring and therefore I will get right to the point.

What I am really trying to say is that it is very difficult in this kind of industry to justify another intrusion by a foreign-owned firm into the Canadian market on the ground that it is going to bring about better service to the insurance purchasing public of Canada. I have tried to make the point that rather than having too few insurance companies we already have too many, that this multiplicity of companies has not contributed anything in terms of efficiency of operation or reduced cost to the insurance buying public.

Instead of our approving this type of bill in this house, I am certain that Canadians would be more interested in the results of some kind of study along the lines of the Hall commission report on medicare so as to see whether or not we really do need further extensions in the general insurance field in this country. It seems to me we are always being told we do not have money to build homes, that we do not have money for schools, or that we do not have money for many of the essential services that we require in this country. Yet insurance companies are able to construct monstrous edifices to house their continually expanding office forces which, in my view, do little more than chase paper.

If such a committee of inquiry were struck to look into this field, it would probably come to the conclusion that some sort of public ownership of the general insurance field, as in the case, for instance, of the automobile insurance field in Saskatchewan, would enhance service to Canadians. This service is required. I think insurance companies tend to grow fat on the real or imagined suffering of people generally, and particularly from their need for security.

I believe I have said enough about this matter to outline to the house the point I am making in the discussion of this bill. In conclusion I suggest that what we have to do is to see to it that extensions of foreign-owned insurance companies in this country are discouraged unless they are prepared to vest at least 50 per cent of their ownership with the Canadian people. If that were the case, when legislation such as this was brought before the house I think the members of this party would be much more prepared to support a plea for incorporation.

Mr. John L. Skoberg (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I should like to carry on with the trend of thought pursued by my colleague. So far as Canadian ownership of insurance companies is concerned, I am sure that the hon. member for St. Paul's (Mr. Wahn), who introduced this bill in the house, must feel a little ashamed when day after day he reads in the newspapers that individual companies incorporated in Canada or companies that are supposed to be good corporate citizens are not even attempting to concern themselves about Canada generally, or even to concern themselves about recognizing the laws of the land. I am sure it is only right that I should refer specifically to an analogy that I think is most pertinent in this particular case. May I refer to a Headline in today's Globe and Mail which reads: "Cuba To Buy Flour Worth $29 Million."

• (5:20 p.m.)

I draw to the attention of the hon. member sponsoring the bill that in the case of flour mills we have a situation that is analogous to that of insurance companies in this country. Many of our insurance companies and flour mills are controlled by United States interests. The article I have before me says that Canada sold $22 million worth of flour to Cuba. Actually, the sale was to the Soviet Union but the flour is to go to Cuba. The article says that the main mills involved are Ogilvie Flour Mills of Montreal and Maple Leaf Mills of Toronto. The order was divided among Canadian mills, each of which is to supply a share. The significant words in the article are these, and I invite the hon. member to pay attention. It says that not participating in the sale to Cuba were Canadian flour mills owned or controlled by United States interests. Those foreign controlled mills were prevented from selling to Cuba because of the provisions of the United States trading with the enemy act. The article ends by saying that 1969 sales are equivalent to about 15 million bushels of wheat.

May I also remind the hon. member for St. Paul's of what has been happening to another Canadian company, Robin Hood Flour Mills. That company is controlled by United States interests and in Moose Jaw a mill of that company was closed, resulting in lost employment for many people of the area. The Robin Hood Company is talking of closing other mills across Canada, largely because it is prevented from selling wheat to some countries by virtue of United States regulations governing its parent in the United States. Surely a company in this country should not be affected by regulations passed in another country, and here I refer specifically to the United States trading with the enemy act. Robin Hood, which is dominated by Minneapolis Milling, may have to close many Canadian mills, to the great humiliation of Canada.

The same sort of argument applies to foreign dominated insurance companies. We want to see insurance companies in this country which are owned by Canadians. We do not want to see in the case of insurance companies the situation that applies to companies such as International Petroleum, owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey. I use International Petroleum as an analogy because although it is United States owned its head office is in Toronto. Recent publications show that Canada's name is mud in Peru, largely because of the actions of this company which has its head office in Toronto.

Returning to the other part of the analogy, the insurance companies, I submit that we should not have in this country insurance companies which are subsidiaries of parent companies in the United States. I therefore suggest to the hon. member who is sponsoring this bill that he withdraw it from the order paper. Considering the lost wheat sales that affect our western farmers and considering the bad name International Petroleum has given Canada, I submit that the hon. member ought to consider withdrawing this bill from the order paper.

If an insurance company wants to do business in this country it ought to make sure that any bill to incorporate it includes a clause saying that the company is Canadian owned or very shortly after incorporation will become Canadian owned. When a bill like that came before the house recently it was passed and the members of this party did not object to it. But unless there is such a clause in such bills to incorporate this party will oppose these applications. I think we owe that to the Canadian people. I therefore suggest that hon. members sponsoring bills like the one now before us—and I know they act in good faith—make sure that such a clause is included in their bills.

Having said that I now move, seconded by the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis):

That this bill be not now read a second time but that it be read a second time this day six months hence.

The record shows that when this bill first came forward the chief spokesmen for the company were from across the border. I have in my hand a copy of the proceedings of the Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce of the other place. It is issue No. 4, dated Wednesday, October 23, 1968. I see that two individuals from Hartford, Connecticut, appeared before the committee. The general manager of the Canadian office appeared, but his origin is not indicated. Of course, the parliamentary agent also appeared before the committee. It seems that the company to be incorporated was to be a new insurance company with power to transact all classes of insurance except life insurance. On page 41 of the proceedings Mr. R. Humphrys, Superintendent of Insurance, is reported as having said in part:

If incorporated the company would be owned by the Aetna Casualty and Surety Company, a United States company that has been authorized to transact insurance in Canada over many years.

He went on to say:

Foreign companies can come into Canada and become registered under the insurance companies acts and transact business here on a branch basis if their financial condition is sound. This is a very common method of doing business in Canada.

I have already referred to our lost wheat sales and to the activities of the International Petroleum Company, with headquarters in Toronto. Flour and petroleum interests in Canada controlled from within the United States have not behaved as good corporate citizens. Mr. Humphrys went on to say:

Many of them, however, form or purchase Canadian incorporated companies and do business in Canada through the Canadian subsidiary.

I ask the hon. member sponsoring this bill whether the company wishing to be incorporated will be a good corporate citizen of this country or will it behave as other subsidiaries of United States companies have behaved? It seems that some of them do not intend to obey the laws of this country and do not intend to be good corporate citizens. In fact in many cases, as I have mentioned, they have certainly blackened the name of Canada.

[Mr. Skoberg.]

The desire here is to form a new Canadian company and direct the Canadian business of this group through a Canadian subsidiary. It might not be too bad if the subsidiary were prepared to live up to the laws of Canada and become Canadian owned within a predetermined time. But when a U.S. company bought Robin Hood Flour of Canada it was made clear there was no intention of allowing the Canadian company to export flour to the U.S.S.R. or Cuba. It is a complete disgrace that a company like Minneapolis Milling can dictate to Robin Hood Flour and so do harm to the Canadian economy. This is what will happen if we continue to allow these foreign insurance companies to be incorporated in Canada.

I believe I have laid the groundwork to which the facts of this case may be applied, Mr. Speaker. I believe that hon. members who insist on sponsoring bills such as this, with no provision for the companies concerned to become Canadian owned, will now hesitate to sponsor such bills. I have drawn the attention of the house to the fact that we must be very careful about incorporating companies that do not intend to become good corporate citizens.

We appreciate those companies that do live up to our laws and are good citizens, but there are too many that have no intention of living up to our laws. I conclude by urging hon. members to give consideration to the points I have put forward.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, the first thing I wish to do is to congratulate the hon. member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Skoberg) upon moving the amendment to this bill. I would also like to compliment him on his remarks, and I wish to support them. I also wish to say the same thing with respect to the hon. member for Fraser Valley West (Mr. Rose).

As we all know, Bill S-11, an act to incorporate Aetna Casualty Company of Canada, was introduced in the Senate, and was first discussed in this house by the hon. member for St. Paul's (Mr. Wahn) on December 19 last. We must ask many questions when we debate a bill like this, and I would like to hear the hon. member for St. Paul's answer many of the questions that not only I but other hon. members wish to ask about bills of this sort. We have been asking questions relating to such things as foreign ownership, the control of the company, and why this company wishes to be incorporated in Canada.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

A message was delivered by Major C. R. Lamoureux, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, as follows:
