A GREAT MILL.

Shives Lumber Company's Big Plant at Athol, Restigouche.

The Shives Lumber Company's new mill at Athol, Restigouche county, is described as a very large one and is built of very long lumber cut by saws. It is 225 feet long and 65 feet wide. The boiler house and engine house are of brick, with iron rafters and galvanized iron roof. The steam plant consists of a battery of five large boilers. The engine is a very large one, the cylinder being twenty-eight inches in diameter, thirty-six stroke and the fly wheel is sixteen feet in diameter and fifty-four inches wide. In the engine room space is provided for an independent engine to run a large dynamo to light the plant and also to provide power for the motor to drive the clappboard and other plant, which are to be placed in a building a long distance from the mill.

The logs are taken to the pond by an endless chain, and moved on the log bed by live rolls. A jump saw is arranged in the live bed for cutting logs into any lengths required. There is also log kickers for placing the logs on either side of the log bed, to the rotary or twin circular saw required.

The logs are cut by a rotary driven by steam feed, and the cuts are then transferred by chains to the gang, and there cut into deals and boards as may be required. They are then passed to the edger and trimmer, the slabs are cut into long lengths on the slab slander, and are then cut into laths. All the edgings and waste wood go to the refuse burner. The machinery of the mill consists of two Wicks gang, one rotary, one twin circular, two double edgers, four slab saws, trimmers and also two lath machines, and an improved clappboard machine for sawing two clappboards laths at one time.

CONSUL WASN'T KILLED.

Fake Story Arouses the U. S.—Warships will go to Turkey just the Same.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 28—It transpires that the report that Vice-consul Magelsen was killed is incorrect. An unknown individual fired at him and the bullets passed close to the vice-consul but did not touch him. The vice-consul, after being visited by Vice-consul Magelsen, expressed his regrets for the outrage and offered assurances for the arrest of the perpetrator. The error in stating that Vice-consul Magelsen had been killed arose from a mistake in a cipher telegram.

OSTER BAY, N. Y., Aug. 23—President Roosevelt was informed by a representative of the Associated Press tonight of the incorrectness of the report that Vice-consul Wan, C. Magelsen at Ceir, Syria, had been assassinated.

The President expressed gratification that Consul Magelsen had escaped without injury from the assault of the would-be murderer. He announced, however, that no change at present would be made in the plans of this government and that the European squadron, which he last night ordered to proceed immediately to Beirut, would continue to its ordered destination.

It can be said that the president and secretary of state both regard it advisable in view of the present state of unrest in Turkey to have American war vessels in Turkish waters.

For several hours today President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hay, were in conference at Sagamore Hill. They discussed every suggested phase of the situation in Turkey. At the conclusion of the conference Secretary Hay announced his intention of returning immediately to Washington.

The fact that Secretary Hay considers his presence in Washington necessary at this time indicates the serious view he takes of the Turkish situation. He had not expected to return to Washington for several weeks, but the development in the Ottoman empire during the past few days induced him to come to Oyster Bay for a conference with president, after which it was deemed advisable by both that he should return to Washington at least for a couple of weeks.

SUDDEN DEATH.

CHATHAM, N. B., Aug. 31—Mrs. William Stothart dropped dead this afternoon at her home in Lower Newcastle, opposite her town. The deceased lady was about 56 years old and was a daughter of the late Thomas Haviland, who for many years was proprietor of the steam ferry at this place. It is not known that she had been suffering from any disease to cause any uneasiness to her friends. It is supposed that heart disease was the cause of her death. She is survived by a husband and five children, most of the latter being grown up, besides several brothers and a sister, and has a large circle of friends who deplore her sudden calling away.

Two-Minute Trotter.

The Pretty Story of Lou Dillon.

Lou Dillon is five years old, by Sidney Dillon out of Lou Moulton, she by Milton Medium by Happy Medium, out of Old Princess, whom Mr. Billings's father owned in 1857. She is small, weighing 904 pounds, standing scant 15.1, and a mare that, while on the Santa Rosa Stock Farm in California, was thought would never be able to go the full mile. She was thought to be fretful and unsteady, though she has never made a break. But she had shown a tendency to stop at points on the race track where they don't pay any money. It was this reputation that kept this young mare from bringing more than $12,500 of Mr. C. K. G. Billings's money—a mare that could finish the mile, be unhitched and in her stall before her great grand-daughter, Old Princess or Flora Temple had reached the wire.

To Mr. Billings, her owner, and Millard Sanders, her driver, belong great credit. Millard Sanders put her first halter on, and broke her to lead. He then obtained her great slanting shoulders and the short distance between her knee and pastern joint. He sat in the beautiful sunlight, during the first winter after her birth and watched her play in the paddock while her old mother ate green alfalfa. He (Sanders) told the owner of the Santa Rosa Farm that the little chestnut filly cost that they had named Lou Dillon, played all day without breaking from the trot. They laughed together and predicted she would some time be the two minute trotter.

The grooms and farm hands had lots of fun with this little filly with the white star and the white hind foot. One negro groom said it was lucky, and he argued much with the old man that ploughed the fields. Finally, when Millard Sanders put the biting harness on her, others thought he should have let her play another six months.

But Sanders knew best. He had been quoted in the Santa Rosa papers as having a great filly out on the farm. When she did not know whether her tongue would be more comfortable over the bridle bit or under it, she trotted fast quarters. Patiently he taught her alone and in company. Her mother and father watched their child on the farm track from their respective paddocks. Her child days of play were gone unless she was a failure. Then she could play even plough, but if Sanders was anywhere near right in his prophesy she should never again have her shoes off until she led the world's record. Spring came and little Lou Dillon walked to the depot with Auzella and the other old campaigners to be shipped East, where she might watch the grand circuit trotters. She behaved like a little lady and came home that fall with great things to tell her half-brothers and sisters of the sights she had seen in the great East. She had seen from her box stall Auzella, the farm's standby, trot a mile in 2:07, and she, this baby, had gone so fast at Lexington early one morning that the suiky wheels made a noise that scared her.

Again, all winter long, Sanders trained her mile after mile on the Santa Rosa track. Her owner died suddenly, and the horses were ordered sold. Strangers from far in the East went five days' ride on a pullman to see this filly trot as she was advertised in the same catalogue. Millionaires stayed all night in Santa Rosa that they might see her trot a half mile the next day.

The news was wired all over the world that Lou Dillon, the green filly, had trotted a one-half mile in a fraction over a minute, the last quarter in 29 3/4 seconds. More millionaires marked her number on their catalogues that had been sent them of the coming sale. But a story from back of the barn got out. Some discharged groom told that she stopped at the draw gate; that she quit where there were no judges.

So when Mr. Bain, the astut auctioneer, called attention to Lou Dillon and praised her to the skies even called her the two-minute trotter, the best he could do was to sell her to Mr. C. K. G. Billings for $12,000, and Mr. Billings took the bit in his own teeth and bought her personally after his keen adviser, Dr. Tanner, had advised him to come away, that they would be spending their time eating pie.

Mr. Billings had heard where she stopped, but he knew before she did stop if she did he would take the kiak out of that part of his hair between his cap and ear, and would console himself that he had heard a $12,500 breeze blow there at least.

Millard Sanders went to the stall and bid her a sad good-bye. He called her "his baby" though her nickname was lovely. He implored Dr. Banner to be patient with her, not to break her heart.

Mr. Billings wanted a ride. Lou Dillon had never been hitched to a speed wagon and she couldn't ride with Mr. Billings without she did. So "Doc" Tanner ordered no check rein, no boots. After the Doctor had warned her he handed the lines to Mr. Billings, who, when he picked up the lines, said: Well, we will see where she stops and have the grandstand moved if necessary.

She squared away, and with a stride, open and wide, made the speed wagon hum. Mr. Billings liked the hum till he looked at the watch which he held in his left hand. Then he grew nervous. She was beating the world's wagon record for mares, where he had only come out for a little drive. His hands shook with excitement as she finished strong in 2:06. He asked: Where did she stop?

She didn't, replied Tanner. Some days later she pulled the same wagon again in 2:04, and then Mr. Billings asked Millard Sanders to come and take her and Mrs. Emmons, saved from an operation for Ovaritis, tells how she was cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I am so pleased with the results I obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it a duty and a privilege to write you about it. I suffered for over five years with ovarian troubles, causing an unpeaceful existence, a great weakness, and no times a faintness would come over me which no amount of medicine, diet, or exercise seemed to correct. Your Vegetable Compound found the weak spot, however, within a few weeks—and saved me from an operation—all my troubles had disappeared, and I found myself ever more healthy and well. Words fail to describe the real, true grateful feeling that is in my heart, and I want to tell every sick and suffering sister. Don't delay with medicines, you have nothing to lose but what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and take my word for it, you will be a different woman in a short time. Mrs. L. E. Emmons, Wakefield, Ont. — $2.00 per bottle. Original of above letter preserved. Similarities cannot be produced."

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your case which you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address is Lynn, Mass.

Drive her for the world's record. Sanders drove her in 2:02 3/4 some days ago, and Crescers began to get uneasy. The man that started the story, that she would stop, was hard to find. And today this five-year-old mare, still eligible (so far as a race record is concerned) to start in the four-minute class trot, trotted a mile in two minutes, the greatest feat, all things considered, ever accomplished by her flesh, trotting the last quarter, the place where they all quit some, in 29 seconds, the fastest of the four.

Everything Lou Dillon has ever done nearly has been a world's record. So a week ago, when I talked with that shrewd gentleman, horseman and driver, H. K. Devereaux, concerning her, he said: "She is such a remarkable mare that anything she may do will not surprise me."

In comparison to Cre-cus she is like the man who resembled Daniel Webster as they both wore glasses—they are both sorrel.

Cre-cus is big and powerful with a big barrel, leggy and determined, with no sign of nerves. Lou Dillon is small, shapely and graceful, thin around the flank and deep through the heart. Her loins are grayhound's, and her most remarkable parts are her shoulder and elk-like legs and feet. Her head and eyes show high nerves and when she trots, slow she looks as, if you slapped her with the lines, she would gallop, a thing she has never been guilty of.

Thus, the money she would bring home would not be enough to bed her one night.

The latest application of the principle of the penny in the slot reported from Australia. In the post-offices of the commonwealth the person in a hurry will in future be able to drop his letter into one orifice of a machine and his penny into the other, and when this process is complete one penny paid will be found imprinted on the envelope as an equivalent for the orthodox stamp.

When dealing with black servants in India, it is necessary to be very careful in the wording of one's instructions, for they are sometimes taken very literally. A missionary voyaging on a river boat with primitive accommodation was compelled to use a bucket as a wash-towel. One morning his lay servant was bringing the bucket to his master when he spilled some of it over the latter's feet. Why don't you throw it all over me? said the missionary irritably. Aha, exclaimed the boy and promptly did so.

THE COST OF THE ROAD.
Mr. Fielding's estimate of the cost of the projected all-Canadian railroad across the continent is less than that of Mr. Blair. The Minister of Finance placed the length of the line from Moncton to Quebec at 400 miles, while at $25,000 a mile would cost $10,000,000.

which would pay the interest for seven years, during which there was a government liability, it would be a government liability, it would be a government liability, it would be a government liability.

As already stated, Mr. Blair's estimate of cost is much larger. The mileage from Moncton to Winnipeg he puts at 1,825 miles, less than Mr. Fielding's figures, but the cost per mile he makes greater. He figures the direct and indirect liabilities at $139,000,000, $65,000,000 of which will be on the eastern division, and he calculates the interest liability differently.

DIVE GRACEFULLY.
King and Queen Appear to Enjoy Their Work at the Lake.

The diving horses, King and Queen, which are at the lake for the week, gave their first performance yesterday afternoon, at 5.15, and if anything it was beyond expectations of the big gathering that waited patiently for nearly 45 minutes, after the performance at the theatre was over, in order to witness the dives.

The animals, King and Queen are almost snow white, are singularly intelligent, and seem to enjoy the plunge from the high tower into the open lake, and swim back to the landing built for them.

When the apparatus was ready the horses were bought out. Their beauty won for them the greatest admiration from the audience. King was led to the landing stage, where his mate Queen could see him. The mare then went up the long chute composedly and with an air of ease that led the people to understand that she enjoyed the work.

When Queen arrived at the top of the chute, 40 feet above the water, she looked around for a moment, and seeing King below, gave a delightful little neigh, to which King answered, then slowly placed her forefoot on the little

In a moment she arose and began swimming toward the landing stage, where King was standing. Queen ran over to him and began to caress him with an almost human affection.

King's dive was, if anything, even prettier than Queen's. King dived almost straight out into the air, and when descending, inclined his head. His feet are all spread out and as he strikes he sends up a mountain of water.

The Union Advocate, NEWCASTLE, N.B., SEPTEMBER 2, 1903.

Now is the time to get your electric lighting system installed where they will be most appreciated.

This is a question which every household should consider and when a decision is reached carry it out at once.

How can the revenue be increased so that it will meet all expenses. Let every household install light and we guarantee that the electric light plant will earn a nice surplus each year.

Have your residences and business places wired at once. FIRE INSURANCE. When the citizens were canvassed to vote for the installation of a water system one of the greatest inducements held out was the reduction of the insurance rate which such system would bring about.

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong. And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed. Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.

Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

Editor's Mail.

To the Editor of the Advocate.

I notice from time to time in your valued paper, notices of convictions and fines in connection with the Scott Act, and in every instance the charge is a "disturbance."

Some of those names have appeared more than once, and how can this be unless always appear as the charge. I made enquiries about this matter and was told that the Inspector, the Police Magistrate and the Town Council, favored the first offence charge because then the fine would be paid promptly, and if these offenders were sentenced to jail, it would mean the loss of the fine and besides the public would have to pay the cost of keeping these people in jail.

It is something which every household should consider and when a decision is reached carry it out at once. There is only one solution to the above question and every intelligent ratepayer can easily solve it. Just so long as the earnings of this plant remain below the expenses so long will every taxpayer be taxed to keep it running.

How can the revenue be increased so that it will meet all expenses.

Let every household install light and we guarantee that the electric light plant will earn a nice surplus each year.

CASSILIS.

A large assembly of friends and relatives gathered at the residence of Mrs. Daniel Hubbard on Wednesday, August 26th to witness the marriage of her daughter Clara May to Arnold M. Parks of Redbank.

At 2:30 Rev. J. D. Murray performed the ceremony which made the happy couple man and wife. The bride was tastefully gowned in white muslin with trimmings of lace and insertion, and each of white ribbon. The bride's hat was a dainty creation of white chiffon, trimmed with white satin ribbon and plumes. The bride was attended by her sister Miss Fannie Hubbard gowned in white and pink mocha with trimmings of insertion and lace, with hat to match. The groom was fully supported by his brother Mr. Cecil Parks. After the ceremony a sumptuous tea was served, followed by refreshments of fruit, candy and stuffed dates. At 5:45 the bridal party followed by a large number of friends and relatives drove to the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parks where a reception was given and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Parks received many useful and valuable presents which testified to the esteem in which the young couple were held in both places.

BATHURST.

It is now that we are really getting decent weather. Nobody could complain in that score this week, and it has been encouraging not only to the farmers, but to everyone who had to work or travel in the open air, and particularly to our young men who have taken an interest in the Race Track at Bathurst. For several years back nearly every annual meeting has been marred by rain, and indeed a slight shower drove us off the track just as the last race closed. Up to that time, however, the day was a perfect one, and the meeting in all respects one of the most enjoyable and well conducted ever seen in Bathurst. Our old friend, L. J. Joudry, who is known on every track in the province, acted as time-keeper, and Mr. Fred Ryan, of Sackville, gave the management the benefit of his experience as judge. The horses were all in good form, and the boys just in right trim for a jolly good time. Just as the scoring for the three minute class began, the grey, driven by Mr. William Stewart of Campbellton, showed his spirits by rearing and falling backwards almost on top of the driver. "Mr. Stewart was very fortunate in escaping as he did, with a good shaking, sufficient to make him relinquish the reins to younger hands. Mr. Martin Cormier also had a tumble from his sulky. In fact, there was quite a lot of fun of this kind before the horses and drivers got down to business. The two horses seat down by Mr. N. W. McNeil, who is an old friend to the Bathurst track, did splendidly, and no person was sorry to see Mr. McNeil carry away first prize in both the 2:30 and 2:40 classes. What a grand and honest horse he has in Jack and little Keith Carr never lifted his nose under Wilbur's management, until he gained the three straight heats in the forty class. There is no doubt Mr. McNeil knows how to fit a horse. He is very glad to see Searchlight get second in any in the forty class, for a more honest attempt, hurried as he was, for first place, was never made by horse before. We append a tabulated account of each heat and have much pleasure in saying that in our opinion a better meeting was never held on the Bathurst track, and we congratulate the whole management, drivers and horse owners in their enterprise and success. The results are as follows:

3 MINUTE CLASS. Pononoco, 1 1 1; Beattie, 2 2 3; Charles L., 1 3 2; Surprise, 5 0 3; Lily, 3 withdrawn; Time, 2:41 2:51 2:49. 2:30 CLASS. Jack, 1 1 1; Lily Sim, 3 2 2; Harry, 2 3 3; Time, 2:34 2:38 2:33. 2:40 CLASS. Keith Carr, 1 1 1; Searchlight, 2 2 2; Black Prince, 4 3 4; Pononoco, 5 4 5; Time, 2:34 2:34 2:35.

What might have been a very serious accident was prevented by the pluck and activity of Mr. La Roche, manager at Bathurst for John Morrissy, on Saturday evening. A small boy of perhaps seven years of age, was holding a young horse on the King street when the animal became frightened and ran. In passing a lot of machinery piled cut in front of Mr. Morrissy's warehouse, the wagon was partly broken and it was then that Mr. La Roche made his plucky run for the animal and failing to catch him he just touched the back of the wagon which enabled him to climb in behind as he ran. The child was by this time entirely exhausted, and about falling from the broken wagon, but Mr. La Roche succeeded in stopping the frightened horse before it had gone much further and certainly saved the youngster's life. The wharves of Bathurst are pretty well cleared of lumber of all kinds. The several large steamers and sailing vessels which have been loading out side the wharves during the past month, have taxed the loading facilities of both firms to their utmost to keep them going, and the Caraque Railway Management has had

We are sorry to say that the real fishery of the Bay (Chalon) has been very poor during the past few weeks. Large numbers of fish have again slipped out on the banks and are driving the eel away. These do not, should receive special attention from the Department of Marine & Fisheries. Surely there is opportunity to combat their destructive habits. The dog fish is much like a small shark and catches its prey in the same manner in which a shark does, by turning on their backs and seizing the unfortunate fish by its long upper jaws. It might be a difficult thing to provide a means of exterminating the wolf of the sea, which not only feeds on the other fish, but fishes the eel as well as the dog fish. There is a way of doing it if some light man could be the questioner.

A party of several ladies and gentlemen, under the guidance of Mr. George Armstrong, Esq., reached Bathurst on Wednesday last, coming across from St. John waters by way of Tanguay and Nipigon Rivers and Lakes. This is the second of this party Mr. Armstrong has brought or sent through this season already, and he expects several more Mr. Armstrong sold several of his canoes in Bathurst. He makes good boats.

THE LADY GWENDOLYN

By ANNE STORY ALLEN

Copyright, 1902, by T. C. McClure

The Lady Gwendolyn stamped her foot and declared, "Dwendolyn will!"

"Then she poked her white bonnet out of the door and listened. They were still talking. She could hear Mrs. Reagan's voice, high and shrill.

"Shure, ye can have it here," she was saying, "and if they's any more come while ye're out I'll take 'em for ye. My, but it's fine! And all of 'em from Miss Van Tassel. Well, well!"

It could be borne no longer. Aunt Julia might stay and talk with Mrs. Reagan as long as she liked and about all the stupid things they liked.

"Dwendolyn will!" she announced again, and Gwendolyn did.

Along the hall, past Mrs. Reagan's half open door, down the stairs, step by step, and so on to the sidewalk.

The Lady Gwendolyn was an impulsive person, and, being of a mind to view the trees of the park, clothed, as she had been told, in the snow blankets woven by the fairies the night before, she had determined to wait no longer, but to start out by herself, which was of course contrary to any precedent ever established. Clad in her white coat—marked down and snatched up by Ellen at a bargain—her white bonnet—Aunt Julia had found it in a Third Avenue shop, and you couldn't have told it from a Sixth Avenue—her white mittens and stockings—bought a trifle larger last year with a view to shrinking—Lady Gwendolyn started on her way.

Both of her ladies in waiting and the head groom of the chambers were ignorant of her desperate venture. Now, the first lady in waiting was nearly all in attendance on the Lady Gwendolyn and usually planned so that both duties as housekeeper fitted in nicely with the demands of her other position.

The second lady in waiting, having been promoted from the menial rank of cash girl in Rush & Hurry's big Fourteenth Street shop to serve in that firm's luncheon room, found her hours a bit easier and her weekly envelope a trifle heavier, two things that made possible even more devotion on her part to the service of Lady Gwendolyn.

It would take too long to recount the incident, or accident, through which the head groom of the chambers had arisen to the dignity of a wooden faced footman, tight booted and befurred of collar, who flung himself with most satisfactory recklessness on and from the seat of Miss Van Tassel's brougham.

"He's a star, that kid!" Miss Van Tassel was wont to exclaim when, in company with other blond ladies, she would leave the stage door after rehearsal. And Miss Van Tassel, herself a star of no mean magnitude, would enter her carriage amid a chorus of more or less cynical assents from the lesser lights of her constellation. The coachman would touch the bad tempered cob and leave the star groom to alight beside him after a flying leap over the wheel.

Although the head groom of the chambers had become the footman of Miss Violet Van Tassel, who had the reputation of being the most graceful dancer as well as the biggest hearted woman that a music hall audience ever split its gloves for, still he was faithful to the house of Ryan, and the Lady Gwendolyn could never complain of disloyalty.

Christmas was at hand, and Miss Van Tassel had made known to her footman a few ideas of her own on the subject of Christmas trees in general and of one in particular that was intended for the special benefit of the Lady Gwendolyn.

Nearly all her spare time for two days had been spent in driving from shop to shop, and the address given for the sending of the parcels had not been Central Park West, but Second Avenue. On issuing from one of the shops, more noticeably the toyshops, Miss Van Tassel would hold consultation with her footman. Advice, suggestion, description, seemed to pass between them, together with many nods and smiles on the part of Miss Van Tassel and many coughings of the hat on the part of Tom.

All unknown to Miss Van Tassel she became an angel with a very yellow halo and brilliant garments. All unknown to Tom he became to Miss Van Tassel the lounge of the young brother who had died a small pauper before ever the twinkling toes had brought fame and wealth to his adoring sister.

By dint of judicious tagging of various people who seemed to be going in the right direction the Lady Gwendolyn reached the park under the chapter-ship of two unscrupulous nursemaids, whose charges were engaged in making faces at each other from their respective elevations. Arrived at her destination, she managed to chamber on to one of the benches and surveyed the scene before her with delighted eyes.

The afternoon sun was warm, and yet it had not quite melted the snow mantle on the shoulders of the big statue opposite. The trees wore their snow blankets, and the grass was almost entirely covered with the white carpet she had been so anxious to see. Now, it is one thing to fare boldly forth upheld by a sense of injury and the novelty of adventure, and it is quite another thing to wend one's way homeward when one's sense of injury has utterly vanished and novelty has become monotony.

The afternoon sun was not quite so warm on the bench when the Lady Gwendolyn made the discovery that she had seen enough of carpeted grass and that the trees, in fact, showed signs of being dead, as in fact they were, and it finally occurred to the Lady Gwendolyn that she had been deceived in a very bad way.

She started down from the bench with a address that surprised her and with a growing sense of insecurity walked toward the avenue. The park seemed a very large place, and she was glad to get out of it, yet she stood on the sidewalk two big tears forced their way from behind winking lashes.

Through which of those streets lay the way home? Which way should she turn? Everything looked strange and unfamiliar.

When Ellen Ryan cut her hand on the broken goblet she was picking up in response to the floorwalker's order, the doctor of Rush & Hurry's big store dressed the wound neatly and, putting her on the shoulder, said: "There, you'd better run home for the rest of the day. You'll be all right tomorrow."

So Ellen, with her hand in a bandage and a stiff feeling in the palm of it, hurried homeward, thinking that if Aunt Julia had been too busy there was yet time to take the little sister for a walk.

Ramping up the stairs, she was bumped into by Mamie Reagan, who was running down at breakneck speed. "They ain't found her yet," was her excited salutation. "I'm goin' out again. Yer aunt's carryin' on awful!"

Ellen's heart seemed to stop beating. She grasped at Mamie Reagan's dress and opened her mouth, but Mamie had resumed her headlong flight.

Ellen tottered up the rest of the stairs, her ears assailed as she neared the door of their rooms by moans within and the sound of Mrs. Reagan's voice.

"There, now," she was saying, "don't take on so. Mamie Reagan'll find her. She's a reg'lar detective, I tell yer. There, she'll be back in a minute. All the cops on the beat knows Gwendolyn."

Then, as she caught sight of Ellen, "Lord, what'll I do with her?" "Now it's all right," she began, shaking a bottle of household ammonia at Ellen.

Ellen crossed the room to her aunt. "When did you miss her?" she asked. "I just went in Miss Reagan's room," explained Aunt Julia. "I wanted her to keep the baby carriage Miss Van Tassel had sent till Christmas. I had my bonnet all on."

"When did you miss her?" broke in the stern young voice. "It was 3 o'clock or maybe half past. I remember because our clock had struck 7, and it always—"

"Had you promised to take her to any place?" "We was goin' to the park—she'd been tellin' me that foolishness ye'd told her about the snow fairies and—"

Aunt Julia's voice rose to a sobbing wail as Ellen turned and left the room without explanation or comment.

She dashed down the stairs at a speed that rivaled Mamie Reagan's and started on a mad run west. "She may have found her way there," she muttered to herself.

A messenger boy, two newsboys, a nursemaid with her charge, a man with a suit case and a pretty young woman with her hands in a big muff formed an unconsciously interesting group about a small solitary figure. Blue defiant eyes looked out of a white face from under a wide bonnet trim and two little white mittens were doubled up by tense baby fists. Ellen bore down on this group. Intuition, instinct, sister heart, all told her that here was the Lady Gwendolyn. She pushed aside the newsboys, stepped on the messenger's toes and knocked against the suit case.

"Gwendolyn!" "Nellen, my Nellen!" came from the depths of the white bonnet. The Lady Gwendolyn was caught up into a fierce embrace and the cut hand, heedless of wound and bandage, pressed the little head close to "Nellen's" heart.

"She ought to be discharged," said the pretty young woman. "Gee!" said the messenger boy. "You'll be in luck if you don't get de bounce fer dis."

Ellen looked wonderingly from one to another. Then it rushed over her—she was Gwendolyn's nurse. The baby sister had been taken for a lady—a real lady.

"Yes, ma'am," she said meekly to the young woman. "I'll be more careful another time."

Taking a firm hold on the little hand, she addressed the small figure in clear and distinctly humble tones. "Come, Miss Gwendolyn," she said. "Yer aunt will be worryin' about yer." The Lady Gwendolyn obediently trotted off by her nurse's side.

Half a block away a smart brougham was dashing toward them. There was a glimpse of a sable collar, an ugly, kind face, and it had stopped.

The footman jumped over the wheel, the carriage door was opened and the big voice of Miss Van Tassel called: "Well, if here isn't the little sister and the big one too! The whole Ryan family in a bunch! Bundle 'em in, Thomas, and we'll drive 'em home."

Tom "bundled 'em in," closed the door and sprang to the box. Just at that proud moment the man with the suit case and the young woman with the big muff came into sight.

The Lady Gwendolyn, confidence restored, smiled at them through the open window, and Ellen, rigid and erect on the very edge of the cushions, reflected the smile respectfully.

Two of Them. "You don't seem to like Chumpley," said Tanker. "What sort of a fellow is he?" "He's the sort of 'fellow,'" replied Krunkley promptly, "who invariably calls a 'man' a 'fellow.'"—Philadelphia Press.

THE INDIAN WHO REMEMBERED

By H. A. Bruce

Copyright, 1902, by T. C. McClure

Sam Augustus was of the Algonquin tribe, a typical Indian of these days of reservations, lazy, shiftless and addicted to strong drink. As an Indian he was more or less despised by the white men with whom he came in contact, but was much too easy going to be disturbed by that.

The possessor of a small farm on Georgian Island, he was so far true to the traditions of his ancestors as to allow Mrs. Sam Augustus to earn his living for him, which she cheerfully did, reaping harvest in the summer time by weaving baskets of sweet grass and reeds for the holiday soakers who annually visited Beaver-ton.

Beaverton was the most picturesque spot on the shores of Lake Simcoe, but Sam Augustus, on the occasions of his periodical visits to the mainland, never stopped to contemplate its various points of interest. There was but one attraction in the place for him, and that, it must be confessed with shame, was the barroom of the Alexandra House.

Sam's visits to Beaverton, or, to be more exact, to the Alexandra House, usually terminated in his crawling into the loft of the hotel stable, there to sleep off the effects of the potent fire-water he had imbibed. But on a Saturday night in June he enjoyed a novel experience.

Paul Wilson had come to the mill that day with a load of grain and had converted the grain into flour, but into greasy bits of paper which he deemed far more useful. Then, as he was consumed with a great thirst and, moreover, had the wherewithal to sink his hands naturally turned his team toward the Alexandra House. Matters following in logical sequence, Paul Wilson developed ere night into a drunken bully, with Sam Augustus the especial object of his hectoring. Sam, indeed, was in a fair way to get the beating of his life when Ed Daleton interfered.

Daleton interfered to such an extent that Paul was escorted to the village hospital, while Sam Augustus, ready by that time to consent to any proposal, acceded to Daleton's request to go home with him and in the morning join the laymakers on the Daleton estate.

An hour later found Sam tucked into the most comfortable bed he had ever known. Ere morning came, however, the bed was empty. The Indian had already repented his rash promise to go to work. Still, he took away nothing but himself and his dirty clothes, wherefore, Daleton argued, he must have felt at least half way grateful.

The summer days passed away, and the autumn shadows lengthened into the blackness of winter, but Sam Augustus had not once appeared at the Alexandra House since that night in June. Whatever conjectures the habits of the place might have hazarded concerning his absence were driven out of mind, however, by a series of occurrences which gave the villagers ample reason for not only much gossip, but also much alarm.

He was passing a little cove on that side of the island farthest from his home when he noticed what looked uncommonly like a boat's sail flapping in the wind. This impressed Sam as being a bit out of the ordinary for midwinter, but what gave him a distinct shock was seeing a light in a log cabin that to his knowledge had been unoccupied for years.

There was enough of his ancestors' blood in his veins to make him wary, and he conjectured, not without reason, that whoever was in the old cabin had no right to be there. So he stooped down, unfastened his slates, slung them around his neck and, swift as a deer, ran to the shore of the cove. Cautiously he crept over the snow until he stood behind the cabin and looked in through a window.

Seated at a little table were two men, both keen visaged, both well dressed and both youthful. Overhead hung a dirty lantern. On the table between them was spread out a sheet of white paper, which they were examining with great interest.

"This," Sam heard one say, pointing to a mark on the paper, "is the veranda entrance I was telling you about. It leads straight into the old man's room, and they say he generally has a thly sam around. Farther along here is a window to one of the guest chambers, and we may pick up a sparkle or two in that room for a big house party is on at Simcoe Lodge just now, and the wealthy Mrs. Vineland is one of the guests. The young fellow sleeps in that wing over there, so we need have no fear of arousing him. Then we'll back to our leatboat and be under cover again before they know we've paid 'em a visit."

Sam opened those little eyes of his wider. He was not overgifted with an active brain, but the reference to Simcoe Lodge had sharpened his intellect. For Simcoe Lodge was the home of Ed Daleton, and had not Ed Daleton—Well, Sam Augustus drew closer to the cabin window.

The speaker's companion made no reply for some minutes. When he did speak, there was a tinge of bitterness to his words: "I'm with ye, Rats. I agree with ye. But when's the bloomin' biz to end? They'll spot our lay soon, never fear, an' to my mind we'd better scoot down to Jackson's Point right away an' get back to Toronto from there."

"Bah!" rejoined the other. "We simply have got to turn this trick, Spud. Then I'm for home. Come, it'll be a good, dark night, and we can bag the game before midnight, for they danced until 7 this morning and are sure to be abed early."

Sam waited to hear no more. The men were thieves, and they intended robbing the home of the only white man who had ever befriended him. Oh, lazy, shiftless Sam Augustus, why do you hurry so?

For he was skating across the lake as he had never skated before. Twenty miles stretched between him and that part of the lake where Simcoe Lodge stood, and he must be fleet indeed to arrive before the boat. He knew he was getting a good start, but he knew, too, what an leatboat could do. Ah, lucky Sam Augustus, to find the ice smooth as glass instead of being caked and crusted with snow!

On, on through the night he raced. In his face blew the first gusts of a storm, but he plunged through the crystal flakes, his sinewy legs fairly flying over the level surface. Now he could see lights twinkling in the distance, and his Indian instinct told him they were from a farmhouse not far from the Daleton estate. Not a light could be seen from Simcoe Lodge itself, for a huge row of fir trees, wind breakers, screened the house from the lake blasts.

Sam swung along buoyantly. The next moment a hissing, whistling sound came to his ears, and he saw a flash of white glide past him, to be swallowed up in the darkness.

It was the boat. They would beat him yet. He dug his skates into the ice despairingly and buried himself forward. But in a minute or two he became hopeful again. It was yet too early for the burglars to begin work. He could easily arrive in time to warn the household.

On, on through the night he raced. Now he was floundering in snow banks that had drifted against the lake cliffs, now he was climbing up these rugged heights, now he had unstrapped his skates, and now, still tireless, he was bounding across the fields to give the alarm.

Not pausing to seek the gate into the Daleton grounds, he leaped the high fence that paralleled the fir trees only to alight upon a human body. Next moment he was grasped by no tender hands.

"Here, what's this?" he heard a voice exclaim. "Tura yer gim on, Rats. Here's a nice kind of a party that comes tumblin' on to a man without so much as beg pardon."

Sam Augustus writhed desperately, but another pair of brawny hands seized him, and he was helpless, yet he kept up the struggle and as he fought shouted with all the strength of his red man's lungs: "Thieves!"

"Blast it, stop that!" commanded the voice. "Ye won't, eh? Then?" There was a click and a report. Sam gave a groan and staggered back. Spud let him slip to the ground.

"I thought I'd stop ye," he muttered. "Say, Rats, I—"

Something bright flashed through the night. The Indian had risen to his knees. Spud fell, with the toe of a skate in his brain.

"Thieves!" shouted Sam.

Rebbon's Joke on His Friend. Of Stuart Robson it is said that in his youth he was an inimitable practical joker. He was traveling in England with a friend, a small man called Bill, one summer, and on the Liverpool train Bill fell asleep. While he slept Robson stole his ticket from his pocket. In a little while the conductor was to be seen approaching.

"Tickets, Bill! Get out your ticket!" Robson said.

Bill, after a frantic search, said, with an oath, that his ticket was lost. Robson then advised him to escape paying by hiding under the seat. This Bill decided to do, and when the conductor appeared he lay on his back on the dusty floor quite invisible.

Robson surrendered both tickets, whereupon the conductor said: "Here are two tickets. Where is your friend, sir?"

"Under the seat there," the actor answered. "I don't know why he wanted to avoid you."

The conductor, surprised, looked under the seat, and Bill smiled at him sheepishly and then crawled awkwardly forth.—New York Tribune.

The Ass and the Ladder. "I came into possession of a Hebrew library the other day," said a student, "and in several of my new books is the sentence, 'May this volume not be damaged, neither this day nor forever, until the ass ascends the ladder.' What does that mean—'till the ass ascends the ladder'? Do you know?"

"Yes, I know," answered the student's preceptor. "The phrase is like that of Petronius, 'asinus in tegulis' (an ass on the house top). It signifies impossibility, a thing that will never take place. Books preserved, therefore, until the ass ascends the ladder are books forever preserved."

Curiosities of Color. After any severe shock you will be very likely to find that you have become temporarily color blind.

Your perception of green light has probably gone, at least partially. White objects will then appear to you of a reddish purple and green objects to be very much duller in hue than ordinary.

Any one can make himself or herself temporarily color blind by wearing a pair of ruby red glasses. The prolonged action of red light on the eyes ends by tiring out the nerves which receive red light. Consequently when the glasses are at last removed a rainbow appears to have only two colors—yellow and blue.

This Boy's Head a Mass of Sores

For Three Years a great sufferer from Eczema—Would scream with agony.

Mr. JAMES SCOTT, 136 Wright Avenue, Toronto, states:—"My boy Tom, aged ten, was for nearly three years afflicted with a bad form of eczema of the scalp, which was very unsightly, and resisted all kinds of remedies and doctor's treatment. His head was in a terrible state. We had to keep him from school, and at times his head would bleed, and the child would scream with agony. For two and a half years we battled with it in vain, but at last found a cure in Dr. Chase's Ointment. About five boxes were used. The original soreness disappeared, leaving the skin in its normal condition. To say it is a pleasure to testify to the wonderful merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment, is putting it very mildly."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is a positive cure for eczema, salt rheum, scald head and chafing. 60 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates and Co., Toronto.

GREEN CHEESE NOT WANTED IN BRITAIN.

The Dairy Division, Ottawa, has received advices from Mr. A. W. Grindley, Agent of the Department of Agriculture in Britain, to the effect that the reputation of Canadian cheese has been injured by the large amount that has been sent from Canada this year in a green or uncurd condition. Dealers state that the great bulk of Canadian cheese has been too immature when shipped, and Canadians will have only themselves to blame if the British demand falls off from such causes as these. It need not be pointed out that a falling off in demand means a lower price. It is simply a case of killing the goose that lays golden eggs.

When a salesman notes that the tendency of the cheese market is downward, he is naturally anxious to get rid of the stock he has on hand; at other times he thinks that he will save the amount of the shrinkage in curing by selling as soon as possible. The exporter, on the other hand, looking to his own immediate profit on the transaction buys cheese that should be left in the curing room to ripen. The salesman is disposed to blame the exporter for the present condition of things, and vice versa, but it takes two to make a bargain and it is safe to assume that both parties are to blame in this case. It is greatly to be regretted that for the sake of a little temporary advantage both factorymen and exporters should be willing to endanger a trade which has required so many years to reach its present high standard, and which means so many millions of dollars to the farmers of Canada. The patrons of factories would be consulting their interests by insisting that their cheese should be held in the curing room until it is in the best condition to please the British consumer.

THE EXTENSION OF MARKETS FOR AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

For a number of years the market the Market Division from Great Britain, with special reference to fruit, particularly raspberries. The fruit crop in the United Kingdom and on the Continent is very poor, and consequently the demand for raspberries is considerable. The market is now bare of supplies, and as New Australian will not arrive before March next, an excellent opportunity is offered for Canadian canners if they have the goods to fill orders. Unfortunately, it appears that the Canadian raspberry crop was also short this season. The canners have, however, been placed in possession of all the information at Mr. Moore's disposal, and considerable business has already resulted. All the pulp available will doubtless be disposed of at good prices.

In view of the short fruit crop there is likely to be a good demand in Britain for boiling and cider-making apples. The department has received advices from the Canadian High Commissioner in London to the effect that one firm would take 5,000 tons of each of the above sorts. Mr. Moore is now in communication with the leading fruit shippers to ascertain whether they can fill the order. The possibility of shipping either is also being investigated. A trade of this sort would afford facilities for selling to advantage the immense quantities of cull apples which now go to waste in this country.

Recent letters received at the Department indicate that on account of drought the grain crops in the Transvaal will be short this season, and that in consequence there is likely to be a good demand for Canadian food products in the sister colony.

IN THE BALKANS

Excitement in Serbia Grows On Account of Macedonian Troubles.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The Sofia correspondent of the times, discussing the situation in the Balkans, says a war between Turkey and Bulgaria is no longer regarded as the only remedy. It seems probable that in order to save appearances Austria and Russia will support an amplified reform scheme. It is quite clear that a new departure must be made. The visit of the Czar to Vienna is expected to mark a new stage in the policy of the two powers.

It is reported from Adrianople that the troops are using petroleum to burn the forests sheltering the insurgents. It is also stated that the Turkish officers have received orders to pursue the rebels into Bulgaria.

Telegrams from Burgas, Turkey seventy-six miles northeast of Adrianople, state that a Russian cruiser has entered that port. Excitement is increasing in Serbia, continues the correspondent of the Times, on account of the Macedonian rebellion. The radical leaders are inclined to advocate the establishment of an autonomous government in Macedonia provided that due allowance is made for Serbian claims in the district north of Shar. The large insurgent successes are hailed with enthusiasm. The sixth regiment, notorious for its share in the conspiracy against the late King Alexander, is especially eager for war, and it seems not improbable that King Peter, yielding to military dictation, may eventually place himself at the head of the warlike movement.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times says the Balkan outlook is daily darkening and Turkey is taking precautions for the safety of Constantinople.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 27.—The post-bound daily express from Bulgaria to Constantinople was blown up near Kuleli Burgas, about 25 miles south of Adrianople, early this morning. Seven persons were killed and fifteen were injured. Dynamite bombs were used. Every car was smashed. Apparently the outrage was the work of revolutionists who travelled on the train.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Belgrade says King Peter is determined to suppress the military malcontents with an iron hand. On Tuesday three army colonels, two captains and a major were condemned to death for participation in a plot which was discovered and rendered abortive. Despite this, however, says the correspondent, the King is obviously in the hands of three or four regiments, who are causing a veritable range of terror.

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—It is stated that the press is preparing an answer to the recent Bulgarian memorandum to the powers by a note declaring Bulgaria to be directly responsible for the rising in the vilayet of Adrianople and declining to be answerable for the consequences. There is also talk of the possibility of a Tuzko-Greek alliance.

BRIGITER LITERATURE

The Editor of The Canadian Magazine in the September number complains that Canadian writers are prone to be scholarly and dull. The accusation is true in the main, as Canada has produced only one notable humorist. Yet this particular issue of The Canadian Magazine contains much bright reading, and almost gives an answer to the Editor's criticism.

Jane Jones does well on her article "A Sofia Reminiscence," breaking away from the ordinary style of story-telling. Harold Sands also invests his two historical incidents with new flavor, as does J. Gordon Smith in his more pretentious article describing "The Romance of Sealing." Aside from the particular merits of style and brightness, the chief article of the issue is "Preferential Trade in Its Relation to Canada and the Empire," by the Hon. G. W. Ross, who writes almost as well as he speaks. Among the short stories Duncan Campbell Scott's "The Winning of Marie-Louise," easily stands first. Mr. Scott pays the French Canadian a high compliment in this tale. Jean Blewett's "On the Ponoka Reserve" exhibits a somewhat unusual vein, but is a delightful story. The illustrations of the number are very fair.

It is of inestimable value in every home, and when once introduced becomes a household necessity. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the standard of the world over, and has no worthy rival.

LOST—On Monday, 17th inst., between the Mill Cove and Greenie's livery stable, a purse containing a sum of money. Finder will be rewarded on leaving it at the Advocate Office.

A certain gentleman, (we will not particularize, but may add that he is interested in vehicles) who was a passenger on the Maritime express and wished to get off here, was not awakened by the sleeper porter and on looking out of his compartment window saw that he was at Newcastle. There being no time to lose he quickly pulled on his clothes over his night dress slipped his bare feet into his boots gathered up his baggage and stepped off the train. On examining himself he found that he had his dress shirt on his arm while his hand grasped collar, tie, cuffs and socks, with numerous other small articles. He was loudly greeted by a large party of young people who had assembled at the depot to see the Normal School pupils off. They no doubt thought he was walking in his sleep but he was very much awake and made tracks to the nearest cab.

A young man who registered at the Waverley hotel last week as Ernst Pitman, New Zealand, had rather an interesting time here. The youth in question had a very doleful tale to tell of losing his arm and being the only support of a widowed mother and succeeded in gaining the sympathy of a great many people of the town to the extent of a donation from them. Then the bubble burst. Mr. Wm. Irvine had an idea that the other arm was there if not in sight and paid a visit to Pitman's room at the hotel, where, after a short talk and a rather forcible examination the arm was discovered strapped closely to his shoulder. Pitman was given one hour to leave town and he left, carrying his arm as any ordinary mortal should, in his coat sleeve.

Pitman also lifted a purse containing a small sum of money at one of the houses, that he visited and then fearing detection left it at the "Advocate" office for the owner, claiming he found it. The purse has been returned.
