DURING the strong enemy counter-attack a Lewis gun in a forward post in a communication trench leading to the enemy lines, was buried by a shell, and the crew, with the exception of one man, killed.

Sergt. Hobson, though not a gunner, grasped the great importance of the post, rushed from the trench, dug out the gun and got it into action against the enemy who were now advancing down the trench and across the open.

A jam caused the gun to stop firing. Though wounded, he left the gunner to correct the stoppage, rushed forward at the advancing enemy and, with bayonet and clubbed rifle, single-handed, held them back until he himself was killed by a rifle shot. By this time, however, the Lewis gun was again in action and reinforcements shortly afterwards arriving, the enemy were beaten off.

The valor and devotion to duty displayed by this non-commissioned officer gave the gunner the time required to again get the gun into action, and saved a most serious situation.—Official Record.

The labyrinth of trenches between Hill 70 and the city of Lens was captured by the Canadians in the attack of August 15, 1917. That piece of ground had passed between hands so often in the three years previous that No Man's Land was a maze of trenches running in all directions. In places they led directly from the Canadians to the Germans' lines, and were divided only by blocks garrisoned by machine guns. The weather, which was unsettled and sultry on the 15th, by the 18th was clear and sunny and the rains of two weeks previous were quickly drying the chalky soil.

Nabob alley was one of the old communication lines leading across No Man's Land. Up this trench on the morning of the 15th Sergt. Hobson, of the 20th Battalion, had bombed his way for about 70 yards. There he established a post and garrisoned it with Lewis guns. The conquered trench was held for three days by "A" Company.

Midnight of August 17-18 passed. It was the dark of the moon and little could be seen of what was going on out on No Man's Land. At 1.40 o'clock the silence of the night was broken by the roar of enemy artillery. Every inch of the Canadian front line was deluged with shells. For half an hour the din and devastating fire continued. Every wire to the 20th Battalion headquarters was broken.

Then a lull came. The men in Nabob alley crouched in their trench while gas shells poured over them on to the village of St. Pierre behind them. Another pause and the artillery broke out again. Every gun that the Hun could bring up was trained on Hill 70. The ground was torn up and tons of earth and stones hurled into the air. Men were killed in groups. Practically every Lewis gun was smashed or buried beside its crew. The advanced posts were ground into the earth. The Canadian lines were in confusion.

Then down the line the word was passed from lip to lip that the Hun was out in No Man's Land, coming towards Nabob alley. Sergt. Hobson peered into the darkness and saw the grey figures of the enemy coming at the double. They came down Nabob alley, where only one Lewis gun was now left. The gunner trained his fire on the wave of German grey, but while he was in the action a shell made a direct hit and buried crew and gun. Only one man was alive when Hobson ran up to the spot and started digging him out. He pulled him out of the debris, bruised and dazed.

"Pretty close call," the gunner said to his rescuer, but Hobson was already digging at the gun, while the Huns advanced down the trench.

"Let's get this out," said Hobson, and the two men began to dig with all their might. The Germans came closer in the dark. Hobson was struck by a stick bomb, but on he went with his work. The gun must be got out at all costs. At last they got it into position and the gunner opened on the enemy with telling effect. Two men were holding back the German advance. Then the gun jammed.

Grabbing a rifle, Hobson ran ahead.

"I'll keep them back. You fix the gun," he said and opened on the enemy. With bayonet and clubbed rifle he fought them off till a pile of their dead lay at his feet.

"All right," shouted the gunner to Hobson, and opened on the invaders.

But at that moment a German got a direct aim and Hobson fell, killed instantly.

The gunner made the enemy pay dearly for the deed. With his Lewis gun he stemmed the advance until he was reinforced by another company and they turned the Germans back. But the hero who had saved the post in the first onrush lay dead—his rifle still tightly grasped in his hand. They found him when dawn was coming over the ridge.

Frederick Hobson was born in London, England, in 1876. Before coming to Canada he had been in the Imperial forces. He enlisted in the 20th Battalion at Toronto in October, 1914. On the morning of August 17, Hobson was acting sergeant-major, and it was in fulfillment of his responsibilities in that capacity that he made his last gallant defence of his battalion and won the Victoria Cross.—Carolyn Cornell in Toronto Star Weekly.

"Ruby" Wheat.

A new wheat named "Ruby" is reported to have been cultivated at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. It is a selection from the result of a cross between Downing Riga and Red Fife. Ruby wheat ripens, as a rule, a week or so earlier than Marquis. The kernels are somewhat similar to those of Red Fife, being hard and of the popular reddish brown color. The straw in most localities is shorter than Marquis and of good strength.

Peace River Exploration.

A Government survey party has proceeded to the Peace River district to conduct exhaustive work on all unsurveyed country. The main purpose is to meet the requirements of the Soldier Settlement Branch, but, in addition, the party will carry out a departmental geological survey.

To Help Europe.

The Canadian Government has arranged for credits there for various European countries for commodities needed in reconstruction.

Credits Must Be Established for Sale of Surplus Products.

Success of Victory Loan 1919 Will Insure Steady Markets for Farmers.

It takes some six bushels of wheat to feed the average person in Canada annually. Roughly, therefore, the eight million people here consume about 50,000,000 bushels each year. But even in a poor year the crop is some five times that amount, and the surplus must be sold if the farmers are to get a return for their time and labor. But the sale of the crop must be financed. Great Britain, which provides our greatest market, has not the ready cash, and so Canada must find means of raising the money. Hence the Victory Loan 1919, in view of the fact that the prosperity of the Dominion is dependent to a considerable extent upon the sale of her surplus grain the necessity of the money being forthcoming is patent.

Your dollar may be the last straw that sweeps the Victory Loan over the top—would you take the chance of making it a failure?

Lend your money that your pay envelope may be always filled, as will follow the success of the Victory Loan.

Victory Bonds are the fodder that keeps the machinery of Canada's industrial world running at full speed.

Dry Dock In St. John, N.B.

Work is being pushed on the Courtenay Bay dry dock and breakwater by the St. John Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Co. An appropriation of $700,000 for the contract has just been made by Parliament. It is anticipated that a British shipbuilding firm will establish a mammoth plant in the vicinity of the dry dock.

Bears Kill Trees.

Hundreds of trees in the Northwest, including Douglas fir, white fir and western white pine—the wood of all of which is used more or less in airplane construction—have been seriously damaged by bears peeling the bark. About 100 trees to the square mile have been peeled.

If you appreciate a good investment you will buy a Victory Bond.

You deceive no one but yourself when you say you can't afford a Victory Bond.

Victory Loan 1919 Is Bridge Between War and Peace.

Agricultural and Industrial Prosperity of Canada Depends on Success of the Loan.

Why is it necessary to have another Victory Loan? Have you heard this query? Or have you asked it?

The Victory Loan of this year stands out as the bridge between war and peace. The war is over. Our boys won that. The reconstruction period is dawning and we at home must win that.

Much of the money that Canada is asking for will be needed to clean up the war debt. The expenses of demobilization were heavy, and there is still much of it unpaid. Now that our men are back, let it not be said that we repudiated the debt for bringing them back.

The sick and wounded soldiers still in hospitals are expecting that Canada will care for them and their dependents until they have been returned to health and strength. The hospital services must be maintained at full strength as long as there are returned men needing attention.

Many men through disability are unable to return to their pre-war occupations. The Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment is doing a fine work in training returned soldiers in trades and professions that they can earn a living at, and is following up the training and seeing that they obtain remunerative employment. The maintaining of this branch of reconstructive service calls for much funds, and the Victory Loan will be used to pay for it as well as the other purposes.

Under the Soldiers' Land Settlement Act, enough money is lent to returned soldiers to enable them to buy and stock a farm. This money will be repaid at a low rate of interest. The soldier is thus given a chance to re-instate himself in civil life, and production is given a boost. Of the total amount of the forthcoming loan, $24,000,000 has been apportioned to finance these soldier-farmers.

Pensions to the disabled and dependents of our glorious dead, as well as the authorized gratuities will be other items on the expense sheet. These are some of the obligations owing to the returned soldier who is now in health.

The maintaining of Canada's prosperity is an important reason why the Victory Loan should be a smashing success. The money is needed to finance the credits to overseas countries so that they may continue their trade relations with us. If Canada cannot give these credits other countries will, and then Canada will lose all that great overseas trade that has been the mainstay of our agricultural and industrial life for so long.

As an investment Victory Bonds are eminent. Paying 5 1/2 per cent, selling above par on the open market, and guaranteed by the Dominion—what further reason can you have for hesitating? The Victory Loan 1919 ought to be oversubscribed, and all right-thinking citizens will do their utmost to see that such a result is obtained.

TO CARE FOR WOUNDED

Money From Victory Loan Will Be Used to Re-establish Soldiers.

Our soldiers in France faced perils other than those of shell and gas and machine-gun fire. There was the peril of tuberculosis. Up to August last 3,909 soldiers suffering from this disease had been returned to Canada. These were placed in sanatoriums under the direction of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, and they are one of the departments of that branch that must be maintained, and come under the head of capital war outlay.

All of these men and some 20,000 others, disabled or ill, will be looked after with money raised through the Victory Loan 1919. It is the sacred duty of Canadians that the money is forthcoming.

If you are concerned about the future welfare of Canada, buy a Victory Bond and make it a sure thing.

Don't forget the future of your children. Lay a good foundation with a Victory Bond.

Would you lend a soldier $50 if you knew it would save his life? Buy Victory Bonds and keep the military hospitals up.

Energy Released in Combustion.

A chunk of coal releases, during combustion, enough energy to lift itself about 2,000 miles, or say from New York to Panama, vertically upward against constant sea level gravitation.

A chunk of hydrogen, our most energetic combustible, releases in combustion an amount of energy capable of lifting itself about four times as far, or to a vertical distance (against sea level gravitation) roughly equal to the distance from New York to Manila.

By a chunk of radium emanation yields without any combustion an amount of energy in the process of its evolution that would lift it against sea level gravitation not only to the sun, but to the orbit of the planet Neptune, the outside fence-post of the solar system, and which is about thirty times further from the sun than the earth is.

OUR COFFEE.

We Drink It But Are Not Authorities On Flavor.

In part the high price of coffee is attributed to a frost in parts of Brazil, but various causes have contributed. Puerto Rico, for example, which never is touched by frost had last year a small crop, and the price of coffee in the island has increased 100 per cent. This has been accredited sometimes to prohibition, but it is doubtful whether Puerto Rico could drink much more coffee than it was drinking before prohibition went into effect; its consumption of alcohol was extremely moderate and its consumption of coffee large, as is apt to be the case in the tropics.

It is noteworthy in this country that many of the plans for a substitute for the saloon call for the provision of coffee as a substitute for alcoholic drinks. In the cafes of Europe the two go side by side, on an equal footing; at the same table one person may be drinking coffee and another beer. It might also be said that Europeans drink wine or beer with their meals and take their coffee in public, while Canadians drink coffee with their meals and take their alcohol in secret. This materially affects the position of coffee as a substitute.

If the coffee house is to be restored to the position it once had,

Twenty Years in One Room.

If we devote, on an average, eight hours to sleep, says Sir St. Clair Thompson, the English throat and nose specialist, a third at least of our 24-hour day is spent indoors, and each individual who reaches sixty years of life will have passed no less than twenty years of his existence in the one and only room where he is likely to be sole arbiter of the ventilation. Unless there are exceptional conditions, the windows of every sleeping room should be wide open all night and every night, otherwise, from their valve-like action, they will only permit intermittent and uncertain ingress of fresh air, while the only egress for deoxygenated air is by the inadequate route of the chimney.

The Russian revolution was not without its lighter side, as the following account of what happened in Petrograd will show:

A woman communist was holding forth, asserting that all were equal and all wealth should be divided equally. On this a man in her audience produced coins amounting to about a dollar and one-half from his pocket. "I agree with you," he remarked. "You have convinced me." Turning to a bystander he asked him to change one of the pieces for him. He obtained two notes.

Facing the lady orator, he said: "This is all the money I possess, and I will halve it with you," and he held out the seventy-five cents. She had to take it, and was about to commence her oration again when her questioner continued: "No, no. How much have you in your purse? We must now divide that, since we are to share equally in our wealth." Reluctantly she produced her purse. It was opened and found to contain twenty dollars. The man pocketed ten dollars of this, thanked her for her interesting lecture and withdrew.

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Beware of Compromises.

One temptation in making difficult decisions is to compromise. You aren't sure which way is the best, you seek to combine the advantages of both, and many a time merely combine all the disadvantages. To be sure, there are times when a compromise is the wisest course, but there are just as many times when it is cowardice and weakness. How can one tell which times are which? Well, that is simply another decision for you.

NATURE'S MIRROR

When a woman is well and healthy—there's a sparkle in her eyes, a rose tint in her cheeks, and she has rich red blood. There's elasticity in every movement and a spring in her step. Love comes to every woman who has bounding health—but when she is pallid, dull eyed, languid, she has no magnetism nor does she appeal to any man.

Such a change in feelings and looks!

After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged down by weaknesses of her sex—with eyes sunken, black circles and pale cheeks—such a woman is quickly restored to health by the Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce. Changed, too, in looks, for after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the skin becomes clear, the eyes brighter, the cheeks plump. It is purely vegetable, contains no alcohol.

Druggists sell it in tablets or liquid. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial package.

BULGAR REPLY IS MODERATE

Objects to Amount of Indemnity Fixed.

Allies Are Expected to Stand Firm.

Paris cable: Bulgaria's answer to the terms of peace presented her by the allied and associated powers is moderate in tone, and adheres unreservedly to the clauses concerning the League of Nations and labor. It accepts the principle of the protection of minorities in Bulgaria, on condition the same measures are applied to other Balkan states.

On the other hand, the reply makes reservations regarding reparations, and protests especially against the total sum demanded of Bulgaria. It asks for the suppression of interest charges, and requests an extension of the time limit for payment. Regarding the military clauses, Bulgaria objects to the voluntary enlistment system, maintaining that conscription alone can produce sufficient forces to maintain order.

The longest part of the reply concerns territorial clauses, and protests against modification of frontiers on ethnical grounds and, quoting masses of statistics, proposes notably a plebiscite in Thrace, and its formation into an autonomous state. The impression prevails in Conference circles that the Allies are not likely to consent to any extensive modification of the original terms.

Time Has Tested It.—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil has been on the market upwards of thirty years and in that time it has proved a blessing to thousands. It is in high favor throughout Canada and its excellence has carried its fame beyond the seas. It has no equal in the whole list of liniments. If it were double the price it would be a cheap liniment.

Relief for the Depressed.—Physical and mental depression usually have their origin in a disordered state of the stomach and liver, as when these organs are deranged in their action the whole system is affected. Try Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They revive the digestive processes, act beneficially on the nerves and restore the spirits as no other pills will. They are cheap, simple and sure, and the effects are lasting.

Many children die from the assaults of worms, and the first care of mothers should be to see that their infants are free from these pests. A vermifuge that can be depended on is Miller's Worm Powders. They will not only expel worms from the system, but act as a health-giving medicine and a remedy for many of the ailments that beset infants, enfeebling them and endangering their lives.

And Allied Business is Perfecting Plans

For Aid to France, Belgium and Italy.

Atlantic City, N.J., dispatch: Work of perfecting a plan for a permanent international organization of business men, in accordance with the unanimous vote of the International Trade Conference at its closing session last night, was begun to-day by a special committee of ten members, two each from Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and the U. S. This committee is expected to complete the plan within a month, and then representatives of such nations as the committee may unanimously determine to invite will be asked to attend a meeting, at which the plan will be presented for adoption in its final form. Membership is limited to those countries represented in the League of Nations.

A summary of the requirements of France, Belgium and Italy during the forthcoming year shows that they will need to make nearly $1,500,000,000 in commodity purchases in other countries, if long term credits can be arranged, and the exchange rate, now adverse to them, established.

Great Britain's delegates presented no specific needs, and asked for no special credit requirements. Sir James Hope Simpson, speaking for the British, said she desires only a continual supply of raw materials in the usual way, and that American business men show the same confidence in the British business men that they have hitherto shown.

Catarra Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE.

SAY PROFIT TAX RAISES PRICES

London cable: The high cost of living took a leading place in the discussion at a meeting of the Miners' Federation to-day. Vigorous protests were made by Robt. Smillie and Frank Hodges, who declared that since the Government's scheme of taxing excess profits had been in operation articles of consumption had increased 8 per cent., making them 128 per cent. higher than the pre-war prices. They hinted that the Government encouraged excess profits in order to fill the exchequer.

The opinion was expressed by the speakers that excess profits should be devoted to a reduction in prices instead of going into the treasury. The meeting decided to make arrangements for a special labor congress to draft a policy to bring about a reduction in the high cost of living.

All for Canada Canada for all Canadians!

This is a call to National Service—
 The Victory Loan 1919 which opens to-day.

YOU are citizens of no mean country.

Canada is a fair, free land.

Canada is your country.

Canada—now—has need to borrow from you—Lend:

Lend without restraint of politics or fine distinctions of creed or party.

The leaders of the political parties endorse the Loan.

It is CANADA that asks:

And why—

To clean up the last of the War's commitments and expenses;

To establish beyond all question the capacity and credit of your country;

To care for the wounded and maimed soldier;

To finance the bonus of the returned soldier already paid;

To enable the fruits of Victory to be garnered;

To ensure the prosperity of you, her citizens.

The guns of war are silent—but they are not yet cool.

The Victory Loan 1919 is a War Loan.

Canada's book of war is gloriously written—make this, the closing chapter, a worthy one. The responsibility is yours. LEND!

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Mrs. Edwin Bush (nee Gegertha Rayner) who passed away one year ago in Sutherland, Sask., Oct. 29th, 1918.

Days of sadness still comes o'er us,
Tears of silence often flow;
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died one year ago.
We often sit and think of you,
And think of how you died;
To think we could not say good-bye
Before you closed your eyes.
Hard was the blow that compelled us to part
With a loved one so near and dear to our heart.

A COLD BLOW

The minister went to visit a poor woman in Scotland who had just lost her husband. He tried to speak consolingly to her by pointing out that the deceased was in a much happier state.

"Just think, my good woman," said the worthy divine, "your dear husband is perhaps at this moment playing a harp."

"Na, na," interrupted the sobbing widow, "mickle guid that'll dae his rheumatisms, sittin' on a cauld cloud blawin' a trumpet."

On Tuesday night last Tobey Harris left the Orange Hall with a Tin Lizzie just in proper tune when she took a stubborn streak and absolutely refused to go over the Suspension bridge which spans the Warner river. She bolted to the side of the road, just missing a telephone pole, and turned turtle into the river. Tobey was thrown from the seat of the bus into 25 feet of water, and his able ability to swim was all that saved him from a watery grave. Robert Gastle, who was one of the first rescuers to arrive on the scene, said the first he saw of Tobey, after being submerged, was when he was swimming to the shore dog-fashion and was shaking his dripping head like a Pomeranian as the maid picks it out of the tub after having its morning bath. The auto was upside down and completely under water, with the exception of a few inches of the tires. John A. McDonough, the Ford agent from Freelon, vouches for the truth that Lizzie was under water and running on high for ten minutes before the billows could drown and stop her snorting. He also says that as she was sinking she sent out wireless call "Send help quick", and was successful in reaching the ears of Frank C. Biggs, the U. F. O. standard bearer, who was conducting a mass meeting of pumpkin threshers in the Orange hall. About 200 rushed from the hall to the tragic scene. Lloyd Faester, watchman of the Lighthouse tower, and Ted Blagden of the Life Saving crew, rushed with ropes to the rescue. Willing hands courageously and unfeigningly fought the billows until Lizzie was safely brought back to the shore. Tobey says the next time he goes for a joy ride he is going to take a wheelbarrow.

CANADA NEEDS MONEY

War Expenditures Still to Be Met From Proceeds of Victory Loan.

The war is over and won; but Canada's main expenditures for war will not be complete until well on into 1920. The $610,000,000 raised last year has all been spent, $400,000,000 having been largely devoted to soldiers—to maintaining them, bringing them home, providing the necessary medical services, training them. Most of the balance of the loan was lent to Great Britain to enable her to buy our surplus products. And money is still necessary—for soldiers, for providing markets, for our surplus products, for the needs of reconstruction. And that is why another Victory Loan is necessary. Canada still needs money, and needs it badly.

A Good Investment.

Speculation is one thing. Investment is another. The majority of citizens want an investment, not a speculation. And they want a safe investment. Victory Bonds fill that requirement as does no other investment. Because behind every bond there is the national wealth of Canada—a wealth so great that it staggers the imagination.

Canadian Bank Clearings.

That Canada is well able to support the Victory Loan is clearly shown by the Canadian bank clearings for the current year. They indicate that the year's total will exceed $15,000,000,000 compared with $13,776,000,000 in 1918. And the year's total clearings should be three times those of 1909.

Must Subscribe More.

Dividing the people of Canada into three classes—the comparatively poor, the moderately wealthy, and the very wealthy—it would seem that if contributions to the Victory Loans constitute service to the nation, the moderately wealthy class is hardly doing its share. Of the money subscribed to the Victory Loan 1918, two hundred and seventy-one million dollars were in bonds of $5,000 and under, ninety-four millions in bonds of between $5,000 and $25,000, and three hundred and one million in bonds of $25,000 and over.

Be true to yourself. Buy Victory Bonds.

You did it before. You can do it again. Buy Victory Bonds.

TOP, bottom and all four sides of the Kootenay oven are evenly heated. That is why it is so famous as a dependable baker. There is a thermometer, too, to tell whether the heat is right or not.

No range is quite so easily managed. Duplex grates clear the ashes at a single turn. Burnished cooking-top never needs blacklead. Nickel-plated steel oven walls are kept clean with a damp cloth. Well-fitted joints and dampers hold the fire—and the oven heat—for hours.

OFFICIAL PROSPECTUS

"The Bridge from War to Peace"—The Prince of Wales.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA offers for Public Subscription the

Victory Loan 1919

$300,000,000. 5½% Gold Bonds

Bearing interest from November 1st, 1919, and offered in two maturities, the choice of which is optional with the subscriber as follows:

5 year Bonds due November 1st, 1924
Principal payable without charge at the Office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the Office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Victoria.

15 year Bonds due November 1st, 1934
Bonds may be registered as to principal or as to principal and interest, as hereinafter provided, at any of the above-mentioned offices.

Interest payable, without charge, half-yearly, May 1st and November 1st, at any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank.

Principal and Interest payable in Gold. Denominations: $50, $100, $500, and $1,000

Issue Price: 100 and Accrued Interest, Income Return 5½% per Annum

The proceeds of the Loan will be used to pay indebtedness incurred, and to meet expenditures to be made in connection with demobilization (including the authorized war service gratuity to our soldiers, land settlement loans, and other purposes connected with their re-establishment into civil life), for capital outlay upon shipbuilding, and other national undertakings forming part of Canada's industrial reconstruction programme, and for the establishment of any necessary credits for the purchase of grain, foodstuffs, timber and other products, and will be spent wholly in Canada.

Payment to be made as follows:

10% on application; 20% December 9th, 1919; 20% January 9th, 1920;
20% February 10th, 1920; 31.21% March 9th, 1920.

The last payment of 31.21% covers 30% balance of principal and 1.21% representing accrued interest at 5½% from November 1st to due dates of the respective instalments.

A full half-year's interest will be paid on May 1st, 1920, making the cost of the bonds 100 and interest. Subscriptions may be paid in full at the time of application at 100 without interest, or on any instalment due date thereafter, together with accrued interest at the rate of 5½% per annum.

This Loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest are a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

The amount of this issue is $300,000,000, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds of previous issues. The Minister of Finance, however, reserves the right to allot the whole or any part of the amount subscribed in excess of $300,000,000.

Payments

All cheques, drafts, etc., covering instalments are to be made payable to the Credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and the allotment to cancellation. Subscriptions other than those paid in full on application must be accompanied by a deposit of 10% of the amount subscribed. Official Canvassers will forward subscriptions or any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank will accept subscriptions and issue receipts.

Subscriptions may be paid in full at time of application at 100 without interest, or on any instalment due date thereafter, together with accrued interest to time of making payment in full. Under this provision, payment of subscriptions may be made as follows:

If paid in full on or before November 15th, 1919, par without interest or 100%.

If remaining instalments paid on Dec. 9th, 1919, balance of 90% and interest ($99.52 per $100).

If remaining instalments paid on Jan. 9th, 1920, balance of 70% and interest ($70.84 per $100).

If remaining instalments paid on Feb. 10th, 1920, balance of 50% and interest ($51.08 per $100).

If remaining instalment paid on Mar. 9th, 1920, balance of 30% and interest ($31.21 per $100).

Payment of instalments or payment in full after November 15th, 1919, can be made only on an instalment due date.

Denomination and Registration

Bearer bonds, with coupons, will be issued in denomination of $50, $100, $500, and $1,000, and may be registered as to principal. The first coupon attached to these bonds will be due on May 1st, 1920. Fully registered bonds, the interest on which is paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will be issued in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, $25,000, $50,000, $100,000, or any multiple of $100,000.

Payment of Interest

A full half-year's interest at the rate of 5½% per annum will be paid May 1st, 1920.

Form of Bond and Delivery

Subscribers must indicate on their applications the form of bond and the denominations required, and the securities so indicated will be delivered by the bank upon payment of subscriptions in full.

Bearer bonds of this issue will be available for delivery at the time of application to subscribers desirous of making payment in full. Bonds registered as to principal only, or fully registered as to principal and interest, will be delivered to subscribers making payment in full, as soon as the required registration can be made.

Payment of all instalments must be made at the bank originally named by the subscriber.

Non-negotiable receipts will be furnished to all subscribers who desire to pay by instalments. These receipts will be exchangeable at subscriber's bank for bonds on any instalment date when subscription is paid in full. All receipts must be exchanged before 1st June, 1920.

Form of Bonds Interchangeable

Subject to the payment of 25 cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds without coupons, at any time, on application to the Minister of Finance or any Assistant Receiver General.

Forms of application may be obtained from any Official Canvasser, from any Victory Loan Committee, or member thereof, or from any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank.

Subscription Lists will close on or before November 15th, 1919

A TONIC FOR THE NERVES

The Only Real Nerve Tonic is a Good Supply of Rich, Red Blood.

"If people would only attend to their blood, instead of worrying themselves ill," said an eminent nerve specialist, "the doctors would not see our consulting rooms crowded with nervous wrecks. More people suffer from worry than anything else."

The sort of thing which the specialist speaks of is the nervous run-down condition caused by overwork and the many anxieties of to-day. Sufferers find themselves tired, morose, law-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts like a blow. They are full of groundless fears, and do not sleep well at night. Headaches, neuritis and other nerve pains are part of the misery, and it all comes from starved nerves, and it all comes from starved nerves.

Doctored nerves with poisonous sedatives is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich, red blood. Therefore to cure nervousness and run-down health Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be taken. These pills actually make new, rich blood, which strengthens the nerves, improves the appetite, gives new strength and spirits, and makes hitherto despondent people bright and cheerful. If you are at all "out of sorts" you should begin curing yourself to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IT PAYS TO KEEP COWS

Cows as farm animals are useful in more ways than one. They are a necessity. They simplify farming, reduce risk, produce the best food and reduce the loss in marketing bulky farm products. Where the feed must be purchased cows are not profitable, but on the farm where the feed is raised they are a paying investment. The farmer that sells such feed as hay, corn, oats, forage, etc., must haul these products to market, take risks and pay for high cost of handling. The grower of feed, if he has a dairy cow, may feed it and thus get the advantages without paying the high cost of marketing. He secures a market at home for much of the bulky products, as hay, silage, grain, etc., and the products he markets are not rough, bulky, raw materials, but finished products such as milk, butterfat, cream, cheese, butter, etc. food products for which there is likely to be a good demand at a wider margin for profit. The farmer with cows has a regular income daily, weekly or monthly. This income is not hampered by bad weather nor drought. The increased fertility to the soil as a result in keeping down, saving and applying manure, rotating and pasturing cows may be considered. Poor soils are readily built up to yield large crops and more profitable returns. Raising calves is an added income. The skimmed milk, the grain, hay and silage that would sometimes be a surplus with poor marketing demand may be converted into cows or feed. Or pigs and lambs may be raised on the grain and skimmed milk with a small pasture.

To-day a dry cow is worth almost as much as a fresh one, and should receive as much attention as ever. When the cow is with calf and ceases to give milk in paying quantities, while she is still receiving a full share of feed, it indicates that the development of the embryo has reached such a stage that the cow must give over a part of her energy that would otherwise go toward producing milk, to supplying life-giving blood for the embryo. Some cows are practically dry three months after becoming pregnant. Others may give milk almost up to the time of calving. It depends on many things. It is, however, a mistake to milk a cow when she is within a short time of calving. During the first six months of the development of the embryo the cow usually shows little effect of the matter, except that she gets a better appetite, and she apparently puts on a little flesh while her milk-producing capacity is falling. But during the last three months of the period of gestation is the critical stage. During this time two-thirds of the development of the embryo takes place. Thus it is easy to see what the danger is in cutting off her feed at this critical time and putting her on a poor pasture. In fact, the cow needs more feed during the first six months of the period than she needed before.

and she will show it by eating many things for which she showed no appetite before.

Of course, it is not necessary to give the cow at this time the same kind of feed she has been getting. High milk production concentrates may be left almost entirely out, but it is essential that she have pasture. If this is not available, it must be made up of a double quantity of good legume hay. If pasturage is available, little or no silage may be fed, but silage may be made to take the place of pasturage.

Plenty of good legume hay should always be fed, and some coarse hay should be given from time to time to add bulk to the feed and to keep the bowels from being too open. Silage is good to feed to fall pregnant animals that like it just before the young is brought forth, as it is laxative and keeps the bowels in trim. But too much should not be given. As for concentrates for the dry cow, wheat bran is usually best. Other grains are good and various ground grains may be fed in proportion. Laxative feeds like linseed and cottonseed meal are left out.

THE KIND OF COW IS IMPORTANT
More attention should be paid to the kind of cow kept and the way they are cared for. In these times of high and scarce feeds, it is a very easy matter to lose money on poor cows.

Milk drawn at night and morning differs considerably in the percentage of fat. This is not due to any material difference between the milk being secreted by night or by day, but because of unequal difference between the periods. When cows lie still there is a larger per cent. of water and a correspondingly less percentage of solids in milk. Generally speaking, the milk is richest in butterfat that has been milked after the shortest period. This has been determined where cows are milked three, four or five times a day.

Cows vary from day to day. Usually this can be accounted for by change of feed, sudden changes in the weather, indisposition of animals, etc. There is always a variation between the milk first drawn and the last drawn. The first is very low in fat, while the last or "strippings" is very rich. Sometimes this may be as much as 1 and 10 per cent., respectively. The larger globules of fat, being nearly as large as the small milk ducts, pass along rapidly than the milk fluid.

The amount and the character of food have a considerable influence upon the quantity of the milk. But the quantity is more easily effected by changes in the character of the food than the quantity. Cows kept under favorable conditions, with an abundant supply of food, it is hardly possible to increase the proportion of fat to other solids by a change in the food. But while the amount of the various constituents of the milk is not easily affected by the food, the quality of the constituents themselves may be considerably influenced, especially the fat. For instance, linseed meal, gluten meal and certain other foods make soft, oily fat, while cottonseed meal, certain legumes and wheat bran make fat.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

The dairy farmer, the producer of milk and cream, controls the quality and price of butter. If he furnishes cream of good quality he makes possible the manufacture of good butter, which will command the highest price on the market. If he supplies cream of inferior quality of low-grade butter is bound to be made from it, which means small returns for the product. The dairy farmer, is the controlling power which determines the destiny of the dairy industry. The care he gives the cream on the farm determines the financial returns from the butter farmer, because the price the creamery pays for butterfat is necessarily largely regulated by the price the butter brings on the market.

The application of barnyard manure has built up many poor soils and enabled farmers to prosper. More manure ought to be produced and more used. Poor soils mean poor farmers; rich soil is likely to mean prosperous farmers.

It matters very little how much land one farms, provided he farms well what he has. Winter cover crops are of much benefit to worn lands, because roots of plants hold the soil particles, utilize the readily available plant foods that might be lost and return vegetable matter when turned under. Calves are usually fed whole milk for two or three weeks, then gradually changed to skim milk. About the time of changing begin to feed a little grain, but do not think that it is necessary to use oilmeal or any other high-priced feed, high in protein or fat or both. Experiments at the Missouri experiment station show that a mixture of two parts of corn and one part of oats, by weight, gives as good results as oilmeal and ready-mixed calf meals often purchased at higher prices. Bran is not especially good for the young calf, because it is too laxative. The grain mixture should be fed immediately after the milk and neither should be fed too liberally or scarce may result.

Dirt carries bad flavors. If the barn or its surroundings and cows are dirty it will result in poor milk; poor milk results in poor cream; poor cream results in poor butter.

A TRUE PROPHET

Prince's Grandfather and American Unity.

(N. Y. Sunday Sun.)

The eldest son of England's democratic King has crossed the Atlantic and his presence on this side of the ocean will evoke, from the harp-strings of both our national history and personal memory, not a few delightful chords. In a word, because of the initial visit of a Prince of Wales in 1860, American patriotism is to-day more of a reality. The "Indissoluble union of Indestructible States" resembles much more that adamant rock, which Lincoln believed it to be, and not at all the "rope of sand" which President Buchanan feared and talked about.

It was in those dark days when the fifteenth President, "the Sage of Wheatland," called for a day of fasting and of prayer—as he did well to do—while the United States Government, with an empty treasury, had to beg for money at 12 per cent. interest, when the American commonwealth and sisterhood was menaced with disruption, that the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII. and peacemaker par excellence, visited us. Still, it is simple fact to recall that the great historian, Edward A. Freeman, believing that the Union was at an end, planned his great book, in four volumes, on the "History of Federal Government, from the Amphyctonic Council to the Disruption of the United States of America." The activities of Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Thomas and a million or more of American patriots, however, compelled a change in Mr. Freeman's views and plans. Only one volume appeared and the work remains a torso.

On the other hand, it was an even grander voice that laid emphasis on the creative and unifying forces in American history. He proved the true prophet. It was no less a personage than the Prince of Wales, England's future King, who in 1860, as Lord Renfrew, visited us almost incognito, and certainly without ostentation or a trace of snobbishness. He came unexpectedly into the State House at Philadelphia and was mightily interested in Independence Hall.

But, oh, what did he see in the hallway and underneath the grand staircase? Listen, ye Daughters of the American Revolution of 1919, to whose mothers we owe much, while some there be yet who remember and can confirm what we tell. Literally, they took up the bell, which the men had put down. What did the Prince, to his disgust, see but an eating stand and materials of quick lunch, whose steaming odors filled the place? We, with our juvenile Keystone State appetite, noticed these viands as ambrosia and fit for the gods. There we took our Philadelphia pepperpot, waffles, hominy, scrapple, snarecase, cheese-cakes and "dum noodles" and "snits"—for Manhattans, we translate, wheat flour doughballs, dried apples and lam boiled together and served with molasses.

To crown the vision, beheld as joyfully by the Quaker CHY small boy, who concealed a mammoth cave under his diaphragm, as it was sorrowfully looked upon by the surprised Prince, there sat a goddess of Liberty, in the form of a fat lady, who might have tipped the scales at a quarter of a thousand pounds. Red faced and beaming with motherly good nature, amid appetizing clouds of vapors, she presided over the steaming pots and pans, kept colorfully high over live charcoal in sheet iron bases. This lady bountiful dispensed soup, beans, pretzels and pickled tripe with especial joy when candidates for her benches began to multiply, at 12:05 post meridian, and she soon had a waiting list. The more, the merrier, seemed to be the motto of herself and her maids. There was the Liberty Bell, which, then set on rough timbers under the stairway, furnished on its platform a dresser for dishes.

But, oh, what a debacle from august historic memories! Was the treasury of Penn's city so poor and even as low as that of the Buchanan Government in 1861 that the city fathers must rent out the sacred edifice for the mean revenue of an eating stand? The future Edward VII. was horrified. Then and there he, the Prince, spoke out strongly in his mother's English, which we give in paraphrase. He intimated that it was the duty of the Philadelphia municipality to end such base usage of an edifice consecrated by noble memories.

For, let it be recalled to-day, none more than Edward knew the true inwardness of the Revolution. In 1775, on American soil with blood, and on British soil without slaughter, the same struggle began. Without the bloodshed of battle the same victory was won in 1830 that he won in 1781, with French air, and in 1787 consolidated here, namely, that of true representative government. We made sure of our victory against a German King, who, with a corrupt Parliament, misrepresented British tradition and spirit, in our Constitution, our union and our stable government, in 1787. Across the water the reform of 1830 meant a Parliament representing men and not land, as in 1775.

The Prince, later King Edward VII. recommended that not only should the refreshment tables and benches be removed, but that the whole building should be restored to its original simplicity and use.

But, women, sisters, let us reveal the secret. Men balked at the cost. They pleaded the same argument, of loss of revenue, which has been so industriously and with as much fallacious reasoning and pseudo-eloquence urged in favor of retaining strong beverages. One glorious male exception was seen in that gentleman of strong individuality, who wrote one of the most honest autobiographies in modern days, Samuel Whitaker Pennypacker. He turned the engines of his unique erudition to the reinforcement of the D. A. R. With women's tenacity and an imperturbable as invincible as that of their Biblical exemplar and precedent, the Daughters of the Revolution persisted and won. Independence Hall, restored to its chaste simplicity and pristine grandeur of style, is now an American mecca. What a tremendous agent for national unity! What an investment in nation wide loyalty to the ideal of the fathers!

SIR WILLIAM'S WILL

CHAPTER XVII.

One afternoon, a few weeks after Hesketh Carton had locked up the vial in his safe, Clytie rode down the winding road to Withycombe. She had started by herself—quite by herself, for she had sent the groom back with a message to Mollie not to wait tea; and it was rather singular that she had not taken this way to Withycombe until after some consideration and hesitation at the crossroads.

And now, as the sure footed mare, with graceful and confident steps, wound her way down the steep and uneven road, she was wondering whether she was acting wisely in going; for she was conscious, painfully conscious, that her object in visiting Withycombe was to see Jack Douglas.

He had scarcely been out of her mind since the eventful day when she had lain fainting in his arms. She had tried to forget him, had told herself a thousand times that it was almost her duty to blot him from her memory; but it is easier for the leopard to change his spots than for a girl to forget such an incident in her life as that which had accompanied the storm in the bay.

And she knew that she wanted to see him; she had waited, with more or less patience, for him to avail himself of her offer and visit the Hall; but day after day passed, and he had not come. It was possible that he had not cared to come, that he had forgotten her—and yet something far back in her heart whispered that he had not done so. Was it pride that was keeping him away? She knew that he was proud, as proud as she was fearless; and if it were pride that kept him away, she would have been able to tell him so; but she was not so sure of that.

A faint blush stained the ivory of her cheek as she looked dreamily at the now leafless trees, the beech and pine towering above the road and casting sombre shadows in the mellow glow of the winter sunlight.

How happy she had been in those weeks which seemed so long ago! She had almost forgotten the miserable problem of the will, and her own responsibility and care in connection with it; and felt almost as free as the fisher-girls who laughed and played on the jetty; for they were free to live and marry whom they would, and were the mistresses of their own lives.

Presently she came to the bend of the road, and a child ran out from among the trees calling joyously to her. It was Polly, and Clytie pulled up with an answering note of welcome in her voice.

"Why, Polly, is it you? How lucky to have met you; for I was coming to see you!"

"Was 'oo?" said Polly, her rosy mouth stretched in a delighted grin.

"What a booful horse!"

"Isn't it?" said Clytie. "Would you like to come up? There is plenty of room for you. See, now, put your foot in the stirrup—come to the bank where you can reach it—and give me your hand. That's it!"

"Do you think he'll bear me?" asked Polly, gravely, as she nestled down with Clytie's arm protectively round her.

"Yes, I think so," said Clytie, pressing the curly head to her bosom. "And how is mother?"

"Velly well," replied Polly, as it matter of course. "An' I'm velly well; it's only Mr. Jack what's bad."

"Oh, is he bad?" asked Clytie, the smile vanishing from her face and her voice lowered.

Polly nodded solemnly. "Yes, he's been velly bad; so muvver says, but he says no, not at all, that there's nuvver the matter w' him. But muvver knows, cos he don't eat like what he did. She says he pretends to, but he don't really."

"So he hasn't seen a doctor?" said Clytie, in the same low voice.

Polly shook her head. "He got kite angry when muvver said he should, and 'clared that it was only a cold. A cold does make 'oo mis-es'ble, doesn't it?"

"It does," assented Clytie. "And you think that it is only a cold that is the matter with—Mr. Jack?"

"I don't think so," said Polly, shrewdly, "cos he don't cough or blow his nose; but he's miser'ble'nuff; and he doesn't come home till late, an' walks about by himself when it's too wet to work, an' he don't laugh no more when he carries me about."

"Oh, he still carries you, Polly?" said Clytie.

"Yes; he isn't too bad for that," said Polly, in a tone of thankfulness; "though muvver often tells him to put the brat down—I'm the brat. I think he's going to leave Withycombe; I hope he won't, don't you, Miss Clytie?"

Clytie felt as if a weight had suddenly fallen on her heart.

"I—I don't know, Polly," she said, speaking rather to herself than the child. "If it is better for him to go—"

Mrs. Westaway came out of the cottage at this moment and eyed the pair with a mixture of pleasure and reproach.

"Lor' bless the child! if she ain't allus in mischief, and makin' a noo-sense of herself! Give her to me, Miss Clytie, and do 'ee come in and have a cup of tea."

She took the child, giving at a loving shake, and called to a boy to take the horse to the stable, and Clytie followed her into the cottage.

"The kettle's boiling, miss. I put it on, thinking that Mr. Jack might drop in for a cup; but there's no dependin' on him these days. The best o' men are a worry an' a fret, and he's no better than the rest at botherin'."

"Polly tells me that Mr. Douglas has been ill," said Clytie, as she cut the bread and butter, and surreptitiously covered a slice with sugar for Polly. But Mrs. Westaway's eyes were sharp.

"You'll spoil that child, miss, same as Mr. Jack does," she said, with mock severity. "Yes; he's been ill, least-ways, I think so, or I don't know what's the matter with him. Sometimes I've thought it was the complaint most young men get."

"What's that, Mrs. Westaway?"

"Love," responded Mrs. Westaway sententiously. Clytie bent over her teacup and stirred the tea carefully.

"An' so I kep' a watch on the young lussies. There's many of 'em as have set their cap at him, and little wonder, for he's well favored and more—more of a gentleman than the Withycombe lads; but I've seen that he don't take no notice of 'em. Pr'aps it's some gal in furrin parts."

"Perhaps it is," assented Clytie.

CUTICURA HEALS RASH ON CHILD

On Body and Face. Red and Itchy. Cried For Hours. Lasted a Year.

"A rash started all over my little girl's body, and she had some on her face. It started in a pimple that was full of water, and it got red and itchy. She cried for hours. This trouble lasted a year."

"Then I started with a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bought more, and I used four cakes of Soap and the boxes of Ointment which followed." (Signed) Mrs. Dora Langley, 1111 Gerrard St. E., Toronto, Ont., August 11, 1918.

"Well, be it as it may, he's changed a deal lately," said Mrs. Westaway with a sigh. "He's lost his hearty ways an' his laugh an' his spirits, for we scarcely ever hear him laugh now; and he seems like a man in a dream. And he's more careless than ever; gets wet through and don't come home to change; and no bullying as I can give him have any effect on him, as it used to do."

"And the jetty at Pethwick?" asked Clytie.

"That goes on amain, miss," replied Mrs. Westaway, with a shrug of impatience. "He seemed wrapped up in it. I don't see the sense of givin' your soul to a thing and lettin' your body go starve, Miss Clytie; and that's what Mr. Jack is doin'."

"I am sorry to hear such a bad account of him," said Clytie, after a pause, and as casually as she could. "He was very kind to us—when we were staying here, you know."

Mrs. Westaway nodded. "He's kind to everybody miss, 'ceptin' himself," she said laconically.

"How beautiful the sea looks. I think I will stroll down to the beach," Clytie said, after another pause.

Polly would have followed, but Mrs. Westaway called her back, and Clytie went on alone. The beach was deserted, for the men had not come back from fishing; and she stood and looked at the sea pensively and sadly. There seemed to be something missing in the beauty of the scene. Presently she looked toward the wooded cliff, and saw a figure seated at the foot of a tree, its face turned from her.

She knew it at once. It was Jack Douglas. He was sitting with his chin in his hands, his pipe in the corner of his mouth; and there was something so solitary, so melancholy in his attitude, that it appealed to her heart.

Well, she had seen him, heard of him; and now she could go back—to think of him, to dwell upon that motionless figure gazing out to sea. That was the worst of it; her visit had done her no good, had only increased the restlessness, wistfulness, which had entered into her life.

She climbed the beach, looking straight up the road before her; then she hesitated, and, with a consciousness of weakness, turned to the left and entered the wood. Her step was so light on the dead bracken and pine-needles that he, lost in thought, did not hear her until she was close upon him; and he turned quickly, as she spoke his name, and, springing to his feet, stood and looked at her as if she were a vision rather than a reality.

"Miss Cly—Bramley!" he said. The color had started at her with a sudden light in his eyes, as if he half-doubted the fact of her presence.

"How do you do?" she said as calmly, as conventionally as she could, and she fought with and mastered the blush that responded to his sudden flush. "I saw you from the beach down there; and I came—I thought I would come to ask you if you caught cold that—in the storm."

"No," he said almost calmly, for he also was fighting. "No." He laughed grimly. "I never catch cold. And you? Were you not—hurt?"

She smiled. "No; oh, no. There was a tiny bruise on my forehead where I struck it; but it has gone; at least, I think so."

She brushed the hair from her brow lightly, as if to show him; and he nodded, his eyes fixed on the spot.

"I'm glad," he said.

She seated herself on the bank, and motioned to the spot from which he had risen.

"Won't you sit down again? I'd please smoke, or I shall think I've disturbed you at your rest."

He put his pipe in his mouth, and sat down. Every moment was precious, and he feared to cut it short; and yet he was almost sorry she had come; for, quite erroneously, he had been telling himself, even as he sat there, that he was getting used to her absence, that he should in time come to forget her.

"And how does the jetty get on?" she asked, clasping her hands round her knees and looking down at him with a half-smile of interest in her eyes, which were, he told himself, violet now.

"Oh, very well," he said. "No doubt Lord Stanton has told you that we're waiting for stone. That's why I'm mooching here. There'll soon be nothing much to do till the early spring; so I can go away with a clear conscience."

He spoke in a careless tone, and even smiled; and Clytie nodded assentingly.

"You have earned a holiday, I know," she said. As she spoke, her eyes wandered dreamily to the sea; she was wondering vaguely why she should suddenly feel as if the spirit of rest and contentment, of a happiness too nebulous to be called happiness, had fallen lightly, soothingly, upon her like the descent of a wood-dove with outstretched wings.

"Holiday? Oh, I shall find some work," he said absently.

"And will you be long away?" she asked.

He turned his face from her as he replied.

"I—don't know. I'm half inclined to leave for good."

She did not start; but her hands gripped each other, and her lids drooped so that her eyes were hidden if he should chance to turn.

"What would Lord Stanton do?" she asked lightly.

"Engage a better man," he replied. "Of course, I know that it is his kindness that keeps me on. He could get a dozen men to-morrow who know the business better than I do."

"He doesn't think so," she said, in a low voice. "He is always talking of you—he appreciates you, Mr. Douglas. But perhaps you are tired of this quiet place, of the people."

He half-rose, then fell back, and smoked furiously.

"No; I'm not tired of the place or the people," he said almost fiercely.

"Ah! well; then there must be some other reason, no doubt," she said, with a smile.

The smile, the words spoken with a lightness, through which he could not see the genuine distress, stung him. He bit hard on his pipe to keep the retort back; but it forced itself from his lips.

"Yes; there is always some other reason," he said, in a low, stern voice, "and I've got mine; and it's best for me to go."

"You are unhappy here?" she said, not quickly but in a tone he was compelled to answer.

"Yes, I'm unhappy," he admitted, as if the words were wrung from him. "Most men are when they want something they can't get."

She smiled. "I should have thought you were one of those men who always got what they wanted," she said, with the same deceptive, misleading lightness.

He was silent; and she went on, quite calmly, though her heart was beating fast.

"I mean that I should think you are a very ambitious man."

He stared at her.

"I'm ambitious! Well, perhaps you're right, Miss Bramley. But it's only been lately. Yes, I see now! I'm ambitious, that's what I am; but worse luck for me, I've set my mind, my heart, on something beyond me, something as far away as that streak of light in the sky there."

He pointed with his pipe, and then stuck it fiercely in his mouth again.

"Then you will get it," she said almost unconsciously.

He looked at her, and his face paled under its tan as he shook his head.

"I think not," he said curtly.

She was silent a moment; then she said, as if with a polite interest in the man, the fisherman, who had been so kind and attentive to her:

"Can no one help you? Lord Stanton—he is your friend, I know, and he would help you."

He sprang to his feet and stood almost with his back to her.

"No one can help me," he said, grimly. "Luck is against me; I have cut the ground from under my feet; there is a barrier."

She raised her brows and took hold of her habit-skirt as if she were going.

"It sounds so strange to hear you talk like this," she said, with a smile; "in these democratic days when men have cast down nearly all the barriers between them and wealth and fame. Why, one hears reads, of men rising from the lowest rungs of the ladder to the highest positions, to all kinds of honors."

He looked at her.

"Wealth, fame, position?" he repeated, as if he were puzzled, bewildered. "Who cares for them? I mean—no, no; that's not what I want." He made a gesture with his hand, a movement of impatient contempt; then his face changed, and his eyes grew wistful. "I wish I could tell you," he said, in a low voice.

She did not blush, but something like fear came into her eyes, the fear which thrills every pure maiden when love's lips, which have hitherto been silent, threaten to unlock.

"No, no!" she said. "I mean," and she blushed now. "I am not anxious—that is, I—Oh, I seem to have been trying to force your confidence!" She broke off in distress.

CHAPTER XVIII.

He took a step toward her, then stopped and gripped his hands behind him.

"No; I can't tell you, Miss Bramley," he said, hoarsely. "It—it wouldn't be right, honest, fair. I should be a mean hound! I've cut the ground from under me; I told you so. I've forfeited the right to speak; have closed my own lips. And I'd give"—his voice broke, with a laugh—"half my life to be able to tell you."

She had risen, and had half-turned away from him, her face pale, her eyes downcast, as if his only partially restrained violence frightened her—as, indeed, it did; and yet it was not all fear that made her heart throb with an exquisite pain.

"But I can't," he went on, desperately. "Not now, at any rate. Perhaps some day—" He was silent a moment; then, in a quieter, calmer tone, he continued: "Some day, if—if luck changes, if—if it is not too late." He thought for an instant swiftly, and added: "Yes, that's it. I must wait! If—if, when the proper time comes, will you care—will you be so gracious as to hear what I shall have to say to say?"

She was silent; and his mood changed, as if he had suddenly remembered that he, Jack Douglas, Lord Stanton's man of all work, was addressing Miss Bramley, of the Hall.

"I beg your pardon," he said, humbly. "I've no right to speak to you like this, to ask you to—take an interest—" Then his voice grew deeper and seemed to ring with the assertion of a right. "But let that pass, if you will, and tell me"—he made a rapid calculation—"if I ask you to hear my story in some months—in the spring—will you care to hear it, Miss Bramley?"

EUROPEAN ARMY UNIFORMS

Until the great war broke out France had never adopted any official field uniform for its army as a whole. Troops on duty in Africa had been supplied with khaki, while several experimental uniforms had been tried in sections of the home army. When the war broke out in 1914 the troops went into service in their historic red and blue. The impracticality of this uniform was soon discovered, and a colored cloth of light grayish blue was adopted. This was said to blend better with the surroundings in the field in Northern France than the khaki worn by the British.

The British army was first entirely equipped with a field service uniform in the South African War of 1899-1902. The color adopted was the same as the khaki-colored uniforms which had been used in India and the same uniform is still used. Though varying in color and details the type of uniform has been practically copied by all nations.

The uniforms of the Italians have been rather French in character, particularly since the Napoleonic conquest of Italy, but an endless variety of colors. Provisions to the unity of the country in 1861 each separate kingdom and state maintained and dressed its army as it saw fit. It was not until 1870 that the entire Italian army came under one dress regulation. These regulations were changed in 1903 at which time the present uniform was adopted. The field uniform is brownish gray in color.

In Germany experiments with a field service uniform were begun immediately after Britain's war with the Boers, but it was not until 1908 that a definite uniform was decided upon. The army since that time has been equipped with field uniforms of brownish gray. Military critics of the war of the nations agreed that it was the most practical of the uniforms now in the field as far as adaptability for concealment is concerned, though the tight-fitting tunics and heavy helmets are unsuited for modern warfare.

Many a man looks so far ahead as to stub his toe over the chance at his feet.

Social Hygiene.

The Social Hygiene Association of Canada has endorsed the principles adopted at the New York conference, and the Dominion Government has been requested to adopt the general principles in any plan which they may have in view for Dominion control. The principles are as follows:

1. That the single standard of morals should prevail for men and women.
2. That continence is compatible with health and intellectual vigor for both sexes.
3. That men and women should serve together whenever possible on bodies whose functions concern the development and enforcement of moral standards.
4. That prostitutes be not treated as a class apart from other women, and that prostitution be not recognized as a trade.
5. That all measures, either preventive or repressive, concerned with social morality, apply impartially to men and women.
6. That a simultaneous vigorous attack on venereal disease should be made, and that the issues of public health and morals be thoroughly correlated.
7. That sound sex education be incorporated into one entire educational system in homes, school, college, and the church and press.
8. That social and economic adjustments granting to the individual decent living conditions and adequate recreation are essential to progress in social morality. These adjustments concern especially:
 - (a) Housing conditions.
 - (b) Industrial conditions, including conditions of work and wages.
 - (c) Proper and sufficient recreational opportunities.

Big Howitzer for Ontario.

To the 116th Battalion of Ontario county belongs the honor of capturing the big howitzer gun which Sir William Hearst has accepted on behalf of the Ontario Government. The war trophy, which it is expected will reach Toronto shortly, will be given a place of honor in the Queen's Park in front of the Legislative Buildings. The big gun fell into the clutches of the heroic Canadians in the battle of Amiens last August, in which the 5th platoon of "B" Company, led by Lieut. W. A. Orr, son of Dr. R. B. Orr, curator of the Provincial Museum at the Normal School, distinguished themselves in splendid style. The gun was captured by this company after a night of heavy fighting and rounding up of several hundred Hun prisoners.

The gun will grace the Queen's Park as a memorial to the late Col. Sam Sharpe, M.P., the fighting commander of the battalion.

Old Hats Exported.

Thousands of hats discarded by English women are exported every year to Brazil, where they are eagerly bought by the Indians. The feathers and other ornaments on the hats are taken by the men, and the bare straw shapes given to their women-folk.

Getting Together.

A youth named Beer was arrested the other day for breaking into a public-house. The magistrate decided that the proper place for him was the jug.—London Punch.
