IS MERE MECHANISM.

FACIAL EXPRESSION—THUS DESCRIBED BY DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS.

Muscle Groups That Can Depict Any Emotion Irrespective of the Feelings—Harold's Theories and Duchenne's Experiments.

The subject of this article is of immediate interest to every intelligent man.

Over in France they have revived the discussion of the causes of expression in the human face.

EXPRESSIONS ONE AND TWO.

at will, to look disgusted at will, to look loving when hate fills the heart.

It used to be thought that the soul looked out of the eyes.

All the complex emotions that vary the human face—love, anger, hate, joy, sorrow, fear, pride, exaltation—its but developments, not of intellect and soul.

When the ancient strips the skin from the face, he learns that the features of the face, eyes, nostrils, lips, and mouth, are the instruments of expression.

When one sees the woman he loves, the mind, by the features of the face, pulls certain strings, the features are drawn this way and that, and the young woman is delighted to observe a most soulful expression of love.

Before showing how this is done, it may be just as well to call attention to one fact which might be overlooked.

There is no reason why your face should not be as much your servant as your hands or your feet.

The chief value of this matter is to players. If you will go to a theatre and watch the faces on the stage steadily, you will be amazed at the number of imitations of human emotions displayed on the faces.

The expression of emotion is a matter of cold science and of infinite pains in applying scientific principles in artistic practice.

Stage persons should profit by this fact and the lady might spend their lonely leisure less innocently.

ness and freedom from prejudice and unerring attention to an old Darwin.

And in none of his surprising works has he shown these qualities more manifestly than in his "Expressions of the Emotions in Man and Animals."

And now the habit's soul is dark. His cheek is blanched with wonder; there is a rumble in his voice.

"That sounds like distant thunder. He'll say by way of warning. 'Hold the bills for things my wife gave me on Christmas morning.'"

And now the wife's mind is filled with doubts and many fears: One moment she will laugh aloud.

The next will burst in tears. And all because she didn't contract the things she got, you know; And wanted what she didn't get—'tis always so.

And now the habit's soul is dark. His cheek is blanched with wonder; there is a rumble in his voice.

"That sounds like distant thunder. He'll say by way of warning. 'Hold the bills for things my wife gave me on Christmas morning.'"

CARACAS RAILROAD.

Venezuela Has One of the Best Bits of Engineering in the World.

This is a scene on one of the most remarkable railroads in the world. It is the Caracas line, and its route, La Guayra.

As the bird flies, the two towns are only about six miles apart, but the railroad that joins them is nearly 24 miles long.

So the railroad train that never exceeds five or six small and very light cars, winds along the precipitous flanks of the mountains, puffs up one side of the valley and down the other, driven through short tunnels, and keeps up its very unusual way until finally the glorious valley of the capital city bursts into view.

Most charming and exhilarating views are revealed at every stage of the journey; but this short trip is not one of the most in the world.

During the rainy season traffic has sometimes been interrupted for more than a week at a time by landslides.

CYCLE HEADLIGHTS.

PHRASES AND PROVERBS THAT WILL LIGHTEN DARK ROADS.

Aids to Sleep Hill Climbing by the 'Cycle Devotee' It Will Go 'Round With You if You Can't Find in 'This Little Motto That Will Suit You.

As brisk as a bike. His god is his bicycle. Love me love my bike. Youth will have its spin.

A good rider needs no push. Speak well of the old bicycle. Small choice in poor bicycles.

Never too old to learn to ride. Bike-chasing dogs seldom bite. Every bicycle has its century run.

Ride little that you may ride long. A lamp lit in time of need saves a day. An unused bicycle makes no record.

A rough road is dreaded by the lad. To a rickety bike all roads are bad. The crank sees no fault in his bike.

Unfettered tires seldom come alone. All are tacks that puncture his tire. Oil freely that you may ride smoothly.

A novice and his seat are soon parted. A miss is good for a mile—in bloomers. The proof of a bicycle is in the riding.

Many a poor bike is bought for the best. The bicyclist's wife often lacks care. No bike so poor as not to have its rider.

Bicycle sprains are often but skin deers. A poor rider is a complication of evils. A reckless rider makes a fat churl.

Every bicycle has its century run. Owners of different bikes will seldom agree. A cheap bicycle is better than a dead horse.

One punctured tire is as bad as another. A cat may look at a bloomed young thing. Lock up your bicycle before it is stolen.

Experience is the best spoke in your wheel. Hike on the common road and you'll be safe. Spare the bearings and spoil the bicycle.

A poor rider is better than a rich forerider. A yell is as good as a nod to a deaf bicyclist.

A lad rider always finds fault with his bike. As you gear your bike so must you gear your life.

All bicycles are good—for something or nothing. Those who ride bikes should not throw tacks.

Trouble comes on cycles, but goes away on foot. Wise men make bicycles, and fools fall off them.

If wishes were bicycles beggars would scorch. A mile in the morning is worth two in the evening.

Hard words break no bones, but hard roads do. A bike between the legs is worth two in the store.

After a fall the amateur and expert are equally ridiculous. When you are with bicyclists talk as bicyclists do (of bicycles).

Have a bike of your own before you borrow another's. He who always rides by himself has his bicycle used by a fool.

There is but one good bicycle, and every man thinks he has it. A man who is in love with his bicycle is no judge of woman's beauty.

All are not wheelmen who wear knickerbockers; they are sometimes wheelwomen. Those who ride bikes of same make, call all other makes a fake.

The fool who coasts without a brake is apt to be broken to shreds. He who doesn't ride a bike, the hard ground will not strike belike.

He who moans and rides away, may make a record some fine day. Quickly to bike and quickly to spin, makes a man tired, perspiring and thin.

A cyclist off without a night; May unmoored ride at night; One cool too often meets with a coil of rope, court and five dollars fine.

Retaliation. "Hurry up, Maud, Mr. Jones has been waiting an hour already." "Humph! Let him wait. Didn't he keep me waiting three years before he spoke?"—Harpur's Harar.

Leap Year. Dear Miss, you ask me to be yours. You say you love me true. My happiness to you? They tell me you're a careless heart. Is cold and callous too? And if, unfaithful you would be, Alas, what should I do?

Nay, do not squeeze my hand, nor kneel, and kneel to me. My heart you've won, I must confess, And I've been told you would not. So, faint did you, fair maid, 'Tis best, you will agree.

IT WAS JUST A JOKE.

BUT IT LOOKED DIFFERENT FROM THE UNDER SIDE.

The Inoffensive Citizen and the Practical Joker—The Meeting Described in Verse Sentences An Unquestionable Luctuous Situation.

The practical joker was sauntering along in the dusk. The inoffensive citizen was sauntering along in the same dusk, unmindful of the presence of the practical joker.

The practical joker, recognizing a friend in the inoffensive citizen, chuckled to himself and quickened his steps to overtake him.

The inoffensive citizen was thinking of a story he had read about footpads, and wondering whether anyone would ever try to hold him up.

The practical joker suddenly tipped the inoffensive citizen's hat over his eyes.

The inoffensive citizen wheeled instantly and landed a fine blow between the practical joker's eyes.

The practical joker went down. The inoffensive citizen promptly sat on him and hit him again.

The practical joker yelled: "For heaven's sake, hit me again, John! Don't you know me?"

The inoffensive citizen said: "Great Scott!"

The practical joker said in an injured tone: "Hang it all, John, it's only a joke."

The inoffensive citizen looked at the practical joker, who now had one eye closed, and laughed.

The practical joker angrily asserted that it was no laughing matter.

"But you said it was a joke," returned the inoffensive citizen; "and I think you are right." And he laughed again.

But the practical joker hasn't been able to see the point of it to this day. Still, it was unquestionably a good joke—Chicago Evening Post.

needed to harness up the marshall's best team to a spring wagon and to load the latter with all the delicacies of the season.

They also along with several rifles and double-barreled shotguns, a tent and a fine bird dog, intending to rustle in the mountains in a few months in order to enjoy much-needed rest and a change of scene.

After dusk they told the warden and guards that they were sorry to see young men of such social position for a living was to trade horses with people.

When they saw a horse that they fancied, they would take it to a stroller dealer around with the owner until they got it.

In this way they made a good deal of money and among some Laramie City man would come home with a warrant, for a return for a 1600 steel in one of these trades.

They had a good sized fire, quite a four-legged deer, a pair of crisp air brought back the flush of health to their wan cheeks.

They shot sage-hens and caught mountain trout in pleasant weather, and a few days of such out-of-door annual, they would go out and trade horses with the stage coach.

Call it what you will, the sheriff and stroller dealer, they were stumped him for a trade.

While they were haggling about it, a squad of the sheriff's party came in and took the whole outfit.

When they were taken back to the pen, and the "Kid" laid down arms at the request of the sheriff, he said: "Major, I wouldn't you've got the bull on me. After all, there's no harm in our fellow men and taken up arms against the law."

"The law is mighty," said the sheriff, "but the devil goes to and fro in the world."—N.Y.E.

Unchangeable. As the suit appears— "Oh, now he's a lovely, prowling, pranking Brownie."—New York Ledger.

Breaking out again. "You may not have thought of it," observed the exchange editor, "but this new cure-all of Nicola Tesla's is contrary to Scripture."

The financial editor braced himself for the financial editor's remark in "The Book of Revelations," pursued the other, "It is written, 'So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I also hate.'"

"You seem to be trying," coldly replied the financial editor, "to give me a New Testament of your own."

"Stop right there! That's a Revelation of your depravity that!" "Besides, what does Moses say in the Pentateuch?" "Do you think the Pentateuch is a book?" "I think that if there is anything in Nicola Tesla's cure that could heal the infirmities of your temper and sweeten your disposition?" "You'd have a disposition to take it? That's right. He cures by rapid vibration, and you need a shaking up."
