Items of Catholic Interest in the Magazines

(Sacred Heart Review)
Southern Toilers.

It may not be easy to find one who can read without some feeling of interest and concern the narration entitled, "The Woman that Toils. Experiences of a Literary Woman as a Working Girl," by Marie Van Vorst, in the December number of Everybody's Magazine. An editorial note informs us that Miss Van Vorst is the daughter of the late Judge Van Vorst, chancellor of the State of New York; and that her accounts of factory life are drawn from her own experience. We have reason to look apace at this means of getting information about, and experience of, the working classes and their mode of living. Amateur sociologists make many an error, yet Miss Van Vorst's views are interesting as showing how workaday life appeals to a woman who has been bred in the lap of luxury. If her coloring were not so vivid and sensational her words might have more weight. As it is, there is a certain shallowness in her reasoning which those more familiar with working men and women may readily notice. As a matter of fact, some of the conditions which she describes as intolerable are not so, at all. Factory life is hard, but it is not so degrading as Miss Van Vorst would have us believe. There are noble, beautiful characters in the factories of New England. So also, we suppose, in the South. The "poor whites" of the South, it is true, are not such good material out of which to make self-respecting workers as the composite population of New England, of which the Catholic Irish and French Canadians form such a large part, but the writer's obvious intention to be sensational makes us distrustful of her evidence. She says at the outset: "Those who are familiar with the healthy type of the decent workmen of the West and East must draw their distinction as they consider this same class in the South. The Southern mill-hand's face is unique, a fearful type, the persual of which is not pleasant nor cheerful to the character reader, to the lover of humanity, nor to our prophets. . . . Around Columbia, South Carolina, there lie five miles and their respective settlements. . . . The mill-hands are not from the direct section of Columbia. They are strangers brought in from 'the hills' by the agents of the company, who go through different parts of the country describing, to the poor whites and hill dwellers, work in the mills as a way to riches and success. Filled with dreams of gain, with hopes of decent housing and schooling for their children, these immigrants leave their distant communities and troop to the mill. . . . What the condition of these laborers is, after they have tested the promises of the manufacturer and found them empty bubbles, can only be understood and imagined when one has seen their life, lived among them worked by their sides, and comprehended the tragedy of this population—a floating, population, going from Granton to Excelsior, from Cortland, hither and thither, seeking better conditions."

The Mill-Hands' Boarding Place.

One's pen hesitates to describe the long, long day, the dreary night, the wretched lodging-house, the dolorous village, that Miss Van Vorst depicts. The lodging-house had been chosen by her, because she caught sight of a clean child and a clean room; she can have half a bed there, in the loft, where five persons will room together. . . . Long before five the clock of Excelsior rings and the cry of the mill is heard waking whosoever is lucky enough to be asleep. Mrs. White calls Mollie. The girl murmurs and turns; she rises reluctantly, yawning, sighing, lifts her sootily soiled shoes and the dirty wrapper. Her hair is untouched by face unwashed, but she is ready for the day! At half-past five we have breakfasted and then pass out of the house. . . . Beside me limps a boy of fourteen, in brown, earth-colored clothes. He is so thin that his bones threaten to pierce his vestments. He has a slender visage, of a frailness that I have learned to know as representing the pure American type of people known as "poor white trash," and with whose blood has been scarcely any admixture of foreign element. . . . He is 'from the hills,' an orphan, perfectly friendless. He boards with a lot of men. He works from 5:45 to 6:45; he has three-quarters of an hour at noon; he has his Saturday afternoons and his Sundays free; he makes fifty cents a day; he has no education, no way of getting an education; he is almost a man, crippled and condemned. At my exclamation when he tells me the sum of his wages he looks up at me and a faint likeness to a smile comes about his thin lips. "It keeps me in existence," he says in a slow drawl. He used just those words. . . . Other people are 'kept in existence' in this wretched place by work at the drawing-in frames. "The girls are ambitious at this work, for they make good wages. (A good drawer-in makes $1.25 a day.) They sit close to their frames, bent over, for twelve hours out of the day." The girl who taught Miss Van Vorst "speeding" earned from $1.30 to $1.50 a day, and controlled 704 "spindlers" in all. "These she had to frenzied and keep running, cleaning all the machinery gear with her own hands, oil the steel, even bend and clean under the lower shelf, and come in to contact with the most dangerous parts of the mechanism."

Are They Happy?

"Over and over again I am asked," writes Miss Van Vorst, "over and over again I am asked, by those whose wish is, I suppose, to prove to themselves and their consciences that the working-girl is not so actually wretched, that her outcry is not so audible: 'The factory girls are happy, are they not? Don't you find them so?' . . . I heard a manufacturer say: 'We gave our mill hands everything we could to elevate them—a nomenclator, a reading library, and these halls full into diase!' I ask him now through these pages, the questions which I did not put to him then as I listened in silence to his complaint. What time would he suggest they should spend in the reading-room, even if they have learned to read? They rise at four; at a quarter before six they are at work. The day in winter is not bare when they start their tasks; the night has fallen long before they cease; in summer they are working into their evenings. They tell me that they are too tired to eat; that all they want to do is to turn their aching bones upon their miserable mattresses and sleep until they are cried and shrieked awake by the mill summons."

The Mighty Mill.

"In my simple work garb," says Miss Van Vorst, "I leave Columbia and take a trolley to the mill district. I have chosen Excelsior [one of the five mills] as the best for my purpose. Its reputation is most at stake; its prospects dazzling; its annals effective. . . . This is the largest mill in the world and looks like a model, too, in view of architecture. I have read in the prospectus that it represents $1,750,000 capital; possesses 104,000 spindles; employs 1,200 hands, and can, with crowding, employ 3,000. Surely it will have places for one more, then!" Miss Van Vorst's first lesson is in "spooling." The enormous room is in the quietest part of the mill and is "light and well ventilated, although if temperature, on account of some quality in the yarn, is kept at a point of humidity far from whole-ome." She finds that "spooling" is hard on the left arm and side, and that heart disease is a frequent complaint amongst the oldest workers at it. But this is by no means the only disease. "The air of the room is white with cotton. These little particles are breathed in to the nose, drawn into the lungs. Lung disease, pneumonia and consumption are the never-abating scourge of the mill village. The girls expectorate to such an extent that the floor is filthy. The little girls practice spitting and are adept at it. . . . During the afternoon the gay Jeannie returns and presents to me a tin box. It is

Cardinal Richard, of Paris, is seriously ill.

English exchanges record the unlooked-for death of Very Rev. Canon Pyke, rector of the Church of the English Martyrs, Preston, at a private Hospital in London, where the Canon had been operated upon for calculus by an eminent specialist.

The "Lacrosse" Fatherland.

Father Robert Eaton, of the Oratorian community, left England recently for the United States, where he will collect funds for the erection of the Cardinal Newman Memorial Church at Birmingham. He carries with him a recommendation from Cardinal Vaughan. About £17,000 is still required, there being some £13,000 in hand, including a subscription of £5,000 from the Duke of Norfolk.

When the Pope received the Irish pilgrims he said:

"Well done, Father Ring; you have brought a great work to a splendid conclusion." On receiving the address of the Dublin Trades Union, the Holy Father said: "I bless through you the workingmen of Ireland," and to Protestants who were present he said: "You are Protestant! I bless you all the same for the good you have done."

His Eminence Cardinal Vaughan

has issued a circular to the superiors of convents calling upon them to offer up prayers for the safe passage of the education bill. "The education bill before Parliament," observes the Cardinal, "concerns so intimately our Catholic school and the freedom of Christianity in England that its passing into law without any substantial amendment injurious to religion is a matter of the very highest importance."

Some twenty years ago a canon of the Vatican Chapter, belonging to one of the most ancient families of Rome, suddenly abandoned the Catholic Church and became a Protestant minister, taking the position of officiating clergyman in a little evangelical chapel in Rome. It is now announced that the erring canon has been readmitted to the Catholic fold by Mgr. Lugari, Assessor of the Holy Office, who received his solemn abjuration. It is further stated that the convert will shortly enter the Society of Jesus.

From Rome comes the news that the Pontiff was much upset at the unexpected and dangerous illness of his private physician, Professor Lapponi. After having explained the nature of the operation explained to him he exclaimed: "One never knows how much affection one has for a person until there is danger of losing him. Fortunately my doctor is in the best of hands," referring to Professor Mazzoni, who operated upon the Pope some years ago. On the day of the operation the Pontiff held no receptions, appeared much agitated and was not his usual tranquil self until all was over and he had received a favorable communication. It was reported to him that Professor Lapponi had expressed the fear that his august patient might need him just when he was unable to go to him. "Tell him not to worry," Leo XIII. exclaimed. "I promise faithfully not to have an ache or pain until he is ready to attend to them; further than that I make no promises." And the Pontiff has rigidly kept his promise, although fatiguing himself somewhat more than usual. "That is my way of keeping well," he replies to remonstrances; "I have always said that I am in better health when I do a great deal, and now that the opportunity has come, I am proving myself right."

A curious trial under the Law

Associations came before the French courts the other day. The members of an association known as the "Nuns of Loigny" were prosecuted for having infringed the law by not dissolving nor applying for authorization. This "community" was formed some fifteen years ago by a woman who pretended to have visions and revelations. It has about twenty members and keeps an orphanage. The ecclesiastical authorities condemned the association, denounced the "royants" as a fraud and excommunicated the nuns. The twenty old maids who sat in the dock in the Correctional Appeal Court of Paris had been excommunicated no less than fourteen times. They pleaded that, although outwardly a religious community, they were not so in the ordinary sense of the word, that they had no vows and that members could leave when they pleased. They elected to live together because it suited them, and there was nothing in the law to prevent that. The Court postponed the decision for a week.

Most Rev. Dr. Fischer, the new Archbishop of Cologne, is sixty-two years of age.

He made his higher studies at the University of Bonn and was a religious teacher for twenty-six years at the gymnasium in Essen. Whilst occupying that position he gave lessons in Hebrew to a number of Protestant students who were studying for the ministry, and in later years it has been his lot to meet many of them as Protestant pastors and to hear from them words gratefully acknowledging his past kindness. Though his duties at Essen were by no means light, he always found time to write a Sunday article on a religious topic for the "Essener Volkszeitung." In 1886 he obtained the degree of D. D. at Tubingen. Two years later he was chosen to be head of the chapter at Cologne, and on the 14th of February, 1889, he was appointed Assistant Bishop of Cologne. For a great part of the time since then the burden of the great work of visitation and Confirmation for the archdiocese has fallen upon Dr. Fischer.

In the Cathedral at Georgetown, British Guiana, on October 19, Dr. Galton, S. J., was consecrated head of the vicariate, in succession to the late Bishop Butler. Archbishop Flood, of Port-au-Prince, officiated. Dr. Galton enters upon his episcopal duties at a somewhat critical time, the Legislature having determined that all State connection with the churches shall cease; every year witnesses a reduction in the amounts disbursed for ecclesiastical purposes from the public treasury. The Catholic Church receives for the current financial year a sum of about $13,000 out of a total annual expenditure on the churches approximately $103,800, and it is arranged that this allowance shall be gradually drawn until State payments will have wholly ceased. In common therefore, with the other religious bodies, the Catholic Church in the course of time will be thrown on its own resources and will have to make an effort to maintain itself in the colony. When the scheme of disestablishment and disendowment was introduced and adopted, the authorities of the Catholic body never raised a whimper of complaint or protest.

Itching Skin

Distress by day and night—That's the complaint of those who are so unfortunate as to be afflicted with Eczema or Salt Rheum—and outward applications do not cure. The source of the trouble is in the blood—make that pure and this itching, burning, itching skin disease will disappear. "I was taken with an itching on my arms which proved very disagreeable. I concluded it was salt rheum and bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two days after I began taking it I felt better and it was not long before I was cured. Have never had any skin disease since." Mrs. I. E. WARD, Cove Point, Md.

While the steamer Progress was lying at the wharf of the Fulton Iron Works at Harbor View, San Francisco, last Thursday morning a terrific explosion occurred and as a result eleven men are missing, a score more or less seriously injured and property valued at two million is destroyed.

W. K. REYNOLDS, for years a prominent journalist, St. John, N. B., and more recently of the Intercolonial service, died in the Montreal hospital last Wednesday morning, after an operation for internal troubles. He was one of the best writers in the New Brunswick press.—R. I. P.

COMMERCING yesterday, the morning train from Souris leaves there at 7 o'clock instead of 6, and the morning train leaves Georgetown at 6.45 instead of 6.30. No connection is made at Royalty Junction with the train for the west. It is likely a general change in the train arrangements will soon take place.

The Jacques Cartier was sold on Friday there she lay at Cape John. The hull, engine and boilers were disposed of for $250; the condenser for $50; the deck pump for $75. The boats etc., were sold, the whole totalling about $1200. Messrs Doherty of Pictou, and Lantalam of St. John, were the principal purchasers.

The following intelligence of disasters to island vessels was reported from Halifax, Friday last: The scho. Floresta, is a total wreck at Issa's Harbor. She was loaded on P. E. Island. The scho. Flora Mader, was driven ashore at Cape Ann, C. Iobeser C., and is a total wreck. She was loaded a week ago by Wright Bros., Victoria.

Dr. C. A. McPhail of Summerside died suddenly on Wednesday morning last. He retired about 11 o'clock on Tuesday night, and was found dead in his bed. He was 62 years of age, married, and leaves a widow and two children. He was a graduate of the medical college of Trinity University Toronto, and afterwards took a post graduate course at Edinburgh University.

The second of the Advent sermons was preached in St. Dunstan's Cathedral, on Sunday evening last, by Rev. Father Johnston. His text was from the 8th verse of the Galatians: "But though we, or an angel from heaven preach a Gospel to you, besides that which we have preached to you, let him be Anathema." The theme of the Rev. preacher's discourse was the proper manner of worshipping God. He pointed out that it was not enough to make a profession of faith in general and indefinite terms; we must worship God in a proper manner, in the manner He himself desires and His Church teaches. It is not enough to hear such expressions as "God is love" and "what difference does it make how we worship if it be to His glory?" These are false and mischievous expressions and directly contrary to what God himself has incited, and His Church teaches. The true and proper worship of God is in accordance with His revealed will, and the Christian is bound, as far as possible, to find out what these are, and to worship God accordingly. In this way only will they be carrying out the injunction of the Apostle, as expressed in the text, and prepare by a good life on earth, for everlasting joys hereafter.

An ugly runaway took place on our streets on Friday last. A horse hitched to a light wagon got away from where he was tied at the market square near the Apothecary Hall corner. He started across Queen St., and collided with a team standing in front of Dodd & Rogers hardware store. This wagon was turned completely over, a shaft broken and the horse was knocked down. Without stopping to survey the mischief he had done, the runaway turned in on the sidewalk on Queen Street, and dashed down towards Water Street at full speed. It had just begun to snow, and the sidewalk was covered with market people moving in different directions, and the wonder is that a number were not knocked down or injured. As it was one man was somewhat badly hurt, the horse in his headlong run had just crossed Dorchester Street, when Mr. J. Morcuffs, an aged gentleman of North River, was struck by the wheel of the wagon. He apparently did not see the horse coming, and the crowd shouted to him, and he tried to get out of the way; but he slipped and fell on the slippery sidewalk. His head seems to have struck the sidewalk in his fall, and the wheel struck him on the side and tore his clothes. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken into the office of J. A. Farquharson & Co, nearby. Dr. Conroy was summoned, and found among other things that the drum of one ear was broken. He recovered sufficiently to be driven to his home in North River. After turning down King street, and making a few more turns, and inflicting serious damage on the wagon the horse was caught.

THIRTEEN anarchists were arrested by the police near Spezia, Italy, on the 8th after a desperate struggle. When surrounded they were in the act of taking an oath with pignards to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel. One of the anarchists and one of the police were severely wounded.

NINE schooners went ashore in the vicinity of Sydney, C. B., during the storm on Friday night. The scho. Nellie Reid, with a cargo of coal for Charlottetown went ashore three miles west of River John, N. S. the same night. All these are high and likely to remain so. Crews saved.

TWENTY-THREE persons met death in a fire in Lincoln Hotel, Chicago, on the morning of the 3rd inst. They were mostly overcome by smoke before help could reach them. Some jumped from the fourth story windows. Others tried to save themselves by climbing the fire escapes, only to lose their grasp of the iron bars and fall to the streets.

LAST Friday afternoon an explosion of gunpowder took place at Piquid, West, in the House of Mr. David Birt, section foreman on the P. E. I. R., between Mount Stewart and Pictou. His eldest son, aged 17, was engaged in refilling cartridges, and on the window sill, about three feet away from where he was sitting was a package containing half a pound of gunpowder. His two sisters were close by watching him at work, and one was leaning over his shoulder. Suddenly there was a terrific explosion followed by the sound of breaking wood and crashing wood, and the room was filled with dense smoke. One of the cartridges contained a cap which had been struck by the needle of the gun, but had missed fire and it was thought that in removing this cap it had exploded, sending a spark to the gunpowder with the above result. The elder of the two girls 15 years received the discharge full in the face, the other 13 years on the side of the head from which the hair was burned away. Fortunately, the eyesight of both will be saved, although their faces are badly burned. The son escaped uninjured. The window before which the powder was lying was blown out, as was also a window five feet away. The kitchen door and the hall door were broken by the explosion.

The snow-storm which commenced on Friday continued up to last night, was one of the most severe experienced here for years. Saturday morning streets and sidewalks were blocked with snow, and travel in many parts of the country districts was impossible. The trains were all late on Saturday. Telegraph lines were out of action, and the telephone wires were down. The snow on the 13th was on the side of the head from which the hair was burned away. Fortunately, the eyesight of both will be saved, although their faces are badly burned. The son escaped uninjured. The window before which the powder was lying was blown out, as was also a window five feet away. The kitchen door and the hall door were broken by the explosion.

Tryon Tweeds are the best on the Island, and they are made from P. E. I. wool—no shoddy, but pure, genuine wool. We have purchased a big stock of All-wool Tweeds, every yard guaranteed. Reid's double and twisted tweed heavier, is better made than Reid's but better scoured, is better finished than Reid's imported into P. E. Island. That is why we buy and sell it. There is no better blanketing, druggot or yarn for the farmer made. In factory flannels we carry a stock of browns, grays and greens at 33 cents per yard. Wool is bringing a small price this year and so we are asking a small price for our goods. This quality of flannel generally brings 42cts. elsewhere. Our All Wool Druggot and Flannels for men's underwear we are selling at 35cts. Some people ask 45 cents for imported stuff that will not wear as well. Remember to encourage home industry every time when the price is lower and the goods better. CHAPTER XXVIII.—(Continued)

"See there," he rejoined, Windsor and Babington again! Depend upon it, this is their doing. Well, they shall hear of it some time or other. How and when was the escape discovered?" he inquired of the messenger.

all night, had not yet ceased, and the roads were in a terrible state. This did not tend to raise my spirits or those of my companion. We were wet through and covered with mud when we reached Harrow, and stopped before the house of Sir Richard Page, the mayor.

"What?" I exclaimed, "can that be possible? Bellamy is not more than ten or twelve years old. How can Miss Judith have eloped with him?"

I inquired whether it was Mr. Babington? "No," the girl replied, "the gentleman who married Miss Anne, but another, who had often come with him; rather a short gentleman with a high collar and brown hair."

"The rain which had been falling since the night of the escape, had now become a steady drizzle, and the roads were in a terrible state. This did not tend to raise my spirits or those of my companion."

"The rain which had been falling since the night of the escape, had now become a steady drizzle, and the roads were in a terrible state. This did not tend to raise my spirits or those of my companion."

C. testified to Miss Cecil's having been there. The only members of the family who were at home were the old granddame, very infirm and feeble, one of her granddaughters and one of her sons, a goodnatured fellow, but partly imbecile.

On the mayor inquiring as to the whereabouts of her son Remy and her two granddaughters, she replied with perfect composure, that their absence either was or was not connected with an event concerning which the authorities had a right to make investigation.

As soon as this was done, we proceeded to the house, Burghley, Page and myself, with a chosen band of pursuivants, and demanded admittance. The few old servants whom we found there were interrogated first. Not until the Lord Treasurer threatened them with the rack, would they admit that, while the storm was at its height, Master Frith, who had been for a time at Court, returned home, accompanied by a young lady.

We found no tidings awaiting us from Gravesend or any other of the ports. Walsingham told me, as the result of his inquiries, that neither Babington nor Tichbourne had left town, but nothing could be heard of Windsor. This confirmed my suspicions; they were strengthened still more by a letter that my uncle showed me the next morning.

"To my faithful and dearly beloved, greeting and brotherly love! These lines, written in haste from the Thames, are to convey to you the joyful tidings that I have placed my sweetheart in safety on board the vessel in question, for which thanks be to God. Give the worthy B. B. a gratuity, he has well earned it in truth! He will put me ashore on the Essex coast, whence I shall take horse to Chartley by way of Bedford, as I shall be safer there than in London. Salute Babington and the others from me. Now that I am assured as to the safety of my affianced bride, I shall have a better heart for the carrying out of our scheme."

"The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does. Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste."

Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion.

"A PLAYFUL MIRACLE."

BY SUSAN L. EMERY.

(Father Coleridge, in his "Life and Letters of St. Francis Xavier," speaks of the incident narrated below as "a playful miracle.")

O Father of the trusty pen, Teacher of holy history! Hear thine own story told again, But set to other key, And pardon, to the least of men, The tale I bring to thee.

With fury on the Southern seas A mighty tempest came, God's Saint within a tiny barque, His heart with faith aflame, Took from its place above that Leant The crucifix he wore, Bent down, and dipped it in the sea, And all was calm once more.

Next day they land, and walk the shore Miles from the scene of loss, When lo! there runneth from the sea A sea-crab with a cross, And holdeth it up reverently, Uplifted and upright, And runneth unto Xavier And stoppeth in his sight.

It humbly waits, till he Hath taken from his grasp the prize, Then runs back to the sea; And kissing those dread wounds once more, The Saint lies prostrate there, For miracle so strange as this Uplifting thankful prayer.

O Father of the trusty pen, For once withdraw thy word! What "playful" wonder meets us here In this dear work of God? If, for a moment, we may smile, The hot tears swiftly rise, For thou has touched upon a chord Of mighty mysteries.

One, greater than all saints, has walked Upon a stormy sea, Fishers of fish, and then of men, His great apostles be; For Christ and His, with mystic coin, Behold, a fish doeth come, Their Easter mystical repast Is fish and honeycomb.

Yes, lower yet the heart bows down Before this mystery, Christ Jesus, Saviour, King of kings, Write on the fish we see; And words St. Paul full darkly spake Are ringing in our ears; 'The creature groans, and yearns, and waits, In hope of better years.'

Sick Blood. Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion. We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does. Scott's Emulsion presents Cod Liver Oil at its best, fullest in strength, least in taste.

Scott's Emulsion. Young women in their "teens" are permanently cured of the peculiar disease of the blood which shows itself in paleness, weakness and nervousness, by regular treatment with Scott's Emulsion. It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

The Christmas Dinner. In spite of the fact that the word dyspepsia means literally bad cook, it will not be fair for many to lay the blame on the cook if they begin the Christmas Dinner with little appetite and end it with distress or nausea.

Minard's Liniment Cures LaGrippe. The book manufacturer who publishes the works of deceased authors evidently doesn't believe that dead men tell no tales.
