Surface Paving.

We are pleased to find that the lesson of the Water Street pavement is not likely to be lost to the city. Those best job of New Gower Street that can made with the means that may be our disposal. Mayor Ellis and at our disposal. Councillor Mullaly have consulted the best authorities available in the States and Canada on paving and have brought samples of hardwood, as-phalt, etc., in use in these places. The two great drawbacks to Water Street at the present time is the almost in-tolerable noise of the traffic, which makes it at times difficult for a person in an office fronting the street to hear over the telephone, and the mud and dirt which accumulates there. The latter is not due to the surface pave-ment but to the mud which either washes down the road at right angles to Water Street or is brought down by the traffic. It will be lessened th by the paving of Duckworth and New Gower Street and its cross connection with Water Street. The former is due to the use of hard stone sets for the surface pavement, and it is difficult to see how the noise can be avoided unless a different material is used. The Water Street job was an excellent one so far as durability is concerned, though of course it has of the street here and there for vari- Liverpool by the Pomeranian. This rorenoon Mr. Dunne, the drivof the heaviest auto truck in the ity, owned by the Colonial Cordage with at least three ordinary dray loads of cordage on board the big machine. Coming near the foot of it more or less lost control owing to he heavy weight it bore and crashed into the fence opposite Capt. Win-sor's house on New Gower Street. Two little boys, Jimmie Dillon, aged and Mike, his brother, aged 6. stood ear the gate and seing the big machine come ran inside the fence to save themselves. The fence went down like paper before the auto and fell on the two cowering little chaps inside it. Dunne's nerve and presence of mind saved the children. Had he run on he would have crushed both to death, but he held his steering gear and at no small risk to himsel ran the machine out into the traffic rowded street without injury to man or beast. One of the little chaps was out about the face. Had the auto gone when the fence went the children would have been crushed to a jelly

The schr. "Ellen F.", J. Fennell, master, arrived here last night, from Plate Cove. The Captain says that he left with 10 other vessels and that never before had he seen more ice-bergs, most of them very large. They extend right in the track of craft from Cape Bonavista to Cape Race and a bright lookout was kept on each vessel last night as it became very thick. If any craft should strike one of these another marine horror must result.

It will be remembered that the Telegram exclusively referred a few days ago the dead body of a male child having been found on Bell Island. The little corpse was enclosed in a brin bag with a string around its neck, as if it had been strangled at birth. Dr. Guthro viewed it and shours old when it died. It was found under a bank of snow. IX.—GENERAL DEMANDS.

The collective ownership of rail-oads, telegraphs, telephones, steam-hip lines and all other means of in the matter of telephone communiroads, telegraphs, telephones, steam-ship lines and all other means of social transportation and communi-cation and the extension of the public lomain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.

The present Pope has said that if principles of Christian Jus tice and Christian Charity had been observed and enforced on the relations between Capital and Labour abuses never could have arisen. Wha condemnation that is of our present day business life.

The former part of the above deis simply an enlargement of the State control that exists at the present time. That there would have een more satisfaction and better ser been more satisfaction and better service if the wireless were under State control was amply shown in the Titanic disaster. No one would think for a minute of giving the Postal Service to a private company to manage, and with State ownership of transportation facility a large sum in subsidies would be saved to the convictions. the would be saved to the service. made in the cost of local telegrams when our Government started their system is typical of the condition that ensues in an industry when separated from the 'rapacious man' of a dividend In railroading there are high-salaried officials

ould be done without under collective ownership as their chief efficiency consists in a shrewdness in 'getting over' their rivals, and it has been stated that if the railways of the nited States were managed as a unit instead of by competing com-panies, such management would effect economy of Two hundred million

And the evidence of many European countries which have the railways un-State control amply justifies the policy by lower rates, and more com-fort and consideration of passengers. The telegraph business is similar. The Western Union was capitalized at One hundred million dollars. It is estimated that the cost of laying the lines actually used was not more than twenty millions; eighty million dol-lars therefore, have been wasted by existing system, which encourages private companies to construct lines with the result of compelling other companies to buy them up. Pro-fessor Ely says that it cost England carly as much to make the telegraph part of the Post Office as it did all other countries of Europe put to-cation we in St. John's know, with-out reference to any outside example, that it is high time that the Govern-ment step in and install a system that will give better service and lower rates. That collective ownership of steamship lines, preventing waste in the many unnecessary luxuries which cumber the liner to-day in the competitive mill would prove to be the best policy is best shown by the Titalic disaster.

Under Government control there would have been no need of sacrificing safety for speed, there would have been no 'dividend seekers,' no hesitation to take all boats needed, and all this because there would be no rival line to get ahead of and because the people would have a 'say.'

That mines, quarries, oil wells, forests should belong to the people is to me a statement that cannot be refuted. That anyone accidentally stumbling on a mine should become by it rich and powerful in a just way means either a fatalistic explanation an acknowledgement of luck or chance. That he deserves it by the sweat of his brow is not true, nor can I conceive of any reason that he above all other men should 'corner' rich plot' of God's earth and by its possession and power become master of many men and their des-

Mr. and Mrs. Hickman, who had been on a trip to the United States, South America and Canada, arrived here by Thursday night's express. Mr. Hickman is the manager here of the Smith Co. Ltd., one of our largest exporters of codfish. Yesterday the Telegram had an interview with Mr. kman as to fish conditions gener-. Mr. Hickman remarked that he had gone down through South America to Brazil and being Consul here for the Republic of Panama, also paid a visit to that country. Mr. Hickman says that the Norgewians are sending their fish into South America, especially making a set on Southern Brazil Norway has a considerable portion of last season's catch still available and this is the fish she is now running to the market. This is gradually sup-planting the Newfoundland article and European rivals are underselling They have not yet sold their goods in Northern Brazil but they are after that market and have introduced small samples of their catch there and to gain a foothold are curing their cod exactly like we do and putting it up in packages exactly similar to ours. The large Norwegian catch, Mr Hickman thinks, would not affect the consumption in the United States, because the people there do not use that class of fish. Gloucester's catch the past spring is better than of the ket being poor and taking little fish now from the States, forces them to now from the States, forces them to sell to their own people at lower rates. The great Norwegian catch must be sold, must come into competition with our fish, and, Mr. Hickman thinks. that the prospects are not tayourable.

Of his visit to Panama, Mr. Hickman says, it was an experience which he can never forget. He went right to the workings of the Canal, and says that the unhealthy climate has been transformed, and the deadly malarial and yellow fever which had killed thous

Lady Macbeth BY H. L. RANN.

Lady Macbeth is the heroine of one of the most pleasing pieces of filagree fiction invented by Mr S h a k espeare, who dabbled in light literature with so much enthusiasm that nost of his language has had to be either ex-

This process has robbed shakespear's books of a good deal of their pristine vigor, but has made it possible to read him out loud in select company without causing anybody to reach for the Florida water. Lady Macbeth was a strong-minded female who had positive conictions on a great many subjects. One of these convictions was that it would be a kind act to remove a number of people who had planted them selves on the right of way leading to the throne of Scotland, and she nagged Macbeth until he finally slew the king with every semblance of cordiality. Banquo was the next in line and the Macbeth family had him killed one evening so that he wouldn't interrupt the coronation ceremonies Shakespeare, who was on familia terms with the Macbeths and tool long-hand notes of most of their con versation, tells us that Banquo, hav ing a previous engagement in anothe climate, sent his ghost to the banque to annoy Macbeth, who immediatel threw some light and airy persiflag in the direction of the ghost and fe into a profound fit. her hands under the kitchen pump and hearing her cry, "Out, damned spot," several times in succession in the key of six sharps. After his wife's death Macbeth got to consorting with a number of well-known witches, who were slightly nutty. These ladies made a scant but honest living by telling fortunes out of a soup bowl and advising people when to let go of U. S. steel common, and they informed Macbeth that he would not die unti something like forty acres of red oak timber, popularly known as Birman's wood, should rise up and fall on him Macbeth was much pleased to hear this, and before departing deposited a Canadian quarter in the soup which the witches were about to inhale Banquo had a son named Malcolm, very obstinate and ill-tempered per scn, who had no regard for human life and decided to slaughter Macbeth before the market declined. He there fore called out the militia, and arm ing them with the deadly scrub oal marched on Macheth to the tune of Chopin's funeral oration. Machet ran out to meet them in considerabl trepidation and an orange tunic, bu was stopped a short distance from th windmill by Malcolm's sword, which made quite a rent in his person be fore backing out. This is a sad tale and teaches us that in the midst of life we are in death.

Interesting Proceedings.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, May 17.

Lord Mersey, the Board of Assess

ors and an array of the most brilliant attorneys, with an audience of fash-ionably dressed women, spent the greater part of to-day probing the statement of Charles Hendricksen, the fireman, that Sir Cosmo and Lady Duff Gordon had proested against returning to the scene of the disaster to try and rescue some of those strug-gling in the water. After some predence should be taken, it was decided to let the members of the boat's crew tell their stories first, leaving the tesers, among whom was Henry Duke. M. P., one of the most highly paid lawyers in the country. Hendrickson, whose cross-examination had been postponed until to-day at the request of Sir Robert Finlay, counsel for the White Star -Line, stuck to his evidence, although he could not specify when he first made his statement as to the Duff Gordons. Attorney General Isaacs was able to prompt him from the depositions taken at the time of the arrival of the crew in England in which witness had said that the assengers protested against the boa going back. Duke's examination in dicated that the case for the Gordons will be an absolutely different story which they will support with the evi lence of members of the lifeboat's crew. Duke suggested that Lady Dut Gordon refused to go in the boat with-out her husband. After it was lowered she was so seasick that she was mable to protest. Hendricksen admitted she was lying on the seat, but said she was able to converse with her husband. Mr. Duke suggested that Hendricksen was the first to hin and produced a document in Hen dricksen's handwriting, giving the names of the crew, which he had anded to Sir Cosmo to enable him to make out the cheques for £5 each Sir Cosmo was called to the stand his afternoon and gave an absolute lenial to the stories that either he or als wife had protested against the ifeboat returning to the rescue; or hat the question of going back wa even mentioned. He repeated story that he and his wife left the anic as they had been told to. Or conclusion of the direct examination Sir Cosmo Duff Gordon, the Cour Inquiry adjourned until Monda;

The Brooding of Chicken.

A MATTER OF IMPORTANCE.

The Question of Feeding and the Danger of Overdoing It-A Good Place to Keep Hen and Young Ones.

Many men successful in the incubating of chicks meet their Waterloo in the brooding of same. The brooding liminary sparring between bench and counsel as to the order in which evidie the chicks will, in many cases without apparent cause. In one case coming under my notice the attendant timony of the Gordons, who were in court, till later. They sat near the witness stand with their legal advisgreat. The brooding problem is one, however, which every man must try his hand at if he has attempted the other problem of incubation. It will not do either to wait as the lady did to see what luck she had with the hatch before buying the brooder or planning the subsequent work. Everything must be in readiness for the reception of the young brood.

As with incubation the natural and artificial brooding are employed and both found satisfactory under special conditions. The small grower of chickens, in fact most farmers, should rely on the hen for his brooding. It is surprising what a hen knows and what she will accomplish for you if given a fair chance, and sometimes that chance is not what man would call fair. We have not forgotten the number or quality of the offspring in such cases when the hen stole her nest as well as her feed, and picked up whatever came to hand for her off-

As soon as the chicks are out of the shell many feel like getting them out of the nest and feeding at once. A greater mistake could not be made. With careless feeders chicks often live longer without food than they do with it. Let them remain in the nest for orty-eight hours without food. Just as the little chick is hatching the remains of the yoke are withdrawn bodily into the body cavity. The food contained in this absorbed yolk-sac provides the chick's existence until it s able to obtain food by its own efforts. If the hen becomes restless she may be taken off for a few minutes and allowed to pick up a little white corn. With this and a little water she will be perfectly content. The hen should be dusted with insect powder and the chicks carefully examined for lice. Oil, in very small quantities, will be found effective in the head and under the wings. Freedom for the chicks if judiciously given is the best tonic; but if the mother is allowed to roam through wet grass difficulty is sure to overtake you. The lungs of the young bird are situated tected by a thin membranous lining he mother through wet grass. out floor, is an ideal place for the tail here, however, for with the best prooder. A liberal coating of coarse and and perhaps a very little hay in the coop will keep things snug and warm. These coops may be made to ook attractive if a pitched roof is used and the sides covered with ordinary tarred paper. They are cheap, too, and may be used year after year The temperature problem need not worry you under natural brooding conditions if the coop is dry and fairly wind-proof. The hen is ready at all times to do her part. Many formulae have been given for the correct feeding of young chicks. There is no best way, yet bad feeding s responsible for many failures. The impression prevails throughout many sections that corn meal hash is the best chicken food. I have seen chickens literally "stuffed' with this as soon as they came out of the shell. Sometimes they lived in spite of this treatment, yet the feeder could have done much better. Mash of any kind is likely to sour and consequent intestinal trouble sure to ensue. Cracked corn, cracked wheat, dry oatmeal and millet are good; but even with these foodstuffs it is better to keep the chickens hungry and keep them working for what they get. If insects are not plentiful a little meat may be necessary, but not as a rule if chickens are allowed to run. Hard boiled eggs chopped fine are excellent. Don't forget the water supply. It should be pure and abundant. If no meat, eggs or insects are available, skimmed milk will give good results. When chicks are a fortnight old they may be fed soft mashes with safety. Feed in small quantities and see to it that no food is left after they have finished the meal. Even when artificial incubators are used, hens may be forced to do the brooding. Usually some are brood; about the time the hatch is coming off. They are quite willing to accept fifteen or twenty chicks at the end of few days of broody conditions, and make satisfactory mothers. The only difficulty is that you are never sure that the hens will be broody in sufficient numbers at the right time to accomplodate the entire hatch. This

The simplest kind of artificial brooder is a box kept warm by means ridding the birds of lice if placed on of a lamp. There may be many devices to keep the temperature even, to ventilate the box and to make cleaning easy, but the principle is the been found satisfactory in the main. If large plants, where chicks are to along the spinal column and are pro- be raised on a large scale the brooder house heated by hot water pipes is nd a thinner coating of feathers. In this case onis for this reason that chicks are so ly one building is required and all often chilled when obliged to follow the work to be done in caring for the chicks may be done in one place. A coop, with a tight roof and with- Great attention must be given to de-

The mortality is lower, the chicks are stronger and stand a better chance of picking up more of their living .- E. M. Straight, MacDonald College.
