GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT

A Millionaire; Countess Westerleigh.

CHAPTER V. (Concluded.)

"Take it all," she said. "No," he said; "only the shilling. I'm not so poor as all that. And see here; I don't think I shall need to spend the shilling even, anyhow, I mean to keep it until the last—until I've spent every other coin I've got. Yes; I intend to take care of this, Miss Nora. It shall be a little souvenir."

"What's that?" she asked. "Oh! a keepsake, a reminder. Whenever I look at it, I shall remember the Witches' Calderon and Miss Nora Trevelyan, who wanted to give me all her money."

"You will not forget me?" she said in a low voice. "Are you sure? When you get to London, into all the crowds of people and among the rows and rows of houses, you will not be able to remember me and the cottage?"

"Oh, yes, I shall!" he said. "See here."

He took out his sportsman's knife with its innumerable blades, and opening the thick awl used for piercing leather, began to bore a hole in the shilling.

"What are you doing?" she asked, bending down, and so closely to him that he could feel her breath on his cheek and a tress of her hair against his temple.

He looked up with his short laugh. "I am going to make a hole in it and thread it on my watch-chain."

Her red, soft lips made a gesture of rejection.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me."

would not. Don't wear it there. Wait!"

She put her hand in her pocket and drew out a narrow red ribbon. "Thread it on this," she said, with the serious innocence and earnestness of a young child. "I keep it to tie up my hair when the wind blows too hard."

"Then you'll want it," said Vane. "No, no," she insisted; "I can tie it up with string. It does not matter."

"All right," said Vane, marveling at her innocence and ignorance of even the meaning of coquetry.

While he was putting the awl through the coin, she still bent over, watching him. A dreamy look came into her eyes, her whole expression softened, and unconsciously she began to sing under her breath, just as a bird sings, from sheer happiness and delight in her life.

Vane listened in silence. He and she, the boat, the blue autumn sky, the waves, made an idyl, if they had only known it; but Vane did not know even the meaning of the word "idyl," and she—ah, well, she did not know why she felt happier than ever she had felt in her life before; why something seemed to make music in her heart; why everything—the sea, the sky, the gulls that skimmed above them—had suddenly become so right and beautiful.

Vane looked up at last and met her eyes dwelling on him with a soft dreaminess; they lowered themselves but not with shame.

"There," he said, holding up the addled shilling. "Done at last." "Give it to me," she said; and she caught it from his fingers. In doing so the coin fell.

small gift in the purest innocence, and so he would accept it. "Let this be said for Vane Tempest: that in this, the first act of Nora's life's tragedy, he meant no evil."

"What was that you were singing just now, Miss Nora?" he asked, presently.

He had dropped back again full length in the boat, with his folded arms pillowing his head, his handsome face turned up to the sky.

"Was I singing? I didn't know. What was it—Three Fishers Went Sailing?"

She hummed it, sung it, rather in a sweet, low tone, every word as distinct and clear as a bird's note.

"Oh, that's first-rate," said Vane, approvingly; "that's what I call a pretty song—rather mournful, though, suppose, the poor fellows did get rowned."

"In winter I have stood on the beach and seen them washed in," she said, dreamily.

"It must be rough here in winter," he said.

She nodded gravely. "I should like to see it," he said, meditatively. "I might run down—"

He pulled up. "Oh, I forgot, promised your aunt that I wouldn't come back, or as good as that."

"No," she murmured, almost indubitably. "You will not come back, I know."

As she spoke, the happy light left her face, her eyes clouded, her lips quivered. Vane saw nothing.

asked Vane, paying due attention to the sail.

"I can't tell you," she said. "I must not. Don't ask. You are not to know. Haul the sail sheet tighter. That's better. We are getting the breeze. Oh, if it would only blow—blow like a hurricane!"

Vane stared at her. The dreamy, pensive maid had become transformed into a wild Norse king's daughter. There was a "bottle" written large in the glorious eyes and on the suddenly paled cheek and tightened lips.

"Do you think we shall do it?" he asked, as the boat sped on shoreward.

"We must," she answered. "It is my fault. She told me to watch, and I forgot all about it—I forgot everything!"

The delicate lines came into her forehead, and she swept her hair back with her hand with the impatient, half-fierce gesture he had noticed once or twice before.

"I fancy the wind is getting up," he said; after another pause, during which he had been watching the other boat and saw that she was making for the same point as themselves.

"Man loves a chase of any kind. Vane's heart began to warm up to the work in hand.

"It will be a close race, Miss Nora," he said.

"If it would only blow," she muttered. "They don't know the channel; they can't land. They will be drowned!"

She set her teeth hard. "They appear to be no friends of ours," he said, with a smile. She shook her head.

"Can't you give her more sail?" Vane shook his head.

"Not another inch," he replied. She looked up at the sky.

"There is wind coming," she said. "But it will be too late."

"I don't know that," said Vane, and a few minutes afterwards the breeze did stiffen.

She uttered a faint cry of delight as the boat flew through the waves, her gunwale almost touching the foam.

"Let me take the helm," he said. She waved her hand in the negative.

"No, no! We are gaining. Do you see? Look!"

GOOD ADVICE.

It is necessary to always have a bottle of good Brandy at hand.

What Brandy will you buy?

The Medicinal Brandy "Sanator" is not a properly so-called medicine, but it has been selected from amongst the best known growths for their effective principles, and it is distilled so as to develop its tonic and digestive qualities. It is really the FAMOUS BRANDY, which name the public has, for a long time, bestowed on it.

The celebrated French physician, DR. PHARZELLE, Inspector-in-chief of the Great Medical Services, says: "The medicinal Brandy 'Sanator' is eminently an easy digestive drink, remarkable for its tonifying and reinvigorating properties."

Ask for Medicinal Brandy Sanator from your liquor dealer; he has it.

DIRECTIONS.

Against weakness and bad digestion: a liquor glass at each meal.

Against Cold, Influenza: take as a hot drink, viz: one ounce and a half of Brandy, one ounce of hot water, with a little sugar.

Against summer complaints: use with chopped ice, or cold water.

The Old Order Changeth.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Did you ever stop to think how much your tastes, your standards, your ambitions, in short, the whole you, is a product of the times in which you live and the tastes, standards and ambitions of that age?

If you or I had lived two hundred years ago, not only our clothes and our manners, but also our point of view, and even our temperament and disposition would undoubtedly have been totally different from what they are to-day.

A friend of mine has been reading a novel of the seventeenth century. The heroine of the novel, although apparently a woman of intelligence and character, tamely submitted all her life to being dominated, first by her father, then by her husband.

My friend is most indignant at the heroine's subservience. She can scarcely believe such a woman with an atom of spirit would endure such treatment," she declared. "I'm sure I never would have stood being treated like a child all my life, even if I had been born in the seventeenth century instead of the nineteenth."

I think my friend is mistaken. If she had been born in the seventeenth century she would have felt very differently. Part of the spirit of independence, part of the sense of equality which make her indignant at the top-submissive heroine is this woman's naturally independent character, but still more of it is an expression of the spirit of the nineteenth century.

Again, the man of to-day who is so fond of outdoor sports that he thinks that fondness is an inseparable part of his make-up would be astonished to be told that if he had been born a hundred years ago he would not have insisted on spending every leisure moment outdoors. And yet it is most unlikely that he would have.

For myself, I am passionately fond of old furniture. I like to think that I love it simply because I recognize its beauty of line and coloring, but I am afraid a large part of my admiration is merely an expression of the twentieth century craze for old furniture. Had I been born seventy-five years earlier, I should probably have been putting my grandmother's mahogany highboy in the garret to make way for some black walnut moon-astrology with a funeral marble top.

Appreciation of the beauty of nature is such a commonplace to-day, both in literature and life, that it is hard to imagine a time when only artists paid much attention to sunsets, and the man who traveled a hundred miles to enjoy an ocean view would have been thought decidedly queer. And yet that time is not so long past. And if you or I who are so keenly alive to every beautiful thing in Nature had lived before Wordsworth's time, he might have written of us also—

"A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."
It is difficult to believe, isn't it? But I am much afraid it is true.

Ruth Cameron

Fashions and Fads.

Plaids are in high favor. Lace is again high in favor. Shirts are no longer unduly tight. New suits are bound with braid and gamsished with buttons.

Vivid green is the color of the moment. Plush and davyria are the favored fabrics for fall suits.

Betroleum blue, old gold and brown are new millinery colors.

Buttons, buttons everywhere is the cry of the new fall suits.

A typical fall style is the sugar-scoop hat of black velvet.

Costumes for formal occasions have trains extremely slender.

The suspender dress is noticed among the fall gowns.

The very newest fashionable figure has a normal waistline.

The new felt hats for morning wear are white, cherry and emerald.

The comfortable tricort corset has taken the place of the stiff corsets.

At the present moment, the high stiff dress collar is out of fashion.

Parisians are wearing veats of broad-cord silk, velvet or satin.

White satin suits are worn with light suits in the morning.

A number of new suits for fall have Russian coats.

The latest French blouse is made of flesh colored tulle combined with dark blue velvet.

Many new suits have the long-fitted sleeve, and some have the diamond sleeve with the dropped armhole.

The chiffon will be noticeable on hats for afternoon and evening wear.

Have a sash in your wardrobe. It can be incorporated with the gown or separate.

Two coats are individualized by beauty of form, material and coloring, the oriental type predominating.

Separate blouses are made in surplice of rich styles and are trimmed with frills, ruffles or flutings.

Skirts will be very tight at the bottom and draped from the hips downward.

Pearls can be worn at any time of the day or night with perfect propriety.

The fur used for dress trimmings will be dyed in colors, purple being the most popular.

Afternoon dresses will be trimmed chiefly in the back instead of the front.

Fashion approves of the fichu, and it has returned with added popularity.

The smartly dressed woman will never wear too many jewels in a public place.

Very pretty is a black velvet hat with a brim of chantilly lace and a wired bow at the back of the same lace.

A forador sash of striped or bright silk is wound around the waist and tied over one hip in a knot with short ends hanging at one side.

Judge and Bride Slain by Divorced Wife

Millen, Ga., Aug. 19.—Judge W. E. Godbee and his wife, Mrs. Florence Godbee, were shot to death in front of the Millen post office yesterday morning by Mrs. Edna Godbee, who had been divorced from Judge Godbee several years.

Without a word, either of recognition or warning, the slayer put her hand into a bag as she met the couple and drew out a small revolver. She first fired upon Judge Godbee, one shot striking him in the head, another in the back and a third in the arm.

Almost before Judge Godbee's body struck the pavement the weapon was turned upon the screaming wife and she was shot three times. She fell upon her husband's body. Judge Godbee was dead when spectators arrived. Mrs. Godbee died a short time later. She formerly was Miss Florence Beyer, of Youngstown (Pa.), and had been married to Judge Godbee less than a year.

Mrs. Edna Godbee, after firing the six shots, placed the revolver in her handbag and calmly walked to her home, two blocks from the post office. She was arrested there and taken to the county jail to be held without bail for the grand jury on a charge of murder.

The tragedy occurred so unexpectedly and so quickly that those who witnessed it scarcely could credit their senses. The effect was so stunning that neither civilian nor official raised a hand to restrain the slayer as she walked away, showing no sign of emotion and holding her head high as if she were proud of the deed.

She declined to say that her motive was jealousy. Although the divorce, it is said, was granted at her request, she did not cease to love Judge Godbee, and was greatly distressed by his marriage to another woman. Mrs. Edna Godbee was Judge Godbee's second wife.

How to Drink Tea.

British drinks more tea than any country, but Japanese visitors to London, who are arriving in larger numbers than ever, are sadly disappointed with what they call "the insipid beverage" that is made here.

Mr. K. Kishi, chanceller of the Japanese Embassy in London, explained yesterday why his countrymen find English tea less palatable.

"In Japan we take more pains to obtain the most delicate flavour possible. In brewing the finest green tea (the gyokuro) we boil the water, but we do not pour it on the leaves until it is almost lukewarm. We never drink this tea hot.

"We let it infuse for two or three minutes in an open bowl. We pour the beverage into small cups and drink slowly, so that we taste to the full the exquisite flavour. That is impossible if you take large gulps with your food.

AGREED WITH BABY.

This Mother Found The Right Food For Her Baby Child.

Mrs. Arthur Bruce of Meaford, Ont., writes, on Sept. 12th, 1911: "Some time ago, you were good enough to send me a sample of Neave's Food. Baby liked it so well and it agreed with her, so I am buying it right along and this is excellent."

"I have a friend with a very delicate baby. She cannot nurse and has tried six different foods, but does not prosper at all—always sick and troubled with indigestion. I strongly recommended your food. Will you please send her a sample?"

Mrs. Bruce wrote again on Sept. 27th, 1912: "My friend's baby has grown wonderfully. I can scarcely credit it. Her next baby, which she expects in five months, will be fed on Neave's Food right from the start—she thinks it is so good."

Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book "Hints About Baby" by writing Edwin Uley, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, who is the Agent for Canada. Neave's Food is sold in 1 lb. airtight tins by all Druggists in Canada.

are taken, and in many houses the tea is kept in firelight canteens with double covers, sometimes for more than a year. Deleterious moisture then never gets into it. On the inferior qualities of tea (baucha), made from the older leaves, we pour hot water, and drink it hot in larger quantities, as you do in England.

"The black tea the English drink is often taken in Japan, by way of a change, but always with sugar and milk. I don't understand how people can drink it without."

Fleets of All Nations May Meet in Hampton Roads.

Newport, R. I., August 21.—An invitation to all the navies of the world to meet at Hampton Roads, in January 1915, and pass through the Panama Canal to the Panama Exposition at San Francisco accompanied by a fleet from the United States Navy, will shortly be issued, by President Wilson.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels, who has been inspecting the training station here, made this announcement tonight.

The invitation will be in the form of a proclamation.

October 25, 1913, has been set as the date on which the Atlantic Fleet of the United States Navy will start on its Mediterranean tour. Plans for the trip were made to-day at a conference between Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger, aboard the flagship Wyoming.

The fleet will return on December 21, so that the sailors may spend Christmas holidays at home. The ports at which it will call will be tentatively decided upon by Admiral Badger and submitted to the Navy Department.

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Attleboro, writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I need to think that death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed."

"Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

A Noble Example.

Sir Robert Bond Once Again Sacrifices Personal Consideration to Public Duty.

In another column of this paper will be found a letter from Sir Robert Bond which will be read with delight by thousands of his countrymen, for it completely sets at rest all doubt in respect to his leadership of the Opposition to the present Government.

"I have reviewed," says Sir Robert, "a number of considerations, both public and private. The result is I have decided to respond to what appears to be a pretty general desire, AND TO LEAD the Opposition at General Election in November. This decision is dictated to me BY MY PERSONAL VIEWS AS TO PUBLIC DUTY."

A noble reply to a public demand. A noble example to the public. It has been remarked by a British statesman that "the greatness of an individual, like the greatness of a nation, is shown not in the moment of prosperity but in moments of adversity." That is precisely how Sir Robert Bond's character has been brought before the public.

His greatness was shown in 1885 when as Speaker he steered the Legislature through the greatest political crisis in its history.

His greatness was shown in 1895 when the Bank Crash brought financial ruin to hundreds of our citizens, paralyzed the trade and commerce of the country and almost deprived the Colony of its autonomy.

His greatness was shown in 1898 when the Tory party aided by renegades from the Liberal ranks passed the "Notorious Railway Deal," giving the Reids practical control of the whole Colony. When its railways, dock, telegraph lines and public and private lands were handed over to them, Sir Robert raised the revolt against the iniquity, with the aid of an outraged people annihilated the Tory party at the polls, and wrested from the Reids the fee simple of the railways, the telegraphs and the land that the Tories had bartered away to them.

His greatness was shown in 1904, when after years of strenuous effort the French Shore Question was settled, and Governor Sir Cavendish Boyle, in a published despatch, bearing date April 20th, 1904, said to Sir Robert:—

"I congratulate you, your colleagues and the whole community on the splendid results which have been obtained, and I wish to repeat what I said to you last evening that your every action throughout the negotiations has been in defence of the Colony's interest, and to secure to all here the fullest protection as regards existing rights, and the greatest advantage under any new conditions."

"I shall be glad indeed when you can make the whole correspondence public, and so put a stop to the clamour which has been raised, and which is calculated to do much mischief unless the alarm is speedily allayed."

"This I think you can now do, and I feel assured that the statements which you will make, and the action which you will take in the matter, will convince the people of the advantages which have been granted for them one and all, and of the whole-hearted and patriotic policy which you have consistently pursued."

His greatness was shown in 1907, when in connection with the long standing American claims on the West Coast, the British Government partly suspended the constitution of the Colony, exempting American fishermen from the operation of her laws. Sir Robert fought the case single-handed before the Colonial Conference in London, won the sympathetic support of the British press by his eloquent public utterances and succeeded in forcing the question to The Hague for final settlement.

His greatness is shown to-day when at the call of his countrymen he flings aside every personal consideration of health, comfort, leisure and enjoyment to save our country from ruin, by ending the reign of the present Government, and by restoring the good name of the country and re-establishing its credit. More than twelve months ago the fishermen throughout the island by petitions to the House of Assembly prayed for an early opportunity to express their opinion at the polls. They entrusted their petitions to Sir Robert Bond for presentation to the House. He carried out their request, and in doing so said: "It was very evident from the number of the petitions and the numerous signatures attached thereto, that there is at present a widespread feeling and alarm in the country, as regards public expenditure, and every one of them supports the position that I have taken in this House in reference to public expenditure since the opening of the Session."

The fishermen's petitions and Sir Robert Bond's remarks in support of them were treated with insult and contempt by Sir Edward Morris and his servile supporters. The people asked that a general election be held last fall, so that the public might express at the polls their will as to the expenditure of the public revenues. The Premier's reply in substance was: I will not hold a general election this fall or next spring. I don't care what the public desire. In defiance of the law I will hold an office until November 1913, and I will then come back and do as I please.

The people have been stirred to action by this insolence as they never were before, and have appealed to Sir Robert Bond to afford them an opportunity to redeem the past.

To-day Sir Robert replies to that appeal, not in words reminding them of his warning, and taunting them with the error they committed in 1909 in the face of those warnings, but in the gracious language of patriotic affection—"I have considered your appeal. I realize the conditions that have alarmed you. I will do my duty to you."

Now then, fellow citizens, prepare to do your duty in November next!

A Letter From

The Right Honourable

SIR ROBERT BOND,

P.C., K.C.M.G.

HIS RESPONSE TO THE CALL OF DUTY.

(Editor Evening Telegram.)

SIR,—

The time has, I think, arrived when I ought to set at rest all doubt as to whether I shall claim exemption from the duties I have hitherto discharged in connection with the public life of Newfoundland, or again place my services at the disposal of the Liberal Party. As you recently intimated in your newspaper my resignation of the leadership of that party has been in the possession of its Executive for more than three years. I would add to this information that my friends throughout the country were long ago apprised of the same, and that after thirty odd years of laborious public life I considered myself entitled to retire from its exactions on the present opportunity. But I have found it impossible to obtain their acquiescence, and I have been honoured by their request that I should reconsider my resignation of the leadership of the Liberal Party, and once more enter the political arena.

Before determining whether I should again offer to assume a charge of grave responsibility, and one rendered especially onerous by reason of the financial obligations and difficulties that face the country, I have reviewed, with great care, a number of considerations, both public and private. The result is I have decided to respond to what appears to be a pretty general desire, and to lead a United Opposition to the polls at the General Election in November. This decision is dictated to me by my personal views as to public duty.

I am, Sir,
Faithfully yours,
R. BOND.

MESSINA, August 29.
Seismic instruments here have recorded during the past twenty-four hours continuous earth disturbances. Considerable alarm has been caused owing to the sharp shocks recently felt. A strong hurricane has been blowing which has caused the virtual destruction of a number of huts in the American quarter. The populace fears that these conditions foretell fresh disaster.

LONDON, August 29.
A suffragette plot to kidnap Mr. Lloyd George, which has just failed, has been revealed. The Daily Sketch says that for $2,500 three desperadoes were to cause a collision with the Chancellor's automobile, while he was near Walton-on-Hill. They were then to seize him and carry him off in a fast automobile to a secret place provided by the wild women. A male suffragist revealed the dirty plot.

NEW YORK, August 29.
"I am sure the devil is having a carnival in hell, with the styles worn by women in the streets of New York city to-day," declared the Rev. Dr. Broughton, pastor of Christ Church, Westminster, London, last night in a sermon. "Certainly if I were the devil, I would not enjoy anything so much as a walk up Broadway or Fifth Avenue, looking at the slit skirts and other new styles of women's dress." Dr. Broughton's theme was, "Shall we know our loved ones in Heaven?" His surmise was that those who wear slit skirts will not be recognized in heaven, because they won't get there.

Lawn Tennis.

Lawn tennis is a spraddling variety of leg action which people take as a substitute for working in the garden. It is played on an oblong piece of ground called a court, which is covered with green grass, white chalk lines and wildly waving arms and legs.

Tennis is an English game and was imported here in order to stimulate the sale of the red and white seersucker and the duck pant. It attained immediate popularity, for it enabled a great many people who couldn't tell a tennis racket from a falloon to hang around the clubs in a pair of white flannel trousers and kill more time than an indispensed section hand. Tennis is the only game thus discovered in which love is counted as nothing. The more love a tennis player gets into his system the worse he feels. This is hard to understand, in these days of promiscuous park spooning, but it is a solemn fact. The tennis devotee gets as far away from love as he can, and tries to hang all that commodity possible around the neck of his adversary. We don't know of any other pursuit in which love is so unpopular, unless it is in the divorce game.

In playing tennis the object is to drive a small rubber ball across the net and cause it to land where nobody is present. In the process of service the player rears up on his tiptoes, twists one side of his face entirely out of plumb with the other and spansks the ball with something that looks like a carpet beater. This causes the ball to strike the ground on the other side of the net and then roll on its stomach into some tall grass, where it has to be hunted down with a scythe.

Physicians recommend lawn tennis to people who are long on leisure time and short on biceps. It is said that it brings more muscles of the human body into play at the same time than any other form of exercise except being run over by a motorcycle. After a man has played tennis for a few weeks he will become as supple as a garden hose and can stand anything but work.

Visited Schools.

Yesterday forenoon, a number of ladies and gentlemen, including some nuns and a priest who are round trippers by the Florizel, from New York, visited St. Patrick's Hall Schools and were received by Rev. Superior Ryan and the kindly Brother Kennedy. They inspected the classrooms, were delighted with them and the boys were put through various exercises. The visitors were especially pleased with the singing of the boys of the cathedral choir who are being trained by Prof. Hutton, and sang unprepared but none the less very sweetly. Had their capable leader been present no doubt their work would have been more effective. So pleased were the visitors that they asked Superior Ryan for a holiday for the boys and this was readily granted them.

Eighteen Thousand Fishermen and Thousands of Other Allies Will Follow Bond and Coaker to Victory.—Let Every True-Hearted Elector Do His Duty to his Leaders in the Fight.

As announced on this page, Sir Robert Bond has signified his intention of leading the United Opposition forces in the election campaign this fall. He has taken this step in response to the appeal of tens of thousands of our electors who look upon him as the only Newfoundland statesman capable of coping with the financial and administrative difficulties created by the extravagance and mismanagement of the Grab-alls.

Herculean Task.

Recognizing the Herculean task to be undertaken by the successors of the Morris mismanagers, it is not surprising that Sir Robert was not over-enthusiastic about getting into harness again. Full consideration of the situation, however, has shown him that his duty lies in leading the fight against the Grab-alls this fall; the appeals of thousands of his fellow countrymen afford ample proof that he has the trust and confidence of all voters who are independent of Grab-all graft.

The Grab-alls have been making some vain guesses as to the progress of negotiations and the basis on which union was proposed between the Fishermen's Party and the Liberal Party. But their guesses have been of the wildest nature and have been widely remote from the facts of the case. This applies especially to statements made in the Grab-all papers regarding the number of candidates and representation in the Executive—allocated to the Fishermen's Union.

The best interests of the Union have been considered by the President; virtually every practical principle of Unionism has been adhered to; no essential plank of our Bona-vista platform has been thrown overboard. All this our Councils will learn from the official circular of announcement which will be sent out by the President.

As far as the Grab-alls are concerned, they will find it much more profitable to get busy campaigning. It will tax all the Government resources at their command to make even a half-decent showing in November next. We will attend to our own political business and with such a leader as Sir Robert Bond our forces united to those of the Liberal Party have certain success in view.

Well Organized Opposition.

Never before in all the history of Newfoundland politics, has such a strong, united, well-organized opposition party offered battle to the entrenched hosts of graft and greed. Led by the Union, eighteen thousand voters will act as one man at the polls, voting emphatically against greed of gain and lust of office. Included in this number are thousands of voters who cast their ballots for Morris at last election, but who are now eagerly waiting the opportunity to oust him from office. His record appalls them; his bluffing incompetence has aroused their disgust; his unstinted extravagance has aroused their apprehensions for the solvency and independence of their country; his anxiety to shower financial and other benefits on heebers has shown them that his interests are with favorites not with fishermen. So in their tens of thousands Union and non-Union voters are shouting Morris must go! And under Sir Robert Bond, the statesman, the leader, they are lined up for a campaign that cannot be other than successful; for a fight that will oust the Grab-alls from power and leave Morris with a very scanty following in the Assembly.

Next week we hope to announce the names of the Opposition candidates in the various districts.—Fishermen's Advocate to-day.

At the City Hall.

The weekly session of the Council was held yesterday afternoon. The Council's letter concerning the dredge, will be laid before the Executive Council, according to Colonial Secretary Watson.

An application from W. Kelly, for Sanitary Inspector, was filed.

Mr. John Beer, through lawyer Gibbs, gave notice, that the direct cause of the death of his son, according to a certificate from Dr. O'Connell, was a fall received at the Sanitary stables while ascending a ladder for the purpose of getting hay for horses. On motion of Councillors Myrick and Mullaly, it was ordered that an investigation be held on Monday evening.

Permission was granted W. P. England and K. Bussey to repair houses.

H. W. Windsor asked to repair his house on Water Street. Referred to Engineer.

Mr. Smith, the park policeman, asked for more salary. Owing to the advance of the season he can't get an increase this year.

Councillors Ryan and Myrick moved that the water pipes be carried along Merrymeeting Road as far as Parade Street, connection to be made there.

B. and W. Sparkes, who are building new houses had their plans approved.

At next meeting Engineer Ryan will submit estimate of cost of wall on South Side.

Councillor Ryan asked that Monkstown Road be repaired. Certain repairs wanted on Water Street will be considered by the Water Committee.

Engineer Ryan will report on the sewerage on Allendale Road.

Mayor Ellis telegraphed that he had hoped to get back in time for the meeting, but he had to visit Petites Quarry and had other business matters to attend to and this delayed him.

Hr. Grace Notes.

The ladies of Harbour Grace had a very successful meeting at the Public Building, Banner Street, last night in connection with the promised hospital for this District. Resolutions were passed and ordered to be sent to the Premier, disapproving of the present Custom House as an hospital. We will forward a copy of these for Monday's Telegram. The election of officers for the coming year also took place.

Mr. Munden Taylor, of Bristol Hope, after an absence of 35 years from home, spent a few days with his friends this week. Mr. Taylor has spent the past 30 years in Montreal, where he has been very successful in business. His friends were pleased to see him. He left by Tuesday's train en route to his home in Canada.

The shrill whistle of the Archibald Boot and Shoe Factory at 7 o'clock this morning announced the pleasing news that business would soon be rushing there again, after a "shut down" for some time. Quite a large number of hands has been employed in this factory for years, and the sound of the whistle this morning was a very welcome reminder to all. We take this opportunity of wishing the firm a full measure of success for the future.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Cathedral, on Tuesday morning when Mr. Daniel Keefe, son of Mr. A. Keefe, led to the altar Miss Bridget Doyle, daughter of Mr. Patrick Doyle of Garland Street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Walker, in the presence of a large number of friends of the young couple. We tender our congratulations and best wishes for a very long, voyage and plain sailing along the sea of matrimony.

Mrs. Archibald Gordon arrived by yesterday's train from Boston on a visit to her parents and other friends.

Head Constable Sheppard took a bottle of Beef, Iron and Wine from one of our grocerymen on Saturday and sent it on to St. John's to be tested. It is said that a young man found under the influence, claimed he loaded up on this tonic.

PRESCRIPTION "A"

Very Highly Recommended by An Outport Man.

Please send me by mail 1 large bottle of Stafford's Prescription "A". Enclosed you will find 50 cents, also 10 cents for postage. You sent me a trial size a few days ago and it almost cured my wife. Another 50 cent bottle will make a cure. I have tried doctors and all kinds of medicine, but I don't believe that there is any medicine that can cure a bad stomach like STAFFORD'S PRESCRIPTION "A". I am more than thankful that ever you advertised that medicine. Please forward as soon as possible, as I am waiting anxiously for it.

Donald's Forgetful Fit.

Nuts for Morrison, Morris and McGrath to Crack.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Knowing that Donald is subject to the "Forgetful Fits" and requires a "shaking" occasionally to make him remember things, you will please allow me to use the columns of the Telegram to give him just a little "shake" and ask him to try to get his memory back to 1897, and ask himself why he was forced out of the Tory Party just on the eve of the election that year. I think he will remember that the reason was, that his desire to do away with denominational schools did not meet with approval from the others of the Tory Party of that day, and a jolly good row occurred. Mr. Morine jumping all over poor Don, so that he had to take a back seat, and although he was "fired" the Tory Party of that time had to suffer for Donald's utterances, for some copies of the paper in which he was airing his views got into circulation, although the bulk of the issue was suppressed. So far back as 1897 Donald was desirous of doing away with denominational schools. And it is the same Donald, not a bit changed, and this same Don is one of the gang that say Bond and Coaker is going to do away with the present system of education. Fearing that E. P. Morris may be troubled with some of the "Forgetful Fits" like Don, seeing that he had a touch of them, when he stated that he had no interest in any timber lands, and afterwards discovered he had some interest in a few thousand acres, warrants one thinking he heaves those fits occasionally, so just to refresh his memory, I will remind him what his friend Patsy McGrath said of him and his stand on the question of denominational schools. Here it is:

"Morris and his gang have no more regard for Catholic Schools now, than they had a few years ago when in the infamous Academia debate they voted in favor of abolishing denominational schools."
How is that for Sir E. P. Morris's views on denominational schools? Has he changed his opinion since Patsy wrote the above? Patsy still further wrote:

"Morris and his gang are the ones who pose as the champions of Catholic Schools. What a farce to be sure. Catholicity has come to a pretty pass indeed, when it has to accept such individuals as its spokesmen. And Catholics must be sunk very low when they will be influenced by the utterances and secret workings of Morris and his gang."

What does Sir E. P. think of that? What do John Alexander think of it? What do Morris's supporters think of it? Of course they "Forgot" all about it. So require just to get a "shake up" to cause them to remember. Yes, in that election of 1897, Morris and his heebers were whispering it in every Catholic home that they entered, that the Tories if elected were going to turn the Christian Brothers and the Nuns out of the country, and the Tory Party of that time, although they had rid themselves of Donald, who was the cause of the trouble, still had to suffer for his sin. It is the same Donald to-day. Has he changed his views? Can a leopard change his spots? And it is the same tricky Morris that is associated with him. Yes, the same Morris that P. T. McGrath refers to in the above quotation. The same old Morris that has been "Coddling" the people for years. Now, let the people ask themselves which are the likely ones to do away with the present system of education and give us Godless Schools. Is it Bond, Kent, Dwyer, Shea and Coaker, or is it Morris, Morrison, Piccott, Crookie and Patsy McGrath. Which? Which?

For the present THAT'S ALL.

Torbay Party.

Wednesday next, the 3rd September, will be a great day for the country.

SUPPORT THE TORBAY PARTY.

The motor busses and Mr. Lester's touring car will ply between St. John's and Torbay, leaving Ravine's Cross every hour from noon till night on Wednesday, the third day of September, going via Logy Bay, Outer Cove and Middle Cove, and returning via the Pulpit and Mount Cashel. Tickets for the round trip, including a pleasant evening at the Garden Party, only seventy cents. This is the drive which the tourists and round trippers from the U. S. A. so much admire and pay so much to see.

Imagine! a motor ride to Torbay and back with 5 or 6 hours at the Garden Party for only seventy cents! Secure your tickets without delay.—advt.

McGrath and Godless Schools.

(From To-day's Plaindealer.)

"Let loose the dogs of war? Politically, we mean, seems to be the order of the day. Editor McGrath, the mouthpiece of the Premier, is charging the Opposition with being in favor of non-sectarian education; and the Opposition counter-charges by pointing out that in the ranks of the Government are some of the most avowed advocates of Godless schools—Morison, Piccott and others.

What good is going to be accomplished by such a course, we are at a loss to understand, because so far as we know, it is not an issue in this election.

The Premier thinks that McGrath's mouthpiece who has been in every political party, and betrayed them when it suited him, is going to throw dust in the eyes of the people by appeals to the worst passions of mankind. He is making a mistake.

What the public want is a plain statement from the Government what they have done and are going to do—if those charges of graft and dishonesty twitted at the members are true. It is upon matters of this kind the public want to be enlightened. McGrath's name politically stands for everything that is lowest and basest in our public life, and the less he is heard of in this campaign the better for the Government.

Cable News.

Special to The Evening Telegram.

SOEIA, To-day.
After eight hours' continuous sitting of the Cabinet to-day, it was reported that Bulgaria should enter into direct negotiations with Turkey, as it was believed no other course could avert an invasion of Bulgaria by Ottoman forces. It was felt war must be avoided at all costs, since the country is not in a condition to fight.

THE HAGUE, To-day.
The ceremony of unveiling by Andrew Carnegie the bust of the late Sir William Randell Cremer in the Hall of Justice in the new Peace Palace was the occasion for a great demonstration in favor of the peace movement. Sir Randell Cremer was the originator, inter-Parliamentary conferences and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize and for thirty-seven years Secretary of the International Arbitration League.

NEW YORK, To-day.
Viscount Haldane, the first Lord High Chancellor of Britain to leave this country, since Cardinal Woolsey went to France four hundred years ago, arrived here on the steamship Lusitania last night. He was entertained at a dinner given on his behalf in an interview Lord Haldane freely discussed many questions of the day, and declared he was in favor of women suffrage, and prophesied the millennium of peace was not far off. He said the relations between Germany and England were never more cordial, praised intellectual growth of the States, and predicted Home Rule for Ireland would soon be an accomplished fact.

Where's That Bridge?
For weeks past the people of St. John's and those residing out at Kean's Valley have asked through the Telegram for a bridge to be placed there. However, the people party are now too busy "trying to save life" by canvassing for votes to board up a government in the last stages of senility. No one talking to Morris or Woodford. E. E. says, to quote his "Hon." friend of Prescott Street, "No Hades with public opinion," and so it is all along the line. However, it is gone so far now that the people who get off the train at that place will subscribe the meagles $5, the cost of the bridge, and give $100,000 to Morris and Woodford, so that they can erect it. They can't find $6 for a small bridge but can squander millions. Oh, you Sir Robert Bond when will we have the good old Liberal Government again?—Com.

EVENING PRAYER.

Ere on my bed my limbs I lay
It hath not been my use to pray
With folded hands or bended knees;
But silently, by slow degrees,
My spirit I to love compose,
In humble trust mine eyelids close
In reverential resignation:
No wish conceived, no thought expressed,
Only a sense of supplication—
A sense of all my soul's imprint
That I am weak but not unblest,
Since in me, round me, everywhere,
Eternal Strength and Wisdom are.
—Coleridge.

THE LOSS OF THE ROYAL GEORGE
August 29th, 1782.

Toll for the brave!
The brave that are no more!
All sunk beneath the wave,
Fast by their native shore!

Eight hundred of the brave,
Whose courage well was tried,
Had made the vessel heel,
And laid her on her side.

A land-breeze shook the shrouds,
And she was overboard,
Down went the 'Royal George',
With all her crew complete.

Toll for the brave!
Brave Kempenfeldt is gone,
His last sea-fight is fought,
His work of glory done.

It was not in the battle,
No tempest gave the shock;
She sprang, no fatal leak,
She ran upon a rock.

His sword was in his sheath;
His fingers held the pen,
When Kempenfeldt went down,
With twice four hundred men.

Weigh the vessel up
Once drenched by our foes!
And mingle with our cup
The tear that England owes.

Her timbers yet are sound,
And she may float again,
Full-charged with England's thunder,
And plough the distant main.

But Kempenfeldt is gone,
His victories are o'er;
And he, and his eight hundred,
Shall plough the wave no more.
—Cowper.

He suffers, but he will not suffer long;
He suffers, but he cannot suffer wrong.
For him not moves the loud world's random mock,
Nor all Calamity's hugest waves confound;
Who seems a promontory of rock,
That, compassed round with turbulent sound,
In middle ocean meets the surging shock.
Tempest-buffeted, citadel-crowned,
But ill for him who, bettering not with time,
Corrupts the strength of heaven-descended will,
And ever weaker grows through act of crime,
Or seeming-genial venial fault,
Recurring and suggesting still!
He seems as one whose footsteps halt,
Tolling in immeasurable sand,
And o'er a weary, sultry land,
Far, beneath a blazing vault,
Sown in a wrinkle of the monstrous hill,
The city sparkles like a grain of salt.
—Tennyson.

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friend. Its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well, you did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with shouts of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "If" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more then his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Percie Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

WESTERN FISHERY NEWS.—The Portia, which just returned from S. W. Coast points, reports fish scarce in that section; also at a few places where there is a sign of cod, there is no bait to be had. Five vessels were at Cape Broyle yesterday seeking bait.

OLD AND YOUNG.

They soon grow old who grope for gold
In marts where all is bought and sold;
Who live for self, and on some shelf
In darkened vaults hoard up their self.
Cankered and crusted o'er with mould
For them their youth itself is old.
They ne'er grow old who gather gold
Where spring awakes and flowers unfold;
Where suns arise in joyous skies,
And fill the soul within their eyes.
For them the immortal bards have sung,
For them old age itself is young.
—Cranch.

LIGHT OF STARS.

Plainness and clearness without shadow of stain!
Clearness divine!
Ye Heavens, whose pure dark regions have no sign
Of languor, though so calm; and, though so great,
Are yet untroubled and unpassionate;
Who though so noble share in the world's toil,
And though so tasked keep free from dust and soil—
I will not say that your mild deeps retain
A tinge, it may be, of their silent pain
Who have longed deeply once, and longed in vain;
But I will rather say that you remain
A world above man's head, to let him see
How boundless might his soul's horizons be,
How vast, yet of what clear transparency;
How it were good to sink there, and breathe free;
How fair a lot to fill
Is left to each man still.
—Matthew Arnold.

POVERTY.

It is not poverty so much as preference that harasses a ruined man—the struggle between a proud mind and an empty purse—the keeping up of a hollow show that must soon come to an end. Have the courage to appear poor, and you disarm poverty of its sharpest sting.
—Mrs. Jameson.
O blissful poverty!

Nature, too partial to thy lot, assigns
Health, freedom, innocence, and downy peace.
Her real goodness and only mocks the great
With empty pageantries.
—Penton.

He is poor whose expenses exceed his income.
—La Bruyere.

That man is not poor who has the use of things necessary.
—Horace.

THE TEST OF LIFE.

Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: For I was hungry, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungry, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not to me.
—St. Matthew xxv.

Thrilling Tales of Fights With Sharks.

How Pilot Ashe, of the Wallace Fell Overboard and was Devoured.—A Three Mile Battle for Life.—Surgeon Describes Wound Made by Teeth of Demon of the Deep.

(New York Sun.)

Here is a choice selection of shark stories culled from various reliable sources:

The Sun of Sept. 20th last year pointed the following story of a shark killing a ship's pilot. The story came from Pensacola (Fla.), and ran as follows:

"Thomas Ashe, or British Tom, the pilot of the schooner Wallace A. McDonald, was at the wheel of the vessel to-day. The wind was strong and the schooner was well heeled over and Ashe lost his footing and went over the lee rail. Capt. Tony McGinty jumped to the helm and put the schooner about. At the same time a shark made for Ashe. Before boats could be lowered, however, the pilot was far astern.

"After about two miles of windward work the schooner drew near enough to Ashe, who is a powerful swimmer, to throw him a line, and the ship's crew shouted encouragement. Just then the shark shot over the swimming pilot. Presently the fish turned up its belly and the schooner's men saw Ashe's body drop from its mouth. The body sank. The shark was killed."

When the British cruiser 'Powerful' was at Durban during the siege of Ladysmith a petty officer in charge of a dingy put his naked feet in the water. They had not been there half a minute when his left foot was bitten clear off by a shark.

Close Call in Kingston Harbor.

And this is what happened in 1896 at Kingston, Jamaica: A colored boy swam out into the middle of the harbor, which is about three miles wide, resting his body upon a large plank. Suddenly he was attacked by a hammer headed shark, perhaps the most hideous and voracious of all its tribe. He tried to keep the fish away by splashing the water with his feet, but the creature was not to be frightened, and came right in and snapped at his waist.

By almost miraculous luck the terrible teeth barely did more than break the skin of the boy's body, but they bit a big piece out of the plank on which he was lying as easily as if it had been a turnip. The shark then darted away and the boy swam to shore bleeding slightly from the wound in his side, but not seriously injured.

At Kingston, a woman named Gonzalez, rowing in the harbor with her husband, unthinkingly trailed her hand over the side of the boat. A small shark seized it and would have dragged her overboard had the husband not beaten him off with an oar. Two of her fingers were bitten off and the hand was badly lacerated.

The newspapers only recently told the story of a heroic stoker on a ship, who, in going to rescue a comrade was torn to pieces by a shark. The story was related by a fireman of the United Fruit Company steamer Pastores. While the Pastores was at anchor in the bay at Port Limon, Karl Shafer, a fireman, and August Schulte, a trimmer, went for a swim. Shafer swam for a good distance and was seized with cramps. He yelled to Schulte at the same time that Schulte saw the black fin of a shark bob out of the ocean.

Schulte was a strong swimmer, and without hesitation, started to aid Shafer. A motor boat was also sent to the rescue. Schulte turned on his back and was towing Shafer toward shore when the shark rushed at the two men and both were lost.

Vouched for by a Surgeon.

Assistant Surgeon F. M. Munson made the following report to the Navy Department:

"On Nov. 2, 1904, a boatswain's mate of the Piscataqua, then lying in the inner harbor of Olongapo (P.I.), while bathing from the side of the ship, was bitten on the foot by a shark. The man had a good view of the shark and there can be no doubt as to identity of the species of fish.

"The two were shaped bites, one on the dorsal and one on the plantar surface near the toes, showed unmistakably the marks of three rows of teeth in each lacerated wound. On the dorsum the skin was torn from the underlying tissues for two inches; two tendons and several branches of the dorsal pedis artery were severed. One of the tarsal bones was crushed into small fragments. On the plantar surface the thick fascia was torn away about one inch."

Despite the severity of the injury the man regained the use of his foot, some stiffness remaining.

Fought a Shark for Three Miles.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch of June 25, 1904, says that Capt. R. H. White, Mate J. L. Henry and the negro cook of the schooner Alda, swam ashore from the wreck of their boat in the middle of Mofback Bay, pursued throughout their three mile swim by a voracious shark which in its last attack lacerated the cook's leg seriously.

"Only the cries of the swimmers and the desperate manner in which they lashed the water," says the account, "kept the savage brute at its distance. Sometimes it would drop astern and give the terrified men time to catch their breaths, but the next moment the cruel fin would show above water right in their wake."

"At last, splashing and shouting, they reached the breakers near the shore. Safety seemed to be within their reach. But the shark was not to be cheated as easily. With a sudden dart it swept down on the negro and caught him by the leg, hurting him, as he said later, 'quite painfully.' The shark did not pursue its advantage, however, but after the single taste headed out to sea."

Shark Jumps Into a Boat.

The following story of a narrow escape from a shark was printed in St. Nicholas:

The yellow fever was raging in the city of Vera Cruz that year and one of the large West Indian liners which arrived on a certain day was obliged to anchor in the harbor. A small boat known as a dingy floated astern and in this an active young colored boy named Pedro, about 15 years old, was busily washing off the seats. The boat lurched over with a sudden dip as the boy bore his weight on one of the thwart and Pedro heard a warning shout from the steamer's deck just in time to give one terrified glance around and to hear a noise he knew only too well.

Without an instant's hesitation he jumped overboard from the opposite side of the boat. For as he looked he caught sight of the jaws of a great shark which, spying this tempting morsel of a plump little ducky boy had leaped toward the careened boat with open mouth. So vigorous was the shark's leap that as Pedro went over one side of the boat the shark flopped in at the other. Not being used to these surroundings and missing his prey he floundered around until his head bore down the gunwale and he slid from the careening boat into the sea again before the people on the steamer could fling a harpoon at him. Almost as he disappeared poor Pedro's head popped up on the opposite side of the boat, and in a terrible fright he elbowed into the dingy again as thoroughly scared a young ducky as ever had a narrow escape.

14 Years For Two Robbers Who Beat Victim.

Fourteen years in the Penitentiary was the sentence imposed by Judge Bazin in the Court of Special Sessions on Victor Derempigny and Arthur Dufour, found guilty of robbery with violence.

Before sentence was passed, the prisoners were asked if they had anything to say. Derempigny said nothing, but Dufour asked the court to suspend sentence, promising to leave the city and go to the United States as soon as he was released.

"The United States, no more than Canada, have any need of men like you," said Judge Bazin. "The proper punishment for characters like you would be a good whipping. Both of you should be sentenced to the lash. You are evidently too hardened criminals, beyond all redemption, as the records before me prove. You have both been in the penitentiary for great part of your lives in jail. The Penitentiary is the only place for you, and I sentence you each to 14 years."

The prisoners turned pale and Dufour, when stepping from the dock, had to be supported by one of the prison guards—Montreal Star.

THERIA.

At the Nickel Theatre.

There was another very large attendance at the Nickel Theatre last night, many being anxious to see "The Charge of the Light Brigade" again, which had been repeated by special request. The other pictures, also proved great favourites. "Williamson's Animated News" opened the programme. "The Players" is a cleverly acted drama of stage life. "The Wanderer" is full of sensational scenes, while "The German Singers" is a lively comedy. Mr. Myers repeated his songs of the previous evening, which were perfectly sung. The programme will be repeated this evening.
