MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

'Margaret,' The GIRL ARTIST, OR, The Countess of Ferrers Court.

Margaret had never been in love. If any one had asked her why not, she would have said that she was too busy, and hadn't time.

Lord Blair had been the first to speak to her in tones hinting at passion, and it is little wonder that his words clung to her, and utterly refused to be dismissed from her mind.

But she could not. She said not a word of what had occurred to old Mrs. Hale, for she felt that she could not have borne the flow of talk, and comment, and rebuke which the old lady would pour out.

Margaret brooded over the wild words Lord Blair had said until every sentence was engraved on her mind; even the expression of his face as he stood before her, defiant as a Greek god, got impressed upon her memory.

"This is absurd and—and nonsensical!" she exclaimed on the second day after his departure, when she suddenly awoke to the fact that she had been sitting, brush in hand, staring before her and recalling Lord Blair's handsome, dare-devil eyes, as they had looked into hers.

"I am behaving like a fool, sentimental idiot!" she told herself, dabbing some color on her cheeks with angry self-reproach. "What on earth can it matter to me what such a person as Viscount Leyton said to me? I shall never see him again, and he has probably forgotten, by this time, that such a person as 'myself' exists!

"Oh, my lord!" said Margaret, all her womanly chivalry rising on behalf of the absent.

"The earl looked at her, his eyes dark and severe.

"He is not fit to hold converse with such as you," Then the look of grief and surprise seemed to recall him to climation of annoyance, and began bundling her painting materials together, and was in the midst of clearing up, when she heard a step behind her, and saw the earl.

"Do I disturb you?" he said, in his low, grave voice, and he paused with the knightly courtesy for which he was famous.

"No, my lord. I have just finished for to-day," said Margaret, rather stily, for she felt his greatness, which spoke in the tone of his voice, and proclaimed itself even in his gait, and the way he held himself.

With a slight inclination of his head he came and stood before the canvas.

A slight expression of surprise came over his face.

"You have made an excellent copy," he said. "I think you are capable of higher work—original work."

Margaret's face flushed with pleasure, but she said nothing. It was not for so humble an individual as herself to bandy compliments with so great a personage as the Earl of Ferrers.

"Oh, no, my lord," said Margaret, dropping a courtesy.

"The earl paced slowly to his own apartments, and entering the library, sat down before the great carved writing table.

"For half an hour he sat musing. "So young, so innocent, so much at the mercy of the cold, cruel world. Depends upon her art! Poor child, a frail dependence! Why should I not do one act of common kindness, and make my money of some use to one deserving it? Hitherto it has passed through Blair's hands to blacklegs and scoundrels."

He drew the paper toward him and took up the pen with an air of resolution and wrote a note to Messrs. Tyler & Driver, the family solicitors.

"Gentlemen," he wrote, "add a codicil to my will, bequeathing five thousand pounds to Margaret Hale, the granddaughter of Mrs. Hale, who acts as the Court housekeeper. Very truly yours, FERRERS."

It was an important letter for Margaret, but it bore upon her future to an extent far greater than would be inferred even by the gift of so large a sum of money.

CHAPTER IX. It was only when she had left the earl that Margaret noticed how kind and gracious he had been. He had not only bought the copy of the Guido, and commissioned another picture of her, but had walked by her side and smiled upon her, treating her almost as an equal, with a gentleness and deference indeed which seemed to indicate that he thought her a superior.

"I'll go into the woods and find a subject at once," she said to herself. "And it shall be my very best picture, or—I'll know the reason why. No wonder people are fond of lords and ladies, if they are all like the great Earl of Ferrers."

No doubt, if she had known the contents of the letter he had just written to Messrs. Tyler & Driver, she would have thought still more highly of him.

She had a sketch-block and pencil in her hand, and she went through to the woods that fringed the Court lawns on three sides.

"They were lovely woods; there was no more beautiful place in England than Leyton Court, and Margaret almost forgot the purpose for which she had come, as she sat in a little bushy dell, through which ran a tiny stream, tumbling in silvery cascades over the boulders rounded by the hand of Time.

"But presently, when she had drunk deep of its beauty, she began to make a sketch of the dell.

What a lucky girl she was! The possessor of the silver medal, an exhibitor in the Academy, and now commissioned by no less a personage than the Earl of Ferrers.

"I shall be really famous if I go on like this," she said to herself, with a short laugh.

"Then the laugh died out on her lips, for, with a sudden spring, a young man reached the rock she was at that moment sketching, and from it dropped to her side.

It was Lord Leyton.

Margaret was so startled that she let the sketch-block fall from her hand, and sat looking at him, with the color slowly fading from her face.

She had succeeded in forgetting him for a short hour or two, and here he was at her side again.

And Lord Blair assuredly looked, if not startled, pale and haggard.

How To Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly, Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 64 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. It also quickly breaks the inflamed membranes which accompany a painful cough, and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in ginsenosol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

himself. "No matter. He has gone. It is not likely that you will see him again."

"No, my lord," assented Margaret, with simple dignity.

"Let us say no more about him. He has nearly broken my heart; he is the one thorn in my side," he went on, notwithstanding that he had said no more should be spoken of the wicked young man. "He is a spend-thrift and a gambler, and—" she stopped, suddenly. "If your work is done, permit me to walk with you on the terrace; the air is cool and invigorating."

"I have finished for to-day, my lord," she said.

He went to the window and opened it wide for her, and held it open until she had passed out.

It was only to Lord Blair that he was rough and fierce.

"It is a lovely evening," he said, looking out upon the far-stretching lawns.

Margaret stood beside him in silence.

"What will you do with your Guido when you have finished it, Miss Hale?" he said, after a moment or two.

Margaret laughed softly.

"I don't know, my lord," she said, at last.

"If you will sell it, I will buy it," he said.

Margaret flushed with gratification.

"I do not know its worth, but I will venture to offer you fifty pounds."

"That's a great deal too much, my lord," she said, decidedly.

"I think not," he responded, so quietly that she could say nothing beyond "Thank you, my lord."

"You shall paint another picture for me," he said; "not a copy this time." He paused a moment, then went on, "Choose some small piece of woodland scenery and paint it for me, if you will, Miss Hale."

"I will, my lord," said Margaret, gratefully.

Her simple response seemed to please him, and he looked at her thoughtfully, and with a sad regret. Why had not Heaven blessed him with a daughter like to this beautiful girl? she was passing through his mind.

Then he said suddenly: "You have no parents, Miss Hale?" "No, my lord," said Margaret, sadly.

"And you rely upon your own efforts," he said gently.

"Yes," replied Margaret. "I depend entirely upon my painting, Lord Ferrers."

"It is not an ignoble dependence," said the stately old man. "You are happy in being able to rely upon yourself. And you delight in your work?"

"I am fonder of it than anything else, my lord," said Margaret, with a smile.

The earl paced toward the broad steps that lead from the terrace to the gardens, and Margaret, feeling that she must not go until she was dismissed, walked by his side.

At a turn in the path he stopped short.

"I must leave you now," he said. "Good-bye! Perhaps, some day, you will be kind enough to give me your company in another stroll. You will not forget the picture?"

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

1426.—A SIMPLE AND ATTRACTIVE TUB DRESS.

Ladies' House or Home Dress, with Chemise, and with Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths. (In Raised or Normal Waistline).

Dotted percale was used for this style, with white line for collar and cuffs. The model would be nice for striped seersucker for chamber and percale. It is fine for drill, linen or flannelette, and also good for serge, volles or poplin. It will make a nice neat business suit. The right waist front is shaped over the left, and the low comfortable neck is finished with a deep collar. The sleeve may be long or short as preferred, with a neat cuff finish. The skirt is a four-gored model, cut on new lines and with ample fullness. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for a 38 inch size. The skirt measures about 2 1/2 yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A NEW AND COMFORTABLE UNDERGARMENT.

1635.—Ladies' Combination Corset Cover and Drawers.

This model combines several practical points, and insures comfort and ease. The drawers are cut with yoke and founce sections. The corset cover has full body portions joined by shoulder straps, which may be replaced by ribbon. Lawn, muslin, batiste, crep, dimity or silk are suitable materials, with lace or embroidery for trimming.

The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for a medium size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

of all other clans are quite as good but the MacDonald's took no second place, and they were clasping hands in the cause of the great Empire.
Captain Father Ronald MacDonald said that he came to the hall of the Orange Order with a clear conscience.

He had never done anything to hurt the susceptibilities of his Protestant friends, and at the present time there was a charity abroad in the land such as had never been known before in Canada. The war, he pointed out, was one to vindicate the sacred principles of both Protestants and Catholics, and he hoped that each would give its full proportion of men. It was his best wish for the Orange order that they would share in the glory and honor which would come to Canada when her boys came marching home again.
His sympathies were as broad as humanity, and they were particularly broad in this hour of trial, when the mother country was in dire need. They must sink all differences and go to her assistance. They had crossed the Boynce 225 years ago and he hoped they would cross the Rhine together.

When they marched up the Enter den Linden they would have Dr. Fringle and the Rev. Mr. Burgess, and they would sing "God Save the King" together.
Major Harrington, after paying a tribute to Father MacDonald, said the Oddfellows had given them 16 men.
The Masons also had appointed a committee to provide ways and means and they were co-operating with the Knights of Pythias. The larger number of recruits in the Sydney office were Catholics, so it was evident that they were doing their part.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

"Walter always stays so late when he calls that I am all tired out the next morning and cannot do my work properly," complained Elsie, the business girl.
"You should very nicely tell him that you cannot entertain so late as it interferes with your needed sleep," counselled her elder sister.

Exhilarating Outlook.

The success of the seal fishery at the front of the country is already assured. The reports from the eight steamers engaged show that the prospects of them all obtaining full loads are most favorable. When it is remembered that twelve full days have not yet elapsed since the time of their sailings, the news is most encouraging. This morning, according to the news available nearly 200,000 seals are reported either aboard or panned. This result has come out mainly from the fact that western winds have prevailed mostly during the past two months, and the ships have been able to get to the floes where the harvest is to be found. The news from the Gulf is not so cheery. The conditions which have favoured the men on the front have been adverse to those in the Gulf. The most favourable part of the news is that the Gulf captains have already located the herd, but the ice conditions were not favourable, when the captains reported last. The season, however, is very early as yet, and the four steamers in the Gulf may do proportionately as well as those on the front. If they do so the fishery will be a large one, particularly in view of the fact that there is but one steel steamer engaged and but twelve steamers all told. We understand too that the markets are favorable for oil, and that the returns which may be expected should be remunerative to all concerned. The sealers should do well. The ship owners equally well, and the manufacturers and exporters should meet with a ready market and good returns. The whole voyage will have an exhilarating effect on the year's business, much in contrast to the failure of last year's with the big steel fleet in the field.

Our Volunteers.

Yesterday six young men presented themselves for enlistment at the Recruiting Headquarters as follows: John's Park, Hayse, St. John's; John Ryan, St. John's; M. F. Doran, St. John's; Jos. G. Crumney, Western Bay; Thos. Vincent, Grand Bank; Jas. Osborne, Blaketown. The total number of enrolments to date is 3,071.

BOWINGS' COASTAL SHIPS.—After returning from her present western trip, the Prospero will be docked for her annual overhauling and put in first class condition for the northern route. The Portia, which has been undergoing renovation the past month, will resume the service to the westward.

HEALTH AND INCOME.

Both Kept Up on Scientific Food. Good, sturdy health helps one a lot to make money. With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away. When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset. "I am alone in the world," writes a young lady, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and through close application to work and a boarding-house diet, I became nervous, and got so bad off I was almost impossible for me to keep up in the office. A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts food which I did, making it a large part of at least two meals a day. "To-day I am free from dyspepsia and the life of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income." "There's a Reason." Name given by Canadian Postman Co. Write for it. Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

SEALING REPORTS.

Official.
Via Fogo—Sable I., Florizel, Eagle, Neptune, Erik, S. Blandford, Bloodhound and Terra Nova report crews aboard and well.
Cape Ray—Viking, Ranger, Diana and Seal, all well; no men on ice.

Northern Fleet Well Fished.

Since we went to press, yesterday the following wireless messages were received from the sealing steamers:
Neptune—18,000 aboard; ice tight; other ships of the fleet together.
Samuel Blandford—10,000 on board.
Erik—Panned 10,000 to-day; if we can get ahead will pan more to-morrow; ice too tight to take any on board.

Florizel—Men have panned 17,000 to-day; Erik panned 10,000; prospects good for to-morrow; ice tight; only Florizel able to get around.
Eagle—Total on board to-day 18,000; large sheets of ice; difficult to get through; ice tight.

Terra Nova—Men panned to-day 7,000; total panned seals on ice, 16,600; 9,000 stowed.

150,000 SEALS IN SIGHT!

Hon. John Harvey received the following message last night from Capt. Jacob Keane:
"Eight thousand on board, sixteen thousand panned and within three miles; seals extra heavy."
It looks as if there will be an arrival soon and that the Sable I. will be one of the first to come along, as according to her tonnage she can only carry about 14,000 heavy white coats. The following seals are accounted for to date, including killed, panned and on board ships:
Erik 37,000
Eagle 35,000
Neptune 26,000
Terra Nova 25,000
Bloodhound 18,000
Erik 14,000
Samuel Blandford 10,000
Sable I. 24,000
189,000

McMurdo's Store News

THURSDAY, March 23, 1916.
We have to add today to our recent lists of new arrivals the following: Remo; Paraformic Throat Lozenges, for sore throat, hoarseness, tonsillitis, etc., an efficient substitute for the German-made Foraminin; Tuttle's Elixir a veterinary preparation with a considerable range of usefulness; Malt Extract; and Malt Extract and Cod Liver Oil, digestive and tonic mixtures.
One new arrival merits an extra word. McMurdo's Sarasaparilla, without doubt one of the most effective blood purifiers, and "Spring medicines" to be had, and one which is of great value at this season of the year to eliminate the toxins and effete matter left in the system after the winter. Price $1 a bottle (100 average doses).

Volunteers Reviewed.

At eleven o'clock this morning the volunteers were reviewed at the C. L. B. Armoury by His Excellency the Governor, Prime Minister and members of the Legislature. Encouraging speeches were made by His Excellency and the Premier, both of whom congratulated the men on their splendid military appearance.

St Margaret's Guild.

The members of St. Margaret's Guild at their usual weekly meeting on Thursday evening, in Canon Wood Hall, enjoyed the privilege of listening to a most interesting and instructive address given by the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland. The subject of the Bishop's address was "Amusements," and contained much sound and fatherly advice. The meeting was one of the largest for some time, over a hundred members were present at the close, and a very hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the Lordship for the pleasant evening which he had so kindly provided for them.

STREET CAR BREAKS AXLE.—As the west bound street car was passing Alexander Street, at 11 o'clock last night the car gave a heavy jolt and stopped immediately. On investigation it was found that a main axle was broken.

At the House.

March 23rd, 1916.
Mr. Jennings presented a score of petitions from places in Twillingate asking that the cutting of pit-props be discontinued inside the three mile limit.

Mr. Clift strongly supported the petitions. He had considerable communications from his constituents on the same subject. Mr. Coaker said the petitions in no way emanated from the F. P. U. They had originated voluntarily among the people.

The Prime Minister said he would take the matter up with the Agriculture & Mines Department at the next sitting of the House. The reason offered by him for the Government granting permission to cut over the forbidden areas was on representations being made from certain districts last fall that people were out of employment and would be in want of great advantage to get the timber. However, he added, that permission would be given only for this season and would be refused thereafter.

Mr. Clapp presented a petition from Croque, St. Barbe, asking for a ferry service to give them communication as they found it difficult to travel in small boats. He hoped the Government would accede to the request, which was only small, though it would be of great advantage to the people of Croque. He submitted another petition asking that Rocky Harbor, where there are over 250 people living, be made a port of call for the Reid Co's steamer passing that way; also requesting telegraph communication. Present conditions were a great inconvenience to the people who are compelled to travel seven miles to get to the nearest telegraph office when they want to purchase or order goods, etc. Mr. Clapp also drew attention to the frequent, though futile, request he had made in endeavouring to get from the Prospero to call at Groais Islands, at least 3 or 4 times a year, for the conveyance of fisherfolk to and from that place. In support of his request he cited the case of the Blanche M. Rose, which left Groais Islands last fall for St. John's, having on board 26 souls. The schooner was caught in a storm and was driven off to sea and had to be abandoned, the crew being rescued by a passing vessel. Another instance of which the Colonial Secretary well knew was when the mailman was driven off to sea and the Prospero was ordered to his rescue which resulted successfully. Yet, he said, Capt. A. Keane thinks it is not a proper place to call, though the fishermen of Groais Islands think differently.

The debate on the Address in Reply was then resumed.

Mr. Clift rose and in the opening of his speech paid a tribute to the passing of Messrs. Harris and Farling and Judge Emerson. He referred to the terrible struggle between the warring nations of Europe which has been taxing the resources of our Empire and which has been raging for over 18 months and yet no one could tell when it will end and what the result will be. However, he said, we as British subjects, had one duty to perform which we ought to perform to the best of our ability and that is to aid the Empire by sending men to join in the fighting ranks. Newfoundland has 2,000 men to augment His Majesty's forces and 1,500 as an addition to the Navy. But, he said with special emphasis, should we stop while we are going to measure to the standard set by other Dominions beyond the seas or is it to be said after the War is over that Newfoundland has not contributed her share in proportion to the other Dominions. He had every confidence that our people would rally around the Flag and do the duty to their King and Country required of them. A new effort was being made to stimulate recruiting and he hoped it would have the desired result. It was entirely gratifying to know that the volunteers who have already been to the front have won a name for themselves and brought honour for Terra Nova by their work and he hoped that before long the number sent forward would be considerably increased. He was pleased to notice that by the end of the year the revenue received will be in excess of its expenditure. As there was no reference to retrenchment in the Governor's Speech he assumed that the Estimates would be similar to the Estimates of the last session. Continuing, he said, there must naturally be a short revenue existing on account of the war and before any extra taxation is imposed on the people he was of the opinion that an effort should be made to economize and reduce expenditures in the carrying on of the public service. He suggested that a better, economic and efficient service could be had by increasing the salaries of some officials and doing away with others altogether and reiterated his statement that before any additional taxation is imposed a legitimate effort should be made to reduce expenses. He would deal more fully with the matter when the Estimates were brought down. He took occasion to congratulate the new Judge of the Supreme Court and felt that he was voicing the sentiments of all in extending the best wishes of the entire House to Mr. Kent on his elevation to that distinguished post. Continuing, he spoke in eulogistic terms of the late leader of the Opposition and whose services he said were valuable and useful at all times in the House and were always performed conscientiously and effectively. Much as Mr. Kent's absence from the House would be regretted, still he rejoiced that Mr. Kent was eminently qualified to fill his important and dignified post. As regards the appointment of a new leadership he said he was not aspiring to the important office, and if it were offered to him he would be reluctantly forced to decline the honour for business and personal reasons. The election would be made in due course and he thought would be regretted, still he rejoiced that Mr. Kent was eminently qualified to fill his important and dignified post.

Mr. Parsons followed in a stirring and patriotic speech. He showed the individual responsibility to aid the Empire in the present struggle and he urged that recruiting be given as much stimulus as possible. Mr. Jennings gave a very practical speech. Referring to the war he said that if we were a young man and did not enlist, that after this conflict was over he would be ashamed to hold up his head and look into the faces of other young men who had been to the front. Speaking of the encouragement of recruiting so far as the district of Twillingate is concerned, he suggested that small recruiting stations be established and the issue put plainly before the people would achieve the best results. In connection with Prohibition he thought that the whole country had made a distinct pronouncement on that question and thought that all the obstacles had been withdrawn. He dealt with the cutting of pit props inside the three mile limit and in connection with the Act passed last session and said that there would be no timber available for vessel building purposes if the destroying of the forest was not stopped. As regards the representations made to the Government by people in his district, he quoted correspondence received from the Government to show that these representations were made by a few employers. He knew that fully 90 per cent. of the Twillingate people engaged cutting pit props were not in need, but were only availing of the chance to make money. He emphasized that the cutting of our timber limits was not a necessity unless the Imperial Government wished it for the security of the Empire.

The "Common" Habit.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"Common" has lately become the favorite word of a little neighbor of mine. She uses it on all occasions to describe anything which offends a recently-acquired exactness of taste. Now this little person was a very nice little person once on a time, unaffected, enthusiastic, friendly. And then a sad thing happened: a group of girls from a class a little better off financially than her own took her up. Her head was turned, she became affected, blew in her manner (at seventeen), and has acquired that odious habit to which I referred, of constantly finding people and faces and forms, and goodness knows what, too "common" for her taste.

Equivalent to a Turned-Up Nose

You know the way she says the word. It is equivalent to a turned-up nose in a less sophisticated person.

Of course you have met people who have the "common" habit! And don't you hate it—and sometimes find yourself on the verge of hating them, too? I must say I do.

If I were a minister I would take the text from Peter's lesson on the subject of religious snobbishness, "What God hath cleansed that call not thou common," and preach a good hot sermon on it to this class of people. As it is made a thing odious that it was common and nothing could be beautiful unless it were uncommon!

Some of the Most Beautiful Things Common

Why some of the commonest things of life are the most beautiful—things like plain, ordinary sunshine and roadside flowers and clouds and dawns and stars and snowflakes and green grass and a mother's love and human kindness and the first fluttering awakenings of sex love.

I know that the little person who calls everything she doesn't like "common," vaguely feels that she is elevating herself to an upper class by these distastes.

Poor, foolish little girl! She doesn't realize that the only upper class worth belonging to cannot be reached so easily and cheaply. The real aristocracy, the aristocracy of breeding in the finest sense of the word, is only to be reached by the tolls of a road of self-improvement and self-conquest.

Don't try to get into it by shutting other people out with the word "common."

On the other hand, don't be blatant in your democracy—that's just as bad.

Say "Everybody is as Good as I"

Don't say, "I'm as good as anybody." If you must proclaim your democracy that way, say, "Everybody is as good as I," though, as a matter of fact, neither is true.

The right way to look at it, it seems to me, is that we're all just folks together, trying for better things, falling and trying again. Some have done better than others, some have been born with greater opportunities, some poor creatures have even stopped trying; no one on earth can know enough about motives and handicaps and opportunities and weaknesses and temptations to judge another or even himself; and to consciences that can judge perhaps the difference between the best and the worst, the wisest and the most ignorant, the most refined and the coarsest is smaller far than we guess.

In the Turret.

READ THIS AND REALISE WHAT WE OWE TO OUR SPLENDID JACK TARS.

The last notes of the bugle rang out, and the turret's crew dived towards the grim, grey mass of steel from which the two guns peered forth into the world. As the last man disappeared inside, a steel plate was pulled over the only way of egress to the world outside.

And almost simultaneously, there came two distinct shouts as the Number One of each gun reported his stop cocks open. This meant that hydraulic pressure—the power that drives every one of the vast machines of the modern barbette—had been admitted to the supply pipes, and, like a giant in leath, was waiting to do what was required of it.

Loading the Guns.

The lieutenant took a hand. "Load both guns!" he cried, "Ar-mour-piercing shell!"

Two cages came up with a swish of water, and with great three-quarter-ton, yellow-coloured shells lying on their trays. Another pair of ears, as the chain-rammers shot forward and forced those great projectiles well home into the gun so that the rifling bit into their soft, copper driving-bands; two short, snappy clicks, as the cage doors shot up under the compulsion of hand-levers, and the silk-clad bundles of cordite slid into the place lately vacated by the shells.

Again the rammers roared, but, perfectly under control, they pushed the projectiles gently clear of the breach, and in such a position that the face of the blocks, when closed, would only just touch them.

And simultaneously the great, shining breech-blocks swung round, driven by their motors, until they slammed home, screwed round one-sixth of a circle, and locked.

Preparing for the Fray.

Both Numbers One looked up and cried, "Right gun—left gun—load!" The lieutenant turned, and spoke into a navyphone mouthpiece close to his elbow, and in the conning tower the captain nodded as he got the report: "Fore-turret cleared away—both guns loaded with armour-piercing shell!"

And for a space all was quiet in the turret.

Somewhere far away a gun suddenly thundered, and the men, with their tensed nerves, found themselves starting at the sound. Again it spoke, almost expectedly; but again they started, and commenced to fidget. They were itching to take a hand, but their time was not yet.

Then the navyphone bell rang, and a voice spoke:

"Fore-turret, stand by!" it ordered, as if from a long, long distance. "Right gun ranging-gun. Fire with the bell!"

The lieutenant once more nodded. "Bring the right gun to the ready!" he snapped.

The lock clicked as it was pulled down; a tube was pushed home; then the lock clicked back into place. The electric cut-off switch was jammed over until the word "ON," in great, red letters, stared forth—and all men stood clear of the gun.

A Miss!

Number One looked round for the flick of an eyelid. Then, "Right gun—ready!" he bawled; and the gunlayer, his own blood-a-boil, muttered "Turret ready!" exactly as he had done a million times before at drill.

And as he spoke his eye, steadied along the telescope, and he crept his gun-muzzle up ever so slightly until the bow-wave of the enemy's ship was dead in the centre of the cross-wires which are his sights, and his finger tensed around the pistol-grip.

A bell—a silly, tiny little bell—tinkled twice in the signal "Stand by!" Then once more it tinkled, and the gun leaped back a full two feet as the ranging shot left her muzzle.

The gun-layer's eye followed it through the air, saw it splash into the sea three hundred yards short of the target, and swore softly.

Meanwhile, at the gun, men got busy. The breech swung back with a clang, the cage roared and rattled up, and the rammer snorted and chucked as the second shell and charges went home. When at last the word "Ready!" came again, the gunlayer waited only for the bell.

Again it tinkled, again the gun spoke; and the gunlayer almost fell from his lofty perch as he saw splinters fly from the enemy's bridge. "Hitting, by the great hook block!" he yelled; and simultaneously the notes of a bugle rang out somewhere in the ship.

"Commence firing!" it sang, and it put an end to many a good sailor's suspense on that morning. All hands in that turret were as busy as they could possibly be, feeding shells through the guns at the rate of four to the minute.

Then came the answer: they were not going to have things all their own way. Shells began to thud on the outer armour of the gun-house shield; one even burst just above the left sighting-hood, and when the crew got over the concussion and shock they found that the left gun was sightless—and the left gunlayer was headless. The sight-setter took his place, but hardly had he fired two rounds before a second shell tore its way through the turret wall, and, hitting the other side, burst with a long and shuddering roar.

And the two guns fell silent; useless, because every man of their crews was now a huddled, mangled mass. The working-chamber men, rushing from below to take their places, wasted no time in pity or sympathy, though the dead men were all messmates and friends. And the guns spoke; and the gunlayer almost fell from his lofty perch as he saw splinters fly from the enemy's bridge.

"Commence firing!" it sang, and it put an end to many a good sailor's suspense on that morning.

All hands in that turret were as busy as they could possibly be, feeding shells through the guns at the rate of four to the minute.

Then came the answer: they were not going to have things all their own way.

Shells began to thud on the outer armour of the gun-house shield; one even burst just above the left sighting-hood, and when the crew got over the concussion and shock they found that the left gun was sightless—and the left gunlayer was headless.

The sight-setter took his place, but hardly had he fired two rounds before a second shell tore its way through the turret wall, and, hitting the other side, burst with a long and shuddering roar.

And the two guns fell silent; useless, because every man of their crews was now a huddled, mangled mass.

The working-chamber men, rushing from below to take their places, wasted no time in pity or sympathy, though the dead men were all messmates and friends. And the guns spoke once more, added their notes to that grim concert of death which filled the whole world—more slowly than at first, it is true, but in action and hitting for all that.

Killed at Their Posts.

The gunlayer in the enemy's ship must have had his eyesight exactly on the same spot as when he fired the last fatal round, for presently another shell came through the hole and wiped out the working-chamber hands.

The turret was now a shambles; there is no other word that can come anywhere near describing its condition.

Then down the magazines and shell-rooms men heard the voice of the man who had run the working-chamber single-handed whilst his comrades "filled up casualties."

"For Gawd's sake, magazine," he called, "send some hands up! They're all done in up top!"

Men clambered up the long ladders to the turret, leaving two men in the shell-room to wrestle—with the aid of hydraulic machinery, of course—with the great shells for the guns. The guns only spoke once a minute now.

By this time the enemy's shells had commenced to make themselves exceedingly unpleasant. Splinters flew from the turret-walls, both inside and out, and presently the man who combined the duties of three men at lever, cage, breech, and tube, dropped where he stood.

The right gun-layer followed with an awful gasp across his face, and the left sight-setter whistled round suddenly and fell.

Working By Hand.

And then, from beneath their feet, came another shuddering shock. A shell had burst in the working-chamber, and every machine came to a sudden standstill as burst pipes refused to convey hydraulic pressure to them.

"Hard-working!" cried one of the remaining three. "Ask the control if we can have somebody from the passages."

The control said "Yes," and eight scared youngsters doubled across a shell-swept patch of forecastle and into the turret. The sight of the dead men turned most of them physically sick, but a few minutes later they were whipping up the great shell from fifty feet below by hand. The cordite cartridges followed, and then came the fuzzle to get shells well home with the hand rammer.

The youths dived through the hatchways, and the gun-nozzles rose and wavered as they forced water pressure by hand into their smoking cylinders. Presently the right gun spoke, then the left, and the whole process of loading by hand had to drag its painful length along once more. Two rounds were fired every ten minutes now.

And at last the end came—the welcome, monotonously-echoed "Cease firing!" And the few men who could still move in the fore-turret dropped where they stood—and the living and dead and wounded lay helpless and unconscious for a time, until the bugle called the former to the upper deck, to assist the remainder of their comrades to take prize shells in tow.

RECKLESS CHARGES.
LONDON, March 22.—Pemberton Billing said that now this afternoon with the consent of the British air force, he charged with insufficiently armed forces for the purpose of "murder" in connection with the next few years the war would possess from 100,000 aeroplanes, with which they would be blackened, while evasions, which were unable to battleships, would be able to fly about which would only from £150 to £200 million.

CHARGES WERE ASKED.
LONDON, March 22.—Harold J. Tennant reported charges were asked and argued. The Commandant of the front was thorough with the air service, with "murder" in connection with the deaths of airmen, never been used. Billing sprang out and said: "I repeat the statement. Tennant wishes to challenge such evidence as 'Houses'." Tennant retorted: "member had little to justify of murder."

REDUCTION IN CRIME.

LONDON, March 22. The reduction in prison estimates of the British Isles for the coming year, of $600,000, or about 12 per cent and the shutting up, in whole or in part, of scores of prisons, are some of the visible evidences of reduction of crime owing to the war.

WILL RECEIVE DEPUTATION.

LONDON, March 22. Walter Runciman, who previously refused to receive a deputation of the South Wales Coal Miners' Federation to listen to their grievances against the mine-owners regarding Sunday work and bonuses, telegraphed to the Secretary of the Federation to-day, agreeing to receive a deputation.

BREAK DOWN IN HOSPITAL ARRANGEMENTS.

LONDON, March 22. In making a general defence of the conduct of the Mesopotamia campaign against attacks in the Commons to-day, J. Austin Chamberlain said, that he regretted he was compelled to admit that in his opinion there had been an lamentable breakdown in hospital arrangements. He did not seek palliation of some things which had taken place, but begged the House to remember that the campaign had been carried on under circumstances of very great difficulties.

Chamberlain feared that there had been an inexcusable shortage of medical supplies owing largely to the difficulty of assembling suitable transport ships, shallow enough for river use. The Indian Government, he said, had already sent officers to investigate and remedy defects. He hoped the measures taken by the Home Government would result in speedy improvement.

RECKLESS CHARGES AGAINST AIR SERVICE.

LONDON, March 22. Pemberton Billing stirred the Commons this afternoon with an arraignment of the British air service, which he charged with inefficiency. He asserted that its blundering policy had been responsible for the deaths of many officers, who had been murdered rather than killed. He declared that Earl Derry was not qualified for appointment as chairman of the Committee of control of air defence, because he was not well informed on the subject. Billing said that within the next few years the big nations would possess from 100,000 to 200,000 aeroplanes, with which the sky would be blackened, while even small nations, which were unable to afford battleships, would be able to maintain fleets of aircraft which would cost only from $100 to $200 apiece.

Herold J. Tennant replied. Billing's charges were absurd and untrue, he argued. The Commander-in-Chief at the front was thoroughly satisfied with the air service, while the word "murder" in connection with the deaths of airmen, never should have been used. Billing sprang to his feet. "I repeat the statement, and if Tennant wishes to challenge, I will produce such evidence as will shock the House." Tennant retorted that the member had little to justify his charge of murder.

AROUND VERDUN.

PARIS, March 22. German infantry attacks were again directed to-day against the French front between Avecourt Wood and the village of Malancourt. All the German attacks debouching from Avecourt, were checked, according to an official statement issued to-night by the French. The Germans succeeded in gaining a footing on the small hill at Maucourt.

IN THE DVINSK REGION.

PETROGRAD, March 22. Russian operations on the northern front promise to develop into the most serious undertaken by either side in this theatre of war since Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's campaign against Dvinsk last autumn. Taking advantage of German pre-occupation at Verdun, the Russian staff decided to anticipate any plans the Germans might be making for an offensive in the Dvinsk region, by a series of manoeuvres which, if successful, will make it not only impossible for them to institute the advance they apparently intended, but will force them out of the positions they now hold against the northern Russian army. The position of the German forces in the northern sector takes the form of an arc with the army before Dvinsk occupying the front of the arc farthest extended into Russian territory. The alignment makes the German position particularly susceptible to a flanking movement by the Russians north and south of Dvinsk. These, an official announcement says, have begun. In the region of Lake Lovosoo, south of Dvinsk, the Russians have advanced along a front of ten miles, threatening the Vilna railroad and the German communications between this point and Dvinsk. It is unofficially reported that this movement against the southern flank of the German Dvinsk position, is accompanied by manoeuvres of the same nature against the northern German flank in the neighborhood of Friedriehstadt. The effect of these late attacks, if successfully executed, will be to constrict the Germans from their extended position before Dvinsk, and convert the present arc into a straight line from Friedriehstadt to Svienski-lank.

NATIVES DEFEATED.

CAPE TOWN, March 22. "The greatest battle ever fought against a native race in Africa," is the way the Government Blue Book just issued, characterizes the fight in the north of what was formerly German South West Africa, between the Portuguese and the rebellious Ovaku-anvoma. More than 4,000 natives were killed in the battle, which lasted from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. According to a statement from Portuguese headquarters, their casualties were only one hundred.

GERMAN FOOD SHIP SUNK.

LONDON, March 22. Sinking by a Russian warship of the Esperanza, off Kalkakra, in the Black Sea, off the Italian coast, is reported in a despatch filed at Bucharest on Sunday. The Esperanza is a 7,000 ton vessel, flying the German flag, and is said to have been loaded with food stuffs for Constantinople. The crew were captured by the Russians. The despatch also reports the sinking of a score of small sailing ships with cargoes of food.

LIGHTSHIP TORPEDOED.

LONDON, March 22. The Galloper lightship at the mouth of the Thames has been torpedoed and sunk, according to Lloyd's report. The Dutch steamer Amstelland from Buenos Ayres, for Amsterdam, is reported, according to a Reuter despatch, from Ynuiden, that she set her course for the Galloper Lightship, but found on the spot only a mast above the surface of the sea.

SOCIALIST RESOLUTION.

BERLIN, March 22. The Socialist membership of the Reichstag has decided to present the following resolutions: The Reichstag expresses the expectations that in negotiations concerning the employment of the submarine as a weapon, everything will be avoided which could damage the just interests of neutral states, and effectuate unnecessary sharpening and extension of war; the Reichstag expects, on the other hand, that the Government will do everything to bring about an early peace which will insure the integrity of the Empire, its political independence, and economic freedom of development.

Just a Straight and Simple Story.

MISS BLANCHARD TELLS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They Cure Her Kidney Troubles and Other Sufferers Can Learn From Experience How They Can Find a Cure.

Paquetville, Gloucester Co., N. B.—March 22nd. (Special)—Simple and straight to the point is the statement of Miss Justine Blanchard, of this place. She has tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and found them good and she wants everybody to know it. Miss Blanchard says: "I suffered for a long time with my kidneys. I used Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured me completely."

One simple statement like that is worth a dozen learned dissertations on Kidney disease. It tells the sufferer from kidney trouble just what he or she wants to know—that a cure can be found in Dodd's Kidney Pills. For Dodd's Kidney Pills are no cure-all. They are purely and simply a kidney remedy. They remedy why they cure Rheumatism, Lumbago, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Heart Flutterings, Dropsy, Pain in the Back, and other diseases is that all these are either Kidney diseases or are caused by disordered kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure them by curing the kidneys.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Hon. Donald Morison is now in town on a visit to his son, Mr. R. Morison, of the Coal Company. All Mr. Morison's friends are pleased to see him looking so well after his sojourn down south for several months.

Mrs. Mary Morrissey, widow of the late Morgan Morrissey, passed away on Monday morning after a long illness. The deceased was 85 years of age and lived with her daughter, Mrs. James Moore. She also spent some time with her son, Mr. Charles Morrissey, R. C. teacher at Carbonar. The funeral took place to-day.

Nurse Craig is visiting in town at present. Yesterday she attended the Methodist school and had a talk with the children there. She will also visit the other schools.

The Harbor Grace Coal Company are arranging for a load of coal from Bell Island in a day or two.

Captain James Parmiter is still confined to his home as a result of his fall on the ice seven weeks ago. The trouble is slowly mending and the genial contented disposition of the captain will help in no small way to put him on his feet again.

Messrs. Walter Sellars, son of Mr. Mark Sellars, and Ernest Trapnell, son of John Trapnell, J.P., went to St. John's yesterday to volunteer for service in the army. A few moments too light caused the young men to return home and endeavour to "get up" to the required weight.

The ice is now moved off and already people are at work on board some of the fishing schooners in the harbor making preparations for the coming of the fishing season.

The two Mission Priests, Revs. McPhail and McDougald, are now holding a mission at the Cathedral here. Rev. Father McPhail opened the mission at 10.30 Mass on Sunday morning. At 7.30 in the evening Father McPhail preached a most eloquent sermon on "The Soul of Man." The edifice was nearly filled with worshippers and the excellent discourse was highly thought of by the congregation. Each morning at 8.30 Mass is said and instructions given, and each evening at 7.30 the service consists of Rosary, Sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. All the services are very largely attended. The children's mission ended at the 11 o'clock service to-day.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!
 The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them. I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."
 Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.
 We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X. Lamp and GASTHEAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.
