CHAPTER XI.

Already it was announced that he would be asked to re-establish the pack of hounds which had been put down at his father's death; and the mothers of eligible daughters looked at their girls thoughtfully and speculatively, as they reflected that Lord Gaunt would be the best part of the country had held for some years past; and Leafmore was a very desirable residence, and would need a mistress.

Mr. Bright got Decima down to the Hall nearly every day, and asked her advice upon nearly every change that was being so swiftly wrought there; and Decima was so engrossed that she had quite forgotten the dinner-party at The Firs until, on the Tuesday morning, Bobby remarked:

"I wonder whether the governor means going with us to-night? If so, I shall have to order a fly; otherwise we could walk."

"Oh, I had forgotten it," said Decima. "I'll ask him," and she ran into the laboratory.

Mr. Deane gazed at her with an absent air.

"Dinner—Firs—Mr. Mershon? Ah, yes—yes. Yes, I remember. Of course, of course! I am to show him those drawings of the electric storage. Where are they—where? I put them somewhere for safety—where?"

"Bobby 'dug him out' at seven, and by a quarter to eight brought him into the hall dressed in his grotesque evening-suit. His neck-tie notwithstanding Bobby's care, had already worked under the left ear and he had ruined his shirt-front irretrievably by clutching the roll of drawings against it. Bobby glanced up at Decima despairingly as she came down the stairs.

"Look sharp," he said in a tone scarcely lowered, for Mr. Deane never heard any remark unless it was addressed directly to him, and not always then, "or he'll reduce himself to the likeness of a rag-bag before we get him there. I say, what a swell you are!" he added, taking her by the shoulders and regarding her with reluctant fraternal admiration.

And, indeed, she looked like a dainty flower in the dimly lighted hall. She wore one of the dinner-dresses Lady Pauline had made for the visit to

BILIOUS headache spoils many an expected enjoyment.

When the condition of the liver is neglected, biliousness seems to become chronic and recurs every two or three weeks, with severe sick headaches.

Why not get right after this trouble and end it by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to restore the health and activity of the liver.

Constipation, indigestion, headaches, biliousness and kidney derangements soon disappear with the use of this well-known medicine.

London; a soft gray, as usual, but fitting the slim, graceful figure exquisitely. It was open a very little at the neck, and it had an air of soft splendor which struck ever Bobby.

"Kindly mention to the admiring crowds, as we go along, that you are my sister, will you?" he remarked. "I feel rather proud of you."

She put her arm round his neck; but he dodged her with:

"Ah, would you! Never, never attempt to cuddle a man when he has got a three-inch collar and a white tie on! You'd ruin them. Come on! His father! where are you going?" for Mr. Deane was shuffling toward the belated den. "This way, going to dine with Mr. Mershon, you know. Get in and hold him tight, Decie!"

When they reached The Firs, a footman in brilliant—too brilliant—livery opened the door of the fly; another stood in the hall—a handsome fellow enough, with palms and statury; but how different to the hall at Leafmore!—and flinging open the drawing-room door, announced them with a pompous air.

Decima was almost dazzled by the overlighted, overglit room. Its newness was everywhere—in the decorations, the furniture, the pictures. It "seared one's eyes," as poor William Morris used to say.

Decima was aware presently that a lady was standing in front of her. She was past middle age, with hair streaked with gray, with a thin figure and a pale face, in which timidity, almost fear, was plainly expressed as she glanced from Mr. Mershon to Decima and back again. Mr. Mershon, in too well-fitting an evening-dress with the too large diamond stud, came up.

"My half-sister, Mrs. Sherborne," he said. "She has come to run the house for me." As he spoke, he shot a sharp, half-savage glance at her, and with a nervous quaver in her voice, Mrs. Sherborne said:

"I—I am very glad to see you. Will you come upstairs and take your cloak off? I—I will go with you."

Decima followed her up the stairs, daddoed with gold and lined with new and garish pictures, and Mrs. Sherborne helped her off with her cloak, though a maid stood ready to do so.

"You—you did not expect to see a lady here?" said Mrs. Sherborne. "I—I only came a few days ago." She scanned the lovely, girlish face covertly, then turned her eyes away, and so reminded Decima of Mr. Mershon. "You know my brother very well, Miss Deane?" she added in a quieter voice, but a restrained one, as if she were trying to master her nervousness. The effort made her tone curiously impassive and expressionless. It was like the voice from behind a mask.

"Oh, no," said Decima. "I have only met Mr. Mershon once or twice."

Mrs. Sherborne smothered a sigh.

"You are very young," she said, as if to herself. Decima looked at her with some surprise, and Mrs. Sherborne colored and bit her lip. "Are you ready? We will go down," she said, confusedly.

Mr. Mershon gave his arm to Decima and they went into the dining-room. Decima's first impression of the room was that it was like a jeweler's shop. There was the usual oak—modern oak—furniture, from which the huge buffet stood out conspicuously, as it was simply loaded with silver. There was beautiful flowers on the table, but the profusion of plate overweighed and seemed to crush them— it and the thr—footmen; and as they moved to and fro, their gaudy liveries oppressed Decima.

There seemed no single spot in the room on which the eye could rest; it was all color, and glitter or silver and gold.

The dinner was a superb one—not one of Mr. Mershon's guests really knew how perfect it was—but to Decima it seemed endless and wearisome.

And yet Mr. Mershon did his best to entertain her. She was, of course, seated next to him, and he talked to her through all the courses. His topic was the one which has the most interest for most men—himself. He told her how he had started the Great Wheel Mining Company, and made a quarter of a million out of it—before it went smash; how he had bought up town lots in Arizona at a pound a lot and realized at fifty; how he had gained the concession from Turkey for the supply of cocconut fiber, and netted five hundred thousand for his company in six months, and of similar achievements.

And he did not talk badly, for, while a man talks of what he understands and the thing that is nearest to his heart, he will generally talk well.

Every now and then he glanced at Mrs. Sherborne, and as if in obedience to his glance, she addressed some remark to Decima in the strange, expressionless voice.

When he was not talking to Decima, and her face was turned away from him, Mr. Mershon's restless, shiftless eyes were fixed on her with a curiously intent gaze of which Decima was quite unconscious. He pressed the champagne—it was Wachter, 1880, a rare vintage—on Bobby, and permitted the butler to fill his own glass pretty frequently.

Bobby addressed himself to the dinner, and Mr. Deane eat and drank what was put before him with his usual mechanical acquiescence. And the silent, constrained Mrs. Sherborne sat with down-cast eyes, excepting when she raised them quickly with a half-frightened expression of some remark of her half-brother's. At last, to Decima's relief, Mrs. Sherborne looked at her and rose, and they went into the drawing-room. Mr. Mershon got a box of cigars and cigarettes from the side-board and handed them to Bobby.

"You'll find these Rothschilds pretty fair, Deane," he said.

Bobby chose a cigar and lighted up, and Mr. Mershon drew his chair nearer to Mr. Deane.

"Did you bring those drawings?" he asked.

Mr. Deane, who had been in a brown study during the dinner, woke up instantly.

"Yes, yes," he said, eagerly; "I brought them. I don't know what I did with them. Robert, there is a roll of paper in the hall."

Bobby fetched them, and strolled into the electrically lighted conservatory adjoining the dining-room; he was not eager to hear his father rhapsodize.

Mr. Deane opened out the papers.

"You see—" he began, Mr. Mershon looked at the drawings and then at his guest's face with a peculiar, cynical smile, and listened with his eyes averted.

"Yes; there is a lot of money in it," he said, after a time.

"You think?" exclaimed Mr. Deane, eagerly.

Mr. Mershon nodded.

"Yes; I'm ready to make a company of it. But you must put something into it. They'll expect that."

Mr. Deane's face fell.

"Let me tell you how I am placed," he said, with a suppressed excitement. "I have a small independence which produces an income—a narrow income—on which we live."

Mr. Mershon nodded.

"I understand. But that's enough. I'll show you the way to realize a sufficient sum to back this thing. Leave it to me. I'll work it for you. As you say, there's a fortune in this idea of yours."

"My dear sir, there is incalculable wealth!" interjected Mr. Deane.

"Quite so," said Mr. Mershon, with a scarcely concealed sneer. "You leave it to me. You may have heard me telling your daughter about the large sums I have made out of limited companies? It's my forte, my line. You leave it to me. I'll take care of those drawings."

"You understand—you are quite sure you understand?" said Mr. Deane, feverishly.

"Oh, I quite understand. Shall we join the ladies, Mr. Robert?" said Mr. Mershon.

They went into the drawing-room, and Mr. Mershon, with a sharp glance at Mrs. Sherborne, who was bending over some embroidery, went up to Decima.

"Will you play or sing for us, Miss Deane?" he said.

Some men are so credulous that they actually believe that a woman carries a pink parasol in order to keep off the sun, wears a one-piece bathing-suit to swim in, and smiles because she is happy.

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I suffered with female troubles for years, was sick most of the time, was not able to do my own housework, and I could not get help from doctors. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers, and took six bottles, and am a well woman. You can use my name to sell the world the good your medicine has done me as I shall praise it always."—Mrs. A. L. DeVine, 647 St. Paul Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.

The Colour of the Ocean.

WHY THE NORTH SEA IS GREEN AND THE RED SEA RED.

All profound and clear seas are more or less of a deep-blue colour; white, according to seamen, a green-colour indicates soundings. The bright blue of the Mediterranean, so often referred to by poets, is found all over the deep pure ocean, not only in the tropical and temperate zones, but also in the region of eternal frost. Scoresby speaks with enthusiasm of the splendid blue of the Greenland seas; and all along the great ice-barrier which, under 77 degrees lat., obstructed the progress of Sir James Ross towards the South Pole, that illustrious navigator found the waters of as deep a blue as in the classical Mediterranean. The North Sea is green, partly from its water not being so clear, and partly from its sandy bottom mixing with the essentially blue tint of the water. In the Bay of Loango the sea has the colour of blood, and Captain Tuckey discovered that this results from the reflection of the red ground soil.

'Another Milky Way.'

But the essential colour of the sea undergoes much more frequent changes over large spaces from enormous masses of minute algae and countless hosts of small sea-worms floating or swimming on its surface. Remarkable as it may appear, in the neighbourhood of Callao the Pacific has an olive-green colour, owing to a greenish matter which is also found at the bottom of the sea, in a depth of eight hundred feet. In its natural state it has no smell; but when cast on the fire it emits the odour of burnt animal substances.

The Crystalline Caribbean.

The peculiar colouring of the Red Sea, from which it has derived its name, is due to the presence of a microscopic alga, floating on the surface of the sea, and even less remarkable for its beautiful red colour than for its prodigious fecundity. . . . The olive-green water which covers a considerable part of the Greenland Seas. . . . varies in position with the currents, often forming isolated stripes, and sometimes spreading over two or three degrees of latitude.

The Crystalline Caribbean.

The crystalline clearness of the Caribbean Sea excited the admiration of Columbus, who, in the pursuit of his great discoveries, ever retained an open eye for the beauties of Nature. "In passing over these splendidly adorned grounds," says he, "where marine life shows itself in an endless variety of forms, the boat, suspended over the purest crystal, seems to float in the air. On the clear sandy bottom appear thousands of sea-stars, sea-urchins, molluscs, and fishes of a brilliancy of colour unknown in our temperate seas. Fiery red, intense blue, lively green, and golden yellow perpetually vary. The spectator floats over groves of sea-plants, corals, and sponges that afford no less delight to the eye, and are no less gently agitated by the heaving waters, than the most beautiful garden on earth when a gentle breeze passes through the waving boughs."

Another Newspaper Succumbs.

The Winnipeg Telegram on Saturday made the following announcement in its afternoon issue:—"With this issue the identity of the Winnipeg Telegram as such disappears. Its city and country subscribers will from this date receive the Winnipeg Tribune, which, under an agreement completed last Thursday, takes over the plant and equipment of the Telegram and its circulation lists as well. It is no secret that the war brought to newspaper publishing business in Canada some very serious problems. More recently the abnormal increase in the price of newsprint and indeed of nearly all material which enter into the production of newspapers has emphasized the wisdom of co-operation and has led to a number of other notable mergers and amalgamations."

No Kiss-Shortage That Night.

They had been walking out for some months, but as yet he had not screwed up his courage to the point of openly avowing his intentions. One dark night, however, as they strolled along, he gave a wild gasp, and muttered hoarsely: "Mary, Ah'm goin' to kiss ye at ivery stile twixt 'ere au' 'ome!"

Mary was on the point of ascending a stile as he spoke, but she promptly jumped down again with blushing face. "Come on, then?" she said coyly. She turned her steps in a fresh direction, and the young man laid a trembling, restraining hand on her arm.

"'Wot are 'ee goin' that way for?" he asked. "'Tis a much longer way 'ome."

"Aye, I know," said Mary, in determined tones, "but there be a sight more stiles!"

'He Who Laughs Last—'

The proprietors of two rival livery-stables, situated alongside each other in a busy street, have been having a lively advertising duel lately. The other week one of them stuck up on his office window a long strip of paper bearing the words: "Our horses need no whip to make them go."

This bit of sarcasm naturally caused some amusement at the expense of the rival proprietor, but in less than an hour he neatly turned the tables by pasting the following retort on his own window: "True. The wind blows them along!"

British Coal Miners Strike Entered Upon.

Thousands of Operatives Idle--Industries Will Receive Setback--Deaths Enue in Belfast Rioting--Italian Anarchist Plot Discovered--Churchill Predicts Dire Consequences.

THE STRIKE ON.

LONDON, Oct. 17. Keep your heads and save coal, is the tenor of the comment over the week-end here on the coal strike. "No strike has ever been entered upon with less passion on either side. Obviously, the sincere efforts of the miners' leaders and of the Government to find a peaceable way out have misled the public mind that thinking that no strike was likely, but they have also kept the public mind serenely assured of their mutual good will. This good will may not last under pressure of the strike, but it is a great help that the strike is not being entered into an atmosphere of unreasonable anger." Indications point to efforts being sought towards mediation by third parties, but against this there is no disposition by either of the two principals, the miners and the Government, to re-open negotiations.

RESULT OF STRIKE.

LONDON, Oct. 17. The miners in Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire, ceased work at the end of their shifts to-day. Military leave was stopped in Portsmouth district. Some Iron and Steel works have already closed and twenty thousand men are idle. In Sheffield it is estimated eight thousand workers are idle at the end of the week. Ocean liners have been instructed to obtain coal abroad as much as possible, but advices from Liverpool say the hold up in shipping will be serious.

NEWFOUNDLAND SCHOONER IN DANGEROUS POSITION.

NORTH SYDNEY, Oct. 17. The schooner Catherine B., owned in Newfoundland and bound from Newfoundland to North Sydney, was driven ashore before midnight last night at McCullin's shore, near Sydney Mines. Three of the crew reached land safely after their boat capsized. Two others are still aboard, but in no danger. The schooner is gradually being driven on a sandy shore by a heavy gale and may be a total loss.

ANOTHER BOLSHEVIEK DIVISION SMASHED.

WARSAW, Oct. 17. The smashing of the sixth Bolsheviek division by the Poles is reported officially. The Polish forces are extending their lines toward the boundary set by the armistice.

RIOTING IN BELFAST.

BELFAST, Oct. 17. Two deaths occurred to-day as a result of rioting in Marrowbone district of North Belfast Saturday night. The victims are Matthew MacMaster and William Mitchell, who succumbed to gunshot wounds. One man was killed outright during the rioting and several others were seriously injured.

HUNGER STRIKER DIES.

CORK, Oct. 17. The first death among the hunger strikers in Cork Jail occurred to-night. Fitzgerald died at ten o'clock, having fasted sixty-eight days. The condition of Fitzgerald and Murphy had become so grave to-day that with the consent of the other hunger strikers, prison doctors were permitted to give Fitzgerald medical treatment.

WILL ADOPT UNIFORM PASS-PORTS.

PARIS, Oct. 17. Delegates to the passport conference here unanimously agreed Saturday to recommend to the nations of the world two types of uniform passports, one type good for a single trip, and the other for regular use. It was pointed out by officials of the League of Nations, under the auspices of which the conference is being held, that inasmuch as the delegates in attendance were the passport and railway officials of their respective countries, the result of the conference probably would be adopted within the next few months. Uniform passports would replace the present passports of various countries and would be in two languages, the language of the country issuing the passport and in the French language.

ANARCHIST PLOT DISCOVERED.

MILAN, Oct. 17. A great anarchist plot has been discovered here, according to the newspaper Perseveranza. The arrest of the editorial staff of the Anarchist newspaper Umaita Nuova, effected Friday, is declared to have been its first move against the plot, which will be followed by other important arrests, including possibly that of Anarchist Enrico Malatesta, the paper's director.

CHURCHILL ON IRISH DANGER.

DUNDEE, Scotland, Oct. 17. Danger of embroilment with the United States if the North and South of Ireland were left to fight out their own differences, was predicted by Winston Churchill, Secretary for War, in his speech here last night in which he referred at length to the Irish situation. Churchill after asserting that such a course would lead to civil war "on such an organized scale that it would be disastrous and more terrible than could be imagined," declared that it would mean that in England sympathy would develop in favor of Ulster. Influential persons in the United States, he said sympathized with the South of Ireland and while volunteers would leave England for the North of Ireland, reinforcements would come from the United States for the South. That, added the War Secretary, would create such tension that Great Britain would be faced with the greatest danger it could be confronted with, namely a quarrel with the United States. "Two or three years more of what we are going through," he added "appears better to me than that we should leave Ireland to herself and thus open the flood gates of organized war and later embroil us with the United States."

ANOTHER NEWSPAPER SUCCEUMS.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 17. The Winnipeg Telegram on Saturday made the following announcement in its afternoon issue:—"With this issue the identity of the Winnipeg Telegram as such disappears. Its city and country subscribers will from this date receive the Winnipeg Tribune, which, under an agreement completed last Thursday, takes over the plant and equipment of the Telegram and its circulation lists as well. It is no secret that the war brought to newspaper publishing business in Canada some very serious problems. More recently the abnormal increase in the price of newsprint and indeed of nearly all material which enter into the production of newspapers has emphasized the wisdom of co-operation and has led to a number of other notable mergers and amalgamations."

BELGIAN HERO DIES.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 17. General Leman, defender of Liege against the German advance early in the war, died at Liege to-day from pneumonia. General Leman was Governor of Liege at the outbreak of the war. It was his gallant defense of the city from the German attack just as the drive through Belgium was in full swing, that held up the advance of the German troops for several days, a delay upon which the Imperial Staff had not counted and which told materially against the Germans in the campaign which ultimately resulted in their check at the Marne.

PASSES 66TH DAY.

LONDON, Oct. 17. Terence MacSweeney, Lord Mayor of Cork, passed the sixty-sixth day of his hunger strike in Brixton prison fairly well, says to-night's bulletin on the Lord Mayor's condition issued by the Irish Self-Determination League. His physical condition is one of ever increasing weakness, but his mind is clearer, keener and more active than ever.

Saturday's Fire; House Gutted.

Saturday evening the Central and West End fire companies were called to Cornwall Avenue, near Bennett's Dam, where the home of Mr. Thos. Redmond was ablaze. On arrival of the firemen flames were coming through the roof and it looked as if the place would be totally destroyed. The chemical engine and a stream of water from a hydrant on Hamilton Avenue, however, soon had the conflagration quenched. The cause of the fire was a defective chimney. Besides much damage to the roof, the inside of the house was badly gutted. The all out signal was sent in at 2.20 o'clock.

Shipping Notes.

Schr. Aubrey F. Brown, which had been loaded since the 15th August, sailed on Saturday for Brazil with fish in drums, from Alan Goodridge and Sons.

The tug Ingraham with the schr. Union Jack in tow, left for Hr. Grace at 6 o'clock Saturday morning, but owing to the heavy weather they were unable to get around Cape St. Francis and returned to port at 11 o'clock. As soon as the weather moderates another attempt will be made.

Snubbing An Autocrat.

In the newly-published "Poland and the Minority Races," by Arthur Goodhart, is a story about Paderewski that is new to me.
One day at Petrograd (writes Mr. Goodhart), the Czar congratulated him on his marvellous playing and ended by saying, "I am proud that the greatest pianist in the world is a Russian."

"Your Majesty is mistaken," replied Paderewski; "I am a Pole, and not a Russian."

The Czar turned away biting his lip, and never again did Paderewski play in the Russian capital.

Trained Nurses for Outports.

The scheme for starting trained nurses in those parts of the outports where no doctor is available, which resulted from Lady Harris's efforts to supply a much felt want, has been finally started. Two trained nurses with high qualifications, including good midwifery certificates, whom Lady Harris brought out from England 14 days ago, are just starting for their stations—one to Hodge's Cove (Random), the other to Rose Blanche. Lady Harris had a small "At Home" at Government House on Friday afternoon, the 15th, to which she asked those who had been taking a special interest in her movement, including a few of the medical men of St. John's. The Lord Bishop of Newfoundland was present and was good enough to take the opportunity of bidding God speed to the nurses in a few kind and appropriate words. Not long after her arrival here Lady Harris's attention was directed to this crying need. She discussed the matter with some of the leading doctors who warmly espoused the scheme. She then approached the Prime Minister, who was most sympathetic and interested, as was also Mr. Coaker. Ultimately the matter was placed in the hands of Dr. Campbell, (Minister of Agriculture and Mines), who took up the idea with great enthusiasm. The Executive Council decided to recommend the appropriation of $4000 (soon raised to $5000) to start the scheme which was to be organized on a self-supporting basis. The next step was to appoint a committee under Minute of Council. This was constituted as follows:—
Hon. Dr. Campbell, Chairman.
Lady Harris.
Mrs. R. A. Squires.
Hon. W. W. Halfyard.
Rev. Edgar Jones, Ph.D.

The Committee lost no time in getting to work and authorized Lady Harris, who was shortly departing on a visit to England (the 17th June) to engage three or four nurses to begin the work which Lady Harris hopes in time will greatly develop. Meanwhile on a local recommendation Nurse Buton, of Lead Cove, who had lately returned from service with the army, was accepted as a nurse under the new scheme, and two or three more nurses are due to come from England in April.

Turn Your Rain Coat
Into an Overcoat.

Overcoat prices are going to be high this winter, and overcoats no better. $70, $80, $90, sound dolefully to the ears of your pocket-book, eh? Why not turn your raincoat into an overcoat? And that's where we step into the breach. Yes, sir, when we present one of our cosy lamb's fleece linings to your admiring gaze your sense of comfort will rise in rejoicing and your pocket-book shout hurrah! For here's the solution to high overcoat prices.

Fleece Interlinings

Overcoats,

Buttons inside your own raincoat, remains invisible; the only difference it makes is in your added comfort. The whole combination weighs scarcely half as heavy as a winter coat. Bring this with you and you are prepared for any weather, rain, hail or snow—or shine. In summer just unbutton the lining and wear the coat in the ordinary way. An overcoat can be worn only for one season; fit your raincoat or raglan with a fleece lining and you can wear it all through the year. Yes, it sure does put the half-Nelson on the weather.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE VAINER SEX, WHICH IS IT?

RUTH CAMERON

Speaking of women and their bondage to fashions and their absorption in a new gown or a new way of arranging their hair, has your small son or nephew or the little boy next door acquired his skull cap yet? If he has I feel sure you have had a reminder of the fact that the male sex is, in its way, quite as much in bondage to fashions, and as deeply interested in its appearance, as the supposedly vain sex. Our small nephew acquired his cap a few days ago, and last night he came over to show it off.

Hours Before His Mirror. I am taking it for granted that you have seen some of the small boys in your neighborhood blossom out in these little caps, which are made of ribbons of some two or three contrasting colors and which cover just every small area at the top of the head and appear to cling there by force of personal magnetism, since it seems inconceivable that anything should hold them down in a wind. They seem to require a pompadour for their proper setting off; once the small boy who acquires a cap and who has hitherto paid no attention to his hair than was exacted of him by threats of dire punishment, now spends hours before his mirror alternately wetting and brushing back his hair.

Our small nephew had bought his cap in the morning and, according to reports afterwards received from headquarters, had been spending the greater part of the afternoon alternating between the water tap and the mirror. He inquired eagerly if we did not think the cap a fine specimen of its kind (better looking than some) and then delicately inquired if we whether he looked funny in it, in the manner of the one who merely puts it that way for the sake of being emphatically told the opposite. When he passed a gentle hand over a pompadour and asked what we thought of that.

We expressed our admiration and asked if he hadn't achieved a good deal in so short a time, and he said, yes, it's terrible hard to raise one's hair things.

We were on the porch and he discovered that by getting the light just right on a window which was backed by a dark curtain, he could make a mirror of it—and that he proceeded to do, setting the cap at a slightly different angle and making that indescribable tendentious, interrogative gesture of passing his hand over the new pompadour to see if it were all poming just right with not a hair escaping.

Why Shouldn't They Be Vainer?

After that first survey he subsided into a chair and talked of other things, but still in the somewhat elate manner of one who is excited and pleased with himself. And ever and anon one could see his eye sliding around to the quasi mirror to see if the effect was as good as ever. And yet people talk of women as the vainer sex!

I have always felt that men were the vainer sex. Why should they not be since the plainest man always has one or more women ready to flatter him? And now after this exhibition of absolutely frank vanity in the young male I am more sure than ever.

Be sure to observe your small son, nephew, or the little boy next door, when he gets his skull cap if you have any doubts on the subject.

The Signature of Documents.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)
The correspondence in the Press about the discovery of a supposed signature of William the Conqueror leads one to ask how many people know why a man speaks of "signing" a document when he subscribes his name to it. The reason appears to be that in the Middle Ages it was a common custom for a person to authenticate a charter or deed by affixing to it the sign of the Cross. This practice—whence has come the "making of his mark" by an uneducated person—was adopted when a man did not know how to write, in case of physical inability, arising from blindness, disease, or old age; and owing to an affectation of dignity, through which high official persons chose that their names should be written by the notary, while they themselves merely marked the document with a cross. Historians have perhaps drawn from this mode of "signature" conclusions of a too sweeping kind as to the prevalence of illiteracy in mediæval times. Much curious information on the subject will be found in S. R. Matthew's learned work entitled "The Dark Ages."

Precious Parts.

Most of us know that the diamond is really nothing but a piece of super-coal. It is costliness is due to its scarcity, and the fact that when man has cut it and polished it, it glitters attractively.

But do you know that the opal, the diamond's rival, is literally nothing but silica (flint) and water! True it is that these two elements have been "cooked" for some thousands of years in Nature's crucible, and that the output is small. Hence the price. But the beautiful iridescent colouring is merely water and "fire." Buy a £500 opal, and you buy flint and water.

The exquisite turquoise, with its soft blue colour, is but phosphate of alumina (clay), and the copper in the earth is the colour maker. But clay and copper crucibled in Nature's chemical laboratory produce the turquoise.

The sapphire, Oriental ruby, and topaz, are but crystals of flinty earth. The sapphire's blue colour is merely iron—one grain of it acting on 100 of alumina. The red of the ruby comes from the clay acted on by chromic acid.

The garnet and beryl are only compounds of flint and alumina, with—for the making of the beryl—some earth called guinea, a sweet salt secreted by Nature.

The lapis lazuli is nothing but common earth saturated with sulphuret of sodium.

All the above, and other precious stones, could be made by the ton—if we had Nature's crucible. Water, clay, flint, sodium, are as cheap as dirt! It is the crucible we lack.

YEARS AND WISDOM.

BILLY MASON

I've lived about a hundred years, and as I lived I looked around and in the course of time, my dears, some chunks of wisdom I have found. I've found that kindness always pays; it smooths the path we have to tread, and takes much anguish from our days, and lulls us when we go to bed. Speak kindly of the man next door; he'll hear the unkind things you've said, and they may make his spirit sore, so he will come and punch your head. Speak kindly of the grocer's clerk, who stung you when you bought some rice; he's wearied by his grinding work, and so got balled up on the price. Speak kindly of all men who pass; they need kind words to make them glad; they're trying hard to cut their grass, and hands are tired and hearts are sad. My life has been a joyride great, because I hate no man on earth, and in the cheapest kind of skate I try to find some signs of worth. I have about a million friends, who smile upon me when we meet, and when my little journey ends, my funeral will be a treat. The boys will boost me on that day, not for the silly rhymes I grind, not for my wraith of fragrant hay, but for the fact that I was kind.

Character in Spelling.

I sometimes wish we could return to the old days when spelling was optional. I believe it would be as good an indication of character as handwriting; one can imagine the amiable old pedant spelling each word meticulously according to its history and derivation, the absent-minded beggar spelling the same letter, the strong-minded young woman with her stern phonetics, and the Person who is Determined to be Unconventional at All Costs working on a little system of his own quite different from everybody else's.—Owen Barfield, in the "Cornhill."

"Manned" by Women.

That a "woman-manned" newspaper plant can be operated successfully seems to have been proved beyond question by the Daily News of Ludington, Mich., for that concern, which employs women almost exclusively, has progressed to the point where it has become necessary to install a fourth linotype. Mrs. G. H. D. Sutherland, wife of the president and manager of the Daily News, is advertising manager. Her assistant is Miss Cecile Rockwell, Miss Leonore B. Prince is in charge of the city editor's desk, and on her staff are Miss Agnes McLaren, society editor, and Mrs. Grace T. Smith and the Misses Philippa J. Hendra and Lorraine Blumenstock, reporters. The paper's proof-reader is Miss Mary Cranley, and the accountant is Miss Marie Brunk. Out in the composing-room the Misses Paulina Borski, Jessie Dean and Yarda Olson preside at the keyboards of three of the linotypes.—Newspaperdom.

Short and Long Engagements.

How long should an engagement last? Jacob, of course, in the Biblical story waited seven years for Rachel. All records for swift courtship were probably broken at Leban, South Dakota, where Mr. E. D. Killen was enabled to marry Miss Mina King within two and a half minutes after first meeting her. Whether or not the lightning marriage proved a success is not recorded.

Next probably in point of high-speed wooing was the case of a couple in Indiana who became husband and wife less than half an hour after they had first been introduced.

Even the length of Jacob's waiting, says a writer in the Sunday Express, paled before the case of an English couple living in the lake district. The girl, although engaged while very young, positively declined to marry during the lifetime of her mother.

Fifty years later the mother was still alive. The engagement, however, continued, and the couple remained devoted to one another despite the passage of time. Then, alas, for the course of true love that had weathered half a century's waiting, the man became ill and died, his faithful fiancée nursing him to the end.

An engagement between two Swiss lovers which lasted for forty-five years had a happier termination. The man was engaged at twenty-one to a very beautiful girl, and soon afterwards emigrated to the United States, vowing he would not return to claim his bride until he had amassed a fortune of $20,000.

He finally succeeded, but it took him forty-five years, during which time more than 3,000 love letters were exchanged between the pair, his sweetheart waiting patiently all the time until he came and claimed her.

Waiting, however, did not win in the case of Miss Laura Heller, a pretty Pennsylvania school teacher, who recently sued Mr. Irwin S. Hillegass for $2,000 because of "the loss of twenty years' time—$100 for each lost year."

With an apparently complete understanding between the engaged couple all the time that they were to wed "quite soon," Mr. Hillegass, at the end of two decades, deserted his avowed sweetheart and married another.

Advertising Up-to-Date.

Our American friends evidently have not a monopoly of "hot air" in advertisement writing. Here are a few lines from an Australian advertisement announcing the appearance of Carpentier, the famous French boxer, in a new film:

Have you ever been punched and then been bathed in the smile worth a fortune? . . . Georges Carpentier smiles, and the heart of every girl within a radius of five miles of the G.P.O. gives an answering flutter; the flutter that means mischief begins. It's a wireless call to everybody. Georges Carpentier punches, and the earth is pushed five degrees off its axis, and probably blames Mars for it.

No wonder we find it difficult to understand Mr. W. M. Hughes' speeches if this is the kind of thing he reads when at home.—London Daily News.

As Matters Stand.

There is not a man in the Dominion of Newfoundland today, no matter his politics, his profession or calling, who does not desire heartily and sincerely to see the wave of depression subside and progress and industry come into their own again. The season of the year has now ensued when activity as of yore should be witnessed on every side; when the wharves and stores should echo to the hum and sound of labor at work preparing fish for market and unloading it from the numerous vessels making St. John's their headquarters. When the shops should be filled with busy customers and the hands hustling for dear life to satisfy the needs of the thousands of purchasers. Other years have marked these sights. What then has caused such a difference in 1920?

If credence is to be placed in the reports given out by dealers, and there is no reason to doubt the many statements made, all coinciding, the cause of the present slackness in trade and commerce is due to the non-arrivals of fish-laden schooners from the northward; is also due to the conditions imposed by the Fish Regulations, and may still further be attributed to the effect had by these enactments upon the European markets. Therefore the consensus of opinion agrees that the Fish Regulations are in the main solely responsible for the condition of things, as matters stand at the moment. The advocates of these restrictions on the other hand—and it may be noted that they are few indeed—do not subscribe to similar sentiments. Their contention is that were it not for the Fish Regulations, prices would be nowhere and conditions much worse than they are.

Examining into that expression of opinion what is to be discovered? Can anybody frankly and candidly admit that affairs could be much worse, so far as transactions in fish go, than they are? Where is the fleet of vessels usually seen in the harbor in other years at this time? True there is a fleet anchored, but it is a fleet with its usefulness impaired; a fleet of fish carriers, which, had ordinary conditions prevailed, would have now been on the Atlantic with valuable freights of codfish for our world markets, instead of remaining at anchor with barnacles growing on their bottoms, and giving no employment whatever to the men who so bravely dared the perils of war to transport our products overseas from 1914 to 1918. If the idleness of as fine a class of merchant vessels as any country possesses, only can be attributed to the Fish Regulations, then that one fact should be condemnation of their purpose and proof of their restraint upon trade.

There is not one soul amongst us who does not desire an improvement, and everybody is willing to do his or her best to bring about a much needed change. Not anybody takes delight in seeing suffering or want created. Rather would they do everything in their power to prevent it. But when we have people who should know better, going from Newfoundland to Canada and telling Canadian newspapers, thus giving their statements worldwide publicity, that "political manipulation" has been the means of holding up the trade of the Dominion and producing the present depression, it is time to enter a protest and avow that there is not one word of truth in that declaration. If there has been "political manipulation," the crime may well be laid at the doors of the Government, for never in the history of Newfoundland was there such legislation enacted that produced the effect wrought by the Fish Regulations of the Liberal-Reform

Government. North, South, East and West cry out against them, and curse them and their designs. It will be too late to change them after the evil has been done. The time, therefore, is NOW.

Strangling the Small Business Man.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I have read with much appreciation your series of articles on "The Tragedy of the West Coast," and must say that you have presented the facts as they have occurred, because of the Fish Regulations, with truth and painness. But you have so far merely touched the fringe. There is much more of which you, personally, have knowledge, and this we hope to hear about later. Any man who says that Coaker's Fish Regulations have not been disastrous to the West Coast, does not know what he is talking about, and should take a run up here to see for himself.

In the first place there is no one catching fish. Where formerly hundreds of skiffs and punts and dories were daily engaged, there are now not twelve. Why? It may be asked. Because there are no purchasers. Those who always bought do not see their way clear to take fish, considering the uncertainties of shipping, and the restrictions which have been imposed upon their trade. Those who have small lots on hand, taken in the way of barter, are not permitted to export their little parcels. The small business man is therefore being strangled financially, because the uncrowned king of Newfoundland has seen fit to have laws passed which bear harshly on all who are trying, in a small way, to make a living by trade.

During the summer months I collected a little lot of dry fish, amounting to about fifty quintals, for which I paid $9.00, in equal. I could not make any sale of this parcel here, but could have done so at North Sydney or Halifax. But when ready to ship, what was my astonishment when told that I was not allowed to export even that quantity without first taking out a license at a cost of fifty dollars, which on my 50 quintal lot would mean an extra dollar a quintal. I thereupon wired the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and his reply I now give you:

"If you are a bona fide fisherman you can export under one hundred quintals without license. If a business man you cannot export without a license."

Does anyone perceive the ridiculous position set up by the contents of the above instruction. Here am I, not in the fish business to any extent, collecting in the way of trade, perhaps a hundred quintals for the year, and yet I cannot export without first purchasing a license, and therefore must go to additional expense or hold over my little collection until such time as I am able to get rid of it to some larger exporter, perhaps at a loss. Is there any fair play about such a law? Is that a sample of the benefits we were promised last fall if we elected Mr. Squires, whose manifesto fairly dripped promises to the people?

There is no appeal from the ruling of Mr. Coaker, and we have to put up with his decisions, and stand all the losses we may incur from the imposition of his Fish Regulations. There are many men in a small way of trading on this coast, and if all of them receive similar treatment to mine, then there is but one thing left for us to do—close up and leave the country.

For years I sailed North and South Atlantic Seas and in no other country did I ever know such tyranny as prevails in Newfoundland to-day. The Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Brazilian or any other foreign government would not treat its subjects in such a manner as Newfoundlanders are being served by Mr. Coaker, and the sting of it is that we abide by him and let him do as he pleases. After giving up a lifetime at sea and settling down ashore to enjoy the pleasures of home, and starting a little business, this is the way we old seamen are being treated, while those who lord it over us are driving around in expensive motor cars and living on the fat of the land, while our hard-earned money is being wasted to pay them huge salaries and cover the cost of expensive foreign pleasures.

Mr. Coaker's Regulations have been the ruin of this shore, and there is not a man here who voted for the party, now dominated by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who does not regret the act.

Yours truly,
JOHN H. PIKE,

Channel, Oct. 12, 1920.

FREHLICH-WYLAN.

Last evening, at the residence of the groom, there was solemnized with the rites of the Jewish Church the matrimonial union of Miss Mae Frehlich, of London, England, and Mr. Philip Wylan, of Wylan Brothers, Water Street, St. John's. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Frehlich of the English Capital and niece of Mr. Samuel Frehlich, Proprietor of the Semi-Ready Clothing Factory, and of Mr. Joseph Frehlich. The ceremony was performed by the acting Rabbi to the Jewish community in this city, the impressive ritual, unchanged since the earliest days, creating a most profound observance of the marriage law. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. S. Frehlich, was handsomely gowned in fine white satin, with silver bodice and net overskirt, bordered with silver tassels, and wore a magnificent veil, crowned with orange blossoms, carrying a bouquet of mixed flowers. The matron of honor was Mrs. W. Wylan, the groomsmen being Mr. W. Wylan. Some hundred guests attended the ceremony at the home, at the conclusion of which all left in motor cars for the well-known hostelry of the Misses Furlong at Smithville, where a reception was held followed by a wedding banquet, provided and served by the hotel management. After supper Mr. S. Frehlich proposed the toast of the evening "The Bride," which was happily responded to by the groom. Mr. J. Burstein entertained the company with some very finely rendered songs, after which the entertainment became general, songs and dances following in rapid succession to the accompaniment of the Jazzola Orchestra. Close to midnight the happy couple motored to their home, corner of King's Road and Gower Street, accompanied by a few intimate friends.

The bride, who has won much popularity since coming to St. John's four months ago, received numerous costly and useful presents, and telegrams of congratulation and good wishes from far and near, among the former being a purse of English Sovereigns, the gift of her uncle, Mr. S. Frehlich. To Mr. and Mrs. Wylan, whose feet have now been placed on the rose-strewn path of matrimony, the Telegram desires to express all the felicitations of life.

Star of the Sea Officers Nominated.

There was a large attendance at the special meeting of the Star of the Sea Association held in the Society's Club Rooms, yesterday afternoon. After the usual routine business had been transacted, the nomination of the following officers took place: President, J. T. Martin; Vice-President, Francis Kenny; 1st Asst. Vice-President, John Murphy; 2nd Asst. Vice-President, Jas. Colford; Treasurer, Samuel Congdon; Asst. Treas., Leonard Payne; 1st Insurance Trustee, F. Leonard; 2nd Insurance Trustee, Bernard Hart; Chairman R.R. and B. Committee, H. J. Wall; Grand Marshall, M. Leonard; Deputy Grand Marshall, M. Miller; Secretary, W. F. Graham. The different offices were not contested, and the new officers will be installed at the next regular monthly meeting.

Harvest Home and Rally Day Service.

In spite of the bad weather yesterday, the Harvest Home and Rally Day Services in Gower Street Church were very successful. The front of the church was very prettily decorated with fruits and vegetables. Sheaves of corn-stalks were used about the choir-loft, with bunches of rowan berries. The harvest of the sea was brought to mind by the sight of the nets festooning the rear of the pulpit. The preacher in the morning was Rev. Dr. Bond. In the evening the pastor spoke from the text Kings II, 17: "Take this valley full of ditches; for thus saith the Lord, ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water." He emphasized the need of faith in all work for Christ—faith that obeys the Divine orders without understanding the Divine plan, and faith that waits the Divine reward without seeing the immediate outcome of its efforts. The choir which has lately been strengthened by the addition of new members, sang two anthems, which were much appreciated. In the course of his remarks the pastor took occasion to refer to the value of music in Divine worship, and to commend the work of the choir week by week. The Rally Day in the Sunday School was well attended, every teacher but one being present. The speaker was Rev. C. H. Johnson, and he gave some very interesting facts with regard to the history of Methodism in Newfoundland and in St. John's. It was announced that the opening of a special series of addresses would be given in the Young Men's Bible Class next Sunday when the pastor will speak of impressions from his recent trip.

Knights of Columbus Memorial School.

CORNER STONE LAID BY HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP.

The corner stone of the new school to be erected by Terra Nova Council Knights of Columbus as a memorial to the Brothers who died in the Great War, was well and truly laid at noon yesterday, Sunday, by His Grace Archbishop Roche. At the ceremony were Rev. H. T. Renouf, Bishop-elect of St. George's, Rt. Rev. Monsignor McDermott, Rev. Dr. Kitchen, Rev. Dr. Carter, Rev. Dr. Greene, Father Wilson, and Christian Brothers of St. Patrick's, St. Bonaventure's and Holy Cross Schools, Hon. J. D. Ryan, and the officers and members of Terra Nova Council, and the Columbus Ladies' Association. Brother Walsh, Chancellor of Dalton Council, Harbor Grace, was also present, coming as a delegate from that Council. Owing to the inclement weather the address was delivered in the Cathedral, His Grace speaking to the gathering from the High Altar, as follows:—

"The occasion which calls us together this morning is one of very great importance, and one that is destined to be memorable, not alone in the annals of the Order of Mercy, and of the Knights of Columbus, but also in the annals of our Church in Newfoundland. It is the historic occasion of the laying of the Corner Stone of the new Memorial School, the erection of which has been generously undertaken by the Knights of Columbus, Terra Nova Council. I say advisedly that it is an historic occasion, because the beginning of these new schools—the first schools for Catholic girls of any dimensions or magnitude to be erected for more than half a century—brings us back to the days of fifty, sixty and seventy years ago, when so many enduring educational structures were raised up by our forefathers.

On more than one occasion recently in speaking to different societies and Organizations, I have laid emphasis on the fact that all our educational endeavour for the past fifty years has been in the direction of providing adequate school accommodation for the boys of the city. Up to fifty years ago there was only one school for Catholic boys of any proportions in St. John's, and that was the old St. Bonaventure's. The coming, however, of that great teaching order, the Irish Christian Brothers, revolutionized education, as far as our boys were concerned. Within the past half century there have been built by our people as a recognition of the work of the Brothers, St. Patrick's Hall, Holy Cross Schools the O'Donnell Hall, the new St. Bonaventure's, and, I might add, the School of Industry at Mount Cashel. These buildings represent the contribution of our people for the past fifty years—that is to say, nearly two generations—to the cause of Catholic education. It will thus be seen that our boys at the present time are very well provided for, being taught in up-to-date spacious, well-equipped buildings, which are being improved all the time. During these fifty years, however, there has been nothing done to provide increased school accommodation for the girls of the city, with the exception of a few small class rooms, which was added to this Convent a few years ago, and the new school at St. Joseph's, recently completed. As a consequence, it may be said that all our girls are receiving their education in buildings erected sixty or seventy years ago. In the year 1850 the foundation stone of the Presentation Convent Schools was laid by Bishop Mullock, and the building was completed and occupied a few years later. Since that time, despite the increase in the population, and the constant increase in the number of pupils, there has been no additional school space added to that building, now seventy years old. It is true that the congestion of the girls' schools has been somewhat relieved from time to time by the opening of smaller schools in other parts of the city, but still the fact remains that the three principal girls' schools of the city, namely, the Presentation Convent, the Mercy Convent, and St. Patrick's, in which upwards of one thousand girls are being educated, have not been added to nor improved since the present Mercy Convent was built in the year 1856, or 64 years ago, for more than half a century. Then incidentally, I may mention, as a fact of some historical interest, that the Mercy Convent in St. John's was the first foundation of the Order of Mercy on this side of the Atlantic. At the time of its erection, school accommodation was provided for about one hundred pupils. To-day there are nearly four hundred pupils on the roll, and there has been practically no additional school space provided since; the inevitable consequence being that the conventional portion of the building, intended exclusively for the use of the Sisters, has had to be availed of for school purposes, for music and class rooms, to the very great inconvenience of the Community and the very great detriment of the pupils. These facts are mentioned to show the absolute necessity there is for these new schools, the Corner Stone of which is being laid to-day. It is neither just to the Sisters, who are devoting their lives to the noble avocation of teaching, nor to the public who are being taught, that their educational work should be carried out under such unfavourable conditions as at present exist.

To remedy to some extent these conditions the erection of the present building has been undertaken. It has been planned on the most modern lines expert educational advice as to its construction has been taken, and nothing has been left undone to ensure that when finished it will be a thoroughly modern school. This building is being erected by the Knights of Columbus, Terra Nova Council, and is intended to be a Memorial to the members of the Council who fell in the great war. The work itself, and its object are in every way worthy of the best traditions of the Knights of Columbus. That magnificent organization, ever since its inception, has been putting forth its efforts wherever branches of it are to be found, in many ways, to help the Church in Her preservative work, but its best, its largest and most far-reaching efforts have been in the cause of Catholic education. Both as a unit and through its individual councils it has done giant work in helping the church in her educational endeavors. It is also eminently in accordance with the spirit of the Order that this building should be a monument to the Council's heroic dead. Remembrance of the dead is a sacred Christian sentiment, which is beautifully enshrined in the Constitution of the Knights of Columbus. Every year there is a Solemn Memorial Service for the members of the Order who have died during the year, and surely those who have laid down their lives in a spirit of heroic sacrifice and devotion have special claims on the remembrance of their brethren. It would not be fitting that their names should be forgotten or that their glory should fade, and this stately structure, with its massive corner stone, on which stands out in bold relief the emblem of the Order, will serve to keep their names and their memories in sacred and lasting remembrance unto generations yet unborn.

I cordially congratulate this morning the Knights of Columbus on the enterprise they have undertaken. It is a huge task, but I have no doubt it will be nobly and faithfully accomplished by the members of Terra Nova Council, and if I might say one word to the Knights of Columbus, the youngest of our Catholic Associations, it is that they should seek and find inspiration in the oldest and most venerable of our Societies, the Benevolent Irish Society. Under the auspices of this splendid society which has done so much in the cause of Catholic education, St. Patrick's Hall and the O'Donnell Hall, in which six hundred or eight hundred of our boys are being educated, were erected, and just as the Benevolent Irish Society has placed us under obligation we can never repay, so also the Catholic people are now about to become debtors of the Knights of Columbus in a very large degree. Every parent whose boy is being educated in any of the institutions under the charge of the Brothers is under deep obligation, not alone to the Brothers, but to the Benevolent Irish Society, and every parent whose child will be educated in these new schools, will owe a debt of gratitude to the Knights of Columbus, as well as to the devoted Sisters who are their teachers. I wish this morning, on behalf of the Catholic people, on behalf of the Sisters of Mercy, and on behalf of the Church, to extend our gratitude to the Knights for this work they are about to undertake.

Nor can I omit a reference to an organization which has recently come into existence, namely, the Columbus Ladies' Association. I have already, at one of my meetings, formally welcomed them to the ranks of our Church workers, and I wish again this morning to assure them that the Church appreciates very much the efforts they have already made, and look forward to their being a valuable auxiliary to the Knights in the building of this school. We have already abundant proof of what can be done by organized efforts on the part of our Catholic ladies, in the splendid achievements of the St. Bonaventure's Ladies' Association, and the Presentation Convent Association, both of which bodies proved of invaluable assistance to the Church. I commend then this morning to the sympathy of our Catholic people the Knights of Columbus and the Columbus Ladies' Association, and I bespeak for them their generous assistance. After all, in the final analysis it is the Catholic people who must build these schools, and the Knights of Columbus are merely the medium through which their efforts will be made effective. I would impress upon our Catholic people the grave obligation that rests upon them in the matter of providing educational facilities for our children. We are pledged uncompromisingly to the principal of denominational education. Now, one of the necessary consequences of our adhesion to that principle is that we must build and maintain and equip our own schools, and if we would be just to our children and justify the system that we uphold, we must see to it that our school buildings are second to none in point of construction and equipment. That our people will recognize and realize their obligations in this respect, I have no doubt whatever.

I trust that the example and achievements of our forefathers will be an inspiration to us of this generation. When we consider the magnificent group of ecclesiastical buildings, of which this is the centre, which crowns the hill-top of our city, the Mercy Convent, the Presentation Convent Schools and Convent, the Cathedral, Palace, Library and the old St. Bonaventure's, and when we further consider that all these buildings were erected practically within the space of one or two decades in years gone by, we cannot but marvel at the powers of organization and the tireless energy of those great ecclesiastical buildings, Bishop Fleming and Bishop Mullock. They have handed down to us a magnificent, a glorious heritage of ecclesiastical and educational buildings, and it is for us to keep them up and hand them down to generations yet to come. This new building which we are beginning to-day, will be one at least of our contributions, one more link in that grand chain of buildings which stretches from St. Patrick's Hall on the left, to St. Bonaventure's on the right, and I hope when it is finished it will be worthy in every respect, in grace, in symmetry and in architecture, of the noble and venerable structures among which it is destined to stand. It only remains for me to wish the undertaking every blessing and every success, and to declare that the Corner Stone of the Knights of Columbus Memorial School has been well and truly laid.

The formal opening of the new school will take place about August next at which it is hoped that supreme Grand Knight James A. Flaherty will be present. The school will be conducted by the Sisters of Mercy. When completed this building will stand out as a fitting memorial to those gallant Knights who "fought the good fight" in every sense of the word.

W. P. HUPP, of Akron, Ohio, who says he would not take one thousand dollars for the good Tanlac has done him. Declares his health has been fully restored and that he has gained over 20 pounds.

"I would not take one thousand dollars for the good Tanlac did me," said W. P. Hupp, 839 Camden St., Akron, Ohio, for the past ten years a valued employee with the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. "I will always owe a great debt of gratitude to Tanlac," he said, "because it restored my health completely after everything else failed, and I have gained over twenty pounds. I can now eat better, sleep better and work better and I feel like a brand-new man." "Before taking Tanlac I suffered night and day from indigestion and my stomach was terribly disordered. I was nervous and weak and could neither eat nor sleep to do any good, seemed to be going down hill every day for six years. Finally, my condition became so rundown that I lost one or two days from work every week. But, now since my troubles have been overcome, I can hold my own with any man at the plant, and often after working hard all day, I put in overtime at night and feel none the worse from it. I just seem to be full of new life and energy." "After seeing the good Tanlac did me, my wife began taking the medicine and now she says she feels better than she has in years." "Tanlac certainly beats anything I ever saw in my life." "Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. ### From the Records of the Pioneer Society of Washtenaw County in Which Ann Arbor Is Situated

DR. ALVIN WOOD CHASE, physician, and author of the celebrated Dr. Chase's Receipt Book, was born in Cayuga County, New York, in 1817. He was a son of Benjamin Chase, a native of the State of Massachusetts. When Alvin was eleven years of age his parents located near Buffalo, N.Y., where he grew to manhood, receiving a very limited education in a log school house. His desire for knowledge was so strong, coupled with an ambition peculiar to his naturally energetic disposition, that he far outstripped his more dilatory companions of that humble institute of learning. When seventeen years old he left New York and found employment on the Maumee River, in the meantime devoting his spare moments to study. In 1840 he located at Dresden, Ohio, where in the spring of 1841 he married Martha Shutt, daughter of Henry and Martha Shutt, natives of New York. To this noble and gifted wife, and mother of his children, may be justly attributed much of the success that followed the doctor during his long and eventful career. From the days of his boyhood he entertained a wish to study medicine, and awaited with impatience the time when he might become a member of the fraternity. After many wanderings he settled in Ann Arbor, Mich., in 1856, where, to his intense delight, he was enabled vigorously to prosecute his studies in what was to be his future life-work.

He attended lectures in the medical department of the State University during 1857 and 1858, and graduated from the Eclectic Institute of Cincinnati, Ohio, in the meantime. Prior to 1869 he traveled over a large part of the United States, acquiring valuable knowledge, only gained by practical experience, which proved a good foundation for the wonderful book which afterward gained such great celebrity. The first edition of the work, like all subsequent ones, proved a great success, and soon placed the author on the high road to fortune. In 1864 he built the first part of that magnificent structure that still bears his name. It stands on the corner of Main Street and Miller Avenue, and is an ornament to our city. The building was completed in 1868. The business has so increased that at this time fifty persons found constant and remunerative employment within the walls of the building; and the hospitality and liberality of the Doctor to the employes of the institution, as well as to the needy ones of the city, were always subjects of admiring comment.

In 1873 he published his second book, of which many thousand copies were sold, and it is safe to say that fully one million and a half have found their way into the homes of this and foreign countries.

A few years only have elapsed since Dr. Chase was considered one of the most prosperous and well-to-do citizens of Ann Arbor; losses by thousands and tens of thousands of dollars greatly reduced his accumulations so honestly acquired. It is seldom the case that so much wealth is secured in so short a time by honest endeavor. He entered into no speculating schemes, but industriously pursued a very useful calling, bringing large profits without detriment to any, but, on the contrary, of great value to all. But, notwithstanding his losses, he did not lose his native energy and manliness of purpose, and stood before the community a conspicuous example of what energy, perseverance, and an indomitable will may accomplish. His liberality was remarkable, considering his income, though large. Many men, whose means were quadruple those of the Doctor did not give one-quarter as much for the advancement of education and benevolent enterprises.

He was once nominated for mayor of the city, but his business compelled him to decline the proffered honor. But the storms of life finally overtook him and swept with almost resistless fury around the now aged physician, and a few of the prejudices that characterize the human family found a resting place in the heart of this noble man; yet, when the last chapter shall have been entered in the book of life, the account will probably be balanced. The last earthly rites, have been performed, and the aged veteran laid peacefully away beneath the shadow of the silent tomb. It may truthfully be said that he lived with malice toward none and charity to all. A beautiful monument marks the place where his earthly remains are laid away, but his real and ever-enduring monument is seen in his life, devotion and usefulness to his fellow man.

L. DAVIS,
Secretary of the Washtenaw County
Pioneer Society.

Ann Arbor References

The following statements are given by my neighbors, to whom I had sent the eighth edition of my "Receipts," asking their opinion of its value for the people, most of whom had previously purchased earlier editions of the work, and several of them used many of the Receipts; and surely their position in society must place their statements above all suspicion of complicity with the author in palming off a worthless book; but are designed to benefit the people by increasing the spread of genuine, practical information:

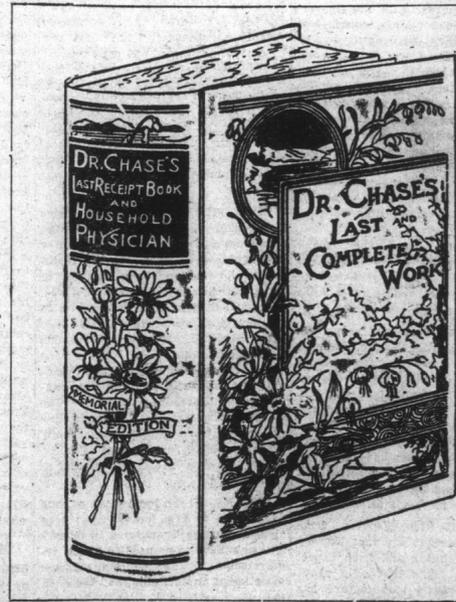

Hon. Alpheus Felch, Ann Arbor, Mich., one of our first lawyers, formerly a Senator in Congress, and also Ex-Governor of Michigan, says:—"Please accept my thanks for the copy of your 'Receipts,' which you were so good as to send me. The book seems to me to contain much valuable, practical information, and I have no doubt will be extensively useful."

A Winzell, Professor of Geology, Zoology and Botany, in the University of Michigan, and also State Geologist Ann Arbor, Mich., says:—"I have examined a large number of Receipts in Dr. Chase's published collection and from my knowledge, either experimental or theoretical, of many of them, and my confidence in Dr. Chase's carefulness, judgment and conscientiousness in the selection of such only as are proved useful, after full trial, I feel no hesitation in saying that they may all be received with the utmost confidence in their practical value, except in those cases where the Doctor has himself qualified his recommendations."

James C. Watson, Professor of Physics in the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich., says:—"I have examined your book of practical Receipts, and do not hesitate to say that so far as my observation and experience enable me to judge, it is a work which should find its way into every family in the land. The information which it contains could only have been collected by the most careful and long continued research, and is such as is required in everyday life. I can heartily recommend your work to the patronage of the public."

Rev. L. D. Chapin, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Ann Arbor, Mich., says:—"Allow me to express to you my gratification in the perusal of your book. I do not regard myself as qualified to speak in regard to the whole book, for you enter into departments in which I have no special knowledge, but where I understand the subject I find many things of much practical value for every practical man and housekeeper; and judging of those parts which I do not by those which I do understand, I think that you have furnished a book that most families can afford to have at any reasonable price."

Rev. Geo. Taylor, Pastor of Ann Arbor and Dixboro M. E. Church, Ann Arbor, Mich., writes as follows:—"As per your request, I have carefully examined your book of Receipts, recently issued, and take pleasure in adding my testimony to the many you have already received, that I regard it as the best compilation of Receipts I have ever seen. Several of these Receipts we have used in our family for years, and count each of them worth the cost of your book."

Phantoms of Ocean.

Wreck Spectral Ships Strike Terror to the Voyagers on the Seven Seas.
We often hear of ghost haunting houses, churchyards, and appearing at bedside, or coming when bidden at the seance, but less often do we hear of the spectres of the sea. Yet there are scores of well-authenticated cases of the appearance of phantom ships and boats, and these accounts, often related by persons of unimpeachable integrity, are so strangely consistent as to detail that one must perforce hesitate before dismissing the subject as moonshine.
The best know of all ocean spectres is the phantom ship known as the Flying Dutchman, which has been many, many times seen in the Pacific Ocean, and occasionally in the southern parts of the Atlantic.
The origin of the Flying Dutchman goes back to the sixteenth century when a Dutch captain, notorious for his profanity, swore during a terrible gale that he would round the Cape Horn in spite of all that the powers of good or evil could do to prevent him, even if he had to sail till Judgment Day.

In vain his crew implored him to give up his mad project, and the first mate was violently assaulted by the skipper and thrown overboard.
But a terrific flash of lightning struck the ship, killing the captain on the spot, and very soon the ship went down with all on board. But the vow that the captain had made still held good, and for ever he and his ship are doomed to continue the hopeless struggle of rounding the Cape in the teeth of a terrific storm.
To-day may be met a large number of sailors who have seen the phantom ship, and all agree as to certain details. Wherever the flying Dutchman is seen, she is always rolling and pitching as though a fierce storm raged, and this in spite of the fact that all around is calm and still. Around her mast plays a flash of blue lightning.
Her phantom crew are always dressed as were the sailors of the period in striped jerseys, and wearing red woolen caps, and are seen feverishly rushing hither and thither to carry out the commands of the choleric giant of a captain.

All the reports, too, agree as to style of the ship, all wood, very high in the poop, and other details in perfect accord with the ships of the late sixteenth century.
The Flying Dutchman was seen during the Great War by the entire crew of a British ship about a hundred miles east of the Cape.
"We were homeward bound," said one of the eye-witnesses, "and the sea was perfectly calm, and we were vainly trying to pick up a breeze. It was towards evening when daylight was just giving place to dusk. Almost suddenly on the bow side appeared a large wooden ship with the hindmost part of her hull very high, of the build of a bygone century.
"But the weirdest part of it was that she was being tossed up and down like a cork, straining every timber to make headway, and plunging as though in the teeth of a fierce gale. We could see the crew in a perfect frenzy carrying out the orders of a huge man who was evidently the captain.

"There was no sound, but suddenly a vivid flash of blue lightning seemed to play round her topmast, and at the same instant the vessel disappeared as though it had been wiped from the surface of the ocean. The next day our ship was torpedoed, and most of the crew drowned."
It is said that the Flying Dutchman appears only to the crew of a vessel that is doomed.
The crew of a Dutch ship, the Lily, told a tale very similar to the above, she having encountered the phantom ship near the Cape, and the next day the Lily was wrecked in a terrific storm, and all aboard, save four of the crew, were drowned.
The east coast of England is haunted by the apparition of a ship totally different from the Flying Dutchman. She has been seen off Cromer and the Yorkshire coast.
She is quite a modern vessel, but her masts, rigging, sails and hull are encrusted with ice and frost, long icicles hang from her rigging, and she ploughs her way through a mass of ice-floes.

Many phantom ships, too, have been seen off the coast of Cornwall and the east coast of Scotland. The Black Luger is a weird and terrible apparition that haunts the Scottish coast.
As her name implies, she is a lugger, and though her hull, masts, etc., are of the ordinary kind, all her sails are made of crape, black as soot.
She sails slowly and steadily straight ahead and without the slightest sound or divergence from her course, and passes through any other vessel that may be in her way. To see the sombre Black Luger, as in the case of the Flying Dutchman, means disaster, and bad luck, often death, overtakes those who encounter this weird ghost of the ocean.—Answers.

Just Folks

SIGNS OF FALL.
Trees all dressed in red and brown,
Gay skies hoverin' over town,
Early mornings thick with fog
Rising from the distant bog,
Grass so wet with falling dew
That your shoes get wet clear through
If you walk across the lawn
To some bush with blossoms on,
Martin houses vacant now,
And the wren house on the bough
Empty, too. These signs are all
Telling us that it is Fall.
Cattle through the early day
Closer to each other stay,
Keepin' warm, an' right an' left
Fields of all their wealth bereft:
Where but yesterday was gold,
Now is brown and black and cold;
In the orchards all the trees
Seem to stand an' take their ease,
We have claimed the fruit they bore,

Stripped them of their luscious store
And each bulging bin and stall
Tells us plainly it is Fall.
Roses that were proud and gay
Seem to want to get away;
Like a man who's borne the strain
Of stern duty's hard campaign,
And worn out by heavy deeds
Seeks the rest he sorely needs,
So the plants and vines appear
Tired and wan this time of year,
Just as though their strength was shrun.
By the beauty they have given;
Written large on Nature's wall
Now we read the signs of Fall.

THE care of a costly instrument involves the use of a polish so dependable as to be absolutely "above reproach". The fact that O-Cedar Polish is used for piano polishing in preference to all other preparations, by thousands of women, is as strong a recommendation as you could have for its use on less costly articles of furniture and on woodwork.

It is preferred in most homes, because it cleans as it polishes, producing a high, dry, lasting lustre and bringing out the beauty of the grain.

Produce and Provisions.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)
CODFISH.

Spain.—Very good reports have been received from Spain this week and all the old stocks of good Newfoundland fish have been disposed of. The S.S. "Sneyfield, with 32,400 quintals of Straits and Shore fish, has been despatched to Malaga and Alicante the past week. We hear of further enquiries and anticipate a good demand there. Several cargoes of Pogo, Shore fish have also been despatched to Portugal and Spain.

Italy.—Premier Squires and Mr. Hawes have been in Italy for about a week, and by last reports have made very little progress with the Consorzio. They had so much trouble last winter that they don't want to be caught again, and are insisting on Italian arbitrators to settle any dispute. If the Consorzio had confidence in our Advisory Board these matters could be settled quickly, but they say that it is impossible to work with men who seem to change their plans every second day. The latest wire from Premier Squires is a request that Mr. Hawes be appointed Sole Agent for Italy for special reasons that he mentions.

It would have been very much more to the point if we had asked Mr. Ragnoli what he wanted, instead of trying to make hard and fast rules for one of our best customers.

Greece.—There has been very little news received from Greece the past week, as no doubt the attention of fish buyers is concentrated on the anticipation of the arrival of the S.S. Eigen with 11,000 quintals, and the Auxiliary ship June with 10,000 quintals, which has been despatched direct from Labrador. News is expected daily of the arrival of these shipments. It is no doubt a keen race as to which will reach the market first.

COD LIVER OIL.—Reports from the foreign markets say that Norway oil is still declining and from expert statistics, we learn that only about half of last year's manufacture has been shipped out of Norway up to date. We heard of a sale of Refined oil on the spot at $1.00 per gallon and consider this the market value.

COMMON COD OIL.—Shipments are now arriving from the Outports. The quantity rendered this season is the smallest for many years as the livers were poor the early part of the summer. Besides this, the Shore fishery was below the average and experts say that the oil yield is at least one-third short of a normal year's supply. It is no wonder that the fishermen are holding back their oil for a higher price, but unfortunately there is no demand just now at any price.

PORK.—This week's advices indicate a quieter and somewhat weaker market. The price of live hogs and the price of corn continue to attract the attention of the entire trade. A good many expressions of opinion have been heard to the effect that the present attractive condition of the Corn Feed market will make for a heavier weight of Hogs, and that if the situation continues there will be an increase in the production. American domestic consumption continues large and the report shows some improvement. Mess Pork in the local market is $38.00; Short Cut Clear $44.00, Family $52.00, and Ham Butt $53.00.

BEEF.—The better grades of Choice Cattle show no change in the strong position noted last week. The lower grades, however, show some weakness, following an over supply of these qualities at the Packing Centres. The local demand for Beef to date is common with all provisions has been extremely dull. For various reasons Beef imports this Fall have been withheld, and it is likely that there will be a marked scarcity in Beef supplies as the season progresses. The St. John's quotations are unchanged and range from $23.00 for Family Plate, to $36.00 for Special Family, while Boneless (best) is quoted at $30.00.

SUGAR.—All the local stock of sack sugar held in first hands has been sold, and white Granulated in barrels will now have to be used to fill all requirements. The foreign market price keeps on declining, and the competition from all quarters of the world has drawn sugar in large volume to the U.S. market. These supplies in addition to the American Best Sugar crop now being harvested, result in an abnormal over supply of Sugar which swamp the market and force sensational declines from week to week. Local prices will remain unchanged possibly till the end of the year viz:—23 3-4 cents wholesale and 32 cents retail.

MOLASSES.—It was reported this week that molasses was being offered cheaper than the rates that prevailed all the summer. On enquiry, we find that buyers are refusing to handle this molasses as the quality is very inferior. Stocks held in St. John's today are small compared with other years, and from all we can learn prices are very firmly held. Fancy molasses is in very small supply, and the price holds at $1.65 per gallon and only a limited quantity is available. The molasses quoted at lower prices is said to have come from Trinidad, W. I.

POTATOES.—Prices are very low in Canada and the local market will be governed accordingly. The St. John's price is now $4.00 per barrel of 180 pounds, and in the outports we hear that the short barrel can be bought for $3.00 to $3.50, according to quality. It is likely that the price will still further decline to $2.50 in the outports by November, so that the public may count on cheap potatoes the coming winter.

APPLES.—The price of "gravensteins" still holds at $8.50 to $9.00 per barrel in the St. John's market. The fruit crop in Canada is exceptionally large, but the cost of barrels and the freight keeps the price from being 100 per cent. lower. Were it not for this, apples here would be down to $4.00 and $5.00. The "gravenstein" season is now on in full tide. The S. S. Sachem brought a reavy consignment this week from Halifax.

The Prince of Wales in New Zealand.

Should the Prince of Wales desire to report the result of his visit to New Zealand, he could not do better than follow the example of Jullius Caesar, who in transmitting an account of his victory over Pharoah, at Zela, in Asia Minor, wrote the memorable words, "Veni, Vidi, Vici" ("I came, I saw, I conquered"). The brevity of the report would fitly compare with the duration of the visit. There can be no gainsaying the fact that the Prince thoroughly captured the hearts of the people. The manner in which they turned out en masse, and the exhilaration of their reception, was a striking testimony of their loyalty and a tribute to the many pleasing attributes manifested by the Prince. The one defect of the tour, apart from its brevity, arose from the fact that no opportunity was afforded him of meeting his Masonic Brethren of the Dominion in open lodge convened. Had such provision been made it would have resulted in the largest assembly of Freemasons ever assembled in the Dominion of New Zealand. We are assured it would have been quite compatible with the wishes of our Brother, as he would have been assured of a dignified reception, which should have proved quite a relief from the over-bolsterous nature of the greeting he received from a section of men in the Capital City, together with the rude confetti-throwing by a number of irrepressible and excited females. The Craft had to be contented with the presentation of an address, but even then stipulation was made by the Minister in charge of the tour that no speech would be allowed. It will always be a matter of the deepest regret to the Freemasons of New Zealand that they have lost an opportunity which will never recur of fore-gathering with a Brother who, if he lives, will at some future time occupy the position of Grand Master of English Freemasonry.—New Zealand Craftsman.

A Spare Rib Episode.

According to reports made to the police, a woman of the West End, who is more than an amateur in the fighting line, visited a store on Hamilton Street, a few nights ago, having with her a tin full which she filled with spare ribs, without the sanction of the proprietress, and then attempted to take the receipts away. When passing through the doorway the shopowner held up the "purchaser" and a row followed in which the latter came off second best. Being the betrothed of a soldier and versed in warfare, she returned again with reinforcements and put the enemy to rout, finally getting away with the tin filled with the ribs. The battle, however, is not yet decided, and unless some cash is passed over to-day, the Magistrate will be called upon to render a decision as to who has won.

The Company has hopes of receiving some good local coal, but in the meantime will carry on with the anthracite. They will not close down on the last of the month as was anticipated.

Police Court.

A drunk was fined $2.00.
A drunk and disorderly who destroyed a suit of clothes belonging to a man who is staying at the same boarding house was fined $30, part of which is to go to the owner of the clothes—that is if the accused pays the fine.

The captain of a Bonavia Bay schooner was charged with smuggling a quantity of liquor during the past six months. Mr. Higgins, counsel for the accused, made an able plea for leniency in consideration of the fact that it was the first offence and that the authorities had confiscated the liquor, some 90 gallons, worth in the vicinity of $1,000. His Honor in imposing a fine of $200 said that as there were two other counts against the accused which would come before him on to-morrow, he would not impose the full penalty of the law. But he considered that the accused was in the business on a large scale, buying the stuff at St. Pierre for from five to seven dollars a gallon. There were risks in the business but handsome profits also in some cases, as he had heard that the price demanded in this instance was from twenty to twenty-five dollars per gallon.

Germany Shows the Way.

Russia has weighed Bolshevism in the scale of achievement and is beginning to see the hollowness of its pretensions, the baseness of its metal, Hungary, surfeited with defeat and weary of mediocrity, has succumbed to the guile of the Communists until the house of cards, built in a night, fell about her ears, and a revolution that "began with music ended with blood." Italy, infected with the cleverly propagated bacteria of unrest, coquetted with quacks and cure-alls for her fevered state until sanity returned.

Germany has had a hundred strikes during the last three months, and not one of them has lasted more than a few hours, while the output of her factories is increasing at a prodigious rate. The world is beginning to wonder what kind of machinery Germany has set in motion that halts strikes so quickly. What antidote has she discovered for the germ of universal discontent? Has she stolen a march on the rest of the nations in the realm of conciliation and pacifism, as she did in the world of the rattling sabre and the jack-boot.

Germany is making an entirely new and an astonishingly interesting experiment in social government. She has grasped the fact, which is only now slowly dawning on the British consciousness, that a parliament elected for imperial and political purposes is unsuited to deal with industrial affairs. Having learned this truth, Germany decided to put it into effect. With a stroke of the pen she dismissed Noke and his machine-gun methods, and a rub on the lamp of intelligence brings a new genie into being.

Germany has created an industrial parliament, separate and distinct from the Reichstag, which in true Teutonic fashion she calls the Reichswirtschaftsrat, and which has already assumed a definite constitutional position in the country. There is beginning to be a struggle for prestige and influence between the two parliaments.

To the industrial body are elected 326 members representing every branch of trade and industry, employers and employed. The Reichswirtschaftsrat has no legislative powers, but so great is its influence that no measure can be introduced in the Reichstag referring to industrial matters that has not received its official sanction. The Reichstag also refers to its rival all questions of industrial concern. Nothing is unconstitutional, nothing is secret.

This is Germany's contribution to the settlement of the world's greatest problem, and it puts to shame the selfish and puny efforts of the framers of the Council of Action.—Montreal Daily Star.

Costly Carpets.

The deal by which England secured control of the Persian carpet and rug industry is a good one for that country—that is, if the Bolsheviks do not overrun the land of the Shahs. The genuine Persian rug is the most valuable thing of its kind in the world, a really fine specimen fetching anything from five pounds to twenty thousand pounds. Shiraz and Ker-man are the chief centres of the industry, though the products of Meshed and Rejd are also held in high esteem.

The trade is largely in the hands of certain families, who have handed down the art and its secrets, from one generation to another. To the making of even one comparatively small rug, ten or fifteen years of patient labour may be devoted.

When The Germans Came in. In the reign of Muzaffer-ed-Din, however, this great and beautiful industry was threatened with extinction. This was when the aniline dyes of Germany burst upon an astonished world. These "split-your-eyeball" chemical products—German made rugs—found their way to Persia, and, incredible though it may seem, the beauty-loving natives took kindly to them, and in their favour the weavers abandoned the dyes that had been in use for thousands of years, and copied the appalling Hun designs.

Fortunately, the Shah had an artist's soul, and was also a good businessman. He saw that his country's carpet export trade was in imminent danger of being ruined by these aniline atrocities, and, under appropriate penalties—boiling oil, and so forth—he forbade the importation of the German dyes, or their use if already in the country, in the carpet trade.

To this day, however, the traveller may see in the Persian drawing-room the place of honour given to some abominable German hearthrug, while ancient Persian products, for which collectors would give their very souls, are scattered anywhere.

Spirited Away.

ROMANTIC AND TRAGIC STORIES OF YOUNG WOMEN WHO HAVE MYSTERIOUSLY VANISHED.

The mystery that recently surrounded the disappearance of three young ladies who left comfortable homes, and vanished as completely as if the "earth had swallowed them," recalls many a similar story, some with happy, others with tragic endings.

When Mary Rogers, a pretty cigar-seller of New York, left her home one day in 1840 to spend Sunday with some friends, no trace of her was found during many months of the widest and most exhaustive search until her body was found in the water near Sybil's Cave, Hoboken, bearing signs of violence.

And, although many arrests were made, her murderer was never found. It was this case, by the way, that suggested Edgar Allan Poe's famous detective story, "The Mystery of Marie Roget," with its very ingenious solution of the problem of her murder.

By a Boy's Curiosity.

And this is but one of many similar cases across the Atlantic, including that of a pretty Quaker girl, who left her home to be privately married, and was never seen again until her body was fished out of a well at Manhattan. Suspicion pointed to the man who was to have married, who had taken her away in his sleigh; but, although he was arrested and tried, the case broke down, and the secret of her death was never discovered.

To this day, too, the mysterious deaths of Annie Downey, a New York flower-girl, and of Sarah Cornell, for which a Methodist minister was tried and acquitted, have baffled all attempts at solution.

For a whole year Harriet Lane, a young Whitechapel woman, was missing, and all efforts to trace her proved futile until the cause of her disappearance leaped dramatically to light.

One day Henry Wainwright, an East End brushmaker, asked a boy named Stokes to help him to carry away from his shop a couple of heavy parcels, wrapped in black American cloth. With the boy's assistance, Wainwright carried the parcels as far as the church in the Whitechapel Road, where he left Stokes in charge of them while he looked for a cab.

During his absence the lad's curiosity impelled him to see what the parcels contained. He pulled the wrapper of one of them aside, and, to his horror, saw a human head—the head, as was later proved, of the missing woman, whom the brushmaker had brutally done to death to death a year earlier.

Hidden Under the Coal.

In the middle of October, 1877, Miss Hacker, a well-to-do and eccentric maiden lady, who lived at No. 4, Easton Square, vanished, and all attempts to discover her whereabouts were a complete failure. For eighteen months no trace whatever was found of the missing lady. Then, on May 9th, 1879, came a very dramatic scene in the drama of mystery.

On that day, while moving coals in the cellar of No. 4, a man "suddenly struck against something that seemed like a sack of clothes, and, on closer examination, proved to contain a mass of human remains."

It held, in fact, all that was left of the unhappy Miss Hacker, and evidence of foul play was proved by a rope tightly drawn around the woman's throat.

When Mrs. Thomas was returning from church to her home in Park Road, Richmond, she was accosted and spoken to by a friend, and from that moment she was never seen alive again. Three days later a man, walking along the towpath at Barnes, saw a box floating in the river, rescued it, and found that it contained fragments of a human body packed in a brown-paper parcel.

Some weeks, however, elapsed before it was discovered that the mutilated remains were those of the missing lady, and that she had been murdered by her maid-of-all-work, Kate Webster, who, after burning parts of her mistress' body, had packed the remainder in a box, and had flung them into the river from Richmond Bridge.

Her Lover Was Found Guilty.

A good many years ago Hannah Brown went, one Christmas Eve, to Carpenter's Buildings, Camberwell, to dine with a man friend, called Greensore, to whom she was engaged. She never returned to her home, and for three months her disappearance baffled all the ingenuity of the police to solve it, until one day a bricklayer found on the road to Kilburn a package, wrapped in sealing, which contained portion of a woman's body.

Within the next two months other portions were picked up in the Regent's Canal and in Camberwell, and it was at last possible to identify the scattered remains as those of the missing Hannah Brown. Greensore was arrested, found guilty, and paid the well-earned penalty of his crime.

Such are a few of many cases in which mysterious disappearances have had a tragic denouement. Happily, there are very many more in which, after years of oblivion, the missing women return to life, and to their friends no worse for their adventures.—Answers.

Sniping Serects.

Told by The Man Who Taught Them.

When Major Hesketh-Prichard went to France in May, 1915, he took with him a very considerable knowledge of telescopic-sighted rifles.

From then onwards Major Hesketh-Prichard took an intense interest in sniping. He considered that it was a fine art, which should be taught.

In his recently-published book, "Sniping in France," he tells of his efforts to get the authorities to share his views, and of how, at last, he succeeded. And the first Army School of Sniping, Observation and Scouting came into existence.

Once the school got going it did absolutely invaluable work. Men were trained to use and appreciate their telescopic sights, and also instructed in observation and shooting. Soon the intelligence authorities began to recognize that men who had passed out from the first Army School of S.O.S. as snipers were also handy as "finder out" of what the enemy was doing.

One remarkable tale of observation work concerns a new type of periscope which the Hun started using. At first we were happy in destroying them, until one day a sniper discovered that with his telescope he could see, in the enemy periscope, the reflected shoulder strap of the man using it! We ceased destroying those periscope numbers—numbers refer to regiments, and it is vitally important for an Army Commander to know how the enemy troops are distributed along his line.

Snipers usually worked in pairs—one man "observing" with a telescope, the other shooting in accordance with his directions. The strain to the observer's eyes was so severe that every twenty minutes during their spell of duty these two changed jobs.

Difficulty was often experienced in ascertaining whether a hit had been made or not. One man declared he had killed a German because he "threw up his hands and fell back." This rarely happened, as a fatally wounded man usually crumpled up and slipped forward.

Another sniper felt certain he had scored a hit because he heard cries for stretcher bearers. On being questioned he admitted that he had no idea of what "stretcher bearer" was in German.

On one occasion during the last advance of the Canadian Corps a single sniper put out of action a whole battery of 5.9 guns, shooting down one after another the men who served it.

The sniper was a very highly-trained product of the War. He had to be a first-class shot, an accurate observer, and a good judge of distance, wind and light. And his job was no "cushy" billet.—Pearson's Weekly.

This Week's Wisdom.

It's a wise child that knows its own mother—in a 1920 bathing suit.

A man's "I love you" by the seaside is worth about as much as a Bolshevik "I.O.U."

Two things that can always be found in the dark: The sharp edge of a door—and a pretty girl's lips.

Somehow, it's awfully hard for a girl to fall romantically in love with a man while he is carrying an umbrella and wearing goloshes.

Why should any man have an aversion to marrying a flirt? A girl who has been kissed before is much less likely to wonder after marriage, how other men make love.

Perhaps!

The young couple sat in their six-by-eight "garden."

"I see by this medical work," said the lady, "that a man requires eight hours' sleep and a woman ten."

"Yes," agreed the man; "I've read that somewhere myself."

"How nice!" said the lady at that. "You can get up every morning and have the fire made and the breakfast ready before it is time for me to get up!"

One thing essential in your Winter Coat is QUALITY. One has to wear their Winter Coat for many months, and to stand against this you require the best of material in it.

We have carefully selected our stock of Winter Coatings and feel we have goods that merit your approval. You can purchase enough excellent material to make a coat for $24.00, and if you wish we can make it up for you, and deliver the finished garment in a week or less if necessary. The material is equal in quality to that in coats which retail at $70.00 to $90.00.

We ask you to come in and see the goods, examine them, get samples and prices, compare with others, and come back and purchase the goods.
