IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences
Corporation

CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series.

CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.

Coloured covers/
Couverture de couleur

Covers damaged/
Couverture endommagée

Covers restored and/or laminated/
Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
Cover title missing/
Le titre de couverture manque

Coloured maps/
Cartes géographiques en couleur
Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black)/
Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
Coloured plates and/or illustrations/
Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
Bound with other material/
Relié avec d'autres documents
Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin/
La re liure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distortion le long de la marge intérieure

Blank leaves added during restoration may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming/
Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent daris le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.

Additional comments:/
Commentaires supplémentaires:

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.Coloured pages/
Pages de couleur
Pages damaged/
Pages endommagées

Pages restored and/or laminated/
Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
Pages discoloured, stained or foxed/
Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
Pages detached/
Pages détachées

Showthrough/

Transparence
Quality of print varies/
Qualité inégale de l'impression
Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire

Only edition available/

Seule édition disponible
Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image/
Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure. etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon á obtenir la meilleure image possible.

This item is filmed at the reduction ratio checked below/
Ce document est filmé au taux de réduction indiqué ci-dessous.

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library Division
Provincial Archives of British Columbia

The images appearing here are the best quality possible consldering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and anding on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol $\rightarrow$ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol $\nabla$ (meaning "END"). whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'oxemplairs filmó fut raproduit grace da géndrosité de:

Library Division
Provincial Archivas of British Columbia

Les images suivantes ont $th reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tonu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmb, ot on conformite avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux cont la couverture en papier ast imprimbe sont filmós en commençant par le premier plat ot en terminant soit par la derniare page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmde en commençant par la premiàre page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaitra sur la derniàre image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole $\rightarrow$ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole $\nabla$ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, otc., peuvent ôtre filmés à des taux de reduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour dire raproduit on un seul cliche, il est filmé a partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, ot de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

| 1 | 2 | 3 |
| :--- | :--- | :--- |
| 4 | 5 | 6 |

noep
972.13

428

THE ## WESTERN LAW TIMES.

Vol. II.
JUNE, 1891.
No. 3.

Recorder Adam Thom.

In our former sketeh of the life of this very able man, so inseparably comnected with the early history of this comntry, we expressed a desire to obtain his portrait. We have, we are very glan to say. been able at last to do so, and have had the same reproducel for the benctit of the profession and the pullic. We can inform our readers that the likeness is a faithful one, chosen for that special reasom, and is taken from an amateur photograph of Dr. Thom when "at ease" in his sitting room, and in his iend yenr. We take this opportunity of supplementing the particnlars contained in our former notiee. Adan Thom was bom at Breehin, Forfarshire, on 31st of Angust, 180:, and was the seemul son (his elder lnother Thomas dying in infaney) of Andrew Thom, of Leith, merchant, by his wife Elizalreth, daughter of the Rev. Thomas Bisset, 1). D. St. And., minister of Logierait, Perthshire, by a daughter of the Rev. Thomas Tullideph, 1). D., Principal of the United Colleges of St. Nalvarlor aml St. Leonards, St. Amitews, 17:39$17 \%$, Moderator of the Kirk of scotland in 1742, and one of His Majesty's ehaplains 1761-1737. He married, first, a langhter of the Rev. fieorge Bisset, A. M., Uilny, Therleenshire, and sister of the late Rev. Janes Bisset, 1). D., minister of Bourtic, Alerdeenshire, imul Moderator of the Kirk of Scotland in 186: ${ }^{2}$, by whom he had no issue ; and, second, in 1839, Miss Anme blachford, by whom (who died 23rd of danary, $187(\mathbf{i})$ he had two children-- Fitunces, who died in infancy, and Adam Bisset Thom, boon巳ud of Augnst, 1843, at Lower Fort Gary, Man., and now living at ( ialt, Ontario, munaried. Adam 'Thom's yomger brother, John, married, tirst, Margaret, daughter of Alexamber Cant, Cathness ; and seemul, Miss Ameha Giadner, John Thom died in Cleveland, Ohio. Of his two sisters, the elder, Ftances, maried hos comsin, Alexander Bisset, of Leith, Scotlimd, shipmaster, and died inlses; the yonuger, Alisom, muried the late Hugh Cant, of ( falt, and diad in 1579 .

The 2 Ist day of February, 1890 , is a date of exceptionall significance, in the legal history of Western Camala. On that lay, at the whancel age of eighty seven, in Tomriugton icgure, Lomion, died Adim Thom, LL. D., the lirst Recorler of Rupert's Land, and the father of the Beneh mad Bar of Western Canada. He was low in hrechin, and educated at King's College, Aberdeen, whence he graduated II. A. in 18:2. About the year ISis:2, he cigrated to Comala, and in 1833 established and was first editor of the Settler. He was subsequently editor of the Montreal Mould in IS 36-3s, read law in Montreal with Mr. James Charles Grant, and was called to the bur of Lower (amalia in 18:37. The celebrated report of the Eat of Durham, on the state of British North America, was dawn up by Mr. Charles Butler, with the assistance of Mr. Whom ; in fate according to the Late Times of March last, 1890, Mr. 'Whom was considered to be the chief anther of the report. Under the nom de plum" of "Camillus," he wrote the memorable "Anti-tallic Letters," alliressed to the Furl of Gosforl, (insermor-in-Chief of the Cimandas. ${ }^{*}$

Some few years after the establishment of the "(iowornor and Comotil of Assimibsia," it became apparent to the Hudson Bay Company, that judicial procedure should be instituted in Rupert's Lamb, on a more sub. stantial basis, and in a more efficient manner, than hel been the case in the pant. Accordingly, the General Quarterly Combs were formally establisher l in 1S:39, and Mr. Whom arrived in the spring of that year at Red River, and entered upon his duties as Recover of Rupert's Lam, with a salary attivehed to the office of $\mathrm{t}_{\mathrm{a}}\left(0^{\prime}\right.$ ) per ammo. In addition to the Recordership, he was the legal adviser to the Governor of Assiniboin, who was instructed to be guided by Mr. 'Thou's advice in matters of hans. He was also senior member of the (Governor's Comeil, and, as such, virtually presided at the general court. The difficulties of his position were many and of no trifling nature. The settlers persisted, wend perhaps they might be exensed for doing so, in looking upon him, as not only the Recorder, but the paid servant of the Howson's Bay Company, and while none ventured to impeach his nurghtness and integrity, yet they maintained that, be he never so impartial, his interest being inseparable from that of the company, he could not be completely anbiased in his holdings. Be this as it may, there can be no doubt that he conseientionsly discharged his duties in a mimer that could scarcely be more satisfactory umber the existing eircmastances, which required no little degree of tact. Events progressed with as little friction as could be expected, till the famous trial of finillame Sayer, who in 18t9) was charged with thanking furs with the lydians. The display of armed force by the French half-breeds during the trial, and the demonstration which took place after it, brought matters to such a crisis that, in order to avoid a collision, Mr. Whom retired from the bench till some time in 1 sion. For the space of about a year justice was administered by Major Caldwell, the (Governor of Assiniboin. A very complicated case of great importance-Foss r. Prlly-having arisen, Mr. Whom again resumed his office for the purposes of the trial. The (iovemor, however, disagreeing with Mr. Whom on his finding, probably because he would not find is the Governor wanted, manged either to secme his permoment removal on to fore him to resign. He then, till 1 sit-about for years-arted as the clerk of the court over which he hal formerly presided. and with the same salary. In the beginning of September of that year, he left Red River with his wife and som and returned to scotland, sating from
*
"Anti-Sallic Letters addressed to thu Eave of sasford.
 12 nice. 226 pp. ilontical, 1836

York Fiectory on the ISth of October hy H. B. ship Priuce of Wales.* In ISTo he receivel the homorary degree of LL. D. from his old miversity. His lonsy life did not prevent his retaining an interest in his former fiterary career, or from pursuing his studies, for in lsts he published in work entitlend The Chronoloty of Prophery. It will not he out of phace to make a few extracts from emtemponary writers ind travellers in regarl to him. Major J. Wesley boudt who visted Red River, speaks of him as "a very lealing man," who was " very atctive, energetic, and possessen of emsideralle talent." Bishop, Momutaint fomad him "an exceediagly able man, possessing a varied range of mformation and deeply engagel, hatterly, in hillical stulies." Hea. Ross $+\dagger$ whe eonsidered the appointment of a Recorder rather in the light of a mistake, and was sometimes opposed to Mr. Thom, yet states that he was a "gentleman of talent, and high attaiment in his profession." The Rev. John Ryerson says that he was "a gentleman of learning and superion athility in the legal profession."\$ Hargrave thus feelingly refers to him: " 1 eamot el se this cursory glane at the official career of the pioneer of the law in the Real River Nettlenent without stating that at the elose of his long and often umpuiet sojourn of fifteen years in this singularly sitnated phace, he left belind him the reputation of grent ability, and of kindly hospitality in his private relations anmeng thore of his aequaintances hest able to appreciate the former, and who haul shared in the latter." Mr. Thom is principally known to the legal profession ly his carefuland elabonate judgment on the jurisdiction and powers of the Hudson Bay Company, delivered in the celehrated ease of Jianes Cahler, on the 17th of Angust, 1845, eomtained in one of the oll reoorrl books of the Quarterly Court. This julgment is of much value, aul is entitled to more weighty consideration than it has so far received : doultitess the fact of its never having been printed is mainly responsible for this Quite irrespective of the merits of Mr. Thom, an especial interest attaches to him became of his having leen the first lawyer in Rupert's Land, and of the unique position he oreapied. A halo of romance is thrown round his name, when we pause to think of the vast extent of his juriscliction, and the wikd and peeculiar people over whom that juriscliction was exercised, and that to the extent of eapital punishment. How wonderful the change since then ! Mr. Thom had been for so many years a stranger to this esuntry, that his mame was but rarely mentioned, even in legal circles, and most of those who thought of him regarded him as no longer among the living. Nome the less is he entitled to a prominent pace in the early history of Rupert's Land, whose hest interests he faithfnlly strove to serve. The members of the har of Western Cuadia may congratulate themselvess that they have Mr. Thom as their precursor ; and it is no disparagement to the [^0]becoh to say, that his life will hear favomble eomparisom with any judge who has succeded him. - Weateru L. ir Times, May, Is90.

In the winter of 1882, while staying in Lomilon, which the subject of this sketch used facetionsly to call "the wen of the worll," the writef very often met a retired old gentleman frequently known as "Julge Thom," who had more than 40 years before made his entree to Red River Settlement as first Recorler of Rupert's Land. At the tine of meeting in Lomblon, the Julge hatd entered upon bis eiglitieth year. He was tall, and, though walking with a slight stoop, was of commanding presence. He was what people nsually call a man of marked imdiviluality. His opinions were all formed : he had views on any matter that cams up, for disenssion ; and was very fond of a talk with a passing friend. In conversation with the old gentleman, it would he at once noticed that he had a large fund of information, and to any visitor from Manitola it was surprising to see how the lapse of 30 years absence from the comntry hat not efficed a line from momory in regat to the alfaits of all the families of that time resident in Red River. In fact, Judge Thom had a mavellous mind for cletails. Some wonld no doult have called him lonfuacions, hut to most he was a very interesting man. Dr. 'Thom's Aberdomian accent had not been greatly softened by his colonial residence, nor by his sulnsequent sojourn in Lomdon. In speech amd incas the Julge was a strong man, and it will be our plasing daty this evening to have the outlines of his somewhat eventful life, which emden a little more than two months ago.

Alam Thom was horn in Brechin, Forfarshire, on the 31st August, 1802, and had the remembance to the last of having seen, in his thirl year, the great rejoicing that took place after Nelsom's great victory at the battle of Trafalgar, Octoher olst, I80. . In the yar 1819, young Thom entered King's College, Aherdeen, where he was in suceessful stment, aml grathated in 1824 with the degree of Master of Arts. It was in the secomd year of his eomrse at Aheregen that he met with one who, far away on the plains of Rupert's Land, was to be his intimate friend and compmaion, whom indeed he was to call his "alter ego," 'This was John MeC'allum, of whom we shatl speali more fully, and who it will he rememherel fommed the sehool, which became in time St. John's (ollege in this city, scotland was then, as now, semting up its young men to the great metropolis, which emtains more scotehmen than Edinhorgh : and in 182. both Thom and his fellow-student Mechalmm fomm themselves eaming their bread there as chassical masters in sehools at Woolwich and blackheath respectively.

Ahout this time, a great outfow of the british people was taking place to the New World. In the year 1831, upwarls of 30,000 people left the British Iales for (analat. Over pressure of population and political diseontent were mo doult the chiof factors in this great emigration. In the follow. ing year, a popular movenent to (amala was heared in the south of England by Lomd Egremont, and there ships rarion the Sinssex colony to the St. Law rence. To the enterprising mind of young Thom the oppartmities said to be atlorded by Canada were a great attraction, amb so taking the last ship of the season (1832), the "Rosslind," from Lomion, after a rough passage, the vessel even roming agromid at Anticosti in the Nit. fawrence, the young adventurer reached Montreal. (arried away by the New Work fever in the foilowing year, his friend, Mccallum also acceptem the task, umder the patronage of the Rev. David Jones, the Mudson Bay Chaplain at Red River, of fommding a boarding school for the children of the Hudson Bay company otheers and others at the hemduarters of the eompany; and sailed ly the company's ship early in 18:33 to come ly way of Hudson Bay, to the scene of his future labors. Young Thoni established in Montreal a paper catled The Seftlor, of which he was the chief editos and principal eontributor, aided by some members of the " beefsteak ('luh)," which then existed there, of which the late James Charles Grant was one. He also entered on the study of law in Montreal, and with such diligence, that having his time shortened by one your becalle of his degrees, he was almitted to the Bar of Lower Camula in the year 18:37.

Tor any of Mr. Thom's friemls it was evident that there was in him to the end of his life a strange restlessness of disposition. It agrees eompletely with this that he should not have settled down to the rontine of a lawyer's life. His disposition led him to take great interest in public atfairs. He was in mental characteristics something of an indepemlent thinker, and yet his conclusions were usmally mather staid and orlinary. His mental bias was evidently that of a radical, while his social disposition led him to somewhat eling to prevailing ideas and enstoms. In method, he was a radiual; in fact, he was eonservative. It will be necessary to hear in mind this somewhat striking inharmonionsmess, in order to understand some of the epiamles of his life. Affairs in Montreal at this time were in a strained condition. It was shortly before the rebellion of 1837 . The British colony in Lower Canada held the reins of power ; the French Cimalians were in a highly dissatisfied state. Louis Papinean was stirring up his French eompatriots. In his seditious career lie came out bollly for Republican principles. "The time has gone by," said Papinean, " when Europe conld give momarchs to America. The epoch is approaching when America will give republics to Europe." Now Adam Thom, though, no doulst sympathizing with the just claim of the French Canaliuns for self goverment, was intensely British in feeling, and therefore entered with great ardour into the disenssions then going on. Well educated, fond of society, which in Montreal was entirely mulor the control of the ruling powers, and with his eareer to make, the yonng lawer threw himself into, the worly warfare, and wrote the Anti-Gallie Letters, signed "Camillus," remembered for many a day for their anti-French fervor amb power ; and also those signed "Auti-Bureancrat," eriticising the petition of the revolutionists of Lower Canadi, presented to the British Honse of Commons; both of which series of letters were afterwards phblished in separate form. For a time he ocenpiel the position of editor of the leading English journal of Lower Canada, the Montreal Merahl. His prominence as a publicist naturally drew to him the attention of the Earl of Durham, who arrived in Cunada on his mission of pacification on May 29th, 1838 . This brilliant mobleman, whose manliness and earnestness in assailing the existing abnses in Canada called forth from a French-Cimalian writer the aeknowledgement that "he was one of the truest friends misruled Conala ever hal," and who did more for Canaln in the short six months of his stay in the New World than uny other Gioverno-(ieneral in his full term, hal the faculty of associating with himself men of the greatest ability. As to the great report, which was, at the time, leseribed "us one of the nblest and most important state papers of this age," Justin MeCarthy says of him in his "History of our Own Times," "His policy for the Cimmas was in great snecess. It established the prineiples of a colonial govermment." With him on his stafl Lord Durham had bought over, as secretaries and assistants, three men of exeeptional ubility-Mr. Chates Buller (afterwards the Right Hon. Charles l3uller, member of the British House of Commons); the brillinnt though somewhat wayward, Elward Gibhon Waketield : and 'Thomas 'Turton, a very clever barrister. To this group of able assistants the young lawyer, Alam 'Thom, was alded, and in the train of the great Liberal Statesman he returned to Great Britain in the antumn of 1838, where he spent the winter in London.

In 1835 the Hulson's lay Company received hack from the Earl of Selkirk's heirs the transfer of the District of Assiniboine, which had been sold to the Earl in 1811. As the population of the Settlement had grown by this time to ubont 5,000 souls, it was deemed wise to have established some simple form of legal institutions. A comncil of fifteen members uppointed by the Hudson Bay Company met at Fort Garry on the 12th of Felorury of that year, and passed certain orlinances. Among these was one dividing the settlement into four distriets, and establishing a quarterly court in each of these empetent to deal with small amomits. Wach of these courts was empowered to refer any case of doult or difficulty to the Court of Governor and Comucil of Assiniboine, as the Red River Legislature and judieial borly was callal. The establishment of a Court of Appeal, such as had been deciden on, and the fact that the Governor of the Colony was sometimes a trader and at other times a military ofticer, led the Company to emsider the necessity of appointing a traned lowyer to adjndieate in sueh cases as might arise, and to give legal advice to the Company in its complicated business. Alexmuler Ross argues at some length against the need of this, but his reasons show he had little eomprehension of the principles on which alone communities ean advance. Sir feorge Simpson had met the yong lawyer and political writer in Montreal, and offered Mr. Thom, on the completion of his engagement with Lorl Dmona, the new julgeship thon decided on; and, neeordingly, the first Recorrler of Rupert's Lami, or he is also called the President of the Red River Conrt, left England, came ly way of New York, mad reached Fort (iarry in the spring of 1839 . Sir George Simpson was credited with great shrewiness in making the appointments for the Hurson Buy Company. It is evident from the very considerable salary-t'00 sterling a year-paid the new judge at a time when incomes were ridiculously low on Red River, as well as from the manimons opinions of Ross, Bishop Mountain, Rev. John Ryerson, and dames Hargave, the historian of the Hulson bay Company, that Adam Thom was a man of decided ability, upright character and very extensive reading. at would seem to one now that a lawyer who had practised longer at the bar, and who had not been so promonnced as a pulbicist in Montreal, would have made a more impartial julge; but the fact that for ten years he adanistered law in the courts without complaint, would seem to show that the troubles, which arose in the bater yeurs of his julgeship, arose rather from the inevitable conflict between the Company and the people than from any fanlt of his.

We turn aside, for a little, to book at the career of Mr. 'Thom's college fricud, John McCallum, who, as we have seen, came in 1833 to Red River, to establish what to-day has beeome St. John's College, with its attiliated schools; and it may be premised that in him we haveone of the truest and most practical men of the old Red River Settlement. With the aid of his superior, Rev. Mr. dones, buiklings were erected between the southwest comer of the present St. John's churchyard and the river bank. In the year 1836, Mr. MeCalhm married the daughter of Chief Factor Charles, of the H. 13. Co. 'The sehool steadily grew, and five yen's after its founding Rev. Mr. Jones returned to England. Mr. McCallum then became bead of the institution, so that, when the old friends from Aberleen met at Red River, the one, Julge Thom, was the head of the legal, the other, McCallum, of the the educational interests of the wide extent of Rupert's Land. Originally, the boarding. school had been begun under the anspices of the Church Missionary Society, but at the time of the visit to Red River, in 1844, of Dr. Mountain, Bishop of Montreal, a change had taken phace, for he says, "It is now condueted by Mr. McCallum on his own aeeomit with the help of an allow. ance from the company. It is really a nice establishment, mil the premises attached to it have more neatness and finish than is common in young and remote settlements. The youths have a separate garden for their own amusement." Mr. MeCdlum lud by his patience und industry taken such a lold on the commmity, that on the visit of the Bishop of Montreal it was deemed advisalde to ordain him, which event took place on the 7 th of July, 1844. Mr. Mc'allum's duties not only included the school but for the rext three years the incumbency of the parish chareh, which then reckoned amongst its hearers all the people of Kihboan. Julge Thom had for several years taken up his aboile at Lower Fort Giarry. In the year 1846, the Brit. ish Government, heing in the midst of the contention with the United States over the Oregon question and probably on aceount the enforcement of the Company's elaims, thought it wise to send out the 6th Royal regiment to Red River. The Lower Fort being required for the troops, Judge Thom was compelled to seck quarters elsewhere, and seems to have lived, for a year, three or four miles to the north of the fort. In 1847, he purchassed the house, then just built by Chiof Factor Charles, now known as Bishop's Court, the seat of the Metropolitan of Rupert's Lami. Judge Thom refers with peeuliar pleasure to the changes which hat made him "door neighbor" to his old friend McCalhm, " with mothing hut a paddock between." The school was now at its height for there were in it more than fifty paying pupils, inchoding girls. From it cime A. K. Ishister, one of the most distinguished men borm in Rupert's Latnl, and to the "McCallum schowl" members of the older generation of Red River settlers look hack with fond atlection. Sial indeed was it for edueation and religion on Red River that . Mr. MeCallum died in 1849. Julge Thom became his expentor, and Bishop Amdersom, the birst Bislop of Rupert's Laml, urived just in time to perform the funemal services of the worthy teacher.

On Mr. Necallum's death, the school immertiately began to decline. Bishop Anderson was so busy with the other duties of his oflice, that the institution was suffered to hanguish. In 18.3.5, a re-organization was attempted, a mumber of the leading people of the comitry were formed into a eollege haral, the mane of st. Fohn's College was chosen, and the cont of ams, with the beantiful motto, " la 'Thy Light shall we see Light," anlopted. In thee or four years, the want of success compelled the closing of the college. In 186:i the present Bishop of Rupert's Land arrised at Red River. The Mec'ullum school buildings had hecome a rain. On his leawing on his tirst journey in his diocese, the bishop gave orlers that they should be puiled down. 'This was partially dome, but the central building was thought good enough tw he preserved. It was necordingly spared, and those who have come to Manitolat even in recent years may remember the hoose oecupied by the Rev. Sammel Pritchard-the remant of the McCallam buildings. Bishop Machray refommed St. John's College in 1860 , from which time it has had an ever increasing and prosperous existence. In memory of Mr. MeCallum, his widow and daughter presented at varions times to St. John's College an excellent anemometer, a good microscope and other instruments, ete. Judge 'Thom always took a deep interest in st. John's College, being one of its homony fellows: nud was also a bencfactor of the Manitoba (I'reshyterian) College.

From his high position and public sympathies, Judge Thom became n most influential man in the Red River Settlement. He had a marvellons gift of languages. He was exceedingly appoachable, and his ardent temperment led him to do all sorts of kind services for those who sought his assistance. When the Bishopric of Rupert's land was fommled, he beame the Registrur ; when the Kildoman church wanted a deed, he drew it up, and made it so firm in its provisions that when changes were necessary a few years ago in the temure they were very ditionlt to make. Thongh the agent of the Hudson Bay Company, and therefore bomed to carry out the policy of the Company, as to not encouraging the entrance of too many religions bodies on Red River, he is sidil to have had a hand at the same time in framing the petitions forwarded to London by the lreshyterians of Kildonan. The Rev. dohn Ryerson, on his visit to Red River in IBit, tells of his going down to Kildoman to hear a lecture from Juige Thom "On the state and progress of the Red River Settlement,' and the hearer says that the subject was treated " with great elopuence, beanty and ability." In the Comncil hehl at Fort Garry, the julge was a leading spirit, aml we are totd that hy the people generally "his influence was regarded as disproportionately great." The Council being looked upon as the instrument of the Hudson's Bay Company, it is quite evident that his being a ruling influence in that boly would sulject him to severe eriticism liy the people, and that to a certain extent his intluence as a dulge woull be lost. As already statea, the relations of the settlers on the Red River to the Hulson Bay Company hal become sery masitiafactory. The Company, by their eharter, no doult hul in monopoly of the fur trade. But the mass of the people being hunters, and finding it dithenlt to gain it living otherwise, hardly recognized this-and indeed the Company had not enforcel their claim. For some reason, aceording to some, on Juige Thom's alvice - it was decided to enforce the right of Company. Acorrlingly, in 1st4, Covernor Christie issued two prochamations, one of them repuiring ench settler, hefore the Comprany would enry may gords for him, to make a deelaration that for the past winter he hal ont, directly or indirectly, enguged in the fur trale: the other prochanation required the writer of any letter, which was sent by post to write his mane on the outside, and should he not have made the decharation reguired as to trading in furs, then his letter must be deposited in the otfiee, open, to be examined before being sent. These were tymanical and severe enactments. Cases are cited in which settlers, traders, and even missionarics, were enused much inconvenience and loss ly these stringent regulations. The governor and the legal adviser, Julge Thom, maturally received the greater port of popular disapproval. The Freneh half-l, reeds took the lead in the mitation agninst the Company. A strange story is related as to the way in which the Faglish hulf-hreeds who had hitherto supported the claim of the Company, cume to throw in their lot with their French fellow-comerymen. A company otheer had left his two daughters at fort Garry to he ellucated. One of them was the object of the affection of a young seotel half-hreed, and at the same time of io young Highlander. The young lady is said to have preferred the Metis, but the foud parent favored the yomig Highlander. The seotehman, fortified liy the father's approval, proceeded to uphraid the Metis for his temerity in aspiring to the hum of one so high in society as the lady. As love ruined Troy, so it is said this affair joined French and English halfbreeds in a union to defeat the Company.

During the five years after the publication of the proclamation, a eonstant agitation was going on anong the French. The leader of this uproar bore a name better known to the present generation as that of his son, Lonis Riel. Riel, the elder, was bomat Isle a la Closse, and was the son of a French Canadian father and a French half-hreed mother. He was educated in Lower Cunala, came to the Northwest to enter the service of the Company, and was for two years a moviee in the Oblate order. He afterwards bailt a water mill on the seine, three or four miles from St. Boniface, mate a eanal nine miles long to feed it, and was married to one of the well-ku,wn Lagimodiere family, and from this union spang Louis Riel of releellion notoriety. The miller of the Seine was a very capable man; had a great power over his fellow-eountrymen; and was a born agitator. When popular feeling had been thoronghly roused, it happened that in 1849 Guillamme Sayer, a French half-hreed trader, bought goods, intending to go on a truding expedition to Lake Manitoha. It was determined to arrest Sayer and three of his associates. This was lone, but suyer alone was kept in prisom.

nse. (ioverremembered, 'as, moreover, mg Company Thth, and this to meet in Ietis, armel, ing their gums hey gathered

A fellow 1 it verital)le repeated by liss, the Metis governor and us scene then n loud tones if justice was 2n took place - Et je dectecer of the Metis, hemiselves to ee est libre! le one. Juilge s place on the luments. It ts distasteinl possible for iated mitgistliair, a very is of society cials. Capt. afamation of ons for conin chaige of nto the cuse cat ngain as or Coldwell. rler did not day in procems to hitve in 1847 the natmor. In lolving the puoted with thamba ly

Fifteen years of service in the remote and isolated settlement of Red River had enabled the Recorder + .,.. , mulate a handsome competence. His friend Heciallum was dead, and $t$.,$\ldots .$. les between the Company and the people made it disatgreable for the well abused judge to remain in his New World sphere. He atecordingly resigned, and returning by way of York Factory sailed from that port in the Company's ship, "The Prince of Wales" on the 20 th of Neptember, 1854 , with wife and som. On the vessel was the Aretie explorer, Dr. Rate, who had just fommd the first traces of sir John Franklin; and also the Rev. John Ryerson, who has left a written aceont of the voyage, which proved to be tedious and dangerons, taking nearly six weeks to Lembon. In the second year after his retmon, dulge Thom received the homorary degree of L. L. 1., from his own University at Alerdeen in recognition of his attaimments ; and on the granting of a constitution for a university of Manitola, in 1877, he was nominated one of the first six Honorary Fellows of St. Johns College. He lived at Edinlourgh in what might seem to be his deelining years, but removed to Lomdon in 1 sio and took up his aborle in his well known residence, 49 Torrington sipare, a score of years longer. The family of his departed friend were a constant care to him. For them he always showed a passionate regard.

The Bishop of Montreal, on his visit to Fort Garry in I8t4, mentions that at that time Recorder 'Thom "was deeply engagel latterly in Biblical studies." In 18:2, at Aherdeen he had joined the Hebrew chass. But like numbers of great students he had become involved in the seemingly hopeless mazes of the interpretation of the prophecies of Scripture. In 1847, he eompleted for puhlication his work, entitled "The Chronology of Prophecy," on the typical chatacter of what he calls "Abraham's 430 years." An active mind like that of dudge Thom must have something on which to work. In not having enongh to fill up his time and utilize his energies, he must have some abstruse line of study. His mind seoms to have had a lent towatrds mathematies, and his inclination and poobahly early taining led him to a minute sturly of the Bible, even in the original tongnes. As showing his bent toward figures, the writer rememhers Julge Thom siying that he never got into a Lomslon omilus-many of whose figures run up into the thons-ands-without resolving the mumber into its factors, and combining them in every possible maner. Nothing delighted him so mach as to get an appreciative listener, and to refer for an hour at a time to the marvellons events of history, and to show that they were not isolated, hat were part of a great aystem of development.

In summing up the life of the first . Iudge of Rupert's Lame, it is evident wer are dealing with a man of great activity amd capacity. He was perfeetly at home in the fircek and Latin classics; lee was a Hebrew scholar and well aber tainted with our own literatme. He was well versel in law, and gave his opinions with fullness and decision. An active mewsphper writer in his a liat days, he always maintained a lively interest in publie atfars. It wass bondisfortune to be onsted letween the two strong forces of a great trading company's interest, and the matural anpirations of a people after freedom. Sodonbt this womded his promd spirit deeply, and prevented him from ever visiting the Red River ugain as he would have liked to have done. He was no trimmer ; he was not even politic. He had strength of feeling and tenacity of purpose. Though somewhat diflieult to work with, yet he was open and at heart kind and considerate. Passing away as he did on the 21 st of February of this year (1890), in his eighty-eighth year, in a quiet old age, we may well drop a sympathetic tear to the memory of the hones: old war-rior:-From the Records of the IIistorical and Scirntific Society of Manitoba ( 1890 ).

CALDER'S CASE-SAYER'S CASE.

We draw the particular attention of the profession and of our readers generally to the reports of these celebrated cases, which we have felt constrained to print in full in this issuc. We refer to the former beeanse or the Recorder's very able and exhanstive analysis of the rights of the Hudson's Bay Company, which have attracted so much attention lately, and also beeause it is the first written judgment ever delivered in the Courts of the country that has come down to us; to the latter hecause of the historical interest with which it is associated, and also to give the othicial report of a trial concerning which many writers have given free reign to fancy and exaggeration without taking the trouble to ascertain what the parties chiefly interested had to say in the matter. Neither of these cases have been printed before.

$\left.\begin{array}{c}\text { HSTRICT OF ANSINIBOIA, } \\ \text { RUPERT'S LAND. }\end{array}\right\}$
In tile Casf of dames Cadifr.*
At an ordinary meeting of the Court which was held on Thursday the seventeenth day of August in the year of our Lord one thousimd eight humhed and forty-eight.

Present: $\dagger$
Alfenr. Cilmistie, bisque. Abam Thom, Joms Bexs, Alemr. Ross,

[^1]Mr. Recorter Thom commenced the proceedings by reading his opinion in the case to this effect :-
"James Calder has been brought into Red River Nettlement to be tried before us for a felonious homicide alleged to bave been committed by him in Peace River, which, after passing through Great Slave Lake, continues its comrse to the Arctic Ocean under the nume of McKenzie's River.

Have we jurisdiction in the matter? Individually, I answer in e nffirmative, submitting at the same time, the grounds of my opinion to my brethren on the bench. But before I enter on the subject, I beg to express my satisfaction, that, on a point of such difficulty and importance, my habitual mode of discharging my duty has not left me at liberty to be influenced loy the circumstances of the ease under consideration. I need not remind you that I have uniformly embraced every $o_{1}$ portunity of binding myself down in the absence of most of the extraneous guarantees of judicial impartiality, by the enmication of every general princ ple that can be brought to bear on any particular issue. In pursuance of this rule of action, I have already twice anticipated the very opinion, which I am now about to justify and support. Six years ago I communicated it to my official superiors in an essay on the trade and judicature of what is commonly known as the Indian Territories ; and in February, 1845, I embolied the same in a detailed view of our jurisdiction, which I aldressed along with various other matters, to the Grand Jury of this district.

To come to the merits of the case.
The Hudson's Bay Company's charter, on the 9th page of the printed copy, conveys " the sole trade and commerce of all those Seas, Streights, Bays, Rivers, Lakes, Creeks and Sounls, in whatever latitude they shall be, that lie within the entrance of the streights commonly called Hudson's Streights, together with all the lands, etc." Coupled with the professed object of finding "a new passinge into the South Sea," nothing can fairly be held to "lie within" the starting point of the royal grant, excepting what may be continuously comected with "Hudson's Streights" by means of the sea. Now, down to the discovery of the straits of the Fury and Hecla, Hudson's Bay alone, in addition, of course, to Hudson's Straits, was known to "lie within" the starting point in question. As, previously to such discovery, the competition between the Hudson's Bay Company and the fur traders of Canada had come to a close, the only matter in dispute between the rival associations with respect to the extent of Charles the Second's Letters Patent, as distinguished from their validity, was not how mueh of the coast, but how much of the adjacent interior the charter comprisel, so that the distinguished lawyers on either side were not required to consider the stretch of the charter to the westwarl.

But the discovery of the Straits of the Fury and Hecha, mader the light of other discoveries, brought within the range of the charter the whole of the westward coast as far as the borders of Russian America, showing the same to "lie within" the entrance of Hulson's Straits. The Hudson's Bay Company, it is true, did not alone affect all those discoveries. This fact, however, does not stand in the way of the aforesaid interpretation of the Company's elaims. The charter does not limit the Company in this respect to the enjoyment of its own discoveries; on the contrary, moreover, the 18 (ieo. 2 , eh. 17,-a statute passed to encomage and reward the seareh for a North-West Passage-expressly saves the "estate, ete.," of the Hulson's Bay Company. In the analagens ease, too, of the Nonth Nea Company, the 9 Amn, eh. $2 l, \mathrm{~s}$. i0, vestel in that corporation all the isharls that might be diseovered within certain limits whether hy its own ships or by those of the Crown.

Nor was the extent of the grant, which this interpretation claims, at all ineonsistent with the spirit of the seventeenth century. Carolina, which, according to its eharter, was private property as well as Rupert's Land, covered the whole wilth of the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacifie; and New France, as vested in a number of individnals by Lomis the Thirteenth, was to extend in length from Florida to the Aretic Cirele, and in bremith from Newfoundiand to Lake Huron, and thenee as much farther westwarl as the parties interested might carry the Gallic mame.

But in another respect also, the charter has had a growing accomplishment, and that, too, heyond the most liberal construction of its language. According to the tems alike of the appliation and of the grant, the Company's Territories, within the general limits aforesaid, were to be restricted to such places as were " not alrealy actually possessed by or granted to any of our subjects or possessed by the sulbjects of any other Christian l'rince or Stute." Now there is reason to believe, that before, the fur traders of New France had reached some of the tributaries of Hudson's liay. If such a finct could have been clearly established, then the entire extent of French possession would have been lost to the charter, even on its own showing. But the actual right would, in all probability, have been very different, for the treaty of Utrecht, withont enguiring into the origin or dunation of French possession, transferred to the Company the French portion, whatever it might he, of the territories as generally describel in the charter. 'The gradual extension to the westwarl therefore of the marime border of the Company's territories rests at once on the essential terms of the grant, and on the historical amalogies of the inland bommlary. Then, as the charter includes not merely "Seas and streights," but "Rivers and Lakes"--thus, in fact, eomprising everything back to the height of land-- Peate River, as a matter of course, must follow the fortunes of the spot where its waters discharge themselves into the ocean, heing just as much within the chartered territories as the month of Markenzie's River, neither more certainly so, nor less certainly so.

Were I not inxions, at this distance from the busy world, to render these observations as complete as possible, I should hardly deem it necessary to anticipate an objection that may he founded on the nse, whether chartered or popular, of the words "Hudson's Bay." If the South Sea Company held by one and the sime term and from one and the sime date, not only the Ameriean coast of the Patice, but also a considerable part of the Atlantic consts of Spanish America, then may the Hulson's Bay Company eonsistently daim to hold something more than the shores of in intand sea from which it takes its name. Again, to cite the more fommal title of the corporation he enjoy. so. 2, ch. rth-W West company. th. 21 , s. ed with is, at all , which, ;'s Land, Paeific he Thir, and in I farther complishlanguage. he Comrestrieted 1 to any Prince or of New ach a fact h possess. But the he treaty possess. pight le, al extenompany's the hisules not et, em. natter of ge themaries as less cer-render cecessilly charterimpany omly the Atlantic istently which mation last mentioned, surely the Adventurers of England "trading into Hudson's Bay" might withont violating the proprieties of language, have sailed through it or lryoud $i t$, even if the docment that incorporated then had not eontemplated the fimbing of "a new Passige into the South sea," and, in fact, the very doemment in question stated in its preamble, that Prince Rupert and his associates had " nudertaken an expedition for Hudson's Bay in the North-West part of Ameriea for the liscovery, etc." But even if not included in the primary and absolute grant aforesaid, I Pace River may still he omrs, under a secondary and contingent provision of the charter. That instrment on its twelfth page grants " monto the said Governor and Company, and their sucerssors, that they shall forever hereafter have, use and enjoy not only the whole entire and only Trade and Tratfick and the whole and entire and omly Liberty, Use and Privilege of Trading and Tratficking to and from the Territory, Limits and Places aforesaid, but also the whole and entire Trade and Trattick to and from all Havens, Bays, Creeks, Rivers, Lakes and seas into which they shall find entrance or passage ly Water or Land ont of the Territories, Limits and Places aforesaid." In this case where the Company's enjoyment was to depend on the Company's discovery, there was contemplatel something very different from the mere const which might from time to time be aseertained to "lie within the entrance of the Hudson's Streights" in as much as these aljacent or sulsidary regions might be reached either ly water or ly lamb, or by both lamd aml water. If a practicable "Passage into the South sea" had been found, the secomlary and contingent grant might have comprised the shores of the lacific, provided such shores were visited through such passage, thus bringing the Hudson's Bay Company into lawful competition with the monopolies of the South Sea Company and the East India Company, just as these two monopolies potentially came into lawful eompetition with each other, the one by the Cape of Goorl Hope and the other hy Cape Horn. Again, though a prestieable chamel was never discovered along the Aretic Ocean, yet the secondary and contingent graut might have embraced suel of the shores of the lacific as lay aeross the Rocky Mountains; something of the kind would appear to have been in the view of the framers of the clarter, for in the sequel of the last duotation, the inhahitituts of the primary and absolute grant are differently deseribed from those of the secomdary aul contingent, the former being characterized as "Natives and People," and the latter as "Nations,"

Now, Lieutenant Hearne, journeying " by land" on lehalf of the Hudson's liay Compman, was the first to penetrate into that part of this comantry, whieh discharges its waters into the Arctic Ocean, us distinguished from Hudson's Bay, having preceeded ly ahout seven years, the earliest visit of the fur traders of Cuada. Besides following the Coppermine River to its mouth, that otheer, incomparally the most enterprising of all the northem diseoverers, crossel (ireat Nlave Lake, at once the receptacle of Peace River and the reservoir of Mackenaie's River, in 1731 or $17 i 2$, while it was only in 1788 that the Compuny's Canalim upponents first surmounted the Portage La Loche ; so that as the primary and alsolute grant was to extemb from the shores of the sea to the heigh of land, both leace River anul Mackenzie's River, as appendages of (ireat slave Lake, then clearly fell by parity of construction within the range of the grant which was secondary and contingent.

To sum up the whole, l'eace River under either grant, appears to me to be embraced within the limits of the Company's ehartered right of exclusive trade.

Nor has the Company, to the best of my knowledge und belief, sacrificed any of its privilege in the premises by its acceptance of the royal licence, as sanctioned by the 1 and 2 (reo. 4, eh. 66. That statute anthorized the issuing of a licence or of lieences for truiding with the Indians "in ull such parts " of North America as shall be specified in any such grunts or lieences re" spectively, not being part of the lands or territories heretofore granted to " the said Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading to "Hudson's Bay and not being," ete. When taken in eonnection with the avowed aim of the statute to put an end to eompetition by converting a hitherto open commerce into a monopoly, the exemption of the "Territories" heretofore grantad w the Hudson's Bay Company, wonld, under in fair and liberal construction, comprise as well the regions of the secondary and contingent grant as those of that which was prinnury and absolute. If so, any licence for Peace River-a stremm embraced, as ilready shown, under either grant-woald so fir he null and void. In all probahility, however, no tratet of Widerness has been particularly specified in the Company's licence, such speeification not leing necessary for any particular purpose in favor of the ehartered holders of the exemptel territories. In fact, the license could not be expressed in any terms more ulvantageous to the Company than the very words of the statute, for in this way alone could it make sure of covering all that the charter had left, or might thereafter be found to leave uncovered.

To bring all this to bear on the question at issue, the chartered privilege of trading earried with it the rights of judicature. The statu, on its sixteenth page, ordained "that all Lands, Islands, 'lerritories, Plantations, "Forts and Fortifications, Factories or Colonies, where the said Company's "Factories and Trade are or shall le within any of the Parts or Places afore " limited, shall be immediately and from henceforth under the Power and "Command of the Said Governor and Company, their successors and As"signs: Saving the Faith and Allegiance due to be performed to us, Our " Heirs and Successors."

There would, however, be this rifference. If Peace River, under the primary and absolnte grant, should form part of Rupert's Lanil, then would the Company, as feulatory sovereign of the conntry, have jurisdiction over all and sundry the inhabitants of the same, subject, however, to the restrictions laid down with regard to the native tribes in the charge already mentioned to the grand jury ; but if Pence River under the secondary ind eom tingent grant should merely fill within the conmmercial monopoly, then would the Company, as not being in any sense sovereign of the country, have juris. diction over those only who may live in its netual employment or under its aetual protection. But in the present case, this distinction would be of no moment, in as much as Jumes Caller, the prisoner, had gone to Peace River and was still remaining there as one of the Company's engaged servants.
y of conontingent. to me to exclusive icence, as the issuuch parts rences reranterl to rading to with the verting a uritories" fuir and and conf so, any ler either , no tract ence, such or of the could not the very eovering ncovered. privilege I its sixentations, ompany's aces afore ower and and As. us, Our nder the en would ion over restricdy men-and con en would ve juris.

nder its

be of no ve River hts.

Nor has the Compmy ever been deprivel of its chartered jurisiliction, though the 43 (ieo. 3, ch. 138, apparently intended to place the whole of the North-W'est maler the eriminal juristietion of the comrts in Cmada, yet a question was immediately raised whether or mot its provisions atlected Rupert's Laml ; and the 1 and 2 (ieo. 4 , ch. B6, after recorling in the most authentic forms the doubts on the sulject and deciding the same in favor of the extraneons tribmals enacted, in a rider, " that nothing in this act con"tained shall be taken or eonstrued to eflect any Right, Privilege, Authority "or jurisiliction which the (iovernor anl (ompany of Adventurers trading to "Hudson's Bay are by Law entitled to elam and exercise under their "Charter."

Under the opration of this rider, our jurisiliction remains in its original state ; if it ever existerl in l'eace River it still does so.

But, even supposing our jurisdiction never to have existed in leate River, and supposing alsi, as a matter of comse, the juristiction of Camada to have beenextendel over the strem in question, I have still taken the responsibility, as resident comsel of the Hudson's Bay Company of declining to recommend that James Cahler should be sent to C'anadia for trial. It is my opinion, as embotied long ago in the aforesand essay and charge,* that the 3 and + Vie., ch. 3.5 , commonly linown as the Act of Uniom, has not saved to United ('manda the jurishliction vested in the separate provinees by the $4: 3$ , ieo. 3, ch. 138 , and the 1 and 2 (ieo. 4 , ch. fit.

These statutes, best olservel, did not merely provide for the thial in Chada of such persons as were aceused of having committed crimes in the North-West. They give both to the juliciary and to the legislature of either province an anthority, not the less certain for it loing incidental, in and over the Indian Territories in general, and they moreover gave to the dovernor of the Lower Province, the power of appointing magistrates, not only in and for the remoter Wilderness, hut also in and for at least a part of the Upper Province itself. This jutisdietiom, too eomplex and peenliar to be saved by any general phatseology whatever, does not seem to me ever to have heen contemplated by the fromess of the saling on revising sections of the Aet of Union.

But the juristiction of Cimala, even if valid in point of law, is utterly repugnant to justice and hummity. Let us follow a proseention throngh it.s varions stages. 'lo quote the very words of the law, as embolied in the two correlative statutes, "Any person or persons guilty," anilty being a slovenly sulostitute for accusid, "of any crime on offence" may withont the intervention of a single magistrate or the gumantee of a single athidiwit, be dragged to Camada, from the farthest wilds of the North-West "by any person or persons whatever." buring the journey the reputed offender, if he in really to be prevented from ascaping, must be sulnjected to the mast severe restraint, in as much as to saty nothing of the temptations and facilities of the American settiement of Nult Ste Marie, the harly denizen of the wilderness

[^2]may chole his keepers in nhost every encampment and on almost every portage. After a perionl of coercion ranging from six to eighteen montle, aceorling to the lacality of the erime and the season of the year, the prisoner of "any prerson or persons whatever" is brought, probalily for the first time, within the cognizance of law. If he is then discharged, the oppression of the system needs no comment of mine. But if he is formully committed for trial, he must pass several months in giol before steps can be taken for the smmmoning of witnesses, and hefore he can be confronted with the witnesses for the prosecntion, or have the benetit of those for the defense, he must, moder the most favorable ciremostances, lie two years longer in the prisons of what may to him be a foreign limul.

But, the reputed offenter's preliminary diffieulties are not yet over. His trial muy be delited on various gromads, and to give an instance of this, the very last case, and that is now twelve years ohd, was postponed from one half-yenly comrt to another, because neither bench nor bar possessed, or conla proeure a copy of the very statntes which conferred the jurisoliction. When he is put on his trial at last, the investigation of the truth is more likely than otherwise to suffer from the want of eompetent interpreters ; and even the jurors themselves are almost inevitably deficient in knowledge of local enstoms and local chanacter.

Meanwhile, the prisoner may be imocent, while the witnesses, who eertainly are so, are enduring in the absence of their wives and fanilies, a punishment perhaps heavier than the prisoner himself, even if guilty, may deserve.

Under these ciremonstances is it too much to hope, that the jurisoliction over what are commomly known as the Indian Territories, if it is not ons alrealy, may be vested in usloy the In oerial l'arliament, more purtienkrly as the Govemor of the District of Assiniloia is henceforwarl likely to bear a eloser relation than before to the Crown.

I beg, therefore, to move, that Jimes Cillder, for whose trial in fiet, the witnesses are not in this district, be detalned in enstody, and that a eopy of this opinion and also of the evialence in the case be transmitted with the least possible delity to their Honors."

In this motion the other meinbers of the Cont umamonsly expressen their eonemrence. + tOn 1. $1 . \mathrm{S}^{4}$ of the same volume, oceurs the following entry, which exphans itself. There are uos signatures.
"Willian Cochane and Robert Sutherlam hereby promise and bind themselves in a Bond of T'en Pomals Sterling each for the safe keeping of dames ('alder, in open eonrt this sevententh diay of May, One thousimil eight humbed and forty-uine.

District of Assimiboia, Red River Seltlement. wsst every in montbe， te prisoner or the first oppression committel taken for h the wit－ lefense，ho nger in the over．His of this，the from ons ossessell，or urisliction． th is more eters ；anl owledge of s，who cer． lies，a pun－ ay deserve． jurisdiction is not onrs ticularly as to bear a in faet，the a copy of th the least expressed

○○ひエエ．＊

Held at the Cont House，on the surenteenth of May，one thousiad eight lmadred amel forty－nine．

17th Mily，Ist9．
The Honble．Hudson＇s

Bity Compluy．

v．

Pierre Guilleam sayer．

On the dofeniont being ealled to answer to the eharget against him a eonsideruble time elapsed before he could be fomm，but on the assumane of sherifl Ross that he was near at hand the Court waited，and the Sheritl left the bench in seareh of him but in place of the defendant coming to the bar of the court， Fames Sinchair，Peter tiarroch amd many others presented themselves as Delegates from a great number of armed Half－Breeds who were outsile the eourt．James sinclair hamded a piper through the Clerk of the Court the the tavernor．After the members of the Bonch hat rean the paper，the Recori－ er asked Js．Sinclair in what capacity they appeared there．He answered， ＂As Delegates of the people．The Recorder replied that they conld not he received in a Court of Justice in that eapacity，and then explained to them from the Honble．H．B．Coy＇s charter，that as the charter then stool the com－ pany had the exclusive right of trade，and until that charter was set aside by Act of larliament any person transgressing by trading was eommitting a breach of the laws．Sinclair here mentioned that many eminent characters in the Houses of Parlianent in Eingland entertained great donlts as to the val－ idity of the H．B．Coy＇s charter，and in support of which assertion he handed to the hench a T＇imes News－Piper of the month of August last．After some further disenssion it was offered to Sinclair to plead for the Defemlant Sayer

[^3]and leave given for him and his party to withon and consult on the sime, and the ofler made by the Recorler to Sinclair that he might sit as Foreman, and (barineh on the Jury if he wished to do so: all that he wished was a fair and impartial trial. The party then withdrew. After some considerable time Sinclair appeared at the har with Sayer and the durors who hand nat on the former eases were still in the box, when Simelair objeeted to five of them, ann eleven others whose names were called; fit last the Jury was as follows:

```
Mr. 1mmald (immo.
    " William'Thomas,
    " ,Mmmes 'Tait,
    " Narcisye Marion.
    " 1Philip Kemerly.
" कamms Monkmam.
```

Ar. John Vincent.
" Robert Sandisom.
" Prospere Dathatme.
" Prameois Brmmean.
". Martin Lavalle.
" Dominique Duchatinse.

Vagmes Linklater, Post Master in the Homomble II. B. Coy's service, being duly swom and interrogated, deposed:-That the befondant brought the Furs to the Company's shop, and I asked him if he had traded them, he replied that he had traded some and the orthers he har lmated himself. We said he had killed some foxes. I did not tuke the skins from him at that time.
('ross gnestioned ly Sinclair-He dirl mot say whether he homeel the furs this year or there years or ten yours past. All which was truth as the deponent should answer to (iod.

Lonison siayer, being duly swom and interrogated, deponed:-That he was ont with his father hanting and does not know that his father killed anything more them ome Red lox, my father got a present from his relations of a few skins, 2 Parchment skins, 3 Cat skins, and one Martin sk:... ... unac: some furs from the half-breeds; Blankets was the principal art biles he traded with. I saw him give a dram of spirits to the people whom he was trating with ; loes not know if his father got any more furs in a present than those he mentioned before. All which wat thath its the deponent shomblanswer to (iond.

Antoine Morin, being duly swom and interragated, reposed:-That (lief Fitetore, I. E. Huriott, of the I. B. Coy., asked mo if ? intender to go out to trade and if I did to eome to him and he would sive 1 a a ind andees for that burpose. All which of os touth as the deponent should an swer to (iod.

Alexe foollet, being duly swom anl intervogated, deponed:-That ho had lought a lowse from ('hief Fiactor Marrioth and had tell Mr. Harriot that he would pay him with furs he would trale, and he requested that I should answer to (iond.

The depoment here stated that when Mr. Harriott advanced him erealit in the winter he forbid him to trade with Indians hat sait? nothing about Half-Breeds. (hief Pactor John Ballemden, of the Honble II. B. Coy., denied this; ats he himself hat fold him explicitly to he sure that he did not trade and if he conlin not paty his delt in furs, he would take salt from him for the balanee that might be dne in the sprins, and that it was solely on his reeommembation that Mr. Warriont adranced him, the the ehatacter of the Defenthe stane, s Forenam, 1 was a fair onsiderable hand sat ont ve of them, as follows:

me.

11.

atime.
service, bebrought the them, ho reIf. He satid lat time. hunted the trith as the

1:-'That be - killed inychations of a us he trituled was trarling than those hill answer
-Thait Chief to go out to es for that iorl.
:-'That ho r. Harriott ted that I redeponent lim eredit hing alont Coy., del not trade im for the his reemmthe befendant previously had been very indifferent and Mr. Hartott did not wish to have anything to do with him.

The Reeorder, after summing up the evidence, adiressed the Jury and explained to them the Rights of the H. B. C. to the trule. The Jury withdrew and after some time retmond into court with a verdict : That Pierre Guilleam Sayer is gailty of Trading Furs.

The Foreman, Mr. D. Gum, then mhlressed Chief Fuctor John Ballenden, as the Proscentor in this case, recommenting the Defendant to merey as it appared that he thought he had a right to trade as he and others were muler the impression that there was a free trule. Mr. Ballemben immediately stated that the eompany did not value the Furs which had been traded, hat it was the prineiple of the tranatetion which he looked at, but since a Jury las now given a verdict against the illicit tading he willingly aeceded to the recommendation of the Jury and shomld drop the other three eases.

Charge to the Grand Jury of Assiniboia.

(inetlemen of the (ikand Ithe,

1. In that comatry, from which we derive on haws, grand jurors are nevor permitted to enter on their duty withont being specially remimided of its nature and importance. If this precantion be expedient in England, where respectable individuals are so frequently required to ate as the pioneers of eriminal justiee, it must be more than expelient in Rupert's Land, inasmueh as grand juries, besides being so seldom smmmoned to take part in onr judicial proecelings, are altogether unknown to the jurisprulence of that country, whenee many, if not most of yon, in common with a majority of the beneh, derive your origin or education. In seotland, the cointry to whieh I have jnst alluded, the gram jury's essential linsiness of preferring an acensation before those, who are to aseertain its truth or its falsehool, is performed by one of the highest officers of the govermment, who may, in general terms, be said to resemble the attorney-geneval of Eugland.
2. But this peculiarity of the Law of seothand, over and above furnish. ing me with a special reason for more than ordinary fulhess of explamation, eannot fail to impress you with a solemn and grateful sense of the confiling lil.erality of the Law of England ; which, while it aetually sereens the collective eommmity from the possibility of official oppression, virtually raises its individual members to the level of one, who is more deeidedly superior to me in knowledge and in station, than I an to the least intelligent or the ham. blest of yourselves.
3. Pondering, therefore, on the dignity of your position, and on the responsibility of my own, and feeling anxious both to protect myself against misconception and to instruet you with precision, I have resolved to speak from this paper, and to hand the sume, for your more mature deliberation, to your able and experienced forman. In other lands, such expositions of haw and julieature ahost invarinhly reach the general ear in all the gemumeness of their origian force: and, though the institutions of this remote corner of the earth cannot vindicate themselves with a similar voice; yet they undoubtedly possens, in the utmost possible publicity, their best armone of defence against ignorant or interested misrepresehtations.
4. Upwarls of tive gears ago, when I had the honor of midressing, for the first and last time, so monerons and influential a body of my fellowe eitizens, I strictly contiaed myself, as perhapsent became astranger, to the mere discussion of the single ease that was to be comsidered,-adiscussion, by the-bye, so extensive and so intrieate as in itself to demand all the time that could conveniently be "pared, either by the communty or by the Court. Now, however, I propose to follow a more comprehensive sourse ; mal, though I man bappy thus publicly to acknowlelge the attention mul patience of preceding juries ; yet I must, in camlow, bespeak on your part a somewhat musual share of patience ambattention, relying on your having brought to the investigation of $a$ fellow-creature's prematme death, a self-lenying disregaril of any tempnary inconvenience.
5. To give a summary of what I shall hereafter ofler in detail, you wiehd, as a gram jury, two braches of anthority, the power of indicting maler such bills as may be sumitted to you, and the power of presenting of your own ace eord any breaches, whether direct or iadirect, whether essential or collateral, of the criminal law : and, as the case of alleger homicide which has called yon together will, from the mational origin of both parties, involve a niee and diftheult inuluiry as to the extent of our legal control over pare Indians, I shall lay before yon, at considerable length, a preliminary sketeh of our general juris. diction, eivil as well as eriminal, es the best, or, perhaps, the ouly, means of expomiling and illustrating my views of the special jurisdiction in fuestion.
6. If we had to consider merely our jurishliction in the abstate, or if we hed mader a written deed of delegation any specific jurisdiction, that was not repugnant to the fumlamental principles of justice, we should, in either ease, be satistied with knowing, that we derived our authority from the aetual rulers of the country, whether they might be its rightful rulers or not. But when, in the absence of any definite commission, we are constrained to betake ourselves for minute information to the letters patent of Charles the Second, we have an immeliate interest in the validity of that document, as being, in such a ease, our only guide in aseertaining our specific jurisuliction, and our only defenter in justifying the same. If the Charter be good, then our safe course is to interpret it well ; but, if the Charter be bad, the best interpretation eamot shiell us from the penal consequences of usurping the judicial commol of property, liberty and life.
7. Down to the date of the Charter, the crown of linglami confessedly possesserl, and hahitually exercised, the right of exelusively granting foreign trade and colonial dominion to private individuals or to public corporations withoat the consent of the houses of parkiament. Now, though the parliament subsequently limited this high perogative : yet it did so, not by formally repealing it, hut merely by pactically superseding it; thas tacitly admitting the validity of all its preceding results. But the rogal grants in question dellineness eorber of they unmunir of ile-sing, for the recitizens, I mere lis. by-the-lye, t could cou. Now, low. cugh I un f poceling ut un!1sun! the invesislegatrd of , you wiehl, ; umber such our own tereollaterat, cs culled you iecamd ditlis, I shall lity meral juris$y$, means of " question.
ct, or if we hat was not either case, the weturl - not. But wined to heChartes the pemment, us urisuliction, good, then d, the best surping the confesserlly ing foreign orportions parliament mmally readmitting in question

Were repertenlly fortified with parlimmentary sumetion in the most express mand [msitive terms, so ins to be rembered valid, even if originally defective; und perdaps no document was ever more frepuently contirand by the pramomit anthorities of may anntry than the (hartor of lrince Rapert amb his distinguishorl ussociates.
8. By 7 \& 8 Will. 3 , ch. $2: 2$, the proprietary plastations, such us Rupert's Lamb, were regnhated in such terms as expressly involved a parliamentury statute which proposed to facilitate the colonial trale-ull the estates, rights, anl privileges of the Hudson's Bay Company were oleclared to be sawed, motwithstanding the tenor and tembency of the Aet itself ; so that here was a generul recognition of the whole Cluater with a special reference to its eonamercial provisions. By IS (ieo. 2 , ch. $17, \pi$ considerable reward was offered for the diseovery of a north-west passige throngh Hudson's straits: mal, eren against this possible instance of nominal entronchment, the Chirter of linpert's Lami was ngian saveat, in the sinne words, and with at least the same effect, - a subing the more remarkable, inasmueh us it was ulmost entirely suporthons. By 14 (ien. 3, eh. 83 , the not thern boundary of Canadia was to be sonthern boundiry of " the teriotosy granted" tos the Hudson's liay Comipany, the parliamentary province merely chaming to the northworl what the letter of the royal grant, withont regaril to actarl posseysion, might leave unaproprinted. By $18: 2$ (ieo. 4 , ch tif, the Charter of Rupert's Lamd was twice expressly recogniserl : its first section, thongh its single ohject whs to prevent eompetition, yet contined the license to the eomatry not eovered by the Chater : thum positively waving, us in the list mentioned case, the extent of territony, and negntively ussmming the right of trade as an already exist. ing seenrity aginast the drowled evil : and the closing section of the Aet reviven, in the most emphatic langurge, the chartered jurisoliction which one of the intemediate seetions ham extinguished. But this statute, when taken in eomexion with the statnte which it amended, womld clearly show that the royal (hartor, sa far fom needing a parliamentary recognition, conlal stand even against a parliamentary attack, mass male in a form more pointed than that of inference and implication. Though 43 (ies. 3, ch. 138 , extemi. ed the jurisdiction of the C'manks over the adjucent tervitories as huving mo jurisuliction of their own. yet Rupert's Luml, comprising, by-the-bye, the only moljacent territories, was comsidered to he exempted, inasment as it hal the juristiction of which the statute presumed the absence ; and this very opinion, after being prommlgated hy parliament itself in $1 \& 2$ (ieo. 4, ch. $6 i f$, was first remedied and then left to its operation, as alrealy seen, by that sime statute.
9. But the royal charter has been recognizel by pmblic doemments, more inportant in their effect, thongh, perhaps, less obligntory in their charicter, than Acts of limliament. In the reign of Queen Ame, the treaty of Utrecht transferred from France to Fingland all right and title to the chartered territorjes, freneh Canala and French Lomisiana; thus acepting the charter as the arbiter of their northern lommbaries, and rembering to its linits the very homage which Fuglish ('anala and the Indian territories still remier to the same. Again, in 1794, the Treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation leetween Great Britain and the United States, permitted the subjectsand eitizens of the respective powers to eress at pleasure the international lomulary, and, under certain restrictions, to trade on either side of the same; but though it based the stipulation on the highest possille groumd, the expedieney of promoting international harmony; yet it ineld sacred the borders of the chartered territories, not ly any clause introductory of a new privilege, but merely by a parenthesis cleclaratory of an old one.
10. Thus has the doemment, from which this court must draw any definite notion of its juriscliction, been placed on the deepest and broalest fondations, even if its inherent validity, were a sulject of reasonable and bonest iloubt. It has been sanctioned by every variety of parlianent, hy the Parliament of England and Scotland, and by the Parliament of England, Scotland and Ireland; it has been sanctioned by five of the eight intermediate predecessors of Vietoria; it has been sanetioned with respect to its exclusive trade, with respect to its loeal jurisdiction, and with respect to its geographical extent; it has been sanctioned as against individual suljeets and as against individual aliens; it has been sanctioned as against neighboring eolonies, and as against foreign states; and what is more than all this, it has been proved to be intependent of any sanction by triumphing, on merely technical gromels, over a direet attaek of the supreme authority of the empire.
11. Having thus shown that the letters patent of Charles the Second may be safely adopted as a guide, let me now proceed to interrogate themas to the nature of our jurisdiction. On the sixteenth page of the printed copy I find these applicable words:-

*     *         * "The Governor and his Council of the several and respective " plaees where the said Company shall have plantations, forts, factories, col"onies, or places of trade, within any of the comntries, lames, or territories " herelyy granted, may have power to judge all persons belonging to the said " (iovernor and Company, or that shall live under them, in all eanses, wheth"er civil or criminal, according to the laws of this kinglom, aml to execute "justice aceordingly. And, in ease any erime or misdemeanor shall be "committed in any of the said company's plantations, forts, factories, or " places of trade within the limits aforesaid, where judicature camot be ex"eeuted for want of a Governor an,? Couneil there, then in such ease it shall "aml may be lawfol for the Chisf Factor of that place and his Council to "transmit the party, together with the offence, to such other plantation, " factory, or fort, where there shall be a Governor and Comeil, where justice "may he executed." **

12. This passage olviously presents four separate and distinct topics of discussion, the rule of decision, the geographical range, the standing of the parties in any cause, and the eonstitution of the tribunal.
13. With regard to the rule of decision, the express provision of the Charter is little letter than superfluous; for, nccording to the fundamental irinciples of eolonind settlements, Rupert's Land, unless its Charter ham positively determined the contrary, would have been subjeeted to " the laws of this kingdom," as existing at the time of the grant. Our principal rule of avigation lee ts and citizens oundary, and, but though it liency of prothe chartereal out merely by

w any cletinite

 st fommations, honest doult. Pirliament of land and Ire2 predecessors e trade, with phical extent ; inst individual und as against ed to be inderounds, over a
he Second may

 themas to the d copy I findund respective factories, color territories ang to the said causes, whethmil to execute banor shall be , factories, or cannot be excase it shall is Council to er plantation, where justice inct topies of ing of the par.
vision of the fundanental rter had posi" the laws of cipal rule of lecision, therefore, is the law of England, of End May, 1670; or, to speak more correctly, such portions of the same as might be mapted to the condition of the country. On a point of such funclamental and vital interest, I prefer relying on the opinion of certain parliamentary commissioners, as quoterl by an able writer :
" In the case of an uninhabited comatry, diseovered and planted by Fing. " lish subjects, all the English laws then in being, which were the birthright " of every subject, are immediately there in force. But this doetrine most " he umierstool with many and great restrictions. Such eolonists carry with " them only so much of the English law as is applicalile to their own situa"tion, and the condition of an infant colony. Thus they acknowledge as in "foree, Ist, the Common Liw of England ; Znd, such Acts of Parliament as " passed before the settlement of their colony, and are applicable to its eon" dition. Undel the qualifieation eontained in the last part of the rule, " many entire exceptions have been imunttol. (of this, the bankrupt and " poor laws; the laws of police; tithes; and the mortman acts, furnish apt " and familiar examples. Of acts passed subsegnently to its settlement, " such only we considered to affect a settled or chartered colony as have that " possession expressly nimed, or virtually inchuded in them. But all naviga" tion acts, acts of revenne and trate, and acts respecting shipping are obli" gatory, though the colonies are not named in them.
14. On one most inportant point, howerer, the closing sentence of this quotation is not applicable to this comntry. In practice, whatever maty be the theory of the case, Rupert's Lind, differing, as it does, in government and constitution from every other dependency of the United Kingrlom, is exempted from the operation not only of revenne-laws in general, hut even of those revenue-laws in partienlar which expressly affect the colomial possessions of the empire in this quarter of the globe. At this moment, if we stoml in the same political relation to the mother-country as our hrethren of Canalia, our imports from the United sitates would he buritened with duties heavy in themselves, ind liable to be made more beary by the imperative adilition of all such duties as are, or may hereafter be, levied on our imports from the United Kingiom. To offer instances of the advantages of our peculiar position, -advantages of a kind to le appreciated even by the least thonghtful members of the commmity,-coftee would pay five shillings a ewt., being, I appreheml, at least three times the amome of our municipal laty ; raw sugar would pay the same, heing, as nearly as possible, five times the amomet of our mumicipal duty, even on refned sugiar ; refined sugar would pay twenty par erent. not on the invoice price, lint on the local value ; and cottons, stoves and tobacco woulal pay seven por cout., to be similarly estimated, -one and all of these dutios being to be prid over and alove the existing tax, or any modifieation of the stme.
15. But to retmen to the quoted passage-in the face of anthority so high and so explicit, the vague generality of the Charter can never he permitted to intronluce the Finglish laws of to-day for the prexent and of to-morrow for the future : nor, in this case, is experliency rephignant to anthority : for, surely a tixed rule, which may from time to time be morlitied to suit onr eondition, is more convenient than a rule ever varying to suit the conclition of others, but never to be varied to suit that of ourselves.
16. But the law of Englant of Mad May, 163), is not our only rule of decision. To pass without further notiee the obvions addition of the municipal regulations, the Charter furnishes a subsidiary rule of its own ; or rather, the Charter is, with respect to Rupert's Lanl, one of "the laws of this kingdom" of 2ul May, 16;0, and as such must he judicially noticed withont being pleaded loy the interestel parties. If, for instance, any suit that might involve an infringement of the ehartered privileges were to arise, we shonld be bound to inquire whether the infringement in question had been legalized by the requisite license, and, according to the result of such inguiry, to reject the suit or to decide it.
17. To pass from the rule of lecision to the geographical range, I must endeavour to trace the limits not merely of the district of Assiniboia, is being the immediate ohject of our jurisdiction, lat also of Rupert's Land, as comtaining the other districts, which, for the purposes of eriminal justice, are inrirectly subjected to this tribual, as the only resident Court of Governor and Council.
18. Assiniboia is the eommon name of two very different districts, the judicial district and the municipal. In the Honorable Company's resolutions of 1839 , for the appointment of a governor, 4 council, mad two sheriffs, the judicial distriet is tlescribed to be such portion of Lord Selkirk'soriginal grant as may lie within Her Majesty's dominions; whereas, in the local regulations of 1841, the municipal district is limited to a eircle of a humdred miles in diameter, with the forks as a centre. The bommary of the former, which alone reguires to be more particularly defined, begins at the Lake of the Woods on the international line; follows the main strem of the Wimmpeg River; crosses the Wimnipeg Lake so as to reach land in the latitude of fiftytwo legrees and a half; travels due west to the Lake Winipegos; crosses the same so as again to reach land in the latitule of fifty-two degrees; once more runs due west till it meets the most distant waters of the Assiniboine in that direetion ; then proceeds due south, to the sonthern border of Rupert's Land; and lastly, along the same, returns to its original point of depurture. Of the judicial district thms defined, the municipal district forms hardly oneeighth part ; and it would have heen manifestly absurd and preposterous to extend our local regulations over so wide and wild a surface. In some respects, such extensiom would have been as munst and presmuptuons, tus it would have been preposterous and absurd. 'To take as the most tangible instance, the import daty-the contemplation of the larger district would have taxed the ontfits of at least four distant posts, liort Alexander, on Wimipeg River, Manitola House on Manitoba Lake, Fort Pelly on Assiniboine River, and Fort Elliee on Beaver Creek; and even if such outfits had heen specially excepted, the contemplation of the larger ilistriet, inasmuch as it would tonch, as alrealy seen, the intemational boumlary, would have appeared to set asidn the chatered eorporation's essential privilege of elosing or opening the extermal trale of Rupert's Laml. As the matter actually stands, the local regulation merely provides that all articles, which are not expressly exempt- the municipal a; or rather, of this kingI without beit that might se, we should seen legalized uiry, to reject range, I must iboia, as being Land, as conjustice, are inof Governor $t$ districts, the y's resolutions o sheriffs, the original grant :al regulations dred miles in former, which Lake of the the Winnipeg titude of tifty. egos ; crosses degrees ; once Assiniboine in r of Rupert's of departure. as hardly oneeposterous to In some resiptuous, us it t tangible inet would have on Wimnipey iboine River, ,een specially would touch, reared to set opening the ids, the local essly exempt.
ed, shall be liable to pay toll on entering the smaller district, from whatever point of the compass, whether within Rupert's Land or without, they may have originally come, and hy whatever means, whether legal or illegal, they may have reacherl the circular boundary of loend taxation; mul the actual receipt of such toll on the part of the monicipal nuthorities, of comrse, confers no right whatever, whether retrospective or prospective, to the prejulice of thirl parties.
19. Having thins defined the district of our immediate jurisidiction, und distinguished it from another district of the same name, I shall now enter on the difficult and interesting task of defining in mass those disiricts, which for the purposes of criminal justiec, are indirectly placed under our superintendence. The interior boundary of the chartered territories undeniably coincides with all the remotest heights of lam, that send down water to meet the maritime hommlary of the same. But the maritime limit, on which all the other limits thas depend, seems to me to be much less certain than is generally imagined. Some lawyers, to whom I could not withont impertinence even acknowleige myself to be immeasurably inferior, have, I believe, offered the opinion that the maritime limit coincides with the coasts of Hudson's Straits and Hudson's Bay, so as to exclude from Rupert's Land, all that lies beyond Portage La Loche. But the Charter, with express reference to the anxiously desired discovery of a north-west passage between the Atlantic and the Pacific, comprised all that might lie in any latitude within the entrance of Hudson's Straits ; the corresponding condition of any longitude being doubtless onitted, as neces arily involved in such express reference to an imlefinite extent of westerly exploration, or as necessarily involved even in the very words of the provision itself. Now, in this view of the case, Rupert's Land wouh clearly advance westwarl, step for step, with the progress of maritime diseovery ; being, at the date of the opinion aforesaid, precisely what the lawyers in question held it to be; hat having, since that time, earried its maritime boundary to the north-east angle of Russian America, und that, in a great measure, through the exertions of its own adopted children. This palpable truth has perhaps been kept out of sight by a looseness of phraseology, to which the charter itself has given rise, -"The Governor mad Company of Adventurers of England, traling into Hudson's Bay," being muturally abhreviated into Hudson's Bay Company, and Hudson's Bay Company's territories, being as naturally abbreviated into Hudson's Bay Territories. Had the corporation been described, as it might more precisely have been, as trading into Hudson's Straits, the same abbreviations would have been equally prohable in themselves, but not equally liable to the sime inferential misapplication. But the chartered territories, as thus defined, have been considerably modified by Treaties, the intermational boundary from Canadn to the Rocky Momntains, generally lying to the north of the height of land ; and if, at any point, such intermational boundary lies to the sonth of the same, as it actually doos lie at the sonth-west angle of our judicial district, there must exist a corner of the empire, which finls not within our own jurissliction, hut within the jurisdiction of the Indian territories.
20. Of the two imperial stututes, which extend the juristiction of the Canadas over the Indian territories, neither the one nor the wther appars to have barred the growing operation of the Charter. The 43 Geo. 3 , ch. 138 , might, indeed, possibly claim a concurrent authority with ourselves beyond Portage La Loche, on the groumd that, at the time of its passing, there really existed no right of jurisdiction on the waters of the Mackenzie; and the 1 aml 2 (ieo. 4, ch. i6, could certainly claim nothing more, and might perhaps be unable to cham even as much. But even this conemrent authority appears to involve the self-same inconsistency with the Charter as that which has been already shown to have excluded the extermal jurisdiction from the charterel territories in general,-that fumlamental docmment having prospectively plantel, from the beginning, its own juristiction over the whole of the granted territory, though confessedly, in in great measure, neither possessed nor diseovered. I sulboin the applicable passage :

*     * " All lands, islands, territories, plantations, forts, fortifications, fac"tories, or colonies, where the said Company's factories and trade are, or "shall ne, within any the parts or places afore limited, slall be IMMEDI"ATELY AND FROM HENCEFOR'I'H uuder the power and commmend of " the said Governor and Company." * *

21. Thongh this claim of a wider jurisdiction is not likely to be directly carried into effect, inasmuch as the hemds of such districts, as lie beyoud the Portage, can hardly be expected to assume the preliminary responsibility of sending offenders to lee tried by this Con't; yet the question niay be raised, and ought as soon as possible to be raised before the tribunals of the neighbouring province ; und every denizen of this vast wilderness of a world has a personal interest in releasing every part of the same from a jurisdiction so absurdly ani inconveniently remote as to inflict inevitably on the witnesses more grievous punishment than what perhaps the criminal himself may deserve.
22. Having thus considered our rule of decision, and the geographical range of our jurisdiction, I shall now eudenvour to ascertain, who may be parties to any suit or action. On this point, the passage of the Charter which I have quoted speaks merely of defendants; doubtless presuming that, according to the dictates of common law and natural justice, every person may appear here as freely as elsewhere, in the character of a prosecutor or of a phaintiff : and lefore going farther, I may whld that the express provision of the Charter, with regurl to defendants, numely, that they are to be such as live under us, is just as consistent with natural justice and common law, as is its tacit prestumption with regaril to plaintiffs and prosecutors. To offer one prelimimury remark more, I propose to consider the subject of parties to a eivil suit, separately and distinctly from that of parties to a criminal prosecution.
23. In a civil suit, mo imlividual, whether a settler or n savage, whether a foreigner or a subject, is persomally disgualified, as such, for resorting to this Court as a plaintiff; excepting that he never can recover judgment for the specific restitution of lands or houses sitnated beyond the limits of our judicial district. Even if lying within any other district of Rupert's Lund, such property is not in on power ; and if lying in my other comntry, it is not ar appears to o. 3, ch. 138, elves beyond , there really and the I and perhaps be ority appears at which has 'om the eharb lurospeetivewhole of the her jossensed ificutions, factrade are, or be IMMEDI-1 command of o be direetly e beyond the ponsilisility of ay be raised, of the neigha world has in urisdiction so the witnesses uself may ale-geographical who may be Charter whieh g that, aecord. y person may eutor or of a $s$ provision of to be such as non law, as is 'To offer one parties to a ninal proscen-vage, whether - resorting to judgment for limits of our upert's Land, antry, it is not liable even to be regulated by laws identieal with our own. I need hardly state the obvious exception, that the plaintiff, if his claim does not exceed five pounds, can take any defendant, who may reside within four miles of either river, only before the inferior Court of sneh lefendants own section of the settlement, as distinguished even from the munieipal district.
24. Again, in a eivil suit, no individual can be eonstrained to stand before this Court in the character of defendant, unless he has been regularly summoned within the limits of the judicial district, either by receiving the summons himself, or by having the same left for him with a grown person at his ordinary dwelling. In the ease, however, of an Indian, his liability to appear and answer as a defendant is necessalily sulijeet to some important qualifications. If the plaintiff claim a debt under a eontraet, he incurs a considerable risk of being defeated by the inherent illegality of the transation ; and even where the transation may not be vitiated by the violation of our fundamental law, every tribunal is, in justice and humanity, bound to give to a defendant, who is by eomparison a child for life, the same exemption as if he really were a minor, -an exemption from the operation of every bargain that is not solidly adrantageous to himself ; or, in other worls, an exemption from the payment of everything but really necessary supplies, furnished at reasonable rates. If, again, the plaintiff elaim, not a delit under a contraet, Int damages for a wrong, the liability of an Indian defendant, must, in my opinion, be regulated by the same principles in a eivil suit as in a eriminal prosecution ; the two things, however ditferent in appenrmee, being intimately connected together in reality. If a wrong does not amount to a erime at all, then, of course, it can be the subjeet only of a civil suit but not of a eriminal prosecution; but if it does amount to a erime, then it may be the subject of either or of both ; excepting that, where the erime exceeds a misdemeanor, the eivil suit, in order to prevent composition of felony, must not he hegun till the criminal prosecution he elosed. Tr. "gh with respect to the higher class of erimes, this law is, practically, almost inoperative at home, where a conviotion of felony ruins all whom it does not banish or destroy; yet here, where pumishments are generally light and brief, it may beneficially be made to give private satisfaction to the injured individual, as well as publie atonement to the outraged community. But to return to the case of an Indian defendant; you will now see more clearly, why his civil liability for $n$ private wrong, as has alrealy been stated, must be regnlated by the same principles as his eriminal liability for a pnblie offence; and the prineiples in question of this his common liability will be eonsidered under the remaining suldivision of this head.
25. In a criminal ease, just as in a eivil suit, no individual, whether a settler or a savage, whether a foreigner or a subject, is personnlly dispualified, as such, for resorting to this Court as it prosecutor ; and here, again, I need hardly state the obvious exeeption, that the proseentor, if he sue for a local penalty of not more than one pomid, can take iny defendant, who may reside within four miles of either river, only before the inferior Court of such defendant's own section of the settlement, is distinguished even from the municipal Mistrict.
26. On the subject of criminal defendants in general, our jurisdiction varies according as the offence may have been committed in our own judicial district or in any other district of Rupert's Land. In the former case, we can lay a bill of indietment before the grand jury in the absence of the necused party, though we cannot proceed to trinl before a petty jury without his presence ; but, in the latter case, we can employ neither the one jury nor the other till the accused party has been placed at our disposul by the resident authorities of the proper district. You are, of course, aware that we cannot hear and determine offences comnitted beyond the limits of Rupert's Land; but, thongh we cannot try such offences, yet we may incidentally be required to take some cognizance of them in aid of other jurisdictions. If an offender agninst the criminal laws of England, or of Scothand, or of any other part of the British empire be found in our judicial district, we must, on our allegiance, assist ministerially, if required, in apprehending such offender to be conveyed to the scene of crime and punishnent. But if an offeuder againat the criminal lnws of the United States take refuge among us, we are entitled and bound, before surrendering him under the Ashburton 'l'reaty, to satisfy ourselves, by a kind of preliminary trial, first, that he is not a fugitive slave, guilty only of suatching the means of escapmg to this lund of equal liberty ; and serondly, that he is really liable to be convicted, both in law and in fact, before the ultimate tribunal. This auxiliary jurisdietion perhaps no other country in the worll possesses in so remarkuble a degree. When the contignous wilderness of the United States is the scene of the offence, we may be bound, according to circumstances, to aid any one of the three jurisdictions of England, or Canada, or America. In every case, unless the crime, as such, be exempted from the operation of the Ashburton Treaty, Americn may claim our intervention ; if the offender be a British subject, either America or Canadn muy require our help; and if both the offender be a British subject and the offence be murder or manslaughter, either America or Canada, or Fingland may demand our assistance.
27. From the consideration of defendants in general, I now come to that of Indian defendants in particular. The political position of the aboriginal tribes is not that of individual suljeets, but of dependent communities, connected with the empire by what the writers on the law of mations denominate an merfual alliance,-the essential points of inequulity being these, that they are not permitted to hold political intercourse with any foreign power, or to naturalize among themselves uny civilized individuals, whether foreigners orsubjects. But to explain this second point of inequality, these aboriginal mations do not necessarily consist of Indians alone: for, though they cannot naturalize strangers, yet a ehild of mixed blood unless born in reeoguised wedlock, may, accordiug to the subsequent circumstances of his life, be held, at least for many purposes, to have adopted either the civili\%ed nationality of his father, or the savage natiomality of his mother. For the present purposes, if not for every other, any half-lreed members of nuaborigimal community must be reckoncl hy us as Indinns; and it is on this same prineiple that, in the neighboring country, they sometimes, if not always, enjoy the poor privilege of sharing in the pittance doled out to their tribe, when it is driven from the jurisdiction own judicial ler case, we of the aecuswithout his jury nor the the resident at we cannot pert's Land ; r be reduired f an offender other part of on our alleder to be con$r$ against the entitled and , satisfy ourgitive slave, qual liberty ; and in fact, ups no other ien the cone, we may be jurisulictions rime, as such, ica may claim erica or Cansubject and dala, or Eng.

come to that he aboriginul nunities, cons denominate se, that they power, or to foreigners of se aboriginal they camot n recognised life, be held, nationality of ent purposes, munity must that, in the oor privilege en from thelands on which perhaps the bayonet has plantel it, to another place of exile but not of rest. Here, however, the classification in question is comparatively of no pratical importance. Though, on the one side of the international homblary, the half-breeds generally prefer the strage equality of the wilderness to the serf-like inferiority with which law and prejndice alike oppress them within the pale of civilization; yet, on the other side of the same line they have almost universally embraced the proffered privileges of Britisl: subjects on this congenial spot, where neither prejudice nor law recognises my distinctions of colomr, or origin, or race. We are all members of the same little community-a commmity in many respects the most interesting that the world has ever seen. We are all suhjeets of the same sovereigna sovereign the mightiest and most illustrious on earth. We are all citizens of the same empire-an empire of matchless freedom, opulence, and renown. But, to return to the aboriginal commmites: it is on this ground alone of separate aml distinct mationality that we can recognise their chiefs as their representatives, thongh not provided with any special anthority : for, if the Indians really were our fellow-citizens, we could not extend to them this indngence without helping to split society into factions; however willing practicnlly to acknowledge a leadership won by participating in toils and dangers, aud by dispensing hospitality and bounty.

28. Now, thon.gh our eriminal jurisdiction, as Iready defined, extends over all classes in general fron the entrance of Hudsou's Struits to the more northerly feeders of the Missouri, and from the Lake of the Woods to Portage In Loche, or perhaps to the mouths of the Mackenzie ; yet, with respect to any Indian in particular, he nust be held to be excmpted, wherever and whenever he may act within the due limits of the nationality of his own tribe. When the natural incidents of open warfare are set aside, as uot at all amounting to legal crimes, such subordinate mationality must always give way to our supreme nationality, as often as the one comes into collision with the other ; and this obvious and undeniable principle appears to afford an easy solution of every imaginable case. Uuder the law of nations, our every estab. lishment, whether a solitary house or a populons settlement, plants our supreme nationality within the range of its ordinary operations; and, therefore, within such range, one savage has no more right to injure another, than a settler has to iujure either of them, or than either of them has to injure a settler. If, however, Indians have been permitterl, in a national capacity, to encroach on such range, whether for permanent residence or for temporary sojourn, they ought, in my opinion, to be exempted, with respect to each other, for petty offences committed within such limits as they may mationally oconpy,-excepting, perhitps, when their chief has, either specially or generally, dischimed in our favor his own national jutisdiction. Under the same law of mations, moreover, the most lonely traveller carries hefore himself and his property the broad shield of our nationality aeross and along the tervitories of the heathen ; excepting, however, that the individual, who may be travelling in slefiance of our law, has voluntarily chosen to cast our mationality hehind him, and to rely alike for protection anl for redress against the savage on his own lawless arm. In this particulne, the law of nations is not restricted to the intercourse of civilized states with barbarous tribes, but extends, though in a modified form, to the intercourse of civilized states with each other. Every commmity possesses the acknowledged right of avenging the wrongs, which its members may huve sustnined at the hunds of ary other community, either by public war or by private reprisals,-at right, by-the-bye, which is expressly vested in the Hudson's Bay Company by its Charter. Now such it right oinvously comprises, what is far more eonsistent both with humanity and with justice, the lesser right of demanding, or, if necessury, of seizing, for the purposes of trial, any Indian, who may have injured us even within the territory of his tribe. It might, however, he prudent to imitate, if possible, the eivilized rule of previously requiring satisfaction from the nation of the offender, more particulnrly if the injury were such as to admit compensation ; and even with respect to the gravest offences, it might still be prudent to lave the punishment, if likely to be alequate, in the hands of the tribe.
29. To come to the fourth sublivision of this head, namely the constitution of this tribual, the Court of Governor and Comncil, in aldition to the governor as its essential head and myself as its legal organ, comprises such memhers of the comeil as are justices of the peace. But it is only as couneillors that the magistrates and myself sit ; their peculiar dinty, as magistrates, being limited to the municipal distriet ; and my own peeuliar duty as Recorder, having reference to Rupert's Land. For judicial purposes, the whole council is inconveniently numerous ; and, if a selection must be made, those members, who so ably and laborionsly liseharge the proper functions of a justice of the peace, ure clearly best gualified for the task and best entitled to the distinction. But, if the magistrates, from any eause whatever, should he unable to attend in sufficient numbers, the governor would, of course, command the services of as many other councillors as might be required to supply the deficiency,-every councillor, on accepting ollice, having thereby pledged himself to enfore the laws, from the fundamental Charter of the country down to the latest local enactment.
30. On the important subject of juries, as an appendage of this Court, the Charter was altogether silent, and perhaps necessarily so, inasmuch as, till after many years, it could hardly anticipate, that there could he conveniently eollected, within any district, a sufficient mumber of intelligent and disinterested individuals. But the aid of a jury, though not enjoined, was yet not prohibited; and, accordingly, in 1839, by the spontaneons desire of the Governor-in-Chief, the inhalitants at large of Red River Settlement were entrusted with that best description of self-govermment, the practical dispensation of eivil and criminal justice. For so inestimable a boon I gladly embrace this opportunity of stating that the community was exclusively indebted to Sir George Simpson : for, as I was myself mavoidally ignorant alike of the fualifications and of the dispositions of the people, I was inclined to deprecate the measure as perhaps prematnre. Sir deorge, however, felt confilence where I entertained doubts ; and I soon foumd reason to believe that my doults were wrong and his contidence right. - But the elevation of the people at large in the social and political seale is only the secondary recommendation tribes, hut exd stutes with ht of arenging Is of any other ht, hy-the-hye, Charter. Now both with huf necessary, of jured us even at to innitate, if rom the nation to admit commight still he the hauds of ly the constiuldition to the omprises such ouly as counas magistrates, uty as Recordses, the whole re made, those functions of a est entitled to ver, should be f course, comaired to supply erelyy pledged f the country of this Court, asmueh as, till e conveniently and disinterwas yet not lesire of the hent were enlical dispensaladly embrace indebted to alike of the 1 to deprecate it confidence eve that my of the people mmendation of the system ; its easential blessing being this, that it places the alministration of justice uhove the very suspicion of purtiality. In so limited a society, where every intividual is so elosely beset by the personal ties of blood or of marriage or of intimacy, me and the same set of judges, however uprightly and independently we might act could not expect uniformly to convince the unsuccessful parties of our independence and uprightness in the weighing of evidence, the determining of facts, and the estimating of damages; more particularly as we should not he bounl, like a jury, to arrive at an ummimons decision, and might thus by the diversity of our own opinions, foster, or even elicit, the dissatisfaction of the loser. But from such surmisesmad uncertainties the verdiet of a jury is, as effectually as possibla, exempted. First, the proper officer does his hest to bring together only such men as he believes to he wholly murejudiced and disinterested: srcourly, the parties themselves may make assurance douhly sure by challenging, with or without reason, in criminal prosecntions, or by putting preliminary questions, on oath if neces. sary, in civil suits : and thirdly, the whole herly, so carefully selected and so igidly sifted, must come to one and the sume opinion onevery point submitted to its consideration.
31. But in diselaiming, as I hate done, for myself, personally all merit in the matter, I have no hesitation in claming for the law, of which I had been uppointed to he the first interpreter, the praise of rendering Sir George's enlightened and patriotie determination practicnlly efticient. The respective provinees of bench and jury are these-that the bench dechares the law, and the jury ascertains the facts; und though the bench is not reguired, like the jury, to be alsolutely unamons, yet the distinction between them, as just now stated, elearly involves the necessity, that the bench shall address the jury with one collective and harmonions voice. Now, a mumber of unprofes. sional men, however acute in intellect or cordial in feeling, eould hardly expect, in the unavoidable absence of any common principles of knowledge and helief, to arrive within any reaso able time, at so desirable a result; having tirst to disentangle the law, to be declared by themselves, from the facts, to le ascertained ly the jury; and then to point out which of the facts ought to bear on the vordict, as distinguished from the damages, and which of them on the damages, as ristinguished from the verdict. If such a eo-operation had been attempted, its inevitable, though mintentional, effect would have heen the mutual encroachments of the two bories, the bench usupping the functions of the jury, and the jury usurping the functions of the bench. Thus would one of the two have been worse than superfluous, for each would, in a grat measure, have relieved the other from the sense of responsibility; su that, at last, the abolishing of juries, at least in civil cases, would have been hailed as a remedy ; bad, indeed, in itself, but not so bad as the disease. But, gentlemen, let me not he misunderstool. Your excellent governor and magis. trates, however impossible it might have been for them alone to give to the settlement the full benefit of the noblest hirth-right of British colonists, Trial by Jury, perform an invaluable service to the canse of justice and order as the eolleagnes of a professional stranger, who, in the absence of legal practitioners and of a puhbic press, ought to feel, and even to covet, the vigilant supervision of those who are liest fitteal to apprecinte and protect your private mal public rights.

3:. Thas, gentlemen of the grand jury, it is, through the introduction of law, strictly so-called, that yourselves and your fellow citizens have heen raised to become, in the most important of all respects, the arbiters of your own lestinies ; und it is through the same free gift of the Homomble Company, that you enjoy the only true freedna, the privilege of being governed not ly the wavering wills of living men, lout by the indexible impartiality of general rules written in the hoom and sweat of the wise and good among your futhers. Though to men of information and reflection, such as those, whom I have now the honor to alliress, there is nothing new in what I have just stated, yet, I well know, thot very different opinions are industriously disseminated among the ignorment and unwary. It is to beaseribed to the law and to myself, as I am assured hy an ohliging friend, that debts camot be collected, and that "rogucs" camot be punished ; my eorrespondent, so fiu as I cun understand him, referring to the strictness of the rules of evidence; in the faee of the anthentic fact, that such rules have never stood in the way of sulstimtial justice, whether in eivilsuits, or in crimimal prosecontions. Nor, in this respect is the future likely to belie the past. The eompliment of allowing " rognes" to escape with impunity, I harlly expeeted to recejve from any quarter ; and as I have not deserved it hitherto, so neither do I mean to leserve it hereafter. With regard to the ilehts, which interest my informants sympathy, I need merely say that, if they are just in amount, us well as in principle, they have little to dreal from thw, which, within the year, mbmits the creditor's books in his own favor, to be weighed, as evidence, by the jury, according to the regularity of the entries on both sides of the account.
33. Before leaving the subject of juries, I onght, perhaps, to ald that, at home, petty offences are often tried in a summary way by justices of the peace. But this hasty jurisdiction, "ests on grounds which have no place among us; such as that it has hecome absolntely necessary through the mmanageable umount of eriminal business, and is rendered comparatively sufe oy the inevitable pmblicity of all the proceedings of even the humblest tribunals. . Imong us a similar jurisdiction would be as pernicions as it would be mmecessary. In the event of a conviction, the commanity, if it hearlanything at all on the subject, would most probably hear lifty versions of the charge and half as many of the pmishment, without a single syltable as to the aetnal prosi of criminality : and in the event of an açuittal, the few might concon. $e$ that there had been a want of evidence and the many might imbibe crule notions as to the impunity of crime; while neither the many nor the few would be likely to contemplate the charitable alternative of the entire falsehood of the aceusation. In a worl a summary jurisdietion among us would neither vimlicate the law by making an example of guilt, nor satisfy that abstract justice, which is the foumlation of all law, by publishing the proofs of immoence. To all these unavoidable results of the want of publicity must be alded the more serions, though less eertain, evil, that the less public tribunal would be more likely to crnsh mpopular imoeence or to sereen popular guilt.
your priv. roduction of f have been ers of your rable ('omg governel bartiality of food among di as those, hat I hure ulustrionsly ed to the law t tamnot be dent, so far f evidente; in the way tions. Nor, ment of alceeive from I mean to informant's well as in se yenr, aulence, by the e account.
a ald that, tices of the re no place gh the unatively sufe mblest triis it woull theard any. ons of the ole as to the few might ght imbilive by nor the the entire among us nor satisfy lishing the ff publicity e less pub.

[^4]34. In criminal prosecutions, to the consideration of which I shath now contine myself, the law demanls the aid of two juries, the grand and the petty, the latter eomsisting of twelve men, and the former containing miy momber not less than twelve and not greater than twenty-three. The petty jury, which tries the question of g.ilt or innocence in the presence of the necased party, must, as yon all know, be mamimons; for the law hmanely permits the stealy doubt of one juror to operate to the prisoner's nequital, in the fuce of the opposite belief of his eleven associates. The grand jury on the contrary, decides according to the opinion of may twelve, who in a booly uot exceding twenty-three, must always be a majority ; so that it is never reguired to be manimous, unless when twelve only are present. Its special duty, as I have already had necasion to hint, is merely to determine whether there be sutticient ground for sending any person to be tried before a petty jury. Clearly, therefore, it neither requires, nor ahnits, the presence of the party acensed; and as elearly, too, it neither repuires nor whits any other evidence than that for the prosecution. To this evidence for the prosecution a gramd juror camot in general apply a soumler test than by asking himself the question, whether he would, if he were on a petty jury, eomvict the purty on such evidence in the event of its being manswerel and unshaken. If his eonscienee should reply to such question in the affirmative, then is he bomul on his oath to join in finding "a trop bill ;" lat, if his conseience should reply in the negative, he is not necessarily bound to join in finding " wot a tru" bill," inasmuch as the party, when put on his trial, maty confess his guilt, or even his own witnesses, as we have sometimes seen in this Court, may furnish stronger testimony against him, than those of the prosecutor. Bat the two possibilities in question ought not to have any weight, unless the grand juror is morally convinced by the evilonce for the prosecution that the accused party is really guilty : and, even withont reference to such possibilities, a grand juror's opinion must geneiaily rest ather on moral than on legal gromals, for he deliberates with his colleagues in the absence of judieial super. vision or of professional alvice. But beyond this there may be reasons of poliey for mot finding "a true bill," even when one is morally convinced of its truth. A suspected person, thongh he may has e escaped from one grand jury, may yet be brought before another and another ; while, if acruitted by ome petty jury, he is free for ever, in spite of any adlitional evidence that may trinspire, and in spite even of his own sulsequent confessions : and a grant juror, therefore, should at all times qualify his merely moral belief by such a consideration, wherever he may have reasom to think that ay insullicieney of tegal evidence may be remedied by delaty.
35. This exposition of your principal duty, will show you that, in print of fact, a grand jury is really needed only where the evidence is donltful, and where the elarge is so grave and important as to entitle the acensed party to the benelit of all the forms and defences of the law. From Febrany, 1840, to November, 1844, inelusive, no such ease arose : and this (ourt could hardly have felt justified in drawing twenty three respectable men from their ordinary vocations to enter on preliminary enquiries, which were obvionsly superfluons. In Beardie's case of November, 18:39, as well as in the Intian case of to-day, the veritict of the coroner's jury might, on general gromots, have allowed the Court to dispense with your attendance. But, in Beardie's case, the preliminary verdiet of manslanghter wond necessarily have led to an maqualified aequittal: for the deed, if $n$ erime at all, was wilful and deliberate homicide; and hy oltaining from the grame jury a trae bill to that effeet, the petty jury was enabled to temper the dietates of law with the pleanliugs of compassion, by aepuitting the boy of muriler, hy reasons of his years. Again, in the present case, though the prelinimary verdict is not liable to the ssame techacal objection, yet it has perhaps mot proceeded fromi so full a consileration of so important a charge as ought to precede the fimal trial ; and, as a general rule, eoroner's jurors, with the mangled, mad, perliap, still wurm buly of a fellow ereatho before them, wohld be something more, or somethag less, than men, if they did not give way to their impulses ineompatihle with patient inguiry and dispassionate consinemtion. A coroner's inquest, lowever, is mi mhimable means of collecting evidence on the spot, while the corpse is still somal, and the facts are still recent; abd, in this respeet, the zealous and elonnent pastor, who, as $I$ ann glan to see, continnes to discharge the duties of eomber, is entitled to the wamest thanks of the Connt and the community.

3t. I have thas, gentlemen of the gram jury, prepared you for the special duties of to-day, at much greater length than I at first intended. The subject gradually grew under my pen, till at last I was imbluced to think, that my lahours might possihly have a value beymul the uses of the inmediate oceasion ; and the possibility of such a result, again promipted me to still fuller discussion, particularly with regard to such exceptions and qualifications, us unprofessional hearers could not lave been expected to suply for themselves. My adilress, however, would have heen longer, if I had wot written it; and even my comprition would have reguired to be more diffuse, if I hal not resolven to semel my manuscript with you to your own room.
37. Having thas prepured you, as I have just stated, for your special duties, let me now draw your pationt attention to the single case that is ahout to form the main subject of your deliberations, the alleged lomicide of an Inlian woman by an Indiaman, within the limits of Red River Nettlement. So far as the mationality of the parties is concerned, the locality of the offence places our jurisiliction in the matter heyond a rloubt ; so that yon have merely to consider whether any homicide be establi. ' by the evidence ; and whether the homicide that may be sonestablished, be murder or manslathter. Now, though the first point, as a maked matter of fact, falls entirely within your own province ; yet the secoml point, as comprising mot merely fact, but law, appears to demand from me a few explatory observations.
38. Homicide, if at all eriminal, mast be either murder or manslanghter. It is marder if committed with maliee ; and it is manslanghter if committed without the same. Lo far the infuiry would involve merely a matter of fact, if the law did not interpose with something more than a popular definition of the distinctive malice in question. Of the intluence of this legal definition, Beardie's case, which was just now mentioned, would afford us, perhaps the best example on record. One boy directed against another a deadly arrow, promuls, have Berrdie's case, led to an unmid deliberate hat effect, the the pleatings of his years. thable to the so full a conal trial : cual, perla $]^{n,}$ still ting more, or بpulses ineomA coroner's inon the spot, nd, in this res, comtinues to chanks of the for the spuecial
The suliject $k$, that my lah. onceasion; and ler discussion, s, as unprofesemselves. My it; mad even d not resolved

- your special se that is alout omicide of an er settlement. $y$ of the offence ou have mereevidence ; and or manshanghfalls entirely ng not merely servations. manslaughter. - if committer matter of fact, ur definition of gal definition, s, perhaps the deadly arrow, within a deally listance, mad with a deally am, Now, thongh a very juror and every julge dombtless sitw in this action merely a great degree of boyish thoughtlessmess, yet the law, at least as a genemal rule, necessarily inferreal malice, fonion si voluntaly and effectmal an applieation of fatal means to a fatal end : and nothing saved Beardie from a verdict of murber hot the law's special hmitation of its own general rule to the comparatively mature age oif fonrteen. Malice, when it is obvions to the senses, is said to be express: but when it is luferred by the haw it is satid to be implien. Of the former the jury is the julge ; biat the julge of the latter is the bench. Now, the law Hways implies maliee, miless the erime be reduced hy the evidence to one or other of the two sab-divisions of volmatary and involmatary manalanghter. Homieide is vohuatary manslangher when it is committed in heat of bowd cansed by adergate provocation : and it is involantary manslanglater when it is commated through accident in the execution of an malawful act, which does not in itself amomat to felong. In the case of volmatary manslaughter, the liw extemls a reasonable indulgence to hman intirmity ; lint, in the ease of invohamary manslaghter, every penal emacment, lowever in other resspeets, it may appear to he a demi letter, fortities itself with pitfalls, which its viohators may tind to be more fomaidahle than its direct and positive sametions.

33. If, after this expmsition, the evidence hay lawe you still in doult as to the classifieation of the homicide which you are bow to eonsider, yonr better comrse will be to return an indictment of marder, becanse such iblict ment may, under the direction of this Comrt, be mitigated by the petty jury into manslanghter, whereas an indictment of manslanghter camot, in a similar way, be aggravated into marder. In fact, where the gram jury inmicts for murter and the petty jury eonvicts of mandanghter, both juries may be eqmally correct in their respective decisions: for, as the law presumes all homicine to be mander till the contrary be proved, the palliating ciremasta nees are of eourse often elicited from the prisoner's witnesses, who, as I has already mentioned, can appear before the petty jury alone.
34. But, you, gentlemen of the giand jury, may not return any indiet. ment of homicise at all ; or if you do return one, the gentlemen of the petty jury may acepuit the prisoner of homicide in its every shape; and to provide against either of these contingeneios, the proper ofticer has prepared suth a hill of adietment for a minor offence as will hardly inwolve any doubt or diffienty within your peenliar province. The secom bill of adietment in question is for an attempt to murder ; and I slath add a few observations, in order, if persible, to rember the law of the case ats clear as the facts seem to be certain. Though a man eamot be tried a second time before a petty jury under a legal charge of which he has once been acquittel ; yet he may, in effect, be trieal twice, or possibly oftener, maler different legal charges mising from one and the same eriminal act. To take homicide as an instaneo, -if the petty jury conll not at onee mitigate an indictment of marder into a verdiet of manslanghter, an aeguittal of the former charge might still be follow. ed by a trial for the latter, inasmath as the homicide, thongh dechared not to have been wilful, might still be erimiat: and in the sume way the anattal of homedide still leaves open any charge that may be fommed on the preceding seenes of the tragedy. Now every attempt at any crime whatever is itself a misdemeanour, pmishable, in all eases, ly fine and imprisomment, and, in certain aggrivated cases, by whipping ulsoand the pillory. Nay, so rigorously does the law alopt the popular maxim, which prefers prevention to eure, that it elassifies together the attempt actually to commit the crime mol the attempt, however manceessful, to induce another to commit it. With respect to two offences in partieular, this provident vigilance of the law is the hest, or mather the only guarantee for private secmity nad public tranquility. If, in a case of perjury, the party swearing falsely could alone be pmished, every man's property, every man's liberty, and every man's life would be at the merey of sneh as might have the eraft to suborn, hut not the comage to perpetrate the erime; mal if, in a case of sedition, the prime movers conld not he reached through all their screens of worldy wisdom, the law would hut ill discharge its dniy either to the peaceable victims of insubordination, or to the deluded and misguided instruments of emming.
35. If the prisoner, whether you find homicide or only an attempt at the sil ie, should appear to have been in a state of intoxication, this ciremmstance will demand your serious consideration. Drmenemess, unless involmatary on the part of the offender, is never receised by the law as a palliation of the oifence for this plain reason, lest intending criminals may, hy anticipation, wash out the deeper dyes of their guilt in the same strem that is to drown their reasom. In filet, drunkemess, though I have never seen the point so stated, is likely even to aggravate, in the eye of the law. the oflence of slaying a human being. To reduce criminal homicide to volntatary manslanghter, it must, as I have already mentioned, have been committed in heat of blood cansed by adequate provocation; hut, as the blood, which is alrealy boiling with injected sire, will hardly wait for what would he adepuite provocation to more temperate veins, the drunkard might be convicted of murder under eiremmstances which would render a sober man guilty merely of manslanghter. Agatin, an aceident, which may be imocent in a sober man, may yet, at least on general principles, be involmatary manslanghter in a dronkard, inasmueh as drunkennoss is itself a legal crime; und, in truth, accidental homicide, if committed in a state of intoxication, ought to be reckoned not involuntary manslanghter, but wilful murder, for the same plain reason as hefore, lest drunkemess may he deliberately mate the cloak of maliee ; and elearly must be so reckoned, where the alleged accident is of such $n$ nature as to be rather the consequence of the dronkemess than its eoncomitant; such, for instance, as throwing one down a precipice hy stargering against him.
36. Further, if the woman should appear to have been intoxicated as well as the man, the probability of his guilt will be lessened in proportion to her inability to guard ugninst the treachery of her own limbs and the severity of the weather : and in either ease the trugieal event must be manly imponted to the influence of liguor.
37. This leads me, gentlemen, to discuss the higher and more independent branch of your daty, the presenting of any breach of the criminal law. even where the proper oflicer has mot laid before you a bill of indictment.
on the precede whatever is isomment, ami, ay, sorigorouson to cure, that e and the at. With respect $N$ is tle best, anquility. If, minished, every uld be at the ourage to pervers conld not s would but ill ation, or to the attempt at the s circumstance involuntary on lliation of the icipation, wash rown their reastated, is likely a hmman being. ust, us I liave ed by inlequate injected sire, nore temperate ustances which gain, an steciast on general eh as drumken, if committed manslanghter, ankenness may e so reckoned. te conseguence throwing ont xieated as well portion to lier Id the severity minly imputed ore independ. eriminal law. of indictment.

You are, in fact, the grand inguest of our judicial district, for, in this respect, you eannot look beyond its borders. When you indict at the suggestion of of another, yon are merely the anxiliary and minister of this (ourt ; but when yon present of your own neeord, you rise to the rank of its monitor and guide. It is enstomary, however, for the Cont to offer general hints as to the olijeets of your superintending care ; and I therefore add that, in this capacity, you possess, for the time, the right of presenting mot only acthal breaches of the criminal law, such as the selling of beer to Indians, lont also all dangerous practices, such as the entrusting of lomided arms to ehildren; and, farther, of examining the mathinery of our penal jurisprmence, such as the gat and the poliee, and of reporting how far the same nay he working in accordance with the requirements and mecessities of the applicable enactments, But, as lasty opinions are more likely to do harm than good, I deem it expedient to warn yon, unprepared as you of course are for the discharge of new and unknown functions, that you ought not to yicld at all to the unpremeditated impulse of the moment, or to decide any familiar point without the greatest candion and circmaspection; and, as a matter of eonvenidut arangement, I must suggest to yon the propriety of returning the hill of indictment, whether found or mot fonnd, hefore you allow yourselves to be entangled in any more general dis. enssion whatever.
44. Of all the topies which I hiwe suggested, beer-selling abone would appear to require any explanation; bint I shonla not enter on the superthous task of enlarging on its impropriety before so intelligent and respectable an andience, were not the beer-dealers uniformly disposed to impngn the prohibition as miquitous ; and, to vindicate the thatfic as imocent, to calmmiate the law as well as to violate it.
4.7. Now, while giving to the beer-dealers, as I ani bound to do, full eredit for perfect sineerity, I am equally bonnd to tell them, that they lave mistaken their remedy. If one individual may practically prefer his own notions of justice to the elear dietates of law, why may not another do the sante. Agrain, if every individual do so, what is this hut the despotism of will over duty ; the trimmph of anturehy wer order ; the snapping asumber of all the bonds that hold society together: But, even in its more certain and innmediate consequences, the habitual infringenment of nuy law is a wilful fund on those who systenatioally ohey it. To attain the benclits of social life and regular govermment, every individual sumifices a portion of his matmal liberty, not neeessarily because he himself might abose it, but berause others might doso: for it is an inevitable condition of civil security that the oflences of knavery lead, in a greater on less degree, to the cocrecon of honesty ; mad if others persist in reserving what he himself has surmendered, he is, of course, so fir deframbed of the expected price of his own personal sieritices. The trie remedy of the heer-deaters for the alleged grievance is to present a petition to the fovernor and Council of Assiniboia for the repeal of the ohnoxions regulation, setting forth the hardship of heing forlidhen to :wail themselves to the full of the superabundment riches of the soil, and the inferior intel ets of its ance ent lords.
46. In maintaining that even a bud law. while it exists at all, ought to ie obeyed, I realily almit that it ought not to be allowed to exist one moment beyond the earliest opportmity of lawfully amulling it ; and, so far us I am eoncerned, I shall never vote for any regulation which I camot prove to rest on some foumbation stronger than the mere fitet of its existence, or the mere will of a majority. But, so far from wishing the beer-dealers to interpret this general coneession in their own partieular favor, I shall now proeced briefly to examine their opinion, solely becanse I um most firmly persuaded that they themselves will recoil from the truth as soon as they see $i=$,-in persuasion, which, with regarlat least to some of them, I hase on my own ex. perience of the respectability of their general eharacters, and the uprightness of their general trathatetions.
47. Their ouly argument I believe to be this, that the beer-drinker, and and not the beer-seller, ought alone to be held responsible for all the external evils of his drunkenness. Speaking nerely of iamman laws, which regaril not the sin but the crime, I am quite ready to admit that this argument is unanswerable, and irresistible in its general npplication to eivilized men; and [am also quite realy to admit that the beer-dealer's argument may be honestly framed and honestly urged, with an erroneonsly exelusive reference to suit its general applieation. But, though the defence be legally good and valid with respect to the eivilized purehaser, who may buy without drinking, and may drink withont being drunk, and possibly even without wishing to be so ; yet it is utterly weak and worthless with respect to the reckless barbarian, to whom, from his meontrollible desires and his suseeptible constitution, drinking and dronkenness are as necessarily eonnected together as flame and combustion. In the general case, therefore, of civilized men, drunkemess is at most only probahle: but, in the particular ease of the Indians, absolutely inevituble ; and, even if it were equally certain in both eases, the more serious consequenees of the drunkemness of $a$ suage-consequences almost as eertain as the drunkemess itself-would still justify the law in visiting the one case with penalties and in passing the other with impunity. As the topic is one of deep, extensive, and durable interest, I shall subjoini to these undeniable generalities a more detailed view of the cffeets of which tie beer-dealer has been shown to be the cause; and I feel contident, and trust to make you feel equally so, that any beer-dealer, who may still continue mo:ally to justify his illegal comrse, must have debased other faculties than those of his untutored victims.
48. To begin with his neighomes, the beer dealer is deficient in that kimlly courtesy which forms the sweetest, and perhaps the strongest, bond of social life : while by putting himself in their power at the sime time that he outrages their feelings and tramples on their interests, he meonseionsly gives them credit for the very quality of neighbourly forbenance which he has banished from his own breast. When viewed in this light, even he himself cannot consider as venial the lmbit of letting loose on his acknowledged wellwishers the generally armed creatures, whom he has drugged into fury, as objeets of terror und instruments of violence.
40. To pass from his neighbours in purticular to the settlement ingeneral, the beer-alealer stretches his self-interest to overlay all the ohligations of one moment a far as I an prove to rest or the mere to interpret now proceed ly persuaded ey sce i ,,-a a my own exe uprightness -drinker, mal I the extermal ch regard not ent is manen ; and [am be honestly nee to suit its de valid with ag, and may to lee so; yet larbarian, to cution, drinkme aml com:enness is at is, absolutely e more serilmost as eerting the one the topic is hese undenic beer-dealer o make you llly to justify f his mitutorient in that gest, bond of ime that he ciously gives Ihe has hanhimself canledged wellinto fury, as it in general, ,ligations of politieal duty and social fellowship, endangering the public tramuility for a few pence, and peradventure taxing, as in the present instance, the time of ach of fifty of his fellow-citizens to an amount greater than that of his own miserable gains. But against the settlement, as the destinel centre of $n$ vast eirele of civilization, the beer-dealer is guilty of a still higher misdemeanor: he does his best to defeat the benevolent object of its noble foumler, whose single-hearted enthusiasm it was to make the wilderness glad, and to see the desert hossom as the rose. Of his proceedings it is the mholy tendency to poison the promised blessing in its very springs, by training the red man beforehand to pervert agriculture, the best human aid of his moral and physical improvement, into the actual means of darker degradation and deeper dis. tress.
50. Though on purely religions grounds I camot enter without trespassing on the province of gentlemen much better qualified for the task than myself, yet I may refer more openly and move boldly than their modesty ever refers, to the debt of pious gratitude which this settlement owes to the benevolent associations that shed on you and on your children, without money med without price, the rich ministrations of the gospel of peace. To pass with this genera! notice the exertions of Catholic philanthropy, as not falling minutely within my knowlelge, the Church Missionary Soesty, during a period of more than twenty -rars, las not only supplied the Protestunt places of worship with able and zealous elergymen, but also been the essential, if not the exchisive, means of rlispensing among the Protestant youth the light of ellucation ; thus diverting, for the special henefit of oll and young, funds contributen by the humane and eharitable for the conversion of the heathen ; and on the part of the Protestant beer-dealer, it is an equally unthankful and inconsistent return for the peculiar regards of that assoeiation, and for the self-tenying sacrifiees of its members, to rob its proper uurselings of their glimmering twilight of reason, and thus to disqualify them still more for appreciating and accepting the mingled gifts of civilization and Christianity.
51. With respect to the Indians themselves, the beer-dealer eruelly injures those, whom, both on general and on special groumis, he is bound to regard with a compassionate interest. In comparison with himself they are mere chihlren, legally as well as equitably entitled to the minor's privilege of being defended or delivered from the seluetions of covetousness; and thicii blood, if it does not flow in his own veins, generally flows in the veins of those who are neurest and dearest to himseif. In spite, however, of these considerntions, the beer-dealer tears from the red man the scanty fruits of his reluetant labour, ingeniously rentering his larlarism more barbarous, through one of the essential instruments of civilization ; he does ins utmost to make the hungry und maked wanderer more maked and more hungry ; mid he aggravates the inherent miseries of a homeless life, by divesting his victim at once of miment and of understanding, by depriving him, in a word, of all that distinguishes the suvage from the brute. Besides all this, the beer-denler is morally accountable, and, perhaps, legally so, to society for his hesotted dupes' violations of the haw ; and whatever, in the present case, nay be the julicial opinion of bench or of jury, every farm that may, after this poor woman's untimely end, continue to drench the unhappy Indians with its moral and physical poison, will, before a higher tribunal, be registered as a field of blood, and assigned at the owner's death to his posterity with all its curses on itsbreast.
52. This antieipation needs not the eye of propheey. Even to the eye of sense there has alreuly gone forth a similar deeree of the Watchers; and every thoughtful man among you, must even now see the beer-dealer, as the uneonscious tool of retributive vengeance, himself directing against his own offspring, the preparatory thumlerbolts of the Almighty. By permitting his children to be the witnesses, nnd, perhaps, the instrunents of his own evasive avarice, and of his victim's reeling abasement, he voluntarily exerts a father's paramount influence to sow in their suseeptible minds, the opposites of sobriety, humanity and candour. How similar and yet how different was the conduct of one of the gentile tribes of antiquity. Sparta, a celebrated state of Greece, used to intoxieate her slaves, in order to inspire her heathen youths and maidens with a scornful horror of intemperance, thus palliating the wantonness of the injury by the loftiness of the motive; but the beer-dealer sells out by stealth an humiliation more eruel, in proportion to the now higher and holier uses of an unclouded understanding, with the view of teaching his Chris. tian sons and daughters that drunkemness in its most loathsome form, so long us it has a shilling or a rag to tempt eupidity and reward artifice, is one of the useful virtues. Sparta, though she knew nothing of Solomon, yet educated her progeny aecording to his well-established maxim; but the beer-dealer draws from a book older than the Bible-the book of national and domestie experience-the still better established maxim, that, if a child be trained up in the way in which he ought not to go, he will not, when he is old, depart from the same.
53. If ihese faintly coloured lines of athorible picture fail to make the requisite impression on the beer-dealer's nobler feelings, there still remain argunents of more tangille charaeter and more immediate force.
54. Though the express penalties of the municipal re,gulation may be turned aside, through the unmerited and unrequited silence of indulgent neighbours, yet the indirect consequences of a viohation of the law, whieh are fur wore to he deprecated, hang by un invisible thread over the most valuable of the beel-dealer's interests and rights. If robbed by any Indian who hati been the victim, or the witness, of the wretched traffic, the beer-dealer would most probably he deterred from prosecuting the robber by the dread of legal rutaliation; but if robbed by my Indim who was at the time affeeted by his potions, he would be similarly deterred by prodential sentiments and motives, which would be strong and weighty, even if there were no municipal regulalation in existence. But so elosely is the path of the lawless beset loy the toils of the law, that eonnivance would be more dungerous than prosecution. I adude not to the moral influence of an exan:ple, which would virtur" $y$ outlaw all property that might be tainted by the leaven of the red man's spoils; I allude to the legal faet, that to sell impuity tr ; felon, whether for money or for money's worth, amounts to the grave misdemeanor of composition of felony-a misdemeano punshable by diseretionmry fine mud diseretionary ts moral and field of blood, curses on its.
to the eye of 'atehers ; and dealer, as the ainst his owil ermitting his is own evasive erts a father's sites of solori. t was the con. rated state of sathen youths ting the wan-er-rlealer sells ow higher und hing lis Chris. form, so long ce, is one of $n$, yet educat. te beer-ticaler and domestic se trained up s old, depart to :nake the still remaili fion may be of inslulgent w, which are nost valuable an who had denler would read of legal fected by his and motives, cipal regulabeset by the prusecution. "irtur" y outnan's spoils ; r for money mposition of liseretionary imprisonment. Nor is this all : the beer-flealer not only thus becomes the sole guardian of some of his own rights, but also, to a certain extent, pledges his interest as the victim's surety with respect to the rights of other men. If the drunkemess were involuntary, und the crime immediate, then, in the eye of the law as well as of reason, the beer-dealer would be the criminal mad the Indian merely his instrument; and if the drunkenness were volmtary and the crime remote, even then, provided the jury were satisfied that dinking and drunkenness were one and the sume thing to an Indian, the beel-alealer would be liable, in pecuniary damages, for the outiages of the being whom ho had divested of understanding, hut not of strength; whom he had deprived of the means of seeing the right, but not of the means of aloing the wrong; whom he had robbed of the capacity to control hinself, but not of the power to injure others. Though the books tell me nothing expressly on this subject, yet they unanimously hold that the owner of a vicions horse is responsible, in one way or other, for all that the animal may do throngh his carelessness or wantonness; and the beer-rlealer, of conrse, is still more decidedly responsible for the actions of an irrational ereature, that lie has not only let loose to destroy, but deliberately armed with the weapons of ilestruction.
in. To offer, beyond my first intention, a few remarks on the subject of distillation, I am in justice bound to begin by ulmitting, that this correhtive offence rests, in in moral view, on very different grounds. The regulation, which the beer-dealer violates, prohibits the intoxicating of Inclians with any substance whatever ; but the regulation which the distiller violates, prohibits merely the munnfacturing of a certain species of intoxicating liquor. But of this comparatively ereditoble distinction, the distiller can avail himself only when he distills exclusively for domestic consumption; if he bring his whiskey into the market, he clearly incurs the risk of indirectly co-operating in the infringement of the more important regnation. But, under any circmmstances, whether he distills for his own fumily or for the publie at large, his offence, in its legal aspect, is more deliherate mal aulacious than that of the beer-aleaier, inasmnc!. as it commences with the very commencement of tho process, and is not necessarily committed umer the trying influence of a visible and tangibe bribe. Thus far, therefore, the general position of the distiller is not so much superior to that of the beer-dealer as is commonly imagined ; and, on a deeper scrutiny, the moral advantage, which, after all, must be restricted to such distillers ins do not sell, has, I fear, lirought several respectable imbividuals to the verge of an offence, far more serious than the violation of all our municipal enactments put together.
56. Though, in prosecuting a confesselly unpopular traftic, the beerdealer's only reliance is on the ditticulty of proving his offence; yet the distillers, trusting, forsooth, to the inherent innocence of their forbidilen trade, are confidently reprerted to have combined to resist by force the execution of the law. For many reasons, I cannot lelieve that men who have such a stake in the country, as all those must have, who luve anything to distill, can have actually antungled themselves in the highly penal erime of conspiracy, -a crime which is not the less punishable, however it nuy be nemut merely us an argument for the repeal of the obnoxious law. That the respectable individuals in question may have talked loosely mmong themselves on the subject, I can easily believe : for in this country, as in almost every other, any project that has not better reasons to support it, is always hacked, in its own inagination, by some dangerous phantoni or sther to alarm und dazzle and convince. But even such talking, if not legally criminal, is at least morally so, as tending, both, directly and indirectly to undermine the foundations of peace and order,-foundations in whose stability, every permanent resident in the country, however poor and humble, has a deeper interest than myself. If men wish to be free, they must not only obey the law themselves, but must by all lawful means prevent others from disobeying it,-every man's own oberlience being the price of that freedom which the obedience of rthers alone can secure. But to return to the distillers; selfish discontent is the most culpable on the part of those, whose sole grievance it is, that Providence has blessed them with more than man will allow them to destroy, when contrasted with the self-denying cheerfulness of their less fortunate brethren, who, through the happily rare coincidence of a bad hunt and a bad harvest, are now enduring the most severe privations with the most heroic fortitude.
57. If the duty of obeying the law is to bear any proportion to the value of what the law protects, then must such duty be peculiarly binding on the citizens of Red River Settlement. Their lot has been castin a land, in which industry is more inlependent than in any other of the accidents of fortune; and in which idleness is in a great measure, exempited from the miseries, and placed above the temptations of less favoured climes; in which the savings of economy, when prudently employed in trade, yield almost unexampled returns ; and in which even want, when it docs come, is not aggravated by those artificial feelings, which elsewhere embitter the evils of poverty through the shame of disclosing them. Such of you as occasionally reml the newspapers of the distant world, must see for how much you have to be thankful, and of how little you have to complain, possessing nearly all the happiness of eivilized life, with the smallest possible alloy of its toils and its cares. In a word, yon enjoy, almost as freely as air and water, the blessings for which God's chosen people prayed as the covelnanted reward of national obedience ; and it has often struck me that the beantiful petition of David, while, nt the lowest ebh of his fortmes, he was fleeing from the face of his rebcllious son, embolies a true picture of your enviable condition.
58. When I see your healthy and comely families nestling in wedded life around you almost as closely as the hen gathereth her chickens under her wiags, I may well repeat : "Your sons grow up as the young piants, and your daughters as the polished corners of the temple." When I ride between your almost spontaneous harvests and your untended flocks, I may again exclaim: "Your garners are filled with all manmer of store, and your sheep bring forth thousmends and ten thousands in your streets." When I observe your gigantic eattle lending their patient strength to your ploughs and again replacing the loan out of the cheap pastures of your plains, I may still ejaculate: "Your oxen are strong to labour, and there is no decay." When I consider, that you kuow war and hondage only as the scourges of our lands, pectable indion the subject, or, any project ts own inaginand convince. y so, as tendof peace and it in the counrself. If men it must by all wn obedience ers alone can the most culrovidence has len contrasted ethren, who, 1 harvest, are ortitude. to the value inding on the , in which in. fortune; and miseries, and the savings of exampled reggravated by verty through ad the newsbe thankful, happiness of cares. In a ngs for which ll obedience ; while, at the ebellious son, wedded life as under her ; piants, and ride between ay ugain exyour sheep en I observe 18 and again y still ejacut." When I f our lands,

I utter the words of the Jewish monareh in the proul and grateful spirit of a British subject: "There is no leading into captivity, and no complaining among yon." When I reflect that, through the pious bounty of Europe, you are peacefully basking in the beams of a far brighter dispensition than thr $t$ which the Jews were commanded to purehase with their labour, and obliged to defend with their lives, I echo with tenfold force the elosing summary of the royal psalmist: "Happy are the people that are in such a case; yea, blessed are the people that have the Lorl for their God."

[^0]:     ot spq.

    $\ddagger$ Journal of the Bishop of Montred, pp. K2.

    SIInlsou Bay, lu, fi3.

[^1]:    *Taken verhatim from vol. $1, \mathrm{pp}$. IOO-114 incl., of the General Quarterly Cont Records deposited in the Legislative Libnary at Wimmipeg.
    tof these gentlemen, Mr. Christie was Ciovernor of Assiniboia, Mr. Thom, Recorder of Rupert's Land, Mr. Bumn, Commeillor of Assiniboia, and Mr. Ross, Sheriff of Assiniboin.

[^2]:     be in the Hulson's Bay Honse. Lamdon.

[^3]:    ＊This Court is the sume as the Cont of the fovernor and Conncil men－ tioned on p．I in which the preceding julgment ir Calder was pronomeed． The name here given was the one by which it was almost invariably known， though the former is really the fuller and perhaps mone correct title．In the reconts of the Come itself，however，the title in this case is the one emphoy－ on with but very rare exceptions．This report is extancted verbatim from the（ieneral Quarterly Connt Records，vol．1，plp．1．5，it siq．，in the Legisha－ tive Library at Wimipeg．We have mate mo attenpt to alter any of the mistakes or inatecmacies of the elerk． that of trating furs in the If．B．（6，y＇s tervitories without a licens． from them to do so．

[^4]:    - to screen

