A DOZEN REASONS
WHY THE
PAIN-KILLER.

MANUFACTURED BY
PERRY DAVIS & SON,
IS THE
BEST FAMILY MEDICINE OF THIS AGE

AND WHY IT SHOULD BE KEPT ALWAYS NEAR AT HAND :—

- 1st. Pain-Killer is the most certain Cholera cure that medical science has produced.
- 2o. Pain-Killer, as a Diarrhæa and Dysentery remedy, is unequalled. It seldom if ever fails.
- 3o. Pain-Killer will cure Cramps or Pains in any part of the system. A single dose usually effects a cure.
- 4o. Pain-Killer will cure Dyspepsia and Indigestion, if used according to directions.
- 5o. Pain-Killer is an almost never failing cure for Sudden Colds, Coughs, &c.
- 6o. Pain-Killer has proved itself a Sovereign Remedy for Fever and Ague, and Chill Fever : it has cured the most obstinate cases.
- 7o. Pain-Killer as a liniment is unequalled. For Frost Bites, Chilblains, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Sprains, &c., no Physician can do more than it.
- 8o. Pain-Killer has cured cases of Rheumatism and Neuralgia after years standing.
- 9o. Pain-Killer will destroy Boils, Felons, Whitlows, Old Sores and Swelled Joints, giving relief from Pain after the first application.
- 10o. Pain-Killer cures Headache, Toothache, and Pains in any part of the body.
- 11o. Pain-Killer will subdue that agonising Pain almost instantly, whether internal or external.
- 12o. Pain-Killer will save you days of sickness and many a dollar in time and Doctor's Bills.

Pain-Killer is a purely Vegetable preparation, safe to keep and to use in every family. The simplicity attending its use, together with the great variety of diseases that may be entirely eradicated by it, and the great amount of pain and suffering that can be alleviated through its use, make it imperative upon every person to supply themselves with this valuable remedy, and to keep it always near at hand.

Give it a trial. Be sure and buy the genuine. Every Druggist, and nearly every Country Store Keeper and Grocer throughout the land, keep it for sale.

9,105 New Policies issued, insuring - - - - $30,765,947 00

THE attention of our Policy-holders is especially invited to the facts exhibited in this statement, that during the year, after having disbursed $741,043 among the families of deceased members (which expenditure was more than met by the receipts from interest, &c.,) there has been returned to Policy-holders the very large sum of nearly one and a quarter million dollars ($1,225,865.26) in dividends.

The Assets have increased in five years over Eight Million Dollars, notwithstanding over Two Million Dollars (2,233,987.86) have been returned to Policy-holders in dividends, and over Two-and-a-half Million Dollars paid for losses during that period.

This Company having deposited the required amount with the Dominion Government at Ottawa, we would draw the attention of the Canadian public to the superior advantages to be gained by insuring in a Mutual Company. All Policies non-forfeitable after two payments. Dividends paid annually on all Policies, and can be used on the payment of the second and all subsequent annual premiums.

The following statement shows the position of the American Companies Licensed to do business in Canada. As the Policy-holders are the interested parties, this Table will show what Companies are the most profitable to insure in:—

H. DUCLOS, PROPRIETOR,
CHARGES,.....$1.50 PER DAY.

In 1863, the present proprietor, (then late of the Eagle Hotel,) assumed control of this pleasantly situated and comfortable Hotel, and by devoted attention to the comfort and convenience of his Guests, the House now enjoys a popularity second to none in the City.

In addition to the thorough and complete appointment of the house and its pleasant and healthy location: its central position is a convenience to the Merchant visiting the City on business.

And to the many Western and Eastern buyers who have favoured the house with their patronage, the Proprietor tenders his thanks, and in soliciting a continuance of their custom promises increased efforts in contributing to their comfort.

THE BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and earth below!
Over the housetops, over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet,
Dancing, flirting, skimming along.
Beautiful snow! it does no wrong,
Flying to kiss a fair lady's cheek,
Clinging to lips in a frolicsome freak,
Beautiful snow from heaven above,
Pure as an angel, gentle as love!

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow.
How the flakes gather and laugh as they go;
Whirling about in the maddening fun,
It plays in its glee with every one,
Chasing, laughing, hurrying by;
It lights on the face, and it sparkles the eye;
And the dogs, with a bark and a bound,
Snap at the crystals that eddy around;
The town is alive, and its heart in a glow,
To welcome the coming of the beautiful snow!

How wild the crowd goes swaying along,
Hailing each other with humor and song!
How the gay sledges like meteors flash by,
Bright for the moment, then lost to the eye,
Ringing, swinging, dancing they go,
Over the crust of the beautiful snow;
Snow so pure when it falls from the sky,
To be trampled in mud by the crowd rushing
by.
To be trampled and tracked by thousands of feet.
Till it blends with the filth in the horrible street.

Once I was pure as the snow—but I fell!
Fell like the snow-flakes from heaven to hell;
Fell to be trampled as filth in the street;
Fell to be scoffed, to be spit on and beat;
Pleading, cursing, dreading to die,
Selling my soul to whoever would buy;
Dealing in shame for a morsel of bread,
Hating the living and fearing the dead.
Merciful God! Have I fallen so low?
And yet I was once like the beautiful snow.

THE BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

Once I was fair as the beautiful snow,
 With an eye like a crystal, a heart like its glow;
 Once I was loved for my innocent grace—
 Flattered and sought for the charm of my face!
 Father, mother, sisters all,
 God and myself, I have lost by my fall;
 The veriest wretch that goes shivering by
 Will make a wide sweep, lest I wander too nigh;
 For all that is on or above me I know
 There is nothing that's pure as the beautiful snow.

How strange it should be that this beautiful snow
 Should fall on the sinner with nowhere to go!
 How strange it should be, when the night comes again,
 If the snow and the ice struck my desperate brain,
 Fainting, freezing, dying alone,
 Too wicked for prayer, too weak for a moan,
 To be heard in the streets of the crazy town,
 Gone mad in the joy of the snow coming down,
 To be, and so die, in my terrible wee
 With a bed and a shroud of the beautiful snow.

FEBRUARY.

Last of the "fatal Sisters Three"
 Of whom December leads the train,
 (And stops it oft—the drift you see.)
 Hail to thy brief but frozen reign.
 Albeit thou art of low degree.
 (See Fahrenheit on long descents.)
 The purple is bestowed by thee
 On many unambitious gents:
 While thou full oft to the unwary
 Giv'st the cold shoulder, February.

The freeman—no man's subject he—
 Whom hot-brained despot ne'er controlled,
 Subdued by one fierce blow from thee
 Becometh subject to a cold;
 And many a belle of swan-like mien
 Touched by the ice-wand in the parks.
 Shakes, with her nose-gloved hands between,
 Unwarmed by the surrounding sparks.
 Ah! many an ague-smitten fairy.
 Takes febrifuge in February.

Less numerous were Titania's sprites—
 Though sprightlier on the whole—than thine
 And of the impish fly-by-nights
 Diphtheria leads the croaking line,
 Pneumonia (elf that oft demands
 The aid of Mustard Seed.) Catarrh
 (That Cobweb of the nasal glands.)
 Aid in the pulmonary war.
 And nor of Youth nor Beauty chary
 They do thy hests, O February!

Malarious Fiend, restrain thy swarm,
 Or, if they needs must rack and slay,
 Be it in homes with comfort warm.
 Where good wives watch and mothers pray!
 Heaven shield our men on wave and land,
 They fear no mortal foe in fight,
 But poor defence are gun and hand
 Against the shaft that flies by night.
 Oh shield them—as its aspects vary—
 From the caprice of February.

THE SKYLARK.

Bird of the wilderness,
 Blithesome and cumberless,
 Sweet be thy matin o'er moorland and lea!
 Emblem of happiness,
 Blest is thy dwelling place,—
 Oh, to abide in the desert with thee!
 Wild is thy lay, and loud,
 Far in the downy cloud,
 Love gives it energy, love gave it birth,
 Where on thy dewy wing,
 Where art thou journeying?
 Thy lay is in heaven, thy love is on earth.

O'er fell and fountain sheen,
 O'er moor and mountain green,
 O'er the red streamer that heralds the day,
 Over the clouded dim,
 Over the rainbow's rim,
 Musical cherub, scar singing away!
 Then when the gloaming comes,
 Low in the heather blooms,
 Sweet will thy welcome and led of love be,
 Emblem of happiness,
 Blessed is thy dwelling place,—
 Oh, to abide in the desert with thee :

MARCH WOODS.

Come out to the woods, little Maud, with me,
For the March winds whistle right cheerily.
Shut up the old books, now our tasks are done.
Out, out, and away for a scampering run.

Ah, wheugh, what a gust! Blow, Boreas,
blow,
And set my young "rosy cheeks" all in a
glow;
Play at Hide-and-peek" with her golden hair.
For there is health in the touch of the jolly
March air.

It will brace up our limbs, little play-fellow
mine,
And make your blue eyes like bright diamonds shine,
It will scatter your bonny brown curls out of place,
And bring the rich, healthy blood into your face.

How the dead leaves rustle! Away, away,
To the woods for a game on this glorious day.
The green blades crunch crisp, yet the field-
sparrows sing,
'Tis old Winter having a tussel with Spring.

Whist! away go the gray rabbits one by one.
With their white tails erect in a frenzy of fun.
Come along, little Maud, and we'll give them
a chase.
Let us see which of us will be first in the race.

There's a cunning old raven sits looking at us.
From yonder high bough; now he's making a fuss;
The wary old fellow is out for a meal.
And he knows that we know he is longing to steal.

See! the first of the lambs to the old one
creeps,
And askant at the foundling the sly bird
peeps,
But he dare not venture his bold attack
Till the mother sheep shall have turned her back.

Get away, cruel thief, shut your greedy beak,
'Tis a cowardly act to assault the weak.
How he croaks, and he gloats on the old
bare thorn,
Come, a good long shout! Ah! the rogue has gone.

MARCH WOODS.

What a famous wind! how the old elms shake,
 How the tall, slim poplars quiver and quake,
 How the chattering rooks to the tree-tops swarm,
 Like rudderless ships blown about in the storm.

Come on, little Maud, we are both in a glow,
 And our arms are strong, and our legs can go,
 And our voices shall make the old woodlands ring,
 As we gambol along, and right merrily sing.

MONTREAL, J.

PROSPECTUS
OF THE
CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY
FOR 1870-71:

To which will be added the Provinces of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island;

TO BE PUBLISHED IN SEPTEMBER, 1870,

Provided that a sufficient number of Subscribers and Advertisers can be obtained to cover cost of publication.

NEARLY twelve years have now elapsed since the appearance of the CANADA DIRECTORY FOR 1857-58. This work was honored with the unanimous approval of the Press, and of business men throughout the British American Provinces, and was most favorably received in the United States, Great Britain and Ireland, France, &c. From all quarters the Publisher received the most flattering assurances of the merit and usefulness of the work. The lapse of time has rendered this Directory of little value for business purposes, and of late years the urgent need for a NEW DIRECTORY FOR THE DOMINION OF CANADA has been repeatedly pressed upon the attention of the Subscriber. The expense of the former work, however, was very considerable, and the result was a serious loss to the Publisher. With the pecuniary sacrifice involved in the publication of the CANADA DIRECTORY FOR 1857-58, fresh in his recollection, it is only at the urgent solicitation of friends for whose opinion he entertains the highest respect, that the Subscriber has consented to make a new effort in the same direction. He will not, however, feel warranted in proceeding with the scheme of a DIRECTORY FOR THE DOMINION OF CANADA, unless a support commensurate with the magnitude of the undertaking be accorded to him; and this Prospectus is issued as a preliminary step to an appeal to the public to subscribe to the work. He proposes to make this appeal not only to the Canadian public, but to business men in the United States, Great Britain and Ireland, France, Germany, &c., from many of whom he has received communications on the subject.

In the event of sufficient encouragement, the Subscriber's Agents will commence early next Fall to take the Names of the Professional and Business Men, and of the principal Inhabitants in the Cities, Towns and Villages throughout the six Provinces, and to collect such information as may be suited to the pages of the Directory; this they will continue to do until the work is complete. The large cities will be reserved to the latest possible moment, so that any changes which may have occurred, up to the time of going to press, may be included. To secure, as far as possible, the correctness of the Directory, two or three gentlemen in each place will be solicited to revise the proof sheets containing information connected with the localities in which they reside. It may be stated that the matter for the Directory, will be put in type as fast as it is received from the Agents, and that none of it will be printed off until the last place is taken, so that corrections may be made up to within a few weeks of publication.

The Publisher believes it to be unnecessary, in this address to Business Men, to dwell at any length upon the necessity for the Directory which he proposes to publish; but as one of the indications of the great difference that will arise between the present and the former Directory, it may be remarked that whereas the CANADA DIRECTORY FOR 1857-58 contained the names of only 1,339 places in Canada, the CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY will contain the names of the principal Inhabitants of at least 3,500 places in the six Provinces; and it need hardly be added, that the change even in those places described in the Canada Directory will be proportionately great.

The specimen pages which accompany this Prospectus will afford some idea of the plan and style of execution of the work. If enabled, by the liberal support of the public, to carry out the undertaking, it will be the aim of the Subscriber to render the Directory an indispensable companion to men of business throughout the Dominion of Canada,—and to houses in the United States, Great Britain and Ireland, France, Germany, &c., having transactions with this country. It will embrace much of value and interest to the immigrant and the traveller, and every effort will be used to make it a complete and reliable work.

WHEN GREEN LEAVES COME AGAIN. THE SONG OF THE BIRDS.

When green leaves come again, my love,
When green leaves come again—
Why put on such a cloudy face,
When green leaves come again ?

“ Ah, this spring will be like the last.
Of promise false and vain ;
And summer die in winter's arms
Ere green leaves come again.

“ So slip the seasons—and our lives :
’Tis idle to complain ;
But yet I sigh, I scarce know why,
When green leaves come again.”

Nay, lift up thankful eyes, my sweet !
Count equal, loss and gain ;
“ Because, as long as the world lasts,
Green leaves will come again.”

For, sure as earth lives under snows,
And Love lives under pain,
“ ’Tis good to sing with every thing,
“ When green leaves come again.”

O Wren ! upon the beechen bough,
Shake thy glad wings and sing,
All things around thy dwelling now
Bud freshly in the spring.

Through new-op'd leaves of brightest green
The fitting sunlights break
The fern-leaves o'er the streamlets lean
The star primroses wake.

And over all the sunshine flows,
And over all thy song,
Sole breaker of the wood's repose,
Floats as we pass along.

Thou hast no past, no future, bird !
Sing on in unchecked glee :
From me shall come no harsher word
To mar thy minstrelsy.

Sing clear and shrill ! 'tis good to list
Thy song of jubilee,
And in this weary world to wist
That some rejoice like thee :

RAINING.

Raining, raining, raining all the live-long day,
 Raining, raining, raining through this month
 of May;
 Bubbling, babbling, trilling runs the mountain brook.
 Chanting like love-tales in each flowery nook,
 Till the nodding blossoms lift their heads to see
 What this songlet meaneth,—what the object be
 Of the noisy prattler telling all he knows,
 As, in thoughtless frolic, merry on he flows,
 Watering the herbage, laving every vine,
 Kissing every floweret near his silvery line.
 Saucy little brooklet! dancing on your way,
 Thus with bud and blossom on your course
 to play;
 Flirting on your wending, careless of them all,
 Dashing on so wildly to the waterfall;
 Foaming with the torrent in its mighty sweep,
 Over crag and boulder fiercely down to leap;
 Onward with the river, flowing fast and strong,
 Onward, swelling ever, grandly still along;
 Onward, to the ocean, ceaselessly to pour,—
 With its mighty billows mingling evermore!

I REMEMBER.

I remember, I remember
 The house where I was born,
 The little window where the sun
 Came peeping in at morn;
 He never came a wink too soon,
 Or brought too long a day,
 But now I often wish the night
 Had borne my breath away!

I remember, I remember
 The roses red and white,
 The violets and the lily-cups,
 Those flowers made of light!
 The lilacs where the robin built,
 And where my brother set
 The laburnum on his birthday.
 The tree is living yet!

I remember, I remember
 Where we were used to swing,
 And thought the air must rush as fresh
 To swallows on the wing;
 My spirit flew in feathers then,
 That is so heavy now,
 And summer pools could hardly cool
 The fever on my brow.

I REMEMBER.

I remember, I remember,
 The fir-trees dark and high;
 I used to think their slender tops
 Were close against the sky:

It was a childish ignorance,
 But now 'tis little joy
 To know I'm further off from heaven
 Than when I was a boy.

FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP

HYPOPHOSPHITES.

THE power of arresting disease displayed by this Preparation is honourably acknowledged by the Medical Faculty in every section where it has been introduced; and the rapidly increasing sale is the best guarantee of the estimation in which it is held by the public.

This Syrup will cure Pulmonary Consumption in the first and second stages, will give great relief and prolong life in the third. It will cure Asthma, Bronchitis, Laryngitis, Cough and Colds. It will cure all diseases originating from want of Muscular Action, and Nervous Force, such as Enlargement of the Liver, Enlargement of the Spleen, Dyspepsia, Rickets, Feeble and Irregular action of the Heart, Local and General Paralysis, Non-retention of the Urine, Prolapsus Uterii, Prolapsus Ani, Aphonia or Loss of Voice.

It will cure Female Irregularities, Leucorrhœa, Weakness and Debility, Chlorosis, Anœmia, and restore the blood to purity and health.

It will return the buoyancy and vigour of youth in all cases, uncomplicated by actual loss of organ.

Tubercular Consumption of the Lungs is that form of Consumption most common, most fatal, and, until recently, considered incurable. Tubercle, from which the name is derived, is a morbid product, deposited from diseased blood in various parts of the body; and in proportion as the blood is impure, and length of time it remains so, will tubercular diathesis continue.

When this deposit occurs in the Lungs, the patient is affected very seriously, and he cannot hope for recovery without persistently carrying out certain rules for a considerable time. The tissues and cells containing the deposit are frequently out of reach of the larger Bronchial tubes, so that they cannot be coughed up, unless suppuration begins, so the only possible means of cure lies in checking the further formation, absorbing that already formed, and in keeping the general health good.

By the use of Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, the blood is surely and speedily purified and vitalized, so that further tubercular formation is stopped. It will improve the appetite, promote good digestion, induce rapid assimilation, cause regularity of the bowels. It will produce easy expectoration without debilitating, (a peculiar characteristic of this remedy) and consequently lessen cough and night sweats. It will fortify the system against sudden colds, and cause the nerves to be so vigorous that the albuminous portion of tuberculous deposit becomes absorbed, the lime residue lies harmless, (unless irritated by cold, or other outside influences) embedded within the lung tissue, and the patient recovers.

Price $1.50 per Bottle, or six for $7.50.

DOWN BY THE RIVER.

Under a maple I dreamily lie.
 Down by the river;
 'Neath the fervid glow of a noonday sky,
 Down by the river:
 I watch the leaves in the eddies whirl,
 And the smoke of my meercaum lazily curl
 Up toward a heaven of azure and pearl.
 Down by the river!

I hear the June-bug's drowsy hum.
 Down by the river;
 I watch the honey-bee go and come
 Down by the river:
 The little waves ripple along the sand,
 My pipe drops out of my idle hand,
 My soul is away in fairy land.
 Down by the river!

A sudden rapturo my pulses thrill,
 Down by the river;
 Can it be I am dreaming still,
 Down by the river?
 Over me bends a presence bright,
 An angel, surely—its robes are white,
 Its tresses are rays of golden light.
 Down by the river.

Rosily, cheek and forehead flush.
 Down by the river:
 Can it be possible angels blush,
 Down by the river?
 Can it be possible, one would say,
 "Pardon me, sir," and flit away
 In such a very provoking way.
 Down by the river?

Up to my feet I start and gaze.
 Down by the river:
 Landward, seaward, all in a maze.
 Down by the river;
 Small satisfaction my scrutiny brings,
 Not even a glimpse of vanishing wings.
 Angels are certainly slippery things.
 Down by the river.

After all it was only a dream.
 Down by the river!
 Strange how vivid some visions seem,
 Down by the river!
 Stay, what's this? A treasure trove.
 Angel, or vision, or Spirit of Love,
 She's dropped the daintiest sort of a glove.
 Down by the river!

DOWN BY THE RIVER.

And further along by the sedgy brim,
 Down by the river;
 Is the print of a slipper, tiny and slim,
 Down by the river;
 Delicate foot-print, gauntlet small,
 Surely, surely, ye cannot be all!
 Left she no other token at all,
 Down by the river?

Nothing save these! But alack-a-day!
 Down by the river;
 She has stolen the dreamer's heart away,
 Down by the river,
 Left him naught but an empty breast,
 Naught but a world-wide weary guest,
 For the beautiful vision that broke his rest,
 Down by the river!

THE ORGAN GRINDERS.

You're sitting on your window-seat,
Beneath a cloudless moon:
You hear a sound that seems to wear
The semblance of a tune.
As if a broken fife should strive
To drown a cracked bassoon.

And nearer, nearer still the tide
Of music seems to come;
There's something like a human voice,
And something like a drum;
You sit in speechless agony,
Until your ear is numb.

Poor "Home, sweet home," should seem to be
A very dismal place;
Your "Auld acquaintance," all at once
Is altered in the face;
Their discords sting through Burns and Moore,
Like hedge-hogs dressed in lace.

You think they are Crusaders, sent
From some infernal clime,
To pluck the eyes of Sentiment,
And dock the tail of Rhyme,
To crack the voice of Melody,
And break the legs of Time.

But hark! the air again is still.
The music all is ground.
And silence, like a poultice, comes,
To heal the blows of sound;
It cannot be.—it is,—it is,—
A hat is going round!

THE ORGAN GRINDERS.
Now, if you are a portly man,
Put on your fiercest frown,
And talk about a constable
To turn him out of town;
Then close your sentence with an oath,
And shut your window down!

But if you are a slender man,
Not big enough for that,
Or, if you cannot make a speech,
Because you are a flat,
Go very quietly and drop,—

"DROWNED!"

Into the silvery wave she stept;
The listening breezes sighed and wept;
And e'en the current as it swept
Made moan.

Her raven tresses float behind—
Float calmly on the weeping wind;
For ever from its seat her mind
Hath flown.

She steppeth on into the stream,
And circling round, the pale moonbeam,
Of rare and glistening light doth seem
Her throne.

She bendeth in the current strong.
Upon its breast is borne along;
To her will soon be pain and wrong
Unknown.

All night, above her lonely tomb,
The waters through that evening gloom
Make murmur at her silent doom,
And moan.

HORRID TORRID!

This plethora of heat turns red
Pedestrians plethoric,
And even men of coolest head
Grow choleric with caloric.

Good Protestants at church commix,
Too hot for adoration,
While at confession—Catholics—
Tell beads of perspiration.

Shinners through Wall Street plod their way,
In melting mood, to borrow,
And swear as forth they go to-day—
'Tis hotter than Gomorrah.

Lawyers than law-books—void of joke—
Would rather read "The Caxtons;"
They feel too much like burning Coke—
To dip into their Blackstones.

You take a well-iced vinous drink,
No pleasure thereby winning,
For hang it, quicker than a wink,
The Cobbler's in your linen.

Charles Martin's Cardinal Food, FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.

Is superior to any other article of the kind in the market, as testified by a large number of the most eminent Physicians of Montreal.

Extract of Testimonial from Dr. Robert Craig, Professor of McGill University, Attending Physician of the Montreal General Hospital :

"DEAR SIR.—I have made trial of the specimen of your "Concentrated Cardinal Food," which you left with me for that purpose, and have much pleasure in testifying to its excellent qualities. It seems to combine the good qualities of "Baron Liebig's" and "Dr. Ridge's" Food, and to be in a great measure free from the faults of these preparations. I have found it to be readily taken and assimilated by infants and invalids, and of its nutritious qualities there can be no question."

IN A CROWDED COURT.

In a crowded court, in a crowded town,
 In a desolate attic, bare and brown,
 A woman sits in a tattered gown,
 Wringing her hands in wild despair,
 And breathing a low and broken prayer;
 While her frozen tears fall, one by one,
 Like pattering hail on the cold hearth-stone.
 But with all the din her sorrow makes,
 The child in her arms never awakes,
 Nor the silent man, so stiff and stark,
 His white face gleaming through the dark,
 From the wretched bed upon the floor:
 For with cold the child is chill and numb,
 And the dead is deaf as well as dumb:—
 If he were not, from the distant shore,
 Of the dark flowing river that he has crossed,
 Though its waters are wide and tempest-
 tossed,
 He would come back to save his child,
 And his fair young wife who is praying so wild.
 On a scene like this the moon looked down,
 As it rode one night o'er a merry town.

A merry town,—for all are out,—
 The young and the old for a winter rout:
 And a blended chorus of song and shout,
 With many a chime of merry bells,
 On the frosty air in music swells:
 Till even the snow, that the wind whirls
 round,
 Dances a waltz on the frozen ground,
 And the gloomy old houses, lit up by the gas,
 Look on, and smile, as the revelers pass.
 Even the far-off moon hears the sound,
 As she walks the night in her sentinel rout;
 But sadly she looks on the wildering
 scene,
 Of song and shout and ringing mirth,
 That she sees below on the snow-clad earth;
 For though the walls are thick between
 The noisy street and the silent room,
 The joyous rout and the ghastly gloom,
 She sees the dead, lying stiff and stark,
 The starving child, asleep in the dark,
 And the wretched mother, in tattered gown,
 Going out to beg in the heartless town.

IN A CROWDED COURT.

The heartless town, for the passers-by
 Go swiftly on; with averted eye,
 And leave her alone in the street to die.
 To die—to sink on the glistening snow,
 And find the rest she longs to know?
 Rest! with her child alone in the dark!
 Alone with the man so stiff and stark,
 It cannot be, so, taking heart.
 She staggers on to a crowded mart,
 Where abundance of food is temptingly shown;
 Oh God! that a little were only her own!

She never has begged; but now she prays,
 "Some food, kind sirs, a morsel of bread.—
 My child is starving, my husband is dead."
 The only reply is the surly phrase:
 "A plenty of scraps is scattered around;
 Go, pick them up,—they litter the ground."
 Into the basket on her arm,
 She gathers the scraps, and—what is the harm!
 They are nothing worth—a morsel of meat
 She hides underneath, for her child to eat.

BEYOND THE SAW-MILL.

" Whither going, Daisy Allen?
Where away with gipsy hat
Slung across the ringlets' ripple?"
Tying down the saucy flat?
Touching lightly faithful Bruno.
Daisy turned her pretty head:
"Going down beyond the saw-mill,"
Thus the little maiden said.

" Whither going, Daisy Allen,
Now the sun is in the west.
And his golden light but lingers
On the shadowy mountain's crest?"
Why did Daisy's accents falter.
And her cheeks grow ashy white,
Saying, "Just beyond the saw-mill,"
With an eye so strangely bright?

"Gentians pale are always blooming
Just beyond the water-wheel,
And the wild rose where the water
At the fall begins to reel:
In the brook are glassy pebbles,
And they shine like flakes of snow,
While the whirring of the saw-mill
Seems to haste the water's flow."

Ah! no blossom pale she gathers,
No flower wet with falling spray,
From the brook no shining pebble
Seeks the wandering girl to-day;
Words so soft and strangely winning,
Making wrong appear the right,
Whispered one beyond the saw-mill—
"Father—mother—home—good-night!"

BEYOND THE SAW-MILL.

An old man, pale, and wan, and weary,
 Walks in sunset's fading light;
 If any ask why thus he wanders,
 Quick he speaks—" 'Tis almost night,
 And I'm looking for my darling
 Daisy, lost so long ago!
 I shall find her by the saw-mill,
 Where she loved so well to go."

Gentians pale are blooming yonder,
 And the rose-leaves flutter down—
 Down on something white and ghastly.
 Golden tresses wet to brown:
 Pale lips that can tell no story,
 But there needs no tale to tell,—
 In the shadow of the saw-mill
 Daisy Allen sleepeth well.

To CONVERT CENTS INTO PENCE.—Multiply any number of cents by 6, and put off the last figure, which is tenths. Example: 73 cents multiplied by 6, gives 438, or 43 pence and 8-10ths, say 44d.

To CONVERT STERLING INTO CURRENCY.—To the given sum, add one-fifth of itself and one-twelfth of that one-fifth.

CURRENCY INTO STERLING.—Multiply by 60 and divide by 73.

THE CROSSING SWEEPERS.

All the day long, with naked feet,
 In the blinding rain and the driving sleet.
 In the biting cold and the scorching heat.
 The boys stand there, in the crowded street,
 Saying to all who pass that way,
 "A penny, sir,—a penny, pray:
 For we've swept the crossing—every stone—
 Till it's clean as a broom, and dry as a bone.
 And you can cross without wetting your feet—
 A penny, sir, for something to eat."
 But a surly word, or an angry frown.
 Is all they get, those waifs of the town.

All the day long, from morn till night,
 In the garish sun and the pale gaslight,
 Ahungered and cold, in wretched plight,
 The boys stand there, a piteous sight;
 But never a passer stops to ask
 If they get bread by their thankless task;

And never a Christian gives a thought
 To the tender souls his Lord has bought:
 For things like these can have no needs—
 In God's great garden they are but weeds.
 So on they go, in their saintly pride,
 Like him of old, on the other side.

The moon comes out, and the stars look down
 With pitiful eyes on the pitiless town;
 And then these waifs, whom none will own,
 Sink down to sleep on the cold gray stone;
 To sleep and to dream of another day,
 In some fair country, far away,
 Where all the streets—so they've been told—
 Are paved with gems and shining gold,
 And many a sweeper rides about
 In gaudy livery and grand turn-out,
 And many a poor, neglected thing
 Becomes a great and mighty king.

THE CROSSING SWEEPERS.

Dream on, poor boys, nor wake again
 In the driving sleet and the blinding rain,
 Where all for you is sin or pain.—
 The pauper's bed or the walk of Cain.
 Oh! better than that is the silent flow
 Of the peaceful river there below:

For in its depths is a pitchy slime
 That is purer far than vice or crime,
 And on its breast is a wintry tide
 That is kinder far than the men of pride,
 Who build great temples of godly stones,
 And leave to perish Christ's little ones.

BY A GENTLEMAN OB COLOR,

 De trees am black an' bare :
 De day am cold an' damp,
 De rain am in de air.
 De wailing win's hab struck
 De strings ob Nature's lyre :

DECEMBER.

The snow, thick fallen in the silent night,
 Hath laden every branch, and every leaf
 Now droops with dazzling weight. The fragile birch,
 Its thready branches thickened with its load,
 Strangely contrasts with yonder aucuba,
 That bends beneath the agglomerated mass
 Resting upon its leaves. The towering plane,
 Its whitened tassels hanging in the sky,
 Surmounts the wondrous scene. Each shrub
 and tree
 Stands out in strangest individuality
 Beneath its snowy pall. White blotchy lumps
 Mark the broad evergreens, slim thready lines
 The broom and osier. Beautously grotesque
 Looks the gaunt cedar, a long snowy layer
 Glittering on every horizontal bough,
 Like a colossal feather, cut in stone
 By some bold master-hand. The glistening wood
 Is scarcely marked by footprint of a bird,
 The hidden forest path hath not a stain :

 But dons an ermined robe. Tree, shrub, and flower
 Stand in white livery out upon the eye.
 Like some bright dream, That old familiar chime

A narrower circle seems to fill: the scene
 Seems cabined and collapsed, and nearer drawn
 The once far-off horizon, that doth hold,
 As with a spell, a strangely silent wold.

NEW YEAR'S DAY, AND HOW WE SPENT IT.

(Written for the Canadian Illustrated News).

BY THE LOWE FARMER.

That there are many ways of getting a dinner is so like a truism as to require but little demonstration. Wit, it is said, sometimes buys wine; but it is oftener that impudence is the only coin given in exchange for roast beef. There's dining with strangers; dining on friends—no cannibalism intended; dining at the expense of the public, like aldermen and patriots; dining at the cost of those worthy individuals, hotel and boarding-house keepers, who spread their hospitable boards for the especial sustenance of the needy. There's dining with the Governor General for you, my boy; he has never invited me! There's dining on a raft with a lordly lumberer, and there's dining at his shanty on pork and beans (not a bad dinner by the way) with John and Jean and Pat. Then there are select dinners—whitebait at Blackwall, with ministers of State; a seat at Mr. Speaker's mahogany; black puddings in Bleeding-Heart Yard; feasting with the prince of epicurians, Lord Eatwell, in Pall Mall; and partaking of a regal banquet, open to all, with Duke Humphrey in the park. Last of all, there's that most unpleasant mode of dining—at one's own cost and expense! Alas! what a misery it is forking out shillings for the use of the fork; giving good silver for the loan of base pewter;—what spoons we are to use a spoon on such terms; how we grudge the waiter his perquisite. Certainly! this is of all the most disagreeable mode of dining.

We have something to say about a plan for getting a dinner, which a few friends adopted on a certain New Year's Day, not many years ago, and intend to relate it very circumstantially for the especial service of those persons who chance to find pockets and stomachs alike, in a state of emptiness, on future festive occasions. Indisputably, 'tis especially unpleasant commencing the year hungry and nothing to eat.

On a certain time—dates of no object—a worthy city merchant, as many other city merchants have done, sent his son to King's College. King's College, at this time, was in its heyday. There might, probably, have been less learning, though even that is open to grave doubts, but decidedly there was more fun than in our modern and reformed institutions; there is, perhaps, more seriousness and sobriety now, but positively there was more sociality then. The new system may turn out better scholars, but it is questionable whether the old did not turn out better men. It chanced that this young man, the merchant's son,—Harper was his name—was blessed with a wealthy and an indulgent father, and bank notes and gold coins were among his intimate acquaintance. These talismans, more potent than common-place magician ever possessed, soon drew to him shoals of friends. Of these, there were some who bore college-conferred titles and college nobility and greatness. The Honourable Robert Flamborough, so-called as being his father's son, swore eternal friendship for the son of the Cit.; Lord Smirkie—a most appropriate sobriquet—vowed he was the best fellow alive; Sir Peter Hawkey cut Mr. Allgon, once the money man of the College, and his dearest friend, for the new comer; the chancellor, Bolthead, who never in the whole course of his mortal existence had been known to listen to any proposition, any opinion, any statement, from any person, that he did not flatly and point blank contradict, sunk his habit and smoothed his manners in intercourse with Mr. Harper. Mudelson, Q. C., leading counsel in the dormitories, forgot his usual custom of pleading for that side of the cause on which he was not engaged, and as advocate for Harper stuck to him like a leech. All these were, comparatively, small fry; but when Ned Woodsher, the great gun of the College, (on whom no factitious title or dignity had been bestowed, for Ned stood on such an elevation that all the king's horses and all the king's men could not have raised him higher) was drawn into the vortex, and condescended to call Harper his friend, then, indeed, and for the first time, was that fortunate young man's pedestal built on a rock. Ned, to all intents and purposes, was the man of the day—ever the first in fun and fight and frolic. An inexhaustible flow of good humour, a ready wit, never wanting in times of emergency, and emergencies arose pretty frequently in those days; a strong arm, and a game-cock's pluck—these, and a few more, were his possessions, and they were always at the service of friends or foes, and, more especially, from this time forward, of Mr. Harper. Fortunate Harper! Jupiter Tonans smiled on you, and henceforward you had a lofty seat in Olympia.

The old year was dying out, and a large circle of Mr. Harper's very dear friends honoured him with their company, to catch the last departing sigh, and to perform, with becoming reverence and respect, the obsequies of one for ever gone. Of the rites and ceremonies of the solemn occasion we cannot say a great deal, not having been favoured with an invitation; but we venture to surmise that the main features of the celebration, as might have been anticipated when classical mourners met, were strongly tinged with paganism. Certain it is that a whole hecatomb of amphoræ, of varied contents, were sacrificed; that libations were poured, copious enough to have held the old fellow up had he been floatable; that odes were chanted, such as a bacchante might have sung, and which might have raised blushes on the cheek of the departed had he not been quite entirely past blushing. In these and similar solemn recreations, the evening, and no small portion of the night, passed away, and at length the congregation dispersed. How the gentlemen managed to reach their apartments in College, their hotels or their boarding-houses, is, I opine, gentle reader, quite as well-known to you as it was or ever will be to themselves. But with one solitary exception, they all managed to get safely moored in their berths. That exception, sad to relate, was the chancellor. Poor Bolthead! for the first and last time in his life, his prodigious powers succumbed, and the philistines found him in a trench, and conveyed him to house of refuge that must be nameless. This memorable event was supplemented by another equally remarkable; for the very first and for the very last time in his whole distinguished career, the chancellor attempted a joke! When requested by the captain of the guard to favour him with his name, after many ineffectual attempts and six bottles of soda water, he managed to introduce himself as C—st—ph—r D—nk—n. The centurion bowed humbly at that great name, hoped to have the honour of shaking hands with the distinguished gentleman, was fearfully and wonderfully grieved at his illness, and soothingly recommended him to depart, under a sufficient escort. This was effected, and Bolthead never forgot this night, no never! An arrangement had been made in the earlier part of the evening that the whole of the party should meet on the ensuing morning, jointly and together, to visit.

The morning came in due course, and with it our distinguished young friends, in full force, and belted and spurred for the forays of the day. It may be presumed that the devotions of the previous evening had left their traces sufficiently and unmistakably apparent. Truth to tell, they were all in a very dilapidated condition; shaky and seedy, not very clean, and a little depressed and moody; this mattered but little, they had a duty to perform, and it was decided to open the campaign without loss of time. They started at once on what by a strange stretch of courtesy is termed visiting. Their first calls were at the residences of the dons; and so early had they commenced foraging that they and the first beams of the sun were ushered in together. In some instances the families they honoured had not risen, fires had not been lighted, and the fortunate housemaids had their congratulations and compliments all to themselves. In these sober and solemn domiciles, they would take nothing but coffee, and it was brought them nicely smoked, and anything but pellucid. But here, awe and ceremony inspired decorum, and they imbibed the nauseous compound with every appearance of satisfaction, and departed in peace, leaving volumes of good wishes and seasonable sayings for the various members of the family.

A single incident interrupted the stagnant sadness of the first course; the chancellor, not ordinarily a very lively dignitary, essayed a little affectionate freedom with a pretty little maid who had not had time to wash her face; the damsel, not having before her the perils of contempt of court, slapped his lordship's face, and so earnestly that the operation brought colour to his cheek and tears to his eyes. The next circles intersected had for their central points, the bars. Here the people were earlier astir and preparations were completed for receptions. In the more glittering establishments, gorgeous tables were set out; green seal and yellow seal, adorning superb sparkling gooseberry; Allsop's bitter, Dublin's stout, rum, whiskey, gin, and brandy, in all their dozens and all their glory. Comestibles of the choicest and without end, but these, as a rule, being neglected by the visitors, call for no greater attention on our part. A few unfortunate oysters, that last New Year's Day reposed in happy attachment on their mother's shells, suffered; and that was all. As a rule, the lords of the bar were gracious and hospitable, as became the time; no one was flurried by reminders of the long and ever-lengthening jottings, in chalk and pencil and ink, that grew beneath their patronymics. Duffers recognized the dies non, and impecuniosity boldly raised its beaker. Our heroes did not commence operations with any very genial flow of spirits; the livelier emotions had been so potently diluted in the preceding night, that it required time, care, and sobering draughts to restore them to pristine energy and pristine capacity. But sedulous attention and good generalship did a great deal, and at the close of this particular tour the roysterers began to feel themselves in a condition for miscellaneous and genteel society. Here, there and everywhere, they now pursued their course, they called on friends; they—and with what we cannot but regard as a singular commingling of temerity and humility, called on their tailors! They went to houses where they were familiar; they passed through doors they had never darkened before; they drank with and conveyed the compliments of the day to persons they were intimate with, and they did the same only as the occasion demanded, with a little more impudence, to people they had never seen before, and with whose names they were unacquainted. A gentleman, a stranger to them all, whose house they invaded, being of a facetious turn, after they had taken his wine and returned their compliments, addressed them in a little speech:—"Gentlemen," he said, "though I have not had the honour of seeing either of you before, permit me to give you a hearty welcome. I am but little acquainted with the customs and manners of this free and happy country, but I imagine they must be at once singular and amusing. Happy, indeed, must society be where introduction and such-like ceremonial rubbish is dispensed with, and New-Year's Day is an open sesame to every house. Is this custom, gentleman, a remnant of the ancient saturnalia? It appears to me to have many features in common —"

Woodsher whispered to Smirkie, "We've had enough of this," and taking up his hat, bowed; the rest following suit, and they went with as much ceremony, and no more, than had attended their entrance.

This little incident, notwithstanding our bold boys by this time were getting into tune, and the great calls of the day were now to be made—ladies were to be visited, that is, houses where there were "gals." And they found themselves in many a delicious circle, where the young and the fair stood prepared to welcome all comers. A sore time it was for the darlings; no one was either too high or too low to be secured from the most impertinent intrusions; they had to submit to the offensive glances and to listen to the drivel of intoxications; to shake hands and be civil to persons whom they would have scorned to recognize any other day of the year. Pity that a sociable, a most delightful custom should have so far degenerated! Nothing could be more pleasing than for friend to visit friend, to offer and to receive kind wishes and congratulations, on this, the great land-mark in the progress of time. In its prime, it was an amiable and an affectionate institution; a charming halting-place on life's rough and tortuous road; a time and place for the cementing of new friendships and for the breaking up of old enmities; but what has it become? any lady or gentleman at the close of the day will be prepared to answer the question!

Let it not be supposed that the foregoing remarks are applied to the young fellows whom we are accompanying. They, in the main, were gentlemen, and did not forget it where it was indispensable that it should be remembered. We went with them to several places, and watched them closely, and without bearing false witness, cannot accuse them of anything very outrageous; in fact, we thought, and as it is well known young men are apt to be after a "great go," they were rather dull and sheepish. Woodsher's jokes seemed to fall still-born; Smirkie's smiles could not be made to tell; Harper's elaborate get-up, and his jewels and gold had no sparkle—the chancellor seemed ill at ease, as though he wished himself under the woollack. The prevailing and impenetrable dullness affected even your humble servant—and a very dense fog it must have been to have done that. With a thousand sighs for the unfortunate ladies, he, and probably everybody else, felt greatly relieved when the last cakes were swallowed, the last sherries drained, and "visiting" over for twelve long, honest months.

This important portion of the day's labours over and happily consummated, a most momentous idea had simultaneous birth in every mind—we must dine together—where shall we dine? Sir Peter Hawker was the first to give birth to the thought, and to put it into tangible shape. "I know," said he, "a slap-up crib about ten miles out of town; let us go there and feast."

The proposal was unanimously accepted and adopted. Harper drove a pair of blood bays; Woodsher had a fast trotter, up to any time; two other somebodys had horses; sufficient conveyance was soon provided, and in a very short time the whole party was seated and on the road. The sleighing was excellent, and with only three spills—no one injured—they arrived at their destination.

A gastronomic convention was concluded with mine host, and in due time a very capital dinner was served up. The consumption of fish, flesh, and fowl, pleasant enough per se, would be dull in description anywhere out of fairy-land. That full justice was done, will be readily believed. Mastication, at best of times, is rather a tame affair in print, and nothing under a county member's dinner, or a state spread should aspire to have its "bill of fare" transcribed. We, therefore, pass such matters over, and drop in just as the cloth drops off. The desert came, and the party grew jovial. My lord sung a song, extremely sentimental; the baronet told a story of doubtful morality; the merchant's son soon began to wink mysteriously, and to mutter something, which nobody could understand, about Amanda's cruelty; the chancellor, utterly oblivious of his divinity, poured a glass of wine down Woodsher's back, and Ned, with too quick a sense of his own, hurled a bottle at the chancellor's wig, which, fortunately, only brushed his nose and then crashed through the window. These, and a few other incidents, unnecessary to relate, were spread over three or four hours, passed in the utmost harmony and brotherly conviviality; but the bottle threatened to emulate Pandora's box. The chancellor's equanimity was quite unruffled, but there were more unquiet spirits, breathing storm, and thunder, and lightning! Sir Peter was equal to the occasion. He rose to order, and, with a knowledge of human nature that does him infinite credit, desired the waiter to bring in the bill. This is a sedative that was never known to fail. It has stilled many and many a furious after-dinner row; nipped duels à l'outrance, in the bud; and averted a whole host of calamities, including blackened eyes, and ensanguined shirt-fronts. "Order reigned in Paris." The waiter bowed low, twisted his napkin thrice round his arm, and retired to execute his commission. This is a piece of business always effected with great celerity, and people have been known to entertain the absurd notion that it is kept ready made out, merely requiring a finishing touch. It also beats soda-water hollow as a sobering agent. On this occasion, it made its appearance in some seconds under three and a half minutes. The paper was placed in Sir Peter's hands. He glanced at the total, £27, 9s. 6d. "Moderate, very moderate," said the baronet: "let me see—say twenty-seven, ten: nine heads: something like three pounds some odd pence each: moderate, very moderate. Fourteen bottles champagne at 14s.—wonderful: eleven bottles claret at 10s.—less than it cost. Broken window, only 9s.—can't be mended for the money. Honest fellow! Honest fellow! Put down ten shillings for yourself."

"Thank'ee, Sir, thank'ee, Sir;" and the waiter gave his napkin another twist.

"And now bring us coffee, and a few salt herrings."

"Yes, Sir, in a minute."

"You needn't hurry," said Sir Peter.

The instant the waiter's back was turned, Sir Peter condescended to ask the loan of thirty pounds from Mr. Harper—he had forgotten his purse. Of course, he must pay for the dinner, having suggested it. Mr. Harper was, unfortunately, in the same predicament. To cut a disagreeable matter short, it was found that five pounds was all that could be mustered among the entire party.

"Here's a pretty mess," cried the honourable.

"How could you be so forgetful, Harper?" bawled the Lord.

"How the devil shall we manage?" said the chancellor.

"Had'n't we better follow the example of the bottle?" suggested Mr. Dixon, a gentleman not previously introduced.

In this serious emergency, as usual, Woodsher soared high above his fellows. He was sober and sensible enough to understand the predicament, and to find an extrication.

"Gentlemen," said he, "you will please, simply, all of you, to do as I do, and to say as I say, and to leave the rest to me."

By the time a few hints had been given, the soda-water had come in, and it soon went off—the herrings had been ordered because it was supposed they would be difficult to catch. A slight miscalculation.

"Well, gentlemen," said Woodsher, "I positively insist on paying this bill."

"Do you?" continued Sir Peter, "I say that no man shall pay it but myself!"

The waiter smiled blandly.

"Gentlemen, I'll be d—— if either of you pay it," stammered Smirkie.

"No!" bawled the Honourable, "they shan't pay it, and you shan't pay it; and what's more, I'll fight any man that presumes to tip, hear that, young man."

"You see, waiter," said Woodsher, with great solemnity, "how we are situated. You alone can settle the difference. You must say who shall settle the account."

"Lor, Sir, how can I ever do that?"

"You must, only do not let any prepossession you may have conceived in favour of any one of us, prejudice your choice, all are alike anxious to come off victorious in this friendly contest."

The waiter looked timidly around; took up the corner of his apron, and threw his napkin over his shoulder. His glance rested on the chancellor, and his lordship nearly groaned. Woodsher cut short his scrutiny; he would have jumped down his throat had his lips parted ever so slightly. He desired him to take a glass of wine, and another, and another, and then told him, that as there existed such a difficulty in his choice, he had another plan to propose: that he should be blindfolded—his napkin tied over his eyes—and the first person he caught was to be the fortunate individual. The arrangement was completed. For a few minutes the gentlemen ran about the room and the waiter after them. There was not much danger of a capture, for the wine above and the whisky below, in their joint operation, had considerably affected the poor man, and had made his gait unsteady, and his motions uncertain. Woodsher then went softly to the door, passed out, and walked noiselessly down stairs. His companions successfully imitated his example, and the waiter had the sport all to himself. The sleighs had been previously ordered and stood ready at the door. They were met by the landlord as they went out, who bowed respectfully, trusted the dinner had given them satisfaction, wished them all a happy new year, and hoped to see them again on many a future occasion. He did not even say a word to Sir Peter about a certain little account which accumulated on a long-past day.

"All right, governor! Capital! Very moderate! Soon see you again!" Were a sample of their exclamations as they got into their sleighs and drove off—we scarcely need say, at no snail's pace.

* * * * *

The landlord thought he might as well step upstairs to see how matters were there. When he opened the door what should he see but his waiter, blindfolded, groping about the room like a blind pointer. He thought the man must be beside himself; walking towards him, in a moment he found himself in his arms.

"Ha! I've got thee at last,"

"Got the devil," said the landlord—"what do you mean by this?"

The waiter pulled the covering from his eyes and stared round a stupid moment in stupid astonishment; he had a great mind to do something singular, only he could not decide, suddenly, what it should be.

"Where be the gentlemen?" was his question when he recovered the use of speech.

"What gentlemen, fool?"

"The gentlemen what dined here."

"Why, gone to be sure, you jackass!"

"Did they pay you, Sir?" said the man timidly.

"Pay me, you thick-skulled brute! did'nt they pay you?"

"No, Sir."

"Not pay you?"

"No, Sir."

The truth now flashed upon the landlord; his first proceeding was to kick his waiter down stairs; his next to blow off the steam in vituperation, and phrases very unlike blessings, and then he rushed to the bottle for further comfort. All this was unnecessary exertion. Next morning, he determined to go to the college, vowing to discover the scamps if above ground; but, the gentlemen, to their honor be it said, and may they commence every new year (and end it too) as honestly, content with their frolic, saved him that trouble. On their return home they applied to one of those Samaritans who bind up young gentlemen's wounded credit, and on Harper's endorsement, thirty pounds was advanced. They despatched the amount of the bill early next morning, with an additional ten shillings for the waiter, which healed his bruises—and no bones were broken. The landlord, as he had done strange things the previous day, in his merriness, repeated the performance in his joy, and wound up January 2nd and himself, in a manner, very similar to that which he essayed and accomplished on the ever to be honoured jour de l'an.
