THE GOSPEL IN RUSSIA.

Under the above heading a writer in the Missionary Review discusses the situation as to evangelized teaching and spiritual life in Russia.

Among these persecuted people, far more than among their persecutors, whatever of true religious life exists in Russia is to be found.

In answer to the question, whether, apart from the Stundists and other Russian sects professing what is known as Protestant doctrine, there is any vital evangelical force at work among the numerous millions of the other heretical bodies the writer in the Review answers: "I believe there is."

But a still more formidable obstacle to the course of evangelized truth in Russia, than the hostility of sect toward sect and orthodox toward heresy is found in the influences which center in the great lay procurator of the Holy Synod, M. Constantin Pobedonostoff.

the snows of the Caucasus from Russia contains one or more representatives of that patient and heroic body of Protestant preachers who have done far more for the real advance of Russia than all the statesmen in Petersburg.

FROM FAR FORMOSA.

Our Caption is the title of a book of rare interest lately issued from the press of Fleming H. Revell and Company, Chicago, New York and Toronto.

The ardent temperament and active habits of Dr. Mackay disinclined him to the work of book making, and he therefore availed himself of the services of an editor, Rev. J. A. McDonald, of St. Thomas, Ont., to whom quite as much as Dr. Mackay, probably, the literary form of the narrative is to be credited.

Dr. Mackay is of Highland stock. His parents emigrated from Sutherlandshire to the township of Zorra in Upper Canada in 1830, and there was born in 1844, George Leslie, youngest of their six children.

The story of these preparatory years, visit to Scotland, the ocean voyage, the apprehensions as to acceptance, the ordination at length, the departure and voyage to the East and the final choice of Northern Formosa as a Mission field is all deeply interesting.

Not only among the Chinese and the Pa-po hoan or aboriginals of the coast lands, but also among the more fierce and barbarous tribes of the mountainous interior, the missionary has carried on the work of evangelization, and with great success.

Besides the matters indicated in our brief review of this most interesting book, there are many features of great importance which cannot here be touched upon.

the people, how he gradually disarmed their prejudices, what labors, what persecutions he endured, how he preached the gospel to the people and ministered to their physical ills, how terribly at times their fanaticism broke out and threatened instant destruction, the providence of God protecting him, his hair-breadth escapes, his unshaken faith and calm courage in the presence of the greatest perils, and his consequent successes, the marvellous triumphs of the gospel he had preached and the great blessings which are coming to the people of Formosa as the result of his ministry.

It is remarkable, as it seems to us, that a man of so deep and fervent piety and so intensely engaged in evangelistic work should be also a close and profound student of nature.

The story of the struggle and development of divisions and reunions of the Presbyterian churches in America, as told in Dr. Thompson's volume, is one of much interest and well worthy of study.

Recent Explorations in Bible Lands, by Rev. T. Nichol, D. D., New York and Toronto, Funk and Wagnalls Company, 50 cents.

The results of explorations in the lands of the East have become of great interest and value by illustrating and making more real to us the historic and sacred scriptures of our Bible and also by imposing a check upon too hasty generalization and incorrect conclusions, and the fruits of rationalistic assumptions and textual criticism.

Dedication at Waterville, Kings Co., N. S. Waterville is a thriving village on the D. A. R. about three miles east of Berwick.

The brethren did not enter upon this work with the idea of doing as little as possible themselves and getting all they could from others, but at the first subscribed liberally and so proved themselves worthy of assistance.

This is volume 17 in the excellent set of church histories which is being published under the general title of the American Church History Series.

The house is well located, modern in style, and finished neat throughout, making a very pleasant and attractive church home.

The brethren and sisters of Waterville, and Pastor Read in particular, are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking, in having secured such a convenient, attractive and pleasant church home, and we are sure that very many who were present on Sunday last will join with me in the hope that large spiritual blessings may be granted unto them.

No better substitute could be had in the North Church, for a pastor than the Rev. J. E. Goucher. He carries with him the refreshing recollections of those years of happy service.

On New Year's evening the officers and teachers of the Sunday school gave an "At Home" to the church and congregation.

Rev. A. C. Chute gave his lecture on David Livingstone to a very good audience in the vestry of the First Baptist church.

ions, and by members of neighboring churches. The work has gone forward with wonderful harmony and unanimity, and yesterday, the 29th of December, the brethren called their friends and neighbors together to rejoice with them, and to assist in setting apart the house for the purpose for which it was erected.

At the morning service Pastor Read called upon all who had contributed to wards the building of the house to rise, and while they were standing he read a brief dedication service, giving up the house to Almighty God for His service.

giving.

Giving is noble; it is better to give than to receive. Many of us do not realize this truth, though if questioned would respond, "yes, that is so."

(1) The needy are fed, clothed, etc. (2) The giver is praised and made to feel good.

When donations to missions or charities are published in the papers, some people are cynical enough to say the givers do this to get applause from the multitude.

PERSONAL.

The Berwick, N. S. Register says: "Mr. E. A. Read passed his examination for Ph. D. at the University of Chicago on Dec. 14th. He won his degree with high honors, taking the highest rank that has ever been taken at that institution."

Rev. C. W. Townsend has settled with the church at Jemseg, Queens Co., having received a very cordial call to the same.

Rev. F. Beattie, late of Beaver River, N. S., has accepted the pastoral charge of the church at Little Glace, Bay, C. B., and is about entering upon his work at that place.

A despatch from Montreal contains the information that Rev. W. B. Hinson has resigned the charge of the Olivet church, Montreal, to accept the pastorate of the Moncton church, the resignation to take effect Feb. 1st.

A note was received at this office some days ago from Rev. T. A. Blackadar, informing us of his removal to Yarmouth county, Nova Scotia.

We regret very much to learn that Rev. F. D. Davidson, of Gibson, is very seriously ill. He was taken last week with what seemed to be an attack of influenza, but it developed into pneumonia or congestion, and on Saturday he was reported to be critically ill.

In the issue of the 1st of January, the kind command of the Editor, which, through a misapprehension, was sent to the printer, was corrected. The printer's error was corrected, and the issue was sent to the printer.

A New Year's Song.

BY HELEN V. BOYDEN.

Once again has old Time lifted All the curtains in the year, Show the feet of evil alighted, Makes a rainbow of our tears, While we gaze with tender yearning At the dear, enchanted past, Memory is slowly turning Pleasures on life's carous' past.

THE THRESHOLD OF THE YEAR.

BY IRISH YOUNG.

"The night is starry and cold, And the New Year, blithe and bold, Comes up to take his own."

In the "good old days of Merrie England," with wreaths of holly and mistletoe, the gay groups of merry makers went from house to house at the dawning of the New Year, singing a New Year's greeting of health and happiness for the coming twelve months, to which all must respond by opening wide their doors to let the good will in.

"The Angel of Time," says Hawthorne, in his charming fantasy, "has already inserted the key in the lock, and has swung open the portals of another year, and the whole world is hurrying with eager feet to rush in."

And from room to room, from house to house, and from city to city, the earth is echoing with glad salutation of a happy New Year. It is a cheering greeting, and there is something helpful in the very sound. If the past year has been full of comfort and prosperity, a glad promise of the continuance of the blessings comes with the prophetic wish. If the year has brought care, trouble and sorrow, new springs of courage, strength and hope leap into being at the joyous sound of the cordial greeting.

The beginning of every regularly recurring period has always been hailed with a feeling of expectancy. Every birthday, does not mark a milestone for us? Each new moon among the ancient Hebrews was proclaimed with a blast from silver trumpets and celebrated with glad sacrifices.

Who can turn from the closing gateway of the past to contemplate the uncertainty of the future without a sense of awe? Intently do we look in the face of the New Year, and wonder what it has in store for us. Will it be friend or foe? If we look with hope into the new and untried months, do we not look also with dread as we would find drawn aside the mystic curtain that veils the future? "Cast thou the heroscope for us," cried to the fortune-teller of old; "tell us how it will fare with us during the twelve new moons to come."

"Are there not twelve hours in the day?" said the Saviour, in response to the fears of his trembling followers. Every man will have time to work the tasks he is imposed to do by the work of time. We must all work the works of Him that sent us while it is called day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

Engraved on the dial stone in the sunny garden at Abbotsford are the words which the master magician chose for his watch word: "The night cometh." "I put that text," said Scott to Lockhart, "many years ago upon my dial of time, but alas! it has off preached to me in vain."

"The night is starry and cold, And the New Year, blithe and bold, Comes up to take his own."

But, after der honeymoon, vas der honey? She has der experience, he has der money. Vas marriage a failure? I ask Katrine, Und she looked off me so dot I feels poorly mean.

A MOTHER'S VICTIM. Mrs. Benton was baking. When she had put the last pie into the oven, she stepped to the door and called 'Johnny!'

What do you want, mamma? he asked. I want you to run to the grocery right quick, and get some eggs. Wait a moment, I'll give you some money. She stepped into the sitting-room and, going over to the mantel, put out her hand to take the change she thought was there. To her surprise it was gone, and she stood a moment with a puzzled look on her face.

Without taking time to consider the possibility of being mistaken, she turned upon the child, who had followed her into the room and demanded: 'Johnny, did you see that money I laid here this morning? Tell me the truth!'

Nothing is sweeter than sometimes finding a father who confesses himself a child with his children, a mother who is a young girl with her daughters. There is no question of authority or infallibility with these, yet somehow there is always obedience, always harmony; dignities are not sacrificed, while something better than blind homage is rendered. There are no harsh judgments, no moral re- actions. Each recognizes that the thing to be attained, the quality to be expressed—as, for example, benevolence, love, courtesy, charity—is forever greater than any individual grows in knowledge, perfection and understanding while he strives; grows without pain, development being normal, and grows without effort, the impetus being from within and recessive, not from without, coercive and destructive. True respect each for the other—and this is the vital point—true respect each for the other, for even the opinions and the standards of the other, is at last attained. Finally this is something better than any obedience born of the exercise of blind authority, or cultivated by a parent's personal pride in his position.—Harper's Bazar.

My Sunday-school teacher said so. She said if I ever got into trouble, to just ask God to help me, and he would. And so I asked him to help me out of this trouble, and I believe he will. And the brown eyes filled with tears again. If this were anything but a true story, I should make it read that the mother gladly stayed the punishment of her child until his guilt was proved beyond the shadow of a doubt. But, strangely enough, this real mother was more angry than before, any more the punish- ment more severe because of his 'hypoc- risy,' as she called it.

When Mr. Benton came home to din- ner that day, he was told the whole story, his wife expressing much sorrow that her boy had not only taken the money and then tried to conceal it by a falsehood, but had acted the hypocrite besides. When she had finished, Mr. Benton said sadly: 'I am very sorry this has happened. I am sure you are mistaken about hav- ing put the money there before I left. Jennie, I took that money myself.'

Chronic Derangements of the Stomach, Liver and Blood, are speedily removed by the active principle of the ingredi- ents entering into the composition of Farmeol's Vegetable Pills. These Pills act specifically on the deranged organs, stimulating to action the dormant ener- gies of the system, thereby removing disease and renewing life and vitality to the afflicted. In this lies the great secret of the popularity of Farmeol's Vegetable Pills.

THE FARM. PROFIT FOLLOWS COMFORT.

The sooner the hog grower gets rid of the idea that stung and wretchedness add to the hardness of his children, an animal, the sooner will he get into line with civilization and prosperity. Discomfort in the herds and flocks is the great drawback to profit. Increased amount of food cannot make amends for it. No animal can give a fair return for the food consumed while it is uncomfortable and shivering.

Heat is the first essential of animal life. The food consumed must make heat before there can be any growth of bone or muscle. If the feed and shelter given are not adequate to keep up heat, then the animal will consume the fat in the body to keep up warmth. Shelter, bedding, and even stove wood or coal, will furnish warmth more cheaply than fat. Because it is possible to shut animals into so close quarters as to rob them of needed oxygen and poison them with an excess of carbonic acid gas, is no reason why they should be left to shiver in the open field, pinched with cold or pelted with storms of rain, sleet and snow.

There has been real progress in the winter care of farm stock. Human ideas are having weight in the advance of civilization. It is about two centuries since the Parliament of England first legislated against the pulling of wool from live sheep and forbade ploughing by hitting to the tails of cows or oxen.—L. N. Bonham, in Breeders' Gazette.

CORN-AND-COB MEAL.

The result of several years' experience with feeding corn-and-cob meal in connection with other grains to animals of all kinds, has been very satisfactory. We feel it to be worth the while to give equal parts by measure of wheat bran and ground oats. To milch cows it is fed with wheat bran alone sometimes, or with oats, barley, middlings, etc. In fact, however, as previously noted in your paper, we have fed only ground meal and the bran, because it seemed a better and a cheaper feed for the production of milk.

We feed the corn-and-cob meal to pigs, mixed with bran and other grains, and in fact to everything upon the farm which requires corn meal in any form. The point I wish to show is that there is advantage in feeding the cobs. Very few farmers hesitate about feeding the corn-and-cob meal, as the impression seems to be that it is injurious to the stomachs and intestines of the animals eating it. Our experience is that there is no foundation for this; on the contrary, the cobs when ground with the corn give it a lighter weight, more bulk being added, so that the danger of the stomach becoming impacted or the animal slowing is done away with entirely.

No one is so confident of the advantage of this way of grinding the corn that of the twelve hundred or more bushels of corn fed out upon our farm each year, only that which is fed to finishing hogs for a few weeks before selling is ground. The rest is all ground and fed, cob and all. I make no claim of great value for the cobs themselves. This should not be supposed. But that they do contain some value is without question, as the experiments of the various stations for the purpose of ascertaining this give it as a fact. It is by feeding in connection with other things particularly cornmeal, that the full value is realized.

Now this experience—actual practice—has convinced us that any person who feeds cornmeal and throws away the cob does not realize the loss sustained. The full value is realized by the way of grinding and probably more.—E. E. Rockwood, in Country Gentleman.

THE STORY OF A YOUNG LADY IN SMITH'S FALLS. My Health Was Badly Shattered—Suffered from a Bad Cough and Consumed Began in the Fall—Pain and Almost Bed-ridden—Her Health Again Restored. From the Smith's Falls Record. I know that if I had not begun taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would not have been well much longer. These words were uttered by Miss Moseop, daughter of Mr. Johnson Moseop, of this town, and a young lady extremely popular among her friends and acquaintances. Miss Moseop had been ill for several years, and her recovery to health is a matter of general rejoicing among her friends. To a reporter she gave her story as follows: 'I scarcely know how my illness began. The first symptom was a feeling of tiredness, which increased day by day. The color left my face, and I became as pale as a corpse. Then I was attacked with a pain in my left side and coughed a great deal. At first, home remedies were tried, but they did not do any good, and a doctor was called in, and I was under his care for about a year. But the treatment did not do me any good, and I was steadily growing weaker and weaker. I was unable to go up stairs without having to sit down and rest when I got there, and the pain in my side became more and more intense. I kept waiting away and lost all interest in life, and at last my health was so bad that I was expected. At this juncture my mother saw an article in a newspaper relating the cure of a young lady whose case was almost identical with my own, and whose cure was due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This article led me to buy a box of these pills. By the time a couple of boxes were used there was a feeling of improvement, and I continued using the Pink Pills until I had taken nine boxes. All the time gaining rapidly, until now I feel that I have recovered my old time health. I can now walk a long distance without being tired, and I am no longer troubled with that terrible pain in my side. My appetite has returned, and I can now eat almost as much as any member of the family, and I know that had I not begun taking Pink Pills I would not have lived much longer.'

Mrs. Moseop says she cannot express the gratitude she feels toward this grand medicine which has restored her loved daughter's health, and will always speak of it in terms of praise. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are especially valuable to women. They build up the blood, restore the nerves, and eradicate those troubles which make the lives of so many women, old and young, a burden. Dizziness, palpitation of the heart, nervous headache, and nervous prostration especially yield to this wonderful medicine. They are sold only in boxes, the trade mark and wrapper printed in red ink, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $3.00, and may be had of druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.
