EARLY IN THE SKASON WE PREDICTED Take the real estate market in city realty would be extremely active, and the many transactions on the local mark, t prove that our prognostication was well efounded. Even through our office alone over $100,000 worth of real estate has been sold. The tendency among real estate has been sold. The tendency among buyers is still towards further investments. The extremely low rates now being paid on savings bank deposits will have a tendency also of increasing investments in real estate. To meet this looked-for demand we have secured a number of very eligible properties. We can only mention a few in this list, but if you will call at our office we will be pleased to give you full particulars of any property you think might be suitable for your requirements. We mention a few:

The following motion was passed by the board: "The police commissioners have received a petition signed by many respectable persons, requesting the reinstatement of Sergt. Jenkins. There is evidently a misunderstanding on this subject, and a plain statement of facts is desirable, which is as follows: On July 13 last, Sergt. Jenkins tendered his resignation as sergeant and member of the London police force, and asked for payment of allowance due him out of the superannuation fund. The commissioners complied with his request, by accepting his resignation. Had Sergt. What Picquart's Evidence Proved for Dreyfus-Overwhelming Proof Will Be Required.

Another Alleged Victim of the Dreyfus Trial-Col. Lohe Thought to Have Killed Himself.

Lorenzo Marquez, Delagoa Bay, Aug. 18 .- The Government of the South African Republic is making strenuous efforts to persuade the local Portuguese authorities to permit the passage of ammunition. President Kruger has personally wired a request to that effect, stating that a modus vivendi with Great Britain is assured. Two thousand cases of arms are due to arrive here tomorrow on the German steamer Koeing, from Hamburg, July 5.

Pretoria, Aug. 18 .- The government has received no reply to its dispatch to the authorities of Lorenzo Marques regarding the stoppage of a consignment of stores now in Delagoa Bay. Cable instructions have been sent to Dr. Leyds, plenipotentiary of the South African Republic in the United States, to proceed to Lisbon and make representations to the Portuguese Government with regard to the landing of the war materials.

The Volksraad today continued the discussion of the dynamite monopoly, the debate being carried on until the hour of adjournment.

JOUREST'S APPEAL.

London, Aug. 19.—The Cape Town orrespondent of the Daily Mail says Gen. Joubert's appeal, which will reach the Queen tomorrow (Saturday), is a canting pamphlet, reciting the history of the Dutch in South Africa. He laments the discovery of gold in the Transvaal, which has led, he says, to British oppression of the Boers, and he stigmatizes the recent appeal of the Uitlanders as a false document, as-serting that the wire-pullers of the vile scheme are Cecil Rhodes and Joseph Chamberlain, whom he couples with Jameson. Alluding to the Applebe murder, he reminds the Queen of the "Jack the Ripper crimes in London."

Guerin Will Not Surrender-Siege To Be Maintained.

Paris, Aug. 19 .- M. Guerin decided tonight to energetically maintain his own propositions and refused to accept those proposed by Gen. Jacquey. M. Guerin's decision not to surrender was delivered after a deputation of the national defense group had waited on him and informed him of the contents of the semi-official note. Gen. Jacquey and M. Firmin, Faure, Revisionist and Anti-Semite, a deputy from Oran, Algeria, had numerous interviews during the day with members of the Chamber of Deputies and also with Premier Waldeck-Rosseau, whereupon Gen. Jacquey submitted his propositions for surrender. It is now said M. Lasies, anti-Semite deputy from the district of Gers, has decided to discontinue further negotiations with M. Guerin. Gen. Jacquey, who is a Republican member of the Chamber of Deputies. Deputies, representing the Mont de Marsan district of Landes, is also discouraged, and has left Paris.

A semi-official note, issued tonight, ays: "Having consideration for humanity above all things, the government, from the beginning, discredited the idea of storming M. Guerin's house or the seizure of the accused by mere force. Measures for preventing M. The police, it favorable impressions retained by the court after Roget's wholesale affirmato attract attention, and his so- tion of Dreyfus' guilt and Esterhazy's called confession my turn out to be innocence. The following points were

First, that contrary to the testimony of Generals Mercier, Cavaignac and Roget, Dreyfus could not have had access to information about the modifications of plans for assembling troops in case of mobilization, to be thrown toward the frontier to cover actual mobilization.

Second, that contrary to the evidence of Mercier, Cavaignac and Roget, Dreyfus was by no means the only officer civil or military employe, who could have obtained the information indicated by other documents mentioned in the bordereau. Great astonishment was expressed at another portion of Picquart's testimony, which disclosed the fact that some of the most important secret plans and documents were intrusted to the sole care of a few civil clerks and enlisted men, and kept in a room at the war office, accessible to visitors, where Col. Van Schwartzkoppen and other foreign military attaches were received once a week.

These facts, developed with admirable clearness, made a marked impression on the court, which is, nevertheless, still under the spell of the point blank, swashbuckler affirmations of the galaxy The present look of the case is that evidence of a more sledgehammer and crushing character than has yet been presented will be required in order to convince the court of Drey-

ANOTHER VICTIM

Lieut.-Col. Lohe Thought to Have Committed Suicide.

New York, Aug. 19.—A dispatch to the World from Rennes says: Lieut. Col. Lohe, who has been in charge of the mounted gendarmes doing duty about the court-martial, died suddenly yesterday. Anti-Dreyfusites openly charge the Dreyfusites with being re-sponsible for his death. Local newspapers in their accounts of it print in big headlines, "Another Victim of the Dreyfusites' Venom."

It is rumored that Lohe blew out his brains because of attacks in the newspapers friendly to M. Labori. Another story is that death was due to heart disease. It is practically impossible to get at the truth. At military headquarters it is vehemently denied that Lohe committed suicide. At the time of the assault on Labori, Lohe led the first platoon detached to maintain order on Richmond bridge, the scene of the shooting. Secretary A. S. Johnston, Canada's Representative, Back From Bloomington, Ill.

Mr. A. S. Johnston, secretary of the local union of journeymen tailors and Canadian representative of the law and audit committee of the general association, returned yesterday from a biennial meeting of the committee at Bloomington, Ill. The books for the past two years were audited, and some propositions decided upon for submission to the association. Among the latter are propositions to increase the general fund from $10,000 to $30,000; to increase the strike benefit fund; to make it imperative for local unions to inaugurate the ten-hour day and free work shops. During the past two years $165,000 passed through the hands of the general secretary, $24,000 having been paid in funeral benefits and $25,-000 for the sustenance of members out on strike. Of 40 strikes ordered, 37 were successful, and only 41 members were interested in the three strikes lost. The total membership is 10,000. Mr. Johnston was away two weeks.

WHEEL.

RECORD LOWERED 3% SECONDS. Boston, Mass., Aug. 18.—At Charles River Park tonight, Tom Linton, the Welshman, rode the fastest 10 miles, motor-paced, that have ever been placed on record, his time being 16.57 2-5, thus taking 31/3 seconds from the previous world record, which was also held by him. The professional half-mile championship was an easy win for "Major" Taylor in slow time.

BASEBALL.

MR. HART'S FICKLENESS. A protest has been entered with McHarrie, G., 13. D. Henderson, T. President Nick Young by the London management against First Baseman Hart playing with the St. Paul team in the Western League. Hart, who belongs to Eau Claire, Wis., signed a contract to play with London, but when the season opened he wrote Manager Lohman that he would be unable to come, owing to illness. Several Western League clubs were anxious to sign him, but London decided to hold him to his contract, and as a result he has had to play in the West Superior independent nine. It was learned that Hart has been playing with St. Paul this week, and Secretary Sheere entered a protest.

HEMPHILL SIGNED BY LONDON. The London management have long had their watchful eyes on Hemphill, who opened the Canadian League season with Stratford, and finished up with Woodstock. Hemphill is among the best fielders and batters in the league, and with Jones and Reed ought to show up well next season. Balbbit, of the Londons, left for San Francisco, Cal., this morning. He will play with a club at that place if his health keeps up. He has not been in perfect health for some time. He is on the reserved list.

McCOY OUT IN ONE MINUTE.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Jack McCormick, of Philadelphia, knocked out Kid Mc-Coy in about one minute last night. The bout was to have been for six rounds, and it was generally thought that McCoy stood no show at all. Mc-Cormick suddenly let fly his right, and it landed full on the jaw, McCoy went down like a dead man flat on his back, legs and arms oustretched, his face pointing squarely to the cailing. It was evident the instant he struck the floor that his fighting was over for the night at least. Thirty seconds would not have brought him into condition to fight again. McCoy would say very little after the fight, merely saying it was a chance blow, which would not, be landed again on him in a hundred, fights by

His First Hit.

His Phenomenal Richard the Third and How It Came About.

Perhaps no one now living remembers

Edmund Kean's first appearance as Richard III. in the old Drury Lane Theater in 1814. He had been a member of the stock company for years, Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 18.-The Chicago playing small parts and completely eclipsed by the cold but brilliant genius of the star, John Philip Kemble. Young Kean ran the scale of theatrical extheir first inning, Counsell taking four periences from infant prodigy to heavy villain, but the London public accordlespie got 3 for 28 in 15 overs, and F. R. ed him little praise. His mobile face, Martin, 4 for 44 in 15 overs. The su- his splendid eyes, were not able to overbalance the disadvantages of his frail and boyish figure. With a fine and intelligent conception of the widely differing creations of Shakespeare, a.rich and musical voice and matchless elocution, he was yet handicapped by his feeble physique. When he was a run-away lad he had feigned dumbness so as to deceive the keenest observers. In later years he felt that his body was dumb while his soul had a thousand tongues under curse of silence. The passions of Macbeth, of Cato, of Coriolanus surged within him while he held the prompter's book in the wings or played the page or messenger in a tragedy. No wonder that he was a bitter and a disappointed man. But fate was fostering the acrimony in his nature for a purpose. One morning at rehearsal the stage manager dashed among the assembled company with a new kind of fury on him. Kemble was indisposed and would not go on that night. A line had been sent to the papers to that effect, and the house would be light. But some critics were to have the boxes. They might not be warned in time. The play was "Richard III." Where was there a Gloster to be found? Ah, Kean! The man was said to have some acquaintance with Shakespearean roles.

The manager called the young actor

"Do you know Richard's lines?" he asked. "Yes," Kean answered. He could not have said more than that one word. E. W. Boyle, Druggist, 652 Dundas Hope leaped so wildly in his bosom. "Do you know the ordinary busi-

> Kean nodded. "Well, you can go on tonight. Come, I will put you through the part now.' The stage was dimly lighted, and peopled with the tired and hollow-eyed gypsies in their every-day clothes. The wind came in at a broken window at the rear, banging the canvas castle walls and setting the Prince of Wales to coughing croupily. Kean took the center of the stage, but close beside him stood the stage manager, correcting every line he spoke with expletive abuse, and jeering down every attempt at original action. The man knew little of art, but it was the habit at that period for stage managers to be petty tyrants and to harden any aspirant for fame to what abuse might later be vouchsafed him for an unappreciative public. Keen took the abuse quietly, and followed every stupid direction given. But when the night came he was another man. Never had there been such a Richard since Bosworth Fieldcruel, cunning, desperate, suave, passionately resentful and self-mocking. He was like living flame beside the cold and stilted Kemble. The house was sparsely filled. But at the first curtain tremendous applause shook the foundation. Then a curious thing happened. A number of distinguished gentlemen waited on the manager, and asked a stay of the performance that they might go out and bring their friends. Pompously the stage manager consented. He felt that the reflected glory was full on him, for had he not discovered and coached this new actor? He did not take into consideration the fact that his directions had not been followed in the least degree. He himself sent out and ordered a banquet to be prepared at a famous old inn for this man who had so long eaten of husks. When the curtain went up on the second act, an eager throng greeted the actor, and if the first act had been powerful, the others reached an intensity of greatness. The audience went mad with enthusiasm. Edmund Kean's star had risen to its height. He was borne on the shoulders of the crowd to the inn and installed in the chair of honor in the banquet room. He was praised and toasted by the wits of the day. The flattery and wine alike went to his head. For when the stage manager rose, smirking and complacent, for the final speech before the feast begun, Kean raised a bowl full of soup and flung it full in his face. The story of the insult was repeated about him as an example of the eccentricity of genius. But the time came it militated against Kean, and added to his personal unpopularity, for his was not the nature to retain friends, although his grim and saturnine wit made him the greatest Richard

An Appeal to Reason.

The Chicago Times-Herald continues its powerful influence on the justice and international in the Alaskan boundary dispute. In an editorial in Thursday's issue, headed "Mills on the Boundary Dispute," the Times-Herald says:

"By far the strongest and most plausible presentation of Canada's claims in the Alaskan boundary dispute that has been compiled or published is made by David Mills, minister of justice for Canada and legal adviser of the Dominion Government, When a discussion on the subject was preciottated in the Canadian House of Commons by the speech of Sir Charles Tupper it will be remembered that Mr. Mills gave a grief outline of his opinions regarding the Canadian contention. He has since amplified these opinions in such a way as to give a most comprehensive survey of the whole controversy from the Canadian stand-

"Before discussing the language of the treaty of 1825, which purports to or the boundary line between British and Russian territory, Mr. Mills recalls the Bering Sea fisheries dispute, in which we set up the contention that the killing of seals in the Pacific Ocean by Canadian seal hunters was the destruction of wild animals that were the property of the United States.' Canada resisted this claim, and the matter was referred to a tribunal of arbitration, which decided against the claims of the United States.

" Why, then should the government of the United States in this second branch of the controversy hesitate to refer the question, since we cannot agree to a compromise, to a tribunal of like character?' asks Mr. Mills. He then shows that the position of Canada in the deliberations of the high joint commission has been misrepresented, and declares that Canada was willing to compromise or arbitrate. Canada contends that the boundary line as set out in the convention of 1825 crosses the Lynn Inlet not far from the ocean, being drawn from the crest of the mountains on one side to the crest of the mountains on the opposite side. The United States claims that the boundary passes around the head of the inlet.

"Canada offered to compromise on this question. She contended that Dyea and Skaguay were built in Canadian territory. They are natural seaports from which access can be had into Canadian gold fields. The possession of the inlet is therefore of great consequence to Canada and of little importance to the United States. As a compromise Canada offered to leave Dyea and Skaguay in possession of the United States if the latter assented to the retention of Pyramid Harbor by Canada, thereby affording the latter a highway into her own country. This proposal was declined by the representatives of the United States. Canada then offered to refer the question as to the meaning of the treaty of 1825 to a tribunal of arbitration, and this was also declined. 'If under the convention of St. Petersburg you think you can rightfully claim the Lynn Inlet why should not the matter have gone to arbitration?" asks Mr. Mills.

"By the third article of the treaty of 1825, the line of demarcation is to follow the summit of the mountains. situated parallel to the coast as far as the intersection of the 141st degree of west longitude, and the fourth article provides that 'whenever the summit of the mountains, which extend in a direction parallel to the coast from the 56th degree of north latitude, shall prove to be at the distance of more than ten marine leagues from the coast, the limit between the British possessions and the line of the coast which is to belong to Russia shall be formed by a line parallel to the windings of the coast, and which shall never exceed the distance of ten marine leagues therefrom.'

"Upon the meaning of these two articles rests the Canadian claim to the Lynn Canal, the most important feature of the boundary controversy. Mr. Mills claims that the coast range approaches this inlet on each side, and that the inlet merely forms a gap in the mountains. As the limitary line was to follow the coast range, and the summit of that range was to be the boundary line when it was not more than ten leagues from the coast, it is argued by Mr. Mills that the line should be drawn across the canal from crest to crest, which throws the headwaters of the inlet into British territory. "The argument of the Canadian minister is compact, logical and comprehensive, and while his conclusions may not receive the concurrence of Americans who have examined the question. they should emphasize the importance of referring the whole matter to arbitration as the only method of satisfactory adjustment."

Wherein Canada Is Ahead of the Motherland.

The Christian Guardian calls attention to the fact that temperance sentiment in Great Britain is considerably less advanced than it is in Canada. This is a fact which we have repeatedly emphasized when we have found a tendency to pessimism in regard to the progress of temperance in this country. A striking instance is adduced by our contemporary as having occurred in a debate on the subject at the Wesleyan Conference in London. The discussion was opened by Rev. Thos. Champness, who moved the following

"That in view of the dreadful results of drunkenness, and the way the drink traffic is injuring the home and church life of our country, this conference is of opinion that no Christian man should manufacture intoxicating li-

In amendment it was moved by Dr.

"The conference rejoices in the rapid spread of temperance principles and practices in the Wesleyan Methodist Church; it urges upon people to encourage and promote all well-considered temperance reforms, and confidently anticipates the ultimate triumph of temperance; but it declines to pronounce an abstract and indiscriminate judgment upon the action of individual Christians.'

Only the mover and seconder of the resolution and amendment took part in discussion. Neither the speakers for the amendment nor for the resolution explicitly considered toatl abstinence a condition of membership in the church. The effort of Mr. Champness was directed to persuade the conference to recognize the clear distinction between the selling of intoxicating liquors, and the drinking of them. Despite their pleas, however, Dr. Stephenson's amendment was carried by a large majority. The result of this vote shows that the Methodist Church in Great Britain is not nearly so radical in its attitude on the temperance question as is its sister church in Canada. It is, however, the most advanced temperance body in the old There can be no doubt that whether in regard to temperance teaching, or abstemiousness from intoxicants, the Canadian people are far ahead of those of Great Britain. This fact was emphasised by Rev. Dr. Clifford, on his return to England from a trip round the world. He then pointed out that Canadians lead in observance of Sunday as a Rest Day, in the smallness of the quantity of intoxicants consumed per head of the population, and in the general behavoir of the population. The official statistics bear out this view, at least so far as it refers to the sobriety of the people.

No Uitlanders Wanted Here.

Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, the Opposition leader in Manitoba, has for the principal plank in his platform the disfranchisement of every elector in the Province who cannot read printed English and write in English, and of every person who has not fighting proclivities. We cannot for a moment believe that the people of Manitoba will agree to support this extraordinary programme. If the settlers in Canada who could not speak and read English had been practically outlawed in the past, as is now proposed in Manitoba, the country would have lost the aid in her law-making of some of the best citizens that have settled in this land.

Canada is a big country, and we are certain that the large majority of her people are agreed that it would be most unwise to discourage the influx of good agriculturists merely because of the accident of their birth. Not so did the early fathers in this Province. They did not insist on the German and other settlers who took up lands in Waterloo, in Haldimand, in Perth, in Huron and other progressive sections of Ontario being able to speak the English language before they were permitted to share in the government of their adopted land. They did not prohibit the Mennonites from voting because they were disbelievers in war. And they have found in these exemplary citizens the very best settlers. Manitoba cannot do better than to follow the example of this Province, and liberally treat the newcomers, no matter what may be the land of their

We have faith in the virility of the English language and of British institutions, and know they will survive the advent of a few thousand natives of other lands, without subjecting the newcomers to disabilities of a most irritating character.

Who that has any experience in this Province, or in the adjoining States, does not know that in the second generation English is invariably spoken, no matter how ignorant the parents may be of the language. We want no Ultlanders in Canada. All that we ask is general obedience to Canadian laws, and a determination to promote the common welfare. Not by singling out a section of the settlers for disfranchisement can the best interests of the country be secure

The Art of Conversation.

The Toronto News thinks parents should do more to cultivate in their children the art of conversation. Says

"There is no accomplishment that gives such a large return as ability to converse well. A young man or young woman who is a good conversationalist is a most welcome acquisition to any social circle. Such an one is a desirable companion for the widest range of acquaintances, and wherever plac-ed is never a bore. Moreover, the ability to converse interestingly provides endless entertainment for possessor of such an accomplishment. It requires study, practice, and a sympathetic temperament to shine as a conversationalist, but any person of average intelligence can achieve considerable success if a sustained effort We partly dissent from the News philosopher. To be a good conversationalist is a useful accomplishment, no doubt. It greatly aids one in his business and social relations and adds to his own pleasure and that of others. But don't let it be an "art." So far as it is the natural expression of intelligence, sympathy, temperament, anxiety to learn, or any other mental condition, well and good. Set the child the example of kindness, courtesy and good breeding, try to mold its character aright, educate it to the level of its capacity, and the native polish will be there without any such veneering as "the art of conversation." Too often the "art" is mere artifice-a trained tongue hiding an untrained head. You can't teach a child conversation, as you would piano-playing, unless you think conversation is merely a mechanical exercise. (A good deal of socalled conversation is.) Training the little one to parrot prettily and put on conversational airs is really training it in affectation and self-consciousness, which warp the simplicity and candor so much admired in the child nature. It is a general complaint that children now-a-days have too much to say. Certainly, if there is anything this age lacks it isn't the "gift of the gab." Too many people do their talking first and their thinking afterwards. The world never had so much empty loquacity, so much common-place verbosity, so many gasheads as it has today. Society is plastered over with such superficial accomplishments as the "art of conversation." It needs more of the solid qualities-more reflection and less idle rhetoric. Take care of the brains and the tongues will take care of them-

And now Canada has a bicycle trust. If this sort of thing keeps on, Canadians will need, for home consumption some of the sympathy they have been wasting in the United States, as a trust-ridden country.

A new decree by the Educational Department makes manual training, like domestic economy, optional in urban municipalities. We should like to see both of these courses made obligatory. If London has to wait for them until the school board orders them, we fear London will be a long way behind.

The dignity of the Canadian Parliament was perceptibly lowered in the late session by the vulgar conduct and language of several members. Men who would use such expressions on the floor of the House as "lying skunk," 'slap his chops," "bust his nose," and 'confounded outrage," should be named by the Speaker. That is the British custom, and it bridles the tongues of

The Washington Star has at last discovered why Canada is pressing for a settlement of the boundary question. Unless Canada can get a port near the gold fields, says the Star, she will have to build a railroad line from Vancouver to Dawson City, 2,000 miles in length, and costing hundreds of millions of dollars. When a foremost journal like the Star makes so wild a statement, Canadians can understand why the American people, as a whole, are ignorant of the elementary facts of the dispute. No Canadian ever dreamed of a railway from Vancouver to Dawson. Canada has an ocean port 500 miles north of Vancouver, and from there to the Yukon water system is only some 350 miles. The Star might have seen this by a glance at

British labor statistics to hand show that for the month of June this year the percentage of unemployed in Great Britain was the lowest for any month since 1890, but there were more strikes in that month than there had been in June, 1898. In June this year there were 59 strikes, involving 14,254 workpeople; in June, 1898, the total was only 49, involving 12,087. Of the June strikes in Great Britain, 12, involving 2,760 persons, were decided in favor of the workpeople; 23, involving 5,459 persons, in favor of the employers; 30, involving 1,744 persons, resulted in a compromise. It may be said of these that the cally evowed in certain quarters, that

Changes in the rates of wages of about 51,500 workpeople, were reported during June, all of whom received advances. The increases were mainly in the iron and steel, tinplate and textile trades. Changes affecting about 5,200 workpeople were preceded by disputes causing stoppage of work.

What Others Say.

Effects of the Trusts. [Hamilton Times.]

The Steel Trust in the United States has got things in working order, and one of its first moves is to cut the wages of its workmen from 70 to 80 per cent. Labor has no greater menace than the tariff-fed trusts.

Money Not Everything. [Kingston Whig.]

Some men are not working for money. Rev. J. W. Pedley, who leaves London for Toronto to accept of a smaller stipend, is one of them. His brother, now at the Pacific coast, declined a call to Kingston when he left college, preferring his father's pulpit in the west at a lower salary. Money is not everything in the ministry.

High Praise for Canada. [London Times.]

Hardly any people in the world have accomplished so much as Canada in the generation that has gone by since the colonists became a nation and set themselves to the task of making the most of the splendid inheritance they thenceforth held as their common country. The growth of Canada has been not merely continuous; it has been progressive. She is greater, wealthier, and more united now than at any previous period, and in her future there is no visible limit.

Oh, for another Thackeray to describe it all in a new "Paris Sketch Book." How "Titmarsh" would have reveled in that wealth of material; the gascenading humbug Guerin threatening to pour boiling oil on the heads, and probably on the nice white pantaloons, of the spick and span gendarmes, who are described (white pantaloons and all) as politely requesting admission to the beleagured castle, and then carefully watching their quarry day after day, while thousands of the human flotsam and jetsam of the Paris boulevard pack the streets for squares around to see the show. cheer the besieged, applaud "l'armee' "conspuez" somebody or other whom their vagrant fancy may lead to acclaim tomorrow. The Most Durable on the Market. For Sale Everywhere.

Mr. Laurier ought to consider whether it is wise to appoint men of this class to the Senate. Hon. G. W. Ross last year gave his views on the question of the Senate, and they were decidedly interesting, coming from so able a public man and so prominent a Liberal. One of his ideas was that younger men should be appointed to the Senate, men whose public careers were before and not behind them. Mr. Ross in right. There ought to be a large infusion of young blood into the Canadian Senate. It would do the Senate and the country good. It surely ought to be possible to find plenty of young or middle-aged men of undoubted capacity who would make a career of statesmanship if given the opportunity, which they may not be able to create for themselves by way of the House of Commons. Much talent of the best qualities is in the country, that ought to be found either in the Commons of the Senate. There is plenty of it available. Why then is it not utilized? After criticising the Senate for twenty years the Liberal party should endeavor to reform the chamber by putting live legislative material into it, as well as by making provision against the possible abuse of its constitutional powers.

Ebb and Flow of Jingoism. [Bystander in Toronto Weekly Sun.]

What has produced this burst of jingoism is a question more easily asked neck. than answered. Perhaps some light may be thrown upon it by the statistica which show an alarming increase of lunacy. Seriously speaking, it seems to be part of the general restlessness and excitability which, probably from a variety of causes, has been coming over the world? What has produced yellow journalism? What has produced globe-trotting? What has produced the craze for athletics, which passes all bounds of healthy exercise or rational amusement? What has brought prizefighting again into fashion? What has kindled the thirst for sensational novels, and the distaste for serious read-The newspaper full of sanguinary war news is as good as a steeplechase or a prize fight. There is such a thing, too, as satiety of civilization, which makes a short return to barbarism grateful. Perhaps the deepest cause of all is the weakening of religious belief and of the morality which has hitherto been bound up with it. public men of past generations may not have been exemplary Christians, or have carried much Christian sentiment into their practical statesman Still, they professed and revered certain principles of righteousness and humanity which in a measure restrained their action, and which are now giving way to ideas derived from the Darwinian theory of the struggle

Local Market.

London, Saturday, Aug. 19. Fruit was king this morning. Grapes made their debut, some of the Craw-ford variety from Essex being offered at 50 cents for an eight-quart basket. Peaches, plums and apples werep lentiful,, and sold rapidly at Thursday's prices. A few early pears were of-fered. Dairy produce continues scarce. The attendance was large.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18 .- The speculative wheat market again basked in the sunshine of an active cash demand. An advance of %c was scored in September, and %c in December. Corn closed irregular, and %c to %c higher for September. tember, but barely steady for deferred futures. Oats closed a shade higher. Provisions advanced 21/2c to 5c. Liverpool, always an influence on local wheat trading, showed an opening decline of ¼d, which was unlooked for after yesterday's advance here, and had the result of depressing prices about 4c at the opening, September starting at 71%c to 71%c. The selling pressure, however, came almost entirely from small speculators, and was of a local nature. Reports of a big cash business done yesterday, were confirmed today, and the influence of the cash demand was augmented by further heavy bids today. Heavy rains were reported in the Northwest, and apprehension of wheat sprouting and being otherwise damaged increased the demand. Another and more bullish feature of the Northwest news was the continued disappointing threshing returns, which strengthened the belief that recent crop estimates were too large. The cash business late in the day was put by as the buyers would not pay 10% c.

The leading futures closed as follows: Wheat

Live Stock Markets. TORONTO, Aug. 18,-An exceptionally light run of cattle was in demand today for the closing of the week. The arrivals at the stock yards this morning were about 60 carloads, or 1,000 cattle, 1,115 sheep and lambs, 80 milch cows, 24 calves, and 1,950 hogs. Export cattle-Receipts moderate, demand exceedingly active; sales made readily at a slight advance; choice selections, which made up the bulk of the offerings, were quoted at $4 80 to $5, and light exporters, which were in ample supply, were firm at $3.75 to $4.50 per cwt. Butchers' cattle—Demand in this line showed a decided improvement; the competition for these grades was slow, and prices were quoted from $2.75 to $3.75 per cwt. Choice selections in good demand, at prices from $3.75 to $4 per cwt, and $4 25 per cwt for something extra choice. Stockers and feeders—Good stock at $3 to $3 50 per cwt. Sheep and lambs—Receipts of export sheep unexpectedly heavy; lambs predominated, but there were more sheep than the market really needed. Choice export sheep at $3 75 to $4 per cwt, while good sheep at $5 to $2 per cwt, while good sheep fetched prices ranging from $3 to $3 50 each. Lambs were slow at $4 25 to $4 65 per cwt, and bucks fetched $2 75 to $3 per cwt. Calves lighter; good veal calves met with a feeble demand at firm prices, or $2 to $8 per head. The animals this week were the smallest so far this season. Pigs remained steady, and prices underwent no change. Choice selec-tions, which made up the bulk of the offerings, were quoted at $5 62½ per cwt, and light and thick fats were steady at $4 75 per cwt. Sows were quiet, at $3 per cwt, and stags fetched

THE BRIDGE

George Arthurs' Traction Engine in Trouble-Owner Seriously Injured.

George Arthurs was seriously injured last evening. He was taking his traction engine along Baker's side road west of the Talbot road, Westminster township, and while crossing Dingman's creek, the engine went through the bridge, falling about 15 feet. The water tank fell on Mr. Arthurs. Another man who was on the engine with Mr. Arthurs, saved himself from injury by catching hold of the bridge railing.

GAVE WAY ENGLAND MUST WIN THE TRICK

In the Transvaal by Diplomacy or Other Means.

War Preparations Being Rapidly Pushed Forward.

Stead Fiercely Attacks Chamberlain-Gossip of the Old World by Cable.

[Special Cable Letter to The Advertiser.1

London, Aug. 19.-The latest franchise kite from Pretoria has failed of its expected effect. It is merely regarded as a device to gain time. There is no cessation of the war preparation on either side. The Transvaal Government is beginning to move troops to the border, and the police on the frontier have been ordered to strictly prohibit any cattle leaving the country, while the treasury of the republic is receiving large amounts of gold far beyond requirements. Gen. Lord Wolseley, commander-inchief of the British army, was in con-sultation at the war office, with Gen. Neville Gerald Lytleton, assistant military secretary, and the headquarter staff. Tenders for an immediate supply of large stores of forage and general stores were under considera-tion. Six months' supply of compressed forage for 10,000 horses has already been sent out. It is reported that Col. Hector MacDonald, recently appointed to an important Indian command, but who was detained taking up his post, is really waiting to be ordered to South Africa, under command of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Frederick Walker, who relieves Lieut.-Gen. Sir Francis William Butler as commander of the British troops there.

BY DIPLOMACY OR OTHERWISE. The Earl of Denbigh, speaking at the Primrose meeting during the week, voiced the general feeling of the government's supporters by saying: "If the break-up of the British Empire is wanted, all we have to do is to show a weak front. Great Britain has to win the next trick there, whether by di-plomacy or otherwise."

STEAD'S STRICTURES. Mr. William T. Stead, in the Review of Reviews, makes a startling insinua: tion against Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the secretary of state for the colonies. He says that if the Liberal leaders, Sir William Vernon Harcourt and Sir ing the week at the agricultural show Henry Campbell-Bannerman, two years at Bakewell, Derbyshire, said: "I reago had not "made themselves parties to a most scandalous fraud, in the States. There is nothing to be afraid way of whitewashing, ever perpetrated of there so far as stock breeding is upon the public, Mr. Chamberlain would | concerned. A gentleman connected | Cal.

not be in the colonial office today." Mr. Stead refers apparently to the Jameson raid into the Transvaal, and intimates Mr. Chamberlain is entirely responsible for the present crisis, adding: "What is now demanded, almost avowed, is the destruction of the domina-tion of the Boer oligarchy." Continuing. Mr. Stead berates Sir Alfred Mil-ner, the British high commissioner in South Africa, and says if he was away from the Transyaal there would be no threatenings of war in South Africa. NO ELECTRICITY FOR ST. PAUL'S.

The dean and chapter of St. Paul's have concluded not to have the cathedral lighted by electricity at present. The cost of the installment of the electric plant has been offered by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, but as the chapter had to pay up for Mr. Holley's free gratis communion plate, the authorities of St. Paul's fight shy of the electric light proposition. The re-decoration of the cathedral, which is now progressing, also makes electric lighting an artistic impossibility.

The Daily Chronicle significantly

says: "If it should eventually be de cided to install electric light, then there should be no difficulty in securing adequate funds in the ordinary way.

THEATRICAL NOTES. Theatrical interest centers in Mrs. Hugo De Bathe's coming venture at the Haymarket Theater. The marriage of Mrs. Langtry to Mr. De Bathe has increased curiosity as to the production. In regard to dresses, furniture, etc., it promises to be one of the most elaborate and expensive seen in London, while the company, including as it does Charles Hawtrey and Lily Hanbury, is engaged regardless of expense.

Mrs. De Bathe told a reporter of the Associated Press that the play will be the boldest produced on the English stage for years. She added: The scenic artists have reproduced the drawing-room at Newmarket House, which I have just sold. All the furniture, etc., is from my London residence. The note of the play lies in this remark of mine in the third act. "I ought to have been a man. I have men's thoughts, feelings and desires. It is no secret that Sydney Grundy has depicted some of the most interesting episodes in the former Mrs. Langtry's life, especially touching upon the influence of her daughter on the latter part of it. Lilly Grundy, the author's daughter, will take part in the play. Granier has composed a special en tracte dedicated to "the honorable Mrs.

De Bathe."
Mr. William Waldorf Astor intends to put his son into the Household Caval-ry. He was educated at Eton and Oxford.

with the American Government told me there was no doubt that the next few years would see a large importation from England to the United States of stock for breeding."

WHISKY TRUST FOR IRELAND. A representative of the Associated Press learns that, following the American lead, a whisky trust is to be formed in Ireland. It is also announced that the wallpaper manufacturers of the United Kingdom are forming a corner to put up prices. Other industries are showrig a desire to consolidate.

RAILWAY MAIL SYSTEMS. Congressman Loud, of California, chairman of the house committee on postoffices and post roads, has been here during the past week examining the railroad mail system. Every facility has been afforded him by the Duke Norfolk, the postmaster-general. Mr. Loud, accompanied by Mr. Bradley, of the New York postoffice, are also going to examine the systems of Berlin and Paris.

After being in his office threequarters of an hour, the chief became afraid to carry out his order, and told me to return to duty. From that day to the day I resigned my life was made unbearable. When I put in my resignation, I had no notion of ever applying to be taken back. A number of influential friends came to me and urged me, owing to the troubled situation in the city, to reconsider my action. It was at their earnest solicitation-not by my own desire—that I made application for reinstatement. The end of this case has not been heard."

Ridiculous Heroics of Major Ouignet-Dreyfus Calls Cuignet a Liar.

Henry Forgery.

NO STARTLING developments Rennes, Aug. 19.-No special incident occurred this morning, when Capt. Aifred Dreyfus' trial by court martial was resumed at the Lycee. The first witness called today was Major Cuignet, formerly attached to the ministry of convinced of the prisoner's guilt, was cross-examined by M. Demange, counments contradicted his previous de-

The president of the court, Col. Jouaust, asked Dreyfus if he had anything to say, whereupon the prisoner arose and again vehemently protested against the denunciations leveled against him, an innocent man.

After launching a violent attack, which he apparently considered to be weighty evidence of the treachery of Dreyfus, Major Cuignet proceeded to recount in detail the task which Gen. Gonse assigned to him in May, 1898, of classifying the documents in the of classifying the documents in the Dreyfus, Esterhazy and Picquart cases.

"The first question I will ask here is," said the witness, "is Dreyfus guilty?

My conviction of his guilt is based on three grounds: First, his confessions shafts. Mr. McCockney and a gentle-man who was in the rig with him were technical nature of the contents of the thrown out, and both more or less in- bordereau. Third, the results of the jured. Mr. McCockney was badly bruised, and his friend was cut about the "I will add to these three points the legs. The horse was also struck and shoved some 35 feet by the car fender. (laughter); and, as an indirect proof, the means employed by the Dreyfus the means employed by the Dreyfus

The major's outburst of heroics evoked cynical smiles and indications of dissent, coupled with marks of assent from the assembled generals. The witness next spoke of the secret dossier of the war ministry, containing information relating to the interview between M. Trarieux, former minister of justice, and Count Tornfella, the Italian ambassador, "which country." said Cuignet, "benefited by the treachery."

Regarding the confession said to have been made to Capt. Lebrun-Renault, witness said he still believed they were authentic.

Continuing, the witness reasserted that the bordereau was written by Dreyfus at the end of August, and incidentally the major protested against Col. Picquart's insinuations against Du Paty de Clam. He then returned to the secret dossier of the war office, from which, he declared, the court was sure to draw important deductions. "The first portion of the dossier," he said, "shows that in 1893 there was a constant leakage in the ministry of war. We have had proofs of the fortifications reaching the hands of a foreign power. It is known to a certainty from the letter of an agent of the foreign power that the stolen plans emanated from the ministry of war. A vast network of espionage had, therefore, been organized against us, headed by agents belonging to the same power as 'A' (Col. Schwartzkoppen). the German military attache, the agents of other powers also collaborating."

Witness then invited the court's special attention to this dossier, in which, he said, would be found ample proof of the prisoner's guilt. At this stage of the proceedings Dreyfus promptly arose and, interrupting the witness, shouted: "That is a manifest lie!"

After this, witness recited in detail his reasons for the belief that the agent supplying the information was a French staff officer. He then endeavored to show that traffic with foreign military attaches could only have been carried on by a probationer in the department occupied by Dreyfus. The witness specially referred to the Panizzardi telegram of Nov. 2, 1894, which, he explained, left an impression on him that in 1894 Dreyfus was an old friend of the Italian Government.

Another document of the dossier, according to Major Cuignet, showed beyond dispute that the bordereau actually passed through the hands of Col. Schwartzkoppen. This, to the witness, established authenticity of the bordereau, an examination of which, he pointed out, proved Schwartzkoppen and Panizzardi had the closest connections Paris, denouncing as a forgery a letter The personnel of the opposing teams purporting to have been written by the will be as follows: attache, in which he was represented as referring to efforts made by Schwartzkoppen and Panizzardi to conceal their relations with Dreyfus, witness Maintained Gen. The major dwelt admiringly on the conclusions of M. Bertillon, that Esterhazy had learned to imitate the handwriting of the bordereau after its publication in the Matin. He then reviewed the police reports on Dreyfus. Replying to a question of the court, Cuignet described the circumstances of the discovery of the Henry forgery, and how it was that the probationers did not participate in the maneuvers of 1894, although they had long believed they would attend. Major Carriere, the govrnment's commissary, said at this juncture he desired to remark as the representative of the government that he must not be understood to indorse all Major Cuignet had France. To this statement, counsel retorted: "You did not say that to the court of At the request of M. Demange, the major's deposition before the court of

Gen. De Boisdeffre was the next witness called. Gen. Gonse followed Gen. De Boideffre. He maintained that the prisoner was guilty. Gen. Gonse declared the Henry forgery was known at least a week before the Henry confession. He admitted that Henry, when he first produced the forged documents, insisted that it must not be shown to Picquart. Gen. Gonse also admitted, that while he was struck with the similarity of Esterhazey's handwriting and that of the bordereau he never-the less forbade Picquart to investigate the matter. Col. Picquart was then recalled to explain certain allusions to the secret service funds, and after Gen. Biliot had spoken in rebuttal of Picquart's statement, the court, at 11:45 a.m., adjourned for the day.

AMUSEMENTS

"SHORE ACRES" NEXT FRIDAY. All lovers of refined stage art agree that James A. Herne's unconventional comedy-drama of American home life, "Shore Acres," is the strongest play of its kind ever produced on the Englishspeaking stage. In it there is absolute truth to nature, and the characters introduced upon the scene come and go as people do in life. Certainly no other native work has ever shown the age and body of the time more vividly or faithfully. Mr. Herne's stage pictures are also commendable. The closing scenes of the first and second acts are extremely interesting, and no one who has ever witnessed the final scene in the play will ever forget it. The last scene has helped to make "Shore Acres" famous. It has been described by nearly all America's eminent writers, and all agree that for beauty, strength and originality, it has never been surpassed. A thoroughly competent company has been engaged to present "Shore Acres" at the Grand next Friday, being the opening of the

A Transient Experience

After a time he opened the old Bible, an old black-bound book with silver clasps, and saw that it contained the usual record of family events, beginning with the grandparents of Daniel. All the later entries were naturally in the handwriting of Miss Hannah, and youthful genius. George was touched to see that they included the births of himself and his brother and sisters, and his father's marriage and death. He felt a pang of self-reproach for never having thought of his old great-aunt from year's end to year's end, when he saw his own name in the careful, cramped writing.

The old Bible was full of marks and notes in his great-grandfather's hand. He opened the cedar box, in which were a few letters, a manuscript book of notes, possibly for sermons, and a rough little pamphlet, containing what was evidently an actual discourse, and

"He sold Moss Head. He raised the devil. He converted his neighbors. He had that face with those eyes in it, and he lived with that neighbor over opposite," thought George, nodding at the mountain. "Dear me, what did he want to raise the devil for? Queer blood to come of!"

Corres glanced again at the Phila.

"I have wanted you so much to know Miss Wynne," said Fanny with manifest pleasure; while Miss Wynne held out her hand and said:
"We have met already."

George almost started, and there was

George glanced again at the Bible, the story of Jacob wrestling with the angel, which was deeply under-scored, while in the margin was written: "Oh, Lord, this is thy truth, thy gospel truth! I did wrestle with thee, I, the chief of sinners, under the Gray Man on the night of March 25th, 1821, and did pre-knew a good deal about her, when he came to think of it. She was an "author," as tady authors go, as Fanny had said she meant to be. She had written a novel which had been well reviewed, and a few short stories, and had begun to have a mild and moderate success. But it had once more seized upon him, and with it the thought of the boyish ballad which had never been finished.

He had intended to sit down and look over the family papers, which had just been given to him, instead of which he took out his own writing materials, and began to recall the verses of "The Scourging Fire," that fragment of

A verse here and there was good. George took it, altered it, recast it, till only its author could have guessed that it sprang from the same root as his final sketch of it. Then he called it "Love's Flame," copied it out, and sent it off to a certain editor who looked with favor on his effusions.

CHAPTER VI.

George Gladwyn lost no time after his arrival at Whitebury before he went to pay his respects at St. Peter s vicarage, and to find out all he could about Helena Windfred Wynne. Fortune favored him. He was told that Miss Fleming was in the garden, and even as he crossed the sunny turf between the beds of gay autumn howers, he saw that Fanny was not alone that another lady was with her, under the walnut tree, and he knew almost before he saw, that the real object of his visit was obtained.

"I have wanted you so much to know

George almost started, and there was George glanced again at the Bible, a perceptible moment before he col-and as he turned it over his eye caught lected himself and said: "Yes, at Wardale, but I did not know till afterwards that I had had the pleasure of seeing your friend." "It has all been rather odd," said Fanny. "You know, Nella, that George was with us at Longhurst, when your cousin, Gerard Norman came for those few days before his father's death, and I told him abaut you when I came back from school. Now you see, he is a Whitebury master, father is here, and you and Miss Wynne are at Birchbrake. And in the meantime you met each other at Wardale, which was curious."

"Quite an instance," said George, "as an old friend of ours used to say, when he meant a coincidence. I remember Norman," he added after a pause; he was a very good sort. He went abroad

"Yes," said George, "but I did not nosaid, wynne had perhaps come there to be near Fanny, and it was certainly in a letter from Mr. Fleming that Mrs. Gladwyn had heard of the roomy old house which could be had in St. Peter's parish, where there was a school available for her younger daughters.

It was quite evident that fate intended him to know Miss Wynne. Yes, of course, it was "Nella." Even in the bad light, he saw that it could have been no one else. The tall, vigorous girl, with the brilliant eyes. George

How the British Challenger Looks in Racing Sails.

A Snapshot Photograph of the Yacht Taken Head On Just Before She Sailed West-A View of the Challenger End On-The Shamrock Remains a Metallie Mystery.

THE SHAMROCK HEAD ON. after starting. Just before she sailed, West, the well-known English marine photographer, caught a wonderful snapshot of her coming head on, which is reproduced here.

Judging from what little the experts across the water have seen of the Shamrock, she appears to be a mixture of lines. Sir Thomas would say that this was ridiculous, as the Shamrock is built on original lines. Aft Shamrock appears to be Herreshoff, while forward she is Fife. Or to put it as plainly, aft she is Vigilant over again, while forward she is purely of Fife design. She is much cut away and allows of very little driving space, and although she looks to be a very big boat she has little, comparatively speaking, below the water line. Her measurements are said to be: Length, 130 feet 6 inches; length on water line. 89 feet 6 inches; beam, 24 feet; draught, 19 feet 8 inches, and she has a sail spread of over 13,000 square feet.

The Columbia is six inches longer than Shamrock, over all, if the unofficial figures can be relied upon. In building the new defender yacht the Herreshoff's had to solve the problem of saving all weight compatible with safety. The frame work, therefore, had to be of nickel-steel, with a tensile strength of 70,000 pounds. To compensate for the great weight below steel had to be used for the mast and spars. The mast is ever brothers and sisters.

Young Brother of the Czar Who Has Been Named by Him as His Heir to All the Russias.

The recent visit of the French Minister Delcasse to St. Petersburg is an interna-tional episode which has set the gossips a-going. Quite the most ridiculous yarn concerning the visit is that attributed to the veteran De Blowitz, to the effect that the Czar was contemplating resigning in favor of his younger brother. But entirely aside from this fabrication that same younger brother is an interesting study for all Europe The ruler of all the Russias can select his own successor. Last July, when Grand Duke George died, the Czar at once named the youngest brotner. Michael, as heir to the throne. "Czarowitz," the heir is sometimes erroneously called, for "Czarowitz" means only "son of the Czar," and it does not follow in theory, as it has not followed in practice, that the Czarowitz succeeds to the throne. The Grand Duke Michael is 21 years of age, a typical Russian in appearance and sentiment. His brothers were slight in stature and delicate in physique, he is more rugged, more of his father's type, and he is said to be as resolute in will as he is firm of hand. He is strongly imbued with the national spirit, and realizes fully the tremendous power of his race. He sees the possibilities of "world empire"-that dream which has haunted rulers for centuries, which beguiled Cyrus and eluded Alexander and beckoned Sapoleon. He appreciates the advantage which his Government has won in the trans-Siberian Railway and the commanding position taken in China and further Asia generally. And while no ruler ever had more loyal subjects and advisers than bas the present Car, at the same time the national spirit of the Muscovite would respond to the lead of a more radical lord with such enthusiasm as the gentler sway of Nicholas IL. has not been able to summon. Of course the present Czar has children. There have been three babes born to him since he married Princess Alix of Hesse; but all are girls. And it is in accordance with Russia's law that the brothers of the Czar succeed to the throne in preference to the daughters of the Czar. According to the ukase of Emperor Paul, the daughters of the Czar do not succeed until after failure of brothers and sisters and sons or daughters of the

M. Paul de Smet de Naeyer, who has Just been chosen Premier of Belgium, to succeed M. Vandenpeereboom, is having a good deal of difficulty finding a Minister of War. M. de Smet de Naeyer will himself manage the portfolio of finance, and M. Deshamps has accepted the direction of foreign affairs. But who shall be Minister of War? When M. Vandenpeereboom was Premier he controlled the War Office, the Department of Railroads and the Department of Posts and Telegraph, besides directing in as large measure as was possible the general affairs of Belgium. And yet he was small in stature, stooped and weak-appearing. But since he was forced from office because he de-

M. PAUL DE SMET DE NAEYER fonded the system of giving one ballot to the one man and three to another, his countrymen have at least come to respect him for the quantity of work he could M. de Smet de Naeyer, who is a soldierly-looking man, is of the Catholic party, and it was from this source that much of the support of the three-vote system came. But it is confidently predicted that he will favor a reform in the plan of suffrage in Belgium. He is said to have long ago committed himself to the policy of extending the franchise and of recognizing the demands of the Liberals. The reactionary policy of some of the stronger Clericals, who certainly influenced Vandenpeereboom to his undoing, would bind the new Premier to a course even more uncompromising. But such effort is not likely to succeed. The last step taken by the former Ministry was to compromise with the Radicals, and give no more than two votes to the privileged class. But that was not acceptable, and on the issue as to whether the Ministry or the people were stronger, the latter was defeated. M. de Smet de Naeyer is said to recognize the folly of standing out against the people. The Chamber of Representatives in Belgium is composed of 97 Catholics, 7 Independents, 7 Democrats, 12 Liberal Progressivists, 1 Liberal, and 28 Socialists. It will be seen that the Catholic party is easily in a majority. But not nearly all of the 97 who responded to that name are acknowledged to be strictly in favor of the system which caused the downfall of the previous Ministry.

INSURED FOR

That Is Said to Be the Aggregate of Policies on the Prince of Wales' Life.

[From the Chicago Record.] A big insurance man told me recenty in New York that the Prince of Wales was the heaviest risk of any patron of the insurance business, and that his death would cost English, German, French and American com-panies not less than $10,000,000.

"No other person carries 20 per cent of that insurance," he said, "but com-paratively little of it is for the benefit of his family; perhaps not more than $1,000,000. Some years ago large policies were taken out by his creditors as security for money loaned. If he should ever pay his debts they would of course revert to him, and might be carried for the benefit of his family, but his premiums, like the premium on all of the royal families of Europe, are very high-much higher than those paid by private individuals for the same amount of insurance. "It is a curious fact," continued my insurance friend, who spends a good deal of his time in England, "that $2,-000,000 or $3,000,000 of insurance, perhaps more than that, has been placed on the life of the Prince of Wales as a speculation by persons who do not know him and have never had any relations with him whatever. This would not be possible under the insurance laws of the United States, but it to be married.

is allowed by some of the English com-panies. Over there any man can se-$10,000,000 provided he can persuade the neighbor to submit to a medical examination cure a policy on the life of a neighbor, or find a company which has recently had him examined. Thus when the Prince of Wales undergoes an examination for insurance lots of speculators apply to the same company for policies on his life, or get certified copies of the report of the medical examiner and use them with other companies. It is pure speculation, They pay a high premium, a margin, so to speak, or, to put it in another way, they book a wager with the insurance companies that the prince will die before the total of their premiums exceeds the amount of the policy. Therefore many persons would be financially benefited if Albert Edward should drop off suddenly one of these fine days. The prince is perfectly aware of this fact. He knows very well what advantages have been taken of his situa-tion, but I do not suppose it makes any difference with his habits.

FLYING KITES

Weird Effects Produced by the Use of Phosphorus.

You have all flown kites in the daytime, but have you ever done so at night? Many pretty and very weird effects can be obtained by this night kite-flying. For instance, you can take an ordinary kite, and upon it, with a brush dipped in phosphorus, trace a face. When the kite is high up in the air, there, grinning down upon you, will be a face of fire. Or you can trace a circle upon the paper, cover it with the phosphorus, and then you will have, far up in the air, a pale, yellow globe, bearing a very strong resemblance to another moon. Many striking effects which your ingenuity will suggest to you can be obtained in this

In using the phosphorus, however, be very careful, as it is chemical. If you fly the new box kites, a very pretty effect can be obtained by hanging little Chinese lantern to each corner and also along the string with which you hold it. As the box kite is very steady there is comparatively little danger of your lanterns being blown out, and the appearance of these many twinkling colored lights high up in the air is very beautiful.

For 9 Years Cured by CUTICURA In a Short Time After Five Doctors Failed.

I have suffered for nine years with scres in my nose. I consulted with a first-class doctor, and he told me it was fever sore that would soon pass away. I had four doctors treat me for nose trous ble, but without seeming to do any good. My trouble was so bad my husband decided that I should go to N. Y. City and get treated. The best doctor in the city for nose, eye, and throat told me I had eczema in the worst form, and I told me I had eczema in the worst form, and I must stay and get treated three times a week. I did not seem to get any relief, so my husband sent for me to come home. While I was home I decided to try Curicura Remedies. I got CUTICURA BOAP, CUTICURA (cintment), and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, and I was surprised to find it was but a short time when my nose was all well. Mrs. C. S. VAN POSTRAND, April 25, 1898. Curious Letter Found at Pinafore Lake Boat House.

St. Thomas, Aug. 19.—George Dunn, pumper at the M. C. R. pumping house, Pinafore Lake, at 5:15 yesterday morning, found a coat lying on the platform of the boathouse, beside the overflow, and a hat in the water.

The hat is a white straw, size 6% black band, with black eyelet holes at each side of the crown. The coat is a black French worsted, long-tailed cutaway, much worn and faded. The International Union label is on the inside pocket, but not the names of the makers. In the inside pocket was found the following note, undated and unsigned, written in lead pencil on a piece of grocer's white pa-

CINDERELLA NOT A MYTH

Origin of the Pretty Fairy Tale of the Orystal Slipper.

The origin of this nursery tale is sufficiently curious. About the year 1730 a French actor of equal talent and wealth, named Theymard, in passing through the streets of Paris observed upon a cobbler's stall the shoe of a female, which struck him by the re-markable smallness of its size. After admiring it for some time, he returned to his home; but his thoughts reverted to the shoe with such intensity that he reappeared at the stall the next day, but the cobbler could give no other clue to the owner than that it tice of strict economy, they were en-able to rear and educte a family of purpose of being repaired. Day after day did Theymard return to his post to watch the reintegration of the slipper, which proceeded slowly, nor did the proprietor appear to claim it. Al-though he had completed the sixtietn year of his age, so extravagant became his love for the unknown fair one that he became (were it possible for a Frenchman of that day to be so) melancholy and miserable. His pain was, however, somewhat appeased by the discovery of the little foot itself, appertaining to a pretty and youthful girl in the very humblest class of life. All distinctions were leveled at once by love; the actor sought the parents of the girl, procured their consent to the match and actually made her his wife.

A Mrs. Wat-son was in the act of starting a fire with coal oil, when the flames from the fire reached and exploded the can. The unfortunate woman's clothes caught fire, and she rushed out into the yard and rolled over in the grass, in a vain attempt to smother the fire. A CORE OF GOLD

Has the Earth Got One ?-Lord Kel vin's Theory.

Nobody has ever been to the center of the earth, nor is it likely that any-body ever will go there. What there is in this inaccessible portion of the globe is, therefore, a matter of no practical importance to us. Perhaps it is best that we should never know; and yet, so great is human curiosity, that could a telescope be invented capable of piercing to the earth's center and re-vealing everything there and everything between the surface and the center—a monster X-rays instrument— everybody would be eager to get a peep Geologists have all sorts of ideas about the condition of the inside of the earth. There is only one point upon which they are agreed. This is that formerly—many millions of years ago the earth was so intensely hot as to be in a liquid state and that during these millions of years it has been slowly cooling off. Until very recently most geologists had an idea that the interior of the earth is still molten. They thought that when it began to get solid a crust formed upon it, just as a crust of ice forms upon a pond in the winter season. They imagined that this crust was not very thick, comparatively speaking—as thick, perhaps; as an egg shell in comparison with the size of the egg.

Several very good reasons have been thought of which render very doubtful

this idea that the bowels of the earth are still in a molten state. One of the most level-headed of those who have studied the question is Lord Kelvin, and Lord Kelvin has come to the conclusion that the earth is practically solid throughout, and that its temperature is nowhere anything like as great as heretofore generally imagined. One reason which he gives for thinking thus is that solid rock is heavier than melt-ed granite, but will sink. This is true of most of the metals also. A piece of solid iron or lead will sink in molten iron or lead. A piece of ice, as we all know, will float upon water, but ice forms a remarkable exception to the general rule that solids are heavier than the liquids which are formed by melting them.

This being the case it would be impossible, Lord Kelvin thinks, for a crust to form upon the earth until after its whole mass had become so cool as to be practically solid throughout. As fast as the liquid rock at the surface cooled and froze, so to say, it would sink, and the surface would still fierce were the flames that the grass and fence around her caught fire. Neighbors soon arrived and the poor down to the solidifying point. down to the solidifying point. Another idea of Lord Kelvin's is rather interesting. The metals—iron, lead, gold, silver, etc.—are all heavier than rock, and would naturally settle to the bottom of the liquid mass; that it, to the center. For this reason he thinks that the core of the earth consists of metals, which possibly are still molten. The heaviest would settle, of course, to the very center. One of the heaviest is gold. Perhaps that is why so little of this metal has ever worked its way to the surface. Who can say how big may be the golden nugget which lies at the very center of the earth? Perhaps, for our peace of mind, It is best that we should never know.

Successful Electrical Treatment of Cancer.

Dr. Massey, an Ohlo physician, is treating cancer successfully by diffus-ing salts of mercury through the affected tissue by electric action. Says Electricity in a leading editorial in which Dr. Massey's method is described: "A method of destroying cancer germs by the aid of electricity has recently been discovered which it is claimed almost invariably proves successful provided the disease has not gone too far. In a paper read a short time ago before the Medical Association of Columbus, Ohio, by Dr. G. Betton Massey, this new method of treating cancer was fully explained. It consists in inserting in the body of the person afflicted nascent salts of mercury by electric dif-fusion. This is said to be a most convenient means of destroying tubercul-ous deposits in any part of the body except the brain, the lungs, and the abdomen. The details of the method of procedure are interesting as showing the important part played by electricity." The patient lies on a large pad connected with the negative pole of a battery, and a tubular gold elec-trode filled with mercury is inserted into the cancerous growth. The action of the current results in the formation of an oxychloride of mercury which diffuses into the tissues in all directions at the rate of about an inch in half an hour, depending on the voltage of the

No Ill Results From Bank Flurry in Montreal-Gigantic Expansion of American Demand for Steel.

R. G. DUN & CO.'S REVIEW. New York, Aug. 18. - The Cramps have discharged many hundred hands and ask Russia to extend the time for completion of two warships because they cannot get the steel. Completion of 21 out of 37 vessels building in the Delaware is also affected. It is a curious experience for this country, but shows the gigantic expansion of home demand. Payments through the principal clearing houses have been in August 55.9 per cent larger than in 1892 for the month so far, and outside New York 23.0 per cent. How long and how far this advance can go without reaction is the problem which level-headed business men are studying. In iron the question is of steel billets, which the great consuming companies have bought far in advance, so that all new orders have a narrow market. For six months billets have sold from $4 to $6 graph pole. A small tract about seven higher than the rails from them. Other demands, not covered by contracts, are mainly for various shapes and sizes where the previous digging was disonly prescribed in contracts. Cotton rose week ago to $6 50, but has fallen to $6 19, Mr. Neill having estimated the coming yield at 11,250,000 to 12,000,000 bales. Official and other estimates are all much smaller, but the man who judged rightly a year ago has the floor. Prices have been advanced 21/2c in brogans, creekmoors and split boots, and there are some indications of decreased buying. Wheat has advanced about a cent during the week, with Atlantic exports only 2,363,302 bushels, flour included, against 3,059,380 bushels last year, and Pacific exports 951,329 bushels, against 175,400 last year. Stocks have risen, in spite of the heavy tone and strong speculative movements for a decline, 50 cents per share in the average for railroads and 72 cents per share for industrials. London speculative selling helped to depress early in the week, but afterwards buying took about as many shares. Failures for the week have been in the United States 156, against 154 last year, and in Canada 24, against 17 last year. Canadian returns show no particular change this week ,and are not altogether encouraging. While at Halifax the wholesale trade shows encouraging prospects, and fish and lumber are higher, with mining prospects active, and crops promising well along the coast, the city retail trade is quiet. Money is circulating better, and the outlook for fall business is better than in previous years. Trade at Quebec is fair for the season. Business at Montreal is healthy, and the recent little flurry in banking circles is said to have left no general ill results. The trade movement is good for the season, and collections are fair. Wholesale trade at Toronto is rather more quiet, especially in drygoods and groceries. In general grocery lines at Victoria trade is good ,and collections are reported satisfactory, with the lumber industry

BRADSTREET'S STATEMENT.

The trade situation gathers strength as summer wanes. In manufacturing lines production appears to be at a maximum, and the price situation re-tains most of its old strength. Notable in the matter of added strength are most of the cereals and iron and steel in many forms. The impetus given to wheat prices by the Government report last week has been further reinforced by less favorable crop advices from other countries, notably India, and export business is reported somewhat improved. Advices as to the corn crop are still as favorable as ever, some states, notably Kansas, reporting phenomenally large yields. Judging from numerous reports the scarcity of supplies of iron and steel are becoming increasingly serious, supplies of structural material being reported inadequate at a number of points. There is an appearance of quiet at the eastern markets, not shared in, however, by western centers, where sales are reported large and price advances numerous. A notable exception to the general strength of prices is found in raw cotton, which lost all of last week's advance, ow-ing to the issuance of a bearish crop estimate, which, from the present outlook at least, seems very heavy and at the least prematurely issued. The strength of the cotton goods market is maintained, though advances are few as yet, and here a scarcity of supplies of staple is reported. Coincidently there is a revival of the report that a number of Fall River mills are to be consolidated. In woolen goods, orders for light-weight men's wear goods continue heavy, and raw wool, though less active, is no less firm, and high grades are particularly well held. The advance in boots and shoes seems to have been felt but little, and the elight gain in leather prices imparts very firm tone to hides. Most staples, aside from those mentioned, are firm and unchanged on the week. Current railroad earnings show little reflection of the falling off in the grain movement, and make excellent comparisons with preceding years, and the like is true of net earnings. Business failures for the week number 172, as compared with 156 last week, and 195 this week a year ago. Canadian trade advices, as a rule, are along former satisfactory lines. fall staples are in steady demand and country collections are good, while comewhat slow from those local retailers whose money is tied up by recent bank suspensions. A complaint of hardware manufacturers being behind on deliveries is heard. Naval stores are higher and ocean freights are scarce and high. From British Columbia, advices as to the salmon pack are rather more favorable, while in Maritime Provinces crops are good and trade fair, but collections are still backward. Increased trade in all

HOW THE MONEY WAS RECOVERED

The Molson's Bank Robbery Case on Trial in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 19.-Yesterday morning the case of Davis vs. Anderson again occupied the attention of the police court. Henry W. Whitla, barrister, Davis' counsel, was the first witness called. He testified that on Aug. 7 he drove with Davis in an express wagon to Immigration Hall, where they hired six Galicians, and continued their journey to a point on the C. P. R. rightof-way, two miles east of the Louise Davis drove all the way, and bridge. witness did not know where they were going. When they reached the right-ofway they got out, and Davis instructed the Galicians to commence digging over a piece of ground at the foot of a telefeet by twelve had already been dug over before. They commenced digging continued, and at last one of the Galicians struck a valise. Davis then dug it out himself and handed it over to witness, who wrapped the valise in a waterproof coat and placed it in the express wagon. They then commenced searching for another package, which was thought to be near this, but discontinued after about fifteen minutes. Driving into town they got a room at Queen's They cut open the valise, which was locked, and ascertained what it contained. Then they took it over to witness' office, locking it in a new valise and placing it in the vault, Davis keeping the key. Next day the old valise and money were placed in a box and sealed and delivered by witness to the Molsons Bank, where it was opened in the presence of Manager Kohl, Accountand McBeth, Teller Nelles, and some legal gentlemen.

Here the box containing the old valise was opened and the valise identified by witness. A tin box containing the stolen money was then placed on the table and identified by witness. The money was damp and dirty, smelling very disagreeable.

Here some time was taken up by lawyers for the prosecution and defense in examining and taking number of

The time was mostly taken up in the afternoon by the cross-examination of H. W. Whitla, and Mr. MacBeth, the accountant. From what could be gathered it seems that not the best care was taken in the safeguarding of the combinations concerned. The manager and employes of the McClary Manufacturing Company, where the accused, J. W. Anderson, was employed, have forwarded the latter a letter declaring their belief in his innocence of the crime of robbing the Molsons Bank. Mr. Driscoll, the manager, says it is altogether probable Anderson will not be committed, and denies the report that

BAD FIRE AT WOODSTOCK

Grand Trunk Freight Sheds and Contents a Total Loss.

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 19.—Shortly after the hour-of 15 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the large freight sheds of the Grand Trunk Railway Company. The flames spread rapidly, and although the fire brigade were soon playing several streams upon the buildings, everything went up in smoke-two buildings and their contents. It is said that some of leading drygoods merchants will be heavy losers, owing to several cases of goods having just arrived and being burned. Luckily an engine was in the yard and removed several freight cars which were standing on the switches on both sides of the buildings, which would have otherwise been destroyed. Most of the citizens had retired for the night, but soon several hundreds were on the scene and watched the flames until nothing but a few posts were left standing. The loss on buildings and their contents is as yet unknown.

Ritualistic Difficulty at Murray Bay-A New Church.

Hon. S. H. Blake Expresses His Disapproval of Its Erection and the Tendency of its Priest and Worshipers to Ritualism.

Quebec, Aug. 20.-The Hon. S. H. Blake, the Rev. Dr. Rainsford, the Rev. G. A. Kuhring and the Right Rev. Dr. Chas. Hamilton, Lord Bishop of Ottawa, figure prominently in a church difficulty which is at present engaging a large share of the attention of the summer residents at the charming seaside village of Murray Bay.

By reason of the many summers that have lived at their cottages at Murray Bay, the Hon. Edward Blake and the Hon. S. H. Blake have become as closely identified with the fashionable watering place as the late Sir John Macdonald was with Riviere du Loup. As long ago as 1865 the Hon. S. H. Blake was one of the parties to the original agreement for the erection of a union church at Point a Pic, adjoining Murray Bay. In the building so during the summer season for over 30

England and Presbyterian communions.
When the late Bishop Williams of Quebec declined to consecrate the building some years ago, on the ground that it was not entirely devoted to the services of the church, Bishop Bond of Montreal was invited by Mr. Blake to officiate, but declined upon hearing that his right reverend brother of Quebec not only objected to his doing so, but was ready to appeal against such proposed invasion of his diocesan authority to the provincial synod. some time the Bishop of Quebec licensed the Rev. M. M. Fothergill, then of Quebec city, to conduct summer services at Murray Bay. Quite lately the Anglican services in the union church have been conducted by the Rev. G. A. Kuhring, of Toronto, whose diocesan is the Lord Bishop of Toronto, but without any license to so officiate there or anywhere else in the Diocese of Quebec from its official head, the Bishop of Quebec.

A great number of American visitors, many of them people of very large means, have cottages of their own at Murray Bay, and spend the summer there. Some few of these are of exhigh church tendencies, and treme have been quite dissatisfied for some time past with the lack of ritual and general style of the services conducted by Mr. Kuhring, under the direction of committee composed of Mr. Blake and his friends. A deputation of the high church party waited some time upon the Bishop of Quebec, and, with his hearty concurrence and warm approval, has erected a little church called St. Anne's-in-the-Field. Some of these people are parishioners and and colored vestments are extremely handsome, and are chiefly gifts of the Minturns and other wealthy American families of the congregation. Dr. Green, of Calvary Church, New York, preached the dedication sermon, and was Bishop Hamilton of Ottawa.

A few days prior to the dedication ceremonies, John Rathbun Oliver, one of the new congregation, sent the folof the prominent American members lowing invitation to Mr. Blake: "Point-a-Pic, July 21.

"My Dear Mr. Blake, - The little church of St. Anne's-in-the-Field is to be dedicated (D. V.) on Wednesday of this coming week at 11 o'clock. We very much hope that Mrs. Blake and yourself will be able to be present, as well as any other members of your household that may care to come. "I should be glad to have the name of the clergyman who is now conducting the Church of England services for the union chapel. I should like to ask him to be present at the dedication, and give him a seat within the sanctuary rail. Hoping that you will do us all the pleasure of being present on Wednesday, believe me always sincerely yours,

Hence, from an early period men have used the right hand to fight with, and have employed the left arm chiefly to cover the heart and to parry a blow aimed at that specially vulnerable region. When weapons of offense and defense superceded the fist it was the right hand that grasped the spear and sword, while the left held over the heart the shield or buckler.

From this simple origin, then, the whole vast difference in civilized life takes its beginning. At first, no doubt, the superiority of the right hand was felt in the manner of fighting. But that alone gave it prominence, and paved the way for its supremacy else-

An Automobile Will Make the Test Over Rough Roads.

(Cleveland Plaindealer.) The automobile as a war engine, is to be given a test next week by Mr. Alexander Winton and Charles B. Shanks, of Cleveland, who have arranged to take a trip overland from Chicago to New York in a Winton automobile, and carry an important message from Brigadier-General Anderson, of Chicago, to Major-General Merritt, of New York. The automobile will start on its trip from Chicago over the wagon road through Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and New York at an early hour next Monday morning, and an effort will be made to run the distance in as short a time as possible. A record will be made and an effort put forth to establish its practicability in this country of the horseless carriage as a machine of war as well as peace. The trip that has been planned has the support of the authorities of the war department, who are taking great interest in the enterprise, and have lent their assistance in making the preliminary arrangements. The question has been raised among the authorities at Washington as to whether or not the automobile cannot be used as successfully in this country as in others for war purposes. In Europe, especially on the continent, the automobile has been put to very successful use in the field as a means of transferring dispatches, as well as of carry-ing munitions and arms.

constructed Sunday morning and evening services have been alternately held during the summer season for over 30 cago and New York is to demonstrate years by clergymen of the Church of to the authorities at Washington that the automobile can be used with success in cases where swift transportation is needed, where the horse cannot be used to the best advantage and other means are not available. Mr. Winton's success on his recent trip for the Plaindealer from Cleveland to New York encourages him to believe he can make a new demonstration of the practicability of the automobile over the rough roads of this country. The great help to the operation of the horseless carriage in the country district of Europe is the extreme smoothness of the farm land over which the machine can travel as readily as over the highways in America. jection has been raised that this feature made its use possible on the continent where it would be impossible here. Mr. Winton is confident of showing the public that rough ground is not a barrier to the use of the automobile, and that the machine can stand the test of a long and hard journey. The carrying of the message from Gen. Anderson to Gen. Merritt was the suggestion of Gen. Miles, who has taken the matter in hand to see that a full report of the trip reaches him. He has promised to meet the auto-mobile upon the arrival at the headquarters of Gen. Merritt in New York unless he is prevented by the duties of his office.

The trip is also intended as a test of the machine as a mail carrier. Postmaster-General Smith offered to place man on the machine during the trip to take out and throw off mail at the different towns along the way, but it was thought by Mr. Winton and Mr Shanks that this would interfere with more of them warm admirers of the the success of the experiment in other Rev. The Contradictions Of Critics.

When one thinks of it, how diverse and contradictory have been the judg-ments of even the best critics, says John Burroughs, in the September Atlantic. Behold how Macaulay's ver-dicts differ from Carlyle's; how Carlyle's from Arnold's; how Arnold's from Frederic Harrison's, or Morley's, or Stephen's, or Swinburne's; how Taine and Sainte-Beuve diverge upon Balzac; how Renan and Arnold diverge upon Hugo; how Lowell and Emerson diverge upon Whitman; and how wide apart are contemporary critics about merits of Browning, Ibsen, Tolstoi. Landor could not tolerate Dante, and even the "reat Goethe told Eckermann that Dante was one of the authors he was forbidden to read.

In Byron's judgment, Griffiths and Rogers were greater poets than Wordsworth and Coleridge. The German Professor Grimm sees in Goethe greatest poet of all times and all people," which makes Matthew Arnold smile. Chateaubriand looked upon Racine as much superior to Shakespeare as the Apollo Belvedere is superior to an uncouth Egyptian statue. Every nation, says a French critic, has its chords of sensibility that are utterly incomprehensible to another. "Many and diverse," says Arnold, "must be the judgments passed upon every great poet, upon every considerable writer." And it seems that the greater the writer or poet, the more diverse and contradictory will be the judgments upon him. The small men are easily disposed of-there is no dispute about them; but the great ones baffle and try us. It is around their names, as Sainte-Beuve says, that a perpetual critical tournament goes on. It would seem that the nearer we are, in point of time, to an event, a man, a book, a work of art, the less likely we are to estimate it rightly, especially if it is out of the usual and involves great questions and points. Such a poet as Dante, or Victor Hugo or Whitman, or such a character as Napoleon or Cromwell or John Brown, or such an artist as Turner or Angelo or Millet, will require time to settle their claims. In literature, the men of the highest or-der must undoubtedly, in a great measure, wait to be understood for the growth of the taste of themselves, or till their own ideals have become at home in men's minds. With every great innovation, in whatever field, every year that passes finds our minds better adjusted to it and more keenly alive to its merits. Contemporary criticism is bound to be contradictory. Men take opposite views of current questions: they are too near them to see all their bearings.

Sensation Caused in Barnaby River New Brunswick by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Barnaby River, N. B., Aug. 14.-Quite sensation has been caused here lately by the introduction of a new medicine -Dodd's Kidney Pills. Although there had been many deaths in this village and surrounding district from Bright's Disease, and other Kidney troubles, yet, strange to say, Dodd's Kidney Pills had never been tested. Our people had little faith in patent medicines. Now, however, Dodd's Kidney Pills are creating a sensation. A large number of people are using them and expressing surprise and delight at the result. "From the first week I began to improve,"says Cornelius Crottie,of Barnaby River, who had been given up by the doctors. The fact seems to have surprised him, but it is always true where Dodd's Kidney Pills are used.

The Great Sahara Desert May Some Day Be an Inland Sea Again-

Engineering Feats That Would Alter the Surface Aspect of the Globe -No Great Obstacles.

[From the London Mail.] Few people realize how completely of late years the surface aspect of this weazened old globe of ours has been altered and improved. The world of today, in fact, differs from the world of our ancestors, much as a society lady, in all the glory of fold and frill and furbelow, differs from her savage sister running wild in pestilential woods. As art has transformed the one, so has it the

Only the "Mme. Rachael" who has made the earth, if not exactly "beautiful forever," at least a pleasant and healthful place wherein to dwell, is no charlatan with a dray load of cosmetics and a glib tongue, but a civil en-gineer, owning nothing more harmless than a few mysterious looking instruments and a measuring tape.

And the marvel of all this is—that what has been done is but an infinitesimal fraction of that which may, and doubtless will, be done. Who can doubt, for instance, that the great Sa-Desert-that mole upon world's face will one day be but a memory? It was an inland sea once. It would not be a very difficult matter to convert it into one again.

A canal sixty miles long, connecting with the Atlantic the vast depression which runs close up to the coast near-ly midway between the twentieth and thirtieth parallels of latitude, would do the business beautifully. The wa-ter would not, of course, cover the entire surface of the desert. Here and there are portions lying above the sea level. These would become the islands of the new Sahara Ocean.

What would be the results that would ensue upon the stupendous transformation? Some would be good and some bad. Among the latter may be mentioned the probable destruction the vineyards of southern Europe, which depend for their existence upon the warm, dry winds from the great

African desert. As some compensation for this, however, the mercantile marines of the na-tions affected would be enabled to gain immediate and easy access vast regions now given over to barbar-ism, and a series of more or less flourishing seaport towns would spring up all along the southern borders of Morocco and Algeria, where the western watershed of the Nile sinks into the desert, and on the northern frontier of the Congo Free State.

In a similar manner the greater portion of the central Australian desert, covering an area of fully a million square miles might be flooded. The Island continent would then be reconverted into a gigantic atoll, and would resemble, roughly, an oval dish, of which the depressed central portion would be covered with water and only the "rim" inhabited. In this connection it may be interesting to note that a company has actually been formed for submerging the Yuma Desert in two white men in the hospital, all the southern California. If the plan as at others being negroes, Hindus and present proposed is carried out a tract of absolutely uninhabitable territory, comprising nearly 13,000 square miles, and the greater portion of which lies between 500 and 1,000 feet below sea level, will be submerged. A few Englishmen-known as "Little Englanders"-still blame the government for insisting upon the reconquest of the Sudan. "A useless acquisition," say they. Perhaps! But capable judges believe that it would have been little less than suicidal to have allowed these regions to have fallen into the hands of France, for the simple reason that her engin-eers, by diverting the course of the Nile at Abu Hamed of Berber—no very difficult task—could at any time turn all upper Egypt into a desert.

It has even been suggested that it might be possible—by turning its waters into one of the many lateral ravines which run at right angles to the present course of the river—to find a new outlet for it into the Red Sea, and to thereby transform, in process of time, that sheet of water into a great fresh water lake.

To accomplish this it would, of course, be necessary to build a giant dam across the southern "neck," near Perim, and to regulate, or rather stop altogether, the inward flow of the Mediterranean through the Suez Canal-a big, task, but one not entirely impossible of accomplishment.

The above are examples of big schemes. There are many others that be mentioned, including, of course, the Panama and Nicaraguan Canals, and the French "war canal" between the mouths of the Loire and the Rhone, which, when completed, will enable their ironclads to dodge round behind Gibraltar when passing from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean, or vice versa.

But it is the comparatively little en-

I hesitated for nearly a week, but one day when he came home very much intoxicated and his week's salary nearly all spent, I threw off all fear and determined to make an effort to save our home from the ruin I saw coming, at all hazards. I sent for your Samaria Prescription and put it in his coffee as directed next morning and watched and prayed for the result. At noon I gave him more and also at supp He never suspected a thing, and I th boldly kept right on giving it regularly I had discovered scheething that set ever nerve in my body tingling with hope an ss. and I could see a bright future spread out before me—a peaceful, happy aome, a share in the good things of life, a sttentive, loving husband, comforts, and everything else dear to a woman's heart. for my husband had told me that whisker was vile stuff and he was taking a disli to it. It was only too true, for before had given him the full course he had stop ped drinking altogether, but I kept givin the medicine till it was gone, and then sen for another lot to have on hand if he should relapse, as he had done from his promises before. He never has, and I am writing you this letter to tell you how thankful I am. I honestly believe it will cure the gineering feats which have slowly but surely altered in the past and will alter in the future the face of the earth. Even so small a matter, for instance, as the proposed seawall at Southend will certainly deepen the estuary of the Thames, and may conceivably do away with the Goodwin sands.

A scheme was recently mooted to cut a ship canal through the center of Ireland, beginning at Dublin and fin-ishing at Galway. It would be no very difficult feat to accomplish, for most of the country through which it would pass is flat and boggy. But just consider the result. Ireland would no longer be an island, but two, and many of the best of Moore's melodies would have to be rewritten. To allude to "Erin's green isle" would be a palpable misnomer. Even this, however would be better than to have our our own "silver Thames" transformed into a hugh ditch, with "ocean greyhounds" and "tramp" cargo steamers belching smoke through Cliveden woods or over Cookham village.

Yet such an eventuality is by no means impossible, for it has already been bruited to construct a ship canal from Bristol to London by way of the Severn and the Thames.

WHERE BIGGEST ROSES BLOOM

On the Island of Trinidad Where the Sisters of Charity Live.

One of the most interesting and wonderfully conducted institutions in the world is the great leper hospital of the Island of Trinidad, where lepers from all the Windward Islands come for treatment. I went to this institution in company with the surgeongeneral of the colony, and it is mainly from him these facts are derived. He had studied leprosy in India and in half a dozen English colonies.

The hospital consists of some half dozen detached one-story stuccoed buildings, set in the form of a square about several acres of grass-covered, tree-shaded lawn. One building is reserved entirely for the sisters of charity, who form the nursing corps of the hospital, and this is backed by a garden which they work themselves and which is famous for its roses and blossoming vines.

The roses, more especially, are noted for their size, perfume and loveliness even in the tropics, where splendid orchids grow. The flowers are as big as peonies, and either pure white or blush color, and the bushes bloom so profusely and continuously that it is necessary now and then to take them, roots and all, out of the ground to prevent complete exhaustion of their

This garden and their musical instruments are their refuge and relax-ation, for the sights they daily witness are so distressing, so wearing to the nerves, that the superior frequently requires them to abandon their work for a few days and give themselves up to music and gardening until they recover their tone. Every few years they are sent away to some other duty for several months for the same reason. Many of the nurses have been more than ten years at work in the hospital, and there has never been the slightest sign of contagion in one of them. They observe the usual exquisite cleanliness demanded by their religious vows, and the superior takes care that their physical condition is carefully watched, but no other precautions are observed and they do not seclude themselves from the world. At the time of my visit there were but two white men in the hospital, all the Chinese. The women's pavilion was far more full, one patient being a victim to that horrible, grotesque form of the complaint known as elephantiasis, which made her like some nightmare, or delusion of fever, yet she seemed perfectly cheerful and happy, and talked quite gayiy to the sister, who was apparently a great favorite in all the wards. Some leper children were in the same ward; most of them as yet so slightly affected that a casual observer would not see evidences of the disease till pointed out, but they were languid, solemn little creatures, as if the shade of their dreaded inheritance had alblotted out all the sunshine from their morning. The women who were least affected helped with the washing for all the wards, and this occupation seemed an eagerly sought pleasure, the worst of the disease being the long years of helpless inactivity it entails. A half-breed Hindu in one of the wards whose disease had disfigured him less than most, had evolved in his long leisure a most ingenious tower some five feet high, built of old cigar boxes, hulf-used pencils, cast-off bits of wire, nails, etc., a thousand odds and ends, including a broken clock case, some of which he had begged from visitors, more of which he rescued from the refuse tins. This contained some thirty little rooms and a winding stair, and was inhabited by a pet gray rat, who, at a signal from his master, would mount the stairs and visit every room, ringing a bell in one, turning a wheel in another, pulling a string which loosened a shower of water in a third, and displaying all the triumphs of ten years' patience and skill, to the infinite pride and delight of his afflicted owner. Most of the patients had no such resource, and sat in brooding indifference and silence, the hopeless prisoners of depair. The most terrible sight of all was the ward of the dying. Here, all was the ward of the dying. Here, after years of slow disintegration, were brought the wrecks of time; their bodies the "fifthy rags" of flesh once new and fair and clean. Faces here were indistinguishable blurs; features were rayed away as if by the bodies were razed away as if by fire, bodies bent and distorted, bones gnawed away. Their misfortunes were so overwhelming that there seemed no place for ordinary sorrow.

THE INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY OF

ITALY. There is no country in the world which, by reason of its mountainous slopes, its needs, its absolute lack of coal and its scarcity of other fuels, can be expected to profit more than Italy by the development of electric power stations for the utilization of the immense potential energy of its rivers and streams. If Italy had early attempted to substitute power derived from her own waterfalls for that imperfectly and expensively supplied by foreign coals, her present manufacturing and commercial inferiority would be so humiliating. Possessing, as she does, valuable deposits of iron ore and copper, yet nearly all of this is exported, while the manufactured articles are imported, some of them from the very countries which purchase the raw material from Italy. If, thereelectro-metallurgical processes be substituted for the older electro-metallurgical could methods, the current required could be developed from the numerous water powers. At present the metallic imports of Italy come from America, Sweden and England, but with a home article in the market, produced by Italian labor, the double freight charges on exported raw material and re-imported products would form a natural protective tariff for the home product.-Enrico Bignami, in The Engineering Magazine for August.

BRITAIN AND HER CHILDREN

W. H. Fitchett's Brilliant Letter on British Imperialism.

The Colonial View of England. W. H. Fitchett, of Sydney, N. S. W.,

istic Than the Mother Country-in the second of his brilliant letters to the London Spectator, strikes a strong Imperialistic note. His letter is as follows: To the Editor of the Spectator: Sir,—An Australian visitor to England, mixing freely with men of all shades of opinion, soon finds that he has undergone a curious change of political climate. He is parted by some subtle difference he can hardly define or analyze from even those with whom on most public topics, he is in sympathy. He becomes conscious that his political perspective, somehow, is unlike those about him; his sense of political values is different. He sees the political landscape from another point of view. It may be worth while to look at the politics of the empire, for a moment, through colonial eyes.

The typical colonial is certainly not a

"jingo" in any foolish sense of that question-begging epithet. He is too much occupied with the rough work of a new land to have either energy or imagination to waste on idle military adventures. But the colonial is an imperialist of the most thorough type. The "Little Englander," with his frost-bitten imagination, his fatal want of perspective, his mistrust of the national destiny, is to the colonial an unlovely and unintelligible human oddity. The colonial, in a word, finds that he thinks more proudly of England, and dreams more nobly for her, than does even the average Englishman. What explains that strain of warmer-blooded imperialism in the colonial mind?

Is it because the colonist is a more imaginative and romantic creature, less roughly chastened by experience, and less familiar with the hard facts of the world, than the average Englishman? No one will say so. The typical colonist, on the whole, is a rougher fibred and more practical man than the average Englishman. The chief explanation of the difference of political mood between the two men lies in the fact that the colonist sees the empire, more or less, from the outside; the Englishman sees it chiefly from the inside. So the colonist, better even than the Englishman himself, can measure the part England plays in the great affairs of the world, and assess the political ideals of which she is the representative amongst the nations.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS is to the empire what its engine-room to a great liner. It is the center of its energy. The force that drives the ship is generated there. But the engine-room, after all, is not the place from which to get the best conception of the course the ship is steering, or the port it is likely to make. The stokers and firemen discharge a very useful, if distressful, office; they live in an atmosphere of great heat, are surrounded by much smoke, and are always in a state of active physical exertion. And of the whole ship's comny the stokers and firemen are about the last to be visited by any glimpse of the stately aspect the great ship, which they are driving on its steadfast course across the sea, wears to onlookers. Much of the political life of England suggests the heat and energy -to say nothing of the smoke-of the engine-room. It is most necessary and useful, but it has its disabilities and limitations. It is an affair of stokers, with the horizon of an engine-room. Would that all English politicians had a vision of the great ship of state, and of the destiny to which it is pressing, as seen from the outside.

What contribution does England make to the world's life? What ideals does she represent? For what causes does she stand in

THE ARENA OF HISTORY?

Let her be judged by her relation to inferior races. She holds in trust, for example—to take a concrete case-some three millions of brown-skinned Cingalese. What is her office to these? She does not fill her pockets at their cost., She does not wring tribute from them. She exacts no unpaid toil. Amongst that picturesque; chattering, quick-witted, but shallow-natured race, she has the of-fice of a schoolmaster; of a nurse. She is the patient drudge and teacher of civilization. The Englishman as he stands in such a community is a prosaic figure, quite unconscious of any heroic office. He is content, like the ancient Roman, to make roads, and enforce order, and clear the jungle. But he stands for higher ideals than the Roman knew. He is the representative of justice; he organizes pity; he makes patient war on ignorance; he is the guardian and warden of freedom. He slowly creates for the races he governs new moral ideas; he lifts them up to new moral levels. It is true the Englishman does not announce to the world, or even admit to himself, that he is seeking any such ends in a community like Ceylon. He goes to plant coffee and make a fortune. But he takes all these ideals with him. enforce them as a part of his daily work.

What would happen if the Englishman and all he represents were suddenly withdrawn from a community like Ceylon? The jungle would re-emerge. Order would vanish. A whole race would instantly relapse into a savagery in which man's life and woman's honor would be at the caprice of some native chief. Would the men of any other nation do the work better than Englishmen? Has the Belgian done it better in Africa, or the French in Tonquin, or the Dutch in Java? The continentals delight to paint the Englishman abroad as the most grasping of human beings, the universal appropriator, a mere bit of selfishness on two legs. And with that odd joy in self-depreciation in which English pride not seldom disguises itself, the Englishman repeats and accepts this misdescription of himself. But let the plain facts be looked in the face. Eng-

DOES NOT PICK THE POCKETS of her dependencies to fill her own. She impose no taxes; she suffers them, rather, at the hands of her own colonies. In continental politics a depend-ency is always a mere sponge to be squeezed. But in the policy of England towards her colonies and dependencies today we have an example of magnanimous unselfishness as cannot be paralleled in history. Now the accident of his geography enables the colonist to see the contribution which, in spite of many blunders, England makes to the world's order and peace and happiness. And so he is kindled to a pride in his race and empire the home-born Englishman does not always feel. Do Englishmen. again, quite realize how necessary the empire is to the colonies? It is usually the other side of this problem which is considered. The empire needs colonies, and the farstretching commerce which goes with colonies. But the colonies need the shelter of the empire, and they listen with keen anxiety to catch the imperial note in British statesmanship. If it note in British statesmanship. If it grows faint, the outlook for the colonies darkens. Take the case of Australia for example. Let your readers imagine a population a little less than that of London scattered over a continent almost equal to the whole of Europe. It is a continent of sunny skies, and Why the Colonies Are Mere Imperialsoft airs, and clear landscapes; a land of only half-known mineral wealth, of wool, and wine, and wheat, and fruit, and of innumerable flocks and herds. It will grow anything. It offers such a field for the growth of a new nation as the world nowhere else possesses. There is space for nearly three Italies in New South Wales. More than three countries like Austria could be packed into West Australia, three Spains into Queensland, and more than three Frances into South Australia. And this whole continent is held in fee by a handful of the English-speaking race.

We could not hold it for a day but for THE SHELTER OF THE BRITISH FLAG!

Th "Little Englanders" are fond of prophesying that if England were at war the colonies, out of prudent regard for their own safety, would "cut the painter," and so disentangle them-selves from the dispute. So far, however, the colonies persist in showing an almost absurdly eager anxiety to share in whatever war may be going on anywhere in the empire. But the colonies are not so bankrupt of sense as not to know that, if they ceased to be a part of the empire, their national existence would be instantly exposed to perils new, near and most menacing. They would have to buy a doubtful safety at the cost of creating fleets and raising armies of their own. So we have the keenest interest in the imperial side of British politics. We are directly concerned that the fleets of England should be strong and her statesmen resolute. A "Little Englander" regime would in a single generation COST ENGLAND HER COLONIES. That circumstance would be for England a misfortune; for the colonies it would be a tragedy!

The colonist is, for many reasons, less interested in history, and perhaps less influenced by it, than the average Englishman. For one thing, he has no history of his own as yet; he is busy making it. He is himself making a new nation, so his imagination runs forward with keen and questioning vision. It has no temptation to run backward. In this way the colonist is more impressed by the future of the empire than the history-burdened Englishman. And invariably the colonist cherishes a proud, expectant, delighted faith in the English empire of tomorrow. The hap-piest political incident of this generation is, perhaps, the new friendship into which the relations betwixt England and the United States have suddenly crystallized. There is no formal treaty betwixt these two branches of the English-speaking race; there needs to be no treaty; but their friendship is a root of exhaustless strength to both powers. It makes secure certain great political causes to which both are

Yet the POLITICS OF THE UNITED STATES are a quicksand. Moods of national feeling change there quickly, and change often for what seem absurdly inadequate reasons. But England has in her colonies of today half a dozen potential Americas! Some who read these lines will live to see Australia with a population of twenty millions, the Cape with one of twenty millions. Canada, perhaps, with one of forty millions. Before the twentieth century, now at our finger-tips, is half spent the British empire will be a planetgirdling zone of great dominions, linked by ties of pride and affection and of material interest to the motherland. the island seat of the race. That will give to the empire more than the closest alliance with the United States could give it today. It will make triumphant all the great political ideals for which the empire stands. The cynic may say that all this is but an idle dream. Yet the dream, if idle, is noble. It certainly fills the chambers of the colonist's brain. And if the dream has no other office, it at least serves to flush his politics with warmer tints of hope than he is always able to discover in the politics of his English friends. I am, sir, etc., W. H. FITCHETT.

TALE OF THE CAMP

who was packing his pipe, preparatory to an after-supper smoke. "You might as well eat wet clay," said Jack, in the greatest disgust.

"Well, there's lots of clay," said his chum, laughing.
"Stuff like that bread we had tonight. for instance. It wasn't bread, it was a crust with a lump of dough in the middle. "You ate it, just the same," said his chum. "What benefit can a fellow get out of his holidays subsisting on stuff like that?" continued Henderson. "Here we come out on this canoe trip miles away from civilization to build up and put on muscle. We want to go back town feeling brand new. This is the way we do it. Live on wet dough and fried fish (generally burnt), with boiled tea half the time to wash it down. It'll take three weeks of mother's cooking to build me up after we get through with this."

"I'll just bet you I'm over five pounds heavier since we started this trip," said his chum.
"You get more nourishment out of the grub than I do, then," said Hen-'Good reason why.'

"Why?"

"I take a Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablet after every meal." "What's that do?" "It digests the dough just as well as if I was eating bread at twelve cents a loaf at home." "The deuce you say," said Hender-son; "you'd better divide up those Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets before we go a step farther." Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at fifty cents a box, six boxes $2 50; or will be sent, on receipt of price, by the Dodd's Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto.

HOPE.

Did it ever occur to you wnat a world word "hope?" Its very pronunciation makes every bosom bound and burn. It is music to the ear of the young, health to the sick, and life rejuvenated to the old. Poetry makes hope a formation, grief makes it a solace, and desolation makes it the brightest flower that adorns earthly creation, while even disappointment and delusion whisper darkness out of the sky of today into sunshine of tomorrow.—Dr. Armtage.

HOUSEKEEPER

The Queen's Kitchens and Their Management.

I am sure, says a writer in the Pall Mall Magazine, very many of my readers will be glad to hear that, notwithstanding the enormous amount of business with which she has to deal, the Queen is to a large extent her own housekeeper. The first thing every morning a paper of suggestions is placed before her, from which in her own hand she orders the menus of the day, both for herself and such of her grandchildren as may be with her. These menus are at once sent to the kitchens, gardens and other departments concerned, to obtain the viands required; and their contents duly entered, together with the quantities of matrials used, in the books which are kept in the royal kitchen. The Queen's chef receives a salary of £500 per annum, and has as satellites four master cooks, two yeomen of the kitchen, two assistant cooks, two roasting cooks, six apprentices and six kitchen maids, besides pantrymen and other lesser lights. In addition to the great kitchen at Windsor there are the greenroom for vegetables, and the confec-tionery and pastry kitchen. This last is a most important department, controlled by a confectioner with six assistants, and fitted in the most complete manner. All her majesty's favorite cakes, biscuits, pastry, etc., are made here and sent by special messengers several times a week to whichever of her residences the court may be staying at. All stores at Windsor are under proper supervision, no materials being served out without proper requi-sition signed by the head of the department concerned. Not a bag of dogbiscuits can even be ordered for the kennels unless on the proper printed form. In fact, the whole vast establishment is practically as methodically conducted as any great London business. This method, which was evolved by her majesty and the late Prince Consort, out of the chaos which descended from the days of George IV., entirely does away with waste, extravagance and the abominable perquisite system, and moreover enables her majesty to exercise that wise control over her finances which enables her to keep the grandest establishment on relatively the smallest royal income in Europe.

LIFE SAVED.-Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good.

Twelve years ago one sailor out of every 106, on an average, lost his life by accident. Now the proportion has been reduced to one in 256.

TWO LADIES TESTIFY.

Speak in the highest terms of Laxa-Liver Pills.

Everywhere the ladies are discarding the old-fashioned harsh laxatives and cathartics for Laxa-Liver Pills. These little fellows are so easy to take, act so gently, without any griping, weakening or sickening, and are so adapted to the constitution of the most delicate, that they have in truth become the "ladies' favorite medicine."

Miss Alina Goquin, Cape Bald, N.B., says: "I had an attack of liver trouble and indigestion last spring and decided to buy Laxa-Liver Pills. They had a more lasting effect than any remedy I ever took, and I believe them to be the best medicine for liver trouble that is to be found." Miss Ellen Whalen, Niagara Falls, Ont., says: "I had dyspepsia for two years, and took various remedies, but none of them suited my case like Laxa-Liver Pills. They cured me promptly and effectually." Laxa-Liver Pills always cure biliousness, sick headache, dyspepsia, constipation, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, coated tongue, bad breath, sallow and muddy complexion, etc.

As an "after dinner" pill they are most valuable, removing that full or bloated feeling and preventing indigestion.

~~~~~~~~~ OUR SHORT STORY

"The Crook Neck Pattern."

stood holding the horse, which was a bit impatient. You won't forget," will you, father? We really ain't got nothing to our backs, and it's a disgrace. I've made over till there ain't anything left to make over, and I ain't got nothing but what I've got on, 'cept my black dress, and the girls are all worse off yet. And Susie hasn't been to Sunday school for three Sundays 'cause she don't look decent, and her teacher's been here inquiring. It's kind o' mortifying. Mrs. Hollis' voice was full of apology as she accompanied her husband down the gravel walk. He scowled, but made no reply as he took the reins from Jed and sprang into the You must get something for the girls, anyhow," his wife's voice insisted as he drove away.

He gave the lines a yank. It was exasperating to have to be bothered with women and their fixings. He didn't see why they didn't look well enough. Of course, they weren't dressed expensive—it wasn't proper that farmers' families should be—but there wasn't any need of making such a fuss. The Sunday school teacher had been there He remembered her. She always smiled at him and made him wonder to himself if he were such a bad-looking chap after all.

Well, perhaps he had better get something for Susie. The last crop was an extra heavy one and he had made a good deal out of it, and so he might as well be generous and get all his wife asked for. There was nothing stingy about him. No, sir! He smiled complacently as he drove into the village.

"You can't say but what I've done the handsome thing by you this time," Mr. Hollis remarked proudly to his wife, as he threw down a heavy bundle at her feet and watched her as she knelt down to open it.

Her eyes glowed as one knot after another gave way. It was a long time since she had undone a store bundle She did not want to be in too much of a hurry to end the expectancy and disclose its contents.

"Seems to me you ain't in very much of a hurry after wanting it so bad." Her husband's voice was a bit She hastily slipped off the last string and pulled off the wrapper. The children orowded around her.

"Isn't that fine enough to suit you?"
Mr. Hollis chuckled exultantly as he leaned over and, catching hold of an end, unrolled yards and yards of stout cotton. It was a bright yellow ground with a black figure running

"Latest pattern," he exclaimed, with pride. "The girl called it palm-leaf, but I told her 'twas crook-neck squashes or I was no farmer. So I bought the whole piece. Thought I might just as well, and got a good bit knocked off. "Don't you like it, eh?" abruptly glancing at the downcast face of his wife. "It was dreadful economical, you see, 'cause when one's dress begins to wear out you can mend it with another and so keep things going pretty well. And there won't nobody else have anything like it. cause that I there is.

"Great scheme, that." He chuckled again hoarsely to himself as he stamped away. She didn't seem a bit grateful. It was provoking. The following Sunday the entire Hollis family appeared in church. Mr. Hollis had gone early that he might see a neighbor about haying the next morning, and he stood with a group of men and boys about the church door. He was suddenly conscious that the men were losing interest in his account of a certain sharp transaction whereby he had been the

He turned. His family was entering the church. Mrs. Hollis and the four girls led the way. They all wore their new dresses. They were made exactly alike. The three boys followed. A soft laugh floated across the vesas they passed into the church. "All off one piece," a woman's voice whispered. "Don't they look too much like a charitable institution?"

There was a chorus of giggles. Mr. Hollis strode into the church and glanced hastily at the boys. were just settling themselves into the family pew. There was no crook-neck squash pattern visible on them. breathed a sigh of relief as he walked up the aisle.

The sermon was unusually dry that morning. Or possibly Mr. Hollis' mind was not upon it. Almost unconscious ly from the corner of his eye he could

THE VACANT CHAIR.

When the little family circle is broken and we sit sadly looking upon the vacant chair, we think of the things that perhaps we might have done to keep the loved one with us. Why not think of these things now before it is too late? Is it a kind, loving and hard-working mother who is giving all her strength and efforts for the family well-being and happiness? Is it a delicate, fragile sister; or a weak and ailing wife? Try to give her the tender care she needs. Do not let her fade away for want of earnest effort to preserve and restore her.

nest effort to preserve and restore her.

An Ohio lady, Mrs. Shopshire, living in Ballou, Bhelby Co., in a thoughtful letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "My mother had an ovarian tumor which we thought would result in her death, but we commenced using your 'Favorite Prescription,' and before she had taken three bottles she began to improve; she is living to day and we have given your medicine the credit. My mother was sixty-six years old when the tumor commenced to grow; she is seventy-six now and the tumor is all gone. She had gotten awful large, and her limbs began to swell before she began to use your medicine. I value it so much that I am hardly ever out of it in my house."

This is but one of many thousands of instances in which this matchless "Prescrip-tion" has restored such complete health and purification to the distinctly feminine organism as to dispel every possible trace of abnormal or dangerous conditions without resort to surgery or similar obnoxious methods. For every form of female weakness and disease it is the supreme specific designed for this one purpose and no other by an educated skillful physician of extraordinary experience in this particular field of practice.

The last of the load had been bun- see the five figures in their yellow dled onto the wagon and little Jed | gowns. Ella's was becoming. It just suited her dark hair and red cheeks, but poor Susie looked sick and thin. He had never before noticed how peaked the child was. It must be she was not well. His heart hardened with indignation at his wife for not telling him. A man ought to know about his family. If she needed a doctor he guessed he could afford to have one. He wasn't a poor man. He never be-grudged his family anything! He glanced at Sarah. She was the oldest. Her eyes were downcast and her cheeks a vivid red. Mrs. Hollis was looking at the minister. Little Bessie had fallen asleep and her yellow shoulders rested in Ella's yellow lap. His eyes wandered beyond to the other women in the congregation. There were the summer boarders in all sorts of light, fluffy things, and the farmers' daughters in white or blue or pink, or even black. He never noticed until now how nice a woman looked in black. He must buy his wife a black dress next time he went to town. She didn't need it, of course, but it was just as well sometimes to give women folk things they didn't need. It humored them. She used to be a very pretty woman, but somehow today she looked erribly old and faded. He wouldn't forget.

The next day the yellow dresses appeared again. So on for a week.
One morning Mrs. Hollis explained. 'I hope you don't think I'm extravagant a-wearing our new clothes all the time," she ventured. "But really we ain't got anything else. We'd just got reduced to rags, and them I had to take for cleaning cloths just as fast as I got the dresses done. There was enough for two dresses apiece for the girls, so they have some a little mite more fancy for Sunday wear. It seems to be real good wearing stuff, and I guess it won't fade much.'

Her voice seemed far away. He was staring hard at his plate. It seemed to have a running pattern of crook-neck

Mr. Hollis did not attend the church next Sunday. He pleaded a sick horse for excuse and retired to the barn, from whose cobwebbed window he saw the family depart, all save Sarah-she had refused to go. The laugh of the girl last Sunday echoed in his ears and he shut his teeth hard.

"It's good wearing stuff," he mut-tered to himself as he vindictively kicked a keg.
The third Sunday Mr. Hollis had business out of town. "I really can't attend to it any other time," he explained to his wife.

She, Bessie, and the boys attended church. They were all at supper when he returned, and he took his place quickly at the table.

Suddenly his eyes rested on Jed. He seemed to see something familiar. He rubbed his eyes and looked again. It was a blouse covered with the palmleaf holding on to his chair uncertain. Sarah looked at her plate. Bessie's blue eyes peered startled over the rim of her mug.

Mr. Hollis moved uneasily. He opened his mouth to speak. Then he shut it again, took up his cup and drank a long swallow of tea.
"I wish," he said, speaking in a loud voice and looking past his wife out of the window beyond-"I wish you would take all that stuff away and never let me see a mite of it agin. I'm sick of

"They are good wearing dresses," she began. It seems a waste—"
Her husband brought his fist down so that the dishes rattled. 'Waste be hanged!" she shouted. He put his hand into his pocket and drew out a roll of bills. These he shoved across the table to his wife. "I'll hitch up in the morning and you can drive over and get what you want," he said, as he pushed back his chair and started for the door.

"I s'pose I can use it up in dusters," his wife ruminated to herself. "No!" The command came s The command came swift and He slammed the door behind him and bolted through the shed. In his haste he upset a barrel. Out from it would the torn out and humad remains polled the torn, cut and burned remains of Sarah's dress.

"I don't blame her one mite," he chuckled as he vindictively kicked it into a dark corner and sent an old boot flying after it. "Durn the pattern."—Harriet Caryl Cox, in Chicago Record.

A SAD SCENE

Prince Kropotkin Describes the Murder of Alexander the Second.

A bomb was thrown under the Czar's iron-clad carriage, to stop it, says Prince Kropotkin in the September Atlantic. Several Circassians of the escort were wounded; Rysakoff, who flung the bomb, was arrested on the spot. Then, although the coachman of the Czar earnestly advised him not to get out, saying that he could drive him still in the slightly damaged carriage, he stepped out. He felt that his military dignity required him to the wounded Circassians, to condole with them as he had done with the wounded during the Turkish war, a mad storming of Plevna, doomed to end in a terrible disaster, was made on the day of his fete. He approached Rysakoff and asked him something, and as he passed close by another young man, Grinevetsky, the latter threw his bomb at their feet, between himself and Alexander II. that both of them should be killed by the terrible engine. They lived but a

There Alexander II. lay upon the snow, profusely bleeding, abandoned by every one of his followers! All had disappeared. It was cadets, returning from the parade, who lifted the bleeding Tzar from the snow, and put him in a sledge, covering his shivering body with a cadet mantle and his bare head with a cadet cap. And it was one of the Terrorists, Emelianoff, with a bomb wrapped in a paper under his arm, who at the risk of being arrested on the spot and hanged, rushed with the cadets to the help of the wounded man. Human nature is full of these contrasts.

Thus ended the tragedy of Alexander

II.'s life. People could not understand how it was possible that a Tsar who how it was possible that a Tsar who had done so much for Russia should have met his death at the hands of revolutionists. To me, who had the chance of witnessing the first reactionary steps of Alexander II. and his gradual deterioration, who had caught a glimpse of his complex personality—that of a born autocrat whose violence was but partially mitigated by ence was but partially mitigated by education, of a man possessed of military gallantry, but devoid of the courage of the statesman—of a man of strong passions and weak will—it seemed that the tragedy developed with the unavoidable fatality of one of Shakespear's plays. Its last act was already written for me on the day when I heard him address us, the promoted officers, on June 13, 1862, immediately after the first execution in Poland.

OF INTEREST

The Uses of Lemons.

One of the most delightful luxuries is a lemon bath, and in countries where they grow it is indulged in daily by most people. Three or four lemons are sliced into the water, which is drawn half an hour before using, so that the juice of the fruit may have a chance to permeate, and the comfort of such tubbing must be felt to be appreciated. The sense of freshness it gives, and the suppleness and smoothness it imparts to the skin, is not soon forgotten, and those who have once tried the experiment never fall to repeat it. In the West Indies, where the lemon is so abundant, it is used instead of soap, and when the natives want to wash their hands they squeeze the juice on to them and rub them briskly in water until they are clean. In the care of complexions, the lemon is invaluable, particularly in summer, when a few drops in the water in which the face is washed removes all greasiness and leaves the skin fresh and velvety. A little lemon juice rub-bed on the cheeks before going to bed and allowed to dry there will remove freckles and whiten the skin, besides giving it a delightful smoothness. This should be done about three or four times a week in summer and twice a week in winter, and will be found to work wonders with such complexions as are afflicted with enlarged and blackened pores, and if persevered with will eventually carry off all un-sightly blemishes that are not caused by internal trouble.

Lemons are also useful in the care of the teeth. A few drops squeezed into a glass of water for rinsing the mouth acting as a tonic to the gums and rendering them firm.

In washing the hair, if a lemon is used, it will cleanse the scalp better than anything, and give a soft fluffiness and shine to the hair that is al-ways desirable. For this purpose, dip the head into tepid water, take the two halves of a juicy lemon and rub and squeeze them over the head; when this is done, wash thoroughly with the hands in the tepid water, rinse in fresh water of the same temperature and rub briskly with towels until the hair is quite dry, standing in the sun to do so if possible. The hair will soon become several shades lighter under this treatment, which should be performed about every two weeks. Lemons are not so costly, even in the dest countries, that wom easily afford to use this tropical aid to the toilet, and no other cosmetic will do so much or give such good results. Another virtue of the lemon is that the juice of half a one in a cup of strong black coffee, without sugar, will often completely cure the most stubborn sick headache, and in every case will give considerable relief.

+++ The Art of Listening.

Would that there were more people who knew how to listen! We sometimes deplore the fact that there are so few good talkers; may we not rather regret that those who can talk so seldom find people who know how to hear them?

The habit of interrupting is one that is certainly on the increase. If one will sit quietly by and take notes of a casual conversation he will be disagreeably surprised to see how few sentences are allowed to run their smooth even way without some interruption. When a story is in telling by one of a small group it is bound to be paragraphed by exclamations, needless questions, or would-be jocose speeches. To listen properly one should look at the speaker and think of what he is saying. Such a listener is in himself an inspiration. We sometimes hear it said of a man or woman, "That person brings out all that is best in me in the way of conversation." And generally the reason for this is that this particular person gives appreciative heed to what is being said.

To look at a book, to turn over the pages of a magazine, or to glance over the columns of a newspaper is not to listen attentively, and will serve as a damper to the most enthusiastic of speakers. +++

The Correct Corset.

Woe be to the woman nowadays who has not a good corsetiere. It is necessary that stays should be specially made for every woman who dresses well; that they should well cover the shoulder blades; that they should give ample room to the bust; that they should be long in the waist line; that they should give good spring to the hips, and descend longer than we have had them for some time, for the new gowns will not set over them unless all this care is taken. They should quite straight in front, giving freedom about the waist, while below it they are expected to form the foundation for the skin-tight skirt. +++

Puddings.

One heaping cup of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one pinch of salt, one piece of lard the size of an egg; stir the above ingredients with milk to make dough. Put one-fourth or more of a cupful of fruit, either plums, cherries or berries, and plenty of juice, in each teacup, and nearly fill the dough described above. Steam an hour in these cups, without lifting the cover. Then put in saucers and serve with the following dressing The juice of the fruit ought to run over the pudding when it is turned out: Dressing-One-half teacup of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, butter the size of an egg; salt. Beat sugar and flour, then stir in the butter and pour over it boiling water. Flavor with vanilla or lemon.

+++ House Decoration.

An interesting description of a London artist's house has recently been published. The workmen engaged on its decoration were all imported from Japan, and paid wages hardly amounting to more than those which they received in their own country. Each room has for its decorative motive one particular flower. In the drawingroom the peony furnishes the inspira-tion, in the studio the camellia, in the dining-room the cherry blossom, and in the three entrance halls the chrysanthemum. Only one room marks the exception. The morning-room, according to a published account, has the fish as its motive. Fish disport themselves upon the paneled ceiling and upon the walls, on the carved doors, the handles of which are bronze fish, and so forth throughout the whole room. Without doubt before long the same thing will be done in this country.

From the leafy maple ridges, From the thickets of the cedar, From the alders by the rivers, From the bending willow branches, From the hollows and the hillsides, Through the lone Canadian forest, Comes the melancholy music, Oft repeated-never changing-"All-is-vanity-vanity-vanity."

Where the farmer plows his furrow, Sowing seed with hope of harvest, In the orchard, white with blossoms, In the early field of clover, Comes the little brown-clad singer, Flitting in and out of bushes, Hiding well behind the fences. Piping forth his song of sadness-

The Magic Letter. In fairy days gone by,

There was a little maiden once, Whose every thought and every word Always began with "I."

"I think," "I know," "I wish,"
"I like," "I want," "I will;" From morn to night, from day to day, was her burden still.

Her schoolmates would not play with her. Her parents tried in vain

To teach her better, and one day Poor "I" cried out in pain. "Help me, O fairies!" he besought. 'I'm worn just to a thread. Do save me from this dreadful child, Or I shall soon be dead!"

The fairies heard, and heeded, too. They caught poor "I" away And nursed him into health again Through many an anxious day; And in his place they deftly slipped A broader, stronger letter. "The more she uses that," they said,
With rogunish smiles, "the better!"

The little maiden wept and sulked At first, and would not speak, But she grew tired of being dumb, And so, within a week, She used the substitute; and lo! Her playmates crowded round, Her parents smiled, and all pleased To hear this novel sound. She grew to use it steadily,

And liked it more and more, It came to fill a larger place Than "I" had done before; And each year found the little maid More kind and sweet and true. What was the magic letter's name? Why, can't you guess? 'Twas "U!'

The baby was helped to the edge of the nest, and after many directions as to how to balance and steer, a push was given the baby, who, escorted by his father and mother, entered the kinder-garten. The children were in the play circle, and, of course, were greatly excited by the arrival of the Sparrow family. They rose to their feet—they had been sitting on the floor-and some clapped their hands. The Sparrow family flew around the circle two or three times, and then modestly sat down on the floor. DIAGNOSE YOUR OWN CASE.

While it is true that nervousness often occurs as a primary affection, in many instances it is but secondary to other troubles. Thus any disorded of the digestive system-the stomach, liver, bowels, etc., nearly always is attended by nervous symptoms. In no class of diseases, however, is nervousness so marked as in those diseases that relate to the delicate organism of women

DISEASES OF WOMEN are always attended by symptoms that are entirely remote from the seat of disorder. Paleness, weakness, nervousness, are often experienced long before the true character of the disease is discovered. Headaches, Sunken Cheeks, Palpitation of the Heart, Im-paired Digestion, Torpid Liver and Costiveness are all prominent symptoms that attend those ailments peculiar to women, symptoms that may

Dr. Arnold's English Pills for weak people readily correct the above symptoms, whether they occur as primary affections or whether they are secondary to female disorder. They are the best remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women, for they give strength and tone to the delicate organs. They correct all ailments, heal ulceration, and chronic inflammation, and permanently overcome all the distressing nervous symptoms that attend those functional and organic diseases of women.

They impart strength to the whole system, and insure a regular discharge of every bodily function. They give the glow of health to all pale or sallow complexions. They are pronounced by medical men to possess most wonderful curative properties, and they are certainly a boon to all suffering women.

Lady Tighe, Still Living, Was at The Famous Ball.

Was Born in 1803-Her Father Former Governor of Canada..

Lady Louise Tighe, who is still living, is interesting to British people the world over because she was one of the daughters of the Duke of Richmond who danced at the famous ball given by their father at Brussels on the eve of Waterloo. Canadian people can claim a more particular interest in her from the fact that she is a daughter of a former governor of Canada and once lived here for a year, and that her residence here was cut short by the tragedy of her father's death in this country, which was of a nature to starthe the imagination, and has ever since been a favorite subject for the storytellers of Canadian events.

Lady Louise Madeline Tighe was born in 1803, and was, therefore, a child of about five years when her father, the Duke of Richmond, was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and the Duke of Wellington, then Sir Arthur Wellesley, was his chief secretary. Sir Ar-thur was already a major-general, with • high reputation not only as a military leader, but as a diplomatist, won principally in India, though he had also won some battles in Spain and Portugal; although he had not then undertaken the great campaign on which he drove Napoleon's ablest generals and victorious soldiers back from Portugal across Spain, across the Pyrenees and through the south of France to Tou-In India Sir Arthur had subjugated the Mahrattas, whom he half conquered by his moral influence before he overthrew them in the famous battle of Assaye, by military force, or, rather, generalship.

Sir Arthur Wellesley, the secretary, was high up in the esteem of the statesmen and military authorities of India, and at Dublin, too, he was valued by the Duke of Richmond, but to the lively sons and daughters of the Gordon-Lennox family, he seemed to be an awfully sober, if not an absolutely stupid, young man. There were seven sons and five daughters, of whom Louise was the third, and the latter seemed to think that among the chief duties of the secretary was to find amusement and entertainment for them down to the youngest, whom he used to take driving in the famous Phoenix Park, the scene so long afterwards of the assassination of another Irish secretary, Lord Cavendish.

Though, as Lady de Ros, Lady Tighe's eldest sister, next in age, who died in 1891, at the age of 96, wrote in her memoirs, they considered Sir Arthur "something of a stick," yet he was good-natured, too, and "lots of fun," and he and the lively Gordon-Lennoxes became fast friends, and they had many "good times," as Lady de Ros records. She and her sister were sad flirts; but came honestly enough by the character, as Lady Sarah Lennox, who led George III. such a dance that he would have married her in spite of Privy Council and Parliament, and all other obstacles, had she not flouted raised the famous Highland regiment by rather peculiar methods, was also granddame of theirs. Lady Tighe and her merry sisters were rather astonished at the success and fame which their friend, Sir Arthur, afterwards achieved in the Peninsular war. When Napoleon's return from Elba threw Europe into a panic, and the powers determined to combine to defeat him in France, the Duke of Richmond established his family at Brussels, which was to be the base of operations of the British army. They saw a great deal of the Duke of Wellington and of his staff; indeed, the memoirs of Lady de Ros, give the impression that the residence of the Duke of Richmond was the center of the military life of Brussels. She and her sisters were in a state of great and continuous excitement over the prospects of war; as well they might be, seeing that two of their brothers-gallant fellows-as well as many more of their relatives and friends, were at the front. Lady de Ros remembered the Duke of Wellington discussing with her father the plan of the campaign with a map before him, upon which at Waterloo he mark- It Takes Three Days to "Do" Its At ed a cross, saying that he would fight his decisive battle at that point. This map, she says, never came back from Canada, where so many things belonging to her father were left. So that it is possible that this valuable relict may yet turn up at Quebec or Mont-

The famous ball given by the Duchess of Richmond on the eve of Waterloo took place in a big room, once a coach house, which had been fitted up as a sort of combined school and playroom for the Gordon-Lennox children. Lady Tighe danced at the ball, though she was then only twelve or thirteen years of age.

It was four years later that the Duke of Richmond was appointed governor of Canada in succession to General Sherbrooke. He took his family with him to Quebec, where he assumed his duties on July 29, 1819. He had been extremely popular as lord-lieutenant of Ireland, and gave promise to making himself so in Canada also, though It was the period of the struggles between the legislature and the executive council for domination, and the duke, who had something of the same matter-of-fact way of looking at things as the Duke of Wellington, who was not inclined to allow theories or policles to interfere with the "carrying on of the Queen's government," showed his decision of character by annually drawing upon the receiver-general, on his own responsibility. when the legislature declined to vote the supplies necessary for the civil list. He had, however, too short a time in which to manifest his abilities as a governor of Canada. The summer after his arrival at Quebec he started to make a tour through "the Canadas." At William

Henry—now Sorel—his little dog "Blu-cher," made friends with a young pet fox which the duke thereupon bought. A day or two afterwards, when cares-sing the animal, it bit his hand, but not severely enough to be regarded as serious. A month later, when near Perth, the duke was attacked with hydrophobia and died on Aug. 23, after five or six days' illness, during which he suffered greatly. His death and the circumstances of it created a great sensation at the time, and the horror of it never passed away from Canada Dr. Kingsford, in notes and supplementary matter appended to his "History of Canada," relates all the circumstances at length. He also tells of the departure shortly afterward of the whole of Richmond's family from Quebec. Five years after her father's death in Canada, Lady Louise Madeline Gordon-Lennox married Colonel the Hon W. F. Tighe, P.C. A recently published diary of the period contains an entry which runs as follows: "The Duchess of Richmond speaking to a friend, said, 'Have you heard of Louise's shocking engagement to a man named Tiggey, a saint and a radical?" Lady Tighe removed with her husband to his estate of Woodstock, Innistogue, County Kilkenny, where she lived happily with her "radical and saint," until he died thirty-one years ago, and where she still resides, now with her grandson, E. K. B. Tighe, Esq. J.P. She is still in vigorous health, walking with a carriage perfectly erect, and finds life pleasant and worth living.

ELEMENTS OF HUMOR

Two Ingredients Which Thackeray Mentions-Wit and Humor Differ.

Of the two ingredients of humor which Thackeray mentions, the first, love, is that which gives body, says Samuel M. Crothers, in the September Atlantic; the addition of wit gives the effervescence. The pleasure of wit lies in its unexpectedness. In humor there is the added pleasure of really liking that which surprises us. It's like meeting an old friend in an unexpected place. "What, you here?" we say. This is the kind of pleasure we get from Dr. Johnson's reply to the lady who asked why he had put a certain definition in his dictionary: "Pure ignorance, madam." The fact is that long ago we made the acquaintance of one whom Bunyan describes as "a brisk young lad named Ignorance." He is a dear friend of ours, and we are on very familiar terms with him when we are at home; but we don't expect to meet him in society. Suddenly we turn the corner, and we see him walking arm in arm with so great a man as Dr. Samuel Johnson. At once we are at our ease in the presence of the great man; it seems we have a mutual acquaintance.

Another element in real humor is a certain detachment of mind. We must not be afraid, or jealous, or angry; in order to take a really humorous view of any character, one must be in a position to see all around it. If I were brought before Fielding's Squire Western on a charge of poaching, and if I had a pheasant concealed under my coat, I should not be in a position to take him very seriously.

Now, neither the small boy nor the schoolmaster gets the full flavor of pens to look in at the door. His de-light in the situation has a mellowness knowledge of the various trades and far removed from the anxious ambiguous glee of the urchin. He knows that tions, open to both sexes, without limit the small boy is not so wicked as he thinks he is, and the schoolmaster is not terrible as he seems; in fact, that helping the poor to help themselves only a little while ago he was up to the could be devised than increasing their same pranks he now finds so reprehen- efficiency and earning power by means So, from the assured position of middle age, he looks upon the small boy that was and the small boy that is, and finds them both very goodmuch better, indeed, than at this moment they find one another.

A certain tourist who was doing all the sights of the Holy Land with painful earnestness was scandalized to see an American arrive one afternoon, hurry round all the sacred places and make ready to depart betimes on the morrow. He ventured to inquire of this bustling traveler why, having come so far, he rushed away so quickly. "Sir" replied the Yankee, "I am timed to do Europe in a fortnight. I have thrown in the Holy Land, and if I stay here longer than one night I cannot see Killarney, which takes three days." That American had been well advised. Erergetic, bustling tourists have endeavored to see all the beauties of the place in one day, and, though they have been delighted and overwhelmed by what they saw, they have not been able to restrain a pang of regret at the thought of what they had missed. Killarney, if not in itself at least by description, is known the world over and has a great reputation to maintain, but, unlike many other places of renown, it does not belie it. The Lakes of Killarney may not prove to be quite as the stranger anticipated, but the impression he carries away is none the less one of profound admiration and wonder. The particular charm which inwraps him is that of the peaceful loveliness and serenity of the whole, and this strikes home with increased conviction after passing by the waterway from the upper to the lower The former sheet of water, enveloped as it is by ragged peaks and gloomy, unclothed mountains, cannot vie with the lower lake, whose magnificent stretch of silver waves fringed and carressed by foliage and trees, by rich meadows and sweetsmelling blooms, while the rugged outlines of the wild hills is softened by the purple haze, and space is lost in infinity of graceful undulations. AN EVENING IN

An American Writer Who Thinks the East Side of New York Is Worse.

The People's Palace and the Work It Is Doing-Great Effort to Ameliorate the Lot of the Poor.

[Henry Dwight Chapin, M.D., in the New York Independent.] To a lover of contrasts, my route from the Royal Oak Station, in West London, to Aldgate, East London, could not fail to afford complete, if not altogether attractive, variations. It was a pleasant August evening, and, after the quiet of Portchester Square, the rush and smoke of the underground railway seemed a fit preliminary to the turmoil of Whitechapel. The top of a stage is comfortable and satisfactory, although not the most anistocratic perch from which to survey various phases of London life. Seated thus, the distance to Mile End Road, where the People's Palace is situated, was soon passed. It is not often that a novelist's idea materializes in cold brick and stone, and it was with much interest that I first caught a glimpse of the little clock tower, with the imposing looking building behind, that constilooking building benind, that constitutes the south front of the People's saloons in this region are not only tutes the south front of the People's numerous, but hideous, without and Palace. Just to one side is the old Jewish burial ground, noted principally for containing the grave of D'Israeli's father. While the son has quite lying in the abbey, surrounded by the greatest of the empire, the father might boast of sleeping by the side of a pile that is carrying on one of the most interesting social endeavors in the country. It was about six o'clock when I passed through the grate and a runn bar I strolled in quite a number of the served by the same person behind the I passed through the gate, and a number of people were strolling through the grounds, or sitting upon the benches enjoying the cool of the day. On one side a noisy group of children were making the most of a set of swings, and in the rear, a swimming bath was full of men and boys. A glance at the various steps in the growth of this undertaking, as given me by one of the instructors, may be of interest. In the year 1882 the Beaumont trustees, being desirous of extending their work, and especially of providing on a large scale for the rational recreation and enjoyment of the people of East London, took counsel with the Draper's company, and our chased a site on Mile End road for such a purpose. At the same time an appeal was made to the public for funds to erect a large hall suitable for concerts and other enter-tainments, and for a public library, and the company voted a sum of £20,-000 for the erection of buildings to be used as a technical school, to form part of the new institution. A large public subscription was raised, and the amount expended in erecting a hall, named after the Queen, which was opened in 1887. Concerts and various other entertainments for the people are given :- this place. In 1888 a swimming bath and a library were opened. At appreciate what an amusing person about the same time the Draper's comthe squire is. I should be inclined to pany erected a gymnasium, and adaptake him very seriously.

The educational work of the People's Palace consists of a day technical school, which is largely recruited from the public elementary schools, and the evening classes, which give one of the largest and most varied courses of inhumor. But suppose at that moment struction in the country. The classes an old friend of the schoolmaster hap-pens to look in at the door. His de-students a practical and theoretical

It is worthy of note that, while the first conception of the People's Palace was to furnish a place where the dull monotony of the poorest people's lives could be relieved by proper amusement, the educational part has completely overtopped the recreative side, which is assuming a minor place in the activity of this interesting undertaking. In the matter of the kind of recreation that will attract the crowd, my informer told me they could not successfully compete with the music halls. Having an invitation to dine with Canon Barnett at Toynbee Hall, I retraced my way through the heart of White-chapel to Commercial street. There is nothing to show from the outside that a beautiful and artistic set of buildings is situated just behind the shabby street. It is therefore a pleasing sur-prise to pass through the porter's lodge and find one's self in what might be the quadrangle of some old English University. From the spaciousness of these buildings, it is hard to realize that only about a decade ago Canon Barnett read his paper at Oxford in which he proposed that the university men who undertook to settle in centers of industry should be organized into a community. They were to carry with hold their own opinions, but were to have the common method of making friends among their neighbors. common object of improving social conditions. With gating and procuring sanitary homes great pleasure and a grateful heart I for the people. Another committee has inquired into the condition of the unemployed in London, and aimed to up recommendations for practical dealing with the problem presented, with efforts to build up co-opera-tive societies. The relations of the settlement with many trades unions corporately, and trades unions individually, is close. Among the meetings held at Toynbee Hall during the year have been those of the women cigarmakers. the clothing cutters and pressers, and the Congress of the Shipping and Carrying Trades Federation. If more rooms were at their disposal the resi-dents would welcome the power to provide more liberally and continuously for trades unions, and thus prevent the necessity of their meeting at public houses. A picture exhibition was held at Easter, and concerts are given through the year. Many educational societies and clubs are also constantly meeting here. A unique feature is the Toynbee Travelers' Club, which has established an economical form of operative traveling, thereby enabling parties of the poor to make excursions to various points of interest in England and the continent at astonishingly low figures. From conversations with now engaged in this work it is evidently the aim to subordinate the educa-tional to the social side. The difficulty of organizing a proper social life among the poor is very great, here as

Wishing to catch a glimpse of the evening life in this section, I strolled rather aimlessly through a labyrinth of narrow streets, well filled with people, as the night was warm. Hearing a noise as of singing or shouting, and seeing a rough looking crowd standing in front of what looked like a good-sized shop, I paused and learned that a Salvation Army meeting was in progress. Upon seeking admittance, a tall slender girl, who was guarding the door, whose face combined the features of the enthusiast and mystic, demanded to know whether I was saved. Seeing my look of modest uncertainty, she hesitated, but finally concluded to admit me, and I learned that this meeting was only for soldiers and new re-cruits. The latter seemed to have been drawn from the poorest and roughest classes, but showed every evidence of sincerity, besides being raised to a high pitch of enthusism. As one of the women was giving her testimony a large stone came crashing through the transom, and fell at her feet. The crowd outside, provoked at being barred out, and somewhat drunken withal were becoming unruly, and an addi-tional officer had to be summoned to keep the peace. Evidently these soldiers at times have to face other missiles than the darts of the adversary. Upon coming out, I asked the officer what he thought was the permanent result of the army's work among the hardest classes. He seemed rather non-committal, and something of a philosopher, as he replied, "They certainly try hard to do the people good." As he saw I was interested in the neighborhood, he directed one to an ally a little further down the street, where Jack the Ripper had gotten in his last gruesome work. The drinking within. There is no attempt at the showy ornamentation so generally seen in saloons even in the poorest quarters in New York. A counter of horseshoebar. I strolled in quite a number of these drinking places and they all seemed filled by a brutal, sodden looking set of people, men and women indiscriminately mixed. The large number of women that one sees in these saloons, drinking and drunk, is a painful surprise. In one saloon a young woman with a baby in one arm could with difficulty maintain her equilibrium by holding on to the counter with the other. Two men were engaging her in maudlin conversation, an old woman was carefully steering herself into the street, while a child stood in the open doorway, either waiting or simply lo ing on. It was a picture. Many like it can be seen in Whitechapel without very prolonged searching. These saloons are permitted to remain open on Sundays except during the time usually allotted to church services. It is difficult to say whether the closing time is allowed with the pleasing fiction that the regular customers need the interval to attend services, or simply to afford them a little time to occasionally get sobered up. In the saloons and drinking of East London, it occurred to me that Mr W. T. Stead might find a good theme for his incisive and caustic pen quite near home. With regard to a proper oversight of saloons, Sunday closing and similar subjects, we may learn something from the experience of East London. Apart from drunkenness, it seemed to me from this evening, and several succeeding days I spent there, that Whitechapel is superior to the lower East Side of New York. It is not so crowded, the houses are not nearly so high many of the streets are wider, and, the whole, the very poor are better housed. There is a quickened sense of social interest and responsibility among the better classes in England that is making great effort toward remedying the defective conditions of poverty, especially in large cities .-New York City.

A WOMAN'S SUFFERING

Was Troubled With Palpitation of the Heart, Extreme Weakness and Norvous Headaches,

In the little hamlet of Montrose, Welland county, resides a lady who gives much preise to the curative power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The subject of this testimony is Mrs. Richard Hanna, an estimable lady who has resided in that locality for many years. A reporter seeking an inter-view with Mrs. Hanna found her willing to give full details, which are given in her own words: "Five years ago I was taken ill. I attributed the trouble at the time to an injury sustained by a fall. Time went on and I did not get any better. The symptoms of my complaint were palpitation of the heart, extreme weakness, stomach troubles and terrible headaches. I was very nervous, had no appetite and experienced much wakefulness at night. Finally I was compelled to take to my bed, being too weak to sit up any longer. In this condition I was treated at different times by three doctors, and took a great quantity of medicine, but realized no benefit. Not one of my neighbors thought I could get well. In the meantime I thought myself that death would soon end my sufferings. One day Mrs. Smith, of Port Robinson, came to see me, and persuaded my husband to procure for me some of Dr. as a result consider my cure complete. I can relish food better, sleep soundly, give this testimony."

The public is cautioned against numerous pink-colored imitations of these famous pills. The genuine are sold only in boxes, the wnapper around which bears the words "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." If your dealer does not have them they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2 50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

JOYFUL MEETING

Of Brothers Who Had Never Seen Each Other Before.

Romantic Incident During the Printers Excursion at Detroit.

[Detroit News.]

There were many reunions of a year, two, ten, or even more years, perhaps, among the printers who found happy opportunity for renewing old friend ships on the boat ride to the Flats yesterday afternoon; but Horace Greeley Stephenson, delegate from Greeley Stephenson, delegate from Dallas, Texas, has reason to remember more than any of his fellows, the 45th convention of the International Typographical Union and his first ride upon Detroit River and Lake St. Clair. The Sappho had just left the Woodward avenue wharf and was pushing her nose well out into mid-stream, when a gentleman without a badge, who had been making anxious inquiry among delegates as to whether a Mr. Stephenson, of Dallas, was on board, was rewarded by having a man leaning against the rail pointed out to Hastily, though gratefully thanking his informant, the man without the badge hurried across the deck with long, eager strides. He came up beside the delegate from Dallas and, putting both hands on his shoulders in half-embrace, said as quietly as he could, so that others might not hear: "Horace Stephenson! I am your

The Dallas delegate turned, and the faces of both lit up with joy.

The warmth of their greetings attracted the attention of all in that portion of the boat.

KNIGHTS OF THE GRIP

The Kingston Whig Ruminates on Their Extinction by the Syndicates.

[Kingston Whig.] commercial travelers may be successful in their protest against the combinations which are seriously affecting them and threatening their business with destruction. But it is hardly likely. It is a case of brains against capital, and in a contest of that kind capital always wins. Time was when the traveler was a necessity of the times. He not only cultivated trade relations between his employer and his PORTER & CO., 'phone 1,162. patrons, but he was the medium of all that was new in ways and means and was welcomed everywhere. Store men like to be well-posted. They like to see all that is going in connection with their business. They cannot spare the time to go in search of travelers or of bargains, and they have these brought to their doors by men whose courtesy is only equaled by their cleverness. He is a superior man, who makes a commercial traveler who can cover a lot of ground expeditiously, and miss nothing in the way of trade. It is a marvel that he can be done without, and it is a condition that is possible only through the avoidance of all competition. Those who have been on the road, renewing old contracts and working up new ones, suddenly find themselves bereft of employment. They are called in, and then learn that a syndicate will direct and control a given trade in a given district, that all who have to do with it must order goods without the solicitation of the traveler. All this is in the exercise of that economy for which the syndicate profess so great a love. Thousands of men are being forced out of their occupations, and for them the outlook is very serious. Nor are they only HOBBS HARDWARE CO., 339 Rich. concerned about the result. As a contemporary remarks, "the effect of all these associations, combines, pools and trusts is to minimize the individual and personal element in trade and industry. The big concerns are swallowing up the small ones, and corporations are elbowing out private initiative and enterprise. It may be a natural evolution, and in the strictly economic sense a gain; but it is a question whether society will not lose in the more precious attributes of character and independence." Competition is a good thing. It cannot be avoided when trade is free and unrestricted. And it is hoped it will not cease to be in the interest of the economies that affect the masses, the economies that soulless corporations do not consider, and that look for the happiness and comfort of the common
