inimical to our moral health, into regions where the moral sense becomes torpid, and political misconduct provokes notitier indignation nor shame. Each time when the agnation nor shame. Each time when the public were induced to make choice, there has been a further descent. Each time you have been promised material prosperity, you by methods which it ennobles men to contemplate, but by methods which

APPEAL TO THE PASSION OF AVARICE, AFFEAL TO THE PASSION OF AVARICE, indishible recet barriers between man and man. Let me say that this is directly opposite the course which the best interests of the nation requires us to take. It is only by a generous spirit of self-sacrifice hat the popular interest in public affairs and he kept alive, that public opinion can be kept heatful, public men honest and he public administration pure. (Cheers, an arpeal to avarice, if successful, is absonitely destructive of public spirit. A man may be wounded and the national life threatened, but they are no more to him than the wounded man lying by the way-tide was to the priest and to the Levite, who have the man to the priest and to the Levite, who have the national policy and to a generous passe which invites the people to look to dother things than to habits of private industry and economy, and to a generous passite spirit as sources of prosperity. These are the qualities bestowed by Providence upon men with which to build up prospersa and enduring states. On what occasion size 1814 have you had an election when trust things were not promised by those look is also 1814 have you had an election when trust things were not promised by those look is the state, and in the eyes of prosperity. much seeming confidence, have not been verified. The prosperity, which was promised over and over again, has not come. Everywhere throughout this vast country there are men of blighted hopes and disappointed expectations. Many waited long and anxionsly for the fulfillment of these promised until they could wait no longer, and departed to another country, to realize, if possible, what they failed to obtain here. I will not say that it is "a dismal situation, waste and wild," but the situation is one which bears marks of having seen better days. The country has not upon its face traces of declining years, but of a withered youth, the sources of whose energies are being dried up, (Hear, hear.) It those who have hitherto defended the policy of the Administration were to frankly avow their personal convictions many of them would admit their disappointment. They would say that the country had neither increased in wealth nor in population, as they had heped. They would like to see a change of policy. They believe that

They believe that they provided they have been walking, but they apologize for the folly of those who have led them by trying to persuade the mesters and unserupulous neighbor, and not by the folly of their leaders. Ladies and gentlement, I deny this statement. Those who enclosed by an illustured and unserupulous neighbor, and not by the folly of their leaders. Ladies and gentlement, I deny this statement. Those who had come out to hear political sees by Mr. Robert Ferguson, M. P. P. task Kent, and Hon. end to expenditures for works that are of precentmental advantage and that are unercial advantage and that are un policy of non-intercourse. The question of our relations with the United States both political and commercial, is far too important for me to deal with in a discussion of a few minutes. I shall, at an early day, say what they are, and what I think they might, with great advantage to both countries, become. Were I to ask how the present discreditable state of affairs came about, the answer would be that it arose from the desire here or there to confer some special advantage upon parties which the one Government, or the other, sought to specially favor. The bickerings and the ill-will have been the outcome of protection. In what instance has this policy done any good? How great, how farreaching have been the mischiefs which it has occasioned? What great injuries has in not inflicted upon the many? What little good has it done to the few? I do not misrepresent its history, when I say, from its inception to this hour all the appeals made to the people for support by its promoters were addressed to the meaner qualities of the human mind, and if it had not led to material distress and disappointment, it would not have been followed by moral improvement. How could such a policy ever taken. But, under the profits of them greensure in pulses which are generous impulses which are generous impulses which are documents of country, and of certain powerful horses generous impulses which are documents for the mischies of the macers and those generous impulses which are documents for the mischies of the macers and disappointment, it would not have been followed by moral improvement. How could such a policy ever document is continued to the profits of the macers and disappointment, it would not have been followed by moral improvement. How could such a policy ever document is continued to the profits of the macers and disappointment, it would not have been followed by moral improvement. How could such a policy ever document is continued to the profits of the macers and the profits of the macers and the profits of the macers and tional prosperity.

iides a people who are led away from the ithe of justice to their neighbors to the ath of profit to themselves, is a lying pirit, which, in the end, is sure to disapoint and deceive those who are so creducing the control of th point and deceive those who are so credu-lous, as to trust to its guidance. Society can only be carried forward by proper motives and by worthy aims, wisely directed. They are not wisely directed so long as men seek to employ the authority of the State, soiely to promote their own private interests, or on behalf of a small section of the community. It is of the first importance that all men should stand on a footing of EVILITY BEFORE THE LAW.

cannot arise where the Government abstains from interfering with the avocations of the people. The initial mistake of the people of Canada was made when they allowed themselves to be puruaded into believing that higher taxes on what they consumed would cause higher prices for what they produced, and would secure to them the exclusive possession of the home market. In some fields of industry this policy entailed serious damage upon the consumer from the outset. It has added very nearly the total percentage of taxaconsumer from the other. work badly, and that he is a constitutional grumbler whom it is impossible to please. This is a most unfair representation of the farming class. He is by far the largest contumer in the country, and he has been grievously burdened for the benefit of thers. Much of the tax which he pays others. Much of the tax which he pay under the present system, never reach the public treasury. It is a tribute levi on behalf of others, which enriches n them, but makes him poor. Not longago, a conversation with a defender of the pre-you may, this protective pointy as traves, the people into PRIVILEGED AND NON-PRIVILEGED CLASES; the one class enjoying immunities, the other bearing oppressive burdens. And you will find that the evils which are here tound, have everywhere appeared, whereever this policy has obtained a footing. All class legislation is not equally mischievous. Milton calls "Mammon the least creeted spirit that fell from heaven," and class legislation founded on appeals to avarice is as base a type of the evil as can afflict a people. This is so, because it is a calamity that does not come alone. It takes hostages for its continued possession of authority. It is not an ill-regulated and unorganized power, acting fitfully, and without a plan. On the contrary, it is always trained, and disciplined, obedient to authority, and ready for active service in every political campaign. When men are actuated by a spirit of avarice in the conduct of public affairs, they have become a political quid pro quo society, held together by the prospect of tribute levied upon the masses, for their benefit. From these casual advantages they may be called upon to provide, in part, the sinews of war, it has twictory may be achieved. Under this state of things, payment into the party fund becomes a business investment. Now I make no personal attactupon the active promoters of this system. Class legislation has always found among its defenders some men of high character. There were chivalrous and high-minded men among the slave holders of former days. It is not the persons who support it, but the system that I attack, and I shall endeavor to show you that it disqualifies those who favor it from discharging their duty to the country. The Minister who has promised a high protective tariff and who has received pecuniary aid to enable him to tri-power to fulfill his trust. Those who have paid large sums into the party fund to secure business advantages paid large sums into the party fund to secure business advantages

HAVE PARTED WITH THEIR FREEDOM.
They are not, nor can they be, any longer guardians of popular rights. There is between them and the Administration a compact mutually inconsistent with what they respectively owe to the State. If they keep faith with each other a great wrong will be done to the vast majority of the people, and the recipient of these advantages must support the Ministry which sacrifices the public interest to serve him. How can one so favored criticise the conduct or the policy of the Government? You may point out the injustice of the Franchise Act; you may make it clear that the Redistribution Act is a war waged upon representative government—that it is morally and constitutionally a scandalous betrayal of a public trust; you may show that the temporary appointment of returning officers by the Crown interferes with the fairness of the elections; you may point at the temporary appointment of returning officers by the Crown interferes with the fairness of the elections; you may point the temporary appointment of returning the control of the control officers by the Crown interferes with the fairness of the elections; you may point out what yon believe to be a corrupt expenditure of money; but if he is a member of this quid pro quo society, and is frank with you, he will say: "The Ministry want success, and I want profits, and these things of which you speak are agencies which operate, both in their interests and in mine. What they want, and what I want, is not justice, not equality in the race of life, but success, personal advantage. Look at the results. Are they not served? About that there can be no diftage. Look at the results. Are they not served? About that there can be no dif-ference of opinion; they are in office. They have what they want, and although the results on my side are not all that I hoped for, I fear a change. Why should I make for, I fear a change. Why should I make war upon their methods? They have given me what I asked them for. Why should I make war upon the means employed by them to serve both me and themselves? As ng as any people remain in the country we ne customers; and so we must stand by Ministers; we must keep the compact, though the public interest should be sacrificed, and though the rules of ethics increffeed, and though the rules of chief should be ignored in the conduct of public dilairs." Do you think this is an unfair dicture of the relation between Ministers and their most influential supporters? I have already deprecated the spirit of avaree which lies at the very foundation of the iscal policy of this country, and has done of during the past fourteen years. It has shighted the growth of more generous qualties, and has produced effects upon the population scarcely less calamitous to their naterial prosperity than to their public pirit. Men with little capital have been been impaired, that your constitutional rights have been wasted, that your constitutional rights have been wished. I admit with regret, that there has been consiness, extending over a long series of years, but in a night. In the very nature of things the vast majority were doomed to its appointment. Where was this untoll vealth to come from? Where was the vealth that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? Was it the strateger that was to be thus distributed to be found? man owes his country hones. In the end that when any section of the community undertake to give themselves an advantage at the expense of their countrymen they have blundered. It is when men are guided by generous impulses that they are enabled to reach a higher plain. They kindle corresponding feelings in the hearts of others, and secure amongst all classes a cordial cooperation in promoting the common good. There is a conservation of national energy, which, under a system based on human greed, is wasted or neutralized by the people in over-reaching or undermining each other, or in thwarting each other's selfish designs. I repeat again that no greater calamity can befall a people than that they should, in the direction of public affairs, fall under the control of a spirit of avarice. Such control is a personal as well as a national calamity; it blunts the conscience, hardens the heart, dims the moral vision and destroys public spirit. Its victims become not only incapable of discovering the better way, but they lose the inclination to seek for it. I say it, not offensively, but with profound regret, that it was

A GREAT FUBLIC CRIME to appeal to human greed and national prejudices and antipathies; it was a great calamity when the electors yielded their assent to such a policy. It has taken from the country opportunities which cannot come again. It has entailed misfortunes, the traces of which may be visible for a long time hereafter. It has in all probability altered the course of our history and taken from us a freedom of choice in shaping our destiny, so far as Providence has put it in our power to foresee, the possibilities which lie before us. (Hear, lizar.) Let us not confound the motives, the aspirations which surely lead to prosperity, with those which as surely lead to prosperity, with those which as arely lead to prosperity with those which as a consequence of our h have hope in the future of Canada, because I find so many who do not despair and who vigorously struggle to get rid of this moral dis-case which has so long sickened the body politic. they could not subdue; of, our banner of England blew."

(Cheers.) At the last general election we barely tell short of success. I trust that in the interest of the country at no distant day our triumph will be complete. (Renewed cheering). I believe that there are within the ranks of our opponents very many who believe that the public linterest requires a change. They have been convinced by experience that the financial policy of the Administration has failed to bring the prosperity promised, and that its influence upon the country has been bad. We require changes falling little short of revolution. We require to practice greater economy, to exhibit more self-reliance, to arrive at a better understanding with our neighbors, and to deal more justly with each other; and when we do these things, we shall then have taken the proper means to regain the ground which we have lost, and to repair the blunders arising from fourteen years of extravagance, of folly, and of injustice. (Loud and prolonged cheering.)

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Mr. McClarty and seconded by Mr. Duncan, which was unanimously carried.

Mr. Duncan, which was unanimously carried.

Mr. Mills, in a brief address, gratefully acknowledged the friendship and sympathy that the people of the town of Bothwell had always extended to him. He said that he had now entered upon the 26th year az their representative—a longer period than anyone now in public life in this Province had served the same constituency.

The meeting adjourned at a few minutes to 10 o'clock—and if the public mind elsewhere is in the same political mood as in the town of Bothwell, it is in a very suitable state to candidly consider matters relating to the public interest.

A vote as to wheth white or red brick should be used resulte in favor of white brick. It was reporte that friendly and satisfactory arrangement si,7%; turnace, $100. A vote as to whether white or red brick should be used resulted in favor of white brick. It was reported that friendly and satisfactory arrangements had been made with the directors of the Y. M. C. A. for the use of Victoria Hall for morning and evening Sabbath services. The Sabbath school and the Wednesday night prayer meeting will probably continue to be held in the present lecture room, which is not to be pulled down. It was reported as a sign of encouragement that, whereas a starting subscription list of $5,000 had been expected, nearly $8,000 had been subscribed. With regard to a new organ, it was decided to make the erection of the building the first object. No doubt the new organ will come in good time. As to beginning to build now, or waiting till spring to commence, the committee recommended beginning at once This point, however, was left with the committee, with full power to do as it think best. A tornado of moderate mensions sprang up over the question; whether one of the speakers was in o in discussing some point or other at particular stage, but the good sense an partiality of the chairman soon calmed waves, and the big whales of the congition were speedily swimming about as amicably as ever.

It is believed that the erection of new building will give a fresh impetu the congregation, which has made graing progress under the able and energy though unassuming leadership of its eiguent pastor. With a strong minister and united people, there is no reason why the historic First Presbyterian Church of London, Ontario, should not in the future outdo all its triumphs and all its usefulness in the past.

LONDON HUMANE SOCIETY

Gradually Increases Its Membership—Some Changes It Has Brought About in the City.

About a year ago the London Humane Society was organized by a few interested citizens. Steadily its membership has grown until it has reached 300. Next month the first annual meeting will be held and new officers elected. Yesterda afternoon the executive committee met Somerset Hall, the rooms of the W. C. J. U., and Messlame J. W. Jones and Bourer, and Messrs. D. S. Perrin, Rev. Ge. Boyd, F. W. Matthews, Andrew Thouson, J. B. Hicks and Inspector Minhita, were present.

Boyd, F. W. Matthews, Andrew Thoisson, J. B. Hicks and Inspector Minhinswere present.

Mr. Matthews, vice-president, repaired in the membership of the society had a swelled by the addition of 90 new menthrough the efforts of earnest wor. The dog-muzzling bylaw had not been forced, and as a result $225 had been into the city coffers that otherwise would not have reached there. The drinkin fountains had been erected and a trough put up on the market for cattle. The financial statement showed that the citizens were not taking sufficient interest in a movement so worthy of their support.

Inspector Minhinnick reported that 166 cases had come under his notice since June 1. On the last day of the Western Fair he had prevented the lady aeronaut from taking a dog as a companion on her trip skyward.

A communication was read from the To-Treicaven, of St. Thomas, prescued elequent and appropriate sermons on the Sabbath, and the thanksgiving dinner can Monday evening was a lung success. The tables were managed by the indetailgable members of the Ladies' Aid Society. Rev. T. E. Harrison, pastor of the clurch, presided, and interesting and profitable addresses were given by the chairman and Rev. Messrs. Locke, of Alvinston; McAlister, of Fingal, and Lanceley, of Ridgetown; also J. M. Corneil, J.P., of Glenoe. The music was furnished by local talent, assisted by Messrs. Brittain and Maitland, of Strathroy. The report was read by Mr. George Richards and was highly satisfactory, showing marvelous liberality on the part of the Methodist people. The amount asked for on Sabbath, with the results of the teamerting, reached the splendid sum of $1,504 29, completely clearing to determine the determined of the treasurer of over $70. Melbourne Methodists are now rejoicing over their prosperity and are taking steps towards the erection of a parsonage for the comfort of the pastor and his wife.

The happy young couple left on the evening train for their home in the west. Saturday afternoon a prisoner named James Henderson, who was at the Sarnia juil awaiting his trial for burglarizing the Josweil House at Wyoming, escaped and has not yet been captured. He was engaged with other prisoners in carrying in some wood to the jail when he got away. A dispatch from Sarnia says that Mrs. Frank B. Pettit recently attempted suicide by taking nine grains of strychnine. Her condition was discovered before the poison had done its work, and with medical aid she was soon brought out of dancer. Mrs. Pettit is the wife of Frank B. Pettit, until recently proprietor of the Grand Central Hotel. They were married only a few months ago, Mrs. Pettit being formerly a Mrs. Gray, of Algonac.

BLYTH, Oct. 12.—The annual fall exhibition of the Morris Branch Agricultural Society was held here yesterday and to-day and eclipsed all former years in attendance and exhibits. The laddies' department was simply grand. Mrs. (Dr.) Carder, Mrs. McFarlane and Mrs. Campbell deserve great credit for their display of painting, penoil work, etc. The outside departments were fully up to former years, and the directors and managers are to be congratulated on the pronounced success of the show.

habits and peculiarities. It is recalled that the poet was extremely fond of dogs. His especial favorite was a beautiful wolf hound, the gift of a Russian nobleman. This animal was the companion of all his walks, and was familiar to all who saw the poet abroad. A white Arab steed, especially imported for Tennyson, was among the numerous pets kept at Aldworth. Tennyson had an odd custom of keeping on hand a hugh collection of short clay pipes. There were often as many as 200 of these on his study floor ready for use. Each one, after being smoked, was placed in the fender for a fresh burning.

-BROWNING London, Thursday, Oct. 13.

MR. M'NEILL'S PILGRIMAGE

It is the misfortune of Canada that at the present time its rulers are despised equally in the United States and in Great Britain, the two great countries with which the people of the Dominion trade.

Mr. McNeill, M. P. for North Bruce by virtue of the gerrymander, has been over at Sheffield telling the people that what they need is not complete freedom to trade with Canada and the other colonies, but a system of discriminat-ing taxes, that shall be levied on all products that do not come from the colonies Because the British people will not resort again to the taxation of food products at the behests of the Canadian high tax advo-cates, Mr. McNeill informs them that "Canadian loyalty is being subjected to a "Canadian loyalty is being subjected to a terrible strain," which means that the loyalty of the "protectionist" is conditioned on his having his own way. The Inde-pendent, the most influential newspaper in Sheffield, acknowledges that Mr. McNeill is a good talker, but plainly tells him that he has a poor opinion of the intelligence of Englishmen if he thinks they propose to quarrel with their largest customers for the sake of a small raise in prices for them-selves. "Canada proposes to smother us in corn," says this representative British journal, "but if Canada reduces the hostile tariff now existing against Britain, its action will be a very practical evidence of good-will. There is nothing in Mr. Mc-Neill's address calculated to beguile any one not already an infected protectionist.'

This is strong talk, but it is warranted There could be nothing in the so-called preferential tariff arrangement if it would not reduce the tax on British manufactured articles entering Canada, or increase the price of broadstuffs sent to England.

But the Canadian "protectionist" is determined that there shall be no reduction in the tariff on British manufactured goods entering Canada. As the British Saturday Review, the ablest of English Conservative papers, says: "There are many interests protected by colonial tariffs which would tear the empire to pieces before they left themselves exposed on equal terms to the competition of English menufacturers."
Without a doubt of it. The Canadian combines which have furnished hundreds of thousands of dollars to keep a high tax government in power let their loyalty go no further than their pockets, and they would be the very first to oppose any scheme that did not maintain to the fullest extent the present jug-handled arrange-ment by means of which the Canadian people are fleeced every time they are comelled to exchange trade with their British brethren, to the serious loss of both parties to toil when he visited Sheffield. he is honestly auxious to promote trade with Great Britain and increase the stock of loyalty in the com-pact, he should begin right at home. It savors somewhat of impudence for a Canadian to go to a Britisher and complain of the present fiscal relations between the colony and the motherland when the remedy is entirely in the hands of the Canadian people. Great Britain takes from us, at its market value all we said to the constant of the constant of the color of the Canadian people. Great Britain takes from us, at its market value, all we send to her. Mr. McNeill and those who think with him believe that our loyalty will go to smaal if she does not favor us, at her own expense. What Mr. McNeill should do is to wrestle with his friends who keep up a high tax barrier at the seaboard to prevent that trade which he professes to be available to prevent. He will never succeed. anxious to promote. He will never succeed in his Quixotic mission to hard-headed, freedom-loving Englishmen.

OLIVER MOWAT'S OPPONENTS. A Toronto paper points out that the op position in the Ontario Legislature is "growing beautifully less." How can it belp it? There is no substantial grievance against the way in which Hon. Oliver Mowat has ruled the Province, and outside Ontario the record of his administration is pointed to, by Liberals and Conservatives alike, as a model for other local govern-

WHAT NEXT?

A high tax contemporary credits the dis covery of a rich deposit of salt at Mooretown, Lambton county, to the "N. P. The policy of high taxation must be on its last legs when the discovery of a salt deposit is laid to its efficacy. We will be told by-and-bye that the "N. P." makes the trees to grow, and the sun to shine, and that it placed the rich soil of the West on the top of the rock formation! These claims would be about as well founded as the assertion that the more taxes people pay the richer they become. Hon. David Mills, in his speech at Bothwell, shows how utterly untrue this contention is.

TOPICS OF TO DAY.

There ought not to be any suffering for cood in the world when the valley of the Amazon, one of the most prolific of regions, remains untenanted save by a few savages. It is three times as large as the valley of the Mississippi, and has one stretch of land 1,500 miles long and 1,000 miles broad which has never been explored.

The novelist in quest of realism under takes some curious experiments in search of material. Here is Mr. Morley Roberts, material. Here is Mr. storiey koosers, the British story-writer, working as a laborer at the London docks to get his "local color." He is said to be an unrecognizable figure in his overalls, with paints meared on his hands and arms and other marks of the rough and dirty work that fails to the lot of the 'longshoreman. ###

Amelie Rives-Chanler, the novelist, rides into Richmond frequently on horseback into Mehmond frequently on norseback from her home, which is a few miles out of the city. During the winter she is a regular attendant at the theaters. She has many sincere admirers in the old capi-tal of the Confederacy, and yet according to a correspondent, she illustrates the truth of the old proverh about a prophet not being without honor save in his own land.

A well-known physician said recently in conversation: "Of course 1 believe in the Keely cure. I believe in anything that will Mollinger cures, and the shrine and spring and mraculous vision cures. And the Mollinger cures, and the shrine and spring and miraculous vision cures. And the Keely cure is just like them—purely a matter of faith. There may be gold in it and there may not. My own impression is that there isn't an atom. But gold or not, the thing that ourse the patient is the belief that he is being cured."

According to the latest story told of According to the latest story told of Tennyson, the poot was very deaf. A lady whose father had been a near neighbor went to visit him at Haslemere. She was accompanied by her husband, who is described in the British Weekly as a "modest and retiring barrister." While the wife talked to Lady Tennyson the husband endeavered to keep the laureate in countenance. The poor man did his best to humor the poet but without success. Lord Tennyson regarded his visitor silently for a time, and then remarked: "I don't know who you are, and I don't hear a word you say." you say.

The Century Magazine will take np the Bible and science controversy. In the November Century Prof. Chas. W. Shields, of Frinceton, answers the question "Does the Bible contain scientific errors?" with an emphatic "No." He says: "Literary and textual obscurities there may be upon the surface of Holy Writ, like spots upon the sun, or rather, like motes in the eye; but scientific error in its divine purrort would be the sun itself extinguished at noon. Such a Bible could not live in this epoch." Prof. Shields' article will be followed by one in the December Century on "The Effect of Scientific Study Upon Religious Beliefs."

In some interesting experiments made by Prof. Dewar, of England, with oxygen, attempts were recently made by him to determine what effect a temperature of 180° C. below zero would have upon that gas in the magnetic field. Having previously ascertained that liquid oxygen does moisten or adhere to rock crystal, and consequently maintains in contact with that substance a perfect spheroidal condition, Prof. Dewar poured the liquefied gas into a shallow saucer of rock crystal, and placed it between the poles of a powerful electromagnet. The result looked for was the total or partial arrest, under magnetic stress, of the violent agitation caused by ebullition of the spheroidal mass, but, on the contrary, on the magnet being excited, the whole mass of liquid oxygen was literally lifted through the air and remained adherent to the poles until dissipated by the heat of the metal; briefly, the feeble magnetism of oxygen at ordinary temperature had become a force to which no solution of a magnetic metal offers any parallel. Thus, in a word was strikingly and beautifully exemplified the relation between magnetism and hoar, of which the entire loss of magnetic quali-In some interesting experiments made by

Washington, Oct. 13.—The Danish Government has informed the Naval Department that it will not be able to send any vessels to participate in the world's naval review next April for the reason that its fleet is not large enough to admit of a creditable representation in these waters. Mexico has also declined the invitation for a similar reason. England and France are the only countries which have accepted the invitation thus far, but it is known unofficially that Russia, Germany and Italy will each send a large fleet and it is expected Japan and each of the South American countries will be represented by one or more of their best vessels. Were the scrotula sores on my poor little boy, ickning and disgusting. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not effect a circ. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsapadia. In two weeks the sores commenced to act with the scales came off and all over his body use hand tealthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

THIRTY-EIGHT TO NOTHING.

The postponed game in the first series of the Ontario Rugby Unious between London and Petrolea was played at the latter place yesterday afternoon and resulted in a decided victory for the London club by a score of 38 to 0. Petrolea put up a plucky game, although outplayed in every point, for London Walker, Sippi, Barry, Pumphrey, Lightburn and Tovey played an excellent game, while the rest of the team backed them up well. The final game of this series will be played at Tecumseh Park on Saturday afternoon.

Proceedings of the Provincial Convention in This City—A Pleasant and Profitable Gathering of Earnest Workers.

Wennsday Appendon.

The Convention of King's Sons and Daughters resumed business at 2 p.m., Mrs. Dickinson, of New York, in the chair. Rev. Dr. Antiff conducted devotional exercises for half an hour.

Loving greetings were received from the King's Daughters and Sons of St. John, N. B., and from the W. C. T. U. of this city.

The reports of the provincial secretary. Mrs. Finch, was brief, but brimful of facts and figures. The secretary during the year received 7 and 100 postcards, and addressed 150 circulars, showing a good deal of clerical work. A large amount of literature had been sent out. There had been received in members' annual fees $179.40, representing 1,794 members. Thirty-four new circles had been formed this year—a gratifying increase. As Mrs. Brown and the feely green civil the year for civil the year received 7 and 100 postcards, and addressed 150 circulars, showing a good deal of clerical work. A large amount of literature had been sent out. There had been received in members' annual fees $179.40, representing 1,794 members. The reports of the corrected respectively by Miss A. M. Brown applauded for their brevity. They contained nothing of importance, there being no material for such as the proport of the provincial for the provincial secretary for the provinci

Mrs. Charles Isabella Davis, of New York, who is an orator of continental fame, spoke briefly. The unity of the Church of God, she suid, had been the dream of the ages. They believed the dream was soon to be a reality. More than once in the history of the Order of the King's Daughters and Sons its members had been gathered in churches of various denominations. While their brethren were settling questions of theology, she believed that the children of the King should move forward, and when, bye and bye, over the mountains of differences that had separated them their beloved rectors and pastors came to the tomb of the risen Christ they would find there before them the vast army of women who had come while it was yet dark, and who had already seen the shining of his face before whose glory all the shadows that had benighted them will have been swept away in the radiance of the eternal dawning.

Emigration Resumed. LONDON, Oct. 12.—British and Scandi-navian emigration will be resumed at Liv-erpool to-morrow. Emigrants' friends here complain of delays due to imperfect ar-rangements at Grosse Isle.

Canada's Trade With Britain. London, Oct. 12.—The Board of Trade returns show that the exports to Canada returns show that the experts to recard increased 1 per cent, in nine months ending in September, and that the imports from Canada increased 16 per cent. Butter increased £25,000, cheese £29,000, wood nearly £1,000,000.

The Prince of Wales Was Not There. The Prince of Wales Was Not There.

London, Oct. 12.—The Star this afternoon makes a covert attack on the Prince of Wales' absence from the Tennyson services. It was announced two days ago that the Prince would be present, but he did not attend. The Star prints a letter eaying the Prince of Wales prefers to go shooting or to attend the Newmarket races to attending the funeral of such a man as Tennyson. The writer protests as a patriotic taxpayer that the Prince of Wales finds that the popping over of helpless birds more congenial employment the theory of great men, and urgest that his dereliction on this occasion should not be allowed to pass without official protest.

Now is the time when the bye-election that is imminent may be lost or won. All the energy put into the work of bringing out the vote on election day will be of no avail if the name of every qualified elector is not put on the list now.

This is believed to be the first step in the direction of putting Sir John Thompson in the Prime Minister's place. Mr. Bowell was acting Premier for a day or two, but he appears to have been speedily dropped.

Sad News for the Mother.

An exchange says: A shocking and no doubt fatal accident happened Tuesday at Wateon's stove works, Tilsonburg, just a few minutes before the foundry shut down for the night. A young lad about 17 years of age, named Ernest Beattie, attempted to throw the beit off a pulley. Whether he slipped, or exactly how it was done, is not known, but he pitched under the wheel and was dashed to the floor with such force as to crush his side, his ribs piercing his lungs. He was immediately conveyed to the residence of Mr. Westen, sen, and medical aid summoned. Much sympathy is felt for his mother, who resides in London and is the widow of the late Robt. Beattie, of this town. Shortly after the death of her husband a few years age she lost a young child, and now that her eldest boy is so badly injured her cup of sorrow will be full to overflowing.

The attraction at the Grand to-morrow night will be "Joshua Simpkins" for which the plan is now open. The Hudson Republican says: "Reno & Ford's 'Joshua Simpkins' Company held the boards at the opera house last night and gave a Yankee comedy—one of the best in its line that ever visited Hudson. A fine orchestra faultlessly rendered every selection played, and it was a treat to hear the music alone. The situations in the play art striking and realistic while there is sufficient comedy to keep an audience in laughter and call for round after round of applause. Miss Lettie Wright, the leading lady, is a clever little actress, and made herself a favorite from the very start. All the others were good. 'Joshua Simpkins' has been styled the greatest of all rural plays, and the large audience who witnessed the performance last night attested by the way they enjoyed in that the titte had not been misapplied." Commonplace Carrie.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

By Eliza Orne White.

CHAPTER II. CHAPTER II.

The afternoon of Mrs. Peterson's lawn arty was bright, but insufferably hot, a prunate combination, as the weather mabled the guests to be present, and furshed them with an unfailing topic of concration. Carrie and the professor arrived pon the seene in due season, and were intantly separated by Miss Harwood, who opt Mr. Bainbridge's eloquence to herself or half an hour, much to the regret of Kitty electson.

After a lengthy comparison between New ngland of the present day and Italy in the irteenth century, Miss Harwood touched on the women of both countries.

"You would not say what you do about closs of beauty in New Englaud if you ald see Ethel Sandford," she said at last. She is of the golden haired type, and a fassing creature besides."

is of the golden-harred type, and a las-age creature besides."
ss Sandford appears to be not only ost beautiful woman of her sex, but a on of all the virtues and intellectual also," the professor returned. "Still harping upon the great men of the hirteenth century?" asked Miss Peterson, who had caught the last clause of this sentence. "They were all giants, those men of that fertile period," she added in a tono of leep conviction, "but I myself don't think Aristides quite equal to Dante; Dante now eems to me a grand poet."

It was almost teatime before the professor bould make his way to Carrie. "It is comratable to get back to you," he said, sinking azily on the bench by her side with a sigh of relief. "I have been bored to death between discussions of the state of the weather and the state of Italy in the thirteenth cenury. Every one in Longwood has been tudying up the subject. People fancy it is no one interest. I have returned to you for rest, after the incessant flow of witty and wiss conversation."

cause I am stupid and silent. Thank ou are very perverse, and always will who are very perverse, and always will twist my compliments into reproaches. I meant that you were a most restful little parson." He had some roses in his hand. The pretitient Miss Peterson gave me these," he said, as he offered them to her, "do put them at your throat, they contrast to well with your blue dress,"

Dust these two, they will never be used, urged the professor. Carrie suchbed with a thrill of pleasure, realizing the first time what it was to be young a woman. The professor smiled down in her.

he proceeded. "I am sorry that I rashly promised to go to the Rangeley Lakes week after next; and in a month or two I shall be back in my dull routine in the West. I wish we lived nearer each other. I wish—"he stopped abruptly, for he had caught sight of a face and figure thatch had never seen before, He was sure that the slender girl who was coming slowly toward them down the garden path was, like himself, a stranger in Longfield. She was not unusually pretty, but she was extremely graceful, and her white dress fitted her to perfection, and was a marvel of simplicity and taste. She wore a hat with rather a broad rim, and a wreath of pink sweetbriar around it. It threw a shadow over her face, and made the waves of golden brown hair on her forchead seem remote and mysterious.

Carrie was waiting for the end of the professor's sentence. At last she looked up. "Ethell" she cried in excitement. "My dear, when did you come? Kitty didn't tell me she expected you this week. You must come to us as you as you can. How lovely, how altegether charming this is, and she flung her arms around her friend with utter diaregard of spectators.

Professor Bainbridge lingered in the vicinity, but it was some moments before she remembered to present him to Miss Sandford.

vicinity, but it was some moments before she remembered to present him to Miss Sandford.

"I already know Miss Sandford well, by reputation," he said after the introduction had been accomplished, and I need not add that her reputation has not suffered at the hands of her friend."

Carrie moved away to help pass the salad, and Ethel took the half of the bench which she had left, while the professor dropped into his old seat. He was more animated than Carrie had ever seen him. "What a contrast to the way in which he talks to me," she thought, as she glanced at them from time to time. "There he goes to get her a comfortable chair, but I might have broken my back on that bench until the day of judgment and he wouldn't have done anything about it. He is fanning her; I knew he would, and he is doing it as if he had been used to it all his life, and with what an air of devotion! If a girl is plain and hasn't any intellect, a man stops liking her just as soon as a pretty, bright girl appears, although instead of doing things for him, she makes him wait on her. It isn't very fair, but it's natural; I should like a pretty girl better than a plain one if I were a man. He has taken the advice I gave him last evening;" she thought with a little smile, in spite of her heart-ache; "for once he is making himself as agreeable as he can."

he is making himself as agreeable as he can."

Some of the petals from one of her roses fell at her feet. She took them both out of her dress, and after looking at them regretfully she tore them to pieces. Her brief hour of triumph was over.

Love is often accused of blindness, but the most virulent detractors of the little god had never charged him with being lame. Friendship, on the contrary, is clearly sighted, but her approach is seldom swift. She stumbles on with many a halt, but her eyes are sharp, if her feet are clumsy; and when she has made sure that there are no more brambles and pitfalls in the way, she reaches her goal at last. Love, because of his blindness, takes no heed of obstructions, but rushes to his destination with feverish haste and outstrips the leggard friendship.

Mr. Eaphridge was in love; he had a feverish haste and outstrips the laggard friendship.

Mr. Bainbridge was in love; he had a friendly feeling for Carrie Swift, but he loved Ethel Sandford. He had known Carrie intimately for the past three months and he had talked for three hours with Ethel.

The week after the lawn party, Miss Sandford came to the Swifts to make a visit. The professor had thought it impossible to cancel his engagement to go to the Rangeley Lakes, but he contrived to do it with apparent ease, and stayed on in Longfield.

One evening after Ethel had been for two or three weeks at the Swifts' house, the pro-fessor came back from a drive—having left her and Mrs. Swift at the other and of the town where they wanted to make a call—to find Carriestiting on the front porch with her knitting. He seated himself by her side, partly through remorse, for he had forgotten her existence of late, and partly for want of a better eccupation. a better occupation.

"Have you had a pleasant drive?" she asked.

"Very," he said, with a swift conscious-ness of how much greater the pleasure had been than when she had been his compan-been than when she had been his companion.

"Whom did you'see?" Carrie inquired.

"No one."

"And you actually went all the way to South Swanset without seeing a living soul," she demanded playfully. "I suppose you were too much absorbed in philosophy to notice such tribes as people."

"We were absorbed in wondering who lived in the different houses, and what sort of lives they lead," said the professor with aspority.

of lives they tear, as a sperity.

"If I had been there I could have told you," said Carrie. "What especial houses were you interested in?"

He described one.

"Abijah Patten, who used to be our butterman, has justmoved there. Mother ought to have known that. His sister was a bony old maid of 50-1 know I shall look like her came day—and she is as sharp as yinegar, old maid of 30-1 know I shall look like her some day—and she is as sharp as vinegar, but she makes good butter. That is a nice old farmhouse though; if we were very poor I wouldn't mind living there."
"Wouldn't mind living there."
"Wouldn't you! Miss Sandford wondered how any one could endure life in such a legal where."

"How little breeze you make! I'll show you how," and she took possession of her fan. "There, see the difference, "she added as she briskly set the air in motion.

"You always do everything well; what will become of me when I no longer have my little friend to act as guide and caretaker? CANADIANS DO NOT CARE FOR Scener Scotch churchyard.

Ancient native to stranger: "Aye, ye may weel say't; it's a bonnie place, a bonnie, bennie place. In my, young days it wis considert a great treat to be buried here!"

With us in Canada, lonely churchyards and beautiful cemeteries have no special attractions for the living. The living bury their dead in these places, but have no wish to be laid there themselves. All who are suffering from sickness and discasse make every possible effort to keep away from these resting-places of the dead. Often the efforts of the sick and diseased are misdirected and futile. The weak. are misdirected and futile. The weak nervous and broken-down in body, wh are misdirected and futile. The weak, nervous and broken-down in body, who vainly seek health through the common patent medicines of the day, will soon find that they are working in gross darkness. The dyspeptic and sleepless who are placing confidence in any of the quack nostrums of our times are hastening to the grave.

To avoid the agonics of disease and suffering and the terrors of the grave the wise and prudent use Paine's Celery Compound when a cure is desired. No other remedy ever given to mankind can so effectually check disease and banish pain. This heaven-given medicine is near every sufferer in Canada. It guarantees a cure in every case, it takes up those who are pronounced incurable, and works wonderfully for all such suffering mortals. If you value if give Paine's Celery Compound a fair and honest trial. It will cure.

Tuckey-Irvine.

A very interesting time was spent on the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 5, at Maplewood, the residence of Mr. Joshua Irvine, 5th con. of Lobo, it being the occasion of the marriage of his eldest daughter, Josephine E., to Mr. Chas. Tuckey, of McIrose. At 6 o'clock the march was played, and over 60 guests eargerly awaited the approach of the bride, who appeared beautifully arrayed in cream, her bridal veil being fastened with natural flowers. Rev. H. C. Speller, of this city, performed the ceremony. The bride was assisted by Miss Annie L. Bentley, of Forest, and the groom by his brother, Mr. Benj. Tuckey, I'The company sat down to a table beautifully arranged and loaded with the delicacies of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Tuckey left for their new home amid showers of rice and old slippers. The bride was the recipient of numerous and elegant presents.

A Pastor Honored.

A farewell gathering took place on the evening of Oct. 6, at the first Baptist Church, Lobo, it being the evening preceding the departure of Rev. A. P. Kennedy for McMaster Hall, where he will resume his studies. After the rendering of a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music, readings and recitations, refreshments were served by the ladies of the church. A short time having been spent in social intercourse, Mr. Kennedy was agreeably surprised when an address was read and a purse and beautiful certificate of membership of the Forester's lodge were presented to him as tokens of the high esteem in which he was held. Mr. Kennedy, who has many friends in London, replied in a very touching manner, referring to the kindness of his many friends in Lobo and the pleasant time he had had while laboring among them during the last three summers.

A Unique Wedding.

It was intended to have been kept quiet, but it leaked out. He was too well known and his presence in the city caused suspicion. James A. Ardiel, formerly with W. S. Barkwell, druggist, Dundas street, is now established in business for himself in Grand Rapids, Mich. A few days ago he came to this city and left last evening—a benedict. The fortunate lady is Miss M. E. Ormsby, of this city, daughter of the late Robert Ormsby. The marriage ceremony was performed last evening in St. Paul's Cathedral by Rev. Dean Innes in the presence of a large congregation. There were no bridesmaids or groomsmen. The bride was charmingly attired. Both the young people are very popular in this city and have the best wishes of a host of friends, as was attested by the many beautiful gifts received. They left via the G. T. There is something very sad about the death of Paul Peel, the young fellow of singular promise and it was the unanimous opinion of art crities that his career would be one of marked brillianey. It is terrible hard that he should be cut off at the beginning of it with but trifling fruits of his genius lett to the world.
