Watches!

Our sales this year have been larger than last, although there has been more competition. A good many who have purchased trashy watches are waking up sorry, and the reaction will have the effect of creating a better demand for reliable goods.

We have no fault to find with honest competition so long as right goods are sold but do think the sale of dishonest goods ought to be prohibited.

SEE OUR NEW WALTHAM WATCHES
Up to date in quality and at fair prices. Gold filled cases, warranted from 15 to 25 years. Silver cases lower than ever.

IN REPAIRS
We believe in doing good work and charging reasonably, if any want a cheap job they must go elsewhere, the people know in all trades cut prices and good work do not always go together.

Short Exposition of Christian Doctrine

SIN.
Sin is the disobedience of the law of God. This definition supposes the existence of God, and the subjects for whom He makes His laws. And more, for disobedience implies willing-ness on the part of him who disobey, and also knowledge of the law which is disobeyed. Everything that is made is subject to the laws of the maker, and those laws in general are made to help the thing attain the end and purpose for which it is made. There are for instance certain rules by which the locomotive must be run. Not only are heat, water, oil and many other things necessary, but we may say these things represent the laws by which the locomotive is run. When the huge machine is turned out of the shop, we at once find it has enemies which are seeking its destruction. There is friction, oxidation or rust, and that decay which nothing can arrest ontongout on all man's works in the world. So man has many appliances which are laws for the engine, and in the disobedience of them or the neglect to apply them to it, there is certain to come a more or less great disaster as this disobedience be great or small.

There is a similar case as regards the soul of man. Man has his laws taught by reason and Revelation to his soul, and every one of them is for the greater good of his soul. They are not the arbitrary dictates of a tyrant, nor the whimsical commands of a despot to be made and unmade with or without warning. Not one of them is contrary to judgment and sound reason, but rather they are everyone of them consonant with both. Sin is then the refusal to keep and obey these laws which God has made for the good of the soul.

So sin is unreasonable, absurd and stupid. It is unreasonable because reason sanctions all God's laws, and not to follow the dictates of reason is madness. It is unreasonable because these laws which direct us to goodness, and away from harm, and keep us from going off the track are good in themselves, and disobedience of them leads only in certain disaster. Reason tells us to get out of the way of the cars, of a wild bull; if I persist in doing these things I may lose my life, but it will be not by my reason but in spite of it.

Sin is absurd, for it is not being the individual man setting his opinion about his soul upon the plane of law, and contradicting God. It is as absurd for a man to get drunk as it would be for the engineer to put oil in the sand box, water in the fire box and sand in the bearings, and then expect his locomotive to go. What fire, water, sand and oil are to the locomotive, the laws of God are to my soul. If I act in defiance of them, I shall act like a fool. The machine that will not work in accordance with the laws made for it, is quickly removed. But we are machines like the maker, with reason and freedom of the will; how very foolish of us then it is to act as if we knew the laws made for us better than He who made them.

Sin is the deadly enemy of the soul. It is the contradiction of God, as if we should call him a liar. It is the pleasing of good for evil, and evil for good. It is the refusal of real true and lasting happiness, for the fleeting vanishing things which some men call pleasure here on earth, and so sin is the most stupid thing a man can do. It is the murder of the physician who might have saved one's life; the destruction of the harvest which would make one's living; the burning down of the school where one should have been instructed. Stupid, absurd, unreasonable then is sin.

Important Items.
(From the Ave Maria.)

In placing at the disposal of his Catholic subjects the traditional site of the house of the Blessed Virgin in Jerusalem, which he acquired during his recent visit to the Holy Land, Emperor William performed an action as appropriate as it is gracious. Many persons will, perhaps, regard the gift as a stroke of policy rather than an act of genuine kindness and generosity, but no one can doubt the appropriateness of the transfer. The Emperor knew that only the Catholics would appreciate the possession of a site sanctified by the footsteps of the Mother of our Redeemer. As yet her prophecy, "All generations shall call me blessed," is fulfilled only in them.

The late Empress of Austria performed deeds of charity as the saints used to do. When she bestowed alms she invariably did so in person; going about incognito, and trying to conceal her benefactions, as did her namesake Elizabeth, the sainted

Queen of Thuringia. Taking only a friend, the Austrian Empress would go at nightfall into the quiet quarters of Vienna or Budapest, dressed in the plainest garb, and climb the tottering staircases of the poorest tenements. They never went without burdening themselves with flowers and fruit, no servant being allowed to render assistance. The slender imperial hands were never weary of smoothing a pillow or cooling a fevered brow; and the late Empress's soft voice never failed in its message of hope and cheer. When younger her face was called the most beautiful in Europe; and those who did not know her as the poor know her lamented that it had lost its youthful charm; but those to whom she ministered declared that no countenance could be more fair than that of the plainly clad lady who brought light and joy to their miserable abodes. Truly this charitable Empress was a fitting and loyal follower of the Saint of Thuringia, in whose hands the loaves of bread were changed to roses.

The dangers that beset the prophet are proverbial; but our favorite prophecy, that Protestantism will survive in Freemasonry, seems already come true. Those of our priests who have had experience in missionary work among non-Catholics agree that while Protestantism is disintegrating and falling away, Masonry still stands as a solid wall. Father Patrick Brennan, an efficient missionary of the diocese of Dallas, gives this testimony in the Missionary: "The great Gibraltar which stands in the path of millions to non-Catholics is secret societies. The whole country, so far as my knowledge goes, is honeycombed with them. They are stepping-stones to social, commercial, and political reform; and militate, more than anything else or all other things put together, against the propagation of Catholic truth in this country. Such, at least, is my firm opinion. The members say they know there is nothing said or done against any church or creed in their organizations; hence a spirit of intolerance is unknown among them, and they resent what they denominate a groundless attack upon their societies. Sometimes our own Catholics people are members of these societies, and it is with great difficulty that they can be induced to abandon them, not to speak of Protestants. The obvious moral is that Catholic societies, with all the good qualities of Masonry and none of its bad ones, are becoming more and more necessary. Such societies already exist in abundance, and it is for the interest of both clergy and laity to encourage them by every means possible.

According to the San Francisco Monitor, Gen. James H. Wilson, who is representing the United States at Porto Rico uttered this astounding sentence: "There is a grave objection on the part of many good people against the admission of a purely Catholic State into the Union." Our Western contemporary is usually accurate, but we can hardly believe that this was actually said by Gen. Wilson. Such sentiments may be expected from the beetle-browed, but certainly not from one whose salary ten millions of Catholics are helping to pay. It is commonly understood that the territory of New Mexico is barred out of the Union because its population take their religion from Rome; but so far as we know, no official has ever had the hardihood to say so in plain words. If the sentence quoted above was really uttered by an official of the United States, however, Catholics ought to find some way of resenting the ignorant slur. If they suffer it to pass without protest, it will tend to confirm the notion that the prejudice to which Mr. Wilson refers is well founded, and that Catholics are not the sort of people who make good Americans.

There are now twenty-three priests serving as soldiers in the barracks of Lille; and every morning they may be seen, clad in their uniforms, entering some sacristy to prepare for the celebration of Mass. An hour later they emerge from the sacristies, once more wearing their military apparel, and prepare to take up the daily life of the camp. Commenting on this incongruity, the Sacred Heart Review says: "There is not a soldier living, with a single trace of religious sentiment, who does not shrink from seeing the priestly dignity so insulted. What, then, must be the feelings of the faithful to see their parish priests obliged to leave them, while their friends and families may die without the sacraments and their children are waiting to be baptized! We regret that we can not mingle our tears with those of esteemed contemporary. No doubt the law which requires priests to do military service is a prodigious insult to priestly dignity, but it isn't half so bad as the other insults daily meted out on the streets and in the "Catholic" homes of Paris. And, despite the enlistment of these twenty-three, there are still enough priests left to baptize all the French babies and to administer the sacraments. In all other respects the military law will probably be advantageous to the Church throughout France, little as the government intended that effect. It will do the clergy good to get out of their sacristies and rough it awhile with the soldiers; and it will certainly do the soldiers good to observe the manly and edifying deportment of the priests in camp. It has been our conviction from the beginning that the enactment of the military law by a Chamber hostile to the Church was a providential measure to bridge over the gulf that now yawns between the French people and the French priests.

A writer in the current Catholic World pays fitting tribute to the late Richard Maloum Johnston, gentleman and man-of-letters. There is much that is edifying, instructive and stimulating in the story of his conversion to the Church. He was over thirty years of age, it seems, before he saw a Catholic priest. During the Kesw-nnothing campaign of 1855 it was necessary to offset the diatribes of his opponents against the Catholic Church. For his purpose he consulted Catholic books, a friend lending him the writings of Bishop England. These not only furnished him with arguments but dispelled his own prejudices. His wife had been a Catholic for some years, and he knew that his acceptance of her faith would be a joy and comfort to her. He relates that he was sitting out under the chestnut-trees on his lawn, reading Balmes, when the decision came to him with overwhelming force. He closed the book and walked to the house. The struggles, indecisions, and waverings of years had been brushed aside by the wings of faith on which his soul must evermore rest. To his wife he said simply: "I am going with you, my dear." This was in 1876. He was not unmindful of the fact that such a step would provoke difficulties and work material changes for him. But it was not for the man to falter who had refused the presidency of Mercer College, with such incidents as a house and a three-thousand-dollar yearly salary, because he had felt that his Baptist faith was weakening, and he could not therefore loyally accept the offer. He did not stop to consider. He had turned his face to the light; humbly yet firmly he would follow the way led. The attendance of his school began falling off; his most intimate friends, while unchanged in their affection, could not conceal that they felt that a barrier had come between them. But he never wavered or seemed to acknowledge the change. In a spirit of gentle resignation he accepted whatever conditions confronted him; and, instead of repining over individual misfortune, with calm eyes looked over the broadening horizon and publicly remarked: "I am glad to see the prejudice concerning the Catholic Church fade away." Of Southern Protestants he said: "None have doubtless now that a Catholic may do as much a patriot and a gentleman as other people. Thousands and thousands not only say prayers for their dead, but are glad when Catholic friends and sympathizers do likewise." Colonel Johnston had the consolation of seeing his son elevated to the priesthood; and those who saw the venerable author serving his Mass will not forget the scene or the edification it afforded them.

A Pope's Private Letters.
UNDER the above caption the Ave Maria is publishing a very interesting collection of the private letters of Clement XIV. From this collection we extract the following:
To Madam—
True devotion, Madam, neither consists in a careless air nor in a brown habit. Most votaries imagine—though I don't know why—that clothes of a dark color please the celestial beings more than those of a lighter and more lively hue; yet we find the angels are always painted either in white or blue. Sincere piety does not proclaim itself. Modesty does not depend upon color. If it be decent in dress and manner, it is what it really

Pains in the Foot and Limb—A Complete Cure Accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I was a number of years ago afflicted with acute rheumatism in my left side and all the way down my limb into my foot. I live five blocks from my work and had to stop and rest several times in going and coming. I could get no relief from any medicine and was on the point of giving up my job when I happened to hear of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle of this medicine and a trial of Hood's Pills and began taking them. Before I had half finished them I was relieved and it was not long before I was completely cured. I never lost an opportunity to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for my cure means a great deal to me, as I have a family and must always be at my post."

The Dominion Parliament has been formally prorogued until January 9th.

Try us for any goods you want as you can save 20 to 50 per cent.—W. A. Weeks & Co. 30, 31.

The Russian Government has removed the duty free agricultural implements and binding twine.

The withdrawals from the Dominion Government banks continue to exceed the deposits.

In King's County, N. B., a boy was sentenced by Judge Wedderburn to three years with hard labor, in the penitentiary, for stealing a bee-hive.

The celebrated trotting horse, Crescend, 2:09, was sold in New York a few days ago to William Brown of the Kalamazoo farm, Michigan for $14,000.

Five persons were killed and between thirty and fifty injured by the blowing up of a river steamer boiler at Stockton, California, a few days ago.

ADVISERS of the 25th state that earthquakes shocks, more or less severe, were experienced at several points in Virginia and North Carolina on that date. No serious damage is reported.

CLOSING up business, goods must be sold, buy from us and save 20 to 50 per cent. on anything you want. Bargains are going, thousands are buying.—W. A. Weeks & Co. 30, 31.

GRANT'S music hall in Ottawa was destroyed by fire on the 27th. Loss $20,000; partly covered by insurance. The fire originated in a restaurant under the auditorium.

Do you want stationery cheap? W. A. Week & Co. are clearing all their wholesale stock in the retail store. See their advertisements for note paper, envelopes, pens, lead pencils, everything cheap.—W. A. Weeks & Co. Nov. 30, 31.

A DISPATCH of Saturday last from Vancouver, B. C., stated that Alvin E. Laird dropped dead of heart disease at Cedar City, B. C. on the previous day. Later advices state the deceased was the only son of the late Hon. Alexander Laird of Bedoune.

A BASKET SOCIAL will be held in St. Joseph's Convent Hall, on the 6th of December at 7:30 p. m. Hottraps tickets 10 cents, admission free to ladies furnishing baskets. Donations in refreshments will be acceptable. A musical programme is being prepared for the occasion.

FILLING up our retail stock every day from wholesale, plenty of goods and every thing going 20 to 50 per cent. below usual prices. All hands bustling every day attending the wants of the hundreds which buy daily at this big sale.—W. A. Weeks & Co. 30, 31.

A GOLD nugget valued at $50,000, was shipped to New York on the 27th by the Canadian Loaner. The nugget was found in the Klondyke and is to be placed on exhibition in the Union Bank, London. The nugget is the property of H. Matfield Kersey, formerly manager of the White Star Steamship Co., and now associated with a company that was recently capitalized for prospecting in the Klondyke.

MISSSES FENNEL & CHANDLER'S "ad" in today's paper should be read by all who need stoves. They have made a specialty of cooking stoves for years, but for the past three years have been adding to their stock a full line of heating stoves, and to day can show an intending purchaser, the largest show room for stoves in the city, full of stoves in endless variety. The "Highland" Ranges and "Jewel" Stoves by the dozen, are so well known that they need no puffing up.

IMMENSE quantities of Canadian and American wheat are being exported to the Old Country. Over a million bushels of western grain are at Liverpool Sound, and about six train loads per day are being forwarded from there to Montreal on the C. P. R. On the 26th inst, the elevators contained 800,000 bushels, 300,000 bushels were in the vessels at the dock, and 600,000 bushels on the way from Chicago. Large quantities are coming from the Canadian Northwest. About twenty freight trains averaging twenty-five cars each are being sent out daily from York westward.

MR. GLADSTONE'S aged widow is no longer mistress of Hawarden castle, and that historic residence will not in future be her home. It is stated that there has been a considerable amount of friction and unpleasantness in the Gladstone family since the old statesman's death, mainly in connection with the disposition of his estate and in the control of the property, had feeling being engendered in the minds of the sons and daughters of Mr. Gladstone by the altered position in which the widow of his eldest son—Mrs. William Henry Gladstone—has been placed by his death. It is probable that henceforth for the remainder of her days the elder Mrs. Gladstone will make her home in London with her son Herbert and be cared for and nursed by her daughter Helen.

THE storm of Sunday night was very severe. The velocity of the wind was between 38 and 49 miles an hour, and the rainfall on the 1st was about four-fifths of an inch. During the day and evening snow, sleet and rain fell. A telephone message from Capraud Monday morning conveyed the information that two of the arches of the bridge at Victoria were carried away during the storm Sunday night. The telephone poles were falling in the water. The Bridge at Capraud has been reported damaged, and wherever at Southampton and Rocky Point have also suffered. One of the men watching at Southampton wharf Sunday evening was accidentally knocked into the harbor, but was fortunately rescued by his companion. The storm was very severe in other places. Considerable damage was done on the Halifax shore. A number of steamers due at Halifax failed to arrive. A Boston despatch says: A record-breaking November blizzard swept over the greater portion of New England, completely demoralizing traffic of every description, and well nigh paralyzing telegraphic and telephone communication. The northeast gale coming on a high course of tides drove the sea far beyond its usual limits and made a mark along shore only exceeded by the memorable hurricane of 1851. During the night thirty barges and schooners lying in Boston harbor, were wrecked and sunk and at least twelve lives were lost. A Wilson liner, of Ohio is ashore at Spectacle Island.

Died of Hydrophobia.

The Yarmouth papers publish the details of the death of Mrs. J. A. Scott, of the steamship Sual, which occurred at Shanghai from hydrophobia, resulting from a bite received in protecting her children from a mad dog which entered the house. Two months previous to her death she was seated on the verandah of her house and heard one of her children call out that a new dog was in the house. She hurried into the bedroom. The dog sprang from under the bed and tore her dress and then seized her by the arm. She put her free hand on the animal's throat to make it let go, and the dog drove its teeth through her thumb. Mrs. Scott went to Nagasaki to the Pasteur Institute, but got worse and died frothing at the mouth. She had refused food and water for some time.

How a person can gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion is hard to explain, but it certainly happens.

It seems to start the digestive machinery working properly. You obtain a greater benefit from your food. The oil being predigested, and combined with the hypophosphites, makes a food tonic of wonderful flesh-forming power.

All physicians know this to be a fact.

WISDOM.

BY THE REV. J. L. SPALDING, D. D.

A little more, a little less. A little patience, friend. And all thy pain, all thy distress, Shall surely have an end.

Catarth Can be Cured. By eradication from the blood the scrofulous taints which cause it. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures catarth, promptly and permanently, because it strikes at the root of the trouble.

Items of Interest to Catholic Readers in the Magazines. (From the Sacred Heart Review)

BOOKS THAT HELPED. In the very readable and entertaining article which she contributes to the current Catholic World on the lamented Richard Malcolm Johnston, and in the portion thereof where she describes the manner of the late literateur's conversion to Catholicism, Regina Armstrong says that there was much in that period of Mr. Johnston's life that was both beautiful and pathetic.

Writing to the Catholic Sun, of Syracuse, a New York priest says: "The other night I got on the Third Avenue electric car at One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, and on my way to Forty-second street chatted with the conductor. His name is Joseph Jacob, and he is a handsome-looking Israelite. On every second or third block campaign meetings were being held. From wagons lighted by flaming torches, flaming orators launched out in still more flaming phrases on the merits of their respective candidates. After deploring the evils that open saloons on Sunday bring to the poor working man, he asked me if I knew Father Habler, of Tacoma, Wash. I did not. "A grand man, sir, if you know him, and proud I am to say I was the humble means of saving his life once." "How?" said I. "Please tell me." "Well you see," said he, "eighteen years ago I was foreman in a sawmill in Tacoma. I was in a boarding house and the partition between me and the next room was only made of very thick paper on laths. Father Habler was a man very much thought of in the city. He had a mission named Couleettez Prairie, many miles from Tacoma. He wanted to build a convent school and academy there. He had collected between eight and ten thousand dollars round about, and was staying at Couleettez Prairie, having the money in his possession. It was known to many he had the money, and one night I heard two fellows on the other side of the partition planning how they'd get it from the priest. They were to tie him in the house and burn the soles of his feet to make him reveal where the money was and then kill him, burn the house and destroy all trace. I got up for something and they asked: 'Who's that?' 'It's me,' I said, and they said nothing. The next day I went out in the woods hunting deer; they knew I was going. Coming home, they met me in the woods. One of them said: 'You are the only one who knows what we said last night and we'll take no chances.' With that he raised the gun, but I was too quick for him. I shot him in the shoulder. The other fellow ran for the canal, but in crossing the river he upset and I saw him drown. I took the gun from the other fellow. I was arrested and told the whole story to the police. I got their basket in the house, with candle, rope and some luncheon, which they had ready for their trip to the prairie. I gave them to Father Habler. He said he'd pray for me every day of his life. You can write and ask him if this is not true."

Sidney Whitman contributes a paper on Bismarck to the November Harper's Monthly, and in one part of it gives us Bismarck's opinion of Leo XIII., as the grim chancellor expressed it to Eugene Wolf, the well-known traveler, who visited Bismarck at Frederichshah in the latter years of his life. Herr Wolf had previously been in Rome, where he was received in audience by the Holy Father. As he was about leaving the papal presence the Sovereign Pontiff asked him whether he was next journeying, and when Herr Wolf told him that he contemplated going to Germany, and hoped while there to see Bismarck, the Pope exclaimed: "Il Principe di Bismarck! do not forget to greet him for me." When he reached Frederichshah, Bismarck asked Herr Wolf whence he had come, and when the traveler replied from Rome, the ex-chancellor, after learning that he had seen the Pope, inquired after the health of his Holiness, and then added: "I must tell you that I all ways got on very well indeed with him. He even gave me his highest decoration, mounted in brilliants. It was only that confounded (ver flixte) little ex-cellenzy (Windthorst) whom I could not manage to get along with." That declaration, which Bismarck undoubtedly intended to be a disparagement of Windthorst, will only serve to exalt the memory of "the Pearl of Meppen" in the minds of men who know for what excellent reasons he waged unrelenting war upon Chancellor Bismarck.

THE PARALLONS. Under the title of "Our Seaboard Islands on the Pacific," Mr. John E. Bennet contributes to the same magazine a very interesting and instructive paper dealing with the islands that lie off the Californian coast, and which are known as the Farallons. Of one of these islands, San Nicholas, he tells us that long before their discovery by Cabrillo, in 1542, this particular island was overrun by the Innuitt Indians, who came down from the North, killed all the men, and carried off things that they thought of any value, leaving only the women and children behind them. The original inhabitants of these islands are described by Cabrillo as a mild, but vigorous race. The women and children left on San Nicholas maintained themselves after the Innuitt invasion, and the island again became peopled. In 1835 some Franciscan missionaries came to the island from California and persuaded the islanders to remove to the mainland and reside at the missions. When the boats had left the island one woman discovered that her child had been overlooked and left behind. She jumped from the boat and swam back to San Nicholas, where she and her child were the only inhabitants. The child died soon afterwards, but the mother lived to an advanced age, and near the end of her days she was brought to the Santa Barbara mission, at which her death took place.

A Jew Who Saved a Priest's Life. Writing to the Catholic Sun, of Syracuse, a New York priest says: "The other night I got on the Third Avenue electric car at One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, and on my way to Forty-second street chatted with the conductor. His name is Joseph Jacob, and he is a handsome-looking Israelite. On every second or third block campaign meetings were being held. From wagons lighted by flaming torches, flaming orators launched out in still more flaming phrases on the merits of their respective candidates. After deploring the evils that open saloons on Sunday bring to the poor working man, he asked me if I knew Father Habler, of Tacoma, Wash. I did not. "A grand man, sir, if you know him, and proud I am to say I was the humble means of saving his life once." "How?" said I. "Please tell me." "Well you see," said he, "eighteen years ago I was foreman in a sawmill in Tacoma. I was in a boarding house and the partition between me and the next room was only made of very thick paper on laths. Father Habler was a man very much thought of in the city. He had a mission named Couleettez Prairie, many miles from Tacoma. He wanted to build a convent school and academy there. He had collected between eight and ten thousand dollars round about, and was staying at Couleettez Prairie, having the money in his possession. It was known to many he had the money, and one night I heard two fellows on the other side of the partition planning how they'd get it from the priest. They were to tie him in the house and burn the soles of his feet to make him reveal where the money was and then kill him, burn the house and destroy all trace. I got up for something and they asked: 'Who's that?' 'It's me,' I said, and they said nothing. The next day I went out in the woods hunting deer; they knew I was going. Coming home, they met me in the woods. One of them said: 'You are the only one who knows what we said last night and we'll take no chances.' With that he raised the gun, but I was too quick for him. I shot him in the shoulder. The other fellow ran for the canal, but in crossing the river he upset and I saw him drown. I took the gun from the other fellow. I was arrested and told the whole story to the police. I got their basket in the house, with candle, rope and some luncheon, which they had ready for their trip to the prairie. I gave them to Father Habler. He said he'd pray for me every day of his life. You can write and ask him if this is not true."

Rewarded by the Pope. (From the Church News.)

A young infidel in Santiago, named Pletiado, stood up to make a speech at a public assembly, but, counting too much upon the non-religious principles of his audience, he began to speak in the most disrespectful and audacious manner of Our Lord and the Blessed Virgin, when one of the first gentlemen of Santiago (Don Macario Ossa) rose from his seat and made an indignant protest against the insult. He then knelt down on the platform in presence of all; so eloquent and soul-stirring were his words that all present were struck with awe and reverence and listened with bowed heads, while the young atheist slunk away and has not been heard of since. For several days the house of Don Macario Ossa was besieged with visitors—ladies, gentlemen, priests—all coming to congratulate him upon his courage in braving human respect, for his audience was by no means composed of the most practical Christians. The Archbishop sent him a heart of gold and the Catholic journals were full of his praises. When asked how he came to speak with so much eloquence, he answered: "I do not know: I do not remember even what I said." He exposed himself to mockery and insult, but in reality received only praise for his noble conduct. Needless to tell the immense amount of good his example has done. It will be a long time before another will dare to offer insult to Our Lord in Santiago. The request proved that it was not for want of faith, but through lack of moral courage that there were not more protests against it. His Holiness Leo XIII., "Motu proprio," names Don Macario Ossa Knight of the Order of St. Peter, in recognition of his noble conduct.

King Mataafa a Catholic. (From the Liverpool Catholic Times.)

A correspondent signing himself "B" writes: From the United Kingdom to Samoa is a far cry. Some people may even ask: What interest can we have in such a remote scrap of mother earth? As inhabitants of this country we have, or ought to have, an interest in that island kingdom because this happens to be one of three great powers charged with its good government and most concerned with its ultimate destiny. However, it is as Catholics that I wish to interest your readers in Samoan affairs. A gratifying paragraph appeared in the papers some days ago to the effect that the ex-King Mataafa had been brought back by a German vessel from his enforced exile and reinstated in his position as native King of the Samoan group of islands. This old man is a Catholic, and from all accounts a good one. His claims to consideration were strongly urged by the late Robert Louis Stevenson, himself a resident in Samoa. The papers of the great novelist supporting King Mataafa were given to the world by, I think, Mr. Hogan, M. P., "the member for Australia." Some years ago the Samoan crown had two rival claimants, Malietoa and Mataafa. The powers that be decided in favor of the former. To prevent intrigue and possible rebellion, Mataafa was quietly shipped to a distant German possession. There he was detained until the death, a few weeks ago, of his successful rival. The incident has been passed over, apparently unobserved, by the Catholic press, hence this letter. Genuine kindly converts from paganism are rare. The Wesleyans are rightly proud of their Kama of Beothusland, so ought we to be of our Mataafa of Samoa.

Rev. R. R. Kane, of Belfast, whose extreme anti-National and anti-Catholic views brought him into equal prominence in Ireland with Mr. William Johnston, M. P., died of apoplexy on Monday last. Mr. Kane's, like all fiery natures, was not without his good points. The financial relations case had almost threatened to work his political conversion. But loud railing against the Catholic Church was too congenial to him to hope for any improvement in that direction. A single line despatch by cable also mentions the death of another man who was a type that the old country alone can produce. Sir Stuart Keill, ex-Lord Mayor of London, was so strict a Catholic that it was his habit to send a substitute to the Established Church services, in cases where custom called for the representative of the corporation. He made an excellent official, and was the more admired for his strict religious views.—Catholic Register.

St. Andrew's Cross.

The cross of St. Andrew is always represented in the shape of the letter X; but that this is an error ecclesiastical historians prove by appealing to the cross itself on which he suffered, which St. Stephen of Bergundy gave to the Convent of St. Victor, near Marseilles; and which, like the common cross, is rectangular. The cause of the error is thus explained: When the Apostle suffered, the cross, instead of being upright, rested on its foot and arm; and in this posture he was fastened to it—his hands to one arm and the head, his feet to the other arm and the foot, his head in the air.—Ave Maria.

Kidney Pains All Gone. What Did It? Doan's Kidney Pills. How Do You Know? A Kingston Man Says So.

Mr. W. J. Papp, 112 Barrie St., Kingston, Ont., writes as follows: "Having been troubled with kidney disease for years, and not having received any permanent relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, I take great pleasure in letting others similarly afflicted know of the wonderful curative properties possessed by Doan's Pills. Before taking them I was troubled at night by having to rise, but can now sleep, and do not feel weary in the morning. I hope that this may induce other sufferers from kidney or urinary troubles to give Doan's Kidney Pills a faithful trial, for I know that no other remedy could have acted so well as they did in my case."

A Dumville Jeweller's Wife

CURED OF PALPITATION OF THE HEART AND SMOOTHING SPELLS BY MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS. Mrs. D. E. Lasalle, Canal Street, Dumville, Ont., whose husband keeps a jewelry store, and is one of the best known and most progressive citizens of Dumville, Ont., gives the following description of her recent experience in the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills: "I took Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for weak nerves, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells at night and sleeplessness. Before I used them I could not get restful sleep, and my nerves were often so unstrung that I would start in alarm at the least noise, and easily worried."

"Last February I commenced taking this valuable medicine, and it proved the right remedy for my weak and shattered nervous system. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills restored my nerves to a strong and healthy condition, gave regular and normal action of the heart. I sleep well now, and am better in every way, and I recommend them heartily to all who suffer as I did." Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, 50c. a box, or 3 for $1.25, at all druggists. T.
