Darning the Weak Places.

BY RUTH CAMPBELL.

"But there aren't any holes in those stockings," said Molly. "Why do you put them into the pile to be darned?"

The Lady-Who-Always-Knows-Somewhat had been sporting out her weekly grist of stockings on the veranda and Molly had been lying in the hammock watching.

The Lady picked up the pair of stockings in question and ran her hand into them again for Molly's benefit. "I know there isn't any holes," she explained, "but see all those weak places."

"You aren't going to darn them?" asked Molly, incredulously.

"Indeed I am," said the Lady. "I always do. I find it's very much easier than darning holes. That's part of my philosophy, you know."

"Philosophy?" echoed Molly, inquiringly.

"Yes," said the Lady. "I mean that I believe in darning the weak places everywhere in life instead of waiting for the holes to come. You know my husband inherited weak lungs. You didn't know it? Well, I suppose that means we've darned the weak place pretty successfully. Both his father and mother died of tuberculosis and he was naturally stoop-shouldered and narrow chested. If we hadn't done anything about it, I don't doubt that his lungs would have given out under some of the hard strains he has had to bear. But instead of waiting for the hole to come, he darned the weak place by taking exercises and sleeping out of doors and building himself up by his diet. Wasn't that better than letting the weak place become a hole and then spending the rest of his life trying to patch it up?"

Molly admitted that it was.

"Well, that's one way of darning the weak place," went on the Lady. "And this is an example of another. That pretty little girl of hers is just beginning to realize how pretty she is and to think of nothing but clothes and boys. Some mothers would say, 'It's just the foolish age,' and wouldn't try to do anything about it unless the weak place became a bad hole, but Mrs. S. believes in darning the weak places, and she is doing all she can right now to make Dorothy modest and sensible and unspoiled."

And then there are the weak places in our efficiency," went on the Lady, warming to her subject. "Now, I know a stenographer who is so quick and accurate, and such a pleasant person to have around, that her employers bear with her bad spelling. Sometimes they get out of patience with her, but they have always forgiven her so far, and she doesn't try to darn that weak place. I should hate to see it wear through into a hole because it would be so much harder then to patch it up than it is now, but—"

"But I have tried," interrupted Molly, suddenly.

"How hard?" asked the Lady, not at all surprised by the interruption.

"Not very," admitted Molly, reluctantly. "You don't happen to have a spelling book handy, do you?"

Herring Inspection and Grading

(Consular Agent Ozro C. Gould, Curling Bay of Islands, Nfld.)

In the Newfoundland west coast bays, herring are caught in the spring, autumn, and winter. The winter fishery is through the ice, and the catches are shipped frozen to American and Canadian markets, principally the latter, for consumption in the Lenten season. Fish caught in this way can not be pickled or cured with the best results.

The spring and autumn fisheries are conducted with nets. Of the two, the autumn season is the longest and most profitable. It is extensive only in Bonne Bay and Bay of Islands, but engages the attention of many men, who do not engage in the spring fishery at all. The product of the autumn fishery is shipped principally to the United States. The prospect of a successful herring season next fall is extremely good, owing to the proposed changes in the American customs tariff.

The spring fishery is most extensive in Bay St. George. Its product goes almost entirely to Canadian markets, of which Halifax is the most important. In Bay of Islands the spring fishery opened this year about April 10th and with the dissolution of ice on April 24 was in full swing. The catch is proving fairly satisfactory in quantity. Bay St. George, however, is still blocked with ice, and the fishery has hardly begun.

Previous reports from this office have stated that the condition of the West Coast herring fishery has been far from satisfactory in recent years. The discontent of the fishermen with present conditions is due largely to the increasing difficulty of obtaining satisfactory prices for spring-caught herring, which in turn is due to the condition in which the fish in recent years have been delivered in the Canadian retail markets. A number of circumstances are responsible.

These herring are shipped pickled. The barrels are produced of lumber cut during the winter months by the fishermen, saved at small local mills "on shares" and coopered by the fishermen. It will readily be seen that these barrels are often poor in quality and rarely of the best sort.

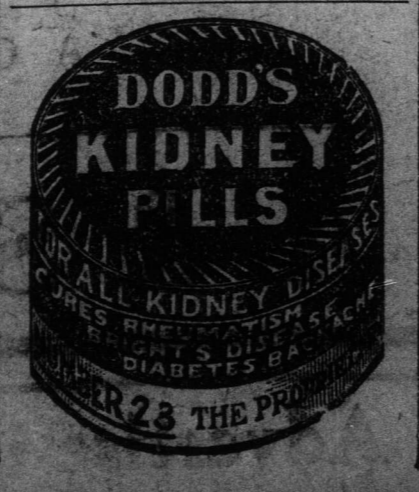

As a consequence, a percentage of the spoilage can be laid to defective and leaky packages, due to exposure to the sun on Canadian wharves, and rough handling en route. Not until some enterprising firm maintains and popularizes a properly equipped co-operation on the west coast is this trouble likely to be remedied. One obstacle to such a project is the desire of the fishermen to make the barrels themselves and thus obtain labor for the winter months and a profit on that labor. But now the fishermen claim that in catching and curing fish, "finding" the salt, making the barrels, and paying the freight to Halifax at the present price of about or less than $2 per barrel, they do not have any profit. It may be possible, therefore, that winter employment at a co-operation at fair wages, might prove attractive, and the barrels would undoubtedly cost less.

But the principal difficulty is not the poor quality of the barrels, but the quality of the fish when cured. After being caught they are exposed to the warmth of the May and June suns. Fish caught in the autumn risk no such warmth. Unscrupulous fishermen have packed more and more spoiled fish in the last few years; the complaints have gone far toward spoiling the Canadian market. The price to be had in Halifax is said to have steadily fallen, and now the honest packers are suffering in company with their guilty neighbors. In fact, it seems that all of the spring catch is looked upon with suspicion by the Canadian dealers.

It is doubtless true that not all the blame is upon the Newfoundlanders, for their product has not always received proper attention from its consignees. Men well informed regarding conditions claim that barrels of pickled herring frequently lie uncovered on Halifax and other Canadian wharves for days, and even weeks, in the heat of summer, and that many other ways the pack is subjected to carelessness which would ruin the best of pickled herring.

The result is the claim of the local fishermen that the spring fishery is entirely unprofitable. They are now, by public meetings and memorials and through the Boards of Trade of Bay of Islands and St. George's, taking energetic steps to ameliorate the existing conditions. The proposed programme, if successful, will "no doubt" bring a better market next year, but notwithstanding the matter has crystallized into action too slowly to give much promise for 1913. Action last fall or winter would have been more timely and effective.

It is sought (1) to improve the pack and insure good quality, (2) to find other markets than Canada, and (3) to obtain better treatment of the product by Canadian dealers. New markets would be a means to force better prices and treatment in Canada, and if it is held that the Newfoundland Government discover these markets and acquaint the packers with their requirements, the methods of shipment, etc.

The Canadian market has been tried and its conditions and requirements are well known here; it was formerly profitable and is very accessible. It seems probable that the Canadian dealers will bid higher for a better and uniform quality of pickled herring, and that in their own interests, they will eliminate any cause for complaint in the method of handling when it is brought to their attention.

The most important thing, however, is to produce a reliable grade of pickled herring. This is sought through governmental regulation. The Newfoundland Government is asked: First, to place at the service of the fishermen through the month of May its expert on such matters; second, to appoint inspectors with authority to prevent the pickling of inferior or spoiled herring or the use of improper containers, and, presumably, to punish offenders; third, to issue numbered licenses to each fisherman who desires to pickle herring; and fourth, to require him to mark plainly on each barrel of his product by means of stenciling plates to be furnished with each license, his license number, a distinguishing symbol (a crown is proposed), and the words "West Coast Herring", thus enabling inferiority to be laid subsequently at the door of the offending party.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette.

Minimise The Loss.

Practically farmers may easily minimise the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer.

Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 20 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops.

The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of late crops stimulated.

We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application.

The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

London Police to Have Shields.

London, July 17.—A large metal shield some three feet long by two feet broad, carried over the shoulder worn by the London policemen in future when dealing with armed burglars and lunatics.

For some time and official of Scotland Yard has been engaged in testing and experimenting with various types of bullet-proof shields which will protect the head and body of a constable and at the same time allow him to use his revolver effectively and with perfect safety.

A White Paper on shooting outrages on the police, just issued, gives interesting figures showing the number of cases in which firearms have been used against police officers from 1908 to 1912. The total number of police officers shot at between 1908 and 1912 was sixty-two, of whom six were killed and twenty-four injured, while sixty-two escaped injury.

That stubborn headache can likely be removed by properly fitted glasses. No doubt it is caused by one of the various forms of astigmatism or hypermetropia. Go to TRAPNELL, the Eyesight Specialist and have your eyes tested.—J.S.H.

The Dying Morris Party.
 The Daily News has not yet answered our inquiries if it has yet apologized for attacks made on Sir Edward Morris previous to 1907, if not, why the editor has not done so, as he now holds that Sir Edward Morris is the legitimate successor of Sir William Whiteway. In those days, according to the Daily News, Sir Edward was nothing but a partisan politician. Mr. Robinson declared in those days that a great gulf was fixed between the statesman and the partisan politician. Now-days, according to Mr. Robinson, Sir Edward is pre-eminently the statesman. Of one thing there can be no manner of doubt, no manner of doubt whatever, and that is that Mr. Robinson belongs to the class of partisan politicians. When Sir William Whiteway was in active administration, Mr. Robinson had not a good word for him until Sir William joined the Morison-Robinson group. Before 1907 Mr. Robinson had not a good word for Sir Edward, he only discovered his "brains" and "statesmanship" after Sir Edward joined the Morison-Robinson group, and declared against taking seriously Sir Edward's views on any contract where capitalists were concerned. Yet he took Sir Edward's views seriously as to the mileage of the Branch Railways, their total cost, and the paying of the Contractor in gold instead of bonds.

Our evening contemporary is in a pickle about the Morris party. He cannot get over the fact that thousands of fishermen petitioned for a chance to turn out the Government last year and that Sir Edward Morris was afraid to face the music, knowing that the stakes were the Government and that the people had determined to turn out his Government, and that he would have as little chance of keeping back the tide as he had of restraining the feeling against the Reid Deal. Sir Edward cannot avoid of his tactics of 1900 of getting in out of the wet under the wing of Sir Robert Bond, as he did in 1900, and he knows he has to go this time.

JUST THINKING.
 Jam always attracted little Jim, and he persisted in helping himself, in spite of his mother's orders.
 One day she caught him in the act, the jam-pot in one hand and a large spoon in the other.
 "Jimmy, you naughty boy!" she said sadly, "Why do you always disobey me and steal the jam?"
 Jim's sweet blue eyes turned heavenward, and a little smile stole round his lips.
 "I was just wondering, mother, he murmured gently.
 "Wondering? What do you mean, child?" asked his exasperated mother.
 "Well, mother, I haven't tasted the jam yet," explained the lad, "and I was just wondering if it's nice enough to be whipped for!"

Asleep For 28 Hours
 Delirium and Violence of an Athlete After Making Club Swinging Record.
 A London paper says: "A swinging Indian athlete for 107 1/2 days—without a break at All England, Tom Burrows the Australian athlete, went to sleep for twenty-four hours from five o'clock on Sunday morning until 9 a.m. on Sunday. Burrows intended to go on swinging for 112 hours, but at the 104th hour his difficulty in keeping awake increased in spite of the divers that were devised for him. His friends suggested the administration of oxygen, but to this he refused consent. As the preparation proceeded he swung away. An effort to grasp his wrists resulted in the falling from his hands.
 Not knowing what he was doing Burrows struck a non-commissioned officer a heavy blow on the forehead and then hit out wildly around him. Eventually, falling from the form among several officers, he fell to the floor and fell asleep. In a while he was carried home sleeping, and he did not wake Sunday morning.
 Burrows has established a world record. He has been a club swinger since he was 18, and he is now Burrows said last night: "I had nearly come to the end of my tether shortly after 1 o'clock on Sunday morning, for fatigue had made its presence felt by large blisters which first formed on the wrists then all over my body. I did not want to take oxygen because I did not think it would be fair to attain a record by its aid.
 "I feel much better able to swing a strain since I turned forty, but may be because I have practised regularly since I was 14. The physical profession, both in England and Australia, say I helped myself during my exhibitions by washing the clubs in unison with the beats. Doctors tell me that my hands have not been shortened by swinging."
Caravanning.
 "Caravanning is more nearly akin to yachting than any open-air pursuit," says the Times in reviewing a fine book on "Caravanning and Camping Out," by Harris Stone (Herbert Jenkins, 10s. net). Those who live in a house on wheels, moving at their leisure from pitch to pitch, have many a restful pause in green fields, can only achieve comfort by cultivating several of the sportsman's immemorial qualities. They must be able to interpret weather signs and warnings, each day to be divided up as if it were some space, which is necessarily restricted, must be minutely economized and everybody must adopt a certain order and habits.
 "It is not surprising to find the pioneer of caravanning, justice was a sailor, the late Gordon-Stables, R. N., who some forty years ago voyaged up and down the highways and byways of England and Scotland, and writing his innumerable books mainly for the benefit of men making in the cabin of his yacht as it trundled along roadstead to roadstead.
 "This godfather of the modern caravanner was looked upon something of a crank; village stables often contemplated his arrival with suspicion, thinking he belonged to the order of gipsy, posh-rats, show-folk, and other profitable peripatetics. Thanks to the energy and enterprising of the Caravan Club, which was founded in 1907 at Mr. Stone's suggestion, the amateur vandweller interests are duly safe-guarded; he can camp out almost anywhere without being moved on or under observation as a suspicious character. The club now has more than 300 members (a third of them are ladies).
 "The club pennant with monogram of two C's entwined back to back, on a V (original horse-shoe, but a change was made to please the owners of motor-cars, is now known to all who use King's highway; the van is mostly farmers, of the frequent camping-places, who profit byplying the visitors with milk, eggs, and other produce. The official list of some 600 pitches and the particulars given are extremely useful to the camper. From this list it would be a criterion, that Sussex, Wiltshire, Hampshire, Hertfordshire, and Devon are the most popular counties."

Perilous and Violence of an Athlete After Making Club Swinging Record
A London paper says: After swinging Indian clubs for 107 hours 41 days—without a break at Aldershot, Tom Burrows the Australian athlete, went asleep for twenty-eight hours—from five o'clock on Saturday morning until 9 a. m. on Sunday. Burrows intended to go on swinging for 112 hours, but at the 104th hour his difficulty in keeping awake increased in spite of the diversions that were devised for him. MINARD'S LINTMENT CURES COLDS, Etc.

A Notable Inscription.

"The most beautiful railroad station in America is in Washington; even in that city of splendid buildings, its lovely beauty is unique and impressive. Carved in its marble facades are several inscriptions which were written by ex-President Eliot of Harvard, or chosen by him because of their appropriateness to that particular building in that particular city. One of them reads:—

THE FARM
BEST HOME OF THE FAMILY
MAIN SOURCE OF NATIONAL WEALTH
FOUNDATION OF CIVILIZED SOCIETY
THE NATURAL PROVIDENCE

"Every Congressman, every law-maker, every administrator of laws who comes to Washington must pass beneath the marble arch which bears that inscription," says Colliers Weekly. "At least once, in the freshness of novelty, he must be impressed by it; thereafter it becomes an old story and he hurries past, unseeing."

"That is one of the perils of Washington; the man who stays there too long runs the risk of absorbing its exotic atmosphere and forgetting the views, desires, and needs of the people he comes from. Thoughtful men who know the risk consciously avoid it. President Wilson said the other day that since his body for the next four years must be in Washington it is all the more essential that his mind should get its inspiration from the rest of the country."

In Dr. Eliot intellectual accuracy is even more marked than dignity of phrase. This inscription expresses a truth that is fundamental in human society.

Dragon Club Leads Simple Life.

The "Dragon Club" in London with dinner for sixpence, has stirred many inquiries. It was a woman journalist who, with her last sixpence offered to organize that Chelsea restaurant on cheap lines and run it as a club. It was the superfluities that were cut off. The laundry bill—why should not you eat from a bare table that can be easily cleaned? The crockery business was run on careful lines. There is too much crockery for the simple life.

"We eat off bare tables," writes the founder of the Dragon Club, "and the food is dished in French fireproof bowls with lids to them, serving the double purpose, when necessary, of saucapan and plate. Our spoons are of horn and bone, to save labour in polishing silver, and our mugs are Doulton, to save labor, and we wait on ourselves, also to save labor. The meal is substantial, and the hungry person can get it by joining the club and putting up his sixpences for tickets."

When Kings Collect.

King George recently declared that some of the happiest hours of his life have been dug to his hobby of stamp collecting. He has one of the three finest collections in the world. But most of the sovereigns of Europe have their pet collections too.

The specialty of the late King of Greece, who so recently met a terrible death at the hands of an assassin, was door-handles ordinary and otherwise. He boasted of having a sample of every make known to civilization. When he visited England last he left behind him a trail of handle doors. The Kaiser's pet hobby is the collecting of ties. He is said to have over 5,000 stored and catalogued, ranging from cotton ones in purples and yellows that would startle a plough-boy to the costliest specimens of embroidered cravats.

The late King Edward was very proud of his collection of walking-sticks, of which he had hundreds. Two of the most interesting were made, one from a pile that had centuries ago supported old London Bridge, the other from the famous Bosobel oak, up which the prince who was afterwards Charles II. once hid from Cromwell's soldiers.

Queen Alexandra is the most expert photographer among royalties. She has some 10,000 photographs of her own taking, carefully described and numbered. As most remember, she published a book of views some years ago.

King Alfonso has two collections, one of trophies of his career as a sportsman, the other—surely the gristliest collection on record—being mementoes of attempts made upon his life. One item is a piece of skin from a horse killed by the bomb hurled at the Spanish king on his wedding-day, another a bullet that just missed his head and shattered the glass screen of his motor.

The Best Big Boss.

Some Stories of Colonel Goethals, the Man Who is Building the Panama Canal, and Who Was Nearly Blown to Bits the Other Day.

The Panama Canal is, of course the biggest engineering job ever tackled. Forty thousand workmen are busy on it, talking in fifty different languages.

A round eighty million sterling will have been spent on "The Earth's Cutest Cut." As an American newspaper has dubbed it, and the engineering and organizing difficulties have been so tremendous that when Colonel Goethals took it in hand, America's three most famous engineers had, after short trials handed in their resignations in despair.

A week or two ago a charge of dynamite nearly removed a man whose name will be in a few months in the headlines of the world's newspapers. Colonel Goethals, who for six years has been in charge of the Panama Canal, and who has promised that a ship shall sail through before the end of the year, had his face badly scorched while watching an unimportant "blast," and part of an ear chipped off.

Roosevelt in a Race.
When the last one came in Roosevelt, the then President, thumped his heavy fist on the desk and shouted "I'll put a man on that job who'll keep his nose to it till the Judgement Day, if necessary. Send for Goethals."

Till then the army officer had been quite unknown to fame, tho he was in charge of the military engineers during America's war with Spain. But now it is stated that from twenty to thirty of the world's keenest engineers arrive at Panama every week to watch and admire his handling of the Panama problem.

During his first few months he made himself quite the best hated man in Panama. He insisted on having a free hand and that good advice in the form of advisory committees, official and unofficial, should be abolished.

Just after he had sent out one of his first orders, a big superintendent came to point out a fatal objection. He spoke well and clearly and crisply. "I hope Colonel," he ended "you see the force of my argument?"

The Colonel looked mildly puzzled. "Very interesting," he murmured. "But I wasn't arguing; I was issuing an order."

"We Open on September 1st."
Hearing that an urgently needed hospital was behindhand, the new chief went to see about it. To the man in charge he remarked: "We open this hospital on September 1st" (mentioning a date a month earlier than the one already settled). The engineer smiled.

"October, you mean. I'm afraid we can't do it even then."
"We open on September 1st," the grim new Governor of the Panama Zone murmured again.

The Engineer was startled, and called heaven and earth to witness that it was impossible.

Goethals repeated: "I said we open on September 1st."
The engineer grew resigned. "Well I'll try," he muttered.

"I'm sorry if I still don't make myself clear," he ended. "We open on—September—1st. And they did."

That was the way with everything on the canal when the new chief arrived. But he succeeded not only in knocking off the arrears, but in bringing the opening of the "big cut" eighteen months nearer than the official estimate. The beginning of 1914 will see the canal open, instead of the middle of 1915.

The new chief soon lived his unpopularity down and now he is affectionally known as the old man or "the B. B." (a contraction of President Taft's name for him—the best big boss on earth).

He holds an open court every Sunday, when he listens to the grievances and difficulties of any man on the Isthmus who wants to consult him.

The canal zone, a fever-ridden swamp, is now as healthy as London. The yellow fever, which used to kill off the workmen by thousands a year is now extinct. The medical staff discovered that a mosquito which spreads yellow fever breeds in stagnant pools.

"Beating Policemen" Was a Hobby.
By the use of hundreds of tons of paraffin the pools were poisoned for them. Even now it is one of Colonel Goethals' rules that no cow must be brought to the Isthmus. Cows mean tracks, tracks mean standing water, and standing water would mean a fresh outbreak of the dreadful Yellow Jack.

One of the problems the new Governor of the Panama Zone had to tackle when he arrived was the fondness of his workmen for "beating policemen."

That crime accounted for the absence of hundreds of his best men a week. The policemen were tiny native officers, and it used to be a common joke for hulking white labourers when slightly merry, to see

Would Not Keep House Without Duffy's

GAINED 71 POUNDS.

"I cannot say enough in praise of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Before I took this medicine I was all run down and only weighed 99 pounds; now I balance the scales at 170 pounds. My husband was also very thin and delicate looking, weighed often much less and never over 150 pounds, and now he weighs as much as I do—170 pounds."

"I would not keep house or go on a trip without a bottle of Duffy's. If I get sick on a train it is the first thing I look to, and when I take a lake trip, I am sure it is with me."—Mrs. John McGehean, 986 Paradrone, Mt. Adams, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home as a safeguard in emergencies requiring a stimulant and ready to be taken on journeys for the protection it affords the traveler.

Its regular use by the weak and ailing gives remarkable results in health and strength as well as proper weight by stimulating the stomach to better action, and in consequence nourishing the entire body.

how many they could tackle. The police were unarmed even with batons.

The only recourse of the constable who had his hair pulled (that was the favour challenge) was to whistle up a dozen of his comrades when the whole party would launch themselves upon the heavy-weight out for exercise.

Colonel Goethals changed all this by forming a police force of their own out of the recognized champions at "police beating." He remarked at his next Sunday court "Boys, I'm sorry to spoil sport but I think the next man who tries to chuck a policeman under the chin will think he has struck an earthquake."

Father and Son.

Hammerton relates that a kind-hearted English gentleman once said to him: "My father was the most thoroughly unbearable person I ever met in my life."

That gives us a glimpse of one of the most tragic situations of modern life; the father and son who constantly irritate one another.

As the boy emerges from childhood and begins to develop his own personality, the father often finds it impossible to adjust himself to the change. They drift into alienation.

Impotent, or unwilling, to control his son, he falls back into sarcasm, sneering contempt. Then the boy, when not openly insolent, becomes sullen.

The only remedy for this sort of thing is for the father frankly to recognize the individuality of the son, to seek to deal with him as an equal, to treat him with respect, and, when the boy comes to grief by his unwisdom to seize that opportunity to befriend him and as a friend to make him see his folly.

Only good, strong, repeated doses of love and companionship, administered with self-restraint, can solve the problem.—Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World for July.

Attacked by a Cheetah.

A Dublin custom house officer named Graves, had an alarming experience recently. He was set upon in Rathmines, one of the suburbs, by a cheetah, an animal of the leopard type found in India and Africa, which had evidently escaped from its captors. He had his dog and a thick stick with him, and he succeeded in killing the animal. It was while walking near Grosvenor square about midnight that the strange-looking animal, somewhat larger than the Irish terrier suddenly sprang at him out of a hedge near some gardens. With a hoarse bark it gripped his pants. He shook the animal off, and a fierce struggle took place between it and his dog. Seizing the dog's throat, the cheetah dragged him towards the hedge but Graves caught the cheetah a heavy blow behind the ear with his stick and killed it. The surmise is that it was brought from abroad by some resident with the object of making it a pet.

NEW SCHOOL.—A fine new school was recently finished near Mount Cashel, by Architect Doran for His Grace the Archbishop. It is a beautiful structure and the expeditious manner in which the work has been done reflects great credit on Mr. Doran and his workmen.

OUTLOOK PROMISING.—Traps are doing well with fish at Trepassay, such conditions it is hoped will continue for the remainder of the season. A good voyage would be gladly welcomed by the folks of Trepassay, as for several years back the fishery here has been very bad.

GOOD FISHING REPORTED.—The schooner Maggie Sullivan arrived here last evening from Pogo, making a very quick run-up. Her reports are like the Fogot's which were to the effect that the fishery was much better than it has been for some time past. A few days at Peckford's Island and the Wadhams.

The Fogot, which sailed yesterday for the north at 10 a.m., took the following passengers: Mrs. G. Osmond, Misses Benson (2), Miss J. Abright, G. Greene, S. Brett, Mrs. Mahoney and infant, H. C. Chis, Miss Cobb, Mrs. J. Feltham, Miss Dalton, Miss J. Moore, Miss J. Miller, Miss B. E. Welch, Mrs. Blundon, T. E. McKay, Master Tompleman, P. G. Bradley, Miss Riggs and 7 in steerage. The ship also took a large freight.

GARDEN PARTY.—The St. Andrew's Missionary Society held a most enjoyable and successful Garden Party at Mount Dorset, yesterday afternoon. Among the visitors to the grounds were the Rev. J. S. Eubank, Pastor of St. Andrew's Church and Hon. Jas. Baird. Tea and refreshments were served during the evening and the ladies in charge did a brisk business. The proceeds will be devoted to the Mission Fund.

New M.G.B. Armoury.

Last night a representative and largely attended meeting of men was held in the Sunday School near George Street Methodist Church last evening when the question of rebuilding the Armoury of the Methodist Guards was taken up and debated. Rev. F. R. Matthews and C. H. Hutchings spoke on the question and all thought that in the interest of the Methodist youth of the city the Armoury should be rebuilt. Those present who had sons in the Brigade in the old regime were specially enthusiastic and appeals will be made to the denomination in the city for funds. There is now $6,000 available which with about $5,000 more would put up a fine building. When contributions were called for 40 persons present gave $25 and others offered to swell the funds. Judging from this good showing it looks as if the erection of a new armoury will soon begin.

Golden Jubilee.

Of Hon. George and Mrs. Knowling. Congratulations and greetings are being showered on the Hon. George Knowling and his venerable lady, who to-day celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding or Golden Jubilee. By a special license Mr. Knowling married Miss Elizabeth Upham, at Exeter, England. The Rev. Mr. Maud performed the ceremony. Mr. Knowling is one of our best, esteemed and most successful citizens. Although having passed the allotted span, having passed his 72nd birthday, he enjoys life and is as active as if he were forty.

Outing For Reid Nfld Co.

Last night, at the waiting room for ladies in the Reid Nfld. Co's station a meeting was held relative to an outing for the company, its officials and employees. Mr. A. D. Brown presided and it was decided to hold the outing at the Octagon on Saturday, August 3rd. A committee to make all arrangements was appointed and the officers of it are: R. G. Reid, Honorary President; P. Houx, Honorary Vice-President; A. D. Brown, President; W. E. Ladley, Vice-President; J. E. Angel, Asst. Vice-President; A. C. B. who was a warm personal friend of Mr. Knowling; Mrs. J. M. Darcy, Secretary; Wallace Ross, Treasurer; Chas. Bradley, Auditor.

Stole $10.

Yesterday as a woman was coming in by the Prince express she was victimized by a fellow traveller, a resident of the East End, who occupied the same car as she did. The woman for a moment or so happened to put her watch on one side when the man observing it, and while she had her back turned, quickly whipped the money out of it. The woman did not discover the loss until he had returned to the city and was then informed. He got a description of those who were in the car with the woman and arrested the culprit who, at first stoutly denied his guilt but later confessed and after being taken to the station the cash was found stowed away in his underclothing. The woman will get her property to-day after Judge Knight deals with the prisoner.

Beothic Still Aground.

Mr. H. W. Lewis, Asst. Collector of Customs, had another message last night concerning the s.s. Beothic which went ashore at Point Riche. The message read as follows: "The Beothic, which was on the way to St. John's, failed to pull off the ship to-day but will try again to-morrow (Wednesday). Still dumping the coal overboard to lighten the ship, but none of the general cargo has yet been jettisoned."

Ben Laid a Record Egg.

Langueuil Bird Tries to Solve High Cost of Living.

To one of Montreal's pretty suburban towns to wit Langueuil, must be given the credit of producing the first condensation hen. Most of the silly egg-producing brood have all through history evinced a total disregard for the high cost of living problem, and an utter indifference to man's struggle to procure his "ham and —," or his omelette at present day prices and with a present day salary.

But here is a feathered food-producer, which if she cannot help us out by laying abundantly in winter when eggs are scarce and almost worth their weight in gold, has thought out another plan to help and has laid the largest hen's egg on record. This remarkable egg was three inches long and eight inches on circumference and weighed 4 1/2 ounces. When opened it was found to have another complete egg inside so that the object of the philanthropic hen evidently was to lay two eggs at one time.

Drinking Out of Ice Tumblers.

Caterers at some French watering-places are this season taking up an "invention" which will probably revolutionize the whole summer trade in cool drinks.

The idea, which stands to the credit of a Dane named Hultz, is to cool beverages not by putting a piece of ice in the middle of the liquid, but to serve up the liquid inside ice. In other words, your favourite thirst-quencher is served in a tumbler of pure and transparent ice.

Oh No!

"As I understand it, doctor, I believe I'm well but I will be well, is that the idea?"
"It is."
"Then if you believe you are past I suppose you'll be paid?"
"Not necessarily."
"But why shouldn't faith work as well in one case as in the other?"
"Why, you see, there is considerable difference between having faith in Providence and having faith in you."

The Jolly Old Crow.

On the limb of an oak sat a jolly old crow
And chattered away with glee, with glee,
And he saw the old farmer go out to sow!
And he cried, "It's all for me, for me!"

"Look how he scatters his seeds around,
He is wonderful kind to the poor;
If he'd empty it down in a pile on the ground,
I could find it much better, I'm sure,
I'm sure!"

"I've learned all the tricks of this wonderful man,
Who has such regard for the crow,
That he lays out his grounds in a regular plan,
And covers his corn in a row, a row!
"He must have a very great fancy for me;
He tries to entrap me enough;
But I measure his distances as well as he,
And when he comes near, I'm off, I'm off."

The Regatta.

Over thirty crews had a spin over the lake last evening.

When forty too many boats should not be on the pond together. Coxswains should use their discretion accordingly to prevent accident.

Five crews are now practicing for the Amateur Race and four for the Mercantile.

A crew of foreigners, recently imported by the Reid Company, will compete in the Trade Race. They had their initial spin last evening, coached by Coxswain Day.

Last night while the thick fog prevailed a young man was nearly cut down in the middle of the pond by a rowboat.

Intending competitors for the swimming contest should do all their practicing in the daylight, if possible.

To date there are no crews practicing for the Naval Reserve Race.

Tent holders are already getting their grounds hatched off and will commence building next week.

Miss Bridie Whalen, of the West End, who has resided here for ten years past, though a native of the north, leaves by this evening's express for Grand Falls to visit her parents. Her father is an old-time school-teacher who was for years at Pelly's Island and is a man of varied attainments.

To-night at the S.A. Hall, Liverpool Street, there will be held a Musical Entertainment. Assistant Musician James will act as Chairman. Admission by ticket. Ice Cream will be served at the close. Everybody invited—ly23, 11

Great Test of the Navy.

The preliminary stage of the greatest naval manoeuvres that have ever been held, whether in sheer size of the ships or in the number of units and men engaged, opened yesterday.

No fewer than 23 Admirals and 346 ships, distributed between 35 squadrons, will be employed in the operations. The ships are of the following classes:

Dreadnoughts, 21; Mine-sweepers, 6; Other battleships, 22; Destroyers, 169; Old armoured cruisers, 27; Submarines, 42; Heavy cruisers, 12; Waterplane ship, 1; Light cruisers, 16; Tenders, depot ships, etc., 23; Mine-layers, 7.

But to obtain this force practically the entire British Fleet has been concentrated in home waters. Only two really effective modern fighting ships under Admiralty control remain abroad, namely, the Inflexible in the Mediterranean, and the New Zealand in the Southern Pacific.

In the second stage of the manoeuvres two fleets, the Blue, representing the British forces, under Admiral Sir George Callaghan, and the Red, representing the enemy, under Vice-Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, will be pitted against each other. The main strategic object of the exercises will be to ascertain whether the British Fleet can give security against invasion. Sir John Jellicoe will endeavor to land an invading force, and Sir George Callaghan will be charged with the task of bringing him to battle and destroying him before the landing can be effected.

The problem is of surpassing importance in view of the weakness and disorganization of the Territorial Force. If Sir George Callaghan is successful the Government may be expected to claim that the safety of this country is absolutely assured and that, therefore, there is no need to reorganize the Territorials and introduce national service.

Last year a similar problem was studied, and on that occasion Sir George Callaghan commanded the Red, or attacking force, representing the enemy, while Prince Louis of Battenburg, commanded the Blue, or British defending force. The British force was given a strength nearly double that of the enemy.

But, notwithstanding this great superiority, Sir George Callaghan was able to land 28,000 men on the Yorkshire coast, to break through the British line of patrol in the North Sea, and to effect his retreat to the south with only the loss of his oldest ships which were of little value.

Among the most remarkable features of the coming manoeuvres will be the presence with the fleets of a waterplane depot ship, the Hermes, carrying three waterplanes. This is the first occasion on which aircraft have been used in these exercises.

In addition to the waterplanes aloft a certain number of the machines stationed around the coast will be employed.

The new boats of the E class of submarine will be seen at sea for the first time in manoeuvres. They are of about 800 tons and carry two guns in addition to four torpedo tubes. Their radius of action is not less than 1,600 miles, and they are worthy to be described as ocean-going submarines.—Daily Mirror, July 9.

Sea-Fowls' Eggs.

The gathering of the sea fowls' eggs on the English coast is a perilous work engaged in by the Yorkshire cliff climbers. At the approach of spring the climbers make preparations to gather the eggs of the myriads of sea fowl that build their nests in the dizzy precipices of the north-eastern coast. The chalk cliffs sometimes tower 400 feet above the sea. Here thousands of gulls, kittiwakes, comorants and other sea birds have their nests in the rough chalky crevices. The egg gatherer, a man of nerve and agility, prepares for his work by placing on his head an old helmet for protection from the pieces of rock which may be dislodged by the rope from which he is suspended in mid-air. Next he buckles a kind of leather hammock around his body, in which he sits. His arms are protected by leather protectors.

When he is fully equipped he is slowly lowered over the edge of the cliff in an almost horizontal position and presses each foot firmly against the chalk surface. Three men hold the rope and foot by foot the gatherer is lowered. As he swings from nest to nest he puts each egg carefully in a bag slung over his shoulder. As soon as the bag is full he gives the "hoist up" signal and the men haul him up. Sometimes several descents are made a day, and when the day's work is over the myriads are divided up, and the eggs are afterwards sold to the neighboring villagers for eating purposes. Bempton, a few miles from Bridlington, is the favorite resort of these egg hunters. William Wilkinson, who has pursued this perilous calling for many years, is known as "the king of the egg hunters."—The Steward.

Investment News.
St. John's, July 23rd, 1913.

Young Men Should Start An Investment Now

Do not think that it is necessary to have a considerable surplus before you can start investing. While this amount is accumulating unforeseen uses will develop and the desired sum is a long time being reached.

Much the better plan is to invest small sums as you save them. Thus your holdings and dividends are steadily being increased and your savings have not slipped away unaccounted for.

And Start With Maritime Nail Pref'd Stock

Only one-quarter of the purchase price need be paid down and the balance in three payments each two months apart. We know of no more attractive industrial issue than this.

Dividends are 7 per cent. Cumulative. The 50 per cent. Common Stock Bonus adds a further reason why a "start" should be made now. Ask our Halifax office for the special circular which tells how.

Remarkable Gift of Crippled Nun.

Milan, July 14.—There has just died at Viterbo Sister Maria Nenedetta, a nun, whose real name was Miss Penelope Frey, and concerning whom many extraordinary stories are related.

These are chiefly founded upon her alleged possession in a remarkable degree of the power of second-sight. This power, it is believed among the people, enabled her to foretell many events, and in consequence her death has created a great impression in the quiet old town.

Maria Nenedetta's life was one of great suffering.

Soon after entering the convent where she died, a painful spinal malady attacked her, and for a period of fifty years she is said to have lain in a specially constructed bed, in her little cell, her head always resting in a kind of loop made by broad bands of linen hanging from the ceiling. Her supposed gift of prophesy, was, according to general report, first exhibited in 1900, when she foretold to a horrified audience of members of the convent community the assassination of King Humbert.

So great was her fame that special permission was granted to her to receive pilgrims, who came to visit the convent. At another time she is said to have foretold the death of Cardinal Bébini, bishop of Viterbo; the bishop had sent a gift of tapers to the convent. On hearing this, Maria Nenedetta said with deep emotion that she could see those very candles being used at the funeral of the giver. This prophesy is recorded to have been fulfilled two days later. The elevation of Pius X. to the papal chair and the Messina earthquake were two of the events she correctly foretold.

No fewer than 30,000 mourners attended the funeral.

Men Who Own London

A list of the largest ground landlords in the County of London, the area of which is 116 square miles, was given at the London County Council meeting yesterday as follows:

Over 1,280 acres each, Lord Northbrook (Eltham) and Dulwich College.

Over 960 acres each, Lord St. Germans (Blackheath); Mr. H. W. Forsor (Lewisham); Mr. H. T. B. Benson (Finsbury); and Sir Spencer Mayson-Wilson (Hampstead and Charlton).

Over 480 acres, Duke of Westminster (Finsbury).

Over 320 acres each, Lord Lartmouth (St. Pancras and Lewisham); Prudential Assurance Company (various districts); and Magdalen College, Oxford (Wandsworth).

The total number of owners was given as 32,000 (the population in 1911 was 4,522,000); the number of individuals owning one house each as about 14,000; and of those owning five acres or more 700. The area held by railway companies and public authorities was about twenty-two square miles.—Daily Mirror, July 9.

Hercules.

Hercules was a citizen of ancient Greece who invented the strappo hold and used it on everybody with whom he came in contact. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. Zeus, but he always preferred to be called by his first name. Hercules has been immortalized in numerous ways and is used quite liberally to advertise sundries and stumps pullers. So far as is known he never sat for his photograph and therefore people had to draw plaster of paris pictures of him from memory. One of the most popular of these shows him reclining on an elm club in a bathing suit and an attitude of extreme ennui.

Hercules was endowed at birth with a surplus fund of muscle, which he threw around with the utmost recklessness. One of the very first uses he made of this muscle was to rise up in his cradle and strangle two thick and sinuous serpents which had been sent to assassinate him. Nobody could care for Hercules as a baby without the danger of being unpremeditatedly caved in.

When Hercules got his growth he gave a public exhibition of his strength in order to show up Samson, Barnum's giant and other imitators. Atlas asked him to hold up the world while he went to spend a week end with some relatives, and Hercules did so without removing his coat or vest or jarring anybody off his home hemisphere.

Probably the best thing Hercules ever did was to purify the Augean stables. These were a celebrated livery barn which had not been purified to any extent for several thousand years, and the neighbours petitioned the city council to take action. Hercules was hired to do the purifying, and was obliged to run a large river through it and drown a number of innocent milk cows. The Augean stables refused to remain clean, however, and now we do our purifying in a different manner, by electing somebody every four years who will fill the second class post offices with new brooms.

Hercules seems to have had trouble with his wife, for one day she rubbed poison into his spring suit. When Hercules discovered it he did not apply for a divorce, being pressed for time, but ignited himself and several cords of dry wood at one and the same time with the most flattering success. This method of getting rid of a husband is still used wherever there is any considerable amount of life insurance involved.

The Living Wage and The Living Rate!

(By Theodore Roosevelt, in the 'Out-look,' New York.)

Recently certain railway men petitioned the Inter-State Commerce Commission to be allowed to raise rates. It is announced that the Inter-State Commerce Commission is to look into the case. This makes it opportune to say a word or two on the subject; for the ability of the honestly managed railway of the country to render good service to the public and to pay good wages to their employees ultimately depends upon there being a reasonable return to the honest investors, which means that the railways must possess a good earning power, which largely depends on the rates. The very big investor, like the very big shipper and the very high grade wage-worker, can usually get along somehow even under adverse conditions; but for the sake of the small or ordinary investor there is need of a living rate just as there is need of a living wage for the average workman. The living wage and the living rate are interdependent.

There are railways which have been so foolishly or so corruptly organized and managed that it is impossible for investors in them to get adequate return for their investments; just as it would be impossible for them to do so if they had acted foolishly, or had been the victims of swindling, in connection with a dry goods store, or any other business enterprise. The public must not be expected to sacrifice its own interests and the interests of wage-workers in order to pay dividends on watered stock, or to secure promoters and managers against the consequences of their own folly. What I have to say does not concern railways of this stamp.

But it must be a cardinal principle in dealing with honestly built and wisely managed railways that the investor, the shareholder, is just as much entitled to protection as is the wage-worker, the shipper, or the representatives of the general public. Unless the investor finds that he is to get a fair return on his money, he will not invest, and in such case not only will new railways be built but existing railways will not be able to repair the waste, the wear and tear to which they are subject, and will not be able to make needed improvements. All governmental action, whether by the legislature or the executive, should be conditioned upon keeping in view this fact.

By actual experience it has been found that it is unsafe to leave the wage-worker, the shipper, and the general public, and furthermore that it is unsafe to leave the small investor or himself, at the mercy of the big man who manages railways. But on certain points the interests of the big man and the small investor are identical. On certain other points the only way of securing permanent justice to each class is by giving permanent justice to all classes. The public can be well served, and the wage-workers can be well paid, only if the railway is successful, that is, if there is such certainty of reasonable dividends as to make investors content, and therefore willing and desirous to invest, in further developments and enterprises.

This is a sufficiently obvious fact, but it is a fact often in practice forgotten. In certain cases workmen's compensation laws and full crew bills are passed by legislatures at the same time that rates are reduced by commissions, or indeed sometimes by legislative enactment until the property ceases to pay. Now a cardinal point made by all enlightened advocates of such laws as workmen's compensation and the like has always been that the burden is to be distributed through the corporation upon the public. Public Service Commissions are created for the very purpose of supervising, controlling, and regulating the activities of the railways so that they shall not only be obliged to treat their employees, the shareholders, and the general public fairly, but shall be guaranteed fair treatment themselves in return. Some railways are so remunerative that it is fair to reduce their rates at the same time that we increase their burdens. There are, however, other railways as to which the only effective way to distribute the burden of payment for extra safety to employees and the public, and extra compensation to and care of the workers, is by rendering the service more remunerative; and this may of necessity mean raising rates. It is just as much the duty of the Commission to permit rates to be raised when the raise is justifiable as to require them to be lowered if the lowering is justifiable. The Commission is created precisely because this is the kind of work that no legislative body could with wisdom perform. The Commission is not true servant of the public unless it unhesitatingly raises the rates when justice in the public interest requires such action, and unhesitatingly lowers the rates when this is the course which will ultimately best meet the public needs.

This is merely part of the general doctrine of administrative control of big corporations. The control should not be hostile to the corporation; it should merely be hostile to any misconduct on the part of the corporation, and it should protect the corporation against misconduct aimed at it exactly as it protects others from misconduct committed by it. Unless the corporation makes money—that is, unless business men are prosperous—there will be no money to give in proper wages for the wage-worker, there will be no money with which to provide for his protection, and to insure him against loss and damage and no money wherewith to render proper service to the customer and to the public as a whole. Whether the reward comes in the way of big salary to the big manager who makes the business a success, or of dividends to the big or small man who invests money in it, the principle is the same. Our purpose is to see that there is a proper division of prosperity. But there can be no division unless the prosperity is there to divide. One of the methods by which they prosper will certainly be abolished is to draw the line against size and efficiency instead of against misconduct. Another way to destroy it is to impose burdens, however necessary and proper, without facing the fact that some one must pay for the burdens, and that if the investor cannot pay for them and at the same time get a reasonable return on his investment, then either the business will close or the public must share the burden with the investor.

In the concrete case before us it is for the Commission to determine with strict justice to all parties how the relative and often conflicting demands of the shareholders, the wage-workers, the shippers, and the general public can properly be met. I am not discussing—I have not the knowledge which would warrant my discussing—whether the rates should be raised. All the facts do not warrant a raise; then the rate should not be permitted, but, if justice and the interest of our people as a whole demand a raise in rates, then that raise in rates should unhesitatingly be authorized.

Household Notes.

Rouge powder is the best cleaner for tortoise shell ornaments. Delicate colors should be dried in the house, or at least in the shade.

Nasturtium leaves make a savory sandwich, which is good for a change. Alum in the rinsing water will prevent green-colored dresses from fading.

Air and sunshine are beneficial to the hair, but extreme heat will fade and burn it.

Grease spots may be removed from gowns and draperies with the help of French chalk.

A mixture of rainwater, lavender and benzoin is an excellent remedy for a sunburned skin.

If the rings on a curtain pole stick when you draw the curtains, rub the poles with paraffin.

The hair should always be brushed out and left free at night, that the air may circulate.

Hosiery should be pinned to the clothesline by the open end of the stocking instead of the toe.

Printed linen chintzes, so much liked for summer house furnishings, may be washed indefinitely.

The fashionable voiles with raised dots or figures should always be ironed on the wrong side.

To clean Spanish lace, rub the lace in dry flour, then take it outdoors and shake all the flour out.

In measuring a room for wall paper, remember to allow for a great deal of waste if the pattern is a large one.

A solution of orange shellac and alcohol applied to the heels of white shoes will leave them with a satiny finish.

All summer dresses should either be froged till dry, or thoroughly aired after ironing, if you would avoid creases.

An excellent simple dessert is gelatine prepared as if for coffee jelly, but with cherry juice instead of the coffee.

A cooling lotion for sunburn and freckles is made with six ounces rose-water and two drams of tincture of benzoin.

Tomato shells filled with minced apple and celery smothered in mayonnaise makes a good hot weather substitute for salad.

White-painted wooden curtain poles of the smallest size make good substitutes for the expensive glass or nickel bathroom rods.

Purse of beans is made by rubbing well-cooked haricot-beans through a sieve and adding some good cream, pepper, butter and salt.

Dresses as Boy, Wins Her Rival

Wheeling, W. Va., July 12.—Miss Bessie McIntyre, 18, was fitted two weeks ago by Henry Pendleton, a well-known young business man from whom she had received attention for two years. He simply told her he had become engaged to another girl. This other girl proved to be Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, O., just across the river from this city. Although failing to understand her request, Miss McIntyre's parents gave her permission to have her hair cut off. Then she donned a suit of her brother's clothing, visited Bridgeport and through a friend met Miss Aiken.

It was a case of love at first sight on the part of the Bridgeport girl, Miss McIntyre, who was misapprehending as "Lawrence Bessie." was a devoted lover and every night would Lawrence at the Aiken home.

Last Sunday night, while Lawrence and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Spurred on by her new found suitor, Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to see her again. She then confessed her love for her "Lawrence."

Last night Miss McIntyre dressed in a gown of the latest mode, met Miss Aiken on Market street, this city. The recognition was mutual. Before Miss Aiken could speak, Miss McIntyre eloquently told her how she had revenged herself. In a moment the pair were at one another's throats and were only separated by the police. Both were discharged in the court with a reprimand.

Peace to His Ashes

The grave grass is growing over Luther McCarthy, whose shining career was the talk of the land; a buff on the neck from Pellysome party extinguished the light of this pugilist grand. He stood in the ring in the pride of his muscle, unconquered, triumphant, his surname was Rex; and after one minute of action and tussle, the doctors were saying: "He's cashed in his checks." Now where are his dreams of the oulpetic pusses, his visions of triumph, admirers, around? All gone—they are gone where the sable plumed hearse are bearing dead men to their homes in the ground. Oh, ye who are mighty and brawny and hearty, who hope in the ring to accomplish a fame, consider the passing of Luther McCarthy, the bolt that destroyed him, and sidestepped the game! Stay home on the farm, far away from the riot, and toil with the pitchfork, an excellent tool, for there you may dwell in contentment and quiet, till some day you're kicked through a fence by a mule. Stay home in your village, intelligent voter, and gather the henfruit and play with the dog, until you're run down by a plutocrat's motor, and carried away on a door to the morgue. Let visions of fingercraft and swats be rejected—just think of McCarthy, all silent and dead! And maybe some day, when it's most unexpected, a shotgun unloaded will blow off your head.

Practice More, Preach Less.

A sermon to politicians is preached by the Editor of the World's Work.

The text of his sermon is that they should practise more and preach less. "Go to your home, to any place where you have power and a name, to do there, in little, what you have failed to do at Westminster on a large scale. You will be a greater man in the end and a nobler man to-day if you practice a fragment of your policy in your own clear person in your own small sphere, than if you preached the whole of it from January 1st to December 31st to a world that has dubbed you a politician."

Fifteen Year Old ri Murdered

In the Manitoba Bush.

Winnipeg, July 10.—Word has just reached the city of the finding last night of the murdered body of Doris Evelyn Inman, the 15-year-old daughter of Alfred Inman, at Cunton, Manitoba, a village on the Arborg branch of the C. P. R., 35 miles north of here.

The girl was employed on the farm of W. C. Ross and on Dominion day got a day off to visit her parents. Towards evening she left the home of her parents to return to the farm and had not been seen since. Her disappearance was unknown to either her parents or employers, the one believing she was at the home of the other.

A half demented man, well known in the vicinity and considered harmless has been missing for the past few days and it is believed it was he who committed the crime. The child fought hard for her life as there were evidences of a struggle, and the victim was dragged a matter of hundreds of yards into the brush. The suspect, name unknown, is still at large.

One of Two Evils.

The Rev. Sylvester Horne, who is associated with the Whitefield's Tabernacle, London, Eng., is numbered amongst the most eloquent of Non-conformist ministers. As a publicist also his pronouncements invariably attract attention, and he has met with gratifying success in the House of Commons.

When Mr. Horne was returned for Ipswich in 1910 he enjoyed the reputation of being the only active Congregational M. P. and in this connection he tells an amusing story against himself. One of his canvassers when going the rounds came across a workman intently studying the portraits of the two candidates.

"Well, what do you think of them?" asked the canvasser. The workman merely shrugged his shoulders by way of reply. "What candidate do you intend to vote for?" persisted the canvasser. "Don't know anything about none of them," replied the elector. "But what I seen of 'em, I thank 'Eaven as only one can get in."

Lived 12 Days Under Altar.

Escaped Asylum Patient Found Refuge in St. Mark's Church, London Junction, Ont., and Subsisted on Communion Wine and Water.

London, Ont., July 14.—Mary Conner, a patient of the London Hospital for the Insane, who, while visiting at the home of her father on Mary St., London, escaped, on Dominion Day, was found on Saturday night under the communion table of St. Mark's Anglican Church, London Junction, having gone twelve days without food.

Miss Conner was in an exhausted condition, but is now at the hospital at London Asylum, and is reported to be physically improved.

During the first couple of days she lived on communion wine, and when this ran out she drank a quantity of water which had been left in the church by a party of picnicers. Since Wednesday, however, she had been without food or water. She was fortunately discovered when the sexton moved the church furniture for a periodical cleaning.

Was Killed by Gamsters.

"Moses the Strong Arm" Met Violent Death on Busy Street Corner in Broad Daylight.

New York, July 11.—Four gangsters intercepted Morris Reich, known to the police as "Moses the strong arm," on a crowded east side corner late yesterday and two knife thrusts and revolver wounds in the chest and back ended his career on the spot. A gang fight is believed to have been the cause of the murder. After the shooting the assailants separated and fled. David Wolf and Jack Willis, the latter a sixteen year old boy, were later arrested, charged with being members of the gang which participated in the murder.

Another gangster, Peter McCabe, said to be a leader of the so-called Gopher gang, was shot and killed on Staten Island by a special policeman, Thomas Bananza. The latter, who is being held on a charge of manslaughter, claims he was attacked by McCabe and two other members of the gang, and shot in self-defence.

Wanted the Analysis.

Weary Willie presented himself at the farm house door and humbly requested the sharp-faced woman to provide him with enough food to sustain within him the spark of life. He explained that while this spark was not especially useful at that time, he had ambitions, and expected to fan it into a flame of industry which would fully justify any kindness on her part.

The farmer's wife was not at all impressed with Willie's plea, and emitted a long, shrill denunciation of any man who was unwilling to haul himself out of bed at 4 o'clock in the morning and work feverishly until 9 o'clock at night, capping off the day's recreation by finding the cat and giving her a saucer of milk. Finally, however, she indignantly flung Willie an uninviting looking hunk of mince pie.

The next day he returned and said to the sharp-faced woman in a tone of great respect—"Would you be kind enough to give me the recipe for the mince pie I got here yesterday?" "The idea!" said the woman, and launched into a terrific howl against Willie's impudence. "Well," explained the tramp, "I just wanted to settle a bet. My partner says you used three cups of Portland cement to one of molasses, but I claim it's only two and a half."

Mutiny Signal.

Comedy of a Gunboat and a Barge. How a gunboat sent a cutter of armed men in response to a mutiny signal from a barge was told at Grimsby yesterday when Herbert Head, seaman, was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour for continued disobedience to the orders of the master of the London barge Oceanic.

On a voyage from the Thames to Grimsby, it was stated, Head refused to obey orders. When off the Humber he threatened the master with a chopper, and afterwards pursued the master and the mate round the deck with a hammer. The master drew a revolver, but Head said: "Shoot away. You'll get 'time' for manslaughter."

At last the mate signalled to a gunboat in the offing, and in response to the flag message "Mutiny, send assistance," a cutter of armed men was despatched. Head took refuge in the cabin, and still holding the hammer, sat defying every one until the vessel sailed into port, when he surrendered to the police.

The Emperor William, speaking at the North German Yacht Club, said: "Among the acts of homage to me at my Jubilee I still see clearly the day at Grunau when the representatives of more than 50,000 German of which I am proud. When I came to the Throne there were eight schools which devoted themselves to rowing. Now there are 360. That gives us the youth that we want. Not supermen, but healthy men, with healthy limbs and healthy moral views. And now this scene on the Elbe."
