CHAPTER VI.

His meal, only half finished, was pushed aside. His first pint of All-sop already consumed, a second was being uncorked by a waiter as the major drew near. So preoccupied was he in twirling the end of his long brown mustache, and staring at rather than studying the 'Times' supplement, that his father approached unnoticed and had sat down in front of him before he recognized with a stare who was nigh.

"Why you want a whiff of fresh air my lad," said the major, kindly, reaching over the table to shake hands. "London in this hot weather is a teaser. Why don't you run down a dine with me oftener—eh?"

Perhaps a perfectly candid answer to this would have been awkward, or, so suddenly questioned, Mr. Rupert had no satisfactory excuse ready. Anyhow, he returned only an uneasy laugh, and a disjointed assurance that he was all right—"didn't feel the heat; only happened to have a plague of a headache this morning."

"Then that won't cure it," said the major, pushing aside the ale.

"No, thanks; I won't take it myself. I stick to my rule. Nothing before dinner, very little after. I learned dietetics in India, you know, and advise you to profit by my experience. But you look out of sorts"—anxiously, for the old officer was very fond of his one son. "Are you getting late hours? Is there extra work on at the office?"

"Oh, no! nothing particular doing there," returned Mr. Rupert, pulling himself together under his father's scrutiny, and judiciously answering the last cause of his question. "And I'm all right. I assure you. What brings you up here to-day?"

Now the major, like many a brave man, was no social tactician. He had a trick of going straight at his mark, which sometimes decomposed his son amazingly—the present occasion was no exception. Taking Mrs. Alwyn's letter from his pocket, he tapped it, addressed downward, with some solemnity, and pushing aside the cruet and covers, leaned forward with—

"Here's what brought me. Something rather serious that I want a few words with you over. The sooner the better."

At these portentous sentences Mr. Rupert Villiers changed color. More than one spectral bill not included in the last over-heavy schedule that he had submitted to his father reproached his memory. A horrible dread stirred within him that a certain florist's account might have got round to the major, for he had been ass enough that season to bequeath with bouquets a fair cantatrice, who never so much as wasted a thought on where her Marchale Niels and lilies and ferns came from so regularly, nor had ever repaid his costly offerings with a single special smile. A fear shot through him that a transaction involving an IOU to one young Tuffter—a friend the major cared for little—might have reached paternal ears; and a guilty recollection overcame him that he had as good as given his word never again to meddle with a fascinating game called "Nap."

All these and many another qualm gave the young man a bad sixty seconds, and when the letter was passed over to him, with a low but emphatic "Just read that, and let me hear what you have to say about it," the fingers with which he opened Mrs. Alwyn's epistle positively shook with apprehension. But the writing and a rapid glance at the signature relieved him unspcakably. The whole quickly scanned, he breathed freely again though a new species of dilemma was now upon him. The careless laxity of his life en garçon so unexpectedly stormed, all the charms of that unfettered condition shone forth bewitchingly. All the entanglement he had just now quaked at modestly took themselves to the background. He felt, if not opposed to the project in no way enthusiastic over it, and showed as much by the shrug with which he re-folded and returned the letter to his father.

"I've only a quarter of an hour," he said, taking out his watch. "Suppose you walk my way with me, sir;" and arm-in-arm the two descended the club steps and betook themselves toward Pall Mall.

"Well?" said the elder man, impatiently, before they had gone many paces—his son's coolness nettled him. The matter had appeared to him so supremely important; he shouldn't advanced wisdom of a young generation, would have called "an amiable old muddle-head," he failed at first to discover where lay the pressing need to alter the household by marrying on any other change.

But that was only in the earliest hours of his reception, at the very onset, when Mrs. Alwyn was all graciousness, tempered with a slightly nervous anxiety as to how her overtures would be received and would prosper; when Leonora was posing as just a slightly ill-used damsel much tried, but far too truly sweet to turn ill-tempered on any provocation whatever; and when Sydney lingered more than ever in the background with a proud and wistful sad reserve begotten of her mother's injunction just as their guest was coming—"Remember Major Villiers is no relation of yours, my dear. He is a kind hearted man, and would very likely be inclined to make no difference between you and Leonora; but recollect he is her father's brother, not yours."

A very few days, however, under the same roof somewhat lowered this stilted style of intercourse. In the time Major Villiers took observation very diplomatically; made mental note of a bright, eager-eyed intelligence that never missed a single point in the old campaign stories he delighted in telling, though his own young relative, plaiting her prettiness, or twisting her many rings about, would put in her "how horrid!" or "how charming!" at exasperatingly wrong intervals; brought to bear upon the case the theory of his own concerning the impossibility of perfect amity existing between Celt and Saxon, setting Sydney down as the type of one, Leonora of the other, and secretly bestowing his preference on the first; and decided to his own complete satisfaction that this household would become a tuneful enough key-note in that other new home he had set his mind on rearing (To be Continued.)

have taken the offer of a pretty girl and six thousand pounds so calmly in his young days—"Well, Rupert, what do you think of it all?"

"I think, sir, it is very kind and complimentary of my aunt to wish to bestow on me the daughter she evidently wishes to be rid of."

"Now, my boy, no joking! The letter is frank enough, and we'll treat it courteously, if you please. I've no doubt the situation is awkward. Second marriages always lead to something of the sort. But do you feel any inclination to assist in altering it? That's the question."

"Well, you see, sir," demurred Mr. Rupert. "I know literally nothing of this little Sydney. I dare say she mayn't be little now, but she was when I was at St. Clair's for a couple of days five years ago. Just a slip of a girl, no particular beauty, especially beside Leonora. Rather awkward, and very shy."

"Oh, she'll be altered, she'll be altered!" interposed the major, who had pondered himself into vehemently desiring the match; "I shall see her before you make the least sign, you know, and I promise you I won't send you a wooing unless I like the look of the fair lady. Her father was a handsome man, perhaps she has grown like him. And then there's the money to consider. Of course, we must tie it to herself, but a wife with an income of her own is an excellent thing for a young man, let me tell you. You'd best not turn your back on a chance you may never get again. Master Rupert. It appears to me you treat this proposal too off-handedly."

"And it appears to me," returned his son, laughing outright at the elder man's evident eagerness, "that you are determined, my dear sir, on this young person and myself becoming husband and wife! May I ask you if you've definitely determined on our wedding day?"

"Now, nonsense, nonsense, lad!" said the father. "I'm neither such a tonkey nor despot! I'm only putting the matter before you as it's my duty to do. Why, Sydney is only twenty. If you see her and take a fancy to her, you'd have a year to go love-making, off and on at your leisure; and I should think," with a proud, paternal look at the young man, who was certainly good-looking, though the general effect of his appearance might owe a good deal to his tailor—"I should think you could get her to say 'yes' in that time. Then we could have the marrying, take a little house up Richmond way, and I've got a few pounds I could square your last bachelor bills with, and you'd have a good prospect in life as I ought to expect, or you ought to desire. So, what shall it be? Shall I write back and chime in with your aunt's idea, or shall I give the whole concern the cold shoulder?"

The major had put the advantage of the whole concern very neatly. A glimpse in a corner flower-shop of a ravishing arrangement of ferns and gardens ordered by himself the day before, and a significant salutation waited to him by his friend Tuffter, who just then whisked by in a hansom, recalled sundry very present and irksome obligations to Mr. Rupert. The governor was a good old liberal soul, he thought, with some compunction. And a year, if he drew in directly, would give him time to get quit of some of his least mentionable debts out of his own income. He'd better make a virtue of necessity, then.

"You and my aunt are a pair of conspirators," he said, with an air of "Well, to please you, I'll give in!" "So go on your visit of inspection, sir, by all means. But whatever you do, commit me to nothing yet by so much as a shadow of a hint. If you drop a line when you're coming back, I'll meet you and hear your report. There's the workshop. This is my door. Good-bye, sir." And the major, well pleased with this first step of the negotiations, went back to Petersham, and wrote off to his sister-in-law, fixing Monday in the following week for his visit to St. Clair's.

CHAPTER VII.

Following his letter in due course, the major arrived at The Dale on what he termed his reconnoitering expedition, and being in most matters appertaining to the opposite sex no more than what his son, with the

Distinction Without a Difference
By RUTH CAMELON.

Did you ever notice how often people from different sections of the country have different meanings for the same thing? Theoretically it is the same English language which is spoken in England and all over the United States and Canada. But actually the same words have a different meaning, and the same facts are expressed in a different way in different places.

For instance, an Englishman was commenting on the weather to an American one day. "When I was in the North," he said, "we had 42 degrees of frost." Eventually the American discovered that he meant that it was 42 degrees below freezing point. Or, as he himself would have put it 19 degrees below zero. And that, he subsequently discovered, is the fashion in which Englishmen always read the thermometer, only I believe they call it the glass.

Again, a little dark room in which one hangs one's clothes has always been a closet to me. But since I have mingled with people from other sections of the country I find that it is a clothes press to many of them.

Ordinary bread baked in biscuit form is biscuit to a Northerner. To the Southerner that word means baking powder biscuit only, while the Northern biscuit he calls rolls.

To call another example from the culinary field, what I have always called doughnuts I find that people from other parts of the country usually know under the name crullers.

The outside hanging in a window is called by some people a curtain. Although I have always been of this class, I must admit it is ambiguous since the thin draperies are also known as curtains, and one must say lace curtain in order to make the distinction plain. "Shade" is the word used by others, and still others say "draw the blind." The last seems as ambiguous as the first to me since it can be confused with the blind on the outside of the house. However, on making this complaint to a member of the "blind" cult, I was informed that there was no ambiguity, since the protection on the outside of the window which I call a blind, he calls a shutter.

If you want to make an elevator sound distinguished you should call it a lift. I think that is more a distinction of class than of section. For the ordinary business man who uses it every day it is an elevator; to the gentleman of leisure who only comes down town occasionally it is a lift.

Jack and nabe on the other hand seem to be an English and American distinction.

These are a few of the little differences I have noted down from time to time. Doubtless you can add others quite as interesting which have attracted your notice.

Why Men Learn to Fly!

AN AVIATION INSTRUCTOR TALKS ABOUT HIS PUPILS.

Men learn to fly nowadays for all sorts of extraordinary reasons, remarked a well-known aviation instructor to Mr. P. Doublyou one day recently.

For instance, one of my pupils spent six months perfecting himself in the art so as to be able to take up a certain young lady as a passenger, and propose to her while in the air.

She accepted his proposal, but on condition that he promised never to fly again. To this he had no objection to agree, so that his novel method of popping the question cost him in hard cash about $200.

Mr. T. Sopwith wanted to be the first man to fly to the King. He got his "ticket"—aviators never call it a "certificate"—in November, 1910, and flew from Brooklands to Windsor Castle on February 1st, 1911, where King George received him in the kindest manner possible, although the visit was quite unexpected.

Mr. C. O'Hara Peterson, an enthusiastic sportsman, learnt to fly because it was his ambition to be the first man to attend the Waterloo Cup meeting by aeroplane. Didier Masson the American aviator, wanted his name to go down to posterity as the first aerial postman.

Quite recently the rage amongst aviators has lain in the direction of fancy flights, or "stunt flying," as we call it. But this sort of thing costs money, for not only are special machines required, but the course of instruction runs into anything between 150 to 300 pounds, as against the usual 75 pounds for ordinary tuition.

Famous "Pint of Cough Syrup" Recipe
No Better Remedy at Any Price. Fully Guaranteed.

Make a plain syrup by mixing two eggs of granulated sugar and one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents) worth in a 16-ounce bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup. This gives you a handy supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of 42. It never spoils. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold instantly, and will usually stop the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. It tones up the whole system and is just as effective enough to be helpful in a cough, and has a pleasing taste. Also excellent for bronchial trouble, throat tickle, sore lungs and asthma, and an unequalled remedy for whooping cough and croup.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) is a prime favorite in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has been limited, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in pineoil and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this recipe.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly returned, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Fads and Fashions.

There are a few changes in blouses, but almost without exception the loose kimono style prevails.

Babies' hats are smaller in shape, nesting close to winsome curls, and they may flare slightly at the sides.

The favourite trimmings for apron hats are flowers, fruits, striped quills, ribbon fantasies, wings, small bluish tips and jet.

In millinery is found small shapes that are turned and twisted away from the head; also extremely high turbans.

There are some draped styles making their appearance that emphasize the vogue for polonaise and overskirt fashions.

Fashion has reduced the bodice of evening gowns until nothing remains but narrow strips of lace extending over the shoulders.

Shallow collars of crepe de chine with picot edges will be worn with the frocks of taffeta, crepe de chine and charmeuse.

Some of the new blouses have yokes that extend across the back and shoulders, sometimes forming half of the upper sleeve.

The new frocks of wash material are cut with low neck lines that require a gumpie, or they follow the lines of the jumper.

The plaque-shaped hat is attracting much attention at present. It is almost flat on top and elevated by a bandeau at the side back.

The skirt with the winding flounce craperies will be very much worn. These skirts have a ruffle winding around the figure in serpentine fashion.

Afternoon wraps are frequently of taffeta, quilled and ruffled with elaborate neck ruffs or hood collars that show to advantage a bit of bright lining.

This year there is no depending on the waist line. It has lost its stability; it goes up and down, and is entirely the mercy of the type of gown worn.

The note of contrast is still sounded where street costumes are concerned; the smartest models have skirts of checked material and jackets of plain.

There is no prettier neckwear than the white lace inserted or embroidered, or perfectly plain hemstitched affairs made of white lawns, mulls and organdies.

Many of the thin blouses have very full sleeves attached to the bishop-shaped, 10 inch lace inserted or embroidered cuffs. The latter are edged with wide fluted frills.

Children who are well dressed no longer appear in elaborate lace and ribbon trimmed frocks. Modern mothers display good taste in selecting dresses of charming simplicity.

Charming effects are being obtained with Roman-striped materials. Many handsome afternoon frocks are developed in taffeta or satin, with tunic and half bodices of the striped silk.

A really clever stunt flyer, however, can count upon quickly recouping himself for his initial expenditure, for his services are everywhere in demand at big fees. For example, Mr. B. C. Hicks, the first Englishman to "loop the loop," is booked right up to the end of 1914, when, if still alive, he will be able to retire, should he wish to do so, on a quite comfortable competency.

Hicks may be termed a "flying free lance" in that he sells his services to the highest bidder, like Hamel, and quite a number of other equally well-known aviators.

Other experts, however, prefer to engage themselves for a term of years to some one or other of the leading aviation companies. This, Mr. E. W. Godden, who has made many record flights in the air both on biplanes and monoplanes, and who once came down in a parachute from the record height of 10,700 feet, drifting twenty miles meanwhile, is content with the post of chief instructor of the Ewen Flying Schools at Hendon.

Others join the reserve of the Royal Flying Corps, or take service with foreign governments, or go to the colonies or elsewhere to start flying schools or aerodromes of their own. Still, it must be confessed that the profession, like most others shows a tendency to become overcrowded.

Nor is this to be wondered at, considering the enormous increase there has been in the number of pilots within the last few years. In the beginning of 1908 the world's flying men numbered exactly four. By the end of 1911 there were about 3,000. And now we are nearing the 5,000 mark.

Silent Men are the Flyers.

A proportion of these, however, are diffident, who never ought to have taken to flight. The aviators who really count are still comparatively few. These are the silent, reserved men who take their profession seriously and believe in deeds rather than in words. It is a saying amongst aviators that parrots are the only birds that talk, and they are not good flyers.

Sheer funk precludes a considerable proportion of men from ever learning to fly properly. The roar of the engine, the rush of the wind, and the terrific speed at which the modern aeroplane travels, unnerves them. I have even known cases where pupils, after paying their tuition fees, absolutely decline to leave mother earth.

The curious part of it is that this type of pupil often shows the greatest amount of promise in the preliminary stages. He masters quickly the mechanism of the motor, which is the metal heart of the aeroplane. He listens attentively to all the instructions, and is quick to grasp the warpings, too sudden stoppages, and so on. In short, he grasps quite readily the theory of flight. Yet when it comes to putting his newly acquired knowledge into practice, he proves himself to be hopelessly and permanently inefficient.—P.W.

Czar's Campaign Against Drunkenness.

We recently published a grim Russian cartoon showing that Russian roads were being made of vodka bottles. The enormous revenue from the sale of drink pays for the roads. Now these vodka bottles have led to the dismissal of the Russian Prime Minister, M. Kokotoff, by the Czar, and also his removal from the Finance Ministry, with which he has been associated for twenty years.

At the present moment the Russian government receives as its share from the consumption of vodka the enormous sum of £100,000,000.

What the Czar Saw.

Dr. E. J. Dillon, in the Telegraph says that the Czar was much moved by the spectacle of the material squalor and moral degradation caused by the drunkenness which he himself beheld during his journey throughout the Russian provinces.

"The Emperor's impressions on the spot were deepened by statistics laid before the Council of the Empire by Count Witte, who, although himself the creator of the Government monopoly of alcohol, inveighed against the spread of intemperance, which, he alleged is to be ascribed to the abuses which have been allowed to creep into the system."

"Count Witte's statement is that when he quitted the Finance Ministry the Russian Government received from the consumption of vodka £50,000,000 annually, whereas to-day, it harvests in £100,000,000, and his contention is that no Christian State should be dependent for existence upon the spread of drunkenness among its subjects. And this view is adopted by his Majesty in his rescript to the new Finance Minister—M. Bark.

"The Emperor's publicly announced resolve not to tolerate this condition of things any longer has produced a most favourable impression throughout the country, and has considerably increased the prestige of monarchism in Russia. He has enjoined the new Minister of Finance to reorganize the entire system, and enable the Government not only to dispense with national intemperance as a recognized and principal source of revenue, but to adopt efficacious means of extirpating this vice, and affording the peasantry the opportunity of displaying the high qualities of mind and body that characterize them.

"The energetic mode of procedure which the Emperor adopted is understood to have been suggested by the shrewdest of his official advisers, the Minister of Agriculture, M. Krivoshyev, who would doubtless have been appointed to the post of Premier had he not been obliged by his doctors to go abroad for two months for medical treatment, and who, if his health be restored sufficiently to enable him to take over the reins of Government, will become Prime Minister soon after his return. The new Premier is M. Gorenvkin.

"Illicit traffic in spirits and drinking on the streets, which, says Count Witte, distinguish the Russian towns, including the capital, from all foreign cities, have frightfully increased.

"A recent report by the Governor of St. Petersburg province described the alarming spread of drunkenness and bootlegging in the surrounding villages. Even the school girls in some places are reported to have taken to drinking. The President of the State Council, in opening the discussion on the bill dealing with this evil, declared that they were all agreed that drunkenness was undermining the strength of the Russian people, physically and morally.

"The dismissed Premier's capacity for work," says Dr. Dillon, "bordered on the miraculous. From early morning to the late hours of night he was immersed in work, yet never refused to talk with anyone who had anything to say worth hearing. He hardly ever absent himself from the Ministry, even in vacation time, and while still in the best of health, physical and mental, he abandons the work for which he has a veritable passion. No man in the Empire understands as he does the complicated machinery of taxation and the other equally difficult problems of the financial administration."—Public Opinion.

His Find a Deadly Revolver.

New York, March 24.—Antonio Tonnasulo, eight years, his brother Patricio, eleven, and Ludovico Carlo, also eleven, were playing in Tony's home at No. 159 Prince street about 6 o'clock last night, when Edward Riordan, eleven, of No. 417 West Broadway, ran in, carrying a revolver.

"See what I found in the cellar when I was chopping wood!" he cried. Then came a report and Tony fell with a bullet in his head. The Riordan boy ran. He was arrested hours afterward by Patrolman Cunningham of the Macdougall street station on a charge of juvenile delinquency. Tony died in St. Vincent Hospital.

Clears The Head, Opens The Nostrils Stops Sneezing, Cures Catarrh.

You Get Instant Relief by Inhaling the Soothing Vapor "Catarrhazone."

Catarrh is bound to come with this weather. Slight colds become more offensive and sickening every day. The inflammation extends further into the head. Soon the ears begin to buzz and ring. The head aches, the eyes pain dreadfully, the nose gets plugged up and this forces the patient to breathe through the mouth. Vile, filthy secretions are forced back into the throat, requiring a great deal of coughing to keep the air passages free. Finally, this foul matter finds its way into the stomach, causing dyspepsia and general ill-health. By this time the patient has SYSTEMATIC CATARRH, which saps strength, depletes the vital energies, and consumption is the unhappy result.

There isn't the slightest use in trying to cure this condition with tablets, snuff or spray. Such treatments are wholly inadequate. You must employ Catarrhazone the only remedy that possesses power to kill the germs of Catarrh. The healing vapor of Catarrhazone is carried by the air you breathe to the most minute cells of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Its antiseptic medication goes everywhere that air can go. No case is too chronic, no person too old—everybody that has catarrh of any kind can be cured by this grand treatment which is endorsed by thousands of physicians throughout America, who say: "The only way to permanently get rid of Catarrh is to use Catarrhazone."

TWO MONTHS' TREATMENT GUARANTEED TO CURE. PRICE $1.00; small size 50c.; trial size 25c. Sold by dealers everywhere.

Happy Schools.

The Montessori Method of Teaching. The title of "the most interesting woman in Europe" has been bestowed upon Mme. Maria Montessori, the Italian lady doctor whose system of teaching children has astonished the educational world.

She became attracted to the problem when, as assistant doctor at a Roman clinic, she noticed that feeble-minded children were herded with those who were actually insane. The sufferings of the fairly intelligent infants so impressed her that she threw up her medical work to take charge of an asylum for deficient and feeble-minded children, intending to conduct it on new principles she had thought out. The result was dramatic. One of her pupils, originally supposed to be half-witted, was sent, after her training, to the ordinary public school and passed in with higher marks than any of his companions. This happened several times, and Mme. Montessori realized that her system must be considerably superior to the one followed by most preparatory schools. She decided to apply it to normal children, and re-entered the University of Rome for three years to supplement her knowledge. It seemed to her the whole world of children were crying for help.

In 1907, in one of the poorest districts of Rome, inhabited by the vicious and criminal, she opened her first school. To all appearance it is just a large nursery, where children either sit in little chairs or sprawl on the floor on mats playing with wooden blocks, pieces of colored silk, buttons, and other fascinating objects to the child mind.

They Love Learning.

One of them is engaged in a new and absorbing game. He has in front of him smooth pieces of cardboard on each of which is a letter in raised sandpaper. His eyes are blindfolded, which is part of the fun, and his chubby finger traces over the sandpaper outline, of which he has been told the name. He follows the outline again and again, until he barely needs the rough surface for guidance. He is learning to write! A few days hence, when the letter is called, the muscles of his little hand will instinctively move in the right direction.

If he feels bored, which really means tired, he will tear off his bandage and ask for something else to play with. That is the whole secret of Dr. Montessori's system. She develops the infant mind naturally, encouraging it to awaken from within rather than learn from without.

Because the children are not forced and driven, they learn to love school, and come gladly, even imploring a desire for knowledge in the hearts of their parents. One day a child at home, seeing a plate and butter on the table, cried out "Rectangle," and when the mother cut off a piece with a knife the child said, "Triangle."

The whole family were curious and came round known to what the words meant.

Rough and drunken parents who usually spend their evenings in wine shops stayed at home in the evening to learn for themselves the lessons which their children brought from school. Mothers became interested in the mysteries of writing, and timidly visited the school to acquire the art themselves.

Pupils began to despise playthings because they gave no chance to exercise their reasoning faculties, but they would preserve any odd scrap of paper that contained food for thought.

Better Health.

Most marvelous of all was the improvement in the health of the children. They grew plump and vigorous, and looked like the offspring of healthy parents living in the country rather than mites from the heart of the slums.

A happier school never existed, and it is now being copied all over the world. Teachers of all nationalities visit Mme. Montessori to learn her system, and the Franciscan schools and orphanages propose to adopt it.

After the Messina earthquake, the Franciscan nuns at Monteverde housed and cared for three hundred wild and half-civilized girl orphans who had been saved from the wrecked village, and ultimately turned them into well-mannered young ladies. If with all their experience, the nuns deliberately adopt a new system of education, there must be many exceptionally strong points to recommend it.

Case Settled.

JUDGMENT FOR PLAINTIFF.

The case between Mr. T. Kennedy, stevedore, and the agents and owners of the S. S. Parthenia in which the plaintiff claimed $120 for labour in unloading repair material for the Parthenia from the Dibley to the Bonaventure, was concluded before Judge Knight yesterday evening, judgment being entered in full for the plaintiff. Mr. Higgins, for plaintiff; Mr. Fenelon, for defendants.

President Wilson to-day declared that on account of the contradictory statements in the Baltimore platform democrats should have no hesitation in voting for the repeal of the Panama Canal tolls exemption. He characterized the exemption as a subsidy, and pointed out that one plank in the Baltimore platform expressed opposition to any subsidy. The President reiterated that exemption never was the policy of the democratic party in the House, because the tolls bill passed through a coalition of democrats and a minority of democrats.

The following report of the fishery on the Western Banks has been received:

"The total catch is 7,880 qtls. of codfish. No boats, dories or skiffs were able to fish this week, the stormy weather and presence of drift ice on the grounds preventing their going out. These conditions with stormy weather have kept the fishermen in port all the week. The usual supply of bait is obtainable from Bonne Bay and the total catch of codfish is 2,576 qtls."

Cured Diseases of the Kidneys

Once Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are introduced into the family and their efficiency becomes known, they are usually found too valuable to do without. For everyday ailments arising from liver and bowel disorders they bring relief promptly, and when complicated diseases of the kidneys and liver develop they often prove a successful cure after doctors have failed. As an illustration, you may read the following, which was received a few days ago:

Mrs. John Wright, 53 McGee street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for ten years, and would not be without them. My husband suffered from kidney trouble, and after taking treatment from several doctors without receiving any benefit, tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which worked a complete cure. Since that time we have used them for all stomach and liver disorders."

Aasentee Landlordism.

A meeting of citizens was held in the Board of Trade Rooms yesterday afternoon to consider the question of "Absentee Landlordism."

The attendance was not all that could be desired, since there are so many in the city interested in the matter, but the lack of attendance may be attributed to the hour at which the meeting was held.

The original question as already stated was Absentee Landlordism, but the discussion led to an expression on Landlordism in general.

On motion of Mr. Reuben Horwood the chair was taken by the Hon. A. F. Goodridge.

Hon. M. P. Gibbs spoke on the need for action in the matter which course should be endorsed by public sentiment. He stated that in this city there were 1,200 tenants paying rentals to absentee landlords. If the Committee could furnish a good case, the Government would be prepared to promote legislation.

Mr. J. P. Scott in a brief speech congratulated the Committee on its activity in taking up the matter and spoke of the immediate necessity of action being taken.

Practical speeches were also made by Messrs. A. B. Morine R. Horwood, W. A. Munn, McDougall and Councillor Martin who spoke along the same lines.

Mr. Morine urged fair play to landlords and leaseholders alike and suggested the adoption of legislation to deal with the matter. He deprecated any hostility being shown to absentee landlords. The whole question was a matter of adjusting terms, either on renewals or purchases, and to do this a tribunal, was necessary, empowered to act as the Land Courts in Ireland do.

The meeting, though not largely attended, was enthusiastic and before the close it was moved that a public meeting be called shortly to consider the question freely.

The chairman then closed the meeting, and in doing so admitted the desirability of the movement being further advanced, but that only in a spirit of fair play and justice to all parties concerned.

The Infidel and His Daughter.

Suggested by reading a newspaper paragraph, describing the scene between an infidel and his daughter, on the eve of her death, when she asked the infidel in whose faith he would have her to die—his or her mother's.

"The damps of death are coming fast,
My father, o'er my brow;
The past with all its scenes had fled,
And I must turn me now
To that dim future which in vain
My eyes seek to decry;
Tell me, my father, in this hour,
In whose belief to die.

"In thine? I've watched thy scornful smile,
And heard thy withering tongue,
When 'er the Christian's humble hope
Was placed above thine own;
I've heard thee speak of coming death
Without a shade of gloom,
And laugh at all the childish fears
That cluster round the tomb.

"Or is it in my mother's faith?
How fondly do I trace
Through many a weary year long past
That calm and saintly face!
How often do I call to mind
Now she's beneath the sod
The place, the hour, in which she drew,
My early thoughts to God!

"Twas then she took this sacred book,
And from its burning page
Read how its truths support the soul,
In youth and falling age;
And bade me in its precepts live,
And by its precepts die,
And by its precepts die,
That I might share a home of love
In worlds beyond the sky.

"My father, shall I look above,
Amid this gathering storm,
To Him whose promises of love
Extend beyond the tomb?
Or curse the Being who hath blessed
This checkered path of mine?
Must I embrace my mother's faith,
Or die, my sire, in thine?
The frown upon that warrior brow
Passed like a cloud away,
And tears coarsed down the rugged cheek.

"That frownd not till that day,
"Not, not in mine!" with choking voice
The skeptic made reply—
"But in thy mother's holy faith,
My daughter, may'st thou die!"

Tongue Twisters.

There are some tongue twisters which it is quite impossible for the tongue to repeat rapidly without a fall, such as—"Give Jim Giles' gilt sis whip."
"Three six thick thistle sticks thrust straight through the throbbing thrushes."
"A skunk jumped over a stump into a skunk hole."
"What sort of a noise annoys an oyster? A noisy noise annoys an oyster."
"The old cold scold sold a school coal scuttle."
"When a twister a-twisting will twist him a twist."
"For twisting of his twist he three twines doth twist."
"But if one of the twines of the twist do twist."
"The twine that untwisteth, untwisteth the twist."
"In twisting the twine that untwisteth between."
"He twirls with his twister the two in a twine."
"Then twice having twisted the twines of the twine."
"He twiteth the twine he had twined in twain."
"The twain that in twining before in the twine,
As twines were intertwisted he now doth untwine."
"Twixt the twain intertwining a twine more between."
"He, twirling his twister, makes a twist of the twine."

Music Builds Character.

Good music is a powerful tonic to many people, especially those suffering from melancholia. It lifts them out of their solemn moods, dispels gloom and despondency, kills discouraged feelings, and gives new hope, new life, and new vigor. It seems to put a great many people into proper tune. It gives them the key-note of truth and beauty, strikes the chords of harmony, dispels discord from the life, scatters clouds and brings sunshine.

All good music is a character builder, because its constant suggestion of harmony, order and beauty puts the mind into a normal attitude. Music clears cobwebs out of many minds so that they can think better, act better and live better.

Some writers are dependent upon music for their inspiration and their moods. Somehow it brings the muse to them. It adds brilliancy to the brain and facility to the pen, which they cannot seem to get in any other way.

Good music seems to give us a touch of the divine, and to put us in contact with divinity. It drives out evil thoughts, making us ashamed of them. It lifts us above petty annoyances and little worries of life and gives us a glimpse of the ideal which the actual is constantly obscuring.—Orison Sweet Marden.

Tapley Gets Thirty Years.

Montreal, March 25.—In the court of King's bench this morning, W. H. Tapley, former money lender, was brought up for sentence for a statutory offence against his fifteen year old daughter. Justice Laverne pronounced a sentence of 30 years imprisonment and when he heard the words "thirty years" Tapley fell forward and had to be carried out of the court by two guards.

There was every evidence that the reports about Tapley having attempted to commit suicide in his cell were true. He had to be lifted from the prison van and carried along the passage and by the stairs to the court room.

Judge Laverne asked him if he had anything to say before he was sentenced and he shook his head meekly.

Young Men's Society.

A meeting of the Young Men's Society was held in the Seamen's Institute last night. After the Secretary's report was read and adopted, a special committee was formed for the advancement of the Society. A proposition was made and carried that the names of all persons who wish to become members be posted in the committee room a month before each election. The Chairman, Mr. W. H. Jones, has invited members and their friends to a social on Tuesday night, April 7th, at 7:45 p.m.

The Gentle Chauffeur.

Major Harrison, of Chicago, was being congratulated at a luncheon on his ordinance forbidding chauffeurs to blow their horns in the crowded business sections of the city.

"Chauffeurs think," he said, "that they need only blow their horns and the pedestrians will leap out of the way. Let the chauffeur drive with care, remembering that the pedestrians' right is supreme.

"Why, if something isn't now done, the chauffeurs in their arrogance will be getting up a code for pedestrians to learn and obey—a code something like this:

"One toot: Throw a quick back-head-spring for the pavement.
"Two toots: Dive over the car.
"Three toots: Lie down calmly, it is too late to escape; but we will go over you as easily as possible, if you keep very still.
"One long and two short toots: Throw yourself backward and one leg will be saved.
"Four toots: It's all up with you, but we promise to notify your family."

Sir Walter Obeyed.

Miss Alice Werneher, writing on the centenary of the birth of Bishop Colenso, recalls an amusing incident which occurred when Colenso arrived in Durban after his visit to England in connection with the native question, which stirred such depths of bitterness forty years ago.

He was warned not to preach in his own church, St. Paul's, but persisted, and the only "demonstration" which took place was the raising of the late Sir Walter Peace to leave the church as Bishop Colenso entered the pulpit.

In trying to open the door of his pew, Sir Walter dropped his hat and heavy stick.

"Amid the clatter the Bishop, all unconscious, gave out his text, 'Peace be still,' and the astonished Peace, hit as it were between the eyes, sank back into his seat and remained there."

£100 Hat as Football.

The following story of Mr. Alfred Broadwood is told by Mr. Canon Woodville in his recollections. One day he and a friend were in rather rough society, Whitechapel way. He had treated the company, and when no more drinks were forthcoming the roughs became annoyed and proceeded to horse-play.

"Swish," as Mr. Broadwood was familiarly known saw his hat being played football with, and joined in the sport, but at last rescued his hat, and he and his friend got outside, when his friend remarked:

"That wasn't a bad idea of yours to join in the game with your hat. It made 'em laugh, and gave us a chance to get away."

"Well," said Swish, "don't you see, I had to do this to let 'em believe I didn't care a hang for my hat; but I'll show you why I wanted them to think it of no value."

With that he pulled down the lining, and out of the crown came £100 in £20 notes.

Basuto Telegraphy.

How "Wireless" was Anticipated.

At the Battle of Ishtib, a Bulgarian coward signalled news to his military countrymen relative to the position of the Servian battalions by moving five cows about in various ways on the top of a hill.

The Basutos, by the way, practically anticipated "wireless telegraphy" in a crude fashion. That is, by striking heavily on a huge drum of goat-skin, which is placed on a special spot, another Basuto at a distance can gather the purport of the message by placing his ear close to the ground to catch the vibrations; and then he, in turn, passes the message on. So quickly can this be done, owing to the peculiar configuration of Basutoland, that during the South African War the Basutos were said to know all about big battles long before the people in Cape Town.

Of course, given suitable climatic conditions, the military heliograph can transmit messages over enormous tracts of country, and the record is probably held by Captain Sadler, of the 6th Dragoon Guards, who, by this means, succeeded in South Africa in sending a message direct a distance of 130 miles.

LATEST THING IN BURGLARS' GOODS.

New York, Mar. 20.—Two men who the police allege have confessed they intended to dynamite a diamond cutter's safe containing diamonds valued at about $500,000, were arrested after they had been trailed for more than a month, during which time they had paid a preliminary visit by night to the scene of their intended robbery.

The men's names were given as Michael Schneider, alias "Mike Schneider," 23 years of age, and Jake Rothman, also known as "Phil Weiss," 22 years of age.

Incidentally the police secured what is considered one of the best and most complete safe-breaking equipments which ever came to their notice, including a new sort of sectional "Jimmy" never before known.

The fact that one of these "Jimmies" was found wrapped in a Boston newspaper of February 2 caused the police to believe that the men have been connected with the robbery of the safe of the Williams Jewelry Company, of that city, the day before, which caused the firm a loss of $5,500, and possibly with other burglaries in Boston.

CENTENARY OF THE BATTLE OF WATERLOO.

London, March 30.—In view of the centenary of the Battle of Waterloo to be held next year, Belgian speculators are planning to erect buildings on the most interesting portions of the historic battlefield.

To prevent this a meeting was held Friday at Apsley House, the London residence of the Iron Duke, and now held by the present Duke of Wellington, who invited English people to co-operate with the Belgian committee and to outbuy the speculators.

The government had agreed to introduce a bill whereby the buildings on the battlefield would be preserved to posterity.

Fifty thousand dollars is needed as compensation. Of this amount $40,000 has already been subscribed.

A general executive committee has been appointed, composed of Lord Roberts, the Duke of Wellington and others.

Likely Off St. Mary's.

The Southern Cross has not been reported since passing St. Pierre yesterday afternoon, and the general opinion is that she is "holed" in Placentia Bay. The night being fine she evidently passed St. Lawrence and Burin or she would have been reported from either of these places. Assuming that she reached Doding Head about 11 p.m. yesterday, she would likely shape her course from there for Cape St. Mary's. As she is heavily laden and can only steam a little over five knots she would not be due at Cape St. Mary's until about 8 or 9 o'clock this morning. The storm came on about 7 a.m. and experienced mariners venture the opinion that she is about 15 or 20 miles West of Cape St. Mary's.

Glencoe at Placentia.

The S.S. Glencoe reached Placentia at 10:45 a.m. to-day after a good run from Port aux Basques, the ship making summer time all along the coast. She landed the following first-class passengers at Placentia: Mrs. Pike, Mrs. J. Power and child, C. A. Mayer, C. R. Darby, Miss Glancey and one second class.

The Glencoe will sail again from Placentia after the arrival of tomorrow's train from St. John's, being now on schedule.

The Passing of a Veteran.

MR. JOHN O'DRISCOLL, OF BAY BULLS.

On Saturday last, there died at Bay Bulls, one of its oldest and most respected inhabitants, John O'Driscoll. He had just completed his 83rd year. He was the oldest son of Martin and Mary Ann O'Driscoll, and one of a family of four brothers and five sisters. On his father's side he came from the historic family of his name—O'Driscoll, of Baltimore, Co., Cork, Ireland, while from his mother there was blended in his veins the best blood of Tipperary, the Ryans.

Both ancestors came to this country more than a century ago. They were educated men, and like many such in those penal days, sought a home in a foreign land bringing with them the brilliancy of an Irish intellect and the unquenchable fire of an Irish faith.

John O'Driscoll had ten uncles of his name who took a prominent part in the country's affairs, one of whom had engaged in his service in a lawsuit no less a personage as an advocate, a Prince of Wales, afterwards William IV. (Prowse's History). They too, were well educated for their day, and in knowledge of history, mathematics and navigation would put to shame some of the brilliant alumni of our higher schools.

One of them, Wm. O'Driscoll, was the first Newfoundland to take a vessel across the Atlantic. He was captured, and with his crew was murdered by a pirate who afterwards confessed that he had taken a vessel commanded by an O'Driscoll, outward bound from Newfoundland. They were all navigators, and Capt. Henry (Uncle Harry), was a prominent figure in marine circles. In those days "youngsters" came here from Ireland and many of them found a home with Mr. O'Driscoll, and being sometimes educated, many were retained for the winter to teach younger members of the families of planters along the shore.

John O'Driscoll was in every sense worthy of his sires. He was a man of bright intellect, and fluent speech refined sensibilities and quick perceptiveness, and above all a man of highest integrity. He devoured books, assimilated their contents, and being gifted with a prodigious memory, had history and poetry always at his command. He knew Pinnock's Guide to Knowledge by heart. Being Irish to the heart's core he was familiar with the wrongs and the struggles of that most distressful country. His young mind was filled with tales of '98, and you would think to hear him relate the adventures of the men who led the ill-fated rising of that day, that he himself had carried a pike. He was a great story-teller, and most interesting conversationalist. He delighted to find himself mid a circle of old friends and could "spin out" for hours without exhausting his stock or vocabulary. But "woe to the while" if some shallow pointed paragon dared to contradict him. There was not a noble or base character in English or Irish history he did not know something about, and did any renegade from England or Ireland ever dare in his hearing to belittle the claims of Ireland to justice or throw a damp on the cause, even by a word, it was pitiable to see the wretch wriggle under the lash of John O'Driscoll's tongue. He belonged to a family that produced no politicians, but one, however that gave several religious to the cloister. He had a daughter a nun in the United States, who gave her life in the cause of charity, and he is uncle to the Rev. P. J. O'Brien.

He was a man of striking appearance, and always impressed those with whom he came in contact. When His Grace, Archbishop Howley was here on visitation some years ago, he had occasion to hunt up some data for his "Historical Sketches." He was referred to John O'Driscoll, who was ready with the required information. The Archbishop afterwards referred to him as a "very intelligent man of Patriarchal appearance." Though he had his share of troubles he always bore them with Christian resignation, and was ever buoyant of spirit and agile of movement.

His wife predeceased him a few months, at the age of 82, and he leaves one sister, the mother of Rev. P. J. O'Brien, and two sons and one daughter—(Mrs. Capt. Murray, of Gloucester), to mourn their loss.

He was a devoted husband, a kind father and brother, a faithful friend, a worthy citizen and an upright man. He wanted nothing to make him honorable, and required only a little more of the world's favors to make him more recognized. These he never sought. He will be missed from the social circle in which he moved, but his example will live.

Fortified with the rites of Holy Church, he is gone to his departed kindred and to his God. May he rest in peace.

His funeral took place to-day and was largely attended.—Com.

was always well posted in current events, was an ardent Home Ruler, and like many more lovers of justice, was anxiously looking forward to the day when old Ireland would be happy under the Dublin Parliament.

On one occasion when Gladstone brought in his Home Rule Bill, some one of a gathering in which he was present was trying to ridicule the movement, O'Driscoll let him go on till he finished, when he pointed at him and said, "That fellow doesn't know that the blood of Cromwell runs in his veins."

He always took deep interest in government affairs, as his father's and his grandfather's house was not only headquarters for Bishops and Priests, but also for such politicians as had their approval. He had an opportunity of learning what governments stood for even in his earliest days. He seemed to have grown up under the impression that governments were for the most part combinations of office seekers and bootlickers, and so had imbibed a supreme contempt for politicians as such. The whole family seemed to be under the same impression; they were always men of self-reliance and I do not remember that any of them ever held a government job. I speak of the men of the older generation. A man of John O'Driscoll's intellectual attainments could have shared in the councils of his country, but though he never sat in parliament he often "sat on" members.

He was a staunch Catholic and always acted on the principle that it was "better to serve God than man." He stood up for moral rectitude, and brings to his grave an unblemished name. No slander ever got a successful hearing from him, while his tongue was ever silent about the misdeeds of his fellows. He was ever ready with consolations for the distressed, and, as far as he could, had a helping hand for the needy. He was a man too, of heroic mould. He was one of a crew of sixty in "Spring of the Wadhams." There was a raging sea on, ice was rafting while the vessel and crew were drifting fast to destruction. The only hope of safety was in connecting a line to a "growler," a cable's length away. But who would dare face what "I regarded as certain death. John O'Driscoll, courageous of heart and swift of foot, was the only man on board equal to the emergency. He leaped from the deck holding the end of a rope, soon accomplished his task and saved the vessel and crew.

He belonged to a family that produced no politicians, but one, however that gave several religious to the cloister. He had a daughter a nun in the United States, who gave her life in the cause of charity, and he is uncle to the Rev. P. J. O'Brien.

GULF STEAMER COMING BELIEVED TO BE THE S. S. SOUTHERN CROSS.

Just as we were going to press yesterday, at 2.50 p.m., the Anglo Office had the following message from the operator at St. Pierre:—

"A three-masted black painted steamer with yellow funnel going southeast, not passing now." This is considered sufficient evidence to conclude that the steamer reported is the Southern Cross. The Erik would have called at Channel to land part of her crew, and the Viking or Terra Nova would be recognized by the red cross on their smokestacks.

TESTIMONIALS.

To Dr. F. Stafford & Son,
Dear Sirs—

I strongly recommend your Prescription "A" to all sufferers with Indigestion and Dyspepsia. I used all kinds of medicine and consulted various specialists without cure. I saw your Prescription "A" advertised in the papers and tried a few bottles and it made a perfect cure of me.

MRS. HALL,
Hayward Ave., St. John's.

To Dr. F. Stafford & Son,
Dear Sirs—

I am sending you 60 cents in stamps. Please send me one 50 cent bottle of Prescription "A", the 10 cents balance will pay for postage. You sent me a trial bottle a short while ago and it almost cured my wife and I think another 50 cent bottle will make a cure. I have tried doctors and all kinds of medicines but I don't believe that there is any medicine that can cure a bad stomach like Stafford's Prescription "A." I am more than thankful that you advertised this medicine. Please forward as quick as possible.

THE ARMY CRISIS

Seele, French and Ewart Resign—Asquith Takes War Portfolio

And Goes Back to His Constituency—Dramatic Scene in the House When Prime Minister Makes Announcement.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, March 30.

Field Marshal French and Brigadier General Ewart, have resigned, and all efforts made by the King, Premier and other ministers, have failed to induce them to change their minds.

Prime Minister Asquith's further announcement that he himself would take up the portfolio of Secretary of War, came as a great surprise. Having announced this, he declared that he would retire from the Commons, in accordance with the law, until it pleased his constituents to sanction his return to office. He then walked out of the Chamber amid frantic cheers from Liberals, Nationalists and Labor members, the whole body of whom rose to their feet, waving handkerchiefs and papers, as he left.

Mr. Asquith having accepted an office of profit under the Crown, must now retire to his constituency in East Fife for re-election. On last occasion he received 3,149 votes against 2,350 of his Unionist opponent receiving a majority of 1,799.

When the Premier entered the House to-day he was greeted with a great ovation by members on the Ministerial side. Shortly after, he rose before the crowded chamber to make his promised statement on the Army crisis. He said that after full consideration Field Marshal French and Adjutant General Ewart had persisted in their desire to be relieved of their offices, and that in the public interest, deeply he deplored the decision of those gallant officers. He would not speak too warmly or gratefully of the ability, loyalty, and devotion with which they had served the State and Army, and would, he hoped, continue to serve.

The Prime Minister proceeded to tell the House that Colonel Seele had informed him, to his regret, that he felt bound to take the same course and resign from the Secretaryship for War. Asquith then sprung his sensation on the House. He said that under the circumstances, and after much consideration, he had felt it his duty to assume the office of Secretary of State for War, although he had taken it, only with the greatest reluctance, and in what he believed to be, a great public emergency.

That the Premier's announcement was a complete surprise, was evident on every hand. Members on the Ministerial side were struck dumb, but soon they jumped on their seats and broke out in wild cheers.

Mr. Asquith added that Generals French and Ewart had asked him to say that they were in accord with the statement made by him in the House on Friday.

In announcing that the King had signified his approval of him, on his assumption of the War Office portfolio, he concluded: "I have taken the opinion of the highest legal authorities, and all the lawyers agree that I must resign from the House of Commons, I, therefore, in accordance with the law, retire from the House, until my constituents will have given their approval of my acceptance of this office."

In a brief personal statement, Col. Seele told the House that there was no difference between himself and his colleagues in the Cabinet on any point of policy or principle. He said he had pressed his resignation, because there appeared, although such was not his intention, to have been a bargain with the Army officers regarding the service they should render to the Crown. Neither had Generals French and Ewart the intention of making any such bargain.

Mr. Bonar Law said that it would be impossible to proceed with the Home Rule Bill in the absence of the Premier, but Mr. Asquith remarked that he would be at hand, if advice was wanted. He then left the House, of which Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, assumed the leadership.

The resignation of Lord Morley, of Blackburn, as President of the Council, is generally expected to follow that of Col. Seele, with whom he was associated in drawing up the offending paragraphs of the memorandum to the officers. In the course of his speech Col. Seele said that grave issues had been raised, which may mean that the whole army system may have to be recast.

LONDON, March 30.
Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary, in the Commons to-day, denied the allegations that the action of President Wilson in regard to the question of the Panama Canal tolls was the result of an understanding between the Governments of the United States and Britain. It had been asserted, he said, that under the terms of the so-called understanding, Britain had undertaken to assist President Wilson in regard to his Mexican policy, adding that there was no foundation whatever for the reports. He expressed himself as glad to be able to take as early an opportunity as possible, for saying so.

Harbour Grace Notes.

Mrs. H. Noseworthy lost a sum of money from her purse on Victoria Street last night, and although a number of people gathered and searched closely no trace of the money could be found. Mrs. Moses Shute is passing over the hill this morning was fortunate in finding it and restored it to the delighted owner.

It is reported in town to-day that the S. S. Southern Cross is now on her way from the Gulf with a load of seals. We all hope the report is correct.

Miss Fanny Cron, one of the nurses at the General Hospital, St. John's, is now here on a short visit for her health sake. All Nurse Cron's friends are pleased to meet her.

Mr. H. H. Archibald was to the Capital on Friday last on business.

The Amuse U Club will hold a dancing assembly at the Academy Hall on Easter Tuesday night that promises to be a real swell time.

Miss Sarah Bradbury, one of the Archibald Brothers staff, left by Saturday's train for Winnipeg, where she will make her home in future.

Dandelion was served for dinner at one home in town yesterday. It is not likely there was an over supply, in fact we fear the supply was scarcely equal to the demand. Good for Harbour Grace to get dandelion in March.

Yesterday was Review Sunday in the Presbyterian Sabbath School, and Rev. Mr. Magner was very well pleased with the quick and correct answers of the children. Much credit is due Miss Butt and the teachers for their attention to the children.

The Little Boy Scout.

The little Boy Scout goes marching out
In a khaki suit of tan,
And a broad felt hat with a silver cord
Just like a grown-up man.
He feels as big as he swings along
In step with the line of boys,
That he knows he never again will
Or play with his childish toys.

The little Boy Scout is only eight,
And his eyes are blue and bright;
His mother kisses and tucks him up
In his pretty white bed each night,
Tramp, tramp, tramp on the weary road—

He is tired, and hungry, too,
But to fall behind in the dusty march
Is not what a man would do.

The little Boy Scout is home again;
To bed in the dark he goes,
No more afraid of the bogey-bears
That lurk on the stairs, he knows,
He has entered to conquer the pain of life.

As only a brave heart can,
And his mother steals to his cot to say,
"Good night, my dear little man."

Large Audiences At The Crescent.

The Crescent Picture Palace was greeted with large audiences yesterday afternoon and night. All attending to witness the great three reeled feature "The Flying Circus," the sensational picture produced by the Northern Film Co.

This wonderful subject which occupied over three-quarters of an hour was beyond the expectations of the large audiences present. The second picture was a comedy "The Rival Candidates" full of genuine fun and laughter.

Miss Louise Arkandy rendered several violin selections which added immensely to the success of the programme. This bill is repeated again this afternoon and night, and those who failed to see "The Flying Circus" should make a special effort to witness it.

THE GREATER QUESTION.

At this season of the year for Farmers with up-to-date ideas is, what are the best means to use to get the best returns from the land.

Fertilizers must be used liberally if large returns are looked for. There are several good chemical fertilizers which may be recommended, but Sulphate of Ammonia has been proved to give the best returns, and is the most valuable and economical source of Nitrogen for agricultural purposes.

For vegetables, grass, and all leafy crops, about one and a half cwt. per acre is the best quantity to use, and this should be applied when the plant is making its growth, as well as before sowing the seed.

If a liquid manure is preferred, a 1/2 oz. of Sulphate to one gallon of water should be used, and applied once a week for a month. This quantity should not be exceeded.

It is a good plan to reduce the Sulphate to a fine powder, and mix with four or more times its own bulk, for the purpose of diluting the manure, which is very powerful.

For potatoes the following mixture is strongly recommended:—
40 lbs. Sulphate of Ammonia,
25 lbs. Fine bone meal,
10 lbs. Carbonate of Magnesia,
15 lbs. Sulphate of Potash,
21 lbs. SULPHATE OF AMMONIA.

1 cwt.
Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to 45 square yards.

The use of Carbonate of Magnesia, in conjunction with Sulphate of Ammonia, is of great importance in potato culture.

For turnips use the following:—
66 lbs. Superphosphate,
12 lbs. Fine bone meal,
15 lbs. Sulphate of Ammonia,
20 lbs. Sulphate of Ammonia.

1 cwt.
Apply at the rate of 10 to 11 lbs. to 45 square yards.
Sulphate of Ammonia of excellent quality is now made by the St. John's Gas Light Company, and may be obtained on very reasonable terms.
Full particulars may be obtained at the Gas Works, or at the Board of Trade Building, ask for special booklet on the use of Sulphate. It will be found of great value in securing the heaviest crops.

Food Value of Fish After Cold Storage.

An editorial published in a recent issue of the 'Journal of the American Medical Association' offers some pertinent points on the food value of fish which have remained in cold storage. The editorial follows:

The imperative need of some safe, efficient and hygienic method of conserving putrescible food materials for human consumption at periods long after they leave the source of original production is being more forcibly brought home to American purchasers and producers every year. The suitability of some of the procedures employed has been referred to in 'The Journal' from time to time. The value of desiccation has doubtless been underestimated in many instances in the past, although it has many obvious limitations, such as the alteration of the natural flavor of food products occasioned thereby in some cases and the relative expense of this mode of food preservation in others. Sterilization by heat is applied in many departments of the food industries with eminent success. The use of chemical preservatives has received a wholesome check through the stricter limitations which modern legislation is placing on the introduction of foreign compounds into food products, so that in this direction, too, the prospect of permissible expansion is not promising. Much careful consideration has therefore been directed to the possibilities and the limitations of cold storage as a mode of food preservation, from both the hygienic and the economic point of view.

Although the preservative effect of low temperatures on foodstuffs has long been known, the study of the chemical changes which the product may undergo during prolonged refrigeration has not been vigorously prosecuted until a comparatively recent date. In this work the Federal Bureau of Chemistry has been particularly active, and numerous statistics have been published in regard to the behaviour of meats, poultry, eggs, butter, etc., under the varied conditions of cold storage applied in the trade at the present time or proposed for introduction. There are, however, few data available in regard to the effect of cold storage on the chemical composition of the flesh of fish, although this method of preservation has been used longer for fish than for many other food products now so preserved. The importance of detailed and trustworthy information as to this effect is the more evident in relation to fish because they are commonly recognized to be peculiarly prone to decomposition.

A plant for the freezing of fish by means of salt and ice was established in New York City as early as 1861. The frozen fish industry in America had its real beginning in the early nineties, but progressed very slowly because of the long-maintained prejudice against cold-stored products and frozen fish in particular. The development of the ammonia process for the production of low temperature has been one of the chief factors in fostering the cold storage industry. At present, many varieties of fish are refrigerated. Each firm has its own method of freezing fish, but the general practice seems to be to freeze the fish, dip them in water, and refreeze in order that they may be completely encased in ice. They are then stored at a temperature of -16 c. (3.2 F.). The coating of ice, which is renewed as occasion requires, prevents loss of water due to surface evaporation.

The outcome of an investigation conducted in the Biochemical Laboratory of Columbia University at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, on the composition of the flesh of a typical species—founders—with respect to the possible changes induced by current trade methods is gratifying. We need not review the chemical details and the criteria, such as estimations of nitrogen in the proportions of nitrogenous constituents, the development of reducing substances, the hydrolytic changes in the fats, etc., which were applied by competent biochemists. Their contention, well justified by the data presented, is that there is no evidence whatever of any depreciation in the nutritive value, or any change in the sanitary character of the fish at any time during two years of cold storage. The data for the yield of ammonium nitrogen—and evidences of autolytic changes—of microbial changes—showed a constancy that excludes appreciable alteration through bacterial decay, and evidences of autolytic changes were likewise not forthcoming. Even the culinary virtues and palatability of fish kept frozen thus long were not impaired.

Convincing as these studies are of the excellent possibilities of preserving fresh fish by the freezing process, they must not be allowed to disguise the fact that they do not give a clean bill of health to animal tissues removed from cold storage and exposed until sold or even kept in a common refrigerator. Neither can spoiled food be adequately preserved by any method. It is unfortunate that the efficiency of useful processes is sometimes impugned by unjustifiable applications of it. This has been true of cold storage.

Rheumatism Goes Quickly Its Virus Forever Destroyed.

EVERY CASE IS CURABLE.

Good-bye to Rheumatism!
Your aching joints, your stiff, sore muscles, those sleepless nights and suffering days—good-bye forever—your day is gone.

Sufferer, cheer up, and read the good news below.

"A man met me a month ago, and said, 'don't say crippled, quit complaining, limber up.' My answer was, 'I'm rheumatic, I can't do it.' He looked me over in a pitying sort of way and told me to go to the nearest drug store for Nerviline and Ferrozone. The combination had cured him. I was convinced of his sincerity and followed his instructions. I rubbed on Nerviline three times every day—rubbed it right into my aching joints. The pain quickly lessened, and I became more limber and active. To draw the virus of the disease from my blood I took two Ferrozone Tablets with every meal. I am well today, not an ache, not a pain and no sign of stiffness at all."

What Nerviline can do in a case like this it can do for you too. For nearly forty years Nerviline has been recommended for Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica and Lame Back. It is the one remedy that never disappoints.

Peru.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sivash."

Peru is a patch of land as large as Alaska in the left hand side of South America, looking north. It is a republic of the high-speed rotary type and its present government should be ascertained by looking in the bulletins on the first page.

Peru consists of three parts—desert, mountains and forests. It begins at the Pacific Ocean with a strip of desert so dry that Peruvians who go to the Sahara get rheumatism. Back of the desert the Andes rise to a height which causes Broadway in New York to look squatly. Peru is full of mountain peaks from 20,000 to 23,000 feet high and whenever a Peruvian and a Chilean begin to dispute about the elevation of their leading mountain peaks the police move hastily in and disarm them.

Half of Peru is three or four miles above the rest, and the man who wishes to campaign for office begins his career with a long course in mountain climbing. Railroads in Peru climb higher than aeroplanes in France and mountain sickness is more common than seasickness.

Back of the mountains, Peru consists of dense tropical forests through which the anacondas roam unmolested swallowing justices of the peace and tax collectors with impunity. The celebrated Amazon River was invented in Peru and flows for its first thousand miles through this country, but Brazil has always gotten credit for it because the mouth is always a better advertiser than the head.

Hundreds of Years ago, Peru was a wonderful country with a stable government and vast garden-like fields. Unfortunately, it was then "discovered" by pain. This was one of the worst misfortunes which could happen to an early country. After the eminent Mr. Pizarra had wheeled a room full of gold from the Inca of Peru he burned him alive and then established a civilized government over the Indians. This worked so well that soon there were only about 500,000 of them instead of 8,000,000.

Peru has been free and independent for almost 100 years and now has a population of about 3,500,000, not counting defeated candidates for president and aspirants for the position, both of whom usually live elsewhere. It produces gold and silver, wool, rubber and the celebrated Peruvian bark which has no bite in it at all. The national bird of Peru is the llama, which is a wool-bearing beast of burden living best three miles high and which spits bile at its enemies like a politician who has been caught with the goods.

Peru would be a more prosperous country if it could get farther away from Chile, which whips it at every opportunity and grabs a little more territory.

London's Gruesome Day.

January 30, 1661, was a gruesome day in London. It was on that day that the body of Cromwell, which had been disinterred from the Abbey two days before, was drawn on a sledge along with the remains of Ireton and Bradshaw, to Tyburn. There the bodies were taken out of their coffins and in their shrouds hanged by the neck till sunset. They were then cut down, their heads taken off, and the headless bodies buried in a pit at the foot of the scaffold. Cromwell's head was then conveyed to Westminster Hall, where it was set up on a pole. There it remained for 20 years till it was eventually blown down.—London Daily Chronicle.

Beyond.

It seemeth such a little way to me Across to that strange country—the Beyond;

And yet, not strange, for it has grown to be The home of those of whom we are so fond;

They make it seem familiar and most dear, As journeying friends bring distant regions near.

So close it lies that when my sight is clear

I think I almost see the gleaming strand; I know I feel those who have gone from here

Come near enough sometimes to touch my hand;

I often think, but for our veiled eyes, We should find Heaven right about us lies.

I cannot make it seem a day to dread When from this dear earth I shall journey out

To that still dearer country of the dead,

And join the lost ones, so long dreamed about,

I love this world, yet shall I love to go

And meet the friends who wait for me, I know.

I never stand above a bier and see

The seal of death set on some well-loved face

But I think, "One more to welcome me

When I shall cross the intervening space

Between this land and that one over there;

One more to make the strange Beyond seem fair."

And so for me there is no sting to death,

And so the grave has lost its victory;

It is but crossing—with bated breath

And white, set face—a little strip of sea

To find the loved ones waiting on the shore.

More beautiful, more precious than before.

The One to Own if You Can Own But One.

That is what a critical user of a "Globe-Wernicke" cabinet says of his equipment. Another says "It leaves nothing to be desired." Another says "So complete yet so concise." Another "Perfection as a filing arrangement." Another "It is really indispensable." Another "A surprising advance in handling records." Another "A welcome improvement in office conditions"—and so on. The extensive sale of "Globe" filing cabinets in St. John's is by no means as remarkable as the abundant evidence that it is on merit alone that these devices have earned such generous appreciation. For certain when you become a user you will be well contented with your adaptable and reliable outfit. Mr. Percie Johnson has your catalogue ready for the asking as well as other necessary details.

The Lady's Man.

Young Jinkson loves the tribes of girls, and after them keeps running; and all the Beryls, Maes and Pearls just think he is too cunning. He warbles love songs by their bowers, and he's a peach. They reason, he hands them costly wreaths of flowers, and oysters in their seasons. The maidens say, "He's sweet, odds fish!" And he cheered by their kidding, anticipates their slightest wish, and hastes to do their bidding. Bright smiles are always on his face when he's among the ladies, but when he's at the old home place he looks as sour as haddies. His sister's an enchanting maid—few smiles he ever gave her; and when he's round she is afraid to ask the smallest favor. And with this girl he's eye at war—he never loved, or kissed her; he saves his sweet expressions for some other fellow's sister. His mother's old and worn and sad, and if she murmurs, "Charlie, I wish you'd help me here, my lad," he looks up, cross and snarly. "Let sister help you," he replies, her sad voice little heeding; "these interruptions I despise—you see I'm busy reading!" Some day he'll wed a dimpled dear, when he has saved the huddle, and when they're married half a year she'd swap him for a poodle.
