MUNICIPAL BONDS AS INVESTMENT

Present Good Opportunity for Secure and Judicious Investment

The name "Municipal Bonds" is given, in its general sense, to the secured obligations of a Municipal Corporation or a Public Quasi-Corporation. A Municipal Corporation is one of the individuals in a place or district at their own motion but with the consent of the government. To this Municipal Corporation are granted certain powers of self-government, including in most cases the right to borrow money and to sue and be sued. The Public Quasi-Corporation is created by the Province for the convenience of government, and not at the request of the inhabitants thereof, so that in effect the Public Quasi-Corporation is a part of the Provincial government created for the purpose of doing certain things in the most expeditious and easiest manner.

The chartered city, with its rights of self-government, etc., is a Municipal Corporation. The County, Township or School District, created by the Province is a Public Quasi-Corporation. The constitutions of the various Provinces define clearly the rights of the two classes of corporations and general recognition is given to the right to issue interest-bearing obligations and to pledge the taxes and revenues to secure the same. These obligations constitute the Municipal Bond, as it is known popularly, without regard to which class issues it.

The Obligations or Bonds of the Divisions of the Province represent the joint obligations of the taxpayers of the community. With a few exceptions, the original debt can only be created by a vote of the people, and in many provinces it is necessary that two-thirds of the vote shall favor the issuing of bonds. At the same time that the bonds are issued, a tax levy is voted to pay the interest as it accrues and the principal at maturity. The debt, therefore, can only be created for such purposes as appeal to the majority of the voters as being in their interest, to the health, wealth or betterment of the community.

In order to realize how secure these obligations are, the reader needs only to ask himself whether the debts of his own community are paid. Such obligations precede in lien every real estate mortgage in the community, since when real estate is sold in foreclosure the past due taxes are deducted from the purchase price. They precede every cent of earnings on bank stock, since no dividend can be declared until the annual taxes are paid. In fact, they are next to the tangible wealth, in whatever form it exists. In addition, the debt is a community one, depending on the wealth and morals of all, and is not subject to the vagaries, business reverses, or earning power of individuals or corporations.

Municipal Bonds in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred are in the form of coupon bonds, the most convenient form of investment. They are usually issued in denominations of $500 and $1,000; but many desirable communities issue small bonds of less amounts. In France, which is the wealthiest nation per capita, Municipal Bond buying is universal, and the usual denomination is 500 francs or $100. The only responsibility is that of caring for the bond itself, the only labor the pleasant one of cutting off and collecting the coupons twice each year. Income goes on continuously during the life of the bond, quite regardless of business conditions.

Municipal Bonds represent the best and safest class of investments, and consequently the interest rates are not high, ranging from 4 per cent to 5 1/2 per cent, according to the size, reputation and location of the community.

Less care is necessary in buying municipal bonds than in the other securities, since bonds of this class are uniformly good.

In Municipal Bond buying, experience and care are valuable aids, and the investor may best avail himself of this knowledge by buying through experienced and conservative investment brokers.

Market for Canadian Hay

Canadian hay dealers see anything but a bright outlook for a good export trade in the reports on conditions in Great Britain, which have been received up to the present time. The advices have nearly all classed the home crop in the British Isles as good and safely gathered. These factors, together with the high prices that the Canadian farmers are asking for their stock, have pretty effectually checked any tendency to ship hay to England, except, as in some recent instances, where there was an oversupply that was temporarily embarrassing. Cases of overloading are not very common, however, as there is a regular demand of from 500 to 800 tons a week from the live stock shippers, besides the local requirements, to be taken care of.

The absence of any necessity to work up a demand has reduced the interest taken by Canadians in the British markets, but the following report from the Canadian trade commission at Leeds indicates that there may be a demand from that quarter later on:

"Although, generally speaking, there is likely to be a fair average yield of English hay this season, yet, on account of the great difference which exists in the supply and demand of this product in different parts of the country, opportunities will probably occur for Canadian shippers to meet shortages in certain districts. In Yorkshire, for instance, there is no prospect of supplies being required from outside sources, but further north, particularly in Northumberland, there is every indication that a demand will occur for foreign-grown hay. It may be here noted, however, that the success of the trade from Canada will depend entirely upon the price, and in this connection it may be of interest to know that there are direct steamers from Montreal into Newcastle-Tyne—the chief port in Northumberland."

In writing on this subject, a leading Newcastle importer states: "The crop of clover and seed hay in this district will be one-third below the average. Meadows which promised well have been cut down disappointingly. Therefore, we expect a fair demand for Scandinavian hay, if Canadian hay will come in at a price to compete, there will be a trade for it, but the higher qualities of No. 1 timothy and clover are not wanted in this district."

The King of Animals

In the estimation of trappers and voyagers of eastern North America as well as in the eyes of the very rich nobility of Russia and Siberia there is only one king of beasts, and the name of this beast is the big and radiantly shining black fox. When roams over the cold and barren hills that stretch from east of the Penobscot river in Maine, through New France river, extend in diminishing hummocks through western Labrador, Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, and end in the billhooks and Laurenskippen the mouth of the St. Lawrence formation, which surround Hudson Bay, those who seek the choicest and most expensive furs know to man and who will pay any price for what they want must go to the black coast line of eastern North America for what they want and may have to wait for years to secure pelts that will match perfectly with other skins which are to go toward making up the set, for the black fox of North America—the reynard noir of the French hunters—wears the most valuable overcoat of any animal on earth.

As a rule, about five perfect pelts from black foxes are captured every year, and of these three are bought by the great Hudson Bay Fur Co. or its tributary associations. Though Maine alone furnishes more than 70,000 foxskins every year and though nearly 5,000 active men spend most of the winter in trapping and poisoning foxes and other animals for their furs, only twice in the run of twelve months are the combined efforts of these individual hunters able to secure a black fox.

The black fox differ from its congeners, the red fox, whose pelt sells for $2.50 or from the gray fox, whose overcoat is valued at from $150 to $400, but whenever a hunter can secure a black fox and remove its skin without marring the fur he is as sure of receiving from $800 to $1,500 for his trophy as if he had the money in his hand. Not only is every black fox pelt bought as soon as taken, but a dozen Russian noblemen have said agents traveling in North America all through the winter, seeking out remote hillside farms and abandoned logging camps, where it is possible that a shy and elusive black fox may have been seen.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Deaths at Lawrencetown

MRS. STEPHEN JEFFERSON.
Mrs. Stephen Jefferson, of Lawrencetown, passed away on the morning of October 4th, after a lingering illness and great suffering. A husband and five children, an aged mother and a large number of relatives and friends mourn her loss. Mrs. Jefferson was a daughter of the late John Dennis, of Middle Stewiacke, was one of a large family among whom is William Dennis, of the Halifax Herald. She married Stephen Jefferson of Round Hill, and subsequently removed to Lawrencetown, where the family have resided many years. Mrs. Jefferson was a member of the Episcopal church. Of a lovely disposition, she was highly esteemed; and her death will be learned with deep regret by all who knew her. The funeral took place from her late residence Tuesday morning.

J. W. WHITMAN.

At Lawrencetown, at two o'clock on the morning of September 30th, J. W. Whitman died at the residence of his son, H. H. Whitman. Mr. Whitman's death was due to a fall from an apple tree on Sept. 25th. He was a man of great skill and kindly nature, and was a liberal and in religion a Methodist. He held the office of School Commissioner, always taking a deep interest in educational matters.

The Sabbath Schools throughout the County had no more interested or enthusiastic advocates than the deceased. He was one of a family of twelve, eight of whom have now "crossed the bar." His wife predeceased him by a little over four months. Three sons survive him, H. H., merchant, of Halifax, and Robert, who reside in the States. The funeral took place from his late residence on Friday at 2.30 p.m. Mr. Whitman was a brother of Mrs. Hector MacLean of this town, and a brother-in-law of Dr. J. B. Hall, of the Normal School staff, Truro.

Does Your Work Drive You?

Does your work drive you, asks Morice in a valuable article in the World's Work. The man who drives his work counts for more, success better, than the man who is driven by it. The more carefully one scrutinizes the great achievements of the world, the more one perceives that the most part of the great work has been done by the man who has been driven to it, and not by the man who has chosen it. The man who has been driven to it, and not by the man who has chosen it, the man who has been driven to it, and not by the man who has chosen it, the man who has been driven to it, and not by the man who has chosen it.

When a man is engaged in a work that he does not believe in, heart and soul, a work that does not draw him in a large sense, calling out the best efforts of which he is capable, he has not yet found his right sphere. The constant yearning of will-power—sense of duty, moral resolution, what not—to help him, is a constant tax upon his central resources; it keeps up a state of mental mal-adjustment and prevents the most praiseworthy endeavors from resulting in anything in the way of fruit. Only when will-power and interest mutually reinforce each other are great results to be expected.

There are, then, three practical suggestions:—

- (1) In so far as is possible, select work that is in accord with your own power. Enthusiasm is apt to come with the conscious use of power.
- (2) Do more than duty demands, so that external compulsion will be quite lost sight of.
- (3) Keep well to the single factor so basal to vividness of life and work as is good health. I do not mean merely the absence of disease or disability, but that freshness that comes with good digestion, good sleep and outdoor air.

EDUCATION FOR THE FARMER

Library of Useful Information Saves Farmers Many Dollars and Experience

All summer I have been trying to find time to write to you and give you my ideas regarding a subject that should, I think, be given much more attention than it now receives. It is this: we hear a great deal now-a-days about the farmers not doing their fair share of the work of the country, more especially in a public capacity, or perhaps I should say a representative capacity; in other words, that the farmers are not doing their duty by becoming members of Parliament. Why is this the case? Because in my opinion they are not educated. In his own business a farmer must know a great deal that he does not and cannot learn from books, and because of this he is inclined to belittle the value of book-knowledge. Is this not so? What is the result? He does not read nearly as much as he should, not even along the line of his own business, and he never thinks of reading on subjects outside of his business. This is where nearly every farmer makes a serious mistake.

To be a good farmer a man cannot know too much about his business, and it goes without saying that he cannot get the knowledge he ought to have without doing a good deal of reading. May I illustrate? Supposing a man starts out to raise horses, not to be a special breeder of horses, but just to raise a few good colts because they are profitable. Now, horse raising is not usually a calling that is supposed to require a very great deal of book knowledge. It is a line of business that requires a vast amount of what has been aptly called "horse sense," yet no man who takes even horse-raising seriously but gets a few first-class books and reads up on the subject. He wants to know how to breed horses and he reads up on the laws of breeding. He selects, for example, a heavy draft breed, and he wants to know its history, its chief characteristics, its merits and demerits, and how it compares with other heavy breeds and types. As soon as he starts to read up on horses of one breed he suddenly finds that he is interested in horses in general and wants to learn all he can about them. It is a wonderfully interesting subject. Then he would like to know how famous breeders and trainers did their work and so his knowledge extends. He soon finds that he is by degrees learning a great many things that he never thought of, and his horse-raising becomes so much more to him than they were before. Men who decide to raise poultry or swine or sheep or cattle or do anything about a farm have much the same experience. Everything becomes so intensely interesting when they begin to read about it and learn something that their experience did not teach them.

A man who follows mixed farming, as it is called, will, if he is in earnest, soon have an excellent library, which he will consider the most valuable thing he has about his farm. This library will contain only books that the farmer has read or is going to read. I am not referring to the family library of the intelligent farm home, but to the part of the library that the farmer himself enjoys most. He will have a book on horses, not only one or two, but several; books on cattle raising and the breeds of dairies, and if he is interested in dairying he will have books on his favorite subject. He may have one or two books on sheep, one or two on swine, and so on. But he will not stop there, as he will want to read up on the various kind of crops and on the subjects of manuring, weeding, sowing, etc. These books are the tools with which the successful farmer works. I may say in passing that the Ontario Department of Agriculture a few years ago published a list of such books which a great many farmers bought and read with great interest, and they have since that time been a time when our farmers were buying so many good books that they have had to read them all.

There is one phase of their regular work may after they have read it carefully save them hundreds of dollars and possibly set them thinking along some line that may yield them as many hundreds more, or more. No intelligent farmer is, however, satisfied to read and inform himself merely on the practical and scientific sides of his daily work. He has other duties as well. He is a citizen of the country in which he lives and must extend his knowledge to the great culture of a few years ago published a list of such books which a great many farmers bought and read with great interest, and they have since that time been a time when our farmers were buying so many good books that they have had to read them all.

Convention at Clementsport

The thirty-fifth Annual Convention of Annapolis County Sunday School Association met in the Baptist Church, Clementsport, on Thursday and Friday of last week.

Though the weather was unfavorable, the sessions were well attended and representative. A County Convention is seldom favored with such practical and helpful addresses as presented. Among the speakers were Rev. A. M. MacLeod, Field Secretary, Mrs. G. W. Whitman, Provincial Superintendent of Elementary Department, Rev. A. S. Lewis, Rev. G. Schurman, Rev. S. Langille, C. S. Pincombe, Mrs. J. M. Cropley, Mrs. C. Balcom, and Miss Weatherspoon.

The Secretary reports the Sunday Schools in County with a membership of 4,373; officers and teachers, 543; scholars, 3830; home department membership, 164. 21 schools have separate primary rooms. 76 scholars joined the church during the year. 19 schools have White Ribbon Armies.

77 schools contributed toward our funds. A financial statement made by Treasurer before close of last session showed our Provincial Pledge of $110.00 met, thus making our County a lanner one, as the other requirements have been carried out. The officers for the ensuing year are as follows:—President, S. Drew, Nictau Falls; Vice-President, A. O. Price, Bridgetown; Secretary-Treasurer, Annie E. Young, Lawrencetown; Supt. Education, Mrs. G. W. Whitman, Granville Ferry, Supt. Elementary Department, Mrs. C. Balcom, Clementsport, Supt. Home Department, Mrs. F. E. Jones, Clementsport, Supt. Temperance, A. C. Charlton, Port Louis, Supt. Adult Department, S. N. Jackson, Clementsport, Supt. R.N.A., Mrs. Ellis, Victoria Beach; Representatives on Provincial Executive, W. E. Armstrong, Stony Beach; Delegates to Provincial Convention at Lunenburg—Miss Georgette Gilliland and Miss Annie Young.

A hearty vote of thanks was rendered the people of Clementsvalle for their kind hospitality; to the choir for music rendered; to the county papers for many favors received during the year; and to the Secretary for services rendered. We take pleasure in acknowledging the following amounts received since September 20th:

Our Growing Nation

However little the progress of Canada in recent years may have impressed those persons who have viewed it from the cold and unsympathetic shades of opposition, it has not gone unnoticed of our neighbors to the south, who pride themselves on their own progressiveness. Thus the Cleveland Leader says: "The Dominion was long a story and a promise—sometimes seeming hardly more than a hope. Now it is a fact—large, virile, expanding, though-coming. The fertile land which is not too far north or too high above the sea to have fairly good climate may constitute a comparatively small part of British America, but it is sufficient for a great population and the creation of great wealth. Add the timber, the minerals, the water power, the fisheries, the water-ways and the ports of the Dominion, and it stands out among the newer lands of the earth as richly endowed, vast, and of tremendous possibilities. Every event which centers attention upon Canada turns a searchlight upon crude forces vast spaces, huge stores of natural wealth—all that makes a young land worth the study of those who concern themselves with the larger movements of human progress. Make no mistake about Canada; a great nation is growing, faster and faster, across the northern boundary of the United States."

Triumph and Sacrifice

Undaunted by the accident to his brother's aeroplane which resulted in serious injury to that brother and the death of his companion, Mr. Wilbur Wright ascended once more with his machine at Le Mans, France, and for over an hour and a half kept it moving in an elliptical course round and round over the field, covering nearly 61 miles in one hour, thirty-nine minutes and fifty-one seconds. He at first kept close to the ground, but rose later to a height of sixty feet and increased the speed. It is stated that he guided the aeroplane so easily that it went with the regularity of clock-work and the steadiness of a railroad train. It was necessary, however, to wait for a high wind to subside before he ventured to leave the ground. The machine that will defy the weather has yet to be constructed, but wonderful progress has been made during the present year in aerial navigation. It has been attended by accident, and even the loss of life, but the pioneers in the field of discovery and invention are not deterred. Of the sacrifice that is inevitably associated with the experiments, the New York American well says:

"All honor to the genius and the bravery striving to solve the problems of aerial navigation. Only by experiment and effort and sacrifice to danger can they be solved. Not only is the welfare of civilization involved but there is a race between the genius of the great nations. Unfortunately, a splendid young officer of our army lost his life, and one of the gallant Wright brothers was severely hurt in the accident to the aeroplane at Fort Myer. Sorrowful and unhappy as this accident was, nevertheless, the sad death and the terrible injuries were in the interest of civilization and in behalf of American prestige. No soldier falling on the field of battle was serving his country more sincerely than Lieutenant Selfridge, the young soldier of the famous fighting family, who was crushed under the wrecked machine. All honor to his memory! And in sympathizing with Orville Wright in his affliction and pain, his countrymen will thank him for his efforts to gain victory over one of the most interesting problems in the world. Opinions vary about the utility of flying machines. However, one point cannot be disputed. It is that all great achievements have come through trial and privation. The men who are risking their lives in the operation of air craft are performing a work for posterity. However defective the present machines may be, there can be no perfected air navigation in the future without their dangerous experiments. It has been the history of all great inventions of large influence on civilization that we are not readers of books, but men of action, and that some one succeeded in seizing the right principle. Then development followed."

COLD STORAGE SPACE SECURED FOR FARMERS

Government Makes Contract with Steamers to Reserve Storage for Canadian Fruit

The staff of Dominion Fruit Inspectors has been increased by the appointment of several new men. All the old temporary inspectors have been re-engaged for the season and they are now at work. With the amendments of last session, and the extension of the inspection system, it is hoped to make the Fruit Marks Act even more effective than it has been in the past towards securing a good name for Canadian fruit.

Members of the staff of this branch are now securing samples of apples, pears, etc., to supplement the exhibits of last year's growth at the Franco-British Exhibition. For some years past exporters of fruit of a class requiring cold storage on the ocean have found it difficult to secure refrigerated space for the reason that they were not able to offer a sufficient quantity to fill even the smallest chamber. The safe and suitable temperature for fruit (32-34 degrees F.) is not suitable for any other class of product requiring cold storage. If a chamber should be only partially filled with fruit, there is a certain amount of "dead" space, and for that reason the shipping companies have frequently declined small shipments. They cannot very well be blamed for having done so.

In order to meet this difficulty the writer was authorized by the Minister of Agriculture to contract for the entire space of one chamber on several steamers, and then invite shippers of fruit to use the space. This arrangement has already been made with four steamers, and others may follow. The shippers pay the regular cold storage freight rate and the Department assumes the liability for unused space, if any. I am pleased to report that the space was all used except a few hundred cubic feet on one of the three steamers which have already sailed, and such fruit is now offered to nearly all the chambers on the fourth.

The continued hot weather, causing the fruit to mature rapidly and early, makes the use of cold storage more necessary this year than usual.

J. A. RUDDICK,
Ottawa, Sept. 16. Commissioner.

King of Sable Island

Capt. R. G. Boutillier, best known to the men of the life-saving service and mariners in general as "the king of Sable Island," is on a visit to the United States and is in Boston on Friday last. The captain is about 60 years old, of massive frame and the manners of a veritable Briton, and in facial physiognomy and hireute appearance bears a striking resemblance to England's present potentate, King Edward.

The captain discussed quite interestingly affairs on Sable Island, of which island he is recognized as head of monarch in his capacity as head of the life-saving station and crews there. According to the captain the present population of the island numbers 45 souls, of which 23 are men, six of them married, including the captain, and with families, the rest being women and children. Although the island is somewhat isolated, the captain says that the little community is one of the happiest to be imagined.

Sable Island is most exposed and near the most dangerous tracks of the transatlantic vessels. Even in the matter of having their spiritual needs looked after the little community is provided for, according to the captain, who stated that one of the men who has studied theology leads divine services every Sunday, while a Catholic priest visits the island from the main land at frequent periods to say mass and otherwise attend to the spiritual needs of those of the Catholic faith.

The captain reports the present summer as having been warmer than the average, a fact due seemingly to the gulf stream having extended its course nearer the island. However, he caught the gulf stream would shift back again to its old course and that this coming winter, like those of the past, would be extremely cold.

A Stormy Night

One evening, during our latest heavy rain, I traveled the weather and took a far cut to the doctor's.

"There was method in my madness, too, for the Doctor has a replace, and the Doctor has a history, and, last, but not least, the Doctor has a memory."

"Indeed I can," was the prompt reply, "in fact, I was just now thinking of a stormy night like this when I had an opportunity to be of great help to a bright little Spanish lady."

"I was back in the winter of 188— that this little affair happened. I was not giving all my time to practicing medicine in those days, but was devoting about two-thirds of my time to work that carried me back and forth through miles of country lying around Los Angeles."

EXPERIENCE

IS BETTER THAN ARGUMENT

The world-wide fame of Mother Seigel's Syrup is based on the evidence of men and women whom it has cured of indigestion, biliousness, constipation, headaches, sleeplessness, flatulence, nervous depression, anaemia, and other disorders of the stomach, liver and kidneys.

Compounded of roots and herbs, Mother Seigel's Syrup contains digestive ferments and gentle tonics for the stomach, liver and kidneys. These qualities render it invaluable to all who, through unhealthy surroundings, sedentary occupation, worry, overwork, or climatic changes, lack the vitality which only good food, well digested, can supply.

When you are tortured with indigestion, so that you can't eat, can't work, can't think, can't sleep, you should at once give Mother Seigel's Syrup a trial. Tens of thousands of people testify to the curative qualities possessed by Mother Seigel's Syrup because it has cured them. Profit by their experience!

Here is some proof:—Mr. Christy Battenrow, Mabou, Inverness Co. N.S., writing on August 13th, 1908, says:—About eighteen months ago I took a severe cold, while at work near Marble Mountain, C.B. Neglect brought on frequent headaches, a racking cough and a sore side. While visiting a friend at Lake Umbagog, I was induced to take Mother Seigel's Syrup. In a short time my cough vanished and, apart from obtaining a cure, I increased my weight by thirteen pounds.

with them for the night. It had always been my custom to stop there, as the dishes cooked by Senora C— were worth riding miles to enjoy. I knew that she would keep something on the fire for me, and I was in that state of mind and body where I could do ample justice to anything spicy, burning, and sizzling hot, so I kept on my way.

"Verdugo Canon" was as black as midnight, and, I confess, I looked back with longing for a last glimpse of the light shining on the hill at the Judge's. Talk about a sheltered canon! That night it was the playground of the demons of the storm!

If old Bayard had not possessed extraordinary instinct for a horse, and an almost human intelligence, he could never have kept his footing. I aided him all I could with psalms and words of encouragement. Suddenly he snorted and jumped to one side with a start that nearly unseated me. A lantern flashed on our faces, and a voice cried out in Spanish: "Stop, senor!"

"Who is it, and what do you want?" I called in astonishment. "It is Josepha! I knew you, Senor Doctor, when you spoke to your horse. Oh, there is so much trouble— Rosa is dying!"

"Rosa is dying?" I interrupted in amazement. "The vision of this beautiful Spanish girl, the ball of all the country 'round, as she had looked, but two weeks before, in the Old Plaza Church, came back to me. She had always been a favorite of mine—she was so bright, so unaffected, and so warm-hearted."

"Yes, it is mostly her heart, senor. My mother doctors her, but it does no good. They told her Miguel was married, and she grew woe. It is a lie, senor! I know it is a lie!"

"Why didn't you tell her so?" "Oh, but she is sick, and she believes. It is so easy to believe wicked things when you are sick, senor."

"Come, we must get in, somewhere, so you are out of the rain, and then we can talk."

"No, I must stay here to stop Miguel—I was waiting for him when you came. I am all right—I have this rubber thing all wrapped about me."

"Stop Miguel!" I cried. "Why don't you let him go on and prove that he is not married? It would be the best thing!"

"No! no! senor! You do not understand. Listen! They hate him and they will kill him. Two weeks ago he killed Philippe. My father had said that Rosa must marry Philippe because he had much land and money. But Rosa did not say much—she and Miguel were planning to run away to the priests in Los Angeles. Philippe knew she liked Miguel, and he tried to kill him, but he was not quick enough for Miguel. I was glad, senor, but the men were wild with rage at Miguel, and drove him away, and he has been hiding in Tia Juana ever since."

"How will he be here tonight, then?" I asked.

"I sent Chico for him," she answered. "I said I would not marry him unless he went. He went last week, and he promised to have Miguel here tonight. I planned it all so well, senor—I would be alone with Rosa and I would slip Miguel in. He could whisper to her—she would know he was here and that they had told her a lie, and she would get well. Then he could come back some night and carry her off to Old Mexico and they could be happy."

"That sounds all right," I said.

NO MORE HEADACHES

Buffered From Constant Headaches—Cured by "Fruit-a-tives" When Doctors Failed.

"I was a sufferer from fearful headaches for over two years, sometimes they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I took all kinds of medicines prescribed by physicians, and yet the headaches persisted. I was rarely free from headache. A short time ago I was advised to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and I did so with, I must confess, very little faith, but after I had taken them for three days my headaches were easier and in a week they left me. After I had taken a box of the tablets my headache was cured. My appetite was always poor and my stomach bad, and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion is excellent. I had become thin and weak, and now I feel like a new man. I have taken in all three boxes of 'Fruit-a-tives'. I am exceedingly grateful to 'Fruit-a-tives' for curing me, and I give this unsolicited testimonial with great pleasure, as I hope thereby some other sufferer from headaches will be induced to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and will be cured."

(Sgd.) B. Cornell, Taylorville, Ont.
"Fruit-a-tives" is now put up in the new 25c trial size as well as the regular 50c boxes. Write Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, if your dealer will not supply you.

THAT PEVISH, DISCONTENTED EXPRESSION.

(Beatrice Fairfax.)
Girls, what is the matter, that so many of you are looking peevish and discontented?

It seems to me that I have never before met so many peevish faces as this summer. It seems such a shame to see a pretty face marred by lines of discontent. A mouth that droops into peevish lines will spoil the prettiest complexion, straightest noses and curliest hair in the world.

If you want to be nice looking you simply have not to cultivate a happy expression—there's no doubt about it. Perhaps absentmindedness and abstraction may have something to do with the expressions on some of the faces, and if that is the case I advise the girls to pull themselves together and think about how they look.

I passed such a pretty girl in the street the other day. She was prettily dressed and looked rosy and healthy. But the beauty was spoiled by the surest, most discontented expression I ever saw.

How would you like to sit opposite that kind of a face every morning at breakfast?

Do you suppose an employer enjoys having that kind of a face about his office?

If a young man is looking for a wife, is he going to pick out a girl who looks like that? I should like to see the girl for the sake of his future happiness.

If this peevish expression runs on for a generation or two—the typical New York face will be so snarled up and cranky looking as to be most repulsive.

It is a burning shame for the pretty girl to spoil her looks by peevishness, and it is downright foolhardy for the plain girl to indulge in sulks and crankiness. If you must look that way once in a while, stand in front of your looking glass and vent your ill humor on yourself. When you see how exceedingly unbecoming it is, you won't be in a hurry to try it again. You know we are not in the world for such a very long time, so don't you think it would be much better to try to see the sunny side of life? There are lots of hideous things, of course, that we can't shut our eyes to; but at the same time there are lots of lovely things, and it's a very good old world, take it all in all. You want people to like you, don't you? Well, be nice to them and they will be nice to you.

Remember that the world will not give something for nothing. You must always pay your share.

Sweetness, cheerfulness, the will to help others are bound to reap a rich harvest of love and appreciation. Put away your peevish face and bring out your sunny one.

No girl, no matter how irregular her features, can ever look unattractive if she carries in her face the expression of a sweet soul.

"But, oh, senora, it all went wrong," she sobbed. "Rosa grew so much worse—she is dying—they have sent to Los Angeles for the priest, and are all in her room now, watching and waiting. But Miguel won't listen—he will go in anyway—and they will kill him and Rosa will die."

"What doctor have they had, Josepha?" I asked.

"None, senora; my mother and the old women have given her medicine," she answered.

"None!" I cried. "Then I must go right on to the house. Perhaps I can help her. I would have gone on before, but I thought there was a doctor there."

"Just then a shrill whistle came from down the road, and Josepha, with a startled 'That's Chico's signal,' waved the lantern around in a circle.

"Chico rode up to us. 'How is she?' Miguel is here? We rode like the wind to the house. 'The doctor is listening to her heart, senora. He is very wise. He thinks she will be better soon,' I said.

"She had come to see if I had brought my doctor friend in to see her Rosa, and now that he was there, she was satisfied and could go back to the kitchen, and to the platter. She had seen Miguel's back, and as his head and face were well covered with the large muffer, I felt that all was safe.

"And so we kept it up for hours—either Josepha or I standing between Miguel and the mother whenever she would come into the room. Most of the time, I kept her busy in the kitchen, but her anxiety brought her often to the bedroom. Meanwhile, I doctored the sick girl, and Miguel caressed her, and tried to call her back with the sheer force of his love. After all, he was the greater doctor that time, for it was a broken heart that was causing most of the trouble. Between us, we at last brought her back to consciousness, and then my work was over for a time, and Miguel began anew. Her happiness was beautiful to see when she realized that Miguel was really there, and she soon fell asleep with a peaceful smile on her face.

"She was lying thus, with one hand in his, when the senora entered the dim room—he was watching her, 'reaching and feeling her pulse,' I explained. The mother rejoiced to find her daughter sleeping so calmly. I insisted that she go to bed and sleep and assured her that I would call her if Rosa should grow any worse.

"In the early morning hours, Rosa awoke with a clear brain, and her first thought was of Miguel. She was surprised to find him really there—she supposed that she had been only dreaming of his presence. In whispers he explained it all to her. He told her that he must leave soon, before it grew very light, but that he would stay in Los Angeles until she grew well and strong again. Then he would come for her, some night, and they would go to the priest's in the city, and then on to Old Mexico, to live. She promised to try to grow well fast, and to be able to ride horseback soon.

"The storm had spent its fury about midnight, and the beating of the rain upon the roof had gradually changed to a timid pattering of rain drops, and then ceased altogether. As the early morning light began to break in the east, we could see that a clear day was before us. Miguel stole out to the barn, saddled his horse, and rode away toward Los Angeles. Josepha gave me some blankets, and I rolled up on the floor of that empty front room, and was soon sound asleep.

"About noon, the next day, I awoke, stiff and sore in every muscle. I found Rosa bright and happy, and on the high road to recovery. Josepha had explained that the strange doctor had gone back to the 'City'—poor fellow, he had his head all wrapped up so."

"Yes, I think that I can help her. I do not think she will die—but it is her heart that is bad, senora, and it is a good thing that I have a friend outside who is a better doctor of the heart than I. I shall bring him in, and I am sure he can make her well; but, first, I must tell you that he has his head all wrapped up, and so it must be quiet in here, and no one must speak a word to him. All the people must leave this room and the front room there, and go to the kitchen. I shall open this window a little—too many people and no air are very bad for the sick. And, senora, you look very tired, you had better rest and send Josepha in to get the things we shall need. There will be nothing but what she can do for us, and if we need you, we will call."

"The senora had always liked me; she believed that I was a man who knew many things; so now my word was law with her. She drove all those people into the kitchen in a hurry, and then came back to say: 'That bad Josepha, Senora Doctor, has been out in the rain—she does such crazy things, sometimes—but she will put on a dry dress and be in soon.'

"I waited by the bedside a few moments to give Josepha time to get ready to come in, and then I sent the senora into the kitchen with particular directions for making a certain kind of plaster which must be very carefully put together. It must not be hurried, I told her, and must be watched every second. This, I felt sure, would keep her out in the kitchen for some time, and give me a chance to bring in Miguel.

"The way is clear," I whispered

CRUSADE OF HUMANITY AGAINST CONSUMPTION.

Washington, Sept. 23.—A remarkable education campaign formally was inaugurated here today. It was humanity's crusade against a most deadly foe, the white plague. The occasion was the opening of the sixth triennial international congress of tuberculosis at the National Museum.

A more distinguished gathering perhaps has never before met in the national capital. Scientists of international fame, the members of the diplomatic corps, philanthropists and doctors of every civilized nation were present. The first day of the convention was marked by simple, but unique ceremony. Preliminary to the formal opening of the diplomatic corps, the spokesmen of the various countries, the officers of the congress, the honorary presidents and the section presidents met in the office of Dr. Henry G. Eyer, chairman of the committee of exhibits in the museum buildings, shortly before 11 o'clock.

PANDORA Range

What a "Pandora" Hot-Water Attachment Means to Me

"BELOW—You see how I just turn on the tap and instantly get hot water for my dishes, washing, scrubbing, preserving, etc.

"ABOVE—you see how the pipes are connected to the bath and basin—no waiting for a bath—no carrying hot water upstairs."

"Pandora" Ranges can be supplied with a hot-water attachment if you haven't already got one, and the attachment does not either take extra fuel or interfere with baking.

The greater part of the day's session was devoted to responses by foreign delegates. At the conclusion of this feature of the programme, Secretary Cortelyou called the meeting, the delegates dispersed and will not assemble in general session again until Saturday morning, Oct. 3rd.

It is appalling to think of the sacrifice of lumber which has gone to waste through forest fires during the past months. Millions of dollars' worth have gone up in smoke, which has pervaded our towns and cities from the Pacific to the Atlantic and not only have the forests been destroyed but farm buildings, residences, bridges, etc., have gone with them.

The drought of the past month has been a subsidiary cause of the fires everywhere prevalent. Our own province has not suffered to the degree that other parts of the country have, most of the smoke which has been noticed here and which has turned our sun, night and morning, into a red ball of fire, coming from our neighboring province, New Brunswick.

Much care must have been exercised on the part of our forest rangers in preventing conflagration where the foliage and underbrush are dry as timber and the merest spark from camper's fire or pipe, or from the passing engine, is sufficient to start a blaze.

Relief at last is at hand in the welcome rain, which, sweeping across the continent from sea to sea, has just reached our Valley. The cattle in the fields rejoice in the swollen brooks and sweeter pasturage, and wells which have been dry have been filled again with life-giving streams.

September has been a month almost without rain. It has also been a month almost unprecedented in summer-like temperature, prolonging the season several weeks beyond its usual limit. Gradually as the genial atmosphere has been to us, the unseasonable temperature is said to have been somewhat detrimental to certain crops and fruits, particularly the later varieties of apples. We trust, however, no serious damage has been done.

others present, thus strangely turned to account and credited to the spirits of another sphere. It is gradually dawning upon students of psychological phenomena that the human personality is mentally and perhaps spiritually two-fold; that there is beneath the conscious mind which reasons and directs, a subconscious mind whose powers of mental and spiritual vision are far greater, whose power over material things, and in other ways may be vastly larger than has been dreamed of, and which is the permanent and enduring part of our personality.

Obituary.

MISS ELIZABETH P. CROPLEY.

(From the Lyn (Mass.) Item.) After a long illness, Miss Elizabeth Pearl Cropley, daughter of William Cropley, 35 Shepard street, passed on to her reward Monday forenoon. Miss Cropley was born in Port Lorne, Annapolis County, Nova Scotia, twenty three years ago, but had resided in this city the past seventeen years. She was a member of the First Baptist church and for a number of years had been very active, serving in offices in the Christian Endeavor Society and in the Sunday School.

W. J. SINCLAIR.

The Daily News of New Westminster, B. C., reports the death of W. J. Sinclair, of Tappanish, Wash., on the 12th inst., of heart failure. He was 62 years of age and was a native of Sherbrooke, N. S. He resided in Bridgetown for some time, and went west and settled in New Westminster in 1888. He conducted a general store for ten years, when he was burned out in the big fire. He went to Dawson where he remained five years. On his return he resided in the State of Washington until his death. He leaves two sons, W. E. and A. S. Sinclair in New Westminster, and one daughter, Mrs. A. E. Andrews, of Pictou, N. S. His wife was formerly Miss Margaret Willett, of Granville Ferry, and she was on a visit to Pictou at the time of the sudden death of Mr. Sinclair.

BUSINESS TRANSFER.

(Colchester Sun.) It has come to our knowledge that the business of the Intercolonial Toilet Company, of Truro, as previously managed by Mr. L. L. Sibley has been sold to Mr. James W. Buckley, for some time resident in Bridgetown, N. S. Mr. Sibley commenced this business some eighteen months ago and has met with exceedingly great success in working up a very profitable business. The product of the establishment having given entire satisfaction wherever they have been tried. Mr. Sibley has been retained as manager for a number of years and continues to invite the public as patrons of the company and is prepared to give and guarantee satisfaction in every particular.

Persons who are interested in psychic phenomena have been reading with much interest "Eman" Garland's series of articles in Everybody's Magazine. His conclusions reached through experiments with spiritualistic mediums are based on the theory that mediums have a highly developed subconscious mind which is reflected under certain conditions and that the messages and arduously supernatural phenomena which they exhibit are merely revelations of this subconscious self as displayed in hypnotism, telepathy, and other extraordinary expressions of mental force.

AN INNOCENT PRISONER.

Winnipeg, Sept. 25.—A miscarriage of justice has probably caused a young Englishman named Blunden to serve four years in the penitentiary as punishment for a crime—cattle stealing—which he may never have committed. The Minister of Justice is to be asked to investigate the circumstances surrounding this case and to endeavor to make some restitution should it be shown that an innocent man has actually been wronged. Blunden was arrested four years ago and the crown based its case on the evidence of a man who has since been proved to be a cattle-rustler himself. Miss Archibald, a missionary in India, the Baptist church at Dartmouth will be fortunate if the minister chosen by the congregation accepts the call.—Exchange.

SMITH—HARLOW.

On Wednesday morning, Sept. 30th, at "East Lawn," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Harlow, occurred one of the prettiest weddings of the season, when their sister, Miss Lottie Estelle Harlow, was united in marriage to Mr. Henry Mitchell Smith, of New Glasgow.

The whole of the first floor of the beautiful home was thrown open and artistically decorated by Mrs. C. H. Strong and Miss Prat.

The impressive ring ceremony was read by the Rev. Charles R. Freeman (cousin of the bride), of Aylesford, assisted by Rev. A. S. Lewis.

Mrs. C. R. Freeman presided at the piano, playing Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the bridal party entered, and also during the congratulations which followed the ceremony, and Schubert's "Serenade" during the ceremony.

An elegant three-course breakfast was then served by Mrs. Strong, Miss Prat and Miss Beeler to the invited guests, who included only the relatives and intimate friends of the bride.

Amid showers of rice and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on the Bluenose for a tour of America and Canadian cities.

The bride's going-away gown was a handsome tailored suit of brown broadcloth, with hat and accessories in keeping.

The presents were numerous, including silver, cut glass, china, linen, and several cash gifts. The groom's present to the bride was a purse of gold.

AMBERMAN—RUMSEY.

A very interesting event, which occurred at the old Amberman homestead, Granville Ferry, on the 1st inst., was the marriage of Mr. John L. Amberman, of Granville Ferry, and Mrs. Lucy H. Rumsey, of South Boston, Mass. The bride, who was very tastefully arrayed in a gown of grey cloth, was supported by her cousin, Mrs. Ernest Hutchinson, of Brookline, Mass.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. K. West, pastor of the U. B. Church of Lower Granville. After a bountiful repast had been served, and a very enjoyable evening spent, the guests returned to their homes wishing the happy couple many years of prosperity and happiness.

A number of presents, some of them coming from a great distance, attested to the popularity of the bride, while a congratulatory address to the bridegroom from the Sunday School, which he has served faithfully since his first connection with it, will be long counted among his choicest treasures. We understand that the Division of Sons of Temperance purpose showing their appreciation of a good and worthy brother.

NORMAL SCHOOL OPENING.

(Truro News.) The Provincial Normal School opened this morning with an unusually large attendance, no fewer than 138 presenting themselves, divided as follows: A's, 7; B's 106 and D's 25. Dr. Saloon and Dr. Hall were unavoidably absent—the latter owing to the death of his brother-in-law, which took place yesterday morning.

TO RECEIVE A CALL TO DARTMOUTH BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. A. Judson Archibald, now pastor of a church at Dalton, Manitoba, will receive a call to the pastorate of the Dartmouth Baptist church. Since the resignation of Rev. W. C. Vincent two months ago, a committee has been busy looking around for a suitable successor to Mr. Vincent. On Wednesday night a meeting of the congregation was held and it was adjourned until Sunday night after the service, when it was decided to extend a unanimous call to Rev. A. J. Archibald. Mr. Archibald is one of a family of three brothers and a sister, the children of a well known deceased Baptist clergyman, for many years pastor of the Baptist church at Lunenburg. The brothers, Arthur, Edward and Judson, are all in the ministry, and Miss Archibald is a missionary in India.

MARRIED AT CHICAGO.

The marriage took place in Chicago, on September 5th, of Mr. P. P. Lawson, formerly of Grafton, and at one time editor of the Western Chronicle, to Mrs. Maud Tyron, of Chicago. It was a quiet wedding. Our readers will remember the incident about a year ago when Mr. Lawson met with an accident while yachting on the lake and barely escaped death. One of his companions who lost his life at that time was the husband of the lady Mr. Lawson has married.

AMBERMAN—RUMSEY.—At Granville Ferry, October 1st, by the Rev. J. K. West, Mr. John L. Amberman, of Granville Ferry, and Mrs. Lucy H. Rumsey, of South Boston.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—Twenty persons were killed and nineteen seriously injured as the result of a terrible collision on the elevated railway in the centre of Berlin this afternoon. Nine of the injured are believed in a hopeless condition.

A recent issue of the Hants Journal contains a cut of the handsome gates erected at Riverside Cemetery, Hantsport, by J. W. Churchill, Esq., of that town. The main entrance is 15 feet wide and the archway 10 feet high. The two side gates are five feet wide. The columns supporting the main archway were made from the masts of the old brigantine Genoa, owned by E. Churchill & Sons. The painting is in imitation of red and grey granite with sandstone base, the gates being in green. Mr. Churchill's splendid gift for the improvement of God's acre has set a commendable example.

The marriage of Mr. Harry Dodge, formerly of Granville, now of Trail, B. C., to Miss Gwendolen Dakin, of Naby, takes place today. They will have immediately for British Columbia, where they will reside.

J. E. Lloyd has closed his cheese factory for the season. The output has been somewhat limited by the limited supply of milk received. The manufacture has been of excellent quality and finds a good market.

A meeting is to be held in Temperance Hall, Lawrenceton, on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, for the organization of an Electrical Purify League for Annapolis County. All interested in securing clean elections are invited to be present.

Heavy shipments of apples have gone forward during the past fortnight. Over 100,000 barrels have already been shipped from Halifax for European markets. The Shenandoah leaves this week with a cargo of 21,000 barrels for Liverpool. This is the largest shipment ever sent to that port.

Miss Alice DeWitt was seriously hurt a few days ago by a kick in the side from the famous trotter, Terrace Queen, belonging to her father, Mr. Charles DeWitt. The animal was in the pasture, and when Miss DeWitt went up to it let its heels fly, striking her in the side. It is not yet known quite how badly she was injured, but the wound has been very painful.

Graham P. Morse, eldest son of E. J. Morse, of Windsor, the resident engineer of the Londonderry Iron Co. at Nictaux, was obliged to return home on Wednesday afternoon, through a serious illness, which required a surgical operation, which was successfully performed by Dr. Murdoch Chisholm, of Halifax, assisted by Drs. C. Marzesson, J. W. and C. H. Morris.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL.

Mass will be celebrated in St. Alphonsus's Church on Sunday next at 11 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. McAndrews are occupying the lower flat of Mrs. John Murdoch's house.

Town Clerk Milner was in Annapolis yesterday acting as counsel for the defendant in a suit for trespass, Orde vs. Vidito. Judgment has not been given.

An Irish terrier belonging to one of our citizens has brought trouble to a sheep dealer and a bill of expenses to his owner, we understand, through his depredations among a number of sheep pastured in a field near town.

An express train running 60 miles an hour without stopping for 22 hours would just travel the distance covered by the packets (placed end to end) gold in one year of 'Salada' Tea. Annual sale exceeds eighteen million packets.

The members of the Junior Mission Band of the Baptist Church will hold a sale of Ladies' and Gents' Handkerchiefs, together with ice-cream and home-made Candy, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 14th, in the vestry of the Church, from 7 to 9.30 o'clock.

A workman on the D. J. A. R. bridge at Clementsport, a few days since, by the name of Thibideau, became alarmed by the approach of the Blue-nose train and, mistaking his footbridge for a trestle, fell from a distance of about 75 feet. He is not expected to recover.

A criminal case was tried before Justice Russell at Annapolis yesterday in which the defendant, a colored man by the name of Leander Guy, was tried for indecent assault upon a six-year-old girl. The man was found guilty but sentence has not yet been given. Mr. Irvin conducted the case, and W. E. Roscoe was counsel for the defendant.

The Royal Theatre is drawing crowds every evening now. It has had special attractions in vauville features for a week past, but outside of this they are showing a fine line of pictures. Many of them are of the celebrated Pathe's make, which are of a superior grade. A stage and wings have recently been added to accommodate the vauville performers.

At a meeting of the Town Council on Monday evening, a resolution was passed asking the telephone, telegraph, and electric light companies to point out straight their poles. Mr. James Goldsmith was appointed a constable for the town. There was some discussion about placing of town depositories and collection of rates but no action was taken. A number of bills were paid.

The Millinery Openings will be held this week at Miss Chute's, and Miss Dearness & Phelan's. The ladies of Bridgetown and neighboring villages will do well to attend and get ideas for their winter headwear, as they may be assured that they can do no better as to style or price in any town in the province. Our milliners are justly noted for their skill and proficiency in the millinery art.

The veteran building mover of Annapolis County, Mr. W. A. Chute, of Bear River, has just accomplished a feat in building moving which is the talk of the locality, Ingleville, where the house of Mr. Sydney Bayers was carried across a meadow and rough pasture land and up a heavy grade, a distance of 1,000 feet, while occupied by the family and with furniture and furnishings undisturbed, and was set upon its new foundation in excellent condition.

St. John Times.—This evening, in Queen Square Church, one of the most effective advocates of prohibition in Nova Scotia will speak on "Prohibition vs. License." The speaker will be the Rev. William Brown, pastor of the Lawrenceton Methodist Church. A leading St. John advocate of prohibition states that if all pastors of churches were as vigorous and outspoken as Mr. Brown, the cause would very soon triumph in Canada.

Friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Palfrey made them a surprise visit on Saturday evening, the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Refreshments were served, speeches made, tangible tokens of esteem were presented, and a very pleasant hour was spent in congratulations and good wishes for the future. The hour of time was delightfully with Mr. and Mrs. Palfrey, and many friends who were not present on this occasion will join with those who were present in sincere expressions of desire for the welfare of the parents and their children.

former are more generally worn. This year the silk gloves come in all colors and lengths, and they are embroidered in many pretty ways. Embroidered in self tones they are in good taste.

Periwinkles represent a very favorite millinery flower just now, especially where hats for children are concerned, the blossoms being arranged in wreaths around the dome shaped crowns of the hats and mingled with quantities of natural colored foliage and long tendrils.

Very fascinating are the one piece boleros this year. The illustration shows one of the latest models in these jackets. To make this garment for the average person it requires one and three-quarter yards of material twenty-seven inches wide or one and a quarter yards of thirty-six inch material.

Satin bands undecorated will be quite sufficient. Worn over a colored frock and confined at the waist line with a black satin belt, the effect will be very smart.

Chasuble coats for summer wear have the sides tucked over the apron like a priest's garment and a circular place cut out for the neck. Fasten the cuffs and collar.

The princess slip illustrated can be worn under any dress and is made with neck and long sleeves or low neck and short sleeves. It can be buttoned at the back or front. The waist portion has the appearance of a well fitted corset cover. The skirt is seven gored, and can be with or without the dounce. A strip of wide banding is the most satisfactory for joining the waist and skirt.

Front Panels on Skirts Popular—Study Economy When Planning Clothes.
 A good many of the new skirts are made up with a front panel. The goods overlying it, really an echo of the overskirt, are in nine cases out of ten indelibly more becoming. When striped fabrics are used, the effect is much better if the material composing the panel is cut so that the stripes form a V. Especially is this so when the wearer to be is stout and short.

It is always well for the woman who must study economy in planning her clothes to know what is the latest mode, for then she can study it carefully and see how she can adapt the new style to her own individual need. In making over a dress where it is necessary to combine some old fabric with new, braiding comes in most conveniently.

An idea which some mothers conceive to protect the little skirts is that of cutting the apron longer and allowing sufficient material to turn up and reach the waist line; then the lower edge is gathered into a belt. After the apron is slipped on and buttoned and the underskirts arranged the belt is buttoned up around the waist line underneath all the skirts, so that the dress and petticoats are between the part turned up, thus effectually protecting the skirts and looking neater than the little bloomer. #### A CHEERFUL VICTIM.

Hon. Wilfred Hosford and his wife did not believe in nicknames, nor did they intend their boy to have one if they could prevent it.

"I was never known as Will or Willy," said Mr. Hosford, with dignity, "and I see no reason why my son, Wilfred Sawtell Hosford, should receive either of those names or the still more objectionable one of Bill."

Wilfred Sawtell Hosford was delicate for the first ten years of his life and received his education at the hands of a grave young tutor. He grew stronger as time went on and at the age of twelve entered the public school. On his return from the first session he was solemnly questioned by his parents.

"The boys are going to like me, I guess," said Wilfred eagerly. "They have a nickname for me already."

"Mrs. Hosford chaffered and the father looked stern.

"Do you mean to say you enjoy being called Willy or Bill?" he asked in his deepest tones.

"Oh, they've got a better name than those," said the boy, with a broad grin. "The smartest fellow in the class, Sandy Lane, thought it up almost 'fright of as soon as he heard my name. They're going to call me Saw-Hogs."

Oscar Hammerstein, at a theatrical dinner in New York, told some reminiscences of theatrical deadheads.

"Then there was Blank," said Mr. Hammerstein. "Blank's impudence was second only to that of a waiter I heard about the other day.

"Look here, waiter," said a guest; "this fish is not cooked properly."

"I know it," said the waiter; "but you told me it was for your wife."

"Well, what of that?" asked the surprised guest.

"Why," said the waiter, "I knew that if the lady was your wife she couldn't be very particular."—New York Tribune.

Little Bob, who for some months had invariably ended his evening prayer with "Please send me a baby brother," announced to his mother that he was tired of praying for what he did not get, and that he did not believe God had any more little boys to send.

Not long afterward he was carried into his mother's room very early in the morning to see twin boys who had arrived during the night. Bob looked at the two babies critically, and then remarked: "It's a good thing I stopped praying, or there'd been three of them."

A Scotch an, wishing to know his fate at once, telegraphed a proposal of marriage to the lady of his choice. After spending the entire day at the telegraph office he was finally rewarded late in the evening by an affirmative answer.

"If I were you," suggested the operator when he delivered the message "I'd think twice before I'd marry a girl that kept me waiting all day for my answer."

"Na, na," retorted the Scot. "The lass who waits for the night rates is the lass for me."—Illustrated Bits.

THE WRONG LETTERS.

A physician in a small town was distinguished by his inability to remember names and people. One day, while making out a patient's receipt, his visitor's name escaped him. Not wishing to appear so forgetful, and thinking to get a clue, he asked her whether she spelled her name with an "e" or an "i." The lady, smilingly replied, "Why, doctor, my name is Hill."

Last summer a gentleman who was separated from one of his boys for some days wrote to the boy every day, and enclosed a dime in each letter. No letter came in reply for several days, and then the boy wrote the following letter:

Dear Papa—Every time you have written to me you have put a dime in the letter. Please write oftener to your loving son.

A good lady of indefinite education but ample purse went into a book-seller's to buy a gift for her husband. She hovered round and manifested the usual indecision, whereupon an assistant, to help her out of the difficulty, suggested a set of Shakespeares.

"Oh," replied the lady very promptly, "he read that when it first came out."

Mother viciously scrubbing her small boy's face with soap and water)—Johnny, didn't I tell you never to blacken your face with burnt cork again. Here I have been scrubbing half an hour and it won't come off.

PERHAPS THESE HINTS WILL BE HELPFUL TO YOU.

Salt the water in which the onions are boiled, as this helps to keep the flavor.

A few grains of rice in the salt cellar will keep the salt from becoming moist and sticky.

Try chopped prunes, softened in water before chopping, as a substitute for raisins in cakes.

The kitchen alarm clock, if set at the time the dinner should go on or come off will act as a good reminder.

Have a cotton shirtwaist box in the sewing room to receive the left-over pieces of dresses, blouses and pinafores.

A piece of white oilcloth in a linen envelope placed under the plates of children is a great-savings to clean tablecloths.

When the color wears off your floor try a good dye dissolved in hot water and rubbed in with the scrubbing brush. Follow with a coat of varnish.

An oilcloth curtain, wider than the open window, with rods run through the top and bottom hems will keep out wind and rain on a stormy night while admitting air over and under it.

A wire sieve fitted inside pots in which vegetables are boiled, and coming only within an inch or so of the bottom of the pot, will prevent any danger of such delicate things as rice or marrow scorching through water evaporation.

Covers of pots and pans are most conveniently kept on racks on the back of the cupboard door. A door-spring stretched across a crosswise panel will hold the lids between itself and the door if screw hooks are fastened to the lower edge of the panel to support them below.

The least bit of soap should not be wasted. Remnants of kitchen soap should all go into the soap-shaker so useful for shaking in the dishpan. Pieces of toilet soap may be kept in a jar, and when a sufficient amount has accumulated, dissolved in boiling water, and used as soap jelly in the bath.

Houses without clothes closets would be the better of a few clothes racks like the following: Ten feet of 1 1/2 inch curtain pole is supported horizontally by two wooden standards six feet six inches high. The clothes are stretched on clothes hangers and the latter hooked on to the curtain pole. To keep the least off a pretty curtain of unbleached sheeting bordered with strips of chintz may be thrown over the curtain pole.

To revive flowers drooping after a journey place the stems in a jar of warm water mixed with a few drops of liquid camphor and set the jar in a cool, dark place till the flowers become fresh again, then place in pure water. Warm water with a little salt is also used. Cut the stems of the flowers a little each day in order that they may draw up the water. A bit of charcoal in the water helps to keep it from becoming slimy and unpleasant in smell.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. THE HOME

FRIENDSHIP AND COLD POTATOES.

(By Caroline Benedict Burrell.) Three young women were taking afternoon tea together, one day lately, when one of them started a subject of moment. 'What would you do,' she asked, 'if you had nothing in the house but cold potatoes and a friend should come in to luncheon?'

'If the friend happened to be yourself,' said one, nodding to the speaker, 'I would say, "I am going to have cold potatoes for lunch; stay and have some!"'

'But if it happened to be Bertha,' said the third, naming an absent acquaintance of all, 'we would rush around, stir up mayonnaise, somehow get capers and olives and lettuce, and let her sit down to delicious potato salad.'

'That's just my point,' said the first speaker, emphatically. 'You have shown how you feel toward her by that speech. She isn't your friend at all, not one who understands you through and through, or cold potatoes would never matter between you. It is where we draw the potato, as that tells the tale. Some would despise our cold potatoes; some would think them queer, and wonder at our lack of pride in offering anything so meagre and humble. But some—plenty of them, and the nicest people of all—would appreciate the spirit in which they were offered, and would get what went with them—a good time.'

'In other words, you make a metaphorical cold potatoes "the test of friendship,"' commented one of the trio; 'suppose you preach us a sermon on that theme.'

'I will!' responded the originator of the proposition. 'Firstly, my sisters, why are we so foolish as to try and put on frills as we do? The hat at this moment adorning my head cost $15, and five ought to have been the limit of my expenditure. I needed the other ten for some books and a porch chair and an umbrella; but I was going to a reception, and I was ashamed to wear a five dollar hat, so I got this one. My hostess never glanced at it; neither did anybody else; it was lost in a wilderness of hats. I came away knowing that I'd been what Mrs. Willie King would have labelled "a really dead female," a perfect fool! I want that chair; I want those books; most of all—thanks to the hat—I want that umbrella; but I've got to go without. I was ashamed to offer cold potatoes to a friend, so I offered her a salad—this extravagant headpiece. Just a little independence and I'd have retained the self respect I've lost.'

'And, secondly, my sisters, if we were to offer cold potatoes or nothing, in the way of hospitality, why do we decline to give our friends what we have got? Why shut ourselves off from society because we cannot exchange sweetbreads and quail with them? We all know women who could perfectly well entertain in a simple style who will not do so because they cannot keep up with their neighbors. Their china is chipped, or there are not enough plates that match to go around, or they do not have a maid, or the parlor carpet is shabby, so they decline to accept invitations since they cannot return them in kind, and with their husbands and children stay at home and grow sour together, because they are outsiders. Why, in the name of all that is sensible, do they not ask people in spite of all drawbacks? What difference does it make what one has to eat or how the carpet looks, if only one has a good time? And just here, as in other sermons, comes an illustration: 'Once there was a certain woman who wrote books. They were so delightful, so clever, that a famous Englishman opened a correspondence with her and presently wrote that he was coming to America, and would like to call. Now this woman had a husband and six children; they lived in the country and kept but one maid of all work; and when, without further notice, the Englishman arrived, bringing three friends with him, the maid was out and the family partaking of a supper of bread and milk and raspberries. Not at all abashed, the hostess explained the situation and set forth more supplies, and the men drew up their chairs and with exclamations of "Fancy now!" and "How droll!" they ate bread and milk and raspberries. But they enjoyed them, and found their host and hostess so entertaining that they went away feeling that they had had a beautiful time and met delightful people. You see, the cold potatoes did not matter at all. 'But, thirdly, my sisters, most important, consider the other side of the question. Think of the outsiders! There they are, those nice, friendly people, whom we hold in our hearts as dear as our own. Some of them are poor—not poverty-poor, perhaps, but lonely; they never see the inside of a home. What do they care for frills? What they want is neighborliness, and our foolish pride forbids it. 'And here are the poor rich, to whom our simple things and easy ways seem perfectly delightful, whom we hold at bowing distance because we cannot keep their pace, and are ashamed of our own. Why don't we ask them to come in and have good times with us? The best of them would never see that the carpet was shabby, nor care, if it was pointed out to them. They want to sit around our chafing dish, or help us to eat up an omelette in the kitchen and forget those tiresome, stately dinner parties, and the deadly monotony of elaborate service. What they crave is cold potatoes—cold potatoes and sauce piquante. 'In other words, and to conclude: Friendship is one of the very best things in this old world, and we have not half enough of it. Let's try and be friendly; let's try and get down to the real things and give and take in frank, simple fashion. If we happen to have gorgeous, stately houses and expensive clothes, they are not to stand in our way; if we do not make too much of them other people will not, either. If, on the other hand, we have little houses and plain garments and do our own work, let us ignore those minor details and be friendly and hospitable just the same. It is not what we give, but the way we give, that counts. "Not rudely, nor ostentatiously," nor shoddily, but gladly, openly, without pretence of any kind.

COLD AS A TONIC.

Who has not witnessed a prompt response from dashing a few drops of cold water on the face of a fainting person? The liver, stomach, heart, lungs and other important organs can be physiologically aroused to similar increased activity by a brief application of cold water to the skin overlying them. The skin is a sort of keyboard upon which we can so play as to secure increased and more efficient activity from the organs within. Short applications of cold water act as a sort of fire alarm to the various tissue cells of the body. It has been found that cold applications over the stomach increase the quantity of gastric juice. After a short cold bath, which is followed by good reaction, 25 per cent. more white cells are abroad in the general circulation than before; and as they are important agents in the repair and restoration of the tissues, the significance of such an increase must be apparent. Such applications may consist of a hand bath, cold towel rub, or a short full plunge bath and should be taken in a warm room, and followed by vigorous friction with a coarse towel until a thorough glow and sense of comfort is secured all over the body. Such a bath not only increases the physical activities of the body, but the mental as well.

There are so many duties—many of them little duties—which a child can do, lessening the mother's work, giving her more time for thought and recreation. Permitting the child to do these is a kindness which will be fully appreciated by it at maturity.

Many women look upon housework as a drudgery, and, to many it is, while to others it is a pleasure. The difference between the two is the manner in which it is done. Work done in the proper spirit is always a matter of art; it matters not what sort of work it be—painting pictures or sweeping a room.

The growing of vegetables in green-houses under glass has been given much attention the past 20 years. Crops can be grown to greater perfection in this way than in the field, and by the use of glass many crops can be grown for market all the year round, practically making them continuous. Among these crops which are grown continuously are parsley, tomatoes, cucumbers and lettuce, which can all be grown to greater perfection in houses than outside.

TIMELY RECIPES.

French Potatoes.—Cut raw potatoes in long strips one-fourth of an inch thick, or into square-inch pieces, and lay in cold water over night. In the morning dry in a towel and fry, or rather boil in deep kettle of lard until light golden brown. Drain on coarse brown paper. A wire basket should be used.

Potato puff is delicious with creamed chicken. To one pint of hot mashed potatoes add one tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of pepper, half that quantity of celery salt, and hot milk enough to moisten well.

Sample Boxes Free!! The most powerful healer in the world is Zam-Buk, and we offer you a free trial box. Zam-Buk combines the knowledge of the ancients with the science of the moderns. The charioteers, gladiators, and wrestlers of ancient Greece seldom emerged from their contests without some gaping wound or severe bruise, and to blot their injuries with secret balms was part of the day's program. In Zam-Buk you have the modern representative of these ancient healers. Ordinary ointments contain mostly random animal fat or poisonous mineral substances. Leave the lid off these ointments for a few days and note the result. Zam-Buk on the contrary, is absolutely free from any trace of animal fat or mineral poison. It is made from purely herbal essences, is so concentrated and purified that it is suitable for the delicate Zam-Buk never goes rancid; it always keeps clean, fresh, and sweet. Nature has given man the instinct to rub a place that hurts. She has also given him Zam-Buk. Nature's own herbal healer, with which to rub. Prevents suppuration, blood poisoning, etc. It draws out inflammation, ends pain and smarting, and heals. The best test is a personal test. Send in for a free box and let Zam-Buk prove its own case. See coupon below.

ZAM-BUK THE GREAT SKIN-CURE. When partly cool, add the yolks of two eggs, beaten stiff, and then put in the whites beaten stiff. Bake ten minutes in a hot oven and it comes out in a golden brown meringue. That is an especially good way to serve old potatoes that have to be cut up a good deal in paring them. Julienne Soup.—Cut the red part of four carrots, four turnips, three onions, the white of one head of celery and of six leeks in straws, about one inch long, put them in a steppan with one quarter pound of butter and a pinch of powdered sugar; boil them to a light brown color; moisten them with three quarts of clear double broth; simmer all very slowly on the corner of the stove for three hours and twenty minutes before serving; add a cabbage, lettuce and a handful of corral, cut in the same way as the other vegetables, previously bleached; skim off fat and serve.

Word was received here last week that Doctor Beverly O. Kinnear, who has been on the staff of the Sanatorium, Clifton Springs, N. Y., for the past ten years, died on Tuesday evening, of peritonitis. He had not felt well for some weeks but was stricken only on Monday. The interment took place on Friday in Woodlawn Cemetery, New York. Deceased was a brother of Mrs. (Dr.) Robinson, of this town.
A serious accident occurred on Monday as the west-bound express train was passing over Allens River bridge. One of the mail clerks, Mr. Conrad, happened to put his head out of the car door and in doing so he was struck by one of the upright posts on the bridge, receiving several bad cuts on the head. The train was stopped and run back to Annapolis. The injured man was taken to the Queen Hotel, where his injuries were attended to by Dr. Robinson. At first it was thought he could not live but latest reports are more favorable.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

No man yet was ever made more tender by having tenderness demanded of him; no man yet was ever cried into loving his wife more. I am willing to admit that men are as faulty creatures as women themselves, unsympathetic in small things, often blind, and that they may easily be exasperated into small brutalities of speech. If a woman refrains from exacting devotion, and is unwaveringly kind and unselfish, a husband who can be left to look out for doing his share. He will look out for it, anyway; no one else can make him. Neither tears nor entreaties will wring from him those small kindnesses and attentions so dear to woman.
