WHERE SHALL WE LOOK FOR RELIGION?

We may look for religion where we plant it. If by our principles, our ministry, our people, we plant the seed of the Gospel in our courts, tenements, city streets, factories, back lots, school rooms, pulpits, kitchens, family altars, we may anticipate seeing the seed bear fruit there. Religion is scarcely a plant to be nourished only in a certain church building and on one day a week. Religion is the Sermon on the Mount with its sandals on, and its seed corn under its arm, out abroad on that mountain and in the plain and town where the sowing is good, out where men surge and to fro and are lost because they do not understand Jesus Christ.

It is not easy to stand up and sow this seed in these times. Not that it takes so much courage, but because the path is not distinctly visible. Marcus Dods once said, "I do not envy those who have to fight the battle of the twentieth century. Yes, perhaps I do. But it will be a stiff fight." But Bishop Williams, that prophet, declared, "A stiff fight is what a true soldier of Christ wishes to get into."

The point is, we may look for religion where we sow it. If we sow it with spiritual exercises and exhortations one day in the week and hang it up with our Sunday clothes and become servitors of tables or pleasure or checkbooks the other days, we may not get much to show for our expenditure there. Why not honestly try to sow it everywhere and every day; right where we live?

Mr. A. H. Howard, of the Western Union, who has been on a six weeks' vacation to Canada, returned on Thursday, June 14th.

During the past weeks a large number of people have visited the Church of England Cemetery and attended to the graves of the departed. There are still several plots not attended to, and it is earnestly hoped that those responsible will see that they are looked after during the coming week.

NIGHT CAMP

A Horse to ride and a dog to love,
And a fire to warm me by,
End of the trail and high above
The sweep of the starlit sky—
And where is there more for a man's desire
Than a horse and a dog and a pine-wood fire?

The horse will bear me far and swift
And the dog will guard my rest
When I lie me down on a dead leaf
Of drift,
Close to the brown earth's breast.
But ah! the ache of an unmet desire,
And the face that I see in the pine-wood fire.

MURDER ON RUM SMUGGLER.

The discovery of scraps of a woman's clothing on the two-masted smuggler, Mary Beatrice, which was picked up on Wednesday last at the entrance of New York harbor, after her crew had been slain by Chinese passengers whom Captain Williams, of the Treasury Department, said he had been informed of by an unnamed "stool pigeon," is another link in the mystery chain now baffling the police and the detectives of the United States.

In the fight between the passengers and crew, five Chinese and all of the crew were killed.

Messrs. Baine Johnston & Company received a message on June 13 from Mr. J. T. Croucher, their agent, who is now on his way to Battle Har. which would indicate that fishery prospects on the West Coast and in the Straits were looking favorable at present. The message was sent from Hawke's Harbor and reads as follows: "Good trapping Lark Hr., Trout River and Bonne Bay; plenty caplin. Reported no ice in Straits."

The joke is told of on the mayor of San Francisco who talked into a broadcasting outfit an invitation to anyone who heard him to send him a telegram, collect, and found, next day, the bill reach $12,000.

THE KING'S MESSAGE.

To The Children in The Elementary Schools of The Empire

ON this day My People in all parts of the world join to celebrate their unity and to draw closer the common ties which hold them together.

Each of our many peoples has its own life to live, each has its own work to do; yet all are members of one family, sharing their sorrows and joys.

You have learned how the Empire was built up by brave and wise men and women in the past. It is only by courage, wisdom and unselfishness that it will endure. It is a great inheritance. Your fathers and forefathers made it. Its future welfare and good name are, under the Providence of God, in your hands.

Do not think of it as a thing far away from you. Every one of you counts, and what you do and learn now will decide how far you will be able to play your part worthily when you grow up.

Get knowledge, be brave, honourable and kind, thinking of others before yourselves, and always play the game. So will you fit yourselves to you the daughters of our world-wide family of nations and peoples. Think always of what you can best prepare yourselves to make happy homes for the generations of children which will follow you. In our vast Empire there are many kinds of homes and many different customs. The home which fosters clean minds and kind hearts is God's Temple; and the spirit of the good home, whether it be rich or poor, is one of the best things in the world. You can learn many lessons at school which will help you to become wise and useful citizens of the British Commonwealth; but you can learn and practice nothing better for yourselves and all members of the great British family than the simple lessons of love, kindness and unselfishness which in cloud or sunshine are the strength and beauty of life.

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.

To The Girls in the Elementary Schools of The Empire.

On this day of memory and hope, which is also the birthday of good Queen Victoria, this is my message to you the daughters of our world-wide family of nations and peoples.

MOUNT ETNA IN ERUPTION

Mount Etna, the great burning mountain in Sicily, broke out on Sunday, June 17th, and great rivers of molten rock poured down the steep hills of the mountain laying waste the surrounding countryside.

The important railway station of Castiglione was completely destroyed. Several houses collapsed but the 16,000 inhabitants got away in safety. From Catania on June 20th, the report says, the situation is practically unchanged. Lava streams on the town of Lingua Glossa at the rate of about forty yards an hour. One by one the little towns in that area have been evacuated, and the entire scene of the once beautiful country gives the aspect of a dead land.

THE GIRL OF YESTERDAY.

Dear little girl with the pigtailed hair,
Where are you to-day?
Won't you come back from the long ago
So we can play?
We'll play the games you used to love,
Just you and I.
Dear little girl with the laugh so gay
And wistful eye.
And afterward, perhaps, you'll sit
Close by my side,
And tell me of your simple faith,
For mine has died.
Dear little girl of yesterday,
Can it be true
That ever so many years ago
I was you?

RULES FOR Making Cod Liver Oil

For the Guidance of Manufacturers

- 1st. The manager in charge of factory must see that the livers are fresh; that all brown or poor livers are thrown out; that there is no gall bladder attached to any livers.
 - 2nd. The good livers must then be washed in a tub of clean fresh water.
 - 3rd. The pan in which the livers are boiled must be perfectly clean inside, before any livers are placed in it.
 - 4th. Before you start to boil any livers, you must have sufficient steam.
 - 5th. Turn on the steam, and use as much as you need to have for the quantity of livers you have in your pan. Boil until the white scum floats off (which will take about thirty minutes.) Don't forget to stir the livers, and see that those in the bottom and those around the sides are brought into direct contact with the steam all the time.
 - 6th. Turn the steam off, and allow all to settle, not exceeding five minutes, according to capacity of liver boiler.
 - 7th. Then you dip all the oil you can get, which is the finest white oil. Put this oil in a cooling tank made of galvanized iron, and let the oil remain there till next morning. Don't forget to put a straining cloth over the cooling tank before you put any oil in, so that it will catch any bits of blubber; allow to remain 12 or 14 hours, or longer if possible, then dip from cooling tank and strain through double calico bag, inside bag to be one inch smaller all around; then strain into a tin shute under the bags, the cask to be at the end of the shute with a funnel, to lead oil into casks, which funnel to be covered with cheese cloth.
 - 8th. When you have dipped the finest oil from the top of the liver oiler pan, take all the blubber from the pan while it is warm. The oil from this blubber is not fit for medicinal purposes.
 - 9th. Then clean your liver pan with warm water and washing powder. Have it bright and clean for the next boiling.
 - 10th. Every bag, cloth, tank, funnel and pan, must be washed only with warm water, soap and water. Soda must not be used.
- The best results for medicinal oil can only be obtained by the use of tin barrels. Wooden packages generally make the oil dark, and destroy its fine flavor. Keep all oil in barrels in a cool place, and covered from the sun.

REGULATIONS For Salting Scotch Pack Herring

One barrel salt to five and a half barrels herring—Large Fulls.
One barrel salt to six barrels herring—Medium Fulls.
One barrel salt to six and a half barrels herring—Matt Fulls.
This amount of salt is for dredging and laying on rows only. It does not take into account that put on the herring before gibbing.
All salt falling off herring in rousing tubs is put on rows as you pack unless very dirty or scaly; in that case, you have to make good the same amount, or otherwise you could not have any fixed rule on salt.

Matt Fulls	10½ inches long	Milt or roe
Medium Fulls	11½ inches long	Milt or roe
Large Fulls	12½ inches long and upwards	Milt or roe
Medium Filling	11½ inches long and upward
Large Filling	12½ inches long and upward

Filling Fish may be branded as Scotch Cure without the Crown Brand.

No drowned, stale, or scaleless herring can be used as Scotch Pack, nor herring in half frozen state.

The root cause of light salting is to come as near as possible to the pleasing of the palate of the consumer; and if we bear in mind that over three-fourths of all Scotch-Pack Herring are consumed as a tonic before the mid-day meal, just as they come out of the barrel, without any fire cooking, we can see the reason at a glance for the right salting. The herring is dressed by the head and the tail being cut off, the main bone taken out. It is then cut into squares of about one inch, and is served with vinegar and other condiments. This gives power to the stomach to digest the following meal and keeps the consumer in the best of health.

People with bad stomachs please note that the art of cooking and eating right is just as essential as the art of curing; and based on the best medical directions, and with the chemical analysis of the constituent parts of herring as a food ever kept before the consumer, we need not be surprised that the people, who eat most herring are the most healthy and efficient.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

OFFICIAL SYNOPSIS OF PROCEEDINGS

On the delivery of the Speech from the Throne and the departure of His Excellency Sir Wm. Allardyce from the Legislative Council Chamber Thursday.

Hon. Sir M. G. Winter moved for the appointment of a select committee to draft an Address in Reply, speaking as follows:

I would like at this the earliest public occasion to express on behalf of the members of the Legislative Council a hearty welcome to His Excellency and Lady Allardyce, who have recently assumed the responsible post of representative to His Majesty the King amongst us. Sir William Allardyce has come to Newfoundland with a record of distinguished achievements. He has had the advantage of a world knowledge and a world touch which has developed in him a breadth of vision and that practical ability and interest which can be acquired only in the school of life. While His Excellency and Lady Allardyce have been with us only a few months, they have already endeared themselves to the people generally by the practical public interest which they have displayed in matters of public welfare and philanthropy. I feel I am voicing the sentiment of every member of this chamber when I convey to His Excellency, Lady Allardyce and family a hearty welcome and convey to them the wish that His Excellency's term of office in this ancient Colony may be long and successful.

I do not approach the consideration of the Speech from the Throne as a politician. To those of us who are business men and not politicians it is deplorable that politicians should spend weeks and months in talk with little real business resulting. It may be that those of us who are primarily business men give public expression to our opinions too little, but it is certainly our opinion that politicians on the whole use a multitude of words to cover rather than to reveal thoughts of value. I consequently do not propose to enter into any discussion of a political character, but merely point out that the speech from the Throne, formal and brief in accordance with recognized practices, suggests the possibility of the industrial development of Newfoundland on a large scale. The fisheries of Newfoundland are our primary industry. The fishermen who are of the planter, schooner-owning type, probably find it necessary to devote the whole twelve months of the year to their fishing activities. They are in a measure at least capitalists in the fishing industry. The average fisherman, however, finds it exceedingly difficult to catch enough fish for or five months of his fishing period or to grow enough vegetables during the summer to make a living for himself, his wife and family for the whole twelve months. Grand Falls has been a wonderful help to the fishermen of the country, because there are thousands of fishermen annually who are helped directly or indirectly because of the labor employment given them.

The speech foreshadows the probability of the development in the Humber area of an industry which in its initial stages will be twice the size of Grand Falls to-day after ten years development. That means the investment of millions of pounds sterling of British capital in this country. The thing that Newfoundland needs at the present moment is the influx of foreign capital. The large expenditure of foreign capital in this country for the development of the enterprise will, during the course of the construction period, provide labor for a large number of men and so tend to substantially relieve unemployment, and by the circulation of money stimulate trade and thereby increase public revenue without additional burdens.

During the past year taxation has been very largely reduced. Last spring there was a reduction in the export duty on codfish and the duty was materially lessened on gasoline and certain other essential fishery supplies. The export duty was also taken off seal skins. Late the entire export duty was taken off codfish and special war taxation taken off sugar; the twenty-five per cent. surtax was entirely removed with a consequent slight small proportionate save on account of sale tax. This spring the export duty was taken off seal oil. This reduction in taxation represents an estimated amount of a million and a half dollars. The position taken by the Prime Minister in connection with the reduction of taxation was that it was better to reduce taxation so as to lower the cost of articles to the consumer and stimulate trade and to face a probable deficit at the end of the fiscal year, than it was to maintain taxation, collect large revenue and have a slight surplus, but on the other hand to have the cost of living maintained and a further tightening in credits with added business difficulties. I feel that the entire business community concurred in the policy of the Prime Minister in the matter of reduction in taxation and it is to be hoped that as the industrial development of Newfoundland proceeds in accordance with the Administration of which I have the honour of being a member further substantial reductions in taxation will be possible within a very few years.

It will be noted that the speech refers to the probability of a program for railway reorganization being submitted. I am sure it is earnestly hoped by us all that a vigorous attempt will be made in this direction. It is essential for the commercial life of this country that reasonable services be maintained at least, certainly during the winter season. Railroad in certain sections of the country is an impossibility without an enormous expenditure of money in snow fighting; but it should be possible to devise some plan where by essential rail services be maintained without large annual burdens to be borne by the taxpayers of the country. Such is the Government's program and if as the weeks pass any definite step is taken towards the solution of this problem I am sure it will receive the endorsement of every member of this Chamber, certainly every member who has large business interests in the country. As I have already pointed out, I am not approaching the Speech from the Throne from the standpoint of a politician, but merely as a business man with large business interests through out the whole Island and one whose entire resources are looked up in the industrial progress of the Colony. I must frankly confess, that I am not interested in lengthy speeches of a political character. I must admit also that political recriminations and insinuations are, in my opinion, absolutely foreign to the conduct of good business, and I earnestly trust that the session of the Legislature upon which we are entering today will produce a maximum of business with a minimum of words.

I consequently beg to repeat my motion, namely, that a Select Committee be appointed.

Hon. Dr. Mosdell, who seconded the motion for the appointment of a select committee to draft an address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, congratulated himself on following a speaker who dealt with the subjects in that Speech from such a practical standpoint and in such thorough fashion. The address of the mover left very little for the second to say.

It was a pleasure to him to join with Sir Marmaduke Winter in extending to Governor, Sir William Allardyce a hearty welcome to Newfoundland. At the same time, he felt that Newfoundland was to be congratulated on having a gentleman of such high standing and broad knowledge of colonial affairs as representative of the Crown in this country. The predecessors of Governor Allardyce have set up high traditions in office in this country. Some of Great Britain's foremost public men have functioned here as viceroys. He felt that Sir William Allardyce would nobly maintain these traditions and would do much to strengthen the bonds of unity between the Mother Country and her most loyal and Ancient Colony.

Dr. Mosdell also desired, on behalf of the Legislative Council generally and of himself particularly to extend hearty congratulations to Sir Marmaduke Winter on the signal honors done him last session of the Legislature. He had been the recipient of a knighthood at the hands of His Sovereign. No man was more worthy or more deserving. Sir Marmaduke Winter was a representative of our highest type of citizen. He had been foremost in encouragement and assistance of all great public and philanthropic movements of prime importance and benefit to Newfoundland and Newfoundlanders. He had figured prominently in all matters connected with our Regiment and had been of very material assistance in the undertakings which enabled Newfoundland to play a glorious part in the Great War.

In private and business life, the name of Sir Marmaduke Winter stood high in the estimation of his fellow-citizens. That was why the news that the Leader of the Government had invited him to accept a seat at the Executive Council Board created a favorable impression. The presence of such a man in the inner circles of administration was bound to inspire confidence in any government and to result in the enactment of measures of practical value to the governed.

Dealing with the Speech itself, Dr. Mosdell expressed gratification that it was a brief document which dealt briefly and definitely with matters of unusual public importance. He regarded this characteristic of the document as a good omen for the session and for the country. The times were such that prompt and practical action was required for the rehabilitation of the commercial and industrial affairs of Newfoundland. For three years we had been in a sort of slough of despond. Much had been said during the recent Election about the failure of the Government to carry out promises made in its Manifesto at the Election of 1919. But the government has been performing a higher duty to the country than that. Ministers of the Crown had been preoccupied with the devising of measures to relieve the necessities of the people. They had been instant in season and out on behalf of the working classes. They had remedied unemployment in large measures. They had provided and financed extensive relief works. They had obviated a great deal of suffering and hardship. Their achievements in this respect constituted a monument of public services far greater than the strict adherence to election pledges of an idealistic nature could set up.

Unquestionably Newfoundland was facing grave and insistent problems. Still, a moment's reflection would show that the country was no worse off than she had been at other times in her political history. Indeed, she had foretime plumbed depths of depression and near-despair that eclipsed anything in the experience of the present generation. The fact that the country had come triumphant out of these difficulties should encourage Newfoundlanders of the present day to take courage and to view the future with faith and optimism.

Moreover, the trials of these present times were not peculiar to Newfoundland or restricted in this country. In Great Britain the number of unemployed was still at the high total of a million and a quarter. Half a billion dollars was being spent annually on relief works and on doles for the needy. Thousands of English men were emigrating annually. Canada was also suffering. Though to a lesser extent than the Mother Country, still in one month ten thousand Canadians crossed the border in search of employment in the United States.

Newfoundland's future could by no means be described as rosy. Still there was visible a silver lining to the outlook. An era of industrial development was at hand and was outlined in the Speech from the Throne. It might not remedy all our ills, but it would certainly provide a great measure of relief, while it also promised other and incidental developments that would transform the whole industrial and economic future into something more happy and prosperous than hitherto experienced in Newfoundland.

Nobody had contended; nobody could reasonably contend that the

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Humber Valley undertaking would replace the fisheries. That undertaking would, however, supplement and relieve the pressure on the fisheries. It had been suggested by gentlemen abroad that it would be a good thing could Newfoundland establish a close season for her codfishery. That, of course, was an impossibility. But Newfoundland could reduce the extent on which her fisheries were carried on by providing other industrial activities for a large number of her fishermen. That was the immediate and outstanding benefit of the Humber Valley undertaking. It took thousands of men from the fisheries ensured a smaller catch and better prices for those who remained at the ancient and staple industry of Newfoundland.

It was encouraging to note, too, from the Speech from the Throne, that hand in hand with Humber Valley development was to go an immediate and complete settlement of our railway problem. As a matter of fact, and as stated by the prime minister in one of his public speeches the one development depended on the other. Without a railway settlement, there could not be a Humber Development and without Humber Development there could be no hope of the relief from the heavy burden of railway financial obligations so long carried by the people of Newfoundland. What that railway needed was the provision of additional and profitable business. That business, both freight and passenger, would be provided in connection with the Humber industry; that industry would also make possible the solution of that other insistent problem of maintaining railway service in this country with great and continuous financial losses to the people of the country. The policy that made possible industrial development in the Humber Valley was a great one and of immense and lasting benefit to the people of Newfoundland. That policy ensured a still greater and equally lasting benefit when it made conditional the rehabilitation of the railway under new and progressive management.

In conclusion, Dr. Mosdell asserted that he saw in the Speech from the Throne the announcement of the inception of a new era of industrial progress and prosperity for Newfoundland, and he congratulated the prime minister and his colleagues on the earnest, unceasing and able efforts that had made this high achievement a possibility of the immediate future of the country.

Hon. W. J. Ellis warmly congratulated the proposer and second on their addresses, and Sir M. G. Winter upon the high honor recently conferred upon him. Dealing with the Speech from the Throne he hoped that as the various matters came before the House they would be dealt with and discussed in a manner tending to the best interests of the country. In the principal measure, the Humber proposition, which was to come before them he saw what he believed would Newfoundland to round the corner after the trying times of the last few years. The price of fish at present does not pay the man who catches it, and he felt the Humber would provide the employment that now is so much needed and that conditions would be improved quickly by the vast development schemes now under consideration.

He also referred vigorously to the sectarian feeling which had been engendered and which found on arrival here from abroad shortly after the election.

While the majority of the people, he felt, were not swayed by appeals to religious prejudices, they were to be condemned in the strongest terms. The originators of such appeals he classed as the worst type of citizens who should be driven from our midst and ostracized. In conclusion, Hon. Mr. Ellis assured the House that all measures for the benefit of the country would receive his heartiest support, as they would, he felt sure, that of every other member.

The following Select Committee was then appointed to draft the Address in Reply: Hons. Sir M. G. Winter, Dr. Mosdell, Sir P. T. McGrath, F. McNamara and J. Anderson, after which the House adjourned till Tuesday next at 4 p.m.

A NEW INDUSTRY

A new industry has been developed in the fishing countries north of Europe which should be of interest to Newfoundland. We refer to the herring scale industry. The fishermen of Holland have achieved great success and made quite a bit of money in collecting and selling herring scales when prosecuting that fishery. The scales are used in the manufacture of artificial pearls which in all respects cannot be distinguished from genuine pearls of the Indian and the Chinese seas. The market for scales is unlimited and the industry has now extended to all the herring countries of the world. There is an inexhaustible supply of herring scales in Newfoundland and if there is much money in the industry as reported it is to be expected that some enterprising man will take it up.

NEFD FISHERMEN GET ROUMANIAN INTEREST.

Montreal.—The recent arrangement made by Roumania to pay interest on its foreign debts is of substantial benefit to the Dominion of Newfoundland as well as Canada. During recent years Roumania has been a large purchaser of Newfoundland cod fish, and these purchases were paid for in bonds. When these bonds depreciated in value and Roumanians seemed indifferent about its obligations, many of the Newfoundland holders of these bonds considered them a total loss.

Advice has been received in St. John's, however, that Roumania has arranged to pay this month four per cent. interest upon the bonds, and several million dollars' worth held in Newfoundland are thus going to bring some return to their holders.—Financial Post.

A HINT FOR HENRY

The first number of the daily paper issued by Henry Ford, the motor car manufacturer, had a splash headline across the front page: "What Can We Do for Suffering Humanity?" A rival paper had an answering line next day: "Put Another Spring in the Cushions, Henry."

LUCY GRAHAM'S SECRET

"Did she speak of me?" he asked; "did she speak of me—at the last?"

No, she went off as quiet as a lamb. She said very little from the first but the last day she knew nothing, not even her little boy, nor her poor old father, who took a awful care she went of wild-like, talking about her mother, and about the cruel shame it was to leave her to die in a strange place, till it was quite time to hear her.

Her mother was when she was quite a child, in a George. To think that she should remember her and speak of her, but never once of me.

The woman took him into the little bedroom in which his wife had died. He knelt down by the bed and kiss ed the pillow tenderly, the landlady crying as he did so.

While he was kneeling, praying, perhaps, with his face buried in this humble, snow-white pillow, the woman took something from a drawer. She gave it to him when he rose from his knees; it was a long tress of hair wrapped in silver paper.

"I cut this off when she lay in her coffin," she said, "poor dear."

He pressed the soft lock to his lips. "Yes," he murmured; "this is the dear hair I have kissed so often when her head lay upon my shoulder. But it always had a rippling wave in it then, and now it seems smooth and straight."

"It changes in illness," said the landlady. "If you'd like to see where they have laid her, Mr. Talboys, my little boy shall show you the way to the churchyard."

So George Talboys and his faithful friend walked to the quiet spot, where, beneath a mound of earth, to which the patches of fresh turf hardy adhered, lay that wife of whose welcoming smile George had dreamed so often in the far antipodes.

Robert left the young man by the side of this newly-made grave, and returning in about a quarter of an hour, found that he had not once stirred.

He looked up presently, and said that if there was a stone-mason's any where near he should like to give an order.

They very easily found the stone-mason, and sitting down amidst the fragmentary litter of the man's yard, George Talboys wrote in pencil this brief inscription for the headstone of his dead wife's grave:

Sacred to the Memory of HELEN.

The beloved Wife of George Talboys Who departed this life August 24th, 18—, aged 22. Deeply regretted by her sorrowing Husband.

CHAPTER VI.

Anywhere, anywhere out of the World.

WHEN they returned to Lansdowne Cottage they found the old man had not yet come in, so they walked down to the beach to look for him. After a brief search they found him sitting upon a heap of pebbles reading a newspaper and eating filberts. The little boy was at some distance from his grandfather, digging in the sand with a wooden spade. The crane round the old man's shabby hat, and the child's poor little black frock, went to George's heart. Go where he would he met fresh confirmation of this great grief of his life. His wife was dead.

"Mr. Maldon," he said, as he approached his father-in-law.

The old man looked up, holding his newspaper, rose from the pebbles with a ceremonious bow. His faded light hair was tinged with gray he had a pinched hook nose; watery blue eyes, and an irresolute-looking mouth; he wore his shabby dress with an affectation of foppish gentility; an eye-glass dangled over his closely buttoned-up waistcoat, and he carried a cane in his unglued hand.

Hard Work Means Success

There never was a goal worth getting but you must work to attain. You must suffer and bleed for it, cling to your creed for it. Fail and go at it again.

Success is no whim of the moment, no crown for the indolent brow. You must battle and try for it, offer to die for it. Lose it yet win it somehow.

The Pathway to glory is rugged, and many the heart-aches you'll know. He who seeks to be master must rise from disaster. Must take as he giveth the blow.

There's no royal highway to splendour, no shout out to fortune or fame. You must fearlessly fight for it, dare to be right for it. Failing, yet playing the game.

The test of man's merit is trouble, the proof of his work is distress. Much as you long for it, man must be strong for it. Work is the door to success.

HEALTH is the greatest blessing in the world

NOTICE

To Owners and Masters of British Ships

The attention of Owners and Masters of British Ships is called to the 74th Section of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894."

75.—(1) A Ship belonging to a British Subject shall hoist the proper national colors—

- (a) on a signal made to her by one of His Majesty's ships, including any vessel under the command of an officer of His Majesty's navy or full pay, and
- (b) on entering or leaving any foreign port and
- (c) if of fifty tons gross tonnage or upwards, on entering or leaving any British Port.

(2) If default is made on board any ship in complying with this section the master of the ship shall for each offence be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred pounds.

At time of war it is necessary for every British Ship to hoist the colours and heave to if signalled by a British Warship; if a vessel hoists no colours and runs away, it is liable to be fired upon.

Notes and Comments

Every now and again the St. John's newspapers announce the addition of some new and up-to-date appliance for the St. John's Fire Department. Since Inspector-General Hutchings took charge of the Police and Fire Department he has been exceedingly active in increasing the efficiency of the Fire Department. In addition to motor trucks and other appliances a new aerial ladder truck has recently been added. A demonstration was given a few days ago in the presence of the Prime Minister, Hon. W. R. Warren, Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., Leader of the Opposition, and other citizens. All were pleased with the demonstration. The cost of these new appliances amounting to thousands of dollars, are paid for out of the general revenue, that is, out of the taxes collected from the taxpayers of the whole country for the special benefit of the property-owned, chiefly by the citizens of St. John's. The other side of the story is that the property owners of Bay Roberts and other important places in this country have not been able to get even a ladder, a few feet of hose or an engine to fight a fire with. Thousands of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed here during the past few years. Appeals have been made to past Governments for some fire-fighting apparatus, but nothing so far has been done. If it is right and proper for the property holders of St. John's to be thus protected, we outport citizens should certainly claim the same right.

We earnestly hope that the Government and the gentlemen who represent the people of this district in the Government will see that those wanting employment will get their just share of the construction work in connection with the Humber proposition. Although we are situated so far away from the scene of operations, that should not be any reason why men living nearer should monopolize all or nearly all the employment. We do not mean to say that such is happening, but the tendency naturally would be in that direction. We trust that as far as possible, every man residing in this part of the country who needs employment and is willing to work will be able to obtain his proper share of the work on the Humber.

It will be well for us every now and again, when we feel disposed to find fault with the Government and general labor conditions in the country, to take a good square look at ourselves and see to what extent we ourselves personally are lacking in our contribution to the general good of the country, the community and our own welfare. We as individuals are simply parts of a complicated economic piece of machinery. Each one has his own particular duty to perform, or work to do, or place to fill. Are we adjusting ourselves as we should to the world about us? Are we taking our share of the burdens and the responsibilities? Are we doing our bit and playing our part and playing it well, in the drama of life? Do we really do the things we know we ought to do? In order for any piece of machinery to do its work well all parts must be in adjustment. We as individuals are simply cogs, or casks, or wheels in the economic machinery of the community or the country. If we don't know this part we should play, we may learn. But we must be willing and anxious to learn and then practice what we have learned before success will attend our efforts. In other words, we need a vision.

LOCAL NEWS.

The schr. Billow, John Morgan, master, sailed for Fishing Ships' Hr., Labrador, 9 o'clock Thursday night.

Rev. S. Baggs who attended District meeting at St. John's this week, is leaving early next week to attend the annual Conference which will be held in St. John's.

Mr. H. N. Mercer, master of the schr. Samuel R. Crane and Mr. John French, master of the schr. Perfect, with crews, left for Labrador this week. We wish them prosperity in this year's fishery operations.

Mrs. George Stockley, of Wesleyville, arrived here Thursday night, and will remain a little while, the guest of Mrs. John Bowering.

Ensign and Mrs. Forward, S.A., recently stationed at Jackson's Cove, N.D.B., are being transferred to the United States, and will leave for Chicago July 8th.

Adj. Roberts, S.A., who just arrived from Wesleyville, informs us that a large number of Wesleyville fishermen-boaters has left for the Straits and Labrador fishery.

Mr. P. J. Fitzpatrick, of this town, who has been working for some time in Boston, Mass., met with a serious accident by falling from a high building, on which he was doing carpenter work. We learn the fall resulted in a broken foot and arm. Mr. Fitzpatrick speaks highly of the kindness of so many Newfoundlanders, who visited him while in Hospital. His many friends will be glad to know he is very much improved and is now resting at the home of his brother-in-law, who has resided in Boston for a number of years.

'Where's the nearest hospital, mum please?'

'The nearest hospital!' she ejaculated.

'Yes, mum, I'm feeling bad, I believe I'm sickening for something; the scarlet fever, I think.'

'What!' she shrieked. 'Get out of my shop.'

He turned to obey.

'Here, take your money back,' she said. He did so; and offering the bread, said humbly:

'You'll take yer loaf, won't yer, mum?'

'Get out of my shop.'

He crawled out, and with bowed head went round the corner. Presently, another tramp joined him.

'Well, Bill,' he said. 'Right oh! 'Enery, came the answer. 'It worked a treat, Now then, you do it for a bit o' ham and we can have a feed.'

The Northern-born foreman of a construction crew down South posted a notice saying he wanted day laborers. The only response was in the person of a languid-looking colored man, who appeared at the door hat in hand, and stated that he would not be altogether averse to accepting employment. First, though, he made so bold as to inquire concerning the nature of the work.

"Do you want a good, regular job, steady work, day in and day out, with steady pay," snapped the Northerner.

The visitor backed away. "No, suh, not if I kin git anything else to do," he stated.—Evening Post
