THE LECTURE PLATFORM.

Mr. W. G. Gaunce's Lecture at the University.

On "The Development of Patriotism."

In Our Institutions of Learning—Interesting Subjects Discussed.

The third of the series of lectures under the auspices of the University Library and Debating Society, was delivered in the lecture hall on Tuesday evening by Mr. W. G. Gaunce.

The attendance was not so large as usual, owing to the unfavorable state of the weather.

Previous to the lecture, an excellent musical program was rendered, consisting of a piano duet, by Miss Bridges and Fowler; vocal quartet, by Prof. Bridges and Stooki; Mrs. Bridges and Miss Stooki; and a solo by Mrs. John Black.

Dr. Harrison then introduced the lecturer of the evening who greeted with applause.

The subject of the lecture was "The Development of Patriotism in Our Institutions of Learning."

It was a most interesting and instructive lecture, and it occupied about three quarters of an hour.

A WHOLESALE POET.

The Autobiography of James Whitcomb Riley.

While the New-York combination was on the road last winter a little incident happened at Kalamazoo, Mich., which has never been given to the public. Their entertainment was over for the night, and a large and pensive audience had dispersed. Riley had been taken in hand by the towns letter committee and toward of up to Uncle Asa Bitter's house to leave Uncle Asa tell his famous story about his red cow and duck Browne's farm.

Uncle Asa was a local humorist of great renown; he had been made to attend the lecture on account of rheumatism, but had promised to sit up till the committee brought him around. The red cow story was his masterpiece, and he was sure that it would bring him back to his feet.

As the poet was about to introduce it into his lecture, he had a sudden change of mind, and before he could employ the same exercise, and was sitting in the hotel office at about 11 o'clock congratulating himself and clearly quiet. He was thinking of various famous remarks which he had made to his audience, and he was sure that it would bring him back to his feet.

JAPANESE WRESTLING MATCHES.

They have something of a religious character—Not Very True.

One of the chief amusements of the Japanese are wrestling matches. These are always taking place and attract large crowds. The wrestlers, strange to say, train to put on fat, rather than to take it off, and the stomachs of some are simply enormous. Around these they wear a large band, which is intended for the opponent to catch hold of, if he is at all generally does, and otherwise there would be no sense in having them so strong. This band and small pieces of cloth around the waist and loins form the wrestling costume. These wrestling matches have something of a religious character, for to them, as both sides before commencing go through a certain ceremony, as if imploring the aid of their patron saint, and then throw a little rice into the ring, which is about six feet or twenty feet around, and is marked out by a circle of raised dirt. Each contestant has a referee, then let the wrestling, to one who is a judge from the richness of his costume, and to the other who is a judge from the richness of his costume.

The wrestlers themselves are very amusing in the amount of style they put on. They are dressed in a kimono, and they go through certain motions, and they have been to make things look like a religious ceremony. THEORY AGAINST PRACTICE.

An Instance Where Book Learning Was Defective.

"I'm not a good book learner," said a red-headed young man as he stood at the foot of Court-street, waiting for the ferry, and felt of the books which had been put around on his face in the way of a disguise.

"You looked pretty smart, but I guess I can hold out till I strike Jerry."

"You're a fighter," said a sympathizer by the name of Jerry.
