Dear Brothers:—I hope you will excuse the liberty which I have taken in addressing to you these few lines, on a subject which I deem of infinite importance.

It is now about two years since I first commenced my labours among yoù, and you will not deem it an instance of vanity, if I say that my efforts to advance the cause of Universalism have been generally approved, and signally successful.

To this, you have frequently borne testimon.

To this, you have frequently borne testimony, and for which you have had my warmest acknowledgements.

But in looking calmly and dispassionately at the result of my ministrations, there is one drawback to my happiness—one source of disquietude, which weighs heavily upon my mind.

To this, you have frequently borne testimonad advanced in pregnancy. A paper labelled "Arsenic—Poison," in which the fatal dose had been put up by Mr. Desbrisay, was found in the shute outside the bed-room window.—Nothing appeared to show that when she committed the rash act she was not in full possession of her reason, and the Jury accordingly returned a verdict of felo de se.

In Nova-Scotia, the practice of the principal officers of Her Majesty's Customs is to allow any and every thing declared to be for the use of the Fisheries, to pass free of duty, much of which is consumed by others than those employed in the prosecution of that branch of Trade; for instance, it is reported, that this season many thousand barrels of flour and other articles. have been entered at the Port of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, as for the use of the Fisheries, and thence carried to Annapolis and other Ports, and distributed through the Country, without regard to the occupation or emplo ment of the consumer. We have no objection to the same being general, but wish to know if there is any reason (presuming at the same time that your views and acts are correct) why you do not allow the same privilege here, as we are informed exists in Nova Scotia, knowing that the same Act of Parliament governs the question in both Provinces; but the Chamber of Commerce are of opinion, that instead of restraining the practice in Nova Scotia, it would be advisable to remove the duties on-Salt Provisions, and allow the same privileges are enjoyed in Canada, convinced that it would present the general interest; but un-less that should be done, the present practice in Nova-Section is injurious to the Trade and ther interests in this Province

On the arrival of the two young men at Lake Winnepick, they disagreed about the route which should be pursued, and there separated. Mr. Simpson, accompanied by Mr. Bird, Mr. Legros, and twenty or therty of the colonists, struck across for St. Peters, in-rate with the struck across for St. Peters, inending to push on to New York via the lakes & from thence sail for Liverpool-Mr Dease, his compeer, with another party, set out for

About the 20th of June, Mr. Simpson and his party had reached Turtle river, where they encamped for the night. He had, from the beginning of the journey, exhibited occasional symptoms of mental hallucination, caused as the party supposed, by the dread of being ed by his competitor in their long race for London. On the evening above menrefored, he had continued to push on until a late hour at night, and even then his feverish ment of rest. When they stopped, and while in the act of camping, Mr. Simpson turned suddenly around, and shot Mr. Bird through the heart; and before the astounded party could fly from the presence of the madman, he discharged the other barrel, and mortally wounded Mr. the other barrel, and mortally wounded Mr. Legros. It, appears the party had separated, and when he committed the murder on his companions, there were only two more present, one of them a son of Legros, who immediately fled a short distance. The dying father earnestly implored Simpson to permit his son to return and embrace him before he should die—which he agreed to and bestoned them. which he agreed to, and beckoned them back, saying there was nothing to fear. On their return, Simpson accused Legros of conspiring with Bird, and asked him whether it was not their intention to assassinate
