THE RAILWAYS

Everett-Moore Syndicate Branching Out-Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson in New York.

The London Stock Exchange committee for general purposes decided that the buying in of the Northern Pacific might proceed on and after June 17. The decision was anticipated, and is not expected to have any effect on the market. All accounts in Northern Pacific are practically settled, and there is no further difficulty in borrowing shares. W. K. Lanigan, assistant general freight agent of the C. P. R. at Toronto, has been appointed to the same position there, in succession to G. H. Shaw, who is now in the employ of the Canadian Northern. A press dispatch from Cleveland says that the Everett-Moore syndicate has decided to build a line connecting Akron, Canton and Massillon. It will penetrate the Massillon coal region. One of the objects which the promoters have in mind is the supplying of coal to the many power houses of the numer-ous electric lines that they control. The supreme court of Ohio recently decided that electric railroad companies have a right to do a general freight business.

Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, is in New York, having just completed his annual inspection of the Grand Trunk Railway system in Canada and the United States. In an interview Sir Charles said: "I have read the strictures of Alfred Hickman on the locomotive contracts placed by Indian railway companies with American firms. My opinion is that Hickman will be informed that the British Government placed the contracts for locomotives with American firms cause it believed them to be the best-

THE KILLING OF THE LATE SARAMCCORD

Story of the Tragedy Told by Eye-Witnesses

At the Coroner's Inquest Held in Arva—No New Facts.

Testimony of the Man Who Drove Fulford to the Farm-What Mr. Robert McCord and His Children Saw-Mrs. McCord's Last Words-Verdict of the Jury.

The coroner's inquest, begun on Sunday, into the death of the late Mrs. Robert McCord, shot and killed in London township on Saturday by her son-in-law, Robert Fulford, of St. Louis, Mo., was concluded at Arva town hall last night, and a verdict returned to the effect that Mrs. McCord died of the revolver wounds inflicted by Robert Fulford. No inquest was held on the body of Fulford, who suicided immediately after the murder. The hall was well filled by citizens of Arva and the surrounding district. A seat near the back was occupied by Mr. McCord, the sorrow-stricken husband, and his weeping, black-garbed daughters. The inquest, which was the first held by Dr. McNeill, as coroner of London township, was conducted in an expeditious and creditable manner. No new facts were brought out, and the inquest was of little practical value, except as giving to the public the authentic story of those who witnessed the tragedy. Save in one or two important details, the story of the murder and suicide, as related in yesterday's Advertiser, was the correct one.

The jury was composed as follows: R. W. Jackson, con 9, foreman; John Noble, Emerson Nixon, George B. Kennedy, Peter West, Jas. Anderson, John Anderson, Walter Nixon, Joseph H. Patterson, con. 9: Albert Kennedy, con. 10; John Stoneman, con. 8; John Turner, con. 7.

SWARTZ'S TESTIMONY.

Wm. Swartz, an Ilderton shoemaker, was the first witness called. He first saw Robt. Fulford at Graham's hotel, Ilderton, just after the arrival of the 5:15 p.m. train from London. Fulford inquired where he could get a rig to drive him to McCord's farm on the down, and Swartz agreed to do so. Fulford did not speak to Swartz seated with him in the buggy. The hotel proprietor asked Fulford if he meant to take his grip with him, but Fulford said he would LEAVE IT TILL HE CAME BACK Fulford did not speak to Swartz until some distance from Ilderton, when he made a remark about the smallness of the village. Further on Fulford observed that there were finer farms and better roads in Exeter than in Il-

In response to a question from Swartz, Fulford said he was from Chicago, and that he had lived pretty his lifetime there. nearing McCord's place, Fulford asked if Swartz was married, and then said he himself had been married seven years, but his wife had left him three or four weeks before. He said that his wife was at McCord's house. Fulford was quite calm and rational in his speech, and there was nothing unusual in his manner. Just before reaching McCord's farm Fulford asked what Swartz was going to tax him, and the latter replied that he thought $1 would be right. Fulford, however, did not pay him, but leaned towards Swartz she did so, giving him her left hand, and asked if the smell of liquor was as he was on her left side. The con-

A COUPLE OF DRINKS at the hotel, and did not want it no-ticed at the McCord house. Swartz advised him to take a chew of tobacco to disguise his breath. Fulford did so. In Swartz's opinion, Fulford was not drunk. When they envised at the Mc-In Swartz's opinion, Fulford was not drunk. When they arrived at the Mccord farm, Fulford said: "There's the old gentleman now," pointing at the same time to Mr. McCord, who was driving the cows out of the stable. Fulford asked, "Have they a vicious dog?" and Swartz replied that he did not know.

Fulford told Swartz to drive down the road and come back, as he would not be over ten or fifteen minutes. Fulford then walked through the gate and witness drove on. He had gone nearly a quarter of a mile when he HEARD FOUR OR FIVE SHOTS, and then he heard a dog howling, and saw it running across the fields. ness thought at first that Fulford or someone else was shooting at the dog, and then he concluded that something more serious was transpiring. He drove on until he met a couple of neighbors, and then drove back to Mc-Cord's. He saw Mr. McCord walking toward the house, and called to ask him if "that man" was ready to go back. Mr. McCord answered that the man had shot Mrs. McCord, and then his horse and went into the house. Someone, Swartz supposed Mrs. Mc-Cord, was lying on the sofa covered Swartz went out and spoke to ne of the boys, who was milking the cows. Swartz asked if the boy knew the man, and the boy answered that

The boy pointed to a milking stool and said "There's where my mother was shot." Swartz looked, and saw Fulford's body lying on its back, about ten feet from the stool, the head pointing towards the north and touching the fence. Swartz walked near the body and saw the right hand holding revolver lying on the breast, while the left hand was lying by the leg, another revolver near it. Another son came out and hitched a horse to go to the telegraph office, and

In response to a juryman's question Swartz said it was not more than half an hour from the time he left Fulford at the gate till he drove back.

Robert McCord, husband of the murdered woman, and the dead man's father-in-law and uncle, said he first saw Fulford when he (Mr. McCord) came out of the stable, Fulford being at the time 50 or 60 feet away from him. Fulford was leaning slightly forward, a revolver in each hand, pointing at Mrs. McCord. He was saying to her, "I demand of you to tell me where she is!" Mrs. McCord's reply was inaudible, but instantly

FULFORD BEGAN TO FIRE in rapid succession. Mrs. McCord fell, and the last shots were fired at her as she lay prostrate. As soon as Mr. McCord saw Fulford, he dropped the stool he was carrying and seized a stone; but simultaneously Mrs. Mc-Cord had fallen, Fulford put the bar-rel of his second revolver in his mouth

Mr. McCord thought Fulford dropped one revolver, and changed another go for a doctor, but afterwards he

Discuss the Question of Social Reform at the Union's Closing Session

Toronto, June 11.-The Congregational Union closed its sessions last night, after an interesting conference on social reform, led by Rev. S. S. Craig, the single tax preacher. The relation of the church to the rich, who are known to acquire their wealth by oppression of the poor, was dealt with very frankly. In the course of the debate Mr. Craig said: "If I in my pulpit stand up there and suppress any great ethical truth because it might offend any man in my congregation, and cause him to withdraw his contributions from my support—if I do that, then I justify the wicked for reward. I believe there are today men doing that, who, if they gave their attention to the discussion of the social problem, would never do There are men in this city carryit. Stirring Event -- Mr. Tarte Compliments Mr. R. L. Borden.

Racial Good Feeling-Mr. Clergue on the Development of Transportation and the Ship-Building

Industry.

[Special Dispatch to The Globe.] Owen Sound, June 10 .- On Friday evening a banquet was given in the town hall to the Hon. Mr. Tarte and Mr. F. H. Clergue by the citizens of Owen Sound. The hall was tastefully decorated with flags, and on the four walls of the room were banners bearing the mottoes: "Canada, Vast in Area and Resources," "Canadian Development by Land and Water," "Owen Sound, the Liverpool of Ontario, Wel-comes Her Visitors," "The Aim of Every True Canadian is the Prosperity of His Country." The chair was oc-cupied by Mr. Aaron Read, mayor of Owen Sound, who had on his right, Hon. Mr. Tarte, and on his left, Mr. Other prominent men F. H. Clergue. had seats at the guest table.

Letters of regret at inability to be present were read, among others from Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Richard Cartright, Hon. Mr. Fielding, Hon. Wim. Paterson, Mr. R. L. Borden, Hon. Geo. Ross, Hon. F. R. Latchford, Mr. J. Whitney, Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson and Mr. D. P. McNicholl, C. P. R. The teast of Hon. J. I. Tarte was proposed by Vice-Chairman C. Eaton, president of the board of trade, who ario to visit Quebec oftener, confident that more frequent intercourse would be advantageous to both peoples.

HON. J. I. TARTE. Mr. Tarte, on rising to respond, received an ovation. In well-chosen words he expressed his appreciation of the warm welcome accorded him. He referred to his former visit in 1897, when he saw a village. Today he saw a town, and almost a city. He assured the people of Owen Sound that Dr. Horsey had represented to him over and over again that perhaps a decent public building would be acceptable to Owen Sound. Dr. Horsey had also stated that the dry dock is far too short and too narrow, and had bothered him a good deal in connection with the requirements of Owen Sound. The minister of finance, Mr. Tarte said, is always afraid when he got away from Ottawa, and if his little trip to Owen upon this occasion cost the country a few thousand dollars it vould be Mr. Fielding's fault for not being present; but he would say without any hesitation whatever that the postoffice he had seen today is not the right thing for this bright town

Mr. Tarte said that if Clergue started a shipyard, he uld be prepared to give him a contract for a big suction dredge in that shipyard. Dreages are needed in Ontario. Is there any other country more free than this Canada of ours? he asked. We call ourselves that anyway. We are a free nation. There are nations in the world that call themselves free that do not enjoy onehalf the liberties that we enjoy here. He heartily appreciated the motto — "Canadian Development by Land and Water"—and assured the people of On-tario that the people of Quebec are in cordial sympathy with it.

CONGRATULATES OPPOSITION

LEADER. Mr. Tarte regretted that Mr. R. L. He had always had great confidence in which he had led the opposition their supplies. to pay public homage to that gentlepathy in the course he had followed. In conclusion Mr. Tarte paid a tribute to the enterprise and ability of Mr. Clergue, who, he said, is on American, but who thoroughly deserves to be a Canadian, and in whom, they had a great "builder," a man of genius. Dr. Horsey, in eloquent terms, proposed the health of Mr. F. H. Clergue, who, he said, was so fully and so eloquently able to speak for himself that e need say but little of the great work that gentleman is doing in the development of Northern Ontario. Dr. Horsey referred to the marvelous development which he had witnessed in China, Japan and Java, but he had been forced to return to Canada, to his own native province, to witness the most marvelous development that it had ever been his privilege to observe, and the inspiring genius of it all was Mr. Clergue.

He returned his most hearty thanks for the generosity of Owen Sound in inviting him to come not only to be a joint guest with Mr. Tarte, but also for the purpose of showinf him how to become a millionaire by establishing a shipyard at Owen Sund. A STORY OF DEVELOPMENT.

Referring to the development at Sault Ste. Marie, Mr. Clergue said that having learned that water power is senerating For Internal and External Control of Radway's Ready Relief. the cheapest way of generating motive power, and having found the great natural power furnished by the large volume of water tumbing down-hill at Sault Ste. Marie, he had associated some friends with him, and before developing the power he sought to ascertain whether employment for the power, if utilized, would be forth-coming. He found rich raw material in large quantities, which could be obtained at small cost. The first resource he found was the large forests of spruce furnishing the raw material for me-chanical pulp. Having gone as far as possible in this direction, he erected a sulphite pulp mill, necessitating sulphur which all the other mills on the connecessary. This led on to the produc-tion of nickel. Investments were made few months the works at Marie will be turning out 100 tons of nickel steel a day. (Cheers.)

ONE STEP LEADS TO ANOTHER. The nature of the demand made it more profitable to adulterate the nickel with common iron ore, so search was made for iron, and the result was the discovery of the Helen mine, which is the highest exposure of iron ore known. Having an abundance of iron to spare, the next most natural step was to embark upon the manufacture of steel rails in order to utilize it, and he made a contract with the government, which had variously been reported by gentlemen of various political beiters - (laughter)-but the contract he made was good for himself as well as for the country. This year they are expending $2,000,000 for the erection of a steel plant, which will be the most improved the world, and he took pleasure in anthe honeymoon is past there is apt to nouncing that since that contract had be some little trouble, but it does not been made the shareholders of his canpany had paid in $20,000,000 in cash to be expended in developing the indus-

(Cheers.) governments both at Ottawa and Toronto had at last recognized the necessities of Sault Ste. Marie and had assisted to provide the necessary means of transportation. He justified the action of the government in giving land grants to encourage capital to develop is an industrial manufacturer, and that it is necessary to have a railway to get into the country and develop the coun-Borden was not present, and paid a tri- try, and the manufacturers of older Cntario must have a railway to send in

ING. The next industry on his mind was that of steel shipbuilding. There are great opportunities for the ports on the Georgian Bay, and he assured those contemplating the establishment of such an industry that before months the works at Sault Ste. Is it immodest for a woman to express a determination to enter into a state which we are being continually reminded is a natural and honorable state, while it is modest and proper for a man to do so? Such a state which was say to ward the ravine lay an object, almost the color of the prairie itself, which at first I thought was a stone, but which on a second look I discovered to be a jack rabbit. Such a distinction would never be drawn except for the "cheapness" to which reference has been made. If a man wants to marry, he can marry; if the first woman he asks refuses him, he has only to ask a second, or perhaps a third or fourth. It would be safe to guarantee that within a month any man of fairly respectable life and position and appearance, who cared to make the experiment, could marry in his own class, could marry probably a woman much superior to himself. But wha: about the girl who intends to marry "some day?" Is she not in a very different position from the man? Here is a girl of good character—much better than the man's, probably—average intelligence, average good looks. Theoretically, she is free to marry whom she will; but is she? If she receives one distinct offer of marriage the has had more than her share, according to the probable average. POPULATION OF EDINBURGH. The census returns which have just been made up for Edinburgh show that the capital of Scotland has now a population of 316,540 people. Ten years ago, on the occasion of the last census, the numbers were 272,978, thus giving an increase of 43,562. The growth of the population of Edinburgh, which is a non-manufacturing center, nas been in many respects remarkable during the last century. Until the middle of the eighteenth century Edinburgh had aimost remained stationery for 200 years. In the beginning of the last century the population of the city was just over 100,-000, so that during the century the

Why Should it Be Proper for the Boy But Not for the Girl?

A man may remark on his intention to marry at some indefinite future time, when prudence or other considerations may make it possible, or advisable, without having, as a rule, to run the gauntlet of a chorus of impertinent and stupid would-be witty remarks. A Bore in Parliament.

The British Parliament, like our own, is troubled by members of mediocre capacity, who insist on making lengthy on every conceivable topic. We believe, however, that the Canadian House of Commons takes first place for prolixity, for we have member who makes speeches of nine hours' duration on one subject, and then finds that he has to resume the thread of his discourse at a later date, and we have one member who, by actual count, spoke 96 times in one day!

This tendency to bore Parliament and to disgust the public formed the subject of a lively debate in the British Parliament the other day, when it was proposed by Sir Joseph Dimsdale that in future no member should (except by leave) speak more than twenty minutes, or twice on an amendment in supply, Ministers, ex-Ministers, and movers of bills and resolutions except-

This motion seemed an appropriate following up of the resolution adopted province is also to be congratulated. by the House in 1897, when it was declared that the duration of speeches has increased, is increasing, and should be abated. The trouble, indeed, is no new one in our deliberative assemblies, as Major Rasch, who seconded the motion last month, reminded the House. It was experienced in the days of Queen Elizabeth, when that august monarch sent word to the talkers by Sir Francis Popham that they must work more and talk less, or she would know the reason why. same trouble arose in the early Georgian era, when it is recorded that Sheridan spoke for five hours, and the accounts further say of that speech that members were much discomposed, many going into the lobby while others wept. Pitt, who was the leader of the House, had to adjourn it in order that the members might recover their composure.

In more modern times, there have been some extraordinary Parliamentary efforts. A Scottish M. P. has spoken for an hour on a bog in the cussed flatfish for an hour and three-quarters; and Major Rasch affirmed that on the day of the debate an M. P. had spoken for an hour and twenty minutes, and no one except the speaker could have the faintest idea of what he was talking about. It is no excuse for these parliamentary often delivered outside the legislative chamber. Two years ago, the present Lord Chief Justice of Great Britain spoke in Paris for seven days on end on the Venezuela Commission, and he was followed by the late Lord Russell, who spoke for thirteen days.

these great jurists had something to talk about, and momentous issues might have come out of their failure to fully set out every fact pertinent to the issue raised by the United States. And so it will always be. There are great occasions, in every era of the world's history, when it is well that men of thought and eloquence should speak out, and if they have a real message for the world it will never weary of listening, no matter how great its length may be. The great speeches of Burke, Gladstone, Disraeli, Bright, O'Connell, Churchill, Cobden, Roebrick and Cowan would never have been made if, as is the case in the municipal council of the British metropolis, these statesmen had been compelled to respect a twenty-minute

Nor can one help sympathizing with the view that it would be unfair to make a cast-iron rule to prevent anyone but front-bench men from making a lengthy address. Some of the statesmen we have named were by no means regarded as men of cabinet rank when they made their most noteworthy and long deliverance, and we cannot forget that the greatest offenders in mere talkativeness in the Canadian House of Commons in recent years have been those who, if a change of Government were to occur, would insist that they were entitled to consideration as cabi net material.

There is no doubt considerable force in the view of the late Mr. Cobden. who in 1849 supported a resolution in favor of limiting the speeches to one hour, on the ground that it would not only save the time of the House and its reputation with the country, but would improve the quality of parliamentary oratory, which he declared was often too diffuse, and overlaid by long quotations from books and reports to which the members had access. And there is something in the caustic remark of Col. Sanderson, the Irish M.P., who remarked that the motion would not muzzle ministers, but those who barked out most. If Irish members were muzzled, the colonel asserted, amid much laughter, the House of Commons would become the dullest assembly in the world. But after all, whether in the Mother of Parliaments, or in the Canadian House of Commons, the question is not to be solved by abstract resolutions and money involved in drivelling talk, such as is often indulged in by those anxious to hear the sound of their own voices may have difficulty in abating the nuisance, but the newspapers, no matter what their political predilections may be, may do the public good service by ignoring the persistent bore, the man whose ever-rising to intervene in the debates, shows that he is chiefly, if not entirely, actuated by motives of vulgar ambition. This is too busy an age-the time of Canadian parliamentarians is too valuable, and there is too much in this new country requiring deeds rather than empty words-to permit of its chief deliberative body being dominated by small beer oratory. Fully comprehending this truth, the representatives of the people, with the aid of the press, should be able to suppress the bore in Parliament, without the passing of a Political and Labor Situation in New Zealand.

The Island of New Zealand is proving itself a sort of political and social experimental station. Rev. Dr. Sutherland says the Methodists are turning out too many preachers, also that the denominations are overlapping, and going into places already well supplies with churches. Why not get together and arrange these matters on common sense and Christian principles? Why not form at least a federal union of churches? The Twentieth Century ought to take a step forward.

Light Up the Schools.

The lens and prism have lately been used as means of transmitting light in dark stores, where the light of the sun is excluded, owing to the height of adjacent buildings. It has been found that lower rooms may be lighted equally with the upper, where the sunlight receives direct admission. Should this method of lighting come to be used in school rooms where the light comes from the wrong direction or is insufficiently diffused, a good many valuable eyes will be saved.

A Commonsense View.

The Boston Herald thinks that, as the United States has no coaling or naval stations along the coast of Brashe can do nothing by of preventing the Germans establishing a colony South America; and furthermore that she has received no special right under treaty, to interfere to preserve the political independence of the people. Continuing, the Herald speaks as follows:

"If anyone meets this statement with the assertion that a fair construction of the Monroe Doctrine would give us all the right that we need to interfere, we are forced back again to the puzzling position of asking why, if this is the case, were these special provisions and safeguards, required in the case of Cuba? Either these were gratuitously lugged in, and if so they were not only edless, but dangerous, because the diplomatists of Europe will read in them an open confession that the intentions of the Monroe Doctrine are something quite different from what they have been affirmed to be, or they are needed additions to our agreement with Cuba because the Monroe Doctrine is very much a matter of pretense, and if a matter of pretense, in the absence of special treaties with the Latin-Ameri-

Drunkenness Not Inherited.

The recent verdict of a committee of fourteen scientific experts and physicians in London, England, goes to show The investigation covered a period of eighteen months. The verdict of this commission also supports the germplasm theory of Weismann, to the effect that there is no proof that acquired characteristics of any kind are hereditary. Temperance reformers in their arguments have hitherto been accustomed to dwell upon the assumption that each man's drinking tends to make his children drunkards. It is true that drunkenness often runs in families, but we are forced to attribute the fact to the environment to which the child is exposed, and to an inherited nervous temperament. According to the finding of the commission, the father can transmit to the son the taint with he himself was born, but no amount of right living can decrease that taint, and no amount of debauchery can increase it in the child. This commissison does not deny that drunkards are liable to have degenerate children; the denial is that such children are any more likely to be drunkards than to show some other form of degeneracy. Dr. Keeley, the author of a book entitled "The Non-Heredity of Inebriety," maintains that the strength of will acquired in resisting the temptation to drink, will eventually be transmitted to posterity, and consequently that abstinence, which is the result of a person's will power, will in a few generations put an end to the drink evil. Scientific opinion, as expressed by the men of science referred to, repudiates the idea, and maintains that any reform along these lines must come from the elimination of the unfit.

The "heredity" idea is often pu forth as an excuse for incapacity, and shortcoming. The verdict of this committee of scientific experts proves that the inebriate father is not responsible for drunkenness in his family, but it light." also places the sons on their own responsibility. Often a sort of fatalism results from the belief that certain bad traits are inherited, and sons are apt their depraved tastes. Responsibility, then, should beget courage, and a desire to be better and to make the most

Chicago—A Glance at the Great City—It is Moving Towards Better Things.

'A day or two's visit to Chicago is intude; look at it from almost any point of view-its tremendous buildings; its enormous railway interests; the extent of ground it covers; its magnificent means for good; its gigantic means for

It is a great city, and it is no wonder the average Chicagoan is full of the idea that for Chicago "there is no such word as fail," They can accomplish anything they undertake. Such spirit is hard to conquer.

One of the best features of Chicago is that it is not congested. It covers very large area. It claims the lowest death rate of any large city. With elevated electric and cable cars, distances are reduced. Its extent may be judged from the fact that you can leave the center of the city, and ride over on the north side, through a splendid residential district, for over an hour. This could no doubt be duplicated to the west and south of the Chicago has had its least desirable side described often enough. Take a look for a few minutes at the brighter side. Go on Sunday morning to the Central Church, which meets in Studebaker Hall. The Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus is the pastor. The creed of the church is given as follows: "The Creed of Central Church-We believe in divine character and mission of Christ: that he is the Saviour man in his ignorance and sinfulness, needs: that all accepting and obeying this Christ as their Way, Truth and Life, are fully entitled to the name and hope of the Christian."

That is a short confession of faith. Dr. Gunsaulus is a man of whom any city might be proud. Originally a Baltimorean, he has been seventeen years in Chicago. His sermon was a splendid one. His presence is good. He appears to be a sound, steady, wellknit man, about forty, with a pronunciation of some words that brought one in mind of the Hon. A. S. Hardy. He is a good elocutionist, and judging from his discourse he has a mellow, poetic nature, well-developed, and still developing. Time is sure to improve such good material. One could not help thinking Chicago could take heart and look up as long as such men are among its citizens. His subject was "The Bow in the Cloud," and he apparently thinks there is a bow in the cloud for Chicago. Clouds it has, and the black clouds have been pointed to many a time and oft. Men like Dr. Gunsaulus are pointing out the bow in the cloud. There are many others, although he is admittedly one in the very forefront. No doubt he could faithfully say:

"My heart leaps up when I behold A rainbow in the sky; So was it when my life began, So is it now, when I'm a man."

His discourse was full of hope. great powers of good and evil are working side by side in Chicago. May there hope, who may ultimately achieve the greatest amount of good, not by writing up its wickedness, but by pointing out "the bow in the cloud," as he pointed it out with poetic eloquence. Some doubt if the present day is producing preachers equal to those who were with us not long ago. Dr. Gunsaulus can take his place with men like Henry Ward Beecher. Few possess more powerful eloquence or more impress you with the belief that they see and take the good out of life, that they see always "the bow in the

The Irish Question. [Springfield Republican.]

Prof. Goldwin Smith recognizes the seriousness of the Irish question in his article in the current number of the North American Review, and he even takes the advanced ground that there is no solution for it short of the complete expropriation of the landlords and the restoration of the cultivators to the ownership of the land. The view that the Irish question is at bottom an agrarian one has already made headway in Protestant Ulster, where Unionists like T. W. Russell have become advocates of drastic legislation along agrarian lines. The fact that Ireland has improved materially but ittle since the overthrow of Mr. Gladstone and his home rule programme brings the unionists face to face with the important question what they are going to do to make that island a de cent habitation for mankind. England has vetoed the scheme of home rule, hence it is all the more incumbent upon England to solve the problem Ireland's steady decline. Prof. Smith, while no home ruler, is candid in admitting the tragic position of the Irish, who, he says, have not had "one happy hour" in a thousands years.

EX-PREMIER HARDY

a Very Low Condition—His Recovery Said To Be Impossible. Toronto, Ont., June 10-1 p.m.-At this hour Hon. A. S. Hardy is very low and sinking. His physicians say recovery is impossible.

The Hon. Arthur S. Hardy, K.C., was born at Mount Pleasant, Ontario, 64 years ago. He was the son of the late Russel Hardy, formerly of Brantford and latterly of London, Ontario, his descendants on both sides being from United Empire Loyalists. Mr. Hardy's education was begun in the public schools of his native place, the Mount Pleasant Grammar School and the Rockwood Academy. He afterwards studied law with his uncle, H.

A. Hardy, and with the firm of the late Chief Justice Harrison, of Toronto, and was called to the bar in 1865. He carried on his law practice with success in Brantford, having been appointed city solicitor there. In 1876 he was made Q. C. by the Ontario Government, and in the same year was elected a bencher of the Law Society.

Mr. Hardy's political career dates from April, 1873, in which year he was returned to the Ontario Legislature to represent, in the interests of the Liberal party, South Brant, the vacancy of which was created by the election of the late Hon. E. B. Wood to the House of Commons. In March of 1877 Mr. Hardy entered the Mowat Government as secretary, and in 1889 he succeeded the late Mr. Pardee, commis sioner of crown lands. Upon the transfer of Sir Oliver Mowat to Ottawa as minister of justice in 1896, Mr. Hardy succeeded as premier and attorney-general of On-

While in active life Mr. Hardy's sterling worth as a parliamentarian, as well as his popularity, was attested by the fact that he was elected by largely increased majorities in each recurring general election. As further evidence of his versatility and breadth of view it might be stated that between the years 1874 and 1896, not less than 150 public and private bills were introduced by him, nearly all of which passed, and are today on our statute books. Among the acts of legislation which were proposed and ably supported by Mr. Hardy is one establishing the board of health, which has been instrumental in the dissemination of hygienic knowledge, and the incitation of local action on the part of municipalities in the matter of public health.

Much might be said regarding Mr. Hardy's career as a temperance reformer under the license system. number of bills, which tended in the direction of providing severer penalties for infractions of the liquor law, were, at different times, carried through the house.

Much of his legislation has naturally had to do with the crown domain, free grants to settlers, the public timber and political parks, and the municipal assessment and drainage laws. Upon resigning the premiership in quarters at Osgoode Hall. married in 1870, Mary, daughter of the late Mr. Justice Morrison, of Toronto. In religion he is a member of the Church of England.

Mr. Hardy, at his climax of vigor, was a platform speaker of remarkable power. He was a clear thinker, pos essed a strong sense of humor, had the faculty of throwing off terse and scintillating epigrams that expressed much in few words. He is a man of warm heart, though by no means in this regard wearing his heart on his sleeve; he was sometimes misjudged. Thoroughly upright, and maintaining within his breast a high ideal of public life, it is no exaggeration to say that Hon. A. S. Hardy's whole career shows him to have been not only one of the ablest but one of the honestest men among the many able and honest men in our Canadian public life.

TALK OF ENDING THE WAR. Berlin, June 10 .- The Kleines Journal today prints a dispatch from The Hague saying that Queen Wilhelmina's recent visit here was meant to obtain Emperor William's consent to end the South African war, both the zweibund and the dreibund being willing to do so, through The Hague arbitration court, and that the emperor consented, and the court began work thereon. The dispatch has created a sensation here. The Associated Press has just obtained the following foreign office statement, which is authorized by Count Von Buelow, the imperial chan-

OFFICIAL STATEMENT. "Neither Great Britain, France nor Russia ever approached Germany to participate in any action aiming at ending the South African war. Ger-many has all along distinguished between offering her good offices and intervention. To render her good offices would be possible under certain circumstances, viz., if both parties to the war should request it; but it will be remembered that Great Britain joined The Hague's conference only on condition that the Boer states were excluded. There is no doubt that Mr. Kruger, who is a serious statesman, came to Europe to obtain the good offices of several of the powers to end the war; but there is also no doubt that Great Britain does not want their good cf-fices. At least, it is true that since the South African war began Great Britain has never, either verbally or in writing, confidentially or officially, broached such an idea. It is quite possible that the Boer side has now formally asked The Hague arbitration court to lend its aid to end the war somehow, and that the court has held a session regarding the matter; but that, of course, is entirely different from any serious steps to end the war." NOT MUCH LIKE PEACE. London, June 10 .- Lord Kitchener in dispatch from Pretoria under today's date, says the number of Boers killed, imprisoned, or surrendered during the last month, totaled 2,640. From June 1 to June 9, 26 Boers were killed, 4 were wounded, 469 were made prisoners, and 33 surrendered; and 651 rifles, 115,550 rounds of ammunition, 120 wagons and

FORTUNE IN AN OLD TRUNK. Hartford, Conn., June 10.-William Warner, a drummer, of New Haven, has just unearthed a fortune in a peculiar fashion. While rummaging through an old trunk, he unearthed a packet of letters. Thinking them a bundle of sentimental effusions, the work of his father, Warner stuffed them into his grip. While seated in the smoker he untied the package, and great was his surprise on finding them bonds of an early issue of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, with great parcels of stock of both the Adams and United States Express Companies. Arriving in Hartford Warner hastened to a brokerag firm, where he found he had some $48,-000 of accrued interest coming to him as well as property valued at $250,000.

It would require $150, 000 a week, he said to pay strike benefits for the non-union men. The meeting voted to give $100 directly to the machinists, and adopted a resolution directing the secretary to write to all cial assistance for the strikers.

Sixty Years of Age and in Love With a 10-

Year-Old School Girl. Sparta, Mich., June 10 .- A love affair between an old man named Townsend, who claims to hail from Thompsonville, and a ten-year-old girl of this place, has stirred up the community during the last few days. Townsend is about 60 years old and asserts that when the girl is old enought he will marry her. He represents a Philadelphia drygoods house, and it was while on a business trip here he became acquainted with girl. Teachers in the public schools investigated the matter and laid it before the authorities, who ordered him out of town. He spent considerable money on the girl, and weeps when talking of

He appears perfectly sane, and has the appearance of a man well to The girl's parents seem to look upon the affair with favor, but it will be stopped. Townsend has written letters to Deputy Sheriff Smith begging permission to return to Sparta that he may be near the girl he loves. SARAH SAYS SHE WAS JOKING. London, June 10.-Mme. Sarah Bernhardt informed a representative of the Associated Press that there is still some doubt as to whether she play Romeo to Maud Adams' Juliet. Her acceptance of the offer was made jokingly, but was taken seriously. Mme. Bernhardt added: "I would love to play Romeo in English, but I scarcely think I could ever sufficiently master English to do so.

MARLBOROUGHS AT CHILDREN'S FAIR. London, June 10 .- The Duchess of Mar borough Saturday afternoon at the Westminister town hall opened a sale of work of the Children's Union. The American peeress made a little peech, in which she said she could think of no nobler or higher work than saving little children from poverty and pain. The duke, who ac-companied his wife, sat beside her throughout the ceremony. LOOKING FOR TROUBLE. Rome, June 8 .- Signor Guiccardini. the reporter of the budget committee, speaking in the Chamber of Deputies Saturday, on the Albanian question, said it was, in his opinion, critical, as the movement in Macedonia might precipitate a surprise at any moment. Italy, he declared, could not be the

Austria-Hungary, and asked tenance of the status quo which, in his orinion, was unstable. Other speakers referred to the unrest in the Balkans. These utterances, taken in connection with Count Goluchowski's recent speech, indicate that the statesmen fear that trouble is imminent in South-

AT THE PAN-AMERICAN. Buffalo, N. Y., June 10.—Camp Hey-ward, at the Pan-American grounds, occupied by United States marines, was opened to the public today. The marines are in command of Leonard, who lost an arm during the fight near Tien Tsin on July 15 last. Before the captain's quarters are two guns, souvenirs of the Chinese war. One is a machine gun captured by the marines in the Imperial artillery barracks, just outside the Forbidder on Aug. 16 last; the other is a Krupp field piece captured in the fight in MILD IN THEIR ACTION.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are very mild in their action. They do not cause griping in the stomach or cause disturbances there as so many pills do. Therefore the most delicate can take them without fear of unpleasant results. They can, too, be administered to children without imposing the penalties which follow the use of pills not so carefully prepared.

How Fast a Bird Can Fly.

If you consult the usually accepted authorities on the speed of birds in their flight you are likely to be mis-led by an exaggeration of from 100 to 300 per cent. This is because figures have been given on hearsay, appearances and very superficial observation. But recently American, English and French observers have been comparing notes, and are practically agreed after most careful calculation on the speed of the best-known birds. They have started with the carrier pigeons, and have made him a base of comparison. He has heretofore been credited with 110 miles an hour, but it is now agreed that he is entitled to 50, says the Chicago Chronicle. A quite recent long distance, carefully conducted test of 590 miles, from the Shetland Islands to London, showed that the most rapid pigeons made 37 miles an hour. On shorter distances none has made more than 50 miles. Because frigate birds have not been seen far from land and have been supposed not to fly by night er to rest on the water, they have been credited with a speed of from 150 to 200 miles an If they did fly at that speed they would have to overcome an at-mospheric pressure of from 112 to 130 pounds to the square foot of flying surface. There is no certainty that they do not fly at night or do not sleep on the water. That swallow, that is indeed a rapid flyer, has been credited with 180 miles an hour, but he must be cut down to 65 miles, and the marten to five miles behind him, though authorities have placed him ten ahead. The teal duck is brought down from 140 to 50 miles an hour. The mallard is five miles slower and flies the same as the canvasback, while both of these are five miles an hour ahead of the wild goose and eider duck.

Small birds appear to fly more ra-pidly than the large ones, and have deceived many observers. The humming bird does not fly as fast as many awkward appearing, very much larger, slow flapping birds.

As legal evidence photography is growing in constant favor and use. Many times experts have been called to photograph localities where accidents have happened. Some time ago a question of responsibility was settled in court concerning two stamboats which had been in collision. One boat, which had received the blow of the other, had been at once repaired by the owner, but not until a series of photographs had been made unknown to the owner. At the trial some pretty tall swearing took place, when, to the surprise of the witnesses, they were put face to face with the art that cannot lie, photography, and the case went against them. In another case a witness swore that he was turning his horse to the right, when a photograph showed that a deep excavation made it impossible. THE CAMERA AS A DETECTIVE.

"Yes, in a little more than a month, and to a fine fellow apparently—Clifton Vining by name."

"Ah! the same chap with whom I saw her on that burning steamer," said Mr. Hartman; and then he described his meeting with the young couple on that eventful occasion.

"Yes, I knew something about the accident," madame returned; "but, of course, Shirley is too sensitive to make herself out a heroine, so you have told me some news. I tell you, the girl is a lump of pure gold; if there is any alloy in her makeup, she keeps it well in subjection. I am glad she is going to be married, for she has had a very hard time this winter; though, whenever I think about it, I am unaccountably depressed," she concluded, with a sigh.

Alexander Hartman flashed an inquiring glance at her as he wondered whether it was a momentary superstition that made her feel thus, or because of her lack of faith in mankind generally.

She arose after a moment, remarking: "It is time that I was getting home, for this is my first day out after a long illness. But come, and I will first introduce you to Shirley."

"I do not need an introduction. Lord Wallace presented me to her last fall," the gentleman replied, as he also arose. "By the way," he added, "I imagined from what I saw of them that he was very fond of her, and she might some day become Lady Wallace."

"Well, I myself rather hoped he would win her," said madame, with a little sigh over her broken romance. "But she was engaged to Vining even then."

Shirley looked up and smiled at madame as they approached her, but flushed as she caught Mr. Hartman's eyes; f she had not forgotten the embarrassing circumstances of their last meeting.

"I perceive that you remember me, Miss Livingstone," he remarked, with a deprecatory smile, "while I also remember how apparently rude I was to you at the time of our introduction. I have come to ask if you will allow me to call upon you to explain it, and also some other matters that have lain heavily on my heart

"Did you ever know my parents?" Shir-less avertioned.

"Did you ever know my parents: Shirley questioned eagerly.
"Yes, very well," said the man, his glance wavering with conscious guilt before the earnest gaze of Shirley's clear, searching eyes. "May I trespass upon an hour of your time this afternoon, and tell you something regarding my acquaintance with them?"

Shirley granted his request, and then, seeing that madame looked weary, she hastened to call their carriage, when, bidding Mr. Hartman good-morning, they were soon on their way back to the During their drive madame confided to Shirley what she had aiready surmised, that Alexander Hartman was the man whom she had loved, and who had proved so false to her in her youth.

Madame's soul had been stirred to its very depths by the interview with her very depths by the interview with her old-time lover.

Her old wild love for the man had not been reawakened; she could not, as she had told him, even regard him as a friend, for his unworthiness in the past had destroyed all faith in him; but the germ of an ideal love, for an ideal object, had never been wholly destroyed, and now arose to contront her, making her realize, as she had never realized before, how much of the sweetness and blessedness of life she had lost, and the grief and pain of the hour had almost unnerved her.

As they were bowling smoothly along Fifth avenue, Shirley suddently espied a familiar form on horseback approaching them from the opposite direction.

Her heart gave a startled bound, and a delicate flush of mingled confusion and pleasure mantled her cheek.

"Madame Marton, look! is not that Lord Waddame turned her eyes in the direction ne turned her eyes in the direction "indeed I believe it is," she said, and hen she commanded the driver to stop. ust as the young man himself recognized hem and rode up to the side of the

"For two months!" Shirley repeated, in a tone of surprise and regret; "and have you been in New York all that time."

have you been in New York all that time?"
"Yes, I am at the B— Hospital, completing a special course in surgery," the young man replied.

Shirley looked astonished, and then she suddenly became conscious of an unusual gravity in his manner, and of a sad and heavy expression about his eyes.

"And Ray—" she began, when she knew instantly, from the almost spasmodic contraction about his mouth, that she had touched a fresh-made wound.

"Ray is gone, Miss Shirley," he said, in a tone that made her ready to weep. "He never entirely recovered from the attack he had last fall: he gradually dropped and faded until he quietly dropped asleep one day, just as the sun was going down. My mother also died just a week later of pneumonia; and now—I am alone."

Tears were dropping fast from Shirley' eyes by this time, for the very effort which Neil was making for self-control only served to intensify the despair in his tone; while those last three words smote like a heavy blow upon her tender heart.

"It is very sad" she faltered. "I here heart.
"It is very sad," she faltered. "I hope that neither suffered much."
"Very little, and that is my one comfort." he said. Then, seeing how overcome both she and madame were by his sad news, he added: "I will see you again and tell you more, when you are better able to bear it. But I am afraid that it has also been a hard winter for you, for you are both looking thin and pale."

shirley explained that madame had een very ill, and then she concluded, very ill, and then she concluded, a smile: f we had only known that you were "If we had only known that you were in the city we would have sent for you, even though she must have been on the mending list when you arrived."
"I should have come most cheerfully."
Lord Wallace responded; "and if you should ever need advice in the future, pray do not fail to let "a know."
They promised, little knowing how soon they would need his services. They chatted a little longer, then, after giving him their addresses and a cordial invitation to "look in upon them whenever his duties would allow," they bade him adieu and went on their homeward way.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Shirley was strangely silent and de-pressed during the remainder of their fide home, for those three words, "I am alone," as Lord Wallace had uttered them, rang their mournful changes un-ceasingly on her heart, making her very sad ceasingly on her heart, making her very sad.

It was a cruel fate, she thought, that one who possessed, like this young man; everything to make life enjoyable, should be so bereft, rhould have his heart and home both made desolate almost at one fell blow.

"He has known trouble of almost every kind," she said to herself, "and he cannet be thirty years old yet. Can it be possible that he is destined to live alone the remainder of his life? There surely must be some good in store, even in this world, for so noble and manly a man."

"I declare, it is hard luck!" said madame, breaking in upon these reflections. "First, he had te have all that trouble with that giddy wife of his; then his sister died, and now he has lost his mother and his boy. I am not sure," she added, thoughtfully, "but that it is a matter to be thankful for that the peor little chap was taken; but I am serry for his father. Lady Wallace was a good woman, too. It is queer why people who are needed so much are taken and the useless ones left," she concluded, with a sigh.

Shirley knew what she meant, and laid her hand softly on the aged one lying in madame's lap.

"Ah!" she said, gently, "but I should not like te spare you, though I am very, very sorry for Lord Wallace."

"Yes, he must be very lonely," responded Madame Marton, while her fingers involuntarily closed over the warm little hand lying upon hers. "I half expected and hoped, though," she added, bending a searching slance upon the lovely face beside her, "that he would succeed in capturing you last summer, succeed in capturing you last summer, and make you mistress of Ivyhurst."
Shirley blushed a vivid scarlet at this unexpected assault.
"Oh, Madame Marton! I am afraid you are very presuming to think me worth of such a position," she cried, but trying hard to conceal her embarrassment. "Humph! he might do worse, acording to my way of thinking," said madame, and drawing her own conclusion from the young girl's confusion.

That afternoon Alexander Hartman came, as he had agreed, to call upon the young girl's confusion, and to a fine fellow apparently—Clifton Vining by name."

Wards off-band don't want you to say anything about it to your friends, for they would laugh more than ever, but the fact is I have never yet been able to shoot a deer if it looked me in the eye. With a ouffalo or a bear or an Indian it is different. But the deer has the eye of a trusting child—soft, gentle and confiding. No one but a brute could shoot a deer if he caught that look."—From the Life of Col. Cody.

"I will surprise my boy. He does not know I have come to see him," said the old man to the gate-keeper. A few moments after the remarks were made, word reached the gate of death of Archibald Russell at one of the hearth furnaces. "My God, it's my boy!" gasped the old man, and he sank prostrated to the ground. Archibald Russell was aiding in the posting machinery with block and tackle, when suddenly the block, which was 60 feet above the ground, broke from its fas-tenings and fell with tremendous force,

Every Steak a Porterhouse.

Of interest to all classes, reformers and epicures alike, in an idea that has recently been advanced by Mr. William T. Bryan, an electrician, of Cincinnati, says the New York Herald. He has for years been manufacturing batteries and appliances for physicians, and in his studies has also inquired into electrical therapeutics—the system of disease treatment by electricity. In this he is regarded as an authority, and some of his articles on "Electrolysis" have awakened considerable interest among physicians and surgeons in the middle west. He is not a vegetarian or a devotee of any radical food theory, but shares with mankind in general an aversion for tough, unpalatable meats, Such a thing, he says, is unnecessary, and in support of his idea he brings forward a method whereby he insists the evil may be eradicated.

Usually his method in outline has been as follows: Selecting a very ordinary piece of meat he cuts it in two, and submits one-half of it to a treatment by "electrolysis"—that is, he inducts into it a current of electricity that permeates every atom and disintegrates the "connective tissues"—the scientific name for that quality of a tough steak which produces so much indigestion and profanity. When the process has continues a sufficient time the two pieces are cooked in precisely the same manner and their merits compared.

Whether the "untreated" piece turns out to be good, bad or indifferent, the other is always a toothsome morsel, fit for an epicure or an invalid. The electricity, it is claimed, leaves no taint, and does not lessen the nutritive quality of the meat. In fact, it tends to destroy impurity.

CHARACTERISTICS OF ADVANCED LIFE

Just What to Eat and Drink If You Want to Live To Be Old.

Anatomical experiment and investigation show that the chief characteristics of old age are the deposits of earthy matter of a gelatinous, fibrinous character in the human system. Carbonate and phosphate of lime, mixed with other salts of a calcareous nature have been found to furnish the greater part of these earthy deposits. As observations show, man begins in a gelatinous condition; he ends in an osseous or bony one-soft in infancy, hard in old age. Of course, these earthy deposits, which affect all the physical organs, naturally interfere with their functions. Partial os-sification of the heart produces the imperfect circulation of the blood which affects the aged. When the arteries are clogged with calcareous matter there is interference with the cir-repair of the body.

None of these things interfere with nutrition and circulation in earlier years. The reparation of the physical system, as everyone ought to know, depends on this fine balance. In fact, the whole change is merely a slow, steady accumulation of calcareous deposits in the system. * * * When these become excessive and resist expulsion they cause the stiffness and dryness of old age.

culation, upon which nutrition depends. Without nutrition there is no

Entire blockage of the functions of the body is then a mere matter time; the refuse matter deposited by the blood in its constant passage through the system stops the delicate and exquisite machinery which we call life. This is death. It has been proved by analysis that human blood concontained the earth salts. In early life they are thrown off. Age has not the power to do it. Hence, as the blood is produced by assimilation of the food we eat, to this food we must look for the earthy accumulations which in time block up the system and bring on old age.

* * Almost everything we eat contains more or less of these elements for destroying life, by means of calcareous salts deposited by the all-nourishing blood. Careful selection, Earth salts abound in the cereals, summoned to attend the injured girl and bread itself, though seemingly the found that her skull was fractured, and most innocent of edibles, greatly assists in the disposition of calcareous matter in our bodies. Nitrogenous food abounds in this element. Hence a diet made up of fruit principally is best for people advancing in years, for the reason that, being deficient in nitrogen, the ossific deposits so much to be dreaded are more likely to be suspended.

Moderate eaters have in all cases a much better chance of long life than those addicted to excesses at the Disappearance of Wild Horses.

The wild horse is almost a thing of the past, says the Little Chronicle. Ten years ago 200,000 mustangs were scat-tered over the ranges of Texas. New Mexico and Arizona, but now they are practically all gone, except a few that were tamed and kept in the Indian reservations. The bicycle and the trol ley car made high-grade eastern horses so cheap that the little cayuses be-came worthless, so when they caused trouble in herds of sheep or devoured pasture wanted for cattle they were commonly shot by stockmen as a nuis-ance. Even with this explanation their rapid disappearance is mysterious. Some say that the breed deteriorated and naturally died out, while others assert that thousands of the desert ponies were secretly made into canned beef The mustangs are doubtless descended from horses brought by Cortez and other Spanish invaders.

But where the wild ponies reamed the best bred horses in the land are now feeding. Texas and Arizona ranchmen are finding it profitable to raise hight-grade horses for the east and for the English and German armies. The roughness of the country and the dry climate make the animals hardy, longwinded and speedy, and these horses from the southwest have proved the best for the rough riding in the Boer

The jack rabbit is also suffering the fate of the cayuse and the buffalo. Jack hunting is a favorite sport of both white men and Indians. The methods used in these hunts are very saccessful, but are unsportsmanlike and Brief History of the Movement Which Has Made London Widely Known.

Canada's Forest City, London, has what is perhaps the most unique organization of its kind in the world, says the Cleveland Plaindealer.

During the summer of 1897 20 former resident of London, then living in Toresident of London, then living in To-ber, if not a majority of presbyteries, ronto, decided to visit their native city in a body. They were welcomed by possible, go to a Canadian, have nomthe old town as prodigal sons, everywere thrown open and hospitality bath school missionaries, already gained a new meaning.

Then the idea of a permanent organization came into life. No sooner suggested than action was taken, and that is how and why the "London Old Boys' Association" came to exist. A approve of the plan of one for each local committee was appointed, com-posed of the most important citizens of the city, whose duty it was to provide for the entertainment of her sons whose home-coming was to add enjoyment to the celebration of the city's will be deliberated upon, is that of a superintendent of the augmentation in August.

The following year Windsor added to the crowd of reminiscent boys and the organization took a firm basis. In 1899 Hamilton, Ottawa, Detroit and Chicago, and various other cities sent their boys to visit their old home.

About a week before the celebration last year Dr. J. George Layton, of Becker avenue, this city, having his attention called to the matter by friends in London, decided that Cleveland, too, should send its quota of boys to revive the memories of their youthful days. With the aid of Chas.

The celebration lasts for a whole week, and all bills are paid in advance. Every energy is used to add to their pleasure and remind them that there is "no place like home" after all. Many of the entertainments are exceedingly amusing and original, and remind one of a Mardi Gras celebration. Former Resident of London Amasses a Snug Fortune

Many London people will be interested in the good fortune of a former resident of the city, Mr. Douglas H. Grand, who conducted an auction and commission business here up to about six years ago. He then left London and went to Liverpool, where he engaged in the buying of horses. His talents as a judge of equines were re-cognized by the British Government, and he was employed largely by them in purchasing mounts for the army. During the six years since he left London Mr. Grand has succeeded in amassing a comfortable fortune of over a quarter of a million dollars. A large portion of this money he has sent to Ontario for investment, and a considerable amount of it has come to London, thus showing Mr. Grand's supper was served by the ladies to confidence in the prosperity and pro-about 600 persons. What the Church Court Will Discuss in Ottawa on Wednesday.

Will Not Take Up the Question of the Creed—Church Is Not Ripe for Revision.

Ottawa, June 10.-The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada will convene in St. Andrew's Church, here, on Wednesday, when representatives from all parts of Canada will be present. It is almost certain that Rev. Dr. Warden will be elected moderator, as he has been nominated by a large majority of the presbyteries. while no one else has been mentioned by more than one or two.

The closing of the twentieth century fund will create a good deal of interest. It is altogether probable that the $600,000 asked for the common fund will be made up, while in place of the $400,000 which it was expected would be raised for the reduction of local church debts, more than $800,000 has been contributed. In spite of this, however, the hope so fervently expressed when the fund was instituted, that the special effort in giving might be accompanied by a strong spiritual uplifting, has scarcely been realized. On the other hand, the fear that the giving to it would prove injurious to other permanent funds has not been realized either as with the exception of a few small local schemes, there has been no per-ceptible falling off.

There is a strong possibility of a hot contest over the appointment of a professor in apologetics and pastoral in Knox College. While the report of the Knox College senate and board recommends the appointment of Rev. A. Halliday Douglas, this recommendation is in no way binding, and may be counteracted by the fact that a large numinated Prof. F. R. Beattie, D.D., Ph.D., at present in Louisville, Ky.

brought up in presbytery and synod, will also be brought up for discussion and decision. A majority of presbyteries are in favor of the principle of setting apart a man for work synod, but think that the work of such missionaries should be confined to the outlying districts.

civic holiday, held on the first Monday work, which, it is felt by many, requires the entire attention of a regular official. If this is decided upon it is fair to surmise that Rev. Robert Campbel, D.D., will be the man chosen. Dr. Campbell gave up his charge at Renfrew two years ago to become the general agent of the twentieth century fund. His work in this connection is now completed, and he is at liberty to take some other in hand. The additional fact that Dr. Campbell is also convener of the general assembly's augmentation committee suggests him as a likely man for the position, if it

The reports of these presented to the different synods have been most unsatisfactory. The number and strength of these societies are rapidly diminish ing. It is felt that they are not meeting the needs of the young men of the country, and that something must be done to make their work more effective. A proposition is made by one synod to make the pledge a litle more elastic, to make the societies more strongly denominational, and to put them under the control of the ses-

In connection with foreign missions, two important appointments have to be made. Someone must be chosen to do the work formerly carried on by Rev. A. B. Winchester, among the Chinese of British Columbia, and a successor is also needed to the late Dr.

G. L. Mackay in Formosa. The advisability will also be dis-cussed of sending someone out under the authority of the foreign commit-tee to visit the various mission fields. In case such a step is decided upon, Rev. R. P. Mackay, D. D., foreign mission secretary, would probably be the man to go. Although the revision of the Westminster Confession of Faith was the chief matter discussed at the recent assembly of the American Presbyterian Church North in Philadelphia there is scarcely the slightest possibil ity of the subject being even mentioned when the Canadian Church meets in Ottawa on Wednesday. For while few of the Presbyterian ministers of Canada would be prepared to say that the Westminster Confession is an adequate and accurate expression of their teligious belief, they are not impressed with the practical necessity for a modern creed, and their reverence for antiquity prompts them to keep their hands off the one of the fathers.

SARNIA BOOMING

Frontier Town Experiencing Great Commercial Expansion.

When Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the Grand Trunk Railway, and General Manager George B. Reeve and party were here this week, says the Sarnia Observer, they imparted the information that negotiations which had been pending for some time had been concluded, and as a result one of the largest industries in America for the manufacture of electrical machin ery would be located at Point Edward in the very near future. General Manager Reeve is also credited with saying that negotiations were now on with another large man-ufacturing industry, which desired a site at the Point, and that in all prob ability the company would locate there It is also stated that the Cleveland Sarnia Sawmills Company have a quired a site at Point Edward, and will at no distant date commence the eres tion of a large planing mill and sash and door factory.

In discussing the topic of the locating of the electrical manufacturing indus-try at Point Edward, Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson and General Manager Reeve are credited with stating that the industry would give employment to very large number of skilled work-men.

It is understood that the electrical manufacturing industry is a Milwau-
