Decreased Immigration to Canada. LONDON, Aug. 11 .- The emigration to Canada from British ports for the seven months ending July 31, shows, according to the official compilations just published, a considerable decrease when compared with a similar period in the previous year. The falling away is considered the more remarkable when the prominence which Dominion matters have received during the past year is taken into account.

The Favored Few. London, Aug. 12 .- The Queen summoned Lord Salisbury to Osborne House to dine with Emperor William Saturday evening. The Prince of Wales entertained George Gould at dinner the same evening. Land Boom in Bulawayo.

CAPE Town, Aug. 12 .- Prospectors have sold to syndicates 3,580 claims, situated about Bulawayo, formerly headquarters of King Lobengula. In all 15,500 claims have been registered. Many Americans are concerned in these land transactions.

After the Earthquake, ROME, Aug. 12 .- The villages in Sicily destroyed by the earthquake a few days ago will be rebuilt by the Government and the taxes of the inhabitants will be remitted. Anarchists Acquitted. Paris, Aug. 12.-The Anarchist trial ended today in the acquittal of all the 30 defendants on the charge of anarchy. Three of the prisoners, however, were tound guilty on other charges.

The Eastern War. LONDON, Aug. 12 .- Another dispatch from Shanghai says: It is reported that 26 ships were engaged in the attack on Wei-Hai-Wei. The forts and vessels exchanged about 50 shots.

The attacks, it is thought, were a ruse to draw fire in order to ascertain the strength and position of the Chinese guns. No damage is reported to have been done at either Wei-Hai-Wei or Port Arthur.

Great Beer-Guzzling. BERLIN, Aug. 12 .- The 21st congress of the Austro-German Alpine Club this week attracted 5,000 mountain climbers to Munich. Most of them arrived on Wednesday by special trains. They were received by bands, and were entertained by the prince regent in the evening at a complimentary concert in the great Pschorre brewery. At the trueschoppen, or beer breakfast, on Thursday the delegates consumed 116 barrels of beer in five hours. Snubbed!

LONDON, Aug. 12.-The week's sport at Cowes was on the whole a disappointment. The contests were tame, and there was considerable friction over the snobbish conduct of the Royal Yacht Squadron. A. D. Clark, who was blackbailed by the Royal Yacht Squadron because his social standing was not considered satisfactory, has left his yacht, the Satanita, at Southampton. He will probably not race again this season. Mr. and Mrs. George Gould were entertained lavishly at their beautiful residence facing Southampton Water.

Tupper Treads on Ticklish Ground. LONDON, Aug. 12 .- The London Times publishes a column letter from the Allan Line Steamship Company of Glasgow, in which they state they are much aggrieved at the statement of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in the Canadian House of Commons on July 11 last, to the effect that they (the Allans) were helping to throw discredit on the safety of the St. Lawrence route because the proposed line would hurt their personal interests. They contend, however, that the outlook for a fast Atlantic line to Canada is not very bright, because of the prevalence of isebergs, disasters in the St. Lawrence, and the absence of local trade at Halifax and Quebec. Mr. Jas. Huddart, the promoter of the new line, says he is quite satisfied with the assurances of Sir Chas. Hibbert Tupper as to the safety of the St. Lawrence route.

The Eight Hour Law.

London, Aug. 12.-The one remaining subject likely to give rise to a spirited debate in the House of Commons this session is the Eight Hours Miners Bill. The topic is important enough to have brought Mr. Gladstone suddenly again to the front from the depths of his political seclusion and the rural solitudes of Hawarden. The halfforgotten leader issues a manifesto in the form of a letter to Mr. Thomas, a Welsh Radical member. This letter is written in reply to a personal appeal by one to whom he writes as a personal friend in the character, as he takes pains to explain of a friendly adviser, "and not as in any manner committed or engaged in controversy" He emphasizes his separation from his party, and clearly means to hold himself aloof from every political responsi-bility. He nevertheless fences with the question in his old manner, and with that lexterity which is his alone. If the miners want eight hours "with a degree of concurrence approaching unanimity" they have in Mr. Gladstone's opinion "a moral title to it," but he declares himself very doubtful of the moral title of the majority to impose their will on a considerable minority. He, however, declares that the general adoption of the eight-hour law would give him personally very great satisfaction. The upshot of the whole letter is that he personally thinks it would be well if the question could be set-tled by local option, the option to be exercised in districts of considerable area. Reviewed British Troops.

LONDON, Aug. 13 .- Emperor William of Germany arrived at Aldershot this morning in the uniform of a colonel of dragoous, and reviewed 12,000 troops commanded by the Duke of Connaught.

The Nose a Social Test.

LONDON, Aug. 13 .- The debate in the the fact that the nose is an infallible social test. Mr. Raisley, under the supervision of the Government, has been examining the physical characteristics of the natives of northern India. He has carefully measured all their noses and deduced therefrom a nasal index. He has found close correspondence between the gradations of racial type indicated by the nasal index and certain social data ascertained by independent inquiry. If you take the series of castes and arrange them in the order of the average nasal index so that the caste with the finest nose shall be at of social precedence. In fact, a man's social status varies in inverse ratio to the width of his nose.

Evict the Strikers.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 12.-Mr. Pullman has decided to turn his striking tenants into the streets. He made up his mind yesterday to evict them early this week. The legal papers which must be served on the strikers, preliminary to setting their goods into the streets were understood to be in course of preparation in Attorney Runnell's office under positive orders of the Second Vice-President Wickes confirmed the report that the tenants would be put out of Mr. Pullman's houses as soon as the company could get rid of them. Mr. Wickes admitted Friday afternoon that something of the kind would have to be done if the strikers who are living in the The other companies comprising the regicompany's houses did not return to work ment are No. 2 Company, Toronto; No. 3

On Friday Mr. Pullman visited the shops, pany, Frederickton, N. B. Each will He evidently determined then to get rid of leave their respective stations so as to his unprofitable tenants and settle the question himself, since no meeting of the directors was held in the interval. The reason given for turning the strikers out is that the houses are needed by new workmen who have taken the places of strikers.

There are now nearly 400 vacant houses in Pullman. Should the company carry out its programme the town of Pullman would be almost wholly depopulated. No less than 5,000 men, women and children will be turned into the street. About 1,500 strikers are tenants of the Pullman company, most of them having large families. Few, if any of them, paid a dollar of rent since the strike was declared. Most of section of anthropology has established them are on the point of starvation, and so day many were singing songs with much poor they could not pay an expressman for gusto. The men were paraded to receive hauling their goods out of town.

The strikers have avoided discussing the possibilities of eviction, although they were warned that it would surely come. They have been hoping the trouble would be settled in some way that would not drive them from the town.

"God pity the officials of the company if they attempt to evict us," said Robert Coombs, a member of the strike committee. "I don't like to think of what would happen. I want to get away before anything of that kind begins."

HANGING IN MID-AIR.

Untatisfactory Situation in Regard to the Wilson Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 12 .- The week just ended left the Tariff Bill hang. ng in mid-air. What its condition will be by the time the present week is ended the most sanguine politician will not predict. There is a strong hope that the time for action has arrived and that the long struggle is about to cease.

The situation has become clear to a certain extent, for it is no longer a question of choice between the Senate and the Wilson Bill, but between the Senate Bill and the McKinley law. The debate in the Senate on Mr. Hill's resolution will begin promptly after routine business on Monday, and when it will end cannot be foretold. Leading Democrats, who are leagued with the Administration in this issue, say that there will not be any effort at filibustering against it.

The night before the House caucus which will settle the fate of the pending tariff legislation finds the Democratic leaders in that body confident of a satisfactory solution of the knotty problem before them. Messrs. Wilson and Breckinridge spent the most of the afternoon together talking over the situation. The understanding tonight is that no opposition will be made tomorrow to the motion to concur in the Senate amendments to the tariff bill. There is no good reason to believe that the President will attempt to interfere.

No. 1 Company R. C. R. I. Take an Early Morning Trip

And Leave the City at the Mercy of Coxey's Army, Please Stay Away Until Canada's Only Permanent Corps Get Through Meeting in Camp-Will Return About October 14.

The officers and men of No. 1 Company R. C. R. I. marched out of the barracks today in the dim gray light of early morning and commenced their journey to Quebec where the companies of the Royal Regiment of Canadian Infantry will meet together as a regiment for the first time in its existence. The historic Plains of Abraham will no doubt welcome Canada's premier corps and warlike Quebec will look for the first time on the only regiment of the permanent force of the infantry corps that Canada possesses, Company, St. Johns, P. Q., and No 4 Company, Frederickton, N. B. Each will arrive at Quebec about the same time.

There were great preparations being made for the trip at the barracks yesterday. The soldiers were not allowed out of bounds and civilians, except a privileged few, were not allowed to pass the guard. Bedding and baggage, pots and pans and bundles and boxes were all being loaded on baggage wagons preparatory to their removal to the train. Arms and accontrements were being made to glitter and shine as good soldiers love to see them. Lucky was the soldier who had his work done. Those who had were contemplating the trip as civilians do a well-carned holiday, and despite the sacredness of the final instructions and rations at 4 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock the bugle sounded "lights out," although it was yet broad daylight. This was to give the men a chance to rest before "reveille" sounded, shortly after 3 a.m. During the evening the bandsmen of the Seventh, who were to play the soldiers to the train, commenced to arrive, and the majority stayed at the barracks all night. It was hovering twixt night and morn when the men, in obedience to the bugle, assembled on the square in heavy marching order. The situation at Pullman yesterday kept Good-bye was said to wives and children, Behind Me," "The British Grenadiers" and "Auld Lang Syne," until the C. P. R. crossing at Adelaide street was reached. In the absence of the corps a great many repairs, alterations and extensions will be made to the barracks. It is rumored that when the company returns about Oct. 14 another company will be formed, and both will have their headquarters here. CHICAGO, Aug. 11. - Attorney-General Majoney this afternoon filed a petition in the office of the circuit clerk of Cook county for a bill in equity against the Pullman Palace Car Company, calling upon it to show cause why it should not be prohibited from further doing business under the laws of the State.

The petition sets forth that the company has violated the franchise conferred upon it by the State in numerous particulars. and lays stress upon the fact that the company is carrying on a hotel business and real estate business at Pullman without warrant. The petition is said to be one of the strongest that has been so far drawn by the Attorney-General against trusts and

The House is Forced to Accept the Senate Tariff Bill,

But Will Continue Its Efforts for Free Coal, Sugar and Iron.

Mr. Wilson's Startling Exposure of the Sugar Trust.

Colleagues-The Motion to Adopt the Senate Bill Carried.

Mesers, Wilson and Crisp Address Their

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13 .- Mr. Wilson has stated substantially that there was no prospect for tariff legislation unless the Senate bill was adopted. A meeting was held in Speaker Crisp's room this morning to decide what action the House leaders should take with reference to the tariff bill in the caucus. There were present in the committee, room besides the speaker, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Mc-Millan, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Turner and Mr. Breckenridge, of Arkansas, also members of the committee. Shortly before 10 o'clock the statement was made on the authority of one of these gentlemen that it had been decided to ACCEPT THE SENATE BILL. At 10 o'clock not more than twoscore members were absent from their places. Everyone felt that the time had arrived when some decisive action should be taken regarding the disputes between the two Houses, and the hope was generally expressed that no opposition would be made to the Senate bill in order that a speedy termination of the long contest should be reached.

Mr. Holman, chairman of the caucus, took the chair. When the roll call, which showed 173 members were present, was completed, a hush of expectation fell upon the caucus. Mr Wilson author of the Wilson Bill, took the floor. Although outwardly calm and cool he was manifestly laboring under deep emotion. His speech for the first five minutes was general in character and contained no specific points. It was devoted in the beginning to an explanation of the embarrassments under which the house conferees had labored. He said the representatives of the House had gone into the conference with a desire of faithfully representing the wishes of their colleagues. That they had failed to reach a satisfactory conclusion alike honorable to the House and to the Democratic party was not their fault. Mr. Wilson made a special reference to the sugar schedule. He stated the different propositions relating to sugar, which had been advanced in the conference, and proceeded to show the profits which would accrue to the trust from the acceptance of these various propositions, Mr. Wilson said from the beginning of the conference they had been given to understand from day to day that any division of the Senate votes in sugar, coal and iron ore

LEAD TO ABSOLUTE DEFEAT. or at least the postronement of the bill. Mr. Wilson stated subsequently that there was no prospect for tariff legislation unless the Senate bill was adopted.

MR. WILSON'S EXPOSURE. Mr. Wilson went on to show that the House people had contended stoutly for a specific rather than an ad valorem duty on sugar. A specific duty would show precisely what benefit the trust would while it would be impossible to determine this accurately under the ad valorem system. He said the sugar trust, becoming convinced that the Senate schedule would be adopted, had made heavy purchases of foreign raw sugar. He then made the startling statement on the authority of a leading Democratic Senator that the trust had bought sugar to the amount of $112,000,000 in the foreign market in anticipation of the Senate sugar schedule receiving the approval of the President. Under the Senate schedule the trust would reap A PROFIT OF $40,000,000. The declaration made by Mr. Wilson that the sugar trust had the people by the throat and that it was a battle between the people and the great monopoly was greeted with a hearty round of applause. When Mr. Wilson finished Speaker Crisp arose, and was greeted with applause. He began by saying the House must take the Senate bill. While the Senate bill must be adopted, the House would make a determined effort for free sugar. He then offered a resolution that the House recede from its position and accept the Senate bill. The resolution also includes a provision placing barbed wire, sugar, coal and iron ore on the free list by a series of separate bills. Bourke Cochrane, of New York, ther took the floor in opposition to the resolution. Turning toward Mr. Wilson ne challenged the gentleman to give the names of the four Senators who stood in the way of an agreement. He did this twice, but Mr. Wilson remained silent. He was proceeding with his argument against the resolution when his utterances were drowned by a series of derisive yells, mingled with the words "Vote!" "Vote!" and You have not been here long enough to understand the situation." The vote was then taken, and the resolutions offered by Mr. Crisp were adopted by a vote of 103

SENATE BILL ADOPTED. The Crisp resolutions that the House recede from its position and accept the Senate bill were adopted by a vote of 102 to 21. There was no division on the vote to pass separate bills placing coal, sugar, iron ore, etc., on the free list.

A resolution offered by Mr. Tucker, of

A SERIOUS ASSAULT CASE

At the Police Court-Miss Knawicke Was Not There-The Case Post-Poned.

John Teale, a painter, and a member of the Seventh Band, was arrested on Saturday night on a charge of attempted indecent assault. The girl in the case is a domestic employed on Waterloo street. She is one of Miss Rye's Old Country girls, and has borne a good reputation during her sojourn here About 10:30 on Saturday night Teale was on Waterloo street, north from Dundas. He was alone, and as he neared Dundas was accosted by a young lady, who, being a comparative stranger, asked to be directed to Waterloo street. Teale, the complainant alleges, volunteered the information, and on reaching Dufferin avenue is said to have taken the unsuspecting girl east to Colborne street, where, on reaching a dark and secluded spot, the assault is said to have been attempted. The girl screamed loudly, and very soon a score or so of people were on the spot. In the meantime Teale decamped up Colborne street, but the patrol wagon, which had been sent for, soon overtook him, and P. C.s Wallace and Ralph succeeded in applying the handcuffs and removing the prisoner to the station. The girlsname could not be learned. Sympathy is expressed for Teale, as he is known as a hard-working man. He is said to have been drinking for a few days past, and if he committed the deed it is likely that he was under the influence of drink at the time. In expectation of something spicy a great crowd of gentlemen of leisure altended the police court this morning. Mr. McKillop, for the crown, announced that a policeman went to get the girl this

Saturday night. He asked for an adjournment. Mr. Judd-It is hardly fair to keep this young man in jail longer. There was really nothing in the charge at all, or why

The Sun may as well see and admit in this connection (1) that the Patrons were the first to adopt this mode of warfare by filing a petition against the Hon. Twenty Excursionists Drowned at Tenby, Eng.

The Rowboat Upset-Weighed Down by Picnic Baskets.

London, Aug. 13.—During the Tenby regatta this afternoon a large rowboat in which excursionists were being conveyed to a trawler, was upset. All the occupants were thrown into the water and before help could reach them about 20 were drowned. The party had prepared for a cruise in the trawler and had many baskets and bundles which were piled enough to disturb the balance of the boat.

A Denim Dress.

A young lady who teaches during the regular school term, in order to earn the money to attend an art school in the city through the summer months, was invited to join a class on a sketching tour. The expense was slight, the objective point being a near-by mountain town, but she had no suitable dress. Something was required that would stand rain, sun and daubs of paint. Being a woman of resources and determined to go, she bought six yards of denim, overalls stuff. The goods were first washed and boiled, after which she cut out a short bell skirt, turning the wrong side of the goods out and turning up at the bottom a wide hem of right side. Then she made a blazer of the same with wide collar and cuffs of the dark blue. A shirt waist of blue and white seersucker, three yards at twelve cents a yard-completed this artistic suit at a cost of one dollar and thirty-four cents. - Country Gentleman.

A fat young ewe affords the best ripe mutton; next a good wether. The sheep selected for mutton should be kept quiet and cool in a dark place, twenty-four hours without anything to eat, but with all the water it will drink; above all things it should not be worried and heated. The neck being laid across a block, may be severed at a blow with an axe, and the flow of blood should be made as complete as possible by the butcher seizing the hind leg and gently pulling and pushing with a foot on the carcass. The disemboweling and skinning should be quickly dispatched. Let the sleep be hung up, ripped and the bowels removed; then the skinning can be performed afterward. Immediately after the sheep is hung up, if a hole is made between the hind legs and the abdomen filled up with very cold water it will assist in preventing the "sheepy" taste. - Ohio

The Difference Between Knots and Miles. One of the things which it seems difficult for the public mind to grasp is that there is a decided difference between the knot and the mile. It is certainly about time to have it thoroughly understood that the two are not the same thing. It seems easy enough to remember that a mile is only about 87 per cent. of a knot, the latter being approximately 6,082 feet in length, while the statute mile measures

5,280 feet. - Carrier's Magazine.

Cut Flowers. You should always pull the leaves off the stalks of flowers before putting them in water-those which would be in the water, not those above it. And with flowers from any hard-stalked sort of shrub the bark should be pealed off as well as the leaves. The flowers live ever so much longer if these precautions are taken. A scrap of charcoal in the water is also a great preservative, The Economy of Bees in Nature. Dr. J. M. Hicks discourses on the aid of bees in the fertilization of flowers in the following well-chosen language: "How beautiful we see and realize the fact that bees are the sure messengers in assisting horticulture and the horticulturist in reaping and gathering a bountiful harvest of fruits as well as many of the various grains and seeds of the land. Thus, when combined with the service performed by the bees in their eager pursuits, our admiration extends beyond them to their Great Originator, who, by such apparently small means, accomplished so simply yet so completely a most important object of creation. While the bees are receiving from the plants sustenance and at the same time giving them fertility, both to the horticulturist and to the florist is seen their valuable assistance in procuring remunerative returns. Thus it is true that if it were not for the valuable aid that bees and other insects perform in fertilizing many of the blooms of fruit trees and garden plants, we should soon be found wanting in a proper supply of fruit and seeds in carrying on the laudable business of horticulture, as well as fail in having seeds of a good quality at planting time. Thus we see that the two are directly and in timately connected with and depend largely upon each other."

Rice Cultivation in Madagascar. The cultivation of rice in Madagascar is highly developed in the interior of the island, but much less along the coast, where the lazy, careless natives find the land more fertile and the temperature more favorable. In some places, as in the neighborhood of Tananarive, immense marshes, subject to annual inundations and the source of malignant fevers, have been transformed into rice fields. STAIPED STECKINGS WON THE RACE A Tale of Hosiery and Adventure on the Frontier.

(From the Lewiston Journal.) Once when we were going down in the Indian territory, as we rede out of the village we passed the house where a New Brunswick girl had just come to live in the little prairie village. There had been considerable joking about the new arrival, and as we passed she came out to hang up her washing on the line. I rode a little red pony-one that I had swapped a shotgun for-and when I saw the New Brunswick girl hang up a pair of the longest, biggest striped stockings I had ever seen, I rode right up into the yard and under the clothesline, and seized those stockings and pulled

'em off the line and rode away. All that trip across the hot plains and over the rustling buffalo grass the boys plagued me about those stockings. I had put them in my trunk and kept them. I don't know what I took them for or why

Well, we got down into the territory and among the Indians. They are great gamblers, you know, and we bet with them everything we had. We raced and won from them all the money and blankets they possessed. The blankets were United States blankets, but we can use them by cutting out the "U. S." At last we came down to foot-runners, and the Indians brought out their man. He was tall, broad. chested and long-limbed. He could go like the wind, and our best runner was nothing compared with him. Why, he was the best physical man I ever saw. He looked at our man, and his thick lip curled in derision,

"He no good-get a man !" The savage was stripped to his skin. I looked at our man.

"Jake," I said, "you wait a minute." Then I went and got those stockings. When I brought them out they created the biggest kind of a sensation, and the cutiosity to touch them was something comical. They just wanted to put their hands on them to see what they were. did not let them satisfy their curiosity, bu carried them through the crowd as if they were holy relics. "Jake, put them on and run with them,

BRANT.

Henry Brazier, of Brantford, died from lockjaw on Saturday. In April he met with a runaway accident and was thrown set in and continued to the end.

The Six Nation Indians will send an escort of from 100 to 150 mounted men to honor Hon. W. Laurier at Brantford Aug.

20. An enormous crow is expected.

Alex. Baird a few days ago sold to J. H.

Ainslee 200 acres in the Pelee Marsh for $3,000. This property was next to worthless until the big drain was put in. ESSEX.

Henry Teakle, one of the oldest settlers of Sandwich, died Friday. He was present at the battle of Windsor, and was an active participant in all the stirring events of that

There is considerable opposition in South Essex to piping the gas outside of the county, and petitions are in circulation protesting against it. It is claimed that if it is taken across the river the gas fields will soon be depleted. It is understood that the Walkers will bind themselves under a penalty of $100,000 not to pipe the gas out of the counties of Essex and Kent if other companies are denied the privilege.

ELGIN. A horse owned by Mr. Bobier, of Dunwich, while tied Thursday, pulled on the bit till it cut off a piece of its tongue. Dr. Edmunds found it necessary to take out the whole tongue.

James Saywell, one of the oldest and best known residents of the county, passed away Thursday from the effects of general debility, in the 82nd year of his age. The deceased was born in Yorkshire, and has resided for 60 years in Yarmouth and South-

KENT.

The farm buildings, containing the season's crops, belonging to Wm. Lane, Harwich, near Rond Eau, were barned Friday. The loss will be $3,000, partly insured. A Chatham cattle dealer named Sterling has been fined $25 and costs for cruelty to animals. He shipped cattle and sheep in the same car, the latter being packed closely under the former to economize space.

Dr. Hall says that the danger of a smallpox spread is now past. Mrs. Stolte, the patient in Chatham township, is fast re-

There were three incendiary fires at Point Edward, Wednesday morning, between 2 and 3 o'clock. Cronche's and McCleister's stores were set on fire, but the damage was small. The militia armory was destroyed with the arms and accoutrements. Mr. J. R. Chapman, of London, has been visiting at the parental home, near Sexmiths, Ont. Wm. Johnson, one of the so-called Port Huron River pirates, whom the Canadian insignificant when compared with this. A Government sought to extradite upon the charge of robbing Charles Gillman, of Mooretown, the river trader, was discharged Saturday by Judge Vance. The judge held that the evidence showed that Johnston was guilty only of larceny, if anything, and not of robbery. The crowd will be tried for bringing in stolen goods in the United States. They are all out on $200 bail each.

MIDDLESEX. During the heavy thunder storm that passed over Belmont Thursday morning the residence of Mrs. Connell, east of the Presbyterian Church there, was struck by lightning, and the southwest corner of the building was badly wrecked. Mrs. Connell's bed was in the corner that was struck, but that lady, having risen only a few minutes before, escaped uninjured but badly fright-

Peter Michaelson, who gives his residence as 115 Atwater street, walked into the pelice station at Detroit on Thursday and gave himself up. He said that he understood he was wanted on some charge, but he did not know what. He was immediately placed under arrest, and charged with highway robbery. On the night of Aug. 3, about 2 a.m., Nichol Black, an old man who lives in Glencoe, Ont., was held up on Brush street, near the Detroit and Milwaukee depot, and robbed of $150. It is alleged that Michaelson is one of the two men who committed this robbery. Michaelson pleaded not guilty, and was held for examination under $500 bail.

PERTH. Mitchell Advocate: Mr. John S. Coppin, his brothers Thomas and Joseph, and a sister at Stratford, Mrs. Johnston, have fallen in for a large sum of money. When their father, who was possessed of considerable money and property, died some years ago in England, he left the interest on the whole of the estate to his second wife, who survived him, and at her death the principal was to be divided equally between the four children above named. The old lady passed away about three weeks ago, and now the division of the estate is to be made.

New Gold Field in Colorado.

Mosca, Col., Aug. 11. - The developments at the new gold field, about fifteen miles east of here, tend to raise rather than to allay the excitement of the past two days. Over 200 claims have been staked out. A town site has been chosen near, and merchants are rushing up buildings and preparing for business. The towns of Mosca and Garrison are nearly depopulated of their able-bodied men, and many are coming from towns farther away. Old prospectors declare the gold ore bodies are simply immense, and that there is more gold in Blanca than silver in Creed.

A Good Appetite

Always accompanies good health, and an absence of appetite is an indication of something wrong. The universal testimony given by those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, as to its merits in restoring the appetite, and as a purifier of the blood, constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills, biliousness, aundice, indigestion, sick headache. 25c. d There is nothing rounds out the pleasures of life better than a circle of friends. Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject. We are apt to judge the astronomer by his looks. The great lung healer is found in the exsellent medicine sold as Pickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It soothes and diminishes the sensibility of the membrane of the throat and air passages and is a sovereign remedy for all coughs, colds, hoarseness, pain or soreness in the chest, bronchitis, etc. It has cured many when supposed to be far advanced in consumption. The flash of a thought is more effective than 1,000 oaths.

HOW WE WALK.

The Muscles Used and the Mechanical Work They Do.

The chief muscles concerned in walking are those in the calf and back of leg, which by pulling up the heel, also pull up the bones of the foot connected with it, and then the whole body, the weight of which is passed on through the bones of the leg. When walking the trunk is thrown forward so that it would fall down prostrate were not the right foot planted in time to support it. The calf muscles are helped in this action by those on the front of the trunk and legs, which contract and pull the body forward, and the trunk slanting forward when the heel is raised by the calf muscles, the whole body will be raised and pushed forward and upward. This advancement of each leg is effected partly by muscular action, the muscles used being (1) those on the front of the thigh, bending it forward on the pelvis; (2) the hamstring muscles, which slightly bend the leg on the thigh; (3) the muscles on the front of the leg, which raise the front of the foot and toes, preventing the latter, in swinging forward, from hitching in the ground. When one foot has reached the ground the action of the other has not ceased.

There is another point in walking. The body is constantly supported and balanced on each leg alternately, and, therefore, on only one at once. Hence there must be some means for throwing the centre of gravity over the line of support formed by the bones of each leg as it supports the weight of the body. This is done in various ways, and hence the differences in the walk of different people. There may be slight rotation at the hip joint, bringing the centre of gravity of the body over the foot of this side. This "rocking" motion of the trunk and thigh is accompanied by a movement of the whole trunk and leg over the foot planted on the ground, and is accompanied by a compensating outward movement at the hip. The body rises and swings alternately from one side to the other as its centre of gravity comes alter nately over one or the other leg, and the curvature of the spinal bones is altered with the varying position of the weight.

Strongest of Living Creatures. What living creature is possessed of the greatest bodily strength in proportion to its size? was a question asked by a reader of Pearson's Weekly. The answer was as follows: This honor must be divided between the cockchafer, the hive bee and the flea. It is rather difficult to apply a test to prove which particular, insect among the borers, the jumpers and carriers is the strongest, but there is no question that in proportion to their size insects undoubtedly possess the greatest strength among living creatures. The flea can jump a foot high, more than 100 times its own length, it is as if a man jumped as high as the gallery of the monument. The spring of the tiger and the leap of the kangaroo are cockchafer is strong enough to lift 24.3 65 to 71 Front St. West, Toronto, Ont. times its own weight, a small hive bee 23.5 times the weight of itself. Judged by this standard, there is nothing comparable to it among other insects or among the larger animals, and it may be safely asserted that these three insects divide the honors be tween them, for though boring insects pierce the hardest wood, it is by the wonderful adaptation of their boring instrument rather than by abnormal strength.

of garments washed in a year. Then you'll see how many back-breaking rubs Pearline saves you. Don't do the washing yourself? You still need Pearline. Every one of these rubs is wearing the things washed. They suffer, if you don't. Millions now use Pearline. Think of the useless and harmful rubs that have been saved to the women of America. Beware of imitations. 364 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

The Black Plague.

Progress of the Dreadful Scourge Through the Chinese Empire.

Thousands Are Dying Daily in Towns and Cities and Being Buried in Trenches.

SHANGHAI, China, July 6 .- Your readers have probably been advised by telegraph ere this of the dreadful crisis through which the British colony of Hong Kong is now passing—the most severe she has experienced during the 50 years of her existence. A hideous form of plague has been ravaging her population for the last couple of months, and ruin, absolute ruin, stares her in the face. The fell disease, which, beyond a doubt, was imported from Canton, where its effects have been still appailing, is described by the medical faculty of the colony as being similar to that which, under the name of the Great Plague, proved so fatal to the people of London in 1665. Although it was only officially recognized as a dangerous epidemic in the beginning of May, there is no medieval times. One of the first things, doubt the affection was prevalent in Hong of course, the Chinese did when the epi-Kong much earlier, for as far back as March last several cases of death frem a peculiar form of bubonic fever were recorded, and later on the disease was noticed to be very similar to a malady which is only too well known in Yurnan, Kwangsi and Kwantung, and which almost from the beginning of the present year has been committing fearful ravages in Canton and the surrounding districts. AUTHORITIES TO BLAME. The spring of 1894 has been a disastrous one in many ways for Hong Kong. In the early months a long drought was experienced, which resulted in a water famine. Not only were the residents of the colony put to considerable discomfort left the colony. and inconvenience by the supply of fresh water running short in the reservoirs, but a source of great public danger was speedily constituted by the want of means of flushing out the drains. The authorities are held greatly to blame for their apathy | gency. at this particular period, for it was not until the number of deaths from what was called at the time "sewage poisoning" became alarmingly great that any official notice was taken of the terrible scourge that was menacing the place or any measure adopted to cope with it. The cry of those in office was that as soon as the drought was over and the drains were properly flushed out by a good downpour of rain the disease would vanish. However, when the rain did come-and it did come in a deluge toward the end of April-the disease did not vanish, but continued to gain headway until early last month, when it first began to assume really alarming proportions. Long before this, however, the authorities had been warned by medical missionaries and others who possessed a knowledge of the southwest of China that the disease, which was then beginning to claim public attention, was really the black plague, or the bubonic plague, for it is variously termed in different provinces, which, it is no exaggeration to say, annually carries off millions of people in those densely populated and little known regions of the empire which are adjacent to the Siamese and Thibetan frontiers. CONDITIONS FAVORABLE. The conditions in Hong Kong at the moment happened to be peculiarly favorable to the spread of this terrible malady, and the authorities were urged by those who knew what was threatening the colony to bestir themselves and do something toward alleviating those conditions, which are mainly three-overcrowding, filth and want of water. The two first named could certainly have been dealt with, whatever excuse there might be with regard to the

But, in spite of the innumerable warnings they received, and even with the ter-rible example of Canton before their eyes, the Hong Kong Government remained apathetic until it was no longer a question of prevention but of cure.

The little worked and overpaid Public Works Department did nothing to abate the horrible filth and the shocking herding together of the lower class Chinese in Taipnigshan and other native quarters until there could be no further doubt that been both revolting and dangerous. the disease was simply raging in those festering purlieue. Then, indeed, one morning, a little more than a month ago, when the daily number they did last week. The Chinese offered of deaths recorded had got well up into the the most determined resistance, threaten-direct that one of the periodical clear-outs of the refuse, etc., should be made at once," and later on a proclamation was issued by the governor and council declaring the existence of an epidemic and bringing into

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS. The neighboring ports in China, Japan and the Straits took alarm immediately on the issue of the Government's proclamation, and quarantine regulations were put in force at all those places which have dealings with Hong Kong, which measures, coupled with the appalling turn which events subsequently took there, have had the most disastrous effect upon the trade and prospects of the colony.

The death rate soon rose to 100 per diem, according to the official returns, which there is reason to believe were very much underestimated. According to the same source of information, from 200 to 300 fresh persons were attacked every day, so that the medical resources of the port speedily fell short of the demands made upon them, and Shanghai, Singapore and one or two other places were appealed to for assistance.

Made fully alive at last to the gravity of their situation, the Hong Kong Government rushed into the other extreme and set about enforcing their sanitary regulations with the most intense energy. A system of house-to-house visitation was inaugurated, in which the civil authorities were assisted by 300 soldiers of the garrison, who bravely volunteered their services for this repulsive work, and whose leader, Capt. Vesey, of the Shrepshire Light Infantry, was the first European victim of the plague.

The authorities admit that some half dozen of the soldiers engaged in this dangerous service have also died in the discharge of their self-imposed duty, but it is hinted in trustworthy though unofficial circles that the mortality among the troops has been far larger than reported to the public, and there have also been several deaths among the foreign residents from the same dread malady.

LULLED INTO FALSE SECURITY. This the authorities are trying to conceal or minimize, in the hope that foreigners in the treaty ports and in Japan may be lulled into a false security, and a consequent relaxation of the regulations by the belief that none but Chinese are liable to catch the plague. The very considerable mortality among the Portuguese section of the Hong Kong population is explained, says the Hong Kong Government, by the fact that the lower classes of the Portuguese live in Chinese style and subsist on Chinese food, but if this be the case it is strange that there has not been a single case of plague in the neighboring Portuguese colony of Macao, where the Lusitanians are, if anything more prone to Chinese modes of life than in Heng Kong. The truth is that the malady is peculiar to no one race or no one class, and that anyone, be he Caucasian, Mongolian or negro, is liable to it, if he lives in a place where it already exists, and where the conditions are favorable to its development. Up to the present the official returns estimate the mortality from plague in Hong Kong at 2,600, but there can be no doubt that at least three times that num-

CHINESE BECAME PANIC STRICKEN. The state of the once prosperous island is simply awful, and the appearence of the city reminds one of nothing more than the descriptions we read of those places in Europe visited by the black death in demic began to assume alarming proportions was to get panic-stricken. Those who had the means commenced to leave the colony in thousands, and those who were forced to remain, for want of the wherewithal to get away from the stricken port, resorted to native jugglery and "Joss pidgin" in order to check the spread of the malady, and in their stupid ignorance and obstinacy combined to resist the authorities and prevent them from carrying into effect the more rational and scientific methods of the European.

WORK SUSPENDED. The present state of affairs is that work s practically suspended in the colony; there is hardly any business going on, and the streets are almost completely deserted, for nearly two-thirds of the population have

As to the measures that have been adopted, the Government, when at length its eyes were open to the true state of affairs, must be credited with having done everything in its power to meet the emer-

The hospital hulk 'Hygeia,' lying in the middle of the harbor, was cleared out and made ready for the reception and isolation of plague patients; two other hulks were pressed into the service, and similarly prepared; hospitals were erected at Pokiulam, Kennedytown and other places; a rigorous system of inspection was instituted; Chinese interference rigorously shut down upon; all persons found suffering from plague symptoms were at once removed to the hospitals, in spite of the resistance of their relatives, and all the houses in which cases of plague had occurred were thoroughly disinfected, and clothing and bedding of the patients

Last of all the Government have resolved upon and carried out a measure which, if it was a little heroic, has been amply justified by the good results that have followed in the marked decrease of the plague since the course referred to has been carried out.

I aliude to the burning down of Taipnigshan, a district the filth of which could hardly be conceived by those who have never seen for themselves the unspeakable abominations of a slum in an eastern seaport. The denizens of Taipnigshan are all either poor, wretched coolies, pirates, thieves or gamblers. It is, or was, for happily the slum exists no longer, populated only by the desperately poor and desperately wicked classes. The land and buildings were owned largely by foreigners, but the houses were all sublet to Chinese, who used them as lodging houses, gambling dens, brothels, opium divans or low drinking houses. HERDED TOGETHER.

In all those filthy and criminal haunts human beings were herded together in the most shocking manner; the beds were arranged in tiers along the walls, like ships' bunks, one above the other, so that it was no unusual thing for as many as 200 or 300 persons to live and sleep and eat in the same little hovel. Not only this, but many of the gambling hells and thieves' resorts communicated with one another, so that, taking everything into consideration, the work of those engaged in house-tohouse inspection during the past couple of months in this fearful district must have

Finding it impossible to thoroughly disinfect the place, the Government determined to destroy the place by fire, and this fifties, the Government began to talk of ing to riot and all sorts of things, and sanitary reforms.

The celental surgeon feebly suggested: lives of foreign residents in Capton, and "It might be well for the sanitary board to the burning down of the Shameen in the direct that one of the periodical clear-outs same port if Taipnigshan were demolished. But the Gevernment persisted. Taipnigshan was cleared of its teeming population, a wall was built round the district to prevent the inhabitants returning force certain public nealth ordinances which to it, and the whole nest of would have been extremely useful if they had been a few weeks earlier, but which, as the event proved, were utterly ineffectual. locality returned surreptitiously and lay down to die amid the smouldering ruins of their ancient haunts. Since then the plague has markedly decreased, and there are grounds for hoping the epidemic is on the wane. But still 30 or 40 persons die every day, and the doctors and nurses have their hands full. At almost every corner bundles of burning clothes and bedding, the property of persons who have had the plague, may be met with, and the sight and smells that greet the wayfarer on all sides are appalling.

SEEN TO DROP DEAD IN THE STREET. When the epidemic was at its height, and even still, people may be seen to drop down dead in the streets. The foreign residents have faced the emergency like heroes Comparatively few of them have deserted the colony, and nearly every one of them has lent a hand in the noble work of trying to stamp out the disease. The ladies of the place have formed an ambulance corps and may be seen going about the streets wearing the red cross on their arms; they are in the thick of the fight, and when the history of Hong Kong comes to be written a proud place must be given to the ladies who so bravely came forward in the plague year-1894.

All the foreign firms in the colony have given liberal donations, chiefly in the shape of whisky and cigars, the preventives recommended by the sanitary board, to the men engaged in house to house visitation. The scenes in the hospitals, where the patients under treatment are necessarily very crowded, are too horrifying to dwell upon. BURIED IN TRENCHES. When a person dies he is set aside with the other corpses until the death cart comes round to fetch the heap away. The dead are buried in trenches filled with quicklime, and every grave is numbered so that the relatives of the victims may know where their friends are laid to rest and offer sacrifices to their names, if they wish to, when order is once more restored to the distracted colony. Every possible precaution is being taken at Shang and the other ports to prevent the malady spreading from Hong Kong, and so far it is satisfactory to note that Hong Kong, Canton and the surrounding districts where it has made its appearance. The disease begins by fevers and rigors, followed by swellings in the grions, armpits or neck; hence its name-bubonic plague.

Death generally occurs in a few hours, but if the patient survives for two or three days the probabilities are that he will recover. The affection certainly arises from filth, and it is a curious fact that rats and other animals, and even the fish in polluted waters, are attacked before the malady spreads to human beings.

In Canton between 70,000 and 80,000 persons have died of the plague since the beginning of March, and things are assuming a most alarming aspect, for the people are simply wild with fear, and threaten all sorts of persecutions to the foreigners, to ber of persons have died from the affection whom by some peculiar process of Chinese since it first made its appearance in the reasoning they attribute the presence of the WOMEN PHYSICIANS ATTACKED. Two American missionaries, women doctors belonging to an agency known as the Band of Brethren, were brutally attacked at Horan last week, and narrowly escaped with their lives. They are Miss Begler and Miss Halverstone, both qualified medical practitioners. They were walking along the street when they observed a Chinaman fall down in front of them. They immediately rushed to render him what assistance they could, but unfortunately for themselves the poor fellow died under their hands.

The crowd which had collected to watch the proceedings raised the cry that the foreign women had killed the man and attacked them in the most savage manner. Miss Begler was stabbed in the thigh, and both were hustled about, bruised and beaten and had their dresses torn. Fortunately they managed to escape into the shop of a friendly Chinaman, who protected them until some foreigners arrived to their rescue.

The mob then threatened to burn down the mission house, but after a few hours the trouble subsided without further damage being done.

THE HARRISON CASE.

More Serious Than Was at First Sus pected-At Times He Was Prostrated by His Sufferings_ Now He Is Cured.

PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 13.-The case of Richard Harrison, mentioned in these columns last week, was a more serious one than appeared at first sight. He was afflicted for some years with backache, the direct result of kidney disease. In damp weather especially his sufferings were intense, and frequently prevented his doing any work. To an active, energetic man, such an affi ction was most grievous, and he tried many alleged remedies without relief. J. D. Tully, the well-known druggist here, recommended Dodd's Kidney Pilis, which Mr. Harrison used and is now thoroughly eured. He only regrets that he did not use Dodd's Kidney Pills before, for he knows that if he had he would have been well long ago.

How a Football Team Wins Games, LA FAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 2, 1893 .- "As manager of the Purdue football team, I have used about $50 worth of Pond's Ex-TRACT, and find it very beneficial for rubbing purposes as well as for bruises, etc." in Western Ontario.

ZIM. S RECORD BEATEN. ASHBURY PARK, Aug. 11.—This was the biggest day in the history of Ashbury Park Athletic Association in the shape of bicycle races. Eight thousand people saw the races. Geo. C. Smith, of the New York Athletic Club, broke the world's track record of a half mile with a flying start. Champion Zimmerman held the race record, which was 1:07. Smith was paced by Harry B. TAPPING A THUNDER CLOUD. Lightning Defined as a Great Splach in the Ether Ocean.

The average thunder-head of cumulonim bus cloud, says Harper's Magazine, is not a mile high. From a small cloud, one a 100 yards square and distant only a quarter of a mile, we should get about 300 horse power. New a flash even a quarter of a mile long means a potential of many million volts. We cannot at present measure this directly, but we can determine the potential of the air within certain limits on any day, thunder storm or no thunder storm. In 1885, at the Blue Hill Observatory, and in subsequent years, we measured the potential of the air with insulated water-dropping collectors, after the methods of Thomson (now Kelvin) and Mascart. The top of the hill is 600 feet above the surrounding country; but with Frankland's idea of reaching out a little farther from the earth I ventured to use at times a large kite, tin-foiled, and for kite string some 500 feet of hemp fish twine, wrappe about with fine uncovered copper wire. During thunder storms the sparkling and sizzling at the electrometer end of the kite string were incessant and startling. And even on cloudless days I found it possible to draw sparks, reading at the same time on the electrometer from minute to minute the electrification of the air in volts. It being beyond dispute that high potentials can be obtained from the air, the questian naturally ensuing is, can we not use them? All who saw the Thomson and Tesla exhibits at the Electrical Building, Chicago, will easily believe that it is within our power to turn the fleeting, high potential lightning into a current of lower potential and use it. Professor Trowbridge, of Harvard University, in a discussion of some photographic negatives, shows that "the discharge follows exactly the same path in air for three hundred thousandths of a second," and adds that "it is probable that an ordinary discharge of lightning of a few hundred feet in length could light for an instant many thousand incandescent lamps if it were properly transformed by means of a step-down transformer." The charred, though to us intensely brilliant crack in the air which we call lightning is but a great splash in the ether ocean. The waves and ripples come tumbling along in all directions, spreading rapidly, aye, very rapidly, nearly 200,000 miles per second. Given a proper resonator and the waves

GEN. CACERES IN THE SADDLE. Becomes President of Peru in Time

Lead the Army Against Rebels. Gen. Caceres, elected President of Peru in May, has assumed the duties of the office. Gen. Caceres has been President of Peru before (1886-'90), and filled the position with honor to himself and advantage to his country at a critical period after humiliation by Chili.

But he has won most reputation as a soldier. Entering the service at the age of

His abilities as a warrior will stand him in hand new, for Gen. Pierola, who is a renowned fighter, too, and has likewise been President, is leading a revolt already formidable. Pierola had been an exile, and his return a year ago was understood to mean another revolution. He wanted to be elected President, but complained that Caceres controlled the army and manipulated the Government so that he would have small chance at the polls.

President Bermudes died last March. First Vice-President Del Solar was afraid to assume the office, to which he naturally would have succeeded. He fled, and Second Vice-President Borgono took the Chief Magistrate's position. It is said he was merely a marionette, and that Gen. Caceres pulled the strings. Senor Del Solar subsequently turned up in the south of Peru, Gen, Pierola's bailiwick, and a duplicate Government was set up there with Del Solar as the figurehead and Pierola as

The election resulted in a proclamation that Caceres was elected President. Cesar Canevaro, First Vice-President, and Cesareo Chacaltana, Second Vice-President. Pierola says the electors were bulldozed, and he does not propose to submit to the announced result. Caceres now takes his seat, and the merry war will go on between the ins and outs.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all drug-gists in 75c. bottles, but it is manu-factured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

-Mrs. Spicer and her daughter Fannie, 932 Waterloo street, city, are visiting friends in Melbourne.

It is announced that tickets for the trainmen's excursion to Goderich on Aug. 17 will be good on the p. m. trains of the day before.

-Westminster township farmers are experiencing considerable difficulty in getting water for their cattle. The long drought has dried up many of the wells. -Roy, the little son of Mr. William port she visited Genoa and Odessa.-[Balti-Hambly, of Queen's avenue, met with a serious accident on Friday afternoon, whereby he lost the top of the thumb of the left hand. -Captain John Clarke, of H. M. S. 'Clarke," wants every drummer in the Young Liberal Fleet at the Simcoe street rink to-night to rehearse for the "Day

With the Circus," Wednesday. -The Delaware Agricultural Fall Show will be held on Friday, Oct. 12. A meeting of the directors will be held at Delaware on Friday afternoon, Aug. 31, to revise the prize list. Mr. Chas. Fox is the secretarytreasurer.

-The London Machine Tool Company successfully made a big ten-ton casting at their works on Friday. It was the ponderous flywheel for the new waterworks pumps at Springbank, and will be placed in position at once. -A wiper on the C. P. R. was cleaning out an engine in the roundhouse. He wanted to back it up, but pulled the throttle too far. Result: The tender of the engine struck the brick wall and knocked a big hole in it. -Mrs. George A. Watts, East London, has had a very delicate operation performed on her by Drs. Wishart, Macarthur and Waugh at St. Joseph's Hospital. It consisted in the removal of a bone tumor from the jaw. Mrs. Watts' many friends will be pleased to hear that she is progressing favorably. -Mr. John Munroe, lot 14, con 5, Westminster, through whose farm the L. and P. S. R. runs, nearly lost his barns and their contents the other day. A spark from a passing engine ignited some dry grass in one of the fields. The flames made pretty quick headway in the direction of the buildings, and it was only by hard work that they were subdued. Mr. Chas. Kerr, a neighbor, had a similar experience.

-Two young men named Taylor and the corner of Maitland and Gray streets; W. Cummings, 470 Horton street, and Chris Stone, 509 Gray street, are fond of fruit. Detective Graham says he caught them in Milkman Yee's orchard near the Vauxhali bridge on Sunday afternoon with their pockets full of nice harvest apples. Mr. Yeo has a fine orchard on his farm, but has been a heavy loser this year through the continued depredations of city youths.

The quartet will be summoned.

-The case of Wm. Arnold, of Mount Brydges, vs. Henry Lockwood, of Delaware, which came up at the last county court, but was not disposed of, has been settled. Lockwood is a division court bailiff, and made a seizure on the property of a man named Root.

A horse and set of harness, which were supposed to belong to Root, were found at Arnold's and sold. Arnold claimed ownership of the animal, and brought action for alleged illegal seizure. The settlement was made by Arnold paying $100, which includes all costs.

Who Is She? An El Paso (Tex.) dispatch today says: "Annie Lapelle, aged 22, of Hamilton or London, Canada, a domestic, committed suicide with morphine yesterday. She was dressed in her grave clothes and ready for burial. No cause known." There is no such name in the city directory as Lapelle. An Excellent Local Company.

In order to correct a misapprehension which appears to exist in the minds of some, it is as well to state that the Birkbeck Loan Company of this city has no connection whatever with a company of similar name in Toronto, or with the Birkbeck Building Society of London, England. Our local company, which is in excellent hands, was the first to obtain their charter in Ontario, and the Toronto company followed, using the name "Birkbeck" also.

Everybody Is Going. The Young Liberals are hustlers. That is admitted by everybody. They intend to show a pretty good evidence of their husting on Wednesday next. The street parade at 1:30 will be the finest spectacle seen in London since the old military days. Then the sports at the ground will be of a novel character, and will be run off with a vim and vigor strictly Young Liberal. The programme will be continuous and more fun will be sandwiched into one afternoon than there can be at several circuses. Mothers will do well to bring their children, as no more pleasant time can be spent. An addition has been made to the original programme. It is a trotting race, the horses to be driven by members of the Fleet. The Marine Band will play at intervals during the afternoon and the jesters and clowns will supply mirth. There is no charge to the grounds and seats may be had for 10 cents. The roasting of the ox by expert roasters will be a great sight at night.

A CHURCH OF ICE.

Sailors Saw a Sight of Entrancing Beauty in Mid-Ocean.

The officers of the Neptune Line steamship Patapsco, which arrived in port yesterday from Rotterdam via Sunderland, witnessed an early morning scene in mid-Atlantic, which First Officer Popham says was beyond description and any human power of reproduction. The beautiful sight was caused by the sun shining upon a huge iceberg about 7 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 2, and continued for fully fifteen minutes. The iceberg was 270 feet high and 550 feet long, and was on the edge of a dense fog. It was shaped exactly like a church, having at one end a towering spire that was pierced near the top by small holes, making a natural belfry. The sun was shining at the top of the spire in immaculate white.

About 50 feet from the top the sun's rays blended into a soft pink that was most beautiful to behold. Back of the spire was a slanting roof that the action of the fog and sun caused to appear in a deep blue. Near the spire was a perfectly shaped Gothic arch, in which had been melted a fissure so like a window as to make one believe it was built there by a mechanic. The sun shone through this in all his brilliancy and dazzled the eyes of those aboard ship. The fog formed a background near the water and made a marine picture that could never be painted. Besides all this the sun shining on the many small projections of the berg, made the whole look as though millions of sparkling diamonds had been piled together. The officers say that many statues and fantastic figures were discernible about the mountains of ice. The seamen and officers were awed by the beauty and grandeur of the scene. The Patapaco passed a dozen other icebergs between latitude 45 degrees and 47 degrees north, and longitude 49 degrees and 54 degrees west, from Aug. 1 to 3. The vessel brought 700 tons of general cargo and made the run in thirteen days to the capes. On her last voyage out of this more-American.

"That is just like you isn't it?" he commented. "You would be like that. You would never have a regret for what you had left behind you. You would be saying your prayers in the little gray church-on a 'windy hill,' wasn't it ?-no matter who was calling for you outside."

He spoke with a bitterness that seemed involuntary. She laughed a little. The small hands that were in sight of the silent watcher were playing lazily with the sand, through which the diamonds gleamed with sudden brightness as she half buried her fincers in its coolness.

"Would you have me always regret the the bottom of the sea?" she asked.

"I would have you regret nothing. I am too much of a philosopher," he answered, with a smile at his own presumption, "but I wish-" he caught one of her hands from the yielding sand and kissed it twice. The figure behind the wreck clasped her hands with a sudden movement; a rush of noisy waves-one, two, three-each close behind the other-would have drowned a more emphatic sound. The sparkling hand was withdrawn, and the quiet voice was heard. "For a philosopher-" she paused, and then went on-"aren't you a little-tempestuous?"

"Toujours philosophe—is a fool," he answered, quick'y, "I've forgotten who said that, but it was somebody a great deal cleverer than I-and it's true. "I den't think you are in any immediate danger of-that sort of foolishness.' He laughed. "Think what you've saved me from."

"Oh, saved you!" she sighed, with slight apatience, "Why can't you let well impationce. enough alone?" 'I do, a great deal of the time-only you call it well enough-I don't." She tossed a handful of sand into space, and it was immediately blown hither and yon, into strange places, as are most things that we toss carelessly into space. Some of A went into the eyes of which she was so unconscious, and made them quite un-comfortable for a moment. Apparently with the gesture she dismissed the subject. The afternoon waned, the hours passing as swiftly as do all unhurried hours.

"I'd like to walk up the hill," she suggested, "before sunset. "Will you go?"

'If you go with me," he assented. He offered her his hand to help her to rise. She hesitated a little, laughing still, before she gave him hers—the one he had kissed. He grasped it quickly, laughing a ittle too, and drew her lightly to her feet. She moved a few steps on while he stopped to pick up the shawi and parasol. So standing, she was in full sight from the creviced timber; it seemed as if she must feel the magnetism of those eager eyes; but she did not; she turned and went on toward the hill, the same idle smile on her lips as she looked up at the man who walked with her. Without turning for a last glance at the lovely grandeur of the surf which still rose and broke and thundered with no diminution of the majesty that had ceased to be a spectacle to their human eyes. They reached the foot of the hill and began to climb it. The other girl rose from her somewhat cramped position, and slowly shaking the sand from her dress gazed after them. She was perhaps nineteen years old, and too nearly beautiful to escape comwherever might be observers. She stretched her arms lazily, relieved from the narrow limitations of her hiding-place. Her lips were smiling and her cheeks were dushed with excitement. She climbed over the fallen timbers which surrounded her on al sides save that away from the ocean, where the land rose into a little hillock, itself a shield in that direction. Still smiling, she strolled along the sand, and at las threw herself down again upon it, her half-bare arms burying themselves in its warmth, her chin resting in her hands, and her eyes, like the Ancient Mariner's "following the sea. The sun fell on the reddish masses of her hair, and touched the color on her brown cheeks into deeper warmth, and then slipped away almost imperceptibly behind the hill; but she did not go away, though she shifted her position now and then. She was gifted with an extraordinary faculty of repose. But she was mentally active, reviewing every sentence of the conversation she had just heard. Many of its allusions, much of its significance had escaped her. In its lightest triviality there was something that she did not lay hold of; but the tone, the inflection of it-this she grasped notwithstanding. The intensity that deep-ened it, the passion that now and then glanced through it, she caught and responded to with a quickness and a certainty that were remarkable. Moreover, her ears were becoming accustomed to the language that had been strange at first; it was no longer the hopeless confusion of tongues that it had been, when it had seemed but a saying of things that had no meaning, a slipping away from a meaning before it was half said, combined with a deafness that came upon them when most tremendous meanings challenged their attention. That first time had been when she wakened from a long nap in her favorite corner of the old ship, to hear just outside the voice that she recognized as that of the young lady watched and idolized for three whole weeks. Since then Judith had come with the same companion three or four times, and she had awaited them, eagerly, silently. At last she fancied she saw realized the vision of years, at last the reserve of strength and the sweet coldness of the princess who perceives the prince had some into her life. Trens Poiton had imagination and keen perceptions. To-day, with the sun caressing her cheeks and throat, with the breeze roughening still further her carelessly knotted hair, with the freedom of the sea before her and its voice in her ears, the warm sand under her, and the blue sky bending dewn about her, shefelt the subtleties and the possibilities of love.

At last, as the breeze struck more coldly and the warmth departed, she picked her-self up, glanced over her shoulder to the glorified west, and went on up the beach to a path more distant than that down which the others had come.

Meanwhile, at the top of the hill, watching the sunset, sat Judith Van Wert and Randal Kane. In the west, over the bay. the sky was changing from gold to rose, and melting here and there into green, and deepening into faint warm tints of purple and curious, dull, breathing reds; the canoes and row-boats floated softly in a throbbing, molten medium that was not sky and must be water, and a sail-boat drifted silently across the brightness and lost itself in the shadows already beginning to lurk in the near distance. There is no use," sighed Judith, "we can't live up to our sunsets here. What Yes; she has declared that she hates ice possibility has life to offer us of which that | cream.

magnificence can be a symbol?" She paused to gaze silently a moment. "What deed can be done which should not be unworthy such a background!" she went on, dreamily. "What emotion that could burn itself into such a flame of glory?

"After all, there are certain things on earth that are too great for other expression," he said. As for love—"

"Don't," she said, quickly: "you will introduce that horrible sense of the deja connu !

CHAPTER II.

The door of the fisherman's small house was open. Within was the sound of dishes and a slight hissing, suggestive of the withdrawal of fish from their native element, and a not far-distant frying-pan. As the girl's shadow deepened the growing twilight of the doorway, her mother looked up. "There you are, Trena," she said; "Ben's been looking for you.'

The somewhat statuesque importance of "Tryphena" had been shortened for daily use into "Trena. "He says he'll meet you after supper in

The girl tossed her head a little. The interior of the small kitchen looked almost dark after the soft brilllance of the outer world. The bright sparkle of fire from the sputtering stove was dim beside the flame that had devoured the heavens.

"He did, did he ?" she responded. Her mother stood with her elbows on her hips, in one hand a steel knife, in the other, an iron fork, asserting themselves at right angles to her body, with which implements, at discreet intervals, she investigated the fish. She faced her daughter with a sharpness that was not condemnatory. "Yes, he did, and I guess you're goin' to there too, ain't you?'

"Remarkable Cure of Dropsy and Dyspepsia."-Mr. Samuel T. Casey, Belleville, writes: "In the spring of 1884 I began to be troubled with dyspepsia, which gradually became more and more distressing. I used various domestic remedies and applied to my family physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with but little hope of relief; and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. Although now 79 years of age I can enjoy my meals as well as ever, and my general health is good. I am wellknown in this section of Canada, having lived here 57 years; and you have liberty to use my name in recommendation of your VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which has done such wonders in my case."

THE HUMAN EYE.

IT POSSESSES ALL THE QUALITIES OF A PERFECT INSTRUMENT.

A Single Impression Although There Are Two Images-Seeing Without Perceiving-An Odd Experience-The Extreme Quickness of Sight.

I have often wondered whether the statement, occasionally made by physicists, that the human eye is not a perfect optitical instrument, is an expression of human vanity or of an expert knowledge of the anatomy of the eye and the physiology of vision; and I have come to the conclusion that the latter is the more reasonable theory.

The approach to perfection in modern telescopes and microscopes is wonderful indeed; but as physiologists have advanced the knowledge of vision, the so-called imperfections of the eye have been steadily disappearing, and even now there is not much to learn. Viewed merely as an optical instrument, an apparatus contained in a globe less than an inch in diameter, in which is produced an image practically perfect in form and color, which can be accurately adjusted almost instantly for every distance from five inches to infinity, is movable in every direction, has an area for the detection of the most minute details and at the same time a sufficient appreciation of large objects, is double, but the images in either eye exactly coinciding, enables us to see all shades of color, estimate distance, solidity, and to some extent the consistence of objects, the normal human eye may well be called perfect. The more, indeed, the eye is studied in detail the more thoroughly does one appreciate its perfection as an optical apparatus.

We receive the impression of a single object, although there are two images-one in either eye; but it is necessary that the images be made upon corresponding points in the two retina. If the angle of vision in one eye be deviated even to a slight dedree by pressing on one globe with the finger, we see two images. One can appreciate how exactly these points must correspond when it is remembered that two rays of light appear as one only when the distance between them is one thirty-five hundredth of an inch. Not the least of the wonders of the eye are connected with the appreciation of images made upon the retina by certain parts of the brain.

It is literally true that a person may see and yet not perceive. It has happened, in certain injuries of the brain, that a person sees and reads the words in a book and yet does not perceive their significance. This is called word-blindness. In a certain portion of the brain is a part which enables us to recognize the fact that we see an object; yet this object conveys no idea. There are two of these so-called centres of vision, one on either side, and their action is partly crossed. When the centre is destroyed on one side, the inner half of one eye and the outer half of the other eye are blinded. Further back in the brain, however, is a centre which enables us to perceive or understand what is seen.

When this centre is destroyed we see objects and may avoid obstacles in walking, but persons, words, etc., are not recognized. This centre exists only on the left side of the brain.

An impression, however short, made upon the retina is perceived. The letters on a printed page are distinctly seer when illumined by an electric spark, the duration of which is only forty billionth of a second; but the impression remains much longer. Anything in motion appears to us in a way quite different from the single impression that we should have from an electric spark. In a picture representing an animal in motion, as it appears in an instantaneous photograph, the positions seem absurd and like nothing we have ever

In looking at a horse in action, the impressions made by the different positions of the animal run into each other, and art should represent as nearly as possible the sum, or average, of these impressions. It is also true that impressions are diffused in the retina beyond the points upon which they are directly received. This is called irradiation; and the impression is diffused farther for white or light-colored than for black or dark objects. It is well known that a white square looks considerably larger than a dark square of exactly the same size; or the hands in white gloves look larger than in black gloves.

The whole question of the appreciation of colors and of color-blindness is still wrapped in mystery. We know that some persons cannot distinguish between certain colors, but the reason of this is obscure. Perfect sight can exist only when the eye is perfect. The form and color of objects may be distorted so that an inaccurate image is tormed upon the retina, and this image, however imperfect it may be, is what is perceived by the brain. In hearing the case is different.

The waves of sound, if they be conducted to the internal ear, and if the nerve of hearing, with its terminations, be normal, cannot be modified in the course of transmission. Sounds are always appreciated at their exact value, except as regards intensity. Enough has been said about the eye, I think, to show that it is perfectly adapted to all requirements, and whatever defects it may seem to have, viewed as an optical instrument, render it more useful to us than if these apparent defects did not exist. - Popular Science Monthly.

Accuracy and Measuring.

Many farmers work too much by guessing. They do not know the number of acres in each field, or how large a piece of land has been plowed in a day. By knowing the breadth of a lot, one may know the width of each acre, the quantity of seed required, and the product per acre of each crop. The implements to be used, may be a two-rod surveyor's chain or a pocket tape line, a pole eleven feet long, three lengths of which make two rods, yard-sticks graduated, and a small pocket rule for measuring the size of fruit and roots and for other purposes. A frequent use of these measures enables the owner to judge with much accuracy of the distance measured by pacing or hand measuring .-Country Gentleman.

Brebner, tenor, a valuable member of the choir, also leaves to take a medical course of three years in Edinburgh University. At the close of the evening service the large congregation was deeply moved when the choir sang "God be with you till we meet again." Mr. W. Patterson, M.A., of Knox College, who is ably assisting the pastor, Rev. J. A. Murray, preached effective sermons at both services. -The willful or natural stupidity of the man who dumped the load of tin chips in the center of the roadway leading over the Cove on Saturday afternoon last renders him fit either for the large institution to the east of the city or of the castle at foot of Dundas street. A party of ladies driving out to Woodland Cemetery had a narrow escape from a serious accident through the act of this man. Had they persisted in the attempt to pass the obstruction the whole party would have been hrown over the embankment into the Cove. As it was, they were forced to return to the city. A load of bright tin chips in the middle of a road is sufficient to frighten any horse, and it makes the act worse when it is considered the dangerous spot at which they were placed.

the age of 9 years. Johnnie W. Carfrae was the victim, and with three or four companions was playing in a large field opposite his father's residence on Tecumseh avenue. The children had been romping around for some time, when young Carfrae started to climb a tree. He got pretty near the top, and was sitting on a limb, when it snapped and broke. In his endeavor to save himself the lad caught hold of another branch.

It, too, broke, and the little fellow fell to the ground, a distance of about eighteen feet. He alighted on his head, breaking his neck, and died instantly. Dr. Piper was passing at the time, but before he reached the scene of the accident the boy was dead. Dr. Ferguson was also on hand very quickly. Both physicians were of the opinion that death was instantaneous. Young Carfrae was the eldest of five children, and was an intelligent, bright little chap. He was the son of Mr. Edward Carfrae, a laborer, who came from Sussex, England, about three years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Carfrae, who are hard-working, industrious people, have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood in their sad and sudden affliction. Tramps on the C. P. R.

For some time past the C. P. R. authorities have been incessantly bothered with tramps. The Coxey brethren got so bold in the East End that they would tear down the company's fences and start bonfires in empty freight cars. Thefts were frequently reported, and the company finally decided to take stringent methods to abate the nuisance. Detective Thomas Ross, of Toronto, came down and on Saturday night with Detective J. A. Graham, of this city, went to the siding near the asylum and watched for chances. They soon came. A big burly fellow was seen boarding an east bound train, and he was nipped. Two youths were caught in another car, and the trio was brought before Squire J. B. Smyth. They gave their names as Anton Dove, Bohemian; Daniel Martin and George Millar, Americans. Dove and Martin said that they belonged to Chicago, but were on a bumper tour to Toronto and return. Millar claimed to be from Kansas, and bound for Eldorado, Ont., where he says his parents live. PROHIBITION CANDIDATES

To be Nominated in East and West Elgin for the Commons.

The semi-annual session of Elgin district council, Royal Templars of Temperance, was held at Aylmer on Friday afternoon, district councilor, A. Carmichael, of West Lorne, in the chair. St. Thomas, Union, Aylmer, West Lorne, Sparta, and Mount Salem councils were represented, the total number of delegates present being 40. The district councilor reported that be instituted a new council at Iona Station. District Deputy Rev. T. R. McNair reported that an effort was being made to establish a new council at New Sarum. The secretary's report showed an increase of 11 members in the half-year ending June 30, the total membership in the county at that date being 540. The proposal to picnic at Port Stanley with the I. O. G. T. was opposed. Various committees reported, the following being among the recommendations adopted: More education of members to place prohibition before party; greater attention to reclamation of drunkards; more public meetings; organization of council choirs; live programmes in councils under the head of "good of the order," with special attention to temperance; greater efforts to substitute the weekly for the monthly Templar among members, and to distribute it among non-members; councils to endeavor to establish new ones and to rescuscitate dormant councils adjacent to

The calling by the plebiscite committee of conventions for East and West Elgin in September to consider the advisability of nominating independent prohibition candidates for the Commons was indorsed. It was decided to memorialize the Grand attend. The following London brethren Council to request the Dominion council either to abolish the select degree qualifiurer; Rev.
