THE FORESTERS' TEMPLE

LORD ABERDEEN LAYS THE CORNER STONE.

Any Fraternal and Benefit Society in the World - Will be Fireproof Through out-A Credit to the Order.

The Independent Order of Foresters will have a magnificent monument representing in steel, stone and other enduring materials the strong and stable structure of the organization when the great ten-storey temple, the corner-stone of which was well and truly laid by Lord Aberdeen on Thursday afternoon last at the coeth west corner of Hav and Richesters. His Excellency the Governor-General, himself a Forester, and a member of Court Lord Aberdeen, Toronto, which instituted two months ago, already his over fifty members, the foremost man in the country, performed his duties in a most workmanlike fashion, and the more heartily perhaps because the corner-stone was a piece of Aberdeen granite from Peterhead, in the country of the Gordons, Sectland and remained there and at Kauai, with a year meanwhile spent at Punanou, until he had more than attained his majority. His father was in moderate financial circumstances, and young Dola having THE FORESTERS' TEMPLE. chosen the law as his procession, may employed himself in various capacities in order to acquire the necessary means to prosecute his studies. By industry and economy he succeeded in doing so, and at the age of twenty-two went to Williams college, in Massachusetts and took the THE FURESTERS TEMPLE.

the age of twenty-two went to Williams college in Massachusetts and took the general course for a year, after which he entered the law office of William Brigham, of Boston. There he applied himself closely, and after a twelve-month was admitted to practice in the courts of Suffolk county, Mass. Soon after this he returned to his mative islands, and was admitted to the bar of the Hawaian islands. He began a general practice, and followed his profession until 1887, when he was appointed to the supreme bench. During all this time Mr. Dole had been an interested observer of political events, and had endeavored to hring about a constitution. to St. George's Hall to muster for the procession down Yongo street, which consisted of over fifty vehicle loads of Foresters, his Excellency pald a brief visit to the present headquarters of the order at the corner of King and Yonge streets. Here he was joined by the main body of the Newsters and it was a most imposing the Foresters, and it was a most imposing procession that swept slowly up Bay street to the site of the celebration. First street to the site of the celebration. First came two four-in-hand coaches containing the members of Court Lord Aberdeen, under whose auspices the day's proceedings were held, the officers of which are F. Featherstonhaugh, C. R.; J. Castell Hopkins, P. C. R.; F. Howard Annes, A. H. O'Brien, Dr. Elliott, T. Hoskin, and J. Wilson. The members of Court Lord Aberdeen all wore silk hats, black coats, white four-in-hand ties and roses in their buttonholes. Then came marching Foresters, followed by carriages. With his Excellency rode Dr. Oronhyatekha, Hon. D. D. Attken and Mr. Ferguson, A. D. C., which call minated in the revolution of Excellency rode Dr. Oronhyatekha, Hon. D. D. It was with the utmost difficulty that a way was secured through the denselypacked streets. The site of the building was easily distinguishable. Huge platforms, on which were hundreds of seats, had been erected, and from every point of vantage red, white and blue bunting was displayed in the utmost profusion. Arches had been erected for entrance day, and these were flanked on either side with huge Union Jacks and Stars and Stripes. Even the topmost peak of the derrick that upheld the cornerstone was crowned with a Canadian flag. A guard of honor, composed of a company On Emma Street.

Quick Bridge Building.

A remarkable instance of the speed with which the American bridge can be erected occurred in the case of the Cairo bridge of the Illinois Contral Railroad over the Ohio River. The two channel spans of that bridge are each more than 500 feet long. The trusses are fifty-one feet deep and stand twenty-five feet apart. The total weight of each span is a little more than two million pounds. One of these spans was erected in six days. The false work on which the span was built was then taken down; the piles were drawn and redriven for the second span; the false work again erected on the piles, and the second span built. The whole time used in erecting the two great spans and moving the false works was one month and three days, and this time included five days lost in waiting for the completion of certain masonry. This is the quickest time in bridge-building of which there is any record.—Youth's Companion. guard of honor, composed of a company of the 48th Highlanders, under Capt Currie, First Lieut. Mitchell and Second Currie, First Lieut Mitchell and Second Lleut. Campbell, who bore the regimentall colors, saluted his Excellency as he passed through the ranks, while the passed through the ranks, while the pipers played "The Campbells Arc Coming," and the band of the regiment, as soon as the skirl of the pipes ceased played the National An hem. Amid the cheers of the people Lord Aberdeen stepped upon the platform and looked round upon the huge crowd that filled the streets for a considerable distance. The places on the platform nearest his Excellency were taken by the Supreme officers, the members of Court Lord Aberdeen and the young ladies of the headquarters staff. The stone itself was covered with flowers and fellage including floral letters "LO, F," which at the close of the ceremony were sont as a gift to Lady Thomp-There are 1,223 penitentiary prisoners in Canada, according to the annual re-port of the Minister of Justice. mony were sent as a gift to Lady Thompson, at whose house his Excellency is a guest, by the order. Upon this being removed the work of laying the stone was The Theory of a Broken Devil.

The story goes that when the devil was cast out of Heaven he fell to the earth and broke into several pieces. His head rolled into Spain, his heart into Italy, his stomach into Germany and his feet into France. This is why, says the legend, the Spaniards are so haughty, the Italians so amorous, the Germans so gluttonous and the French so fond of running after the women. at once begun and owing to the terrible moved the work of laying the stone was at once begun and owing to the terrible heat the ceremony was not unduly prolonged. Archdeacon Lewis led in prayer, and then the Supreme Secretary read a statement which had been prepared for the tablet giving the history of the order since its foundation in 1874.

The documents and articles were carefully checked over by the Supreme Chief Ranger as each was placed in the box, and when all had been deposited the box containing them was quickly placed in the cavity and the lunge block above lowered upon it. Lord Aberdeen then stepped forward, and with trowel and mallet tapped the stone and said, "In the name of the I. O. F., I hereby lay the corner-stone of the Foresters' Temple. Congressman Aitken then applied the plummet and square, and added his testimony in the words, "I decare the corner-stone of the Foresters' building well and truly laid." His Excellency looked pleased at this endorsation of the work, and the smile broadened when Mr. H. A. Collins, Chief Ranger of Ontarlo, said officially that it was well and truly laid. Then there were cheers for the Queen, the Governor-General and the Supreme Ranger.

The building will be known as the An authority on silk is quoted as expressing the belief that if it could be obtained in quantity, silk from spiders might be packed in bales and sent to Europe, where it would readily find a market for being carded and spun into silk threads for sewing or weaving purposes. The fact that it would be difficult to procure the web free from dirt would detract from its value as compared with 'genuine silk waste, but still a price could be obtained that would pay for the trouble of collection. The spider from which it is proposed to obtain the silken mass is a tropical variety, which distributes its silk in great abundance on low plants and scrubs. It is suggested that it would be possible, with a little trouble to form a spider farm for the purpose of producing this silk in the greatest possible perfection and abundance.

Ranger.

The building will be known as the foresters' Temple. It will be perhaps the finest headquarters owned by any raternal and beneficiary society in the world. In design it will be an ornament to the city and a credit as well as a striking advertisement to the great order whose property and home it will be. The building will be L-shaped, with a front-ment, which will make it practically ten storey of the imposing tower.

The basement will be lighted and finished, and will contain brokenage and commission offices. The first flat will be suitable for a banking and loan society business, the second, third and fourth flats will be arranged for suites of professional offices. The fifth and sixth flats will be completed throughout by the staff of the I.O.F., and at the present rate of increase in the order probably before the building is finished a considerable portion of the fourth flat will have to be reserved. The seventh and eighth flats will be fitted up as assembly rooms, with all the necessary adjuncts, and a suit of court and lodge rooms. All the offices will have vault accommodations. The building will be of Credit Valley brown stone and brick, with stone trimmings throughout. It will be absolutely fire-proof-stairways, roof and every part of the immense structure will be constructed with a view to perfect immunity from fire. The interior will be finished in Canadian hard woods.

The intention of Dr. Oronpyatekha is to have a massive and graceful-looking building, combining in its finish and arrangement light, convenience and absolute safety from fire, and all at a reasonable-foot. The architect, Mr. Geo. W. Gouldlock, whose skytch was chosen out of den coupristive plans, is a zealous Forester and an entiusiast in his profession. and fabled fortunes of the world pale line insignificance.

It is an interesting process to watch the construction of one of these buge money boxes. They are set up with infinite pains; built place by piece until they arrive at their finished state. They are fitted, tested and experimented with until found perfect. Then, with as great pains, they are dismembered and carried in sections to the point of destination, where they are again set up for final use.

Of course it would be more economical for the safe makers to transport the varults entire—if they could—after they are first set up. The difficulty naturally rests in the great weight of the structures. There are six doors, for instance. Three of them are estimated to weigh 16,800 pounds apiece. The other three are trifles, and weigh scarcely more than 7,500 pounds each. There are other portions proportionately heavy, as may be inferred from the fact that the total weight of the vault is about 571,400 pounds. Its total dimensions are twenty-four feet four inches wide, sixteen feet ten and a half inches deep and eleven feet six and a half inches in height. It is divided into three equal compartments. Under the old methods of construction, a bank vault rested upon a foundation of stone and concrete, six or eight feet in Sanford Ballard Dole, says the Honolulu Paradise of the Pacific, was born in Honolulu of American parents in 1844. His father and mother were of the noble band of missionaries, and landed in Honoband of missionaries, and landed in Hollulu in 1840 from their home in Maine.
Upon his arrival in Honolulu Mr. Dole the elder took charge of the Punahou college, which was then about to be started and which is to-day an enduring monument to his intelligence and care, for it ment to his intelligence and care, for it is the Alma Mater of many of the fore-most men of Hawaii. Mr. Dole lived to see the good resuits of his early labor, passing away in 1878.

a bank vault rested upon a foundation of stone and concrete, six or eight feet in thickness, to guard against tunnelling. Not so with the vaults of to-day. The immense structure for the Clearing House will rest on piers and arches of masonry. This will afford free access for the watchmen to pass beneath the vault and inspect it from below as well as on either side. This method, it is, believed, will afford greater protection than if the steel room rested upon solid earth or masonry.

The bottom of the vault is composed of steel rails and Bessemer plates five and a steel rails and Bessemer plates five and a half inches thick. Its walls are six and a half inches thick. A novel feature of the huge doors is the crane h n gs, invented by Jacob Weimar, foreman of the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Company. By an arrangement of eccentrics the huge doors swing easily upon two pivotal points and are jammed tightly by the use of a ratchet exerting tremendous pressure. When the ratchet is forced home twenty huge, round bolts made of cold rolled steel, 2 1-4 inches in diameter, slip into place. These are arranged eight in front and eight in the back of the doors, two at the bottom and two at the top. may be necessary to deposit. Heretofore the Clearing House has had no vault facilities, using when occasion required the vaults of various banks and the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company. In the latter the banks have deposited some $90,000,000 in gold, against which gold certificates of deposit are used, for safety and convenience of settling balances.

The new vault will be used for the purpose of storing this metal, and it is expected that arrangements will also be made when currency is abundant to store legal tender notes, against which certificates will be issued. Such a plan will go fur toward curtailing the use of the large legal tender certificates of deposit issued by the Assistant United States Treasurers and used in the Clearing House in adjusting balances. Another use of the vault, which is hoped may long be deferred, will be the depositing in it in times of financial uncertainty of the collateral securing Clearing House loan certificates.

The Moore Bellowed and Fled.

A lumberman attached to John Crane's camp, up beyond the Katahdin Iron Works in Maine, was tramping across to a pond late one November evening when he ran upon a bull moose.

The lumberman had no rifle, so be yelled and waved his arms, expecting that the broad-antlered bull would dash fear-stricken down the mountain. But it didn't. It rushed for the lumberman. He dodged about a tree and dropped his axe. For ten minutes he dodged, half scared to death. Then he climbed the tree.

The bull butted the tree with its antlers until it swayed to and fro, and then walked away a few yards and rested. The lumberman yelled some more. When he could yell no longer he set his wits to work. Just above him was a dead limb. He broke it off, and as the bull advanced again he set the wood aftre and dropped it on the bull's back. With a bellow it randown the mountain. The half-frozen lumberman made a bee-line for camp.

There has just been opened in Haworth, Yorkshire, a museum of curiosities in connection with the Bronte family. The exhibition will, no doubt, lend an additional attraction to the famous village, which contains but too little that is re iniscent of that gifted circle. The church in which the Brontes worshipped has long iniscent of that gifted circle. The church in which the Broutes worshipped has long since been destroyed, and the vicarage has been considerably altered. It is practically as well, therefore, that visitors—who may be assumed to be mainly Americans—should have some additional reward for so long a journey. The exhibition is to contain the original manuscripts of "Jane Eyre" and "Shirley;" there are also numerous letters, several portraits and curios and Charlotte Bronte's own copy of "Paradise Lost."

Population of the World.

German geographers have made a careful estimate of the population of Africa, and place the total at 163,933,000, which is 42,240,000 more than the aggregate population of North and South America. En opand Africa combined have a population of S21,833,000 though their area is not greater than that of all America. The New World has plenty of room for many times its population of 121,713,000. The German estimate of the population of the world now is 1,480,000,000, and one of the best authorities of the Royal Statistical Society says it will be increased by the year 2517 to says it will be increased by the year 2517 33,586,000,000.

London Death Rate.

London in 1894 had a population of 4,349,-166 spread over 121 square miles, according to the recent report of the Registrar General; an average of 37,250 to the square mile and 58 to the acre. The most densely populated districts are Whitechapel, with 196 to the acre, and Shoreditch with 191. The death rate was 17.8 to 1000, the lowest since a record has been kept. The highest death rate for the year in any English town was 23.8 in Liverpool.

Rheumatism and Neuralgia, radie me; the sight of the money ratties me.

I went to the wicket marked "Accountant." The accountant was a tall, cool devil. The very sight of him rattled me.

My voice was sepulchral.

"Can I see the manager?" I said, and added, solemnly, "alone." I don't know why I said the accountant, and feetched him.

The manager was a grave, calm man. I held my $56 clutched in a crumpled ball in my pocket.

"Are you the manager?" I said.

"Yes," he replied.

"Are you the manager?" I said.

"Yes," he replied.

"Can I see you?" I asked, "alone." I didn't want to say "alone" again, but without it the thing seemed self-evident.

The manager looked at me in some alarm. He felt that I had an awful secret to reveal.

"Come in here," he said, and led the way to a private room. He turned the key in the lock.

"We are safe from interruption here," he said; "sit down."

We both sat down and looked at one another. I found no voice to speak.

"You are one of Pinkerton's men, I presume," he said.

He had gathered from my mysterious manner that I was a detective. I knew what he was thinking, and it made me worse.

"No, not from Pinkerton," I said, seemingly to imply that I came from a rival agency. "To tell you the truth," I went on, as if I had been prompted to lie about it, "I am not a detective at all. I have come to open an account. I intend to keep all my money in this bank."
The manager looked relieved, but still serious; he concluded now that I was a son of Baron Rothschild or a young Gould.

"A large account, I suppose," he said. "Fairly large," I whispered. "I propose to deposit $56 now and $50 a month regularly."

The manager got up and opened the door. He called to the accountant. "Mr. Montgomery," he said unkindly loud, "this gentleman is opening an account; he will deposit $56. Good morning!"

Ottawa, July 5.—The trouble among the Blackfeet Indians of the North-west came up in the House of Commons yesterday by Mr. Mulock asking the Minister of Militia whether he was aware of the unsettled condition of affairs among the Indians when he made his reduction in the rollitia estimates.

settled condition of affairs among the Indians when he made his reduction in the militia estimates.

Mr. Daly replied that the department had that morning received a telegram from the late assistant commissioner on the reserve, stating that there was perfect quietness reigning and no trouble.

Mr. Casey said it was disgraceful that after all the money tha had been expended on the Mountain of the Indians, a missionary found it impossible to live among the Blackfeet cribe. He discussed the question whether the Indians were getting the amount of rations to which they were entitled by treaty.

He was told that the Government was not compelled to give an ounce of food by treaty. The distribution of food by the Government was voluntary. The Indians were not creating trouble, and could be seen in paint almost every day. The sun dance was a religious rite, and the Government had to exercise the greatest discretion in suppressing the dance. They e deaovured to stop it by offering the Indians more tea and tobacco, and had been o successful that there were only three sun dances in the North-west this year. With regard to rations, there were no complaints made now.

Murderous Attack on an Abbe at Acton—
His Assallants Escape.

Montreal, July 7. — A strange story comes from Acton, a small village on the Grand Trunk some forty miles east of this city. On Wednesday night the vicar of the parish, the Rev. Abbo Duhlty, was stopping at the priest's residence, which is removed from the other houses in the place. The only other occupant of the house at the time was an aged priest, the Parish priest, Abbe Benin, being absent. Late on Wednesday night the vicar heard men trying to gain admission to the basement. He ran to the basement with a carbine, and noticed two tramps — a middle aged man with long beard and a younger man, both strong and powerfulentering the basement. The priest warned the burglars to retreat, but without effect, and, pointing his rifle at one of the burglars, he pulled the trigger, which falled to respond. Then followed a thilling hand-to-hand flight between the two burglars and the priest. The brave priest broke his rifle over his assallants. Then he seized a poken, and drove it into the neek of the youngest burglar, who fell to the ground, bleeding freely. The other tramp pulled out a dagger, and attempted to stab the priest, and in the desperate struggle that followed the priest received two stabs in the breast, piercing his soutane, shirt, and soapulary, and inflicting a slight flesh wound. Then the younger burglar, who had revived, attacked the priest with a bar of iron. The latter selzed the man by the throat, but at this time both the vicar and the tramp fell to the floor exhausted. When the priest recovered his senses the two tramps held disappeared. The county was scoured for the would be murderers, but without success.
