The Western Cyclist, (Michigan) thus comments on our recent descriptive article of the town:—"THE HURON SIGNAL of May 30, gives a complete description of Goderich, the paradise of wheelmen." And so our pretty town is advertised abroad.

Among those who received the degree of B.A. at Toronto University was Hugh Davison, a pupil of Goderich high school. This is creditable, as Mr. Davison lost much time in the last term through illness, having been prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Our genial cotemporary, the Hamilton Spectator, has removed into its new quarters, and last week gave an interesting sketch of the history of the paper. The Spectator is popular with all classes, being witty, newsy and full of push. At no time was the "Spec." in better condition than under its present management.

Ven. Archdeacon Elwood, and Rev. J. Walters, will leave on Monday next, attended the meeting of Synod to be held in London next week. This will be the first Synod under the administration of the present bishop, and will no doubt be of a highly interesting nature.

The concert and organ recital, to be given by the managers of Knox's church is under the control and direction of Miss Fish, the organist of the church. Mr. Foote has kindly consented to render a number of selections during the evening. Through inadvertence, a wrong impression was conveyed through our local columns last week regarding the management of this concert.

Mrs. Castlemaine (colored) was charged on Monday with violently assaulting Mrs. Wilson one day last week. The mayor after hearing the evidence committed Castlemaine to stand her trial at the first competent court of jurisdiction.

On Wednesday morning the grand jury brought in a true bill against her for assault, but it was found that the bird had flown, having jumped her bail.

J. Curtis Stevenson, general secretary of the Huron Sunday School Association, represents that body at the International S. S. Convention held this week in Louisville, Kentucky. Mr. Stevenson will be among the most attentive members of that vast gathering, and will bring home many "crumbs" for the next county convention, which by the way, will be held in Seaton next February.

PRESENTATION.—On Monday evening a number of the scholars in Miss Lizzie Wilson's S. S. class (North street Methodist church) met at her residence, and gave her a pleasant surprise by presenting her with a handsome autograph album, and a very pretty and uncommon birthday card; also an address expressive of affection and regard. Miss Wilson is popular with both pupils and associates.

BUNCHER RHUBARB.—The finest bunch of rhubarb we have yet seen was brought into our office by Charles Walls, market gardener, on Wednesday. It is called the "English Giant," and the roots were imported by the grower. The larger stalks range from 3ft to 3ft 5in., with leaves over two feet in length. The bunch of ten stalks brought down the scales at 12 lbs. 2 oz. Mr. Walls is away ahead on rhubarb.

INTERNATIONAL I. O. O. F. DEMONSTRATION.—It has been decided to hold an Oddfellows International Demonstration, at Brockville, Ont., on July 9th, 10th and 11th, which gives promise of being the greatest gathering of the kind ever held in Eastern Ontario. The Executive Committee—at an expense of over $3,000—are perfecting an elaborate programme for the entertainment of Oddfellows and other guests.

The people of Winnipeg appear to be a music loving people. Oratorios are frequent and popular, and at the presentation of Mozart's "Twelfth Mass" on the evening of Tuesday June 3rd the Sun says a "magnificent audience" assembled. Mrs. F. H. Hick sang an alto solo, which was highly spoken of by the city papers. The Sun says:—"Mrs. Hick deserved all the praise which was heaped upon her by a delighted audience."

The Canadian Electrical news, of Montreal, makes the following flattering reference to a young man who learned to work the tinker in Goderich:—"Charles Noble, who does the principal presswork at the main office of the G.N.V., is a very fast operator and an excellent receiver. The copy he makes is such as we should like to see from all who aim to rank as first-class telegraphers, but it is not strange for a Noble to be the noblest Roman of them all."

The volunteers are organizing for the camping on Carling's Heights, London, and almost every evening can be seen at the armory, going "through their paces." Tuesday evening last they marched around the square, and one of the number who had not got quite over the intricacies of the "goose-step" tripped and sent his bayonet through the window of a shoe store. This is the only casualty that has occurred thus far to mar the harmony of the camp preparations.

Mr. John McGillivray, son of Rev. A. McGillivray, at the recent examinations of Toronto University obtained the degree of B.A., with honors in Hebrew, Chaldean and English at the final examinations of both University College and Toronto University. He was baccalaureate prizeman in Hebrew and Chaldean. His course throughout although broken by frequent indispositions, has been a good one. He supplies the pulpit of Knox church, St. Marys, this summer, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. A. Wilson, M. A.

MINISTERIAL CHANGES.—At the recent meeting of Conference the following are the places in this district where changes have been made: Gorrie, Jas. Charlton; Belmore, J. R. Lybell; Fortwich, B. Sherlock; Palmerston, C. E. Stafford; Trowbridge, Wm. Willmott; Fullarton, E. A. Fear; Menckton, Jas. Kennedy; Kirkton, J. J. Cruickshank; Hansall, Alfred E. Smith; Lonsdale, John Hough; Lucknow, A. G. Harris; Teaswater, R. W. Williams; Dunganon, John Turner; Auburn, H. E. Hill; Bervie, Geo. Jackson.

The Victoria, B. C., British Colonist, of May 28th, says:—"Rev. A. B. Meldrum preached in St. Andrew's church on Sunday morning and evening. The church was full on both occasions. Mr. Meldrum is assistant pastor of St. John's Presbyterian church (Dr. Scott's), San Francisco. He received his theological education at Knox College, Toronto, and only received his ordination a short time ago. His sermons show depth and strength of thought, and his earnestness inspiring. Mr. Meldrum will probably preach at St. Andrew's church next Sabbath."

THE DETROIT BICYCLERS.—We have received the circular and time-card of the Detroit Bicycle Club, in connection with their proposed Canadian tour. They propose to reach here on Thursday, the 17th of July. The circular says:—"Goderich will be reached at 11 a.m., giving the rest of the day and evening to explore the elegant roads and lovely scenery of that famous watering place and vicinity." Goderich has an enviable reputation among the wheelmen of the United States, and such circulars as the above are a good advertisement for the town as a summer resort.

TEMPERANCE LECTURE.—Thomas McMurray, one of the agents of the Ontario Prohibitory League preached in the Methodist church on Sunday, and on Monday delivered a lecture on Temperance in the North street church. The facts of the case were tragic, and the recovery of that famous watering place and vicinity." Goderich has an enviable reputation among the wheelmen of the United States, and such circulars as the above are a good advertisement for the town as a summer resort.

Goderich has an enviable reputation among the wheelmen of the United States, and such circulars as the above are a good advertisement for the town as a summer resort.

IMPORTANT TO HOTEL-KEEPERS.—A case was decided in the Court of Appeal on Friday in which it was decided that a hotel-keeper could not be held responsible for goods which had been left at his hotel after the guest had departed. In 1882 one Plain left a trunk at the City hotel, Toronto, and neglected to call for it for a considerable time. When he claimed his trunk it could not be found, and he brought an action against the proprietor of the place, Mr. Reed, to recover the value of the trunk. The case was decided in favor of the plaintiff at the County Court, but the Court of Appeal reversed the decision, holding that a hotel-keeper is only bound to take the same care of a guest's goods after he has paid his bill as he would his own, and is only liable for negligence.

On Tuesday a casket containing the body of Solomon Pollock arrived at Clinton from the North-west en route for his late home near Brucefield. The facts of the death are tragic. In the vicinity of Maple Creek N. W. T., on the morning of Wednesday of last week, Indians were caught in the act of driving a number of horses out of a corral, close to the house owned by Solomon Pollock and partner. Mr. Pollock went to ascertain the cause, without firearms. He got into the corral, where he saw an Indian driving out the horses. He clinched him, and during the struggle was shot twice in the right breast. He lived but two hours, and told the above story. The Indian left his rifle, knife and moccasins behind. They have little hopes of finding the murderers.

On Friday afternoon Saunders & Son's horse started from behind their store, and made tracks for his own stable at a good speed. Coming around the square from St. Patrick's street, the animal put on a spurt, and showed up in great shape. Bingham's horse was standing quietly in front of the flower store, and picked up his ears at the sound of the approaching runaway, after which he hastened with all possible alacrity to get out of the way, and hurriedly crossed to the chains, taking his wagon behind him. Bingham's horse is a solid old stager and didn't run fast, but succeeded in damaging the vehicle to some extent. Saunders' horse continued its career at full flight, and having got rid of its wagon on South street, finally pulled up at its own stable, little the worse for its lively escape.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Saturday afternoon while driving on the Huron road with his wife and two young children, Mr. Mauger, book-keeper at the Harbor Mills, stopped the horse at a friend's house, and had just got out of the buggy to assist the others out, when the horse sprang suddenly forward, overturning the vehicle, and throwing Mrs.

Mauger and children violently to the ground. The sudden upsetting of the buggy flung the horse down, but before the animal could rise to his feet he was secured by his owner. Mrs. Mauger received some bruises about the head and face, and the eldest boy escaped unhurt. The youngest child, a boy of a few months, sustained a fracture of one of his legs. The buggy was considerably damaged. At last accounts the little sufferer was making very favorable progress.

SCOTT ACT.—At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the County Convention held at Clinton last Wednesday afternoon, D. D. Wilson in the chair, 20 Vice-Presidents were present who gave an account of the prospects of the coming fight. Blank petitions were distributed for each municipality, and a discussion on the general instructions entered upon. The amount of money required for carrying on the work in the County was divided among the various municipalities as follows:—Ashfield $80, West Wawanosh $90, East Wawanosh $90, Morris $90, Grey $125, Turnberry $150, Howick $150, McKillop $150, Hullett $125, Colborne $100, Goderich township $100, Stanley $100, Hay $80, Stephen $80, Caborne $125, Tucker-smith $100, Goderich $125, Clinton $150, Senafeth $150, Wingham $100, Brussels $50, Exeter $100, Bayfield $50.

THE LORD'S ARMY.—During the week the Army has met with much success. A number of young men and youths have been converted, and the meetings continue to be largely attended. On Monday a reinforcement from Clinton in charge of Lieut. Rielly, assisted by Mr. Young, and a number of "Hallelujah" lads and lasses, came up, and as the visitors were fond of singing, a lively meeting was held. Lieut. Bickle, of this station, paid a visit to Clinton on Tuesday, and says he had a good time. Capt. Piper and the lieutenant, and T. Angus, whom the Battle Cry calls the "blood and fire sewing machine agent," will attend a "jubilee" at Mitchell on Tuesday next. On that night a Bible reading will be held in the Temperance Hall instead of the usual service. All attending are requested to bring their Bible, and a pencil and paper for notes will prove of assistance. The subject of the Bible reading will be given out on Sunday.

The Independent Blade, of Meridian, Texas, thus discourses on the doings of some of our friends in the Lone Star State:—"Geo. B. Johnston came down last Saturday from his 'Canada Bapels' which is situated on the East Boque in the northwest corner of this county, and paid the Blade a most pleasant visit. The Johnston Bros. are from Goderich, Canada, and have a splendid stock-ranch, devoting most of their time to sheep, and we are glad to learn have met with good success in their business venture in our country. The father of our ranchman friends, Hugh Johnston, spent the winter and spring months at the ranch. The latter recognizes the worth of our Texas soil and this spring raised a fine garden. To him we are indebted for a large basket of fresh potatoes, beans, peas, beets, radishes, turnips and lettuce. Mr. Johnston will doubtless be able to impart some valuable information regarding Texas when he returns to his Canada home this summer. A good report from such a man as he is worth more to the state than a year's work of an immigration agent."

THE REIDY CONCERT.—Miss B. Reidy, the popular vocalist, and her concert company, gave one of their evenings of song in Victoria Hall on Thursday last, to a very fair audience, considering the short notice given. Miss Reidy, of course was the star. She was in excellent voice, in the best of moods, and she sang her various pieces with that feeling and sweetness which stamps her as one of the most gifted songsters of Canada. Her rendition of "Theres a dear spot in Ireland" brought moisture to many eyes, and the Scotchmen present were captivated by the way she gave "Coming Thro' the Rye." Miss Johnston, contralto, has a sweet voice and a modest manner, and although evidently pleased as a foil for the Irish-Canadian nightingale, made a good impression. Prof. Morris was under the weather, and could not do justice to his high notes. He showed at times that he possessed a good tenor voice, but it was decidedly an off night for the Professor. Mr. Lewis, the baritone, is one of the most pleasing male vocalists in the P-winton. He has a splendid voice, clear enunciation, and gives good expression to his singing. He divided the honors of the evening with Miss Reidy. Mr. Keller, the accompanist was dropped on the road, but the quartette, notable Miss Reidy, were all equal to the task of accompanying one another, and there was no hitch in the programme. We are glad to know that the company intend visiting Goderich again in the fall, and we predict for them a full house.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Thrilling Adventure with a Mad Dog.

A serious and nearly fatal accident occurred to Capt. McLeod and Capt. Quint on Tuesday evening last about 7 o'clock, enroute from Port Elgin to Southampton, and nearly half way home they were startled by a few short grunts on the roadside directly opposite their horse which at the same time became frightened and ran away followed by a huge dog...

LOCKWOOD.

The voting on the by-law for the erection of a fire hall for the village will take place on the 17th of June.

THERE'S MILLIONS IN IT.—Wm. McLean bought in this section on Saturday week 85 head of cattle for which he paid the sum of $8,020, an average of $107 per head. Who says cattle don't pay?

MORE GOOD CATTLE.—Jared Dryden, of the 1st con. of Huron township, delivered in this village on Friday last to Mr. Mooney four steers for shipment, for which he realized the handsome sum of $407.50.

PERSONAL.—Dr. Hutchison, who has practiced his profession in this village and vicinity for some time past, has gone to Bright to reside. The Doctor during his residence here made many friends and his departure is generally regretted. Bright is to be congratulated on securing two of our most popular citizens in the persons of the Doctor and Mr. Charles Bathford both of whom we wish every success.

A MAMMOTH OX.—The largest ox ever seen these parts, and without his equal in height can be found in the Dominion, was delivered to James McLean, cattle dealer, on Tuesday morning last, for shipment to the Old Country. Although not in very good condition he weighed 2,170 pounds and stands eight-and-a-half high. While here the animal was viewed by hundreds, and all agree in pronouncing him the largest they had ever seen.—[Sentinel.]

A TALK WITH JEFF DAVIS.

Opinion About Grant, Sherman and Lee.

Mr. William L. Taylor, of the law firm of Peck, Taylor, resumed yesterday from New Orleans. While on the trip he visited Jefferson Davis at his home, near Beauvoir, and Nashville Railroad, midway between Mobile and New Orleans. Mr. Taylor describes the home of the Confederate leader as a typical old-time plantation mansion, one story in height, with spacious halls and an imposing portico. The house lies in view of the Gulf, and is surrounded by a thick grove of orange and magnolia trees. Mr. Taylor says he was received cordially by Mr. Davis, and after they had been talking a few moments, Mrs. Jeff Davis and her daughter, a handsome young lady, appeared in the room, accompanied by a young Chicago lawyer. Mr. Davis insisted that he should remain in the house over night. During the evening the conversation turned upon the war, and Mr. Davis talked freely on all subjects that were brought up.

What is the Southern estimate of the Federal Generals? inquired Mr. Taylor. "I cannot give you the Southern estimate," Mr. Davis replied. "I can give you my own estimate. I can give you what you think of Grant?" was asked. "Grant," he said, "was largely a creature of circumstances. I remember that the first time I met Grant was when he was stationed on the Pacific Coast as a Lieutenant. I was then Secretary of War. He was charged with drunkenness and neglect of duty. I gave him his choice between standing trial and resigning. He resigned. I knew he would. General Grant was a great military commander. He was very tenacious. He fought a battle as a matter of business. Men were men, cogs in the wheel. All the men and means he wanted were placed at his command, and he had every advantage. He would have been discharged from the Army of Potomac if it had not been that too many changes had already taken place in the army.

What is your estimate of Gen. Sherman? Mr. Davis said, "was looked upon in the South as Alaric was by the Romans. He was their 'scourge of God.' He was cruel, yet he was a great strategist."

Ye interrupted Miss Davis, "he was a humane monster. What he did not use he destroyed." "Sherman hesitated," Mr. Davis continued, "for a long time between joining the Confederate army and the Union army. We were uncertain which he would do. He finally joined the Union army, thinking, I suppose, that more could be gained by it."

My idea, remarked Mr. Davis, is that Meade was the most skillful General in the Federal army. Gen. Lee once said to me that he could understand the movements of all the generals of the Federal army easier than those of Gen. Meade. Those above Meade never allowed him to display his full power. He was hampered and kept down through jealousy."

Mr. Taylor—How did you regard McClellan? "Well, sir, McClellan was the best trained soldier in the war. While Secretary of War I sent him on three important missions—one to Europe, to study military methods. He returned with a better knowledge of military discipline and methods than was possessed by any of his colleagues in the war."

Mr. Taylor—Could he have entered Richmond if he had pushed on across the Chickamauga? "Well," Mr. Davis answered, laughing, "I once knew a farmer who said that if his foresight had been as good as his hands he might have been a great man on cotton. Something of the same kind was probably the fault with McClellan. If he had known the weakness of the Confederates, and had thrown his army across the river, I think he could have entered Richmond. We thought he would, and I believe Gen. Lee thought so, too."

Mr. Taylor—Who do you regard as the greatest of the Confederate Generals? "I consider Gen. Sidney Johnson as the greatest General produced on either side by the war. Gen. Lee stands next in my estimation, and as we move away from the war his desperate struggle against overwhelming numbers will be a marvel in war annals."

Mr. Lincoln was a vulgar joke," Mr. Davis said, "but withal he was a great man. He was wise and he was honest. He could have been of great good to the South if he had lived, and his untimely death was a great loss to us. He was quiet and apparently in deep meditation for several minutes, and then resumed: "Yes, it was a great loss, for he was succeeded by a low, mean demagogue—Johnson—and a demagogue is the worst of men. Johnson was uneducated, but a man of great native ability. He had no convictions, and tried to please all. Lincoln was a man of great vigor of mind, although he was plain and rough. If Mr. Lincoln had lived, the South would have had a President that understood her condition, and he would have been of more benefit to her than any other man could possibly have been. He was an honest man. His death was a great misfortune to the South."

It is said in St. Paul that hundreds of teams are now engaged near Bismarck in gathering buffalo bones, for which the sum of $6 a ton is paid by persons who send them to Philadelphia for grinding into fertilizing powder. But so great is the supply that Bismarck is to have a "bone meal" mill of its own within a few months. Such facts bring to mind the enormous and wasteful slaughter of buffaloes, largely the work of men who use only the hides, or of tourist sportsmen who care neither for hides nor meat. At least some of the bones are now to be turned to account.

CHAPTER XII.
THE COURT MARTIAL.

Captain Brentwood paced his private cabin in considerable perturbation. "The most unfortunate," he muttered, "that he should have behaved so, after his noble conduct in the fight. I would have given a hundred pounds that it had not happened. The Captain spoke the truth when he said that but for him victory would have gone the other way. Yet he has committed a flagrant breach of discipline—struck an officer of the ship—and subjected himself to the most severe punishment, which I cannot possibly remit. To do so would be to demoralize the whole crew, and be utterly subversive of discipline; and that must be maintained against all private feelings and considerations. I wish to heaven Grahame had been more discreet than to act so rigorously at such an inopportune moment. But duty is duty, and must be done, however disagreeable."

Captain Brentwood in his full official dress led the way to the state-room, where arrangements had been made for a formal examination of the crime reported to have been committed by Eustace Grahame—the grave and heavy crime of striking an officer. The large room was partially filled by the petty officers, a draft of seamen and marines, and those who had evidence to give of the matter which was to form the subject of the captain's enquiry. Among the latter were Jack Murdoch and Willy Somerville, who had both seen something regarding the alleged crime committed, and were forced to give evidence against their friend. Willy Somerville, as it chanced, was the only one who had seen Eustace give the push or blow, or whatever it was, and upon upon his testimony would mainly depend the conviction or acquittal of the prisoner. Willy was aware of this, and he had determined to die rather than say a word against Eustace. The captain having taken his seat on a raised bench at the end of the state-room, and the officers placed according to their rank, with a group of seamen, deeply interested in the proceedings, stood near the entrance. Eustace was led in and placed at the foot of the table, opposite the commander. He was not in fetters now, but a strong guard with muskets stood behind him. Eustace walked slowly in, with form erect, and maintaining on his countenance the air of stern manly dignity. He looked at no one but the captain, and on him he fixed a full, piercing eye, so steady and significant in its gaze that the latter felt uneasy under it. For a moment or two he tried to look the prisoner down, but signally failed, and he was fain to turn his glance in another direction. "That state-room and its occupants would at the moment have formed the subject of a striking picture. The most conspicuous figure there was Eustace himself, his tall, athletic form towering above the rest—his arms folded across his breast—his attitude loftily indignant—his calm face terribly grave, and his whole appearance statuesque. On either side were his guards, behind were the eager faces of the sailors, on each side of the table stood the officers, the most notable among them being Randolph, whose whole countenance wore a fiendish expression of triumph; and lastly, on the raised seat sat the Captain, with a plainly disconcerted and uncomfortable air. In front of the Captain a large written sheet lay upon the table, and in order to escape from the steady, penetrating gaze of Eustace, he looked upon it while he spoke.

"Eustace Grahame," he said in rather low tone, but the words were well heard amid the breathless silence of the state-room—"Eustace Grahame, this report charges you with striking a superior officer. Are you guilty of this heinous offence, or are you not?" "I am not guilty," answered Eustace, with a clear, firm voice.

"Lieutenant Graham, stand forward and make your charge," said the captain, with a momentary glance at Randolph. "The latter, flushed still with triumph, stepped forward to the table. "The circumstances of the case are very brief, sir," he began. "After the action, and when there was much to do in the vessel, I observed a group of idlers loitering away forward. I approached and ordered them to disperse instantly, and go to their work. All obeyed except the prisoner. I repeated the order—and still he paid no heed—treating me with impudent and contemptuous silence. I could not, of course, allow such gross insubordination to pass, and ordered as a punishment two hours at the masthead. Instantly he turned upon me, raised his hand and violently struck me."

Randolph ceased, and the Captain turned again to his paper, where he found the names and witnesses. Several of the others, with an air of reluctance and hesitation, gave evidence which, though not of a conclusive kind, was yet corroborative of Randolph's statement. No one was near enough to hear the words spoken, and with one exception no one had seen the blow. This one excepted by the answer—"Partly bath." That was enough—the evidence was exhausted and the charge established. The captain rested his arm on the table, and shaded his face with his hand. He remained there for more than a minute; then again raised his head, and, not without effort looked at the prisoner, who confronted him with a calm dignified demeanor.

"Eustace Grahame," he said, you have heard the evidence brought to support the charge made against you. That evidence, as you must be aware, substantiates the charge, and convicts you of the crime set forth. Your plea of not guilty is therefore unavailing, for it is proved to be false. If you have anything to say in your own behalf, anything to urge in explanation or extenuation before sentence is passed, I am ready to listen to you."

"I am free to speak at last, am I?" asked Eustace, with kindling eye. "Yes, you have a right to be heard, and I am very willing to listen." Randolph's face paled at this intimation, and he stepped back into the shade; but the others drew closer that they might hear the prisoner's address. They had not a minute to wait, for Eustace, drawing himself still more proudly up, thus began:

"For the first time, then, has justice and acknowledge I right met together in my experience under the heavy wrong which I have been made to suffer; and Captain Brentwood, I cannot regret the circumstance which has given me an opportunity to address you. When first brought on board this ship I sought such an opportunity, never dreaming that it would be denied; but you refused to listen, and the very attempt I made to speak to you was treated as presumption, and forcibly prevented. Glad am I, therefore, to find that I have now the right to speak, and to be listened to, and you may depend upon it that I shall take advantage of it to the utmost.

"You have said, Captain Brentwood, that the charge preferred against me is substantiated by the evidence, and that my plea of not guilty has been proved false. I intend that the contrary is the case. I trust I have too much honor and self-respect to be capable of uttering a falsehood in any circumstances. I declare that I am not guilty of the charge preferred against me, and I made the statement in the expectation and with the desire that the whole truth should be told, because none of the witnesses except he who made the charge knew it in its entirety. I admit everything, however, that has been told. I freely admit I never had the slightest desire to conceal it, and in the face of all that you have heard, Captain Brentwood, I repeat the statement—I am not guilty of the charge preferred. What is the crime charged against me? It is that I struck my superior officer. Randolph Grahame is not my superior officer, Captain Brentwood, and you know it. I am in this ship against my will. By the feul exercise of an arbitrary, a despotic power, and for the purpose of gratifying a vindictive revenge. This man, Randolph Grahame, my younger brother, was enabled to have me removed from my peaceful home, and dragged ignominiously on board this ship, where I was clothed in the garb and placed in the position of a common seaman—I who am as much a gentleman by birth and education as any one who now listens to me—"

"Captain Brentwood, exclaimed Randolph, passionately, 'I claim to interrupt this language. He says I am his younger brother, when he knows we are not full brothers at all.' "The prisoner must not be interrupted. Lieut. Grahame," observed the captain. "He has the right to speak at this juncture, and that right it is my duty to see that he enjoys. What he does say it is my province to judge, and any misstatement he may make will be to his own prejudice."

"My eye, how he does pay out his jaw tackle," whispered the boatswain to the Sergeant of Marines, in reference to the manner in which Eustace had been addressing the captain. "I've been aboard a man-of-war man and boy for forty years, and never afore did I hear a blue-jacket speak in such a way to the commander. It's as good quarter-deck lingo as ever came through a speaking-trumpet." The sergeant nodded his approval to the remark, but made no further reply, for Eustace had again begun to speak.

"No," he remarked, with a proud scornful tone, "we are not full brothers. We are sons of the same father, whose second wife is his mother, and I'm glad to think that our relationship is no closer. But I shall not trouble you, sir, with private family affairs. Were your authority such as I am bound to recognize, I would feel called upon to enter more minutely into these, to give you an idea of the provocation I received ere I struck the blow for which I am now called to account. But I reneudate your authority altogether, and protest against any formal arraignment here as a part of the monstrous wrongs to which I have been subjected. Rendred helpless by a physical force which I had no power to resist, I was degraded to the level of a common seaman, and ordered to do the duties of such a position. I was deprived of my liberty—that sacrebirthright of every Briton—subjected to insult and ignominy, and placed under a usurped authority, which I was not morally called upon or bound to obey. Captain Brentwood, I ask you to say how you would have acted under these circumstances? What I might have done but for the accident which kept him below for so many weeks, I do not know; but having thus been freed from his hateful presence, I had no means of evading, and let my conduct in the ship during these weeks testify to my self-restraint. I set myself to learn and discharge the duties of a common seaman, and my comrades will, I dare say, bear witness that I succeeded in the effort. You, yourself, Captain Brentwood, may have seen how I acquitted myself in today's engagement. In the circumstances I would have been justified in refusing to take part in the fight, but, sir, my patriotic feelings prompted me to do what no usurped authority would have drawn from me. I threw myself heart and soul into the conflict, and I was ready to sacrifice my life in defending the ship and assailing the foe. It was free, spontaneous service I rendered in doing this—it was no acknowledgment of the authority which had been wrongfully exercised over me. The fight was done, the victory was gained, and I and a few others who had fought hard for it were taking rest, when my vindictive foe approached, and insulted me with the abuse of a power which is his as an officer of this ship, but which individually I had nothing to do. Knowing what I had suffered at his instigation, knowing how basely he had plotted my ruin at home, and what cause I had to scorn and loathe him, I indignantly ignored his presence, and paid no heed to his insolence. His order to go to the mast-head I treated with silent contempt; and he had the audacity to lay his hand on me to drag me forward. That act was provocation beyond endurance, and I pushed him from me as I would the vilest reptile that crawls the earth. For this assertion of my manhood I was laid in irons—for this act, which every feeling in my soul rises up to justify, I am surrounded here; and you, Captain Brentwood, have taken it upon you to judge and punish me. You have not a shadow of a right to either one or the other. I am your equal, sir, and am as free from your jurisdiction as the cloud that sails along the sky. At your hands I have received as great a wrong as one man can inflict on another, and now you crown your injustice by subjecting me to the mockery of a trial. Is it not so? Dishonor and degrade yourself by continuing to be the fool of a mean and base a wretch as ever wore His majesty's uniform, but the time will come, Captain Brentwood, when you will have to answer for such a flagrant and culpable abuse of your power. Here I publicly demand the courteous treatment due by one gentleman to another so long as the ship remains on the high sea, till an opportunity comes when I can return to Scotland, after which I frankly tell you, I shall seek such redress as public opinion and the law of the land shall give me."

Eustace ceased, and, folding his arms across his chest, stood silent and indignant as before. He had spoken with an air of great calmness and firmness. There was no display of passion or vehement feeling. He had indeed looked stern and indignant when he proclaimed his wrongs and characterized the treatment he had experienced; but he maintained a perfect self-command, and the air of one who felt and was justified in feeling, himself, the equal of whom he was speaking to. Capt. Brentwood frequently remarked as he went on, and pressed his lips hard, but did not interrupt him. The sailors were perfectly amazed at his audacity in uttering such words to the commander. Lieutenant Saughton was more and more confirmed in his impression that Eustace had been deeply wronged, and Randolph, while boiling and burning with rage and fear, vainly watched at the captain's countenance, to notice the effect produced upon his mind.

To the same point all eyes were turned when Eustace ceased to speak, and it was noticed that though the captain was very pale, he was very resolute. There was evidently a struggle of feeling going on in his soul, which the knitting of his brows indicated as being in favor of duty, and so it speedily turned out.

"Prisoner," he said, and his voice was strangely altered, "I have listened, if not patiently, yet silently, to your very extraordinary and injudicious address, resolved that your right to be heard would not be interfered with, though you were abusing that right to a terrible degree. It is beneath my dignity and would be subversive of my position as commander of this vessel to reply to your abusive words. I may say, however, for the sake of those who heard you if not for your own sake, that I did not sanction the proceedings of which you complain, without knowing and approving of the grounds of your seizure. In your address you have misrepresented and concealed matters of which I am well informed, and have clearly shown how truthfully your character was represented to me. Further than this, I will not condescend to allude to this matter."

"I am very sorry to see you in the position you now occupy, and to have the unpleasant duty laid upon me of punishing the one who behaved so gallantly in this day's engagement. With every word of what you said on that point I cordially agree, and have to state that your allusion to your conduct during the fight was far more modest than the circumstance warranted. You rendered most essential service both in the defence and the assault, and I am bound to say that your heroic exertions tended not a little to secure the victory. This makes it all the more painful for me to deal with the very great crime of which you have been convicted. It is, of course, impossible that I can give any weight to your plea that Lieutenant Grahame is not your officer. He is a second lieutenant of this vessel, of which you are one of the seamen, and his authority is as binding on you as on any of the ship's company. The offence, then, is fully established—not only by the testimony of others, but by your own admission; and now it becomes me to deal with it in such a way as shall go to prove to all on board that a crime so enormous cannot be lightly treated, even in the case of one who has behaved so gallantly in action as you have done today. In ordinary circumstances the crime is a capital offence, and though I shall be merciful in consideration of your heroic behaviour during the engagement, yet for the sake of discipline, which can in no circumstances whatever be neglected, I must impress on all on board the terrible nature of the crime you have committed. I therefore sentence you to receive fifty lashes."

"What?" roared Eustace, in a voice of thunder, "you dare to carry your monstrous, infamous tyranny to this extent! Great God, has truth and justice gone out of the universe? Am I given up to be the object of the foulest oppression which ever disgraced this earth? Capt. Brentwood, you are not serious in this. Frightfully as you have already abused your power, you will not, dare not, prostitute it so inhumanly."

"Silence, fellow," roared the captain, roused now into rage. Lieutenant Grahame, he added, turning to Randolph, "I commission you to see the sentence carried into effect immediately."

Randolph smiled sardonically and bowed a ready consent.

"Not this degradation, then," cried Eustace, "Murder me at once. Use your power to this extent, and in mercy kill me. Nay, I will save you from the guilt of murder by leaping over the side of the ship. Let me go to seek refuge from dishonor in death."

The captain paid no attention to this wild adjuration, but was about to retire when Willy Somerville started forward and stood before him.

"Save him frse this, sir. Save his frse this," he cried. "I saved your life the day, but it wasna that ye might destroy Maister Grahame."

The captain was staggered, but only for a moment.

"Yes, my good fellow," he answered, "You did save my life, and I will not forget it. I will repay you in some way."

"Repay me in this way," exclaimed Willy, vehemently. "I ask nae return but this. Dinna indict on Eustace a punishment that he diana deserve."

"My lad, you ask what it is impossible for me to grant. If I were to consult my private feelings only, I would do it at once; but I never sacrifice public duty to private feelings. Stand by, you request is useless. The sentence must be carried into effect."

"Then let me bear it," cried Willy, with noble generosity. "Gie me the fifty lashes then, but oh, dinna dishonor him."

"Hush, Willy," said Eustace, firmly. "No one shall suffer the ignominy but myself. If they will perpetrate the fiendish cruelty I can accept of no substitute. But a heavy reckoning shall yet overtake them."

"Away with him," shouted the captain, with an imperious wave of his hand. Randolph, his whole soul thrilling with its culminating triumph, advanced, and ordered the guard to seize the prisoner and take him on deck.

HURON COUNTY COUNCIL

Minutes of the June Session of 1884-The Later Days' Proceedings.

THIRD DAY.

Thursday, June 6

Council met pursuant to adjournment,

the warden in the chair. All the members were present.

The minutes of the previous day were read and approved.

The report of Mr. Gibson, road commissioner, was read, and together with the reports of Messrs. Girvin and Hardy, was referred to the road and bridge committee.

REPORT OF A. L. GIBSON, ROAD COM.

In accordance with the instructions of the council at the January meeting, with reference to the Manchester bridge, I procured with approval of Mr. Hardy, a Mr. Allan McDougall, a professional engineer in Toronto, to examine into the bridge. He made in the latter part of February last a most thorough examination, accompanied by Messrs. Hardy,

Kelly, Young, Adamson and myself, of the river bed, the foundations of the piers and abutments, as well as the main work of the same, and pronounced them good; he also examined the wooden superstructure, and his opinion set forth that the bridge should be renewed within the year. His very able report will be laid before you. I instructed the clerk to call the commissioners together to consider this report. They met in the latter part of February and authorized Mr. Adamson,

Mr. Hardy and myself to proceed to Hamilton and Toronto and interview the managers of both the bridge companies and ask for tenders for the erection of an iron superstructure. The result of our visit was that a tender was received from both companies in about two weeks, and the contract was awarded to the Dominion

Bridge Co., Toronto, by the Warden's

Committee, for the sum of $6,320, out of which will be allowed to the county

$14,500 per thousand feet for all the cedar planking that will be available from the old bridge worth putting on the new, and $16 per ton for all the old iron, which will make the cost of the superstructure in the neighborhood of $6,000. I may say that after considering the position of the bridge as being at the bottom of a steep incline, the commissioners concluded to raise the floor of the bridge 3 feet, and to fill up the short span at the east end with earth work so that the approach at that end might be made the same as the other end, and to give the main span slightly upward inclination and thus prevent teams from trotting or running sharply on to the bridge, and also keep the water that will naturally flow down on both sides from getting on the bridge.

The contractors have agreed to provide steel or iron piers, and to erect the necessary elevation for raising the bridge the 3 feet mentioned above, and they do all the work necessary to deliver to the County the completed bridge, except filling up the short eastern span, for the above mentioned purpose. The contract regarding the filling up will no doubt be given you by Mr. Girvin, in the report. The floor of the Jamestown bridge has been renewed with cedar plank, and all the bolts tightened up properly, at a cost of $150. I am happy to be able to state that the contractor who did the work, said to me that the bridge is good,

and will last many years, and will last

a number of years. The approach at the north end of Bluevale bridge has required some small repairs, which I had done some time ago, and I am happy to be able to state that the contractor who did the work, said to me that the bridge is good,

and will last many years, and will last

a number of years. The approach at the Fashion's Fancies.

Draperies grow fuller and more elaborate. Heliotrope shades will be in high vogue next season. Gold lace and Alpine roses trim the Fedoras bonnets. Immense and diminutive collars are alike fashionable. Pale beige tints and coffee and milk colors are revived. Lengthwise tucks are seen on late imported costumes. Capotes and round hats divide the run of fashionable wear. Gray French cashmere is immensely popular for spring suits. Otomania plays an important part in young girls spring dresses. Flower ruffles are pretty decorations of high-necked evening toilets. Bound-crown "Terry" turbans are in the lists of new spring hats. Basset-brown is preferable to gray for brides' travelling dresses. Slippers, gaiters, boots and shoes of all kinds are still pointed at the toe. New cotton prints for dresses show the fine India silk designs of last year. Flowers are once more worn in the hair. They form a small wreath to go on back around the crown of the head, and the slender filaments of an aigrette spring upward in the centre. Black Spanish lace is used as a transparent over white sarah. The changeable silk dress goods are so very low in price that every lady should have one for afternoon wear or semi-dress occasions, trimmed with Oriental or Ecru-cut lace. Wreaths of small roses are seen in pink, white and yellow, and perfect imitations of fine ferns are mingled with them. A little caplet of yellow straw is faced with rose-colored silk and wreathed with small pink roses, which trim it quite elaborately. The ties, of medium wide pink ribbon, are arranged in a firm bow under the chin. Entire wreaths for bonnets are again worn, but it must be remembered that only the face of a pretty maiden, or at least one that is comely and unwrinkled, can bear about it a wreath of flowers. A worn or elderly face can wear shaded leaves, but buds or blossoms, no. Gray and black are likely to succeed to the position so long held by black and white, and many toilets at once elegant and becoming are seen in these colors. The complexion of the wearer must decide the amount and shade of gray that is to be used. Sanspareil poplin is making great headway, but will not attain the height of popularity until next Fall, as they are more suitable for winter than summer costumes. Those in slate colors are lovely, and when combined with non-garment velveteen of the best quality will form a very durable and beautiful costume. The beautiful Corah silks are quite expensive, and seen in all the delicate colored grounds with flowers and figured designs. A lovely lemon ground with dark red carnations would be extremely becoming to a brunette, while all types of beauty can find a satisfactory and becoming pattern.

Orangeism and Independence. The Orangemen have taken ground against independence. They are bound to uphold British rule, and if they are true to their principles they cannot take part in the agitation to separate Canada from the British Crown. The Grand Secretary exhorted his brethren to stand manfully side by side and support no party, no creed, no government, that will not pledge itself to uphold the fundamental principles of the British Constitution. The Orangemen have a wide field of usefulness in Ireland in stamping the progress of sedition and rebellion, but as good citizens of Canada, which country they have made their home, and which will be the home of their children, they should lay aside all prejudice and lend their aid to making Canada a nation worthy of the empire of which it is at present a part. At the meeting of the Grand Lodge it was resolved that as the maintenance of the British connection is an important fundamental principle of Canadian Orangeism, the doctrine of independence should be condemned. All that is necessary to say in answer to this is that if England is willing to let Canada go, the Orangemen will have no ground for objecting.—Toronto Telegram.

A Touch of Nature. The Cheyenne News tells that a big man and a woman were going into a store at night as they looked at some clothing. Mr. Harrington himself waited upon the visitors and was showing them various lines of goods when the door leading to his residence in the rear of the store opened and in came on the run a baby daughter of the Harrington family. The little one came in hurrying to escape her mother, and fell over a box. Mr. Harrington left the customers and went to the rescue of the baby. After the little one was quieted and placed on the floor he resumed his business, but in a minute she fell over another box and apparently hurt herself. He left the customers and again looked after the child. At this the man turned to his companion and said: "Let's go out of here. I ain't looking for a nursery." The proprietor heard the remark and was not slow to respond. He said that he had lived 52 years and done 20 years' business, and had had 10,000 customers. But he had never had but two Harrington babies, and this was the only one left. He could get along without the customer, and the sale of a suit of clothes to him, but he couldn't get along without the Harrington baby, and he didn't care how soon the customers "skipped." The man who was looking at the proprietor with a mild expression at first, when the story was finished had his handkerchief out, was wiping his eyes, and reaching his hand out to Mr. Harrington exclaimed, "Partner, God bless the baby." He couldn't do too much, and it is needless to say they parted as friends.

How to Kill a Craving for Alcohol. While it is true that many who at one time indulged in ardent spirits have abstained later in life, it is not believed that there is any real cure for the thirst created by alcoholism. But a person who claims to have cured himself gives a reason for the cure, several of whom are given. We produce it in the rescued person's words. "I was one of those unfortunate given to strong drink. When I left it off I felt a horrid want of something I must have or go distracted. I could neither eat, work, nor sleep. Explaining my affliction to a man of such education as the doctor, he advised me to take a decoction of ground quassia, half ounce steeped in a pint of vinegar, and to put about a small teaspoonful of it in a little water, and to drink it down every time the liquor thirst came on me violently. It found its way into the cravings, and it no longer satisfied the craving, and I was cured. I continued this cure, and persevered till the thirst was conquered. For two years I have not tasted liquor, and I have no desire for it. Lately, to try my strength, I have handled and smelt whiskey, but I have no temptation to take it. I give this for the consideration of the unfortunate, several of whom I know have recovered by means which I no longer require."—[Demoree's Monthly for June.

Laughter.

The Rev. E. Paxton Hood, in one of his works, gives some interesting information on this subject. Sometimes, he says, in the varieties of laughter we notice—and we note that we do not often notice—the laugh of more malignity, like that of the malicious specimen Sir Walter Scott describes in the person of the sanctimonious smuggler, Thomas Turnbull. Of this canting old reprobate, with the alias of Tom Turnpenny, we are told in the novel of "Hedgkott," upon the occasion of his hazing a jest with young Allan Fairford, "Here he emitted a chuckling grunt which lasted for two variations of the pendulum exactly, and in the next approach towards laughter in which old Turnpenny, as he was nicknamed, was ever known to indulge."

Sir Walter has described another laugh, a type of the benevolent order, emitted from the guileless creature Dominie Sampson—"It is true, he never laughed, or judged him to be getting his own simplicity afforded—may, it is said he never laughed but once in his life, and on that memorable occasion his landlady unaccused, partly through terror at the hideous grimaces which attend his unusual exuberance." Most of these instances belong clearly to the order of drollery; and so also when Sir George Larpent tells us, while at Waterloo, he was standing with the calm and unmovable Duke, as his aide-de-camp, a cannon-ball struck close to their feet and tore up the earth. The Duke rubbed his hands, exclaiming to him it is getting very animating, air! it is getting very animating! It is the sublime unconsciousness and indifference to personal danger which constitutes the droll incongruity here. But we have a nearer illustration in the Irishman who, when asked if any particular motive had induced him to enlist in the 51st Regiment in preference to any other, replied, because he wanted to be near to his brother, who was in the 92nd. "How will you be tried?" said the judge to another Irishman. "By nobody at all, please your worship," was the reply. "These are the lower instances of absurdity, but it is clear that it is the same principle which compels laughter in these instances as that which governs irony or satire, in the shaft of wit or in the play of humor."

But this same kind of drollery is sometimes one of the defective instruments of humor, for, as we have already seen, there is a defective power in ridicule which in an astonishing manner reveals the weakest side. "It is noticeable," said Coleridge, "that an eggshell may be made to look exceedingly like an egg." But ridicule amidst applauding laughter smashes the thin eggshell of conceit; it is in this way that ridicule has very often been made to serve the interests of truth. We have often seen this in smart conversation, in adroit reply, in sparkling nimble words round the table. There is an anecdote told of Dr. Emmons, one of the ablest New England divines; he met a physician, a profound paralytic, by the bedside of a sick parishioner. "I have no place for a dispute, nor did it seem at all likely that one could arise; but quite casually, and in the course of conversation, the physician inquired—'How old are you then, Dr. Emmons?' 'Sixty,' replied the doctor; 'how old are you, sir?' 'Ah! I said as old as the creation, doctor.' 'Indeed?' 'Yes,' said the physician, 'certainly, I was at the beginning of things; I was in the garden with Adam and Eve.' 'Ah!' said Emmons, 'I always heard that there was a third party in the garden with them; I never knew before it was you!' 'A negro,' said quaint old Thomas Fuller, 'is God's image carved in ebony.' To which Dr. Johnson added, 'And the slaveholder is the devil's image carved in ivory.' In fact, the whole history of the literature of laughter, alike in its interior and superior chapters, shows how much easier it often seems to laugh bad things out of countenance than to reason them out of existence. 'I never go to church,' said a country tradesman to his clergyman, who was expostulating with his parishioner concerning his invariable absence—'I never go to church, I always spend the best part of Sunday in going over my accounts.' 'Ah! you will find, sir,' said the clergyman, 'the Day of Judgment will be spent in exactly the same manner.'

The instances of the retort, courteous or discourteous, sometimes give the clergyman the worst of it. A Scotch divine took one of his parishioners to task for his non-attendance at kirk; the man said, 'I dinna like lang sermons.' The parson, with some wrath, replied, 'Join ye, ye'll dee, and go to a place where you'll not have the privilege of hearing long or short sermons.' 'That may be,' said John, 'but it won't be for lack of parsons.'

Railway Signals. One pull of bell-cord signifies 'stop.' Two pulls means 'go ahead.' Three pulls means 'back up.' One whistle signifies 'down brakes.' Two whistles signifies 'off-brakes.' Three whistles means 'back up.' Continued whistles indicate 'danger.' Short rapid whistles, 'a cattle alarm.' A sweeping parting of the hands on a level with the eyes means 'go ahead.' A slowly sweeping meeting of the hands over the head signifies 'back slowly.' A downward motion of the hands, with extended hands, signifies 'stop.' A beckoning motion with one hand indicates 'back.' A red flag carried on a locomotive signifies 'an engine following.' A red flag raised at a station means 'stop.' A lantern swung at right angles across the track means 'stop.' A lantern raised and lowered vertically is a signal to 'start.' A lantern swung in a circle signifies 'back the train.'

At this season of the year there should be a bottle of Pectoria in every house. It is unequalled for Coughs Colds and Hoarseness is pleasant, equally safe for children. Price 25 cents at all druggists.

Bees do not usually want more than one queen. In fact, they will not have more than one unless the swarms has grown so large as to crowd the hive and they are going to found a colony, or "swarm," as it is called; in which case each family will need a sovereign. As soon as it is clear to the wisecracker that it will be necessary to send off a swarm, the bees go to work to make a queen. A worker maggot, or if there happens to be none in the hive, a worker egg, is selected near the edge of the comb. Two cells next door to the one in which this maggot is, are cleared out, and the dividing walls are cut down, so that three ordinary cells are turned into one. The food which the worker worm has been feeding on is removed, and the little creature is supplied with a new kind of food—a royal jelly. Change of food, a larger room, and a different position,—the queen's cell hangs down instead of being horizontal,—these three changes of treatment turn the bee that is developing from a worker into a queen. She is different in her outer shape, different in almost all her organs, and different in every single instinct. There is nothing else in all nature that seems to be more wonderful than this.

For these reasons, bees may not come out all right the provident little creatures usually start two or three queen-cells at once. It is curious to watch the first queen as she comes out. She moves up and down the combs, looking for other queen-cells, and if she finds one, she falls upon it in the greatest excitement, and stings her rival to death. Some times, by accident, two new queens come out at the same time; then it is wonderful to see the bees. They clear a space and bring the two rival queens together, and stand back to watch the fight. And it is a royal fight indeed; a fight to the death, for they never give up till one or the other is fatally stung. The victor is then accepted as sovereign. [From "Queen Game," by Mrs. S. B. Herrick, in "St. Nicholas" for June.

Why They Walk.

"Papa, what do professional men walk for?" "For lucre, my son." "Oh, yes; were you one of the lookers, papa?" "No, no; I mean they walk for money." "Can't a man walk called his gait?"
