DRUGGIST WOULD NOT GET THEM

So She Ordered Them By Mail

The people of the United States appreciate GIN PILLS quite as much as do we Canadians. They have tried GIN PILLS—have found that they cure all Kidney and Bladder Troubles—and they won't be beguiled into using anything else.

HOLYOKE, MASS. "Having taken 2 boxes of your excellent GIN PILLS, they relieved me so much that I am quite satisfied with the results. I gave an order to my druggist about three weeks ago to send me some more. Nothing has come yet and I had to borrow a box from a lady friend who was also using GIN PILLS. I have none left and am sending you $1.50 for three boxes which I would ask you to send at once as I am not quite so well when I am without GIN PILLS."

AGATHE VANESSE. If you, who are taking GIN PILLS, have any trouble in getting them, write us direct. We will send you any quantity at the regular price of 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50 and will also arrange with a dealer in your vicinity to handle GIN PILLS so that you can always get them without inconvenience or delay.

Don't take substitutes. Nothing else is "just as good" or "just the same" as GIN PILLS—and you can't afford to risk your health and waste your money when you know that GIN PILLS will give prompt relief in all cases of Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Swollen Joints, Suppression and Incontinence of Urine, Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. National Drug and Chemical Co., of Canada Limited, Toronto.

MANGA-TONE BLOOD AND NERVE TABLETS are especially useful in the treatment of all Female Troubles and diseases arising from Impure Blood. They build up the whole system. 50c. a box. 191

Love & Conqueror

OR—
WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER XLIV.

"Besides, Jarvis, when he was at the Oliphant Arms the other day, heard a man say that, on Christmas night, when he was walking over the hill on his way from Adinbrooke, he saw Mrs. Grant kneeling before the fire, while a man, who sat in a big arm-chair beside her, had his arm around her and his head over hers."

"Was it Mr. Litton?" said her ladyship, in a low tone.

"No, he said not—that it was a stranger."

"Oh, Fred, I do not believe it! Of course one can understand about Mr. Litton. She is so lonely, poor thing and he is very nice and pleasant and agreeable, and it is quite likely that they have fallen in love with each other; but that Mrs. Grant is so depraved—No," concluded Lady Oliphant energetically, "I will not believe it!"

"I thought Litton was engaged to Rosie Yenn?" said Sir Frederic dryly.

"He paid her a great deal of attention," said his wife. "And poor Rosie is very much distressed about this rumor concerning Mrs. Grant. Really it is very painful; and I do not know what to do."

"My dear Maggie, your duty is perfectly plain. You must dismiss Mrs. Grant at once, and find a less attractive and mysterious teacher for your schools. To-day is a whole holiday, and you had better drive up the hill and get rid of a very disagreeable task, unless you would prefer to write to her."

"I think it would be kinder to see her," Lady Oliphant said, with some hesitation. "I suppose it must be done, Fred?"

"There is no alternative, dear. I regret it for your sake and poor Madge's, for the child is sincerely attached to Mrs. Grant; but it cannot be helped. At any rate, the child must not go to the cottage," he added decisively. "I cannot allow that."

"No, certainly not. I am glad Guy and Mr. Ross are here, as their society will amuse her and distract her attention."

Sir Frederic's glance followed his wife's, which had fixed itself on a group standing on the terrace, at me little distance from the house, having just ascended the broad steps leading from the flower garden upon which the breakfast room open. It was a pretty group, and to the other's loving eyes it was a significant one; and, while she smiled, she gazed softly at the thought it conjured up.

Madge, in a pretty skating costume of brown velvet trimmed with ermine, was standing by one of the all marble vases which stood on either side of the steps. Major Stuart, in his heavily furred overcoat, was leaning against the other, looking at her with a smile in his grave eyes. While, close to Madge, standing on one of the steps and looking up at her with an intent tender gaze, was a handsome fair young man, whose face was bronzed and grave, but whose eyes, when they looked at Madge, were very soft and wistful.

"Would you like it, Fred?" Lady Oliphant said softly, as she slipped her hand through her husband's and smilingly indicated the group. "I am afraid he will want to take her from us."

"Which of the two, Maggie—Stuart or Mr. Ross?"

"Mr. Ross, of course," she answered. "Poor Guy will never love another again! He gave his whole heart to her; besides, he is too old and gray for our Madcap."

"He might sober her," said Sir Frederic, smiling.

"Mr. Ross has quite sufficient gratitude for that," Lady Oliphant said. "What a sad story it is!"

"What is? Our Madcap's love affair?"

"Oh, no—I hope not—but the mysterious disappearance of poor Lady Glynn! Guy made every search at the time, as you know; and since Mr. Ross's return, they have begun them again, but with the same result—failure!"

"Yes, poor thing, she is dead," said Sir Frederic musingly. "It is impossible that they should have been successful otherwise. Poor girl; her was a sad life!"

"It was a terrible thing, that murder of her husband! Do you know I think Guy has never got over it?"

"Poor fellow; he has been cruelly treated. Think how many of his friends have turned their backs upon him, and still think him guilty of a dastardly crime! Upon my word, Maggie, I cannot think of it with any calmness!" Sir Frederic continued, with great warmth. "A man so brave and noble and true, with such a reputation as Guy Stuart altogether."

"How charming she is!" the latter said, with a little sigh, as he watched Madge disappearing through the door of the breakfast room.

"Yes," assented Guy rather absently, speaking as if his thoughts were far away.

"Guy, does she ever," Jack began, and then hesitated a little—it was always painful to him to bring that look of sorrow to Guy's face which ways had, to be thought guilty of a crime of which the judge and jury acquitted him! It was strange, was it not," he added more calmly, "that it should all have taken place during our only absence abroad?"

"Yes—very strange. Well, daughter mine," she continued, with a quick change of tone as Madge and her companions came up to the glass door and entered the room, "what is the programme for to-day?"

"We have not quite decided," Madge replied. "I was going to escort Guy and Mr. Ross up to the school, and introduce them to Mrs. Grant; but they say they would rather see her in her official capacity than in private life, so, as to-day is a holiday, we must defer the visit."

"Yes, certainly," said Lady Oliphant hastily. "Why not drive over to Lee Park? Lord Lee has written to papa to say that he has thrown the lake open to skaters, and that he hopes we will go."

"Oh, that will be charming! Papa shall we go this morning? Are you engaged?"

"I am quite at your service, Madge. Mr. Ross, have you forgotten how to skate?"

"I hope not," he answered, smiling. "It used to be a favorite pastime of mine in my boyhood. My sister and I did an immense deal of skating in Germany and Holland," he added, a shade falling over his face.

"Then you will teach me the outdoor way," said Madge, with her pretty imperious grace. "I am longing to be able to skate really well."

"I shall be delighted," said Jack in face brightening with pleasure. "But I have no skates, Miss Oliphant."

"Papa can accommodate you," said Madge, laughing. "Guy, will you come with us?"

"With much pleasure."

"And you will skate?"

"I am afraid I am too old, Madge."

"Too old!" echoed Madge gayly.

"Why, even papa skates?"

"Even papa?" said Sir Frederic, musingly. "And pray is papa such a Methuselah, you madcap?"

"Papa is a dear gray-haired personage, and very handsome still," laughed Madge, looking at him fondly.

"But I am gray-haired too, Madge," said Major Stuart, smiling.

"You're not gray-haired, Guy; you've just a few white hairs beneath your beard. How I wish you would dispense with it!"

"Why? Don't you like my beard?"

"No; I prefer the long mustache you used to wear."

"You don't remember me when I wore a mustache only, Madge?"

"Don't I? What an absurd idea! I remember you perfectly. Well, are you coming with us?"

"I was going to ask Guy to drive us as far as the school house," said Lady Oliphant, smiling. "And, if he'll do so, we will follow you to Lee Park. Am I unreasonable, Guy?"

"Unreasonable to give me a great pleasure?" he answered, smiling. "No, you are always unreasonable where I am concerned, Lady Oliphant."

"Cannot we all go together?" suggested Madge. "I should like to have a peep at Mrs. Grant, mamma."

"We will go together in different vehicles," said Sir Frederic laughing. "I will take the break, and Stuart can drive mamma in the pony carriage. I know what your 'peeps' at Mrs. Grant are, Miss Madge, and I should prefer, if possible, getting to Lee Park in time for luncheon. But we will start together, if you like."

"And you will drive over the hill?" said Madge coaxingly.

"Why, yes—it is the shortest way," said her father, smiling. "I will go and get ready. Madge, wrap up well, dear, a sit will be bitterly cold."

"Madge, you had better put on your sealskin," said Lady Oliphant, as she went away to get ready; and Madge obeyed, leaving Major Stuart and Jack Ross on the terrace together.

"How charming she is!" the latter said, with a little sigh, as he watched Madge disappearing through the door of the breakfast room.

"Yes," assented Guy rather absently, speaking as if his thoughts were far away.

ways had, to be thought guilty of a crime of which the judge and jury acquitted him! It was strange, was it not," he added more calmly, "that it should all have taken place during our only absence abroad?"

"Yes—very strange. Well, daughter mine," she continued, with a quick change of tone as Madge and her companions came up to the glass door and entered the room, "what is the programme for to-day?"

"We have not quite decided," Madge replied. "I was going to escort Guy and Mr. Ross up to the school, and introduce them to Mrs. Grant; but they say they would rather see her in her official capacity than in private life, so, as to-day is a holiday, we must defer the visit."

"Yes, certainly," said Lady Oliphant hastily. "Why not drive over to Lee Park? Lord Lee has written to papa to say that he has thrown the lake open to skaters, and that he hopes we will go."

"Oh, that will be charming! Papa shall we go this morning? Are you engaged?"

"I am quite at your service, Madge. Mr. Ross, have you forgotten how to skate?"

"I hope not," he answered, smiling. "It used to be a favorite pastime of mine in my boyhood. My sister and I did an immense deal of skating in Germany and Holland," he added, a shade falling over his face.

"Then you will teach me the outdoor way," said Madge, with her pretty imperious grace. "I am longing to be able to skate really well."

"I shall be delighted," said Jack in face brightening with pleasure. "But I have no skates, Miss Oliphant."

"Papa can accommodate you," said Madge, laughing. "Guy, will you come with us?"

"With much pleasure."

"And you will skate?"

"I am afraid I am too old, Madge."

"Too old!" echoed Madge gayly.

"Why, even papa skates?"

"Even papa?" said Sir Frederic, musingly. "And pray is papa such a Methuselah, you madcap?"

"Papa is a dear gray-haired personage, and very handsome still," laughed Madge, looking at him fondly.

"But I am gray-haired too, Madge," said Major Stuart, smiling.

"You're not gray-haired, Guy; you've just a few white hairs beneath your beard. How I wish you would dispense with it!"

"Why? Don't you like my beard?"

"No; I prefer the long mustache you used to wear."

"You don't remember me when I wore a mustache only, Madge?"

"Don't I? What an absurd idea! I remember you perfectly. Well, are you coming with us?"

"I was going to ask Guy to drive us as far as the school house," said Lady Oliphant, smiling. "And, if he'll do so, we will follow you to Lee Park. Am I unreasonable, Guy?"

"Unreasonable to give me a great pleasure?" he answered, smiling. "No, you are always unreasonable where I am concerned, Lady Oliphant."

"Cannot we all go together?" suggested Madge. "I should like to have a peep at Mrs. Grant, mamma."

"We will go together in different vehicles," said Sir Frederic laughing. "I will take the break, and Stuart can drive mamma in the pony carriage. I know what your 'peeps' at Mrs. Grant are, Miss Madge, and I should prefer, if possible, getting to Lee Park in time for luncheon. But we will start together, if you like."

"And you will drive over the hill?" said Madge coaxingly.

"Why, yes—it is the shortest way," said her father, smiling. "I will go and get ready. Madge, wrap up well, dear, a sit will be bitterly cold."

"Madge, you had better put on your sealskin," said Lady Oliphant, as she went away to get ready; and Madge obeyed, leaving Major Stuart and Jack Ross on the terrace together.

"How charming she is!" the latter said, with a little sigh, as he watched Madge disappearing through the door of the breakfast room.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The mention of Shirley's name always brought there—"Does she ever remind you of Shirley?"

Guy Stuart started slightly, and waited a minute before he answered.

"Yes," he said gravely. "She has never done so before; but this time it has seemed quite strange how constantly she reminds me of her."

"Ah, then, it is not my imagination!" said Jack Ross eagerly. "I think it was that similarity of manner which attracted me to her at first. Of course there is not the slightest personal resemblance."

"Not the slightest," assented Guy, thinking of Shirley's rare beauty and contrasting it with Madge Oliphant's bright prettiness.

"And that only makes it all the more remarkable," Jack said eagerly. "It seems so very strange that two people who have never met should have the same little tricks of manner and speech."

"Yes; it is very strange."

There was a short silence; then

me little distance from the house, having just ascended the broad steps leading from the flower garden upon which the breakfast room open. It was a pretty group, and to the other's loving eyes it was a significant one; and, while she smiled, she gazed softly at the thought it conjured up.

Madge, in a pretty skating costume of brown velvet trimmed with ermine, was standing by one of the all marble vases which stood on either side of the steps. Major Stuart, in his heavily furred overcoat, was leaning against the other, looking at her with a smile in his grave eyes. While, close to Madge, standing on one of the steps and looking up at her with an intent tender gaze, was a handsome fair young man, whose face was bronzed and grave, but whose eyes, when they looked at Madge, were very soft and wistful.

"Would you like it, Fred?" Lady Oliphant said softly, as she slipped her hand through her husband's and smilingly indicated the group. "I am afraid he will want to take her from us."

"Which of the two, Maggie—Stuart or Mr. Ross?"

"Mr. Ross, of course," she answered. "Poor Guy will never love another again! He gave his whole heart to her; besides, he is too old and gray for our Madcap."

"He might sober her," said Sir Frederic, smiling.

"Mr. Ross has quite sufficient gratitude for that," Lady Oliphant said. "What a sad story it is!"

"What is? Our Madcap's love affair?"

"Oh, no—I hope not—but the mysterious disappearance of poor Lady Glynn! Guy made every search at the time, as you know; and since Mr. Ross's return, they have begun them again, but with the same result—failure!"

"Yes, poor thing, she is dead," said Sir Frederic musingly. "It is impossible that they should have been successful otherwise. Poor girl; her was a sad life!"

"It was a terrible thing, that murder of her husband! Do you know I think Guy has never got over it?"

"Poor fellow; he has been cruelly treated. Think how many of his friends have turned their backs upon him, and still think him guilty of a dastardly crime! Upon my word, Maggie, I cannot think of it with any calmness!" Sir Frederic continued, with great warmth. "A man so brave and noble and true, with such a reputation as Guy Stuart altogether."

FRIENDSHIP.

Everything upon earth
To the sunlight is born;
Every thorn has its rose,
Every night its glad morn.
For the plain God made grass:
For the field made He wheat;
For the air, the swift wing;
For the nest, the retreat.
Every tree has its green;
Every bee its supply;
Every wave its refrain;
Every grave its bright sky.
In this world, where things lean
To their mutual part,
The flower is for the stem,
And the friend for the heart.
—From the French by H. H. Pittman

THE UNATTAINED.

There is a flower we cannot find,
Whose home is on the height,
Some mountain peak of soul or mind,
Above our veiled sight.
The yearning Fancy pictures it,
In day dreams brief and bright,
Where countless rays of glory fit
And nourish it with light.
Our eyes the vision cannot hold,
So beautiful and fleet,
The petals of perpetual gold,
The perfume heavenly sweet.
And this we know the wondrous flower,
By dust of earth unstained,
Was born in some celestial hour
And called The Unattained.

A LOST DAY.

How many tasks I planned at dawn!
I said, "When this fair day has gone
And I sit down at eventide
To count the work my hands have done
Between the rise and set of sun
I shall be fully satisfied."
And when I wove a web of dreams,
And hours slipped by like sunny streams
Unnoted in their rapid flight,
And when I roused myself, at last,
To set, I found the day was past,
And sunset fading into night.
Oh foolish dreams, oh wasted day!
This, and this only, can I say—

"Not one good deed my hands have done."
How much I might have done, had I
But used the hours as they passed by,
But I have squandered every one.
God gives His days for us to use
For some good purpose. If we choose
To squander them, how great our sin!
I shudder, when I think He keeps
A record of them all, and weeps
To see the misspent ones therein.
Oh ye who give to dreams God's hours
A serpent lurks beneath the flowers,
Of idle moods and weak delay;
Rouse! make to-morrow's record fair,
Be this the angel's entry there,
"To-day atones for yesterday."

SILENCE.

Inaudible move day and night,
And noiseless grows the flower;
Silent are pulsing wings of light,
And voiceless fleets the hour.
The moon utters no word when she Walks through the heavens bare;
The stars forever silent flee
And songless gleam through air.
The deepest love is voiceless, too;
Heart sorrow makes us moan;
How still the zephyrs when they woo!
How calm the rose full blown!
The bird winging the evening sky
Flies unward without song;
The crowding years as they pass by
Flow on in mutest throng.
The fishes glide through liquid deep
And never speak a word;
The angels round about us sweep,
And yet no voice is heard.
The highest thoughts no utterance
find,
The holiest hope is dumb,
In silence grows the immortal mind,
And, speechless, deep joys come.
Rapt adoration has no tongue,
No words has holiest prayer,
The loftiest mountain peaks among
Is stillness everywhere.
With sweetest music silence blends,
And silent praise is best;
In silence life begins and ends;
God cannot be expressed.

Lloyd-George's Personality.

Mr. Lloyd-George's vivacity and versatility render him very difficult to portray with fidelity. No sooner
have you finished one phrase than lo!
it is gone, and an entirely different
individual seems to occupy his house.
A slender man, with flowing hair and
a slight stoop; a long frock coat suggestive of the platform manner; a broad white forehead, long lines of
laughter, which play without restraint all over his face; mercurial
sly, riotously twinkling, overflowing
with humor and sentiment and symmetry, a mobile mouth, with a small
moustache sufficiently characteristic to tempt any caricaturist.
He seems always on the watch, like
a cat waiting to spring, and even in repose he remains astonishingly alert.
His frail body dances on wires, and
 he is easily excited; he is full of sen-
siment, but quite capable of controlling it; a man of ideals, yet in no
wise a visionary; a practical man
and something of a philosopher.
His charm is expressed in so many different ways that it is difficult to capture. Few other polite people are so convincingly earnest; few have ever contrived to combine deference
with determination in so conspicuous
a manner. He is the best of listeners, never interrupting, always ready
to pause in an argument and consider an objection.—Herbert Vivian

The "Hundred Best Books."

For most English readers Lord
Avebury's name will for ever remain
associated with the list of the "Hundred Best Books," which he drew up
a decade or so ago. "See Naples and die," says the Italian proverb. Fritolous Englishmen, who found the then Sir John Lubbock's taste too austere for them, have said much the same of
the famous list.
But then there came another Richmond in the field. Lord Acton, the learned Roman Catholic historian and Gladstone's friend, not less severe
and sold in his choice of five score
books than Lord Avebury.
Finally there comes Mr. Clement Shorter, with criticisms of both and
a list of his own.
He has "drawn" Lord Avebury in
the Pall Mall Magazine to utter certain "last words on a famous controversy." And, in the journalistic sense, he has made a yet greater
"draw." For Lord Avebury has been at pains to give a digested précis of his own, Lord Acton's and Mr. Short-
er's lists, which runs as follows:

Naturally enough Lord Avebury,
while admitting that Lord Acton's
books, and—"with a few exceptions"
those of Mr. Shorter, are "good books,
and well worth reading," very confidently submits that they are not
"the best worth reading."
Some of the omissions in Lord Acton's
list must surely have been accidental. Can he really have intended to exclude Homer, Shakespeare, Milton, Scott, Thackeray, Dickens, Tennyson, Bacon, and in classical literature Seneca, Cicero, Plato (except the "Laws"), Plutarch, Tacitus, Livy, Xenophon or Thucydides?
Considering the number of foreign writers in his list, I am surprised that it does not include Moliere, Descartes,
or Thomas a Kempis. Eastern literature he omits altogether.
Lord Avebury reiterates his former declaration concerning the compilation of his list:
"I attempted to pick out the books
most frequently mentioned with approval by those who have referred
directly or indirectly to the pleasure
of reading, and have ventured to include some which, though less frequently mentioned, are special favourites of my own."

Home Mottoes and Sentiments

The custom of having a hearth
motto is a very old one, as is proved
by many of the fireplaces found in Great Britain and which were built in the eighteenth century. They are full of suggested hospitality, which was very real in those days. Of late
there have been mottoes and sentiments of all descriptions framed
ready to be placed in the various rooms of the household, but the carrying of the fireplace, library, and dining-room motto as part of the decorative scheme is just being essayed
in country houses on this side of the water. Over the fireplace either above or below the mantel, is the proper place for placing the motto.
The following are some good sentiments:
East or West, Home is Best.
A man's home is his castle.
Home is the resort of Love, Joy and Peace.
Our house is ever at your service.
You are very welcome.
Take the goods the gods provide
thee.
May we never want a friend.
O, ye fire and heat, praise ye the Lord.
All mine is thine.
If one wants a Latin inscription try
"Deus nobis hanc oia fecit,"
meaning "God hath given this rest to us."
A library done in with wood panel-
ling and fireplace is especially fitted
for a hearth motto, and mottoes
placed over the doors and windows,
large old English lettering being used. These lines are good for such use:
There is an art in reading.
The monuments of vanished
nights.
Infinite riches in a little room.
Some books are to be tasted,
others to be swallowed, and some few
to be chewed and digested.
Over the library at Thebes is the inscription, "Medicine for the Soul."
We are all familiar with the ever-
lovely—
Old wood to burn,
Old friends to trust,
Old books to read.
Mark Twain had over the fireplace
in his Hartford home these lines:
"The ornament of a house is the guests who frequent it." Authors
seem especially fond of the hearth
motto. We find William D. Howells
has "Homemaking hearts are the happiest," and Henry James has adopted the trite Japanese saying—
"Hear no evil, see no evil,
speak no evil." What a splendid motto Dickens's words—"Reflect upon your present blessings, of which
man has many, not on your past misfortunes, of which all men have some"—would make. Most of us
could adopt that with profit.
In the nursery, whether there is a fireplace or not (let us hope there is),
we should find Robert Louis Stevenson's
The world is so full of a number of things,
I'm sure we should all be as happy as
kings.
Also Pope's old couplet so familiar:
Behold the child, by Nature's kindly
law
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw.
Other suitable quotations for the children are "God rest ye, little children," and "A child in the house is a well-spring of pleasure."
Nearly every room may have its
individuality emphasized by a motto,
and in placing these pleasing inscriptions remember that it is not a new
but a very old custom that we are reviving. Over a long buffet built in the side of a dining-room this line
would be good—"Now good digestion
wait on appetite." For a music room try these—"Music is said to be the speech of the angels." "The old-
den soul, of harmony."
In many parts of Bavaria and Saxony a French writer tells us that the welcoming motto is most popular, and
cites the following as examples:
God bless thy coming in and thy
going out.
Let the blessing of God rest upon
this house, and upon all who enter
or leave it.
In an English home at Winchester
we find above the door this charming
sentiment—"Farewell goes out sigh-
ing; welcome ever smiles," and a hall
panel has, "The Lord keep thee in thy going out and coming in." We are all familiar with the word "salve,"
meaning welcome, that is found quite often in the vestibules of hotels or
public houses where meals are served.
It is not an advertisement for salve,
as a man told his wife.
Speaking of the entrance motto reminds us of the Welsh door verse that reads:
Hall, guest, We ask not who thou art,
If friend, we greet thee, hand and
heart;
If stranger, such no longer be;
If foe, our love shall conquer thee.
To read at the house warming
when the new house is all finished
these lines, written some time ago by Jessie S. Frie, called "The New Roof-Tree":
Beneath the friendly lintel of this door
They pause, joy-mute—these two—
and, hand in hand,
They dream of little cares that love
has planned,
And home-comings, when the day's
work is o'er;
They see across the gleaming stairs
and door
Wee, winsome shapes that fit and
frolic, and
Almost their glad, expectant cheeks
are fanned
With baby breaths the rich years hold
in store.
And so love's long-expected heritage
is theirs at last, with eager, trum-
bling hands
They grasp thy warmth and wonder to their eyes
Life's glowing mists, opens page on page—
The sacred book love only understands.
The love of home, that only makes
men wise.

more unanimity on the subject of the color which has the highest claim to beauty. The Greeks sang impartially
of Here the cow-eyed and Athene
with eyes like the sea, so we may imagine that they admired both soft
deep-brown and grey-blue orbs.
"Night harbors ever in her eyes,"
said an Elizabethan lover of his lady,
and Herrick pictures for us very clearly a fair English girl in the verse
that begins "Blue are her eyes as summer skies." Even green which is not the popular choice, has found
at least one poet hardy enough to put himself forward as its champion, and that among a dark-eyed race. It is the author of the "Spanish Student,"
who speaks of "soft emerald eyes."
But though there may be any number of different opinions as to the most beautiful color for eyes, there is
none as to certain other characteristics. They must be bright and clear,
and given these qualities all eyes may be beautiful. This fortunately is a matter within the power of each one of us, since it depends mainly on our bodily health and the treatment we mete out to our eyes. Apart from the question of appearance, there is that of the sight itself, and unless we keep the eyes in good condition we shall certainly not get their best service from them. In other words if these windows of the soul are not kept bright and shining, how can the brain behind them see through?
Have you ever thought what our
eyes have to do all through our waking hours? How they are recording and passing to the brain the correct
image of everything that comes within their ken? To do this there is a most delicate and complex system of nerves and muscles which adapt themselves with lightning rapidity to every change of distance. We look
now at a crag or a building a quarter
of a mile away, and the next instant
at a page of small print in our hand.
In a way these changes are good for
our eyes, especially does it rest them
to look at distant objects, and those
whose work compels them to read,
write or sew for many hours at a
time will do well to lose no opportunity of letting their eyes roam idly
over open country. If there is no chance of this, cultivate the habit of
not always observing every detail of the things which surround you. There is no danger in using the eye even to the point of fatigue provided it gets a period of rest in which to recuperate.

A useful little case to lay dollies

board, round or square, and a little

Birth Stones and What They Mean.

(Concluded.)
For May the accepted gem is the
emerald, of the same general composition, as the aquamarine. The best specimens are mined at Muscovy, Columbia, South America. It is believed to be a strengthening of the eye.
Ancients never tired of looking at their emerald rings. Nero had an emerald, the lens made of emerald,
through which he viewed the mortal
combat of the gladiators. This gem discovers false friends, and insures
true love.
For June is the pearl, the queen of all gems. It is composed of lime.
From the most remote times, it was accepted as the richest of gifts. The olden Chinese used them as medicine
for diseases of the blood. Cleopatra,
in order to show her contempt for
money and to outshine others in her
lavish wastefulness, for money in those days of Oriental splendour, tore
off one of her magnificent large pearl
earrings, dissolved and swallowed it.
That pair of pearls was said to be worth at that time $800,000. Perhaps the present value would be $200,000. The Romans wore pearls
even on their shoes.
For July is the glowing ruby or red sapphire. It denotes love or a loving disposition. An old belief was that this gem caused one to discover presence of poisons, warned the wearer
of impending danger by darkening its color, and when the evil presence had passed resumed its bright red color.
For August is Sardonius, the 11th
stone on the breastplate of the high priest. The man wearing this gem will overcome all contentions. It insures long life, health and prosperity
confering felicity, is a cure for epilep-
sy, and causes strife and melancholy
to depart.
For September is the ever popular sapphire. It has many virtues. It distinguishes fires, corrects bad manners of the wearer, insures freedom
from evil passions, and sadness of the mind. It also denotes repentance.
For October is the wondrous opal.
This beautiful gem when extracted
from the damp earth is quite soft and destitute of life, but the air and sun
give it various degrees of color an beauty. The opal, with fire-like flames of sulphur, was more esteemed to the Romans than all other
gems, and Nonesius, the Roman Senator, was sent into exile because he refused to give up to Marcus Antonius a ring containing an opal of great
size, valued at $550,000.
For November the single standard
is topaz, called in Aaron's breast
plate Pithah, and named from the island of Topazian, supposed to be the Red Sea. These stones are often colored artificially by covering with
a bark of a certain tree, igniting the bark, and allowing it to smoulder in a warm oven. The pink topaz is almost universally conceded to be colored artificially by heat. This gem is said to quench the thirst if held under the tongue.
For December is the heavenly blu-torquoise. Von Helmsuth said, "Who ever wears this gem so that its glowing touches the skin will be protected and saved from injury by falling from a great height." It is a

Concerning the Ocean.

The oceans occupy three-fourths of the surface of the earth. A mile own in the sea the water has a
resure of a ton to every square
inch.
If a box six feet deep were filled
with sea water, which was then allowed to evaporate, there would be two cubes of salt left in the bottom of the
box. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of salt four hundred and
eighty feet thick covering the bottom,
in case all the water should evapora-
te. In many places, especially in the north, the water freezes from the bottom upward.
Waves are deceptive things. To look at them one would gather the impression that the whole water traveller stays in the same place, but the motion goes on. In great storms
waves are sometimes forty feet high,
and their crests travel fifty miles an hour. The base of a wave the distance from valley to valley is usually considered as being fifteen times the height of the wave. Therefore a wave twenty-five feet high would have a base extending three hundred and seventy-five feet.
The force of waves breaking on the
shore is seventeen tons to the square
inch.

Nature Notes.

Camels can not swim.
The spider eats daily twenty-six
times his own weight.
The chiton, a mollusk, has 11,000
separate eyes.
A bee visits 3,500,000 flowers in gathering one pound of honey.
The green finch is the first bird to get up in the morning. His hour is 1.30.
The skin of the whalebone whale,
boiled to a jelly, is a favorite dish of Danish epicures.
The bon-constrictor, Buckland, the
naturalist, declares, tastes like veal,
only finer and sweeter.
The highest leap ever made by a
horse was 7 feet 8 inches, a leap made in 1792 in London by Black Bess, a thoroughbred.
The South Sea Island fisherman
throws into the water a poison extracted from a certain bark. The fish stupefied, at once came to the surface, and are gathered in by hand.
The flesh is quite as wholesome as though they had been netted.

How Highly do you Value Your Eyes?

More pretty things have been said
about the eyes than any other feature of the loveliest face. They have been called the windows of the soul, they have been likened to the stars for brightness, to a well for untroubled
calm, to the flowers, and I know not what beside. No poet but has had some praise for the eyes of his divinity
and the lover, who is for the time
being something akin to a poet, though
he may not express himself in verse,
is rarely at a loss for some comparison which is none the worse for not
being exactly original.
And there has never been any

The Uselessness of Lies.

Please get it right out of your minds
at once that it is necessary to speak untruths to be tactful. A liar is never tactful. His or her methods are too
crude, and generally pan out unsatisfactorily.
It is tactful to be pleasant. If a customer in a shop is rough or rude
it is better to soothe them than to be rude in return. You are much more likely to effect a sale. In intercourse
with the other girls, use tact.
Office girls also need to cultivate tact. I have known young lady clerks and typists greet the caller
with an assurance that the principal
will not see him, even before they have taken the trouble to find out.
They hurl this information at the
unlucky one's head in a snappy voice.
It would be much better to be pleasant and find out the business of the caller, and then tactfully suggest he should call again if her employer be busy.—Nellie Glasco Wicks in "Chat."

CAPT. SAUNDERS INAUGURATES NIGHT SCHOOL FOR APPRENTICES.

Capt. Saunders has recently inaugurated night classes in mechanical drawing, marine engineering and many other problems of naval architecture for the apprentices of the Royal Nfld. Co. Through the courtesy of Mr. R. G. Reid the ladies' waiting room of the railway station has been placed at his disposal, where two sessions a week will be held. The course of lessons will deal with problems that every day confront those interested in marine engineering, and the solution of the great problems will be freely discussed and illustrated by blackboard drawings. The first session was held last night and eighteen enthusiastic young lads were in attendance. The enterprise is a commendable one, and His Excellency has expressed his appreciation of the movement in a personal letter to Capt. Saunders, congratulating him and expressing the hope that this project would be the nucleus of an organized technical institute wherein our lads could receive practical courses in all branches of marine engineering, and naval architecture. Quite recently the apprentices of the Reids' shops competed for two prizes, the first for the best working drawing of a steamer such as the Paterina, and the second for the correct solution of a mathematical problem in marine engineering. The winner of the first was Master George Gushue, aged 17, and the second prize was won by Master W. McGittigan, aged 15. Both papers, which were shown to a Telegram representative to-day, are truly creditable and only goes to show the talent that lie in our Colony needing development from which, by the establishment of schools for Technical Education, Newfoundland would take her place in engineering with any country of the world.

Wolves Attack Skiing Party.

Vienna, February 9.—A ski party from Lemberg were held up by wolves in the Carpathian Mountains throughout Friday night. Their route lay through the forest, and darkness overtook them before they reached their destination. The wolves followed them at a distance during the afternoon, and, emboldened by the darkness, endeavored to rush the last man in the party. The skiing party decided that it would not be safe to go any further, and halted beneath a high rock. Then they made a fence by sticking their skis into the snow. The party had revolvers and electric lamps, and were able to defend themselves against the attacks of the wolves, killing several of them. When daylight came the party escaped.

Earl of Derby Will Not Sell.

London, February 9.—The Earl of Derby has declined to sell to Baron de Forest his Bootle estate in the suburbs of Liverpool, as at one time appeared likely, on the ground that the Baron had wilfully misrepresented the terms of his offer. Recently in a contribution to the Lands Inquiry Committee's report, Baron de Forest cited the Bootle estate of the Earl of Derby as a striking example of unearned increment. The property, which was purchased in 1724 for $35,000, he estimated to be now valued at between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. Lord Derby declared that the estimates were grossly excessive and said he would sell the Bootle estate to Baron de Forest for $7,500,000.

THE EAGLE'S NEST.

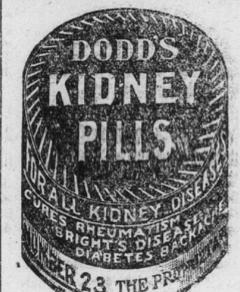

All can enjoy themselves at the Casino Theatre, T. A. Hall, on Shrove Tuesday night. The production of the "Eagle's Nest" by Mr. J. J. O'Grady's talented troupe will be one of the finest Western dramas produced here. Full of excitement and interest it shows in a most realistic manner the trials and troubles of life on the Western frontier and teaches us how the roughest and most desperate men are won over by the kindness of women and that though for a time the villain by his underhand methods, is successful yet that such success is only passing and that right wins out in the end. The C. C. C. Band will be present and will play "Luxembourg" waltz, and "The Little Cafe," and a host of other excellent selections. Tickets are at the Atlantic Bookstore. Go get them.

Some Pertinent Questions

Have you $100 that is not in use? Or can you save $10 a month?
If you can answer "yes" to either of these questions, can you give a good reason why that money should not be put away where it will earn 6 p.c. or better, instead of 3 p.c.—and still be safe?
At present prices we advise you to place your money in the 6 p.c. Perpetual Debenture Stock of the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Company, which yields 6 1/2 p.c., or in Stanfield's Limited 6 p.c. Bonds, which yield 6 p.c.
In our opinion, all three of these excellent securities sell for less than their degree of safety warrant. And they are in the convenient $100 size.

Soldier Insults Wife of Prince.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—The story is current that a sentry at an unfrequented post outside the royal palace at Brunswick saw an attractive young woman walking alone and whistled and beckoned to her. Not being able to attract her attention the sentry called out in a loud voice, "Come over and have a chat with me."
The young woman paid no attention and entered the palace. Prince Ernst Duke of Brunswick, who married the Kaiser's daughter some time ago, summoned the soldier a little while afterwards and asked him what he meant by insulting a lady in the palace grounds. The soldier did not deny the charge but he tendered a humble apology, whereupon the Duke said: "I will overlook it this time, as it was only my wife, but if it had been any other lady you would be severely punished."

Ultra Violet Rays

Explosive Torpedoes.
Florence, Italy, Feb. 12.—A successful experiment of exploding torpedoes from a long distance by means of the ultra violet rays discovered by Guilio Ulivi, the Italian inventor, was carried out here to-day. Signor Ulivi had handed over his secret to the Italian government and preparations were made for an experiment, details of which were kept as much as possible from public knowledge. It became known, however, that Admiral Pietro Formentini had placed in the River Arno two torpedoes, in the way of smokeless gunpowder and two others with black gunpowder. The ultra violet ray apparatus was posted on the tower of the Palazzo Cap Pont, about two miles away, where Signor Ulivi waited the signal from the naval officers in charge of the experiment. When the signal was given, the apparatus was put into operation and in less than three minutes all four torpedoes exploded.

2 SONGS BY VOCALIST AT THE CRESCENT.

The Crescent Picture Palace is keeping with the times of progress. The pictures shown during the week were all that could be desired. The big feature to-day and yesterday entitled "The Indian's Secret" was certainly a feature of merit and one of the best of its kind ever seen here. It was well received by the large audiences that witnessed it during the afternoon and night. The other three pictures were excellent and David Parks was particularly good. On next Monday and Tuesday a lengthy programme of big pictures, all features, and David Parks will sing two songs. See the evening papers for full particulars and don't miss it.

Tickets are selling at the Atlantic Bookstore for the "Eagle's Nest" in aid of C. C. C. at the Casino Theatre, Tuesday next.—11

MINARD'S LINIMENT CO. LIMITED.

Some time ago I had a bad attack of Quinsy which laid me up for two weeks and cost a lot of money. Finding the lump again forming in my throat, I bathed freely with MINARD'S LINIMENT, and entering a cloth with the liniment left it on all night. Next morning the swelling was gone and I attributed the warfare off of an attack of Quinsy to the free use of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Obituary.

MR. P. MALONE.—After a prolonged illness there passed away this morning at his residence, Laketown Avenue, Mr. Patrick Malone, who was one of the best known cabinet men in the city. For a considerable time he had been suffering from cancer of the stomach, and despite the attendance of physicians both here and abroad he succumbed to the ailment. Deceased is survived by a widow and five children, besides a large circle of relatives and friends, to all of whom the Telegram extends its sympathy.

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, Feb. 20. Lord Provost Stevenson of Glasgow, announced yesterday to the City Council that the King and Queen would visit Glasgow in July.

GLASGOW, Feb. 20. Seven workmen were killed, a large number injured, and many buildings destroyed to-day, by an explosion at the Nobel gunpowder works.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. Secretary of State Bryan was advised to-day of the death of W. S. Benton, an English ranch owner in Mexico, who was recently reported to be in the hands of rebels. No details were given.

LONDON, Feb. 20. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to-day forwarded to Premier Asquith a petition signed by prominent British authorities, urging British participation in the Panama-Pacific Exhibition at San Francisco in 1915.

BREMEN, Feb. 20. The large fishing steamer Forelle which left Glastenunde in the middle of December for Iceland, and with her entire crew of thirteen men according to despatches received here to-day. The Forelle had been reported missing, and the search for her began last month.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20. A cable from London says that despatch to the Chronicle from Point Barrow, Alaska, from explorer Stefansson, gives further details of the disappearance of the Karluk. Though far from sanguine that the Karluk will be saved, Stefansson has little doubt as to the ultimate safety of those on board.

MADRID, Feb. 20. Stories of the shooting to death of 75 Spaniards and the burial alive of a number of others, by Mexican rebels at Torreon, are published in most of the newspapers in Madrid and the provinces to-day. The incidents are related by passengers aboard the Spanish steamer Antonio Lopez, which sailed from Vera Cruz on Jan. 27th, on her arrival at Cadiz.

LONDON, Feb. 20. The Government has definitely decided not to take any part in the new Marconi committee of enquiry set up by the House of Lords, and will not nominate any members to serve on it. If the new committee should ask the Commons to permit

At the House

Petitions were presented by Mr. Parsons from St. George's, for a road; by Mr. Stone, from Port Rexton, for a road and dredge; by Mr. Devereaux from Arnold's Cove, for a road; by Mr. Hickman, from Northern Bay, for various public works.

Mr. Cliff presented a petition from the inhabitants of Tilt Cove, Caplin Cove and Shoo Cove, asking for money to repair a bridge which is badly in need of repairs and unsafe for pedestrians to pass over. He sympathized with the member who presented the last petition, and pointed out that the roads at Twillingate were badly in need of repairs and that the allocation was not enough for their upkeep. He also pointed out that seven or eight thousand dollars allocated for the District of Twillingate had been transferred to the Postal Telegraphs department for the purpose of constructing the cable at Exploits and Little Bay Islands. He hoped that the amount referred to would be refunded for the purpose of erecting roads and bridges.

PROTEST RECORDED.
Mr. Kent asked again that the vote for Agriculture and Mines be deferred, under the departmental Act, until a Minister of Agriculture was appointed to take his place in the House, and moved the following amendment:

"That the said resolution be not read a second time until a Minister of Agriculture and Mines shall have been appointed by the Governor in Council pursuant to the Departmental Act of 1898, either permanently or under an acting appointment, and shall have taken his seat in this House."
Mr. Cliff seconded the amendment. He thought the best evidence of which this vote should not pass until a Minister of Agriculture and Mines was appointed, was the exhibition that occurred in the House the previous afternoon and that the proper person should come and take charge of the vote for that department as they should not be left in the hands of one who is not familiar with them. The amendment was put and lost on a party vote.

COME-BY-CHANCE STATION.
The House then went into Committee on Supply.

Mr. Lloyd referred to the wretched condition of the connecting road to Come-By-Chance, and also expressed his views regarding the lack of passenger and freight accommodation to Come-By-Chance and other stations on this section.

Mr. Devereaux and Mr. Stone agreed with the remarks of the hon. member for Trinity, emphasized the disgraceful condition of the connecting road and the poor accommodation at the stations mentioned, and hoped that remedial measures would be adopted by the Government.

The Prime Minister also spoke of the matter, and promised that full enquiries would be made and that the Government will give the matter its most careful consideration.

DEBATE ON FISHERY.

Mr. Coaker gave a practical and interesting speech on the fisheries in general, though he dealt mainly with lobster. He reviewed the Inspector Dea's report, some of it he endorsed but there was a lot of stuff in it which would not swallow. He believed the best way to preserve the lobster fishery would be to have a close season in sections of the Island. It would be a dangerous proceeding to close down the whole country. He showed how the Japanese crab was competing with our lobster in the German market and gave the assurance that if we ever lose the market we will never get it back. He said the law respecting the catching of female lobsters was impossible to be carried out. He suggested that if the Government paid the fishermen 15¢ for every egg-bearing lobster, instead of 5¢, which they get now, it would have the effect of protecting the fishery. He went on to point out that the credit system was responsible for our poor curing of fish. He believed that this matter should be controlled by a Commission consisting of Board of Trade members, fishermen and the Minister of Fisheries. He thought that the head of that department should be one of the ablest men in the Colony paid at about $5,000 to work 10 hours a day.

Mr. Jennings—He said the lobster fishery was retrograding but it was a difficult matter to effect a remedy. There had been a great waste in the lobster fishery to begin with, and this would be met with a proper and competent system of wardens, who at present are of no earthly use, according to the report of Inspector Dea. He spoke on the herring fishery.

Mr. Treggett asked if there was any such person as a Fishery Warden. He had been lobster fishing for 22 years but never met a warden on his factory. It was a step in the proper direction, he thought, to protect the lobster fishery, but if the Government

Good-Bye, Old Backache

Nerviline Will Fix You!

Stiffness is Rubbed Right Out Every Sign of Pain Disappears.

See whiz—think of it! No more stomach dosing necessary to cure your lame back. Every trace of lameness, every bit of stiffness, every sign of weakness in the back's muscles can be rubbed away for all time to come by good old "Nerviline."

No other liniment can do the work so quickly, can penetrate so deeply, can bring ease and comfort to the back-wearer sufferer as Nerviline invariably does.

Backache isn't the only malady Nerviline is quick to cure. For jumping scaldica you would do no far to find relief so speedy as Nerviline gives. For chronic rheumatism there are pain-destroying properties in Nerviline that give it first rank. The way it limbers up a stiff joint and takes soreness out of strained or rheumatic muscles is simply a wonder.

If you have any ache or pain anywhere, if you have a sore back, a stiff neck, a stiff joint, a strained muscle—if you have lumbago, congested chest or sore throat, just try Nerviline. Rub it on plentifully—it won't blister, it can't do anything but cure you quickly. The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical, of course, but you can, from any dealer, also get the 25c. small size of Nerviline, the king of all pain-relieving remedies.

SEALING BILL.

Mr. Higgins moved an amendment which permits cooks to do other work.

Mr. Young supported the amendment, thought the clause respecting cooks should be stricken out altogether. He spoke from his own experience and said it would be an impossibility to prevent cooks from handling seals when occasion required.

The Finance Minister gave notice that he would introduce the Budget on Wednesday next. After notices of question were given by Opposition members the House adjourned until Monday.

Takes Off Dandruff

Hair Stops Falling

Girls! Try this! Makes hair thick, glossy, fluffy, beautiful—No more itching scalp.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but that will please you most will be that a few weeks' use, when you see your hair, fine and downy at first—now it is really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately outlasts the beauty of your hair. No interference how dull, faded, brittle and craggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—our hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

Sea vs Land Industries.

Dominion Debating Club in Session. A very interesting debate on Bell Island was recently held by the Dominion Boat Club of that place, when the following Resolution was debated by the members of that organization: "Resolved that the Fisheries are a greater source of benefit to Newfoundland than her Land Resources." Messrs. J. M. Greene and F. F. Jardine were the leaders, Mr. Jardine upholding the negative and Mr. Greene the affirmative, while Messrs. Wm. Reader and Wm. Pryde were also heard in favor of the negative, and Messrs. Matthew Dunne and Samuel Lodge in support of the Fisheries. Logical and oratorical speeches were made by both sides, who showed a good grasp of the subject, and showed that considerable debating talent was on the island. At the close of the debate, Messrs. Greene and Jardine again addressed the audience, summing up their respective cases. On a vote being taken it was found that the upholders of the affirmative were declared the winners. Mr. McDonald, President of the Club, presided during the evening.

All the wooden sealing ships that are going to prosecute in the Gulf are now on the north side of the harbour taking supplies.

The Lloydseyn will not engage in the hunt this year. She is now in commission on the other side of the water.

The first contingent of sealers from the outports will come here by train during the coming week. The majority of the crews for the Gulf fleet will reach the city on Saturday next.

Healthy and Unhealthy Lighting.

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitalize, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:—

Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson B. Harry.

He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old condition could deny the improvement that has taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Duffield, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a ball which, in the old days, was lighted by gas, and in which large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or wit pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which, with the march of civilization, had its illuminating changed from gas to electricity, the latter being employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with it result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of astonishment.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich. —nov.8,11

The Pantomime.

A good big house again last night to see the Ragtime Pantomime. On Monday there will be a complete change, when Niobe, The Goddess of Tears will be presented; this will be one big laugh. It will be something different to anything ever presented at Rossleys; everybody will delight in this the last pantomime of the season. There will be a great picture season at Rossleys, for he has secured some of the very finest pictures that are on the market, and never seen here before, bought outright for Rossleys Theatre.

Secretary Bryan.

Tells Senate Committee He Approves of $150,000 Vote for Anglo-American Centenary.

Washington, Feb. 11.—Secretary of State Bryan gave his unqualified endorsement for government expenditures in the cause of international peace before the house foreign affairs committee to-day.

Representative Smith, of New York asked for the secretary's attitude toward the bill to appropriate $150,000 for celebrating the centennial anniversary of peace between the United States and Great Britain.

Prince of Wales to Tour

The British Empire, Returning by Way of Canada.

London, Feb. 12.—Preliminary plans have been drafted for the tour of the British Empire to be made by the Prince of Wales in 1915, and which is to include a visit to the United States on the return journey. It is said in official circles to be possible that Prince Albert, the second son of King George, may accompany the Prince of Wales.

As at present arranged the Prince will go first to Australia and New Zealand, returning to England by way of Canada and the United States.

A Blow to Fancy Prices.

As revolutionary as wireless telegraphy is the seamless, rivetless, boltless, jointless Steel Vertical Filing Cabinet now on the market. Here is the actual construction of what every designer of steel furniture has dreamed of producing—a solid one-piece cabinet without a break or joint in it. This perfection has been brought about in the "Globe-Wernicke" factories by electric spot-welding of all joining and overlapping surfaces and corners. There's more; the channels that hold the noiseless rolling devices for the drawers are electrically welded solidly to the sides. The more you work these drawers the more perfect is the running. And finally the price—this flawless Steel Cabinet, enduring as Time, is offered by the "Globe-Wernicke Co." at the same price as the highest grade cabinets that are made of wood! Talk with PERCIE JOHNSON about this—his price is going to interest you.

COATE'S MILLIONS.

In Two Years Five Have Died, Leaving Over $40,000,000.

London, Feb. 7.—The romantic career of the Coates family, the three-millionaires, has been running to its end with the death of no fewer than five members during the past two years. Each member has left a large fortune through which the British Exchequer has been enriched by a total of some $30,000,000.

The death of James Coates in March, 1912, left a fortune of nearly $10,000,000 without any provision for its disposition; six months later Archibald Coates passed away, leaving a sum of nearly $7,000,000; in January, 1913, Sir James Coates died, leaving nearly $9,000,000 and a few weeks later P. M. Coates, a son of Sir James, died, leaving 1,000,000. The fifth death, which was that of Peter Coates in September last left another fortune of $12,000,000 making the total fortune of the deceased over $40,000,000.

None of the Coates left anything to charity, but during their lifetime the dead been generous givers.

1,000 TREATED TO A BATH

Excelsiors Marched into Bath House by U. S. Troops.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 9.—Five thousand unbathed Mexicans were treated to a bath last night at the Fort Bliss military reservation. In squads of 25 the guard of armed American soldiers, they were marched into the house, made to strip and submit to a cleansing.

AFRAID TO EAT

Girl Starving on Poorly Selected Food.

"Several years ago I was actually starving," writes a girl, "yet dared not eat for fear of the consequences. I had suffered indigestion from overwork, irregular meals and improper food, until at last my stomach became so weak I could eat scarcely any food without distress.

"Many kinds of food were tried, all with the same discouraging effects. I steadily lost health and strength, until I was but a wreck of my former self. Having heard of Grape-Nuts and its great merits, I purchased a package, but with little hope that it would help me—I was so discouraged.

"I found it not only appetizing but that I could eat it as I liked and that it satisfied the craving for food without causing distress, and if I may use the expression, 'it filled the bill.'"

"For months Grape-Nuts was my principle article of diet. I felt from the very first that I had found the right way to health and happiness, and my anticipations were fully realized.

"With its continued use I regained my usual health and strength. Today I am well and can eat anything I like, yet Grape-Nuts food forms a part of my bill of fare."

There is No Secret

About the Manufacture of

MOLASSINE MEAL!

Molasses has been known to be of value as a food for animals for 100 years; but molasses contains potash salts, which are often dangerous and are apt to cause diarrhoea, colic and death.

In "MOLASSINE MEAL" this risk is avoided. The special kind of moss used in "MOLASSINE MEAL" contains an acid which naturalizes the potash salts in the molasses, thereby rendering it not only harmless, but the best food known. "MOLASSINE MEAL" is the only feed claimed to have therapeutic properties.
