Successfully Nibbling at the German Lines.

WAR REVIEW.

While the Serbs and their French Allies are warring with the Bulgars some of the strongest positions they have held in Macedonia for the past two years, Marshal Foch's forces are nibbling successfully at the German lines on the Western front in the face of more determined resistance. The Near East furnishes the most sensational news of the day, however. The offensive which has been launched there seems not only the most successful but the most pretentious in many months. It appears probable that a further advance will necessitate the recall of the Bulgarian divisions which have been loaned to Emperor William to bolster the Teutonic resistance in France and Flanders. An official Serbian report declares that the reconstituted army of the battered but not beaten little Kingdom has taken not less than 3,000 prisoners, but an important part of cannon. The Bulgarians admit having retired, but declare the attack has been checked to the north of Gradeshka. There is nothing to indicate, however, that the advance of the Serbians and French has been definitely tied up. The lull in the fighting in the west is regarded by military critics as merely the prelude of further heavy blows at the foe by the British, American and French armies. The British have advanced their line slightly several points. They are making steady progress in the investment of St. Quentin, a difficult task, under most favorable conditions. General Petain's veterans are forging ahead slowly but surely in their grim and desperate struggle for the St. Gobain forest which the Germans have been ordered to hold at all costs. Not only is the post a natural citadel, but the Teutons have fortified it in every way their ingenuity could devise. Notwithstanding the difficulty of their task, however, the French are moving on, taking prisoners as they go. On the American front the past twenty-four hours have been the quietest since General Pershing's command launched the irresistible drive against the St. Mihiel salient. There are indications that the Germans intend to retire behind the Hindenburg line in this sector. They are burning villages along the Moselle and in other sections. This procedure is usually preliminary to a retreat. Another victory has been recorded for the British, American and French on the newly constituted eastern front. Detachments of the Allies have routed Bolsheviki forces in the vicinity of Archangel, and it is reported many of the Red Guards officers went over to the Allies when their men fled in panic. The Austrian peace note appears already to have become almost ancient history. The blunt and unmistakable refusal of President Wilson to parley with the Central Powers except upon the terms he previously had done, seems to have voiced the sentiments of the Entente. They are likely to let the reply of the United States suffice for all, as they did in the case of the Papal peace proposal.

ON THE MACEDONIAN FRONT.

LONDON, Sept. 17. Serbian and French troops continue the offensive in Macedonia and have progressed more than five miles, according to a Serbian official statement received here. The advancing allies have occupied an important series of ridges. The allied troops have captured more than three thousand prisoners and twenty-four guns. Their casualties have been slight. The allies are moving forward on a front of more than twelve miles and have taken the village of Gradeshka, twenty miles east of Monastir. A Yugoslav division is fighting with the Serbians and French and have reached Kockak, the most important position in the region of the offensive.

POSITIONS IMPROVED.

LONDON, Sept. 17. (Official).—Our troops made progress yesterday in the direction of Leverguier, northwest of St. Quentin. We improved our positions slightly yesterday and during the night northwest of Halluch between Lens and LaBasse and northeast of Neuve Chapelle.

BRITISH GAIN GROUND.

LONDON, Sept. 17. The British gained ground to-day in the neighborhood of Holmon Village, north of St. Quentin, according to Field Marshal Haig's report to-night.

BURNING THE TOWNS.

AMERICAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN LORRAINE, Sept. 18. In addition to the towns along the Moselle which would fall into American hands should the enemy have to withdraw behind the Hindenburg line, and which he is burning, the towns of Donmartin, LeChaussee and Lachaux both on the Hindenburg line, are in flames. Other fires have been started by the Germans. Evidence is accumulating that the enemy intends withdrawing behind the Hindenburg line in Lorraine if he is pressed any further. He is burning towns along the Moselle.

SUPPRESSING AMERICAN VICTORY.

LONDON, Sept. 17. (Reuter's).—Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters in the field telegraphs under to-day's date: During the past twenty-four hours 1301 prisoners have been captured by our troops. There is plenty of evidence that the enemy is anticipating further concerted attacks at various places. A captured order points out that the Allies must now be expected to strike heavy blows and bewails lack of assault troops as rendering any prospect of successful counter-attacks or effective resistance impossible. Prisoners recently captured say that every effort has been made to suppress all news of the American success at St. Mihiel, concerning which alarming rumors prevail. The general impression seems to be that the American victory has been so overwhelming that the German army command does not admit the facts.

Open Every Night.

Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, will be open every night till 9.30. DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, Wholesale and Retail Chemists and Druggists, St. John's, Nfld.

AERIAL ACTIVITY.

PARIS, Sept. 16. In aerial fighting Sunday, French aviators destroyed twelve German airplanes and set on fire sixteen captive balloons, says the statement on aviation activities issued by the war office to-night. Sunday night a bombing squadron dropped forty-six tons of bombs on military targets behind the German lines from Laon to Metz.

BULGARIANS FOR THE WESTERN FRONT.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 17. Bulgarian regiments have arrived at Maubege to co-operate with the German troops on the western front according to the Echo Belge.

REPLY TO AUSTRIA.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. The reply of the American Government, rejecting the proposal of Austria-Hungary for a secret and non-binding discussion of peace terms, was delivered late to-day to the Swiss Legation for transmission to Vienna.

GERMANY GETS NOTHING BACK.

LONDON, Sept. 17. In his address to-day voicing his personal views that such a conference as Austria-Hungary suggested in its peace note would be useless, Foreign Secretary Balfour expressed his opposition to the return to Germany of her naval bases in various parts of the world. The text of this portion of Mr. Balfour's speech received to-day shows that the Foreign Secretary went somewhat further in his discussion of the subject of Germany's colonies than the first reports of the address indicated. "Germany," said Mr. Balfour, "is going to insist upon the return of her colonies. Here again is a point upon which there can be no misunderstanding. Germany stands on one side and we on the other. I say it is impossible to conceive that any conversations can bridge over a difference so deep, or to restore to the power of Germany these unhappy populations she missed, or give back to Germany control over those naval bases which can give her control of the means of communication not only between the British Empire, but between the civilized world."

KILLED IN ACTION.

LONDON, Sept. 17. Lord Alexander Thynn, member of the House for Bath since 1896, was killed in action last Sunday. Lord Alexander George was the son of the fourth Marquis of Bath and was born

LONDON, Sept. 16. Field Marshal Haig to-day issued a special order of the day for the information of British troops in France. It reads:—"To General Pershing, Sept. 16, 1918, Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces.—All ranks of the British Army in France welcome with unbounded admiration and pleasure the victory which attended the initial offensive of the great American armies, under your personal command. I beg of you to accept and convey to all ranks my best congratulations and those of all ranks of the British armies under my command."

A MURDERER'S CONFESSION.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17. Charles E. Chapin, city editor of the New York "World," famous for the skill with which he directed his reporters in the solution of murder mysteries, to-day, in a police station, told the story of how he killed his own wife. Chapin, yesterday, shot and killed her in the Hotel Cumberland, and to-day surrendered himself to the police, after falling to carry out plans to end his own life. Smoking a cigar, and continually pressing his hands on his head, he said that he had been driven to the deed through desperation caused by the demands of his creditors. Approach of a policeman, the editor declared, prevented his suicide in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, where he went after shooting his wife. Chapin asserted that he committed the murder immediately upon arising yesterday morning while his wife slept. He said he tried first to shoot her with a mazzarine revolver, but it failed to discharge. He then brought out a police pistol that had been presented him by former Police Commissioner Waldo, and fired the fatal shot. After breakfast and a shave, the editor continued, he went to the Park, where he had planned to carry out the second chapter of the tragedy. He wandered about through the day and night, he declared, and this morning reading the newspaper account of his wife's death and his disappearance, gave himself up. Chapin, who is 59 years of age, asserted that he intended to commit suicide four years ago, but he put it off with the hope that he would be able to meet his obligations. Having lost an inheritance in speculation, he said he had borrowed money from friends, who were constantly pressing him for payment. District Attorney Swann, who later talked with Chapin, said he believed the editor was mentally deranged.

The Man With the Hoe

Hoeing is a severe strain on the back. It calls into play muscles not used much in lifting or in other kinds of farm work. If you have a weak back you cannot stand much hoeing unless you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to set the kidney's right and remove the cause of weakness and lameness of the back. Just try one pill a dose at bed time and see how much better you will feel.

Largest Lake.

Large Body of Fresh Water That Depth Cannot Be Measured. Portland, Ore.—A lake known as the "Great Sunken Lake" is reported to be the deepest lake in this country, and perhaps in the whole world. Located in the valley of the Cascade Mountains, about seventy miles north of Jacksonville, Ore., this lake, which is about fifteen miles long and four miles wide, is so deep that its depth cannot be measured. It is situated so far below the crest of the mountains that winds cannot reach it, and its surface is like a sheet of glass. It is sometimes called the "Lake of Mystery."

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 18, 1918.

Time To Stop It.

The "News" this morning draws attention to the extent to which the evil has grown of open and undisguised trading in certain poisons which among a depraved section of the community have taken the place of the prohibited liquors.

Our readers will remember how we persisted, without the slightest effect, against the unnecessarily ineffectual wording of the so-called amending act of last year, which we objected would produce the very state of things that now exists, to the disgrace of the whole community.

Parliament was to leave alone the sale of such concoctions as Florida water, essence of lemon and the like, so as not to interfere with their use for legitimate purposes, the Act does in the clearest possible manner prohibit it; yet there is not the slightest attempt made to make the prohibition effective.

Degrading and pernicious as are the effects of this rapidly increasing evil, they are not to be attributed to the state of morals and decency of the community, on which they are such a reflection, the same thing would be seen in other cities and societies if the effective checks imposed there were removed.

When you want something in a hurry for tea, go to ELLIS—Head Cheese, Ox Tongue, Baked Ham, Cooked Corned Beef, Bologna Sausage.

Speed Limit Exceeded.

This morning about 12.30, a horse and box car, coming down Holloway Street, unwillingly exceeded the city speed limit by some miles, when the horse was unable to hold the car back, it being loaded with soil.

Record War Expenditure.

Washington, Sept. 8.—Government war expenditures in August broke all monthly records by more than $100,000,000, amounting to $1,714,000,000 on reports up to to-day. Later reports may raise this to $20,000,000.

Bishop Spencer College.

On Tuesday morning Bishop Spencer College re-opened with a very full attendance of girls after the Summer vacation. The Right Rev. The Lord Bishop, the Sup't. of Education, J. W. Withers, Esq., and Geo. W. B. Ayre, Esq., were present as representatives of the Board of Directors, and the full staff of teachers was, of course, in attendance.

After His Lordship had read the opening prayers, Miss Stirling, the Principal, requested Dr. Blackall to announce the results of the examinations conducted by the Council of Higher Education in June last. The results were excellent, as will be seen from the statement appended.

The Bishop expressed his delight at the success of the school, spoke in terms of sincere appreciation of Mr. Ayre's generous deed and bespoke a happy year for teachers and girls.

Mr. Withers was very glad to be present and to hear so well of the school. He emphasized the importance of character in the work of education and extended to all his best wishes.

Mr. Ayre, with much modesty, said that he was more than pleased to be able to be of service to the good old school in which he had commenced his school days. His great desire was to see the College so equipped and conducted that everybody would desire to send their girls there on account of the education and training afforded.

The girls applauded Mr. Ayre very warmly and are evidently looking forward with joy to their exodus from the present crowded building.

A whole holiday was given the girls in honor of the excellent examination results and Mr. Ayre's magnanimous gifts.

Rev. Gordon Returns to Labrador.

Rev. H. Gordon, of the Cartwright Mission, Labrador, who returned to the north by the s.s. Seal, is we understand a much happier man than when he arrived here a few weeks ago, for the foundation of his great educational scheme to uplift the younger generation of that sparsely populated region has well been laid through the generosity of a number of philanthropists in the city. However, much more is required before practical results can be shown.

District Meeting.

St. John's Financial District of the Methodist Church was convened at Pouch Cove on September 11th, at 3 p.m. The President of the Conference presided. The attendance at the District was well representative, being made possible through the kindness of Hon. R. A. Squires and Messrs. J. Leamon and Albert Soper, who very generously took the members of the District to and from Pouch Cove in their motor cars.

The church grounds were nicely decorated with bunting in honor of the visit of the District. At 6 o'clock, after the completion of the order of business, the District arose to partake of a splendid repast that had been provided by the ladies of the congregation. Hon. R. A. Squires very pleasantly moved a vote of thanks to the ladies and Rev. T. W. Atkinson, a former pastor, seconded.

At 7.30 service was conducted in the church. The chairman, Rev. Dr. Curtis, presided. Splendid addresses on Evangelism and its need were given by Revs. E. W. Forbes and T. B. Darby. The meeting was helpful and inspiring. At 10 o'clock the automobiles formed in line, and after bidding farewell to the kind people who so generously entertained them, the District left for town.

Fine Auxiliary Schooner

A fine auxiliary schooner of 500 tons capacity is being built at Noel, for George M. Barr, of St. John's, Nfld. In the days when wooden ships ruled the sea a five hundred ton schooner was a rarity. A vessel that size would have been considered fairly large for a barque or full rigged ship. Indeed, many full rigged ships of less tonnage sailed the seas. To-day the demand is for schooners of large tonnage. This is because of the scarcity of men, the schooner rig requiring smaller crews.—Halifax Mail.

A Fine Building.

Mr. B. Bowring, contractor, has just finished a fine building on the corner of King's Road and Gower Street. This is a large three storey house of flats, built after the latest style American flat system. Each flat contains seven rooms—kitchen, pantry, bathroom, dining room, parlour, clothes room and two bedrooms. They contain electric light, gas cooking ranges, hot and cold water, and the building is heated by a large hot water furnace in the basement. Each flat has its own door and the utmost privacy is secured. Mr. Bowring deserves much credit for his latest structure.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE. LONDON, To-day. A British airman while flying at a height of 1,000 feet had the tail of his machine shot off by a direct hit from a shell, the machine turned upside down and the pilot was thrown from his seat, but he managed to clamber onto the bottom of the fuselage, on which he remained astride. Though the machine was out of control he managed by moving forward and backward to balance it and glide steadily downward. Under a strong anti-aircraft fire he crossed the German lines successfully a few hundred feet from the ground. His machine came down with a crash and he received some injuries but will recover. Another British airman was shot down out of control from an altitude of thirteen thousand feet. He fell fluttering and fainted on the way down. When he revived he found himself under the machine which was upside down in a marsh and was entirely uninjured.

REIGN OF TERROR IN RUSSIA. WASHINGTON, To-day. Information reaching the State Department to-day, from a neutral country, threw new light on the situation in Central Russia, where a reign of terror conducted by the Bolsheviks has made the positions of the populace tragic in the extreme and is endangering the lives of the Russian people, who have been unable to leave the country, declaring that the outside world cannot have a true conception of the true conditions. The dispatch said that since May the Bolshevik Extraordinary Commission, against the counter revolution, has conducted its campaign of wholesale murder. Thousands of persons have been shot without even a form of a trial it was said, and many of them, probably, were innocent of the political views for which they were executed.

Ancient Ironclad

Its Existence in Japanese Waters in 1618 Vouched for by Saris.

Here is some interesting evidence given by Kunnesu Minakata of Tanabe, Kii Japan, both in a Tokio Journal and in The London Notes and Queries of the existence in the seventeenth century of Far Eastern ancestors of the modern submarine and ironclad. Kuki Moriata was hidden by Ieyasu during the Winter siege of Osaka Castle, in 1614, to build four "blind boats to stop the musketry firing from a turret which was annoying his army considerably. Kuki thereupon constructed some "blind boats," manned them with his soldiers, advanced therewith submerged in the most, and crushed the turret with his cannon. Thence was made known how to build a "blind boat" as it had originally been invented by Lord Kuki." This is the evidence of an anonymous writer of the year 1700 or thereabouts.

As for the ironclad, its existence in Japanese waters in the seventeenth century is vouched for by Captain John Saris, who says in his "Journal of the Voyage to Japan in 1613":

About eight or ten leagues on this side the straits of Semina-Segue (Shimonoseki) we found a great tower, where they lay in a dock a junk of eight hundred or a thousand tonnes of burthen, sheathed all with iron, with a guard appointed to keep her from firing or treachery. She was built in a very homely fashion, much like that which describes Noah's ark unto us. The naturalists told us that she served to transport soldiers into any of the Islands, if rebellion or war should happen.

There is surely nothing new under the sun. The old civilization of China and Egypt, not to speak of Crete, have taught the world that lesson long ago.—Christian Science Monitor

New System of Writing.

"Print" Method Adopted in Some of the London Schools. Several London schools have introduced a new system of writing known as "manuscript," or "print" writing, which replaces the former vertical or Spencerian systems. In the new system the children imitate the form of printed characters, and it is claimed that the task of learning to write legibly is greatly shortened and simplified by the leaving out of the unnecessary connecting up-strokes.

The new system was first introduced in military establishments, for unaccustomed soldiers, originating in the desire to find a method of writing which could be learned quickly by soldiers who had lost the use of the right hand. Its advocates claim that the "print" writing is easy to learn, neat, legible and speedy, and that it removes the great disadvantage of two kinds of letters with which the child has to contend in learning to read and to write.

In a pamphlet issued by the Child Study Society of London, Dr. L. C. Kimmins, chief inspector of the London Education Department, calls the new system "the writing of the future."

U-boat Rains Shrapnel on Ship's Deck.

Women and Children in Lifebelts Line Rail During Two-Hour Bombardment at Sea-Saved by an American Chaser.

An Atlantic Port.—The first account of the attack on a passenger liner bound for a South American port with 350 passengers on board, including 100 officers and men of the United States Navy on their way to join the South Atlantic Fleet, was brought here recently by a British steamer which touched at a West Indian island where the passenger ship was coaling.

For more than two hours the U-boat shelled the vessel with shrapnel as well as solid shot in an effort to sink her before help could arrive. The German commander could hear the S. O. S. calls going out and his gunners could not shoot away the wireless apparatus. The men, women, and children, all wearing lifebelts, stood by the lifeboats on the top deck until the shrapnel fell so thickly that the Captain ordered them to go below to the next deck, where there was more shelter. For thirty miles the steamship manoeuvred at top speed while the shells fell about her. Twenty-five American seamen went below into the stoke hold and worked with the ship's crew to get every pound of steam possible. When nearly all on board had given up hope a United States destroyer came to the rescue, and the U-boat dived out of sight. After the excitement was all over, the passengers went to the bridge and congratulated the Captain, to whose skill and judgment they owed their lives. He replied: "God did it. God alone can perform such miracles."

Story of the Attack.

The following is an account given by an American engineer, who was one of the first cabin passengers, to the captain of the vessel who brought it here recently:

"About 8 o'clock in the morning, when the ship was about 150 miles off the Virginia Capes, I was walking on the top deck to get an appetite for breakfast, when a quartermaster, who had just come down from the bridge, pointed to a low-lying craft about three miles away on the port side, and said: 'Do you think it is a submarine?'"

"Before I could answer his query," the American continued, "there was a flash and a puff of smoke, and a solid shot dropped into the smooth sea within twenty feet of the ship's side amidships. The Captain, who was on the bridge, thought it was an American Patrol boat which was not quite certain of our nationality and had tried to fire across our bows as a warning to stop. Seen through the glasses, the bright sunlight, the stranger had the appearance of a small destroyer. She had one tall funnel and a small superstructure forward resembling a bridge. We had stopped immediately after the shot was fired, and as the stranger craft approached shrapnel shells were fired from her bow gun, which burst right over the bridge.

Disguise Falls Away.

"At the same time her funnel and bridge arrangement toppled down, and we could see that she was a German submarine, disguised with a canvas funnel and superstructure to resemble a patrol boat. The after gun on the deck of the U-boat opened fire, and several shells were aimed at our wireless apparatus to cripple it so that we could not call for help. The Hun gunners were bad shots, and our operator in his little house on the top deck kept sending S. O. S. calls. The shrapnel fell all about the bridge and rigging of the foremast and on the deck like rain from stem to stern. No answer came to the calls for help, and we all began to feel anxious about our fate as the submarine continued to fire shell after shell from both guns. By this time the Captain had decided that the only way to save his ship was to go at full speed and change direction as often as possible to thwart the enemy's aim. With the aid of twenty-five American sailors in the stoke hold the vessel got up a speed of fifteen knots and answered her helm like a top. As we were beginning to despair of getting any assistance in time an answer came which read: 'This is a land station. Four destroyers are rushing to you.' The good news was circulated rapidly among the passengers on deck, and one American woman went into the drawing room and rattled off a number of patriotic airs on the piano, which had a cheering effect on everybody. Our chief anxiety was whether we could stay afloat until help arrived. One shell exploded with a nerve-racking scream right over the deck, throwing five of the passengers flat on their faces. One piece of shrapnel the size of a hen's egg struck the Captain on the back as he was standing by the steering wheel on the bridge, but did not scratch him. We examined the piece afterward when the excitement was over, with other lumps of metal left on the decks by the Huns.

"The passengers were ordered to stand by the lifeboats with their lifebelts on and not to take any baggage. The officers and men of the American Navy had their belts on too, and wore only their trousers and flannel underwear so that they would be ready to help save the women and children when the boats were lowered away. Everything was done quietly and in an orderly manner. The women were calm and the children gazed in wonder at the exploding shells. Passengers who were asleep at the time of the attack came on deck with lifebelts buckled around their throats, and did not go below again. Some passengers said that it would be of no use to get into the boats because the Huns were firing on helpless women and children, and would surely shell us when we left the ship, especially as we had officers and men from the navy on board.

"The shrapnel shelling became so heavy that we were ordered off the deck to take shelter in the saloons below. The gunners aimed at us frequently with solid shot, but could not hit the ship apparently because of the zig-zagging.

"Two hours had passed, and all hope of being saved had nearly gone, when the lookout in the crow's nest yelled: 'Smoke on the horizon on the starboard quarter.' The Captain looked through his glasses, and said he thought it must be the American destroyers coming to our rescue. A few minutes more and there was no doubt of it. A big destroyer was coming at a speed of forty knots, and was within five miles of us. The submarine could not see the warship coming, and fired on with both guns. The commander of the destroyer saw the enemy craft, and got up under the lee of our ship till she was close up. Directly the Hun commander saw the game was up he submerged just as the destroyer swung with such way on that she could not stop. My, how our people did yell and cheer to see the Stars and Stripes flying at her stern. It was the most thrilling moment of our lives.

"After all the danger was over many of the women and not a few of the men wept when they thought of the danger they had escaped, and I think there were very few who did not agree with the modest ship Captain when he said in reply to our thanks that it was God, and God alone, who could do such miracles."

Food Riot at Nish

Bulgarians Oppose Attempt to Send Flour to Germany.

London, Sept. 2.—The London Times Salonika correspondent, under date of Aug. 26, wires that Bulgarian deserters report that on August 7th at the railway station at Nish, Bulgarian soldiers tried to prevent the departure to Germany of four carloads of flour, and that a fight ensued which resulted in the death of four Germans and one Bulgarian.

Fantastic retail prices are ruling in Bulgaria for tin and copper. It appears from a report of one of the deserters who the other day was sent to Nish to buy small quantities of these metals, which were required for melting regimental kitchen utensils, that he had to pay 150 levas per kilogram for tin. These prices would be equivalent to £5,000 and £10,000 per short ton, respectively.

128,302 Prisoners

Taken by Allies Since July 15. Paris, Sept. 2.—"In the course of their offensive from July 15 to Aug. 31," says an official statement issued to-day, "the armies of the Allies have taken 128,302 prisoners, including 2,674 officers, and have captured 2,969 guns, 4,734 mine-throwers, 13,783 machine guns, and a considerable quantity of munitions, supplies, and materials of all kinds."

On the French front 75,900 prisoners and 700 guns have been captured by the French since July 18, it is announced to-day.

Wireless for China.

Government Signs a $1,500,000 Contract for Phone Service.

Peking, Sept. 3.—The Chinese Government has made an agreement with the Marconi Company to purchase wireless telephones with forty-mile power at a price of £300,000. The telephones are to be delivered within nine months. The price will be deducted from a loan of £600,000 at 8 per cent.

The Government has received advances which make possible a resumption of the fighting against the South, which recent events had rendered doubtful.—N. Y. Times.

Dark-Hued Fighting Men.

New York Globe: From the beginning of this war Negro soldiers have been a common sight in France. The Senegalese, the Madagascar troops, the general staff of West Indies are seen on every hand, and time and again have abundantly proved their sterling worth in battle. The difficulties and hardships arising from differences in race and color among the soldiers are the last thing likely to perturb the French people or to cause them to launch their army against the slightest unrest. Before the first American soldier set foot on the soil of France the French military establishment through long practical experience knew as much about the availability and management of the Negro soldier as our army or any other is ever likely to know.

Soldiers' Memorials.

The Portland Oregonian: It is possible that the marble shaft, the stone column and the imposing sarcophagus will pass into disuse as memorials to soldiers who have given their lives for freedom. The examples of a New England father of a soldier who has endowed a clinic for the rehabilitation of wounded in war and peace, and of a Chicago philanthropist who has given $2,500,000 to the University of Chicago to be used for the education of returned soldiers and the children of soldiers, point to a new drive of popular sentiment. The gifts are wholly practical, yet they represent no abatement of the pursuit of the ideal. The best memorials of all are those which take the form of helping men and women to help themselves. The world will not want charity of the almshouse sort. Soldiers worthy of the name will not expect to be supported in idleness the rest of their lives.

The Reading and Writing Classes, held in the Girls' Department of King George V. Institute, will re-open on Tuesday evening, October 1st, 1918, at 8 o'clock. MARGUERITE BAILEY Secretary.—sept18,11

The Price of Piracy.

London Daily Telegraph: Next year the output of the American ship-building yards will probably amount to 5,000,000 gross tons. In the light of those events relating to the war, of those events which are so hard to explain. Of the 186,000 Negro soldiers, 650 were non-commissioned officers, and 225 were serving as doctors and dentists. Of the total under arms 29,000 were fresh volunteers, 7,000 joined the National Guard and 2,000 were in the regular army before the war. These figures are really remarkable and go far towards disproving the claim often made, particularly by Southern writers, that the colored man is a liability, not an asset of the nation.

Where Will Foch Break Through Enemy Lines?

Foch has cracked the nut. Can he break it open and extract the kernel? The great sweep of the Allied armies during the past two months has once more brought them up against the tremendously strong positions of the enemy in the Forest of St. Gobain, which, rising like a fortified fortress in the region between the Oise and La Fere and the Aisne near Soissons, dominates the entire countryside. The Heights of the Aisne are the southern battlements of this castle of Nature's building, while on a spur to the west, with a wonderful outlook upon the Valley of the Oise and the wooded region around Compiègne, stand the ruins of the ancient Norman keep of Coucy, which before the war was one of the famous show places of Northern France. The Lord of Coucy in the "good old days" could ride down from the hilltop keep, despoil the dwellers in the rich Oise valley of the fruits of their season's husbandry, and get back to his impregnable stronghold for early dinner.

Kaiser William, when a young fellow, once visited Coucy and loitered there for several days looking down from the Norman robber'serie upon the vast expanse of beautiful France below. He was charmed with the beauty of the place, he said, but there was probably even then in his mind the thought that one day he would look toward Paris from the heights of Coucy as a conqueror at the head of an invincible army. And for a time he could. From the autumn of 1914 till the spring of 1917 the entire Valley of the Oise, almost as far down as Compiègne, remained in German occupation. Then in the spring of 1917 came the evacuation and retreat to the Hindenburg line, which is located about three and a half miles to the east of the chateau of Coucy on the ridges of the high forest. Upon the express orders of the Kaiser charges of explosives were placed in the dungeons of Coucy, and when the Germans withdrew the walls of the keep—at many places twelve and fourteen feet thick—were riven as by an earthquake and rolling down the steep hillside, blocked the watercourse far below.

France has written Coucy on her tablets of remembrance, beside Rheims Cathedral, the Arras Hotel de Ville, and the ancient church of Soissons, and other national monuments destroyed by order of the crowned Hun. As her splendid fighting men go up to the struggle now in progress for possession of the high Forest of Coucy, they see the vast piles of battered masonry that once were Coucy, and their resolves to drive out invader sets like adamant.

French military writers believe that Foch will not attempt a frontal assault on the Hindenburg line in the Forest of St. Gobain, but will endeavor to work around it from the region of La Fere on the north, or by a similar development from the south launched from the point on the Champagne front. There is yet a sign of the slackening of the assaults on the forest front. At Barisis, at Froenes, and at Aulers, the troops of General Mangin are driving directly against the highest points in the forest, where there are known to be line after line of field-works, trenches, and wire entanglements. Tanks are of use among these tree-clad ridges and ravines. It is man against man, with the great advantage to the defensive that wire entanglements provide. At Aulers the French will be able to secure good gun positions at a height of 180 meters. From this ridge to the highest point of the forest, three miles distant, there is a ridge of about a hundred and thirty feet through a heavily timbered region.

A few days at the most will reveal the plans of Foch. The capture of the Forest of St. Gobain by a converging frontal assault from the south and west, which at present appears to be his policy, would be one of the greatest achievements of any army since the war began. The turning of the forest by envelopment north and south of La Fere would not be so spectacular, but it would assuredly be less costly. And Foch has always been saving of the lives of his troops unless a great battle crisis compelled him to spend his men lavishly in the purchase of victory. Envelopment seems the more probable policy, and in that event the capture of La Fere will be the first move in the battle for St. Gobain.—Toronto Globe.

Burn German Book.

Palmyra, Pa., July 6.—Gabriel H. Moyer, State President of the Patriotic Order, Sons of America, was the leading figure one night recently in the destruction by fire of a History of Germany, written by a German author, which had been discovered among the volumes in the large library of Camp No. 192 of Palmyra, his home. The volume was torn to pieces and its leaves distributed among the 100 members present. President Moyer then stated a bonfire, which was fed by the pages of the volume until all had been consumed.

Discomforts of The Rhine.

If ever the Rhine Valley was a pleasant residential locality it has ceased to be such, for the Allied raiders are abroad in the air. During the earlier part of the struggle, when the Hun was having the sport of aerial raiding all to himself, he no doubt enjoyed the game hugely and regarded himself as the only one who could play it. He is no doubt very much amazed with the turn in affairs and has had time to reflect on the subject. If ever he had need to keep "Watch on the Rhine," he needs to keep it now. Almost from the source to the mouth of the river the Allied airman has become the nightly scourge of the people of the Valley. Reports make mention of twelve or fifteen tons of bombs dropped upon a city in a single raid. The aerial attacks on London and Paris are being avenged at a premium. The work of the Allied aviators is not that of meaningless rage and destruction. It is a deliberate, a skillful outflanking of the German armies by the overhead route, and the destruction has been hurled on lines of communication and bases of supply. All up and down the Valley the numberless factories have been turned into munition plants, and the wiping out of these places is the dealing of a heavy blow to the enemy's ammunition supply. More than that, the destruction of bridges over the river would most seriously injure the communications between the front and the nation. The people of the Valley are deeply concerned, and have formally asked the Government for better protection, something which the Government is not able to give them. And so the steady work will go on, that the enemy may feel what it is to be in the war, and to have it brought to their doors. Besides, it may be that the great destruction of supplies and communications is one of the tactics of the steady retreat of the German forces in France. The Allied airman is doing a wonderful work.—Recorder.

The Colored Soldier.

In addition to the information quoted from Mr. Kinney's article recently, we read in the New York Times' Current History, that on June 29th, 1918, there were under arms in the American army 186,000 colored soldiers, and that between the ages of 21 and 50 years there are 900,000 available for military service. Among the first 2,500,000 men of all colors between the ages of 21 and 31 examined for the selective draft, 25 out of every 100 Whites were passed as physically perfect, while 32 out of every 100 Negroes were similarly passed, a very remarkable disproportion which is not easy to explain. Of the 186,000 Negro soldiers, 650 were non-commissioned officers, and 225 were serving as doctors and dentists. Of the total under arms 29,000 were fresh volunteers, 7,000 joined the National Guard and 2,000 were in the regular army before the war. The proper care of wet shoes

The high cost of shoes makes it imperative to use every means to make them last as long as possible. Moisture is their worst enemy. It dries and cracks the leather, ruins their shape and shortens their life of wear.

You can save yourself many a dollar by using "Fital" Shoe Trees in your shoes. They not only immediately restore them to their original shape, but make your shoes wear longer and give you infinitely greater comfort.

Potatoes Dear in Berlin.

Housewives Gladly Pay 25 Cents a Pound to Food Smugglers. An orgy of profiteering accompanied the temporary reduction of the weekly potato ration in Berlin to one pound early in July, according to the following report printed in the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag: "The housewives try to obtain their allowance of one pound the very first day of the new week because each one of them fears that, in view of the scanty supply, she will not get anything at all. THE BEST BOOKS!

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

We were discussing the other day a novel which had been coming out in one of the current magazines and which all of us were reading. Talk cricled in the first place, about which character were more interesting. The heroine's clever, disagreeable father, or her quaint, whimsical little invalid mother. We discussed which of the two men who were in the offing we wanted her to marry, the brilliant egotist of her own age or the older man, homely, kindly, big hearted and understanding. "I don't believe in marrying men so much older," said someone. "People are never happy when they do that."

"Do you mean," countered someone else, "that you think she'd be happier with that dear, unselfish Christopher Saxe?" "I don't know why you think he is so selfish."

"Why don't you know what he did when she showed him her novel?" We became quite heated about it. And so the talk ran getting more and more heated until some one broke in with, "To think of our taking all this interest in just words, just things that never happened to people who never were."

"But they have happened a thousand times," countered the Author-man, quick to rally to the defense of his craft. "And the people are everywhere. That's why you are so interested."

And when you stop to think of it, isn't that the only possible explanation of the fervid interest we take in these fairy tales for grown-ups.

A Mirror Held Up to Real Life. Either we catch authentic glimpses in this mirror the author holds up to real life, of ourselves, our friends or our neighbors, or, if the mirror is of things as we would like them, rather than things as they are, we see dazzling visions of ourselves and our dream lovers and friends. This particular one happened to be the sort of tale that holds an authentic mirror to real life.

He Looks at the Back of His Hands. The clever, disagreeable father has a way of clearing the room of people who bored him. His daughter had decided that it was "the way he looks at the back of his hands."

"Isn't that just the way Professor G. does?" said someone. The sensitive high strung mother could never eat but left her meal untasted. If the father were dissatisfied with the dinner. "I've seen my mother do that a hundred times," said someone else.

And so it ran. If a writer should tell of things that never happened to people who never existed, he might for a while gain listeners to his tale through curiosity but he could never hold his audiences as they who write of "things that have happened a thousand times to people who are everywhere."

THE BAN OF BRUNETTES.

Superfluous hair is frequently a cause for much discomfort, particularly to brunettes, for it is the brunette who is more often the victim of its growth. There are two kinds of superfluous hair; the soft fine down and the stiff scattered hairs like those in the eyebrows. The latter kind often appear upon the upper lip, chin and sometimes on the cheeks near the ears.

There are various methods for removing superfluous hair but I would advise leaving them alone unless they are very disfiguring. Some women are peculiarly sensitive to any appearance of this sort and fancy disfigurement where none exists. It has been said that a slight downy line on the upper lip of a brunette, frequently adds a charm by lending a piquant expression to the face.

Unhappily the dplomatians on the market are not all harmless, many of them containing arsenic which should never be brought thus in contact with the skin. Superfluous hair can be removed much less visible by using peroxide of hydrogen combined with an alkaline solution for toning down the color of the hairs. For the solution use equal parts of Camouflaged Roads of War.

Surprise is still a predominant weapon of war, just as it has been in every war since the dawn of history. The most successful attacks in this war have been those prepared without the knowledge of the enemy, as witness the battle of the Masurian Lakes in the east when Hindenburg's German troops fell suddenly on the erstwhile victoriously advancing Russians and routed them completely, as well as the recent Von Hutier's strokes on the western front and Foch's counterblow against the Crown Prince's armies in the Marne salient. A dozen other examples of the strategic value of surprise could be cited, for proof is not missing in this connection.

One of the most interesting phases of surprise in modern military operations is the bringing up of large masses of troops and guns and supplies without the knowledge of the enemy. Von Hutier, as will be remembered from the article recently appearing in the Scientific American, which dealt at length with the methods of that skilled German general, lays great stress on secrecy. He places his principal armies as far as 60 miles behind the front lines until the very eve of the battle, when they are brought up by forced marches at night. During the day the troops are concealed in villages and in woods; in fact, wherever ample covering can be found for the purpose. Enemy airplanes flying far into German-held land, discover no signs of extensive troop movements. When the battle opens the enemy, as was the case with the British during March and the French during May, are taken by surprise, not so much as regards the date set for the battle, but largely with respect to the numbers of troops involved.

Rumors have come back from France telling of the marvelous camouflaged roads employed by the Germans during their last ill-fated offensive in the Marne salient. These roads, it is said, are important, but not necessarily the main, arteries of travel for troops and supplies, and are covered over with mile after mile of canvas painted to represent the original road. Thus to an airman flying thousands of feet altitude such as he must do in order to keep a respectable distance between himself and the enemy anti-aircraft guns, the camouflaged road appears absolutely deserted, while all the while thousands of troops, batteries of artillery, and supply columns may be moving along steadily toward the battlefield. The road can be readily camouflaged in this manner, albeit the amount of canvas required is considerable and the work of erection quite extensive. Still, the value of a camouflaged road cannot be overestimated, and it is obvious that no commander would hesitate to employ his camouflage corps in such a way.

It is said of the British camoufleurs that during the preparations for the great battle of the Somme, in 1916, they constructed a similar road. The occasional German airman over the British back areas perceived little activity on the ground. The most important road, to be sure, was deserted except for an occasional cart, a few soldiers and a fake gun or two. But all the while British Tommies were pouring to the battlefield, with their guns and supplies, under the camouflage canvas. So taut and so well supported was the canvas that it was possible to send light traffic along the camouflaged canvas, thus leading the Germans to believe that the road was genuine, so the rumors go.

Camouflage appears to be without limit in this war. It does not seem unreasonable to look forward to the day when entire armies will move forward without a single man, gun, or supply truck in sight. They will make use of mile after mile of camouflaged roads; and when in the field they will march under woven grass carpets carefully painted to match the surrounding terrain.—Scientific American.

TWO WORLDS. Two busy worlds are mine to face And one is where the children race; The other, far removed from play, Is where I go to work each day. In one I must be very kind And keep a young and cheerful mind. And in the other strong and true And play the man in all I do.

The world of business day by day, Is linked unto my world of play. I cannot stoop to deeds of shame And let dishonor stain my name. And then go to my world of joy To be a youngster with my boy. To keep my world of home serene, I must return, erect and clean.

I must be old and pious, too; I must be strong and wise and true; In one world I must play the man And serve in every way I can. But when the busy hours are done, I journey to the other one And there I change unto a boy To share a little fellows' joy.

By day I bear the cares of men By night I am a child again; A dual role is mine to live— In one I earn that I may give; In one I toil from day to day That I may know my world of play. And so to win life's greatest joy I have to be both man and boy.

A beautiful cape is of cerise wool, Jersey lined with gray silk. On robe, lawn or organdy, cutout eyelet work is very good. Wings have a tendency to be placed at the back of a hat.

Boot will measure eight inches from the breast of the heel. Millinery colorings are dull and one-tone effects are favored. Organdie and brushed wool form one of the oddest combinations. Stitching of silk or wool makes a very attractive trimming.

SELF DENIAL.

I do without a lot of things, because I wish to can such things as Carl and old Red Bill, as Hoover says, "That man is wise and loyal who'll economize, and do it with a will." It's been a grievous hurt to me that I can't sail across the sea and slay my share of Huns; it's made me shed the tears of brine that I can't reach the battle line, all loaded down with duns. When first I suffered from this smart there was rebellion in my heart, and I remarked, "By James, it's tough when one who's strong and bold is said to be too fat and old to play these martial games." But now I see that one can aid who does not wield a shining blade, or ply a sawed-off gun; and everytime I save some seeds I'm backing up our fighting lads, and helping squeak the Hun. I'm wearing last year's mohair suit, and hope by this to queer a Tent, and make old Bill despond; the coin I spend for rainment gear, for shirts and neckties recherche, will buy another bond. And every bond for which I pay brings nearer still the happy day when triumph will be ours; when our brave boys will homeward come, and we shall make the old town hum, and load them down with flowers.

Got the suit that is made to do what you want it to do. That is give satisfaction, $18.50 to $45.00, at W. R. GOODE'S, just opp. Post Office. aug19.18

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, August 26th, 1918.
CLOTHE THE AMERICANS.

There are still waiting for the much-anticipated and advertised "standard" clothes for men varying in price from about £2.17s.6d. to £4. according to whether they are made or made to the customer's measurements. Ordinary civilian clothes are very high in price now, as expected, and these "standard" clothes will be a lot under the prices charged by the private makers. We have heard all the stories about the immense quantities of cloth allocated to the army and in a few shops windows have appeared "Standard" suits now on the whole, however, only a proportion of the business have matured and very few makers know anything at all as yet. The reason for this is the spring offensive which has beyond expectation the American troops to Europe, and all our plans. Every soldier gets a uniform in the States, but all the further requirements are to be provided. In addition, the requirements of the British and Indian armies made the military mills at any time previously. The Government has ordered that civilian machinery may make civilian clothing a permit, and every clothing manufacturer must at least 50 per cent. of his output be for the military business.

ADVERTISED GENERAL ELECTION.

Attention is being paid to the subject of a General Election, a great deal of space being given to the subject in the newspapers. One effect of the election is to create a political time when political, owing to the circumstances, are usually in the background. On the other hand, an election is more vocal than support the idea, but this is attributable to the human nature that the man who is generally actuated by strong feelings. The man who is generally actuated by strong feelings, however, seems to be coming this year. What are the arguments for and against every body assumes that accidents, there will be a country shortly after the election is completed. There are indications that the complaint made in some of the Government intends to call an election upon the 10th. Even the critics are counting on an election, and organizing all these discussions too much about the public, who are tired of a stale House and would assuredly assist after the completion of the year. What every attempt were to perpetuate the staidness by selections on an antiquated travels will be added to the list of rationed things in the autumn. The Food Ministry has not decided what the quantities of each will be. Treacle, or golden syrup, has been exceedingly difficult to get lately, in middle-class London at any rate, and rationing will be welcomed. The official explanation of the shortage of this most useful food is that it is due to an enormously increased demand, and not to diminished supplies. Syrup is now used for sweetening puddings, and so on, instead of sugar. The Sugar Commission distributes from 17,000 to 18,000 tons of golden syrup every week, allocating the distribution to the shops on the basis of sales in 1914. The distribution will be larger shortly. Most of the golden syrup is now made in this country as a by-product in the refining of sugar. There is plenty of syrup in America, but here it is the old story—shortage of shipping. Preference in allotting tonnage is naturally given to sugar, which, being packed in bags, occupies less space than syrup, which comes in casks.

ONE THOUSAND V.C.S.

The Victoria Cross for four Australians announced in the "London Gazette" on August 17th brings the number of Crosses awarded since the decoration was instituted by Queen Victoria 62 years ago, to 1,000 precisely. Of these 522 were gained before the present war—371 of them in the Crimean, Indian Mutiny, South African and other campaigns. The 478 won since 1914 have been well distributed over all departments of the Imperial forces, including the Tanks Corps.

SALE OF GERMAN LOOT.

Information reaches me from an authoritative source to the effect that a Note, approved by all the Allies, is to be presented to the Governments of certain neutral countries asking that steps may be taken to prevent, as far as possible, the disposal to or by their respective subjects of objects of art, curious furniture, and jewelry which may be presumed to have been looted by the enemy from Belgium, France, and Italy. This Note is being presented none too soon, as, according to particulars of a very precise character received both here and in Paris, German agents have frequently been and are offering large quantities of valuable goods which have undoubtedly been stolen from public buildings and private houses in the places they have occupied. The business of robbery on a vast scale having not only been well organized, but officially recognized by the German authorities, it is not surprising that that of the disposal of the stolen goods should have been placed upon a commercial footing, especially now that Germany is so badly in need of ready money.

THE WOMAN "BARGE."

Of the many different openings provided for women by the exigencies of the war not the least attractive is that of barge or canal boat work. A few weeks ago an advertisement appeared in a London newspaper stating that women were urgently needed for new canal boats in connection with food transport. On inquiry by the Women's Service Bureau it was found that the boats in question travel between Hayes and Liverpool, a distance of 800 miles, by canal, that the trip takes about ten days either way, and that the girls who "man" them live entirely on board. The barges generally work in pairs, one motor boat or horse barge towing a butty boat with four girls in charge of the two. These barge girls attend to the engine, steer the boats, and work the locks along the canal. They also look after the cabins and cook their own meals, etc. During the summer the life is almost ideal for a strong, healthy girl. But the work is of national importance and must be carried on during the winter also.

ROUND THE BANDSTAND.

In normal or even in early war times the look of things in the West End of London in such dazzling August days as these would show us the ripe fruit of London. Everyone would be light-hearted millions, and the lordly thoroughfares and parks would glitter with radiance. The scene around the bandstand in Hyde Park this afternoon marked the contrast sharply. Where in old days there would be a pack of listeners in the circle of chairs there were wide desolate spaces, broken here and there by the brilliant blue of a group of wounded soldiers or by khaki on holiday, and for the rest a few elderly men and many women. The hospital soldiers alone seem still to have the heart for simple enjoyment of the pageant of London. In all the wide brown vista of the Row there was one solitary horseman. The picture was never more brilliant as the breeze rustled the tall trees against the extraneously blue sky, the Serpentine glistening silvery in the distance, and there was a feeling of unreality in it all. The chief link with the vanished London August was the horde of small children released from school. War or no war, the children live their lives, and turn the police parks into places of jollity with zest unsubdued. The most cheerful sight of the afternoon was one which would rouse bitter suspicions in some minds. It was a couple of superb young men dressed in beautiful civilian garb, perfectly healthy and looking as if there were no cares in the world.

In Memoriam.

LAURA KENNEDY, Holyrood.

The angel of death visited the home of Capt. Walter Kennedy on Wednesday morning last and carried off to that better land his dear daughter Laura in the twenty-four year of her age and in the full blush of youth and in the full bloom of promise. Gentle, noble Laura, who has been taken away prematurely to an early grave, was one of the bright young products of the High School and inherited the gifts and talents of the Kennedy family. For two years she filled the office of postmistress here with attention to her duties and to the satisfaction of her superiors at the Head Office. Having resigned her position she emigrated to Buffalo, U.S.A., and joined the staff of F. N. Burritt & Co. as bookkeeper, and after three months' service was appointed forelady of that department with 54 ladies under her charge. In the month of February last she contracted a heavy cold which developed into pulmonary tuberculosis, and though she spent six months under the treatment of the specialists of Buffalo City Hospital, they failed to arrest the progress of the disease. Her case was at last pronounced incurable, and her parents being advised they decided to bring her home, fondly hoping that a change of air and home, sweet home, would improve her condition and prolong her life. Accompanied by her brother Cornelius and her sister-in-law Annie, who abandoned their home and business to accompany their stricken relative home, she arrived at Holyrood August 15th, and cared by her fond and loving mother she rallied for a time, but relapse after relapse followed which ended fatally on Sept. 11th. Dr. Jones saw the patient twice but held out no hope. Rev. Fr. Finn was constant with the sick girl, and in his own buoyant and cheerful way relieved her sufferings and timely administered to her the Sacraments of the dying. She died soon after daybreak. Her father, Capt. W. Kennedy, who is a chief skipper in the Canadian Naval Service and in command of the s.s. Loos, was happily at the bedside of his dying daughter, having obtained leave of absence for that purpose, as well as her grief-stricken mother and brother. Her handsome casket, in which she lay waking, was placed in the room she had so often filled with life and gladness, laughter and song, and was enclosed with the flowers she had loved so well in life. Yes, the old freestone had smiled upon that same sweet face again. The funeral appointments were in the hands of Undertaker Nicholas Murphy of the city, who came here himself and had his man and horse and hearse sent on to convey the remains to the cemetery. The burial service was recited at the home of the deceased by the pastor, Rev. W. P. Finn, and the route of the funeral procession was from the home to Central Cemetery. The procession, which was a large one, was led by Rev. Fr. Finn, Holyrood, and Rev. W. Finn, Grand Falls. The service at the graveside was conducted by the latter; and this ended, and in the midst of her sorrow stricken relatives, the remains were interred in the family vault to await the sound of Gabriel's horn. As a leader in the social and religious life of the community Laura leaves a vacancy not easily filled, but it is pleasing to her parents to know that she died as she lived, a faithful child of God. Her place at the parental home can never be filled, and we pray Almighty God that we all shall meet again in that better land where there shall be no more sorrows and partings. To her grief-stricken parents, brothers and sisters we tender our sincere sympathy and pray that the soul of a good, pious, noble and gentle girl has entered into the shade of the blest.—Com.

Another Unilectric System!

We have recently finished installing one of our Unilectric Plants for Fred Ayre, Esquire, in his country residence at Murray's Pond.

Owing to the fact that the Unilectric machine produces a standard 110 volt current (the same that is used here in St. John's), Mr. Ayre is able to light 4 buildings, a considerable distance apart, without loss of power and without the use of extra large wires. They are also able to use standard electric iron and electric vibrator; also any lamps or fixtures handled in St. John's.

The grounds are also lighted with powerful lights on poles. The interior of the bungalow has been lighted according to Mrs. Ayre's direction with drop lights, wall brackets and table lamps with coloured shades to harmonize with the walls and furniture. Mr. Ayre has now the most beautifully lighted country residence in Newfoundland.

We have now 4 Unilectric Plants in successful operation in Newfoundland. Any one interested in country lighting has abundant opportunity to satisfy themselves that the Unilectric has no rival.

Perhaps the strongest feature about these machines is the fact that they do not have to depend on storage batteries, but a small cheap battery can be connected at any time to be used in case of emergency. However none of our customers have found it necessary to do so.

We are also agents for 3 different makes of battery lighting systems and can furnish anything required in this line, but we do not claim that they could compare with the Unilectric.
