CHAPTER XXIII.

Micky turned up at Paddington the following morning laden with papers and chocolates.

"Any one would think we were going to the other side of the world," June told him. "Do you know, my good map, that it's only a couple of hours' run to Enmore?"

"Is it?" said Micky guilelessly. "Well, any way, I'm sure you won't be able to get De Bry's chocolates down there, so they'll come in useful." He looked at Esther. She was wearing the fur coat and a bunch of violets.

"It isn't so awfully exciting," she said, meeting his eyes. "We never thought about going till quite late last night, did we, June?"

"Things done in a hurry are almost the most enjoyable," June answered attentively. "I'm quite backed at the idea of living the simple life for a few days."

"Why you haven't got a car down there," Micky said. "There ought to be some fine runs round here. Go there and see. I'll take June promptly. Her queer eyes twinkled as she looked at him. "Micky, would you like to be a perfect dork and come down in yours, and take us out? You can stay at the local inn and play the heavy swell."

Micky flushed eagerly.

"That's a ripping idea," he said. He turned to Esther: "I'll come like a shot if I shan't be in the way," he added.

Esther smiled; she was surprised to find that the idea was not at all distasteful to her.

"Oh yes; do come!" she said.

June had got into the carriage, and was busy arranging her various possessions.

"You'll be left behind, Esther," she said warningly.

Esther turned at once.

"Good-bye, Mr. Mellows."

Micky took her hand in a hard grip.

"Good-bye—but only till to-morrow."

He stood back as the train started; the last glimpse the two girls had of him was in radiantly smiling face.

"Do you know," said June, settling herself in a corner, "I believe I'm half in love with that man, after all. Isn't he just a dear?"

"He's awfully kind," Esther agreed.

"When the train drew into the little station at Enmore June looked at Esther with a sort of apprehension.

THIS WOMAN'S RECOVERY

Shows Remarkable Restorative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chesley, Ont.—"Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had terrible pains in my sides and was not regular. Finally I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. I am married, am the mother of two children, and do all my housework, milk eight cows, and do a blood man's work and enjoy the best of health. I also found Vegetable Compound a great help for my weak back before my babies were born. I recommend it to all my friends who are in need of medicine, and you may print this letter if you wish."

Mrs. HENRY JAMES, R. R. No. 4, Chesley, Ontario.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. After all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering women than any other medicine in the world.

"It's a most awful one-eyed hole, you know," she said. "I do hope you won't be bored to death. It won't be so bad if Micky keeps his promise and comes down, but if he doesn't..."

"Don't you think he will?" Esther asked quickly.

"Oh, I dare say he will. I hope he will. I'm sure; somebody has got to amuse you while I go and see to my business."

"I can amuse myself."

June snuffed.

"Can you? Well, it's more than I could when I used to stay down here. There's only a church and a village inn and a handful of cottages. My aunt has by far the most distinguished-looking house in the village, and I dare say you won't think much of that."

They were on the platform now, and June eyed their two suit-cases ruefully.

"We shall have to carry them," she said. "No porters or taxicabs here, my dear. Come along."

She grabbed her own, and Esther followed her out into the road.

It was cold but sunny, and the fresh air of the country was something quite different from the chilly, damp atmosphere they had left behind in London.

Esther drew a deep breath.

"It's lovely," she said. "Do you know"—she looked ahead of her down the winding road with a little frown—"I've got the sort of feeling that something is going to happen to me here."

"Goodness!" said June. "Don't you start having instincts too! It's bad enough for me to have them. What can happen to you, pray, unless you get melancholia or something?"

Esther laughed.

"It was only a little way into the village; as soon as they came in sight of it June pointed excitedly to a red-gabled house just visible through the trees.

"That's where my aunt lives. She's an old maid, you know, and incidentally she thinks I'm a most heaven-born genius. She's nearly sixty, but I'll bet anything you like she uses June Mason's Skin Beautifier."

She pushed open the iron gate of the little garden, but before there was time to ring the bell the door opened and a little lady with grey hair and a wonderful complexion very much like June's stood there with outstretched hands.

"My dear! I never was so delighted! June—after all these months you really have come to see me."

She kissed June heartily and turned to Esther. June introduced them.

"My friend, Esther Shepstone—my aunt, Miss Dearing. I don't know what you think of us for arriving on top of our wire like this," she said laughing. "But I like to do things in a hurry—so here we are, and we're just starving."

They followed Miss Dearing into a quaint little square room, where the table was laid for lunch. June talked away all the time.

"There's another member of the party coming down to-morrow," she said. "His name's Micky. Micky Mellows! You remember him? Yes; I thought you would." She flushed a little. "He's going to bring his car down and take us all out for rides; so we're in for a good time."

"I remember Mr. Mellows quite well," Miss Dearing said. "When she was alone with Esther for a moment she whispered to her—

"We all hoped June meant to marry him, you know, my dear. Perhaps she has changed her mind, as she is allowing him to come down. Such a very charming man—have you seen him?"

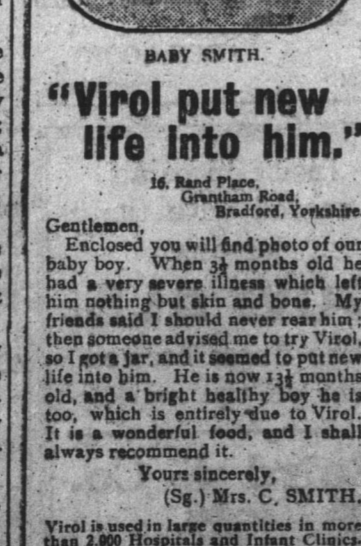

"Yes, I've seen him," Esther said. "He is nice—very!"

"It would be the dream of my life fulfilled if I could see June married to him," the old lady went on. "June wants a firm hand. She is wonderfully high-spirited and clever, you know, but I always feel that she would be so much happier with some one to look after her, and he is just the man to take care of a woman."

"Yes," said Esther.

She fell Miss Dearing glance at her hands.

"Are you—are you engaged to be married?" she asked, after a moment. "Please forgive my curiosity, but I am

BABY SMITH.

"Virol put new life into him."

16, Road Place, Grimsby, York-shire.

Gentlemen, Enclosed you will find photo of our baby boy. When 12 months old he had a very severe illness which left him nothing but skin and bone. My friends said I should never rear him; then someone advised me to try Virol. so I got a jar, and it seemed to put new life into him. He is now 13 months old, and a bright healthy boy he is too, which is entirely due to Virol. It is a wonderful food, and I shall always recommend it.

Yours sincerely,
(Sg.) Mrs. C. SMITH.

Virol is used in large quantities in more than 200 Hospitals and Infants Clinics. It is invaluable for the epidemic infantile disease known as the whooping cough, and it also cures these vital principles that are necessary for the building of new flesh, strong bones and good colour.

at three, so you must. He's going to drive up to the station and wait there for one of us to come and show him where we live."

There was a little silence. Esther nudged beneath the elder girl's shrewd gaze.

"I should have thought he could have found out where we live," she said rather awkwardly. "And it's such a little way—"

June rose with a great show of dignity.

"Oh, very well, if you don't want to be obliging, but I do think you might."

"Silly—of course I will." Esther caught her hand. "I'll go; the station at three o'clock, and then what am I to do? Bring him here, or what?"

"Do what you like, my child—I shan't be in till five. Don't let him be bored, that's all, or he'll go back to town—the only thing Micky cannot stand is being bored."

Esther made a little grimace.

She felt nervous when at five minutes to three exactly she walked down the winding road to the station.

June ought to have come herself, she argued; it was a most silly thing to send her—she hoped he would not come at all; but all the time she was listening for the sound of a car or a motor-horn. The sleepy-eyed factotum of the station walked up and stared at her curiously. After a few turns he ventured to ask if she wanted to go by train.

"No, I'm waiting for a gentleman—I—oh, here he is."

"'Twas her young gentleman for sure," the sleepy-eyed one told his colleague afterwards. "She blushed up like a rose when she saw him."

Micky noticed that blush, too, as he turned the car with a fine sweep and came to a standstill.

Esther greeted him with a torrent of explanation.

"June couldn't come, so she made me—she had to go out on business. She would make me come."

"It's very kind," Micky said. "I'm rather late than I expected—the roads are bad down in this part of the world. Well, and how do you like Enmore?"

"It's very quiet, but I like it for a change, and June's aunt is ever so kind."

"Yes, a dear old lady; I know her well. Did you tell her I was coming?"

"June did..."

His eyes swept her face anxiously. No trace of tears or sadness to-day, at all events.

"Are we supposed to go straight home?" he asked after a moment. "Because if not, what do you say to a run round first?"

Esther's eyes sparkled.

"I should love it!" She got in beside him, and the car started away.

"I only brought the two-seater," Micky explained audaciously. "I hate a crowd. This will take three at a pinch, but it's much more comfortable for two."

"It's lovely!" Esther agreed.

"She leaned back luxuriously."

"It must be splendid to be able to have a car like this of your very own," she said sulkily.

Micky laughed rather ruefully.

"There are other things I would far rather have," he said.

"Are there?" She looked up at him innocently. "What things?" she asked.

Micky's hands tightened over the wheel.

"Am I really to answer that question?" he asked.

"No," said Esther hurriedly.

She could not think why she had been so stupid as to say such a thing. She felt very vexed.

They went some way in silence. Esther glanced at the man beside her timidly.

"Would he end up by some day marrying June? She wondered. Lucky June, if he did—lucky... she checked the thought with a little sense of shame. Only a few days ago she had declared that she disliked him. Perhaps it was the car that made her feel so suddenly envious of the woman who would one day be this man's wife.

Micky glanced down at her.

"Are you cold?" he asked.

"I am a little"—she smiled up at him—"in spite of my new coat," she said. "I think we had better go home."

June came to the door to meet them.

"I got home earlier than I thought," she told Esther. "Well, Micky?"

"Are there any letters?" Esther asked. She felt a swift feeling of envy as she looked at these two, so openly and unfeignedly glad to see one another.

"I suppose it's expecting too much, though," she added with a sigh.

June did not answer, and Esther went on up the stairs.

"There is one for her," June said in an undertone to Micky as soon as she had gone. "And one from Paris, too—from that man! Micky, are you sure it isn't all a mistake about him being married?"

"Sure," said Micky stolidly.

"Then shall I—what shall I do about that letter—it was sent on from London. Ought I to let her have it?"

Micky was taking off his coat, his back was turned.

"Oh, let her have it," he said casually. "It may be the last she'll ever get."

He turned swiftly. "Let me look at it."

June took it from her dress and handed it to him.

He glanced at the writing and gave it back to her.

"Oh yes, I should let her have it," he said again.

But June still hesitated.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHAT DO YOU LIKE BEST TO DO?

What do you like best to do in a very chatty, delightful letter from one of my most treasured letter-friends occurs this paragraph:

"Don't you love to get into a big choir with a good book and a forgetful housewife? Oh I do, and after that I love to cook a meal for a beloved guest."

That started us talking about what we loved best, and we had a jolly time about the dinner table-classifying our favorite indoor and outdoor sports. Here are some of those on my list:

Things I Love—Do You!

A horseback ride over a country road in early spring with a congenial companion.

Swimming—in decently warm water.

An evening around the open fire with a group of congenial people, just enjoying a dish of talk.

Listening to a contralto or baritone singer (I don't so much enjoy a soprano) singing the simple, old-fashioned melodies.

A quiet evening with a box of candy (not chocolates) and a first class novel (in which one has already made a start and got acquainted with the characters).

Writing—on the rare occasions when "genius" burns.

Dancing with a good dancer.

There was a moment's silence.

"Oh, it would hardly be that," Micky said positively. "At least—well, if it is, we must chance it." But his voice did not sound as if he were at all anxious.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHAT DO YOU LIKE BEST TO DO?

What do you like best to do in a very chatty, delightful letter from one of my most treasured letter-friends occurs this paragraph:

"Don't you love to get into a big choir with a good book and a forgetful housewife? Oh I do, and after that I love to cook a meal for a beloved guest."

That started us talking about what we loved best, and we had a jolly time about the dinner table-classifying our favorite indoor and outdoor sports. Here are some of those on my list:

Things I Love—Do You!

A horseback ride over a country road in early spring with a congenial companion.

Swimming—in decently warm water.

An evening around the open fire with a group of congenial people, just enjoying a dish of talk.

Listening to a contralto or baritone singer (I don't so much enjoy a soprano) singing the simple, old-fashioned melodies.

A quiet evening with a box of candy (not chocolates) and a first class novel (in which one has already made a start and got acquainted with the characters).

Writing—on the rare occasions when "genius" burns.

Dancing with a good dancer.

The ex-kaiser is "the only family in Germany that did not lose a son in the war." Frederic Wilhelm is an exile in Holland; Ethel Friedrich is a student in the State Agricultural College; Oscar is at the German republic's agricultural college; Adelbert, the sailor prince, is studying history and managing a health resort; August Wilhelm is an assistant in a private bank.

William A. Pinkerton, head of the Pinkerton detective agency, recently refused $50,000 to appear in a moving picture. He has also resisted all efforts to induce him to write a book of memoirs, and gives as his reason for refusing, the following: "If I wrote of the cases I have handled during my 55 years' detective work, the book would be full of 'ghosts.' Every place the book went would be some man whose forgotten crime would be raised over and whispered anew, visited perhaps on a wife or innocent children. No matter how I would try to disguise names of characters and places they would always be somebody to ferret them out and publish them to neighbors and friends."

Strike Leaders Have Left London.

House of Commons Will Take New Action--Winter Weather in U.K. Adds to Discomfort--Tornado Sweeps Texas and Arkansas--New U.S. Ambassadors.

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

LONDON, April 17. Sunday brought additional discomfort from the coal strike to the people of Great Britain as the need for already closely held fuel was increased by the appearance of wintry weather throughout the United Kingdom with considerable snowfall in some sections. Leaders of the striking miners have all left London, apparently much to the disappointment of the Government Departments concerned in the dispute, who had been hoping that now the political question involved in the demand of the miners for national pool had been disposed of by refusal of support to the miners by the Triple Alliance, it might be possible to get negotiations on the wage question started again. The action of the House of Commons last Thursday night in virtually taking the affair out of the hands of the Government, was widely commented upon as bringing in a new phase and the affair was not altogether to the taste of the Government Departments, but likely to help in a more speedy reaching of settlement. Bad weather and the collapse of the threatened railroad and transport strikes, have had the effect of retarding recruiting of volunteer forces in London, fewer citizens offering themselves for enlistment. It was officially intimated to-day that Premier Lloyd George and the other Cabinet ministers are still anxious to negotiate for a permanent settlement of the wages question. This desire is in line with the struggle which would lose the world markets for their products. The strike has already been in progress for a fortnight and is certain to continue for at least another week, by which time available stocks of coal will be greatly depleted. The Mines Department of the Board of Trade is already puzzled by the problem of taking out available supplies, and it is understood to be considering still further drastic rationing. Train services will be additionally curtailed during the coming week. In line with this policy the Admiralty is preparing to bring coal from Nova Scotia, for its own use and some of the big coal using factories are preparing to import coal from the United States. A mass meeting of railwaymen held in Carlisle to-day passed resolutions in favor of calling a general railway strike unless the just claims of miners were adjusted by next Friday.

A DESTRUCTIVE TORNADO.

LITTLE ROCK, Arkansas, April 17. A rapidly mounting death toll, which may exceed fifty dozens of persons injured, and property damage first unestimated, are the results of a tornado that cut a wide swath across part of Arkansas and Texas on Saturday morning.

Exit the Kiss of Ceremony.

President Millerand, France's chief magistrate, has inaugurated reform in the abolition of the revolutionary kiss as part and parcel of official etiquette.

Until now it has been incumbent upon him to bestow a kiss upon every man whom he invests with the Order of the Legion of Honor, upon the prize winners at the scholastic commencement exercises at which he may be present, upon the girls and young women who present him with flowers at public receptions, and upon the small boys who address to him verses of welcome.

He is supposed to embrace foreign royal personages whom he may visit or entertain in his official capacity. He is even expected to impress a chaste salute upon the cheeks of any pot-bellied mayor or vinegar-faced and attenuated provincial dignitary who may declaim from typewritten a patriotic oration, the kiss being supposed to constitute a recognition of the sentiments enunciated, rather than a tribute to the doubtful pulchritude of the speaker.

Although only a few months have elapsed since the elevation of Alexandre Millerand to the presidency of the republic, he has been required by traditional and time-honored rules of etiquette relating to his high office to bestow many thousands of ceremonial kisses, mostly upon the uninviting bearded and unbearded cheeks of members of the masculine persuasion. He does not like it.

He has shown no hesitation about his distaste for this purely ceremonial form of osculation. He has, indeed, declined to adhere any longer to the custom. He has decreed its abolition, and henceforth he will give an expression of his regard by means of a good, honest, wholesome and manly handshake in lieu of a kiss.

Ambassadors, differing in this respect from mere ministers plenipotentiary, represent not alone their government and their nation, but also in a much more personal sense the rulers of their native land, no matter whether the supreme power is derived from royal inheritance or popular election. They are therefore obliged to conform to the rules of their sovereign, whether king or president, and to follow his cue in the matter of etiquette.

Example Set by King Edward.

In abolishing ceremonial osculation, President Millerand may be said to have taken a leaf out of the book of the late King Edward VII. Until the latter's accession, not only each peeress of the realm, but also every daughter of a peer, was entitled to a ceremonial kiss from the sovereign on presentation at court.

At Dublin Castle the viceroy of Ireland, as lord-lieutenant of the monarch, was required by etiquette to accord a similar salutation to every woman presented, no matter whether young or old, married or single, homely or beautiful.

King Edward did not favor indiscriminate osculation. He abolished the many hundred-year-old custom of the kissing peeresses of the realm and their daughters on presentation, and naturally the vice-regal court at Dublin was compelled to follow suit.

It was this same monarch who finally did away with the ancient custom which required the sovereign in Westminster Abbey to bestow a kiss on every peer, spiritual or temporal, when making homage. George IV. protested against the kissing, but was obliged to give way to the obligations of etiquette and of ancient tradition. His successor, William IV., was likewise compelled to fulfill his obligation.

Edward VII., however, was more fortunate. He had his way, and on the opening of his coronation he studiously refrained from kissing either the peers or the bishops, and his son and successor, King George V., followed his example ten years ago, on the occasion of his coronation in Westminster Abbey.

One Kiss Remains.

There are certain forms of ceremonial kiss, however, which neither the present ruler of Great Britain nor yet the late king ever attempted to abolish. Thus archbishops and bishops of the Church of England, ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary, Cabinet officers and the great dignitaries of the court and the State kiss the hand of the sovereign at the audience in which he confers on them their appointments, and the fact that they have "kissed hands on appointment" is always recorded in the royal Court Circular, and in the ancient London Gazette.

Ceremonial kissing dates back from the earliest times. Long prior to the Christian era those initiated into the Eleusinian mysteries kissed each other in token of brotherhood and of equal knowledge, and so did the early Christians at the agapes, or love feasts.

But in the fourth century the Council of Carthage found it necessary to forbid all religious or ceremonial kissing, especially osculation, in church, because it tended to "unsedifying in-tercourse." Indeed, there are some old Latin writings which would seem to indicate that the smacks, were too loud, something like Petruccio's lines, when he "Kissed her lips with such a clamorous smack That at the parting all the church did echo."

We know that the old Romans kissed, not, however, for the sake of love, but to find out "if the wife had been drinking wine in the master's absence."

And it is on record that the ancient Greeks made their wives eat onions whenever they were going from home, realizing that the kiss of Venus herself would be distasteful with a flavor of garlic hanging about her delicate lips.

Household Notes.

A little nutmeg added to the white sauce of creamed fish gives a delicious flavor.

When washing a clothesline, wrap around washboard and scrub with soapuds.

When buying pecan nuts avoid those which have been treated with a bright red color.

If you wish to keep parsley, place in fresh water in ice chest and change water every day.

Add one pound of finely chopped dates to a batch of whole wheat bread. Excellent!

The child who does not care for milk will sometimes drink it in the form of weak cocoa.

The Case for the People.

Since November, 1919, the evidences of daily prosperity and continuance of labor have both disappeared, the one being dependent on the other for existence. There were many contributory causes to a condition of affairs brought about by a radical change in economics and different methods of conducting national affairs. Strikes and other labor unrest, have been, as we pointed out the other day, following each other with amazing rapidity everywhere. Everything is strained to the breaking point and administrations have to arrange affairs with more shrewdness and attention to the people's right than they have heretofore given them. The mutterings of the populace, heard in the distance, have begun to sound nearer. King Demos is marshalling his forces for a conflict with the powers pressing his followers down, and when he presents his ultimatum it will be wise to study its provisions carefully and rationally.

Newfoundland has hitherto remained quiet under the stress of the times, waiting patiently and expectantly for a brighter dawn of a better day; but no man can prophesy the rising of the sun of industry. Hence the people are beginning to take cognizance of certain things, and are preparing their case for presentation. The meetings held on Friday and Saturday nights of last week are indicative of a new spirit being generated; a spirit not in antagonism to law or order, but a spirit to investigate and determine for itself the actual causes for the prevailing situation, and to suggest or adopt methods by which to cope with the origin of a new order of things, foreign to the ideas and ideals of all Newfoundlanders. In the report of the meeting, which is published in another place in to-day's Telegram, we have endeavored to give as nearly as possible the verbatim statements of the various speakers, who have the knowledge of personal experience for their guidance, and who have, with fidelity to occurrences presented the case for the people without any frills or flourishes.

Destitution in Western Districts.

According to reports brought along by the S.S. Portia, considerable destitution exists in the districts of Placentia, Burin, Fortuna, and Burgeo and LaPointe. In St. Mary's Bay conditions were never worse, and it is only by the fortunate few helping those in want, that starvation has been averted. In Marytown conditions are also bad, and but for relief given through a committee organized some time ago, many would be suffering from extreme want. In the other districts the same conditions prevail.

Ranger in Big Patch.

A message received by Messrs. Bowring Bros. on Saturday night from Capt. Wes Kean of S.S. Ranger stated that he had 6,800 on board and stowed down and that the crew were working old seals with prospects good. A message from Capt. A. Kean of S.S. Terra Nova, received last night, stated that the Ranger was "burned down" in the biggest patch of old seals ever seen, with ice good. Capt. Kean hoped to give fuller reports to-day.

Portia From Westward.

S.S. Portia, Capt. T. Connor, reached port from points West early Saturday afternoon. She brought a small freight and the following passengers:—Mrs. Paul, Mrs. Mathieson, J. W. Davy, Carroll, Power, Elliott, Phipps, Miss McEvoy, Foster, Curraway, Capt. Evans, Mrs. Lockyer, Capt. Hodder, Capt. Meaney and 35 in steerage. Throughout the entire trip the ship was enveloped in the dense fog which prevailed on the coast and made it impossible to run during nights. Especially was this so on the run down from Channel to St. John's. In spite of adverse weather conditions, however, good time was made during the trip.

New Pastor Invited.

Yesterday evening, following the service at the Queen's Road Congregational Church a meeting of the congregation was held to consider the question of the pastorate. Certain correspondence was placed before the meeting, and it was unanimously decided that the call extended to the Rev. Bernard Holden, M.A. (Cambridge and Oxford) be approved. The Rev. gentleman, who is now in charge of a pastorate in Leicestershire, is highly recommended and is said to be a good preacher. It understood he will be leaving for here early in June accompanied by his wife and only child.

M. G. B. Comrades.

The first monthly meeting of the Methodist Guards Comrades' Association will be held 4-1/2 in the Methodist College Hall and it is expected that there will be a very large attendance. A great deal of interest has been manifested in the Association since its commencement and it is bound to have a very successful career.

L. C. A. Annual Meeting.

The election of officers of the Ladies' Colubus Association was conducted at the annual meeting held yesterday, and resulted as follows:—President—Miss J. V. O'Dea. Vice-President—Miss E. Dunphy. Treasurer—Mrs. J. A. Mackenzie. Asst. Treasurer—Miss Mary Egan. Secretary—Mrs. W. H. Tobin. Asst. Secretary—Miss Mary Cook.

South Branch Coal.

The following information concerning the work of the South Branch Coal Mine was tabled in the House of Assembly a few days ago in answer to a question by Mr. Higgins:—The original shaft has been sunk a further depth of 20 feet. At the 90 feet level two drifts have been driven, the Eastern for a distance of 269 feet and the Western for a distance of 107 feet. Six rooms have been broken off these drifts. Other development work in cross cuts, etc., has been done to prove continuance of coal.

On the surface, an existing road, 2 miles long, has been rebuilt and new extensions of some for over 1 mile have been constructed. The mine has been equipped with the necessary machinery and head works sufficient for the needs of the mine as passed on geologist's estimate of contents, and all necessary buildings for housing the staff and workmen have been completed. This work was practically finished at end of December and the mine has been on a commercial basis since 1st January. Unfortunately the very severe weather prevailing in the last three months has interfered with the haulage of the coal to the railway and operations have been largely devoted to development, which will tell later on in production.

The total amount of coal obtained from these areas to date is approximately 5,500 tons. The amount expended on the area by the Railway Commission is $119,128.97, which does not include the pay roll for March, not yet to hand. The cost of the motor trucks was $32,714.37, including freight and duty and spare parts, and this amount is included in above amount. The cost of repairs to date amounts to $812.94, including labour and material. The daily output of the trucks varies largely with the weather and condition of roads. It has been as high as 80 tons and as low as 8 tons when the trucks have been working. If the supply of coal is maintained, it is anticipated that the mine will fill the requirements of the division from Humbermouth to Port aux Basques.

Lord's Day Alliance.

A large number of citizens attended a meeting held last night in the Methodist College Hall, under the auspices of the Lord's Day Alliance Committee. A large number of clergymen of different denominations were present and His Lordship Bishop White presided. The object of the meeting which was to ask the Legislature to place on the Statute Book a Lord's Day Act, similar to that now in force in Canada was outlined, after which His Lordship read the following resolutions:—

WHEREAS, At the present time there is no general Lord's Day Act upon the Statute Book of Newfoundland; and WHEREAS, Evidence may be found in many directions that such an Act is greatly needed, particularly in St. John's;

AND WHEREAS, With the approval and support of all religious denominations of Canada a Lord's Day Act is now in force and has been for several years, to the great benefit of the working classes of that Dominion;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED, That this meeting of friends and supporters of the Lord's Day Alliance of Newfoundland urge upon the Legislature the importance of effecting legislation during its present session for ensuring to the working man his weekly day of rest;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this meeting recommend that the Lord's Day Act of Canada, with such modifications and additions as may be necessary to meet local requirements, be placed upon the Statute Book of Newfoundland;

AND BE IT RESOLVED FURTHER, That copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the Prime Minister and to the daily papers.

The Rector of St. Thomas's Church Rev. Dr. Jones moved the adoption of the resolutions and in doing so referred particularly to the present conditions of the city as regards the proper observance of the Lord's Day. Rev. Dr. Bond was the seconder, and made a splendid appeal on behalf of the workmen and his Sabbath observance. Dr. Bond had lived in Canada and had seen the benefits of the Act as worked in that Dominion and he felt that the time had come when a similar law should be enforced in this country. The Rev. A. B. Stirling, Staff Capt. Thompson, S.A., and Rev. I. W. Williamson also spoke in favour of the resolutions. The address of Rev. Williamson was most interesting and instructive and he made a big impression on the large audience as he contrasted conditions in Newfoundland with those of the neighboring Dominion. The Rev. gentleman felt that he had much to be thankful for in St. John's as he had been much impressed in the manner in which the Sabbath was observed; still he heartily supported the resolutions.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers reached Port aux Basques at 10.50 a.m. yesterday on S.S. Kyle and are now on the incoming express:—H. D. Reid, Mrs. H. D. Reid, G. B. Lakeshead, Miss Rossie, J. Kent, Miss W. J. Kent, W. B. Townshend, J. O. Newell, Mr. Stowe, Miss Pike, A. A. Chisholm, J. C. McGinn, Capt. J. Cairnes, Miss Chadwick, H. S. Matthews, R. Fudge, S. Matthews, Mrs. A. McIsaac.

You get what you pay for when you buy NEWFOUNDLAND-made goods.—April 18.

Fishing Operations on West Coast.

Fishing operations on the Southwest Coast are not being carried on with the same energy as in former years is the report brought along by passengers who arrived here by S.S. Portia on Saturday afternoon. About one half the shoremen are fishing, and while there is a splendid sign of ood on the Western Shore, the bankers have not done as well as in former years on the spring trip and returned earlier. Harvey & Co. at Bellisport, Harris and Patten & Forsyth at Grand Bank are outfitting their bankers but Buffet is not supplying and is selling out his stock at Marytown at cost prices. Last week the skiffs fishing out of Rose Blanche took from 10 to 15 qts. daily when the weather was favourable.

A meeting of the Sergeants' Mess of the Nfld. Regiment will be held on Tuesday, the 19th, at 8 p.m., at the G. W. V. A. Rooms, H. R. PECKHAM, Convenor. April 18.

Lord's Day Alliance.

Whatsoever things are lovely, think on these things" with the Apostle. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart" was God's word to Samuel when the latter was about to choose a king.

Thus the intelligence and the emotions, the aesthetic and the practical, virtue and beauty, make their appeal for recognition and approval. Is it not possible to find both goodness and beauty at one and the same time? Are we guided in our search for the desirable by intelligence or by emotion? Greek who sought beauty, or that of the Puritan who looked only for that which is good? These were some of the propositions set up by Rev. Mr. Hemmeon in his sermon at George St. Church last evening. The occasion was to have been the Missionary Anniversary, but the absence of a speaker, and the presence of a matter with which he had sufficient funds for charity, but could do nothing to relieve unemployment in the latter connection, and as it regarded the municipality, he thought that there was a probability of finding labor on certain winter works, which would cost between 70 and $80,000. The difficulty seemed to be that the Royal Bank refused to make advances, but they (the R.B.) might be willing if the Government would take over the entire city liability. Regarding the unemployment of the city, St. John's represented 1/3 of the population of the Island, and it handled 1/4 of the Colony's business, so that in dealing with the matter of unemployment with the municipality, representation of the Council and of the districts of St. John's East and West should meet together and discuss the matter in the Municipal Council. St. John's had been handled by the representatives of the various districts. He would recommend that the Council set up an Unemployment Bureau, where the unemployed could be classified, and preference given to the most urgent classes of labor. As the municipality had planned for certain improvements, those giving the maximum of labor for the capital outlay should be given preference. At the last session of the Legislature $50,000 had been allocated for a new Long Bridge, and as it is planned to pave the approaches, he thought the work of clearing about $75,000 of labor investment if the Government would be the primary guarantee instead of the ultimate, as at present.

Acting Mayor Mullaly thanked the Premier and pointed out that the Commission was prepared to go ahead with various civic improvements, involving about $75,000 of labor investment if the funds were available, or the Government would give necessary guarantees. Councillor Morris also spoke and emphasized the necessity of something being done immediately to relieve the situation, which, he thought, had become serious in this connection. Regarding the work of the Long Bridge, the Premier said it was a special allocation made for St. John's West, and when work started it would be under the supervision of the Government Engineer and Engineer Ryan of the Council to the Government, requesting that they donate 1,000 feet of 6 inch pipe for the Poor Asylum, was asked by the Premier. He promised to take the matter up. The laying of these pipes would be done by the Council at the city's expense if the labor expenditure in this connection would be about $400.

A matter of loans was also discussed and communication from Mayor Goffin, Premier Squires in response said he understood that the Royal Bank was not prepared to give any loans. Municipal Council or Government, and he proposed a joint conference between the Council, Government and Bank to try if matters could be settled. Mr. Jackson also spoke on this matter and said that if the Royal Bank was not prepared to make advances, they might try the others.

After some other matters were disposed of the meeting adjourned.

McMurdo's Store News.

Now is the season for Spring medicines, and they are often very necessary for children especially. One of the best and most reliable of spring medicines is the old fashioned and time honored Sulphur and Cream of Tartar Mixture. This can be had in modern form by obtaining our Sulphur and Cream of Tartar Lozenges, which are easily taken by children and which are at least as effective for their purpose, as the crude brimstone and melleasses of our ancestors. You can obtain the same medicaments with sarsaparilla added, in sulfarilla Tablets. Price (either kind) 5c. a box.

West Coast Petitions.

A largely signed petition, which is said to contain a strong indictment against the Government, has reached the city from the West Coast, and copies have been forwarded His Excellency the Governor, the Legislative Council, and to members of the Government, and also the Board of Trade. The meeting of the latter body will likely be called for to-morrow, when the petition and other matters will be brought up for discussion.

Premier Discusses Unemployment.

MEETS CIVIC COMMISSION.

On Saturday evening it was understood that Acting Mayor Mullaly was called to the office of the Prime Minister to discuss the "present labor conditions in the Province." It is said, submitted certain proposals to Acting Mayor Mullaly with a view to solving the problem. It was agreed that the matter be deferred until such time as the Council could meet, and Mr. Mullaly has had notices issued calling the Council together at 11 o'clock this morning.

St. Mary's Church.

DEDICATION OF A WAR MEMORIAL.

An immense congregation assembled in St. Mary's Church last night "to salute the Sacred Dead who went and who returned not." In addition to the usual Evensong there was the Dedication of the first War Memorial to be placed in the Church. The memorial is a very beautiful font, the work of J. Wipwell & Co. London, and bears the following inscription:—

"To the Glory of God and in Loving Memory of LANCE CORPORA FREDERICK ERNEST SNOW, R.M. Born at St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 14th, 1885. Enlisted Nov. 1914. Wounded and awarded M.M. for gallantry, Caribou Hill, Gallipoli, Nov. 4th, 1915. Killed in Action July 1st, 1916 at Beaumont Hamel, France, Aged 20 years, 9 months. Dedicated to his memory by his Father and Mother, George James and Dina Snow."

Cinema Proprietors Amalgamate.

The proprietors of the city cinemas have, so we understand, decided to work in unison in future in the matter of the importation of films and so as to present one house from cutting in on another. "This will tend gradually to lower the price of films imported into this country and it will also prevent the admission fees from rising, and may even tend to lower them."

Bay de Verde Determined.

Daily the indignation in the district of Bay de Verde, in common with other sections, increasing, and from letters and personal interviews the present letters that the Fish Regulations have to come off. If the Government does not repeal them, a condition of stagnation will be induced, which will go still farther toward ruining the people's chief industry—the codfishery. Supplies for the current season will not be issued and hundreds of traps and other fish nets will remain rotting in stores and sheds. The people are solidly behind Cashin, Crocic and the Opposition in their present efforts to have the Regulations removed without amendment.

DEDICATION OF A WAR MEMORIAL.

An immense congregation assembled in St. Mary's Church last night "to salute the Sacred Dead who went and who returned not." In addition to the usual Evensong there was the Dedication of the first War Memorial to be placed in the Church. The memorial is a very beautiful font, the work of J. Wipwell & Co. "To the Glory of God and in Loving Memory of LANCE CORPORA FREDERICK ERNEST SNOW, R.M. Born at St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 14th, 1885. Enlisted Nov. 1914. Wounded and awarded M.M. for gallantry, Caribou Hill, Gallipoli, Nov. 4th, 1915. Killed in Action July 1st, 1916 at Beaumont Hamel, France, Aged 20 years, 9 months. Dedicated to his memory by his Father and Mother, George James and Dina Snow."

The service began with the well-known hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers" during which the great procession slowly advanced from the Vestry towards the Chancel. First came a squad of Naval men, chiefly from H.M.S. Briton, and with them Bert Colton and Sandy Williams of St. Mary's Church. They followed returned soldiers of the congregation wearing uniforms and decorations. These were Capt. Eric Chate, M.C. and Valence Warren, 2nd Lt. Ronald McK. Charé, C.S.M. Howard T. Williams, Sgt. George Hiscok, George Heath, Eric Holden, Cpl. George Gulliver, Lt.-Cpl. Leslie C. Blackmore, and Pte. Eldred Crane, Gordon Harris, John Snow, R. Hiscok, A. Payne, E. Barnes, E. Kennedy. At the entrance to the Church the military men opened ranks and the Choir and Clergy passed through to their places. The Lord Bishop was attended by Rev. H. L. Pike as Chaplain; there were also present Revs. Dr. Facey, and A. Clayton, both of whom served with the army as Chaplains, and Rev. A. B. S. Stirling, Rector.

At the conclusion of Evensong the familiar hymn, "Jerusalem my Happy Home" having been sung, the Dead March in Saul was played by Organist G. B. Lloyd. During this the procession of military men and clergy proceeded to the font where dedicatory prayers were offered by the Bishop, the entire congregation standing meanwhile. It was a solemn experience, for while one brave man was being specially remembered, many others were included in the prayers and thoughts of the great congregation for "They died that we might live." Then followed the hymn, "Great Ruler of the Nations"—sung while the procession returned to the church.

The Lord Bishop, preaching from St. John's Gospel, chap. 16, verse 7, dwelt on the fact that "all is not lost." The Bishop's words must have proved helpful not only to the bereaved but also to men and women who have struggled in life and fallen. "Gala," said his Lordship, "often comes from loss and there is compensation."

The great Easter hymn, "On the Resurrection morning" was heartily sung by a congregation looking for "The Resurrection of the Dead and the Life of the World to Come." After the Benediction by the Bishop, the National Anthem was played in by everyone present. It was at once a Prayer and a shout of Victory! Following this came the Recessional hymn, "Through the night of doubt and sorrow," and the procession of over seventy men in blue and khaki, white-robed choristers, priests and Bishop passed from the church. It was a truly memorable service and will not soon be forgotten. We understand the arrangements were made by the Rector and Capt. Chafe with the approval of the Bishop. The whole service proved that people delight to honor the memory of the men who fought and died for King and Country.—Jane Deal Peculiar Japanese Marriage Customs.

With the Newfoundland girl marriage is quite a free-will affair—she has the right of either marrying or remaining single—she reserves the privilege to choose her husband.

With the Japanese maiden this is not the custom. When she arrives at the age of twenty or thereabouts she is expected, as a matter of course, to marry. The alternative of perpetual spinsterhood is never considered either by her or her parents.

Marriage is as much a matter of course in a woman's life as death, and is no more to be avoided. In choosing her husband she is usually allowed her choice in regard to whether she will or will not marry a certain man, but the initiative is generally taken by the parents. In brief, the Japanese courtship and wedding are somewhat after the following manner:

A young man, who finds himself in a position to marry, speaks to some married friend and asks him to be on the lookout for a suitable maiden. The friend immediately gets busy and makes a canvas of all the young maidens of his acquaintance, and finally decides that so-and-so—Miss Hana, let us say—will be a very good match for his friend. He then goes to Miss Hana's parents and lays the case of his friend before them.

Should they approve of the suitor, a party is arranged—generally in a tea house in a park, or in a theatre, where the young people may have a chance to meet each other and exchange salutations. If the meeting is satisfactory to all parties, the parents of the young people undertake to ascertain that nothing wrong exists concerning such vital matters as the heredity of the family and the character of the young man and woman.

The Marriage Arranged.
Should all turn out satisfactory a formal betrothal is entered into by the exchange of costly presents, and the marriage is arranged. A lucky day is selected for the wedding, and all arrangements between the contracting parties are made by the go-between and his wife who first arranged the happy event and therefore hold themselves responsible for the success of the marriage.

The go-between is a voluntary affair seldom paid for, but because of the happy nature of the office there is always no lack of respectable people glad to act in that capacity.

The marriage ceremony takes place at the house of the groom, to which the bride is taken, accompanied by her go-between and her relatives. Her trousseau and the household goods which the bride brings with her are borne by men, who follow the procession, getting cheers from observers, as it passes through the streets. The ceremony consists merely in the formal drinking of the nuptial wine (sake) from a cup which is placed alternately to the lips of the bride and groom in the orthodox fashion. This drinking from the same goblet is a symbol of the equal sharing of the joys and sorrows of married life.

At the ceremony no one is present but the bride and groom, their go-between, and a young girl whose duty it is to pass the goblet and fill it with sake. When this is over, the wedding guests, who have been assembled in another room during the ceremony join the wedding party and a grand feast is spread, at which much merriment ensues.

Extremely Costly Affair.
On the third day after the wedding the newly married couple is expected to make a visit to the bride's family, which is the occasion for another great feast. The young couple bring with them presents from the groom's family to the bride's family in return for the presents sent on the wedding day.

All this makes the Japanese wedding an extremely costly affair, the expenses often exceeding tens of thousands of dollars among the well-to-do.

Within the past few years, for many reasons, the marriage customs have been changed considerably. Greater regard is now shown than formerly to the wishes of the young people in deciding their partners, and the novel practice of allowing the young people a short period of association before the betrothal has come into vogue. The formality of the wedding ceremony, too, has lost much of its former elaborateness, more stress nowadays being laid on the spirit and significance of wedlock.

Monster Meeting of Workmen.

L. S. P. U. Hall Thronged--Eloquent and Convincing Speeches--Present Conditions Freely Discussed.

A meeting of workmen took place on Saturday night in the L.S.P.U. Hall for the purpose of discussing the present labor conditions. The Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, whilst the hallways and approaches were also full of men and numbers were unable to gain admittance. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Caleb Robins, who explained the object of the meeting saying that a serious problem faced them and no man can tell how people are existing all over this Island. In St. John's to-day there is famine and plenty of hunger. Must we lay down under these conditions? We are good workers, we are a Christian and civilized people. In other parts of the world for not one half this cause there would be a revolution. Your table tells you what the conditions are like (prolonged applause). It would not do for me to excite you, that would be an injustice to everyone, yourselves and your children; the first thing we would do perhaps would be to violate the laws. We do not want to do that. What we have to do we will accomplish with the law on our side. If we were to take a red flag or any color flag and go down Water Street to those stores we would suffer. There is a way to handle this situation. (applause) Let us sympathize with the many who have had a hard time all the winter, men who have had only charity handed down to them. No man wants charity if he can get work. If we received justice from those in authority we would not be in need of charity. (applause) I will take no part in any actions if there is an attempt to make politics of this effort. (applause) Since Sir Robert Bond's time, when he was forced out of power, this country has been bled (applause). Where is our finances to-day? Look at our industries, which they want protected, we are paying for these industries but they don't benefit us much. They may benefit our children in the future. Our point now is work or bread but not by revolution. As we stand here to-night we have the law on our side, and we must keep it. Let us get down to rock bottom and find out the cause of this depression, then make those in authority apply the remedy. We will have work or bread. (cheers) The fishery regulations are said to be the cause of the stagnation (audience "throw them out") we want people to be decent, we want to see that it is either work or bread. (applause)

Mr. E. Whitty--Mr. Chairman and men--before proceeding with this business I want to be clearly understood. Last night a small body of men formed a preliminary committee and I am one of that committee. This morning we started out and consulted a solicitor who is not in politics. He promised to help us out. Now this is not a political question; it is bread and butter. We visited the four daily newspaper offices and requested that they send reporters. We went to the News, Advocate, Star and Telegram. We wished to acquaint these people that the question is not political. Next

Grandma is Their Doctor

"ON an old-fashioned bureau, in a house I know, lies a large-sized New Testament with the binding well worn, and with it a much-used old copy of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book. When the calves have the colic or the neighbor's baby the earache, 'Grandma' hands out well-assimilated advice from the Dr. Chase Book. When 'Grandma' herself feels 'run-down,' Dr. Chase's Nervine Food stands ready on the dining-room table among the salt and pepper shakers."

In these few simple words Mrs. Bert Smith, Way's Mills, Que., beautifully describes the way in which many a grandmother is a blessing to her family and to made them, but won't take steps to remedy them. It is now time, for yourselves to take action. See that the Fish Regulations are removed from the Statute book; they have put our country down. The prominent industry of our country is the fishery; it provides a living for 80 per cent of our population, but to-day that 80 per cent are perishing by it, whereas if things had been left alone we should be living well by it. We have more than a million dollars worth of fish in stores, which should have been sold. I am not against any Government; all Governments are alike to me. We have fish regulations which should be done away with. We have other regulations, too, which are worse than fish regulations. We have the sugar regulations. The sugar regulations were put on us by ignorant men; men who don't know their way home. (Applause). They have lost piles of money by this sugar, and still we have to pay. Let the loss come out of the general revenue, but don't let individuals have to pay. I say it is legalized robbery to be made pay 25 cents per lb. for sugar. There is a third thing I wish to speak on; you may think it foolish. It is the surplus revenue. I may be making a mistake, but we are in a country to-day of all mistakes. (Applause). A half million dollars was allocated for public works, and of this St. John's should share $70,000. We only got the least part of it. We don't know if we really got any of it. This $70,000 should be 'roughed up' and expended so that we can have employment. You may say we are wrong, but then we see nothing else but wrong. The clique we have now, is the worst we ever got up against. (Applause). We were told we were going to have a clean country; have we got it? I can't say we should be as well off as we were 18 months ago, but at least we should be no more than we are now. If we were going to have a clean country, have we got it? I can't say we should be as well off as we were 18 months ago, but at least we should be no more than we are now. If we were going to have a clean country, have we got it? I can't say we should be as well off as we were 18 months ago, but at least we should be no more than we are now.

ships, there would be much more to tell. If the men do not intend to provide for their families, there is not any doubt but the women would do it. He then asked that the resolutions be read. Mr. Whitty read an outline of the resolutions which will be later put in shape and presented at the House of Assembly; they were laid on the table for discussion. A newspaper man who was on the platform, asked the attention of the audience. He said he was in sympathy with unions and unionism, but he did not know exactly how many men were out of employment, but there should be statistics available. He understood that this was a meeting of the unemployed and as such the resolutions are not in order. (some one in the audience have cried "put him out!") Others were in favor of a hearing. The Chairman said that he should get a fair show. One man asked for an explanation and the newspaper man said that he was writing the story for the "Star". An uproar ensued and shouts of "We will get nothing fair from the Star. Sit down," etc. came from all over the hall, and it looked as if all the newspaper men present would be ejected. Mr. Whitty took the floor and abated the trouble which seemed imminent. He explained that the meeting was one of workmen, employed and unemployed, as the posters had called for. It was not the duty of any man to come to the meeting and tell them what it was called for.

Michael Bennett--"Hear! hear! I am a cooper one out of the 200 that are unemployed." J. Cahill--"Mr. Chairman let us have order. I congratulate the preliminary committee and say it is a credit to working people. In the House of Assembly you can't get speakers like you. Some one here to-night said he did not blame the Government. I do blame the Government. I say this condition is the fault of the Government. 2000 men are walking the streets without employment. A few years ago some one said that they would make the grass grow on Water Street. It will, and sugar will grow there too. They talk about education, yes we were promised it. Eighteen months ago we should have had it and by this time have the conglomerate called Government under cover. Let us stick to our colors men." (cheers)

The Chairman--"Let us be careful, and consider this matter in a proper manner. There is a responsibility on us and we will handle this matter, we will find out where the bluff lies and we went until November to do it either. Time is going and we must get a standing committee."

The newspaper man who had been objected to previously again stood up and claimed the right to speak.

Mr. Dempsey--"I've asked the reporters to come here and report this meeting, and to see that we are not taking one side or the other of politics. They are here to report and not to dictate to us."

Mr. Whitty--"Yes, it is right out of order to come here and interfere with a crowd of hungry men."

Mr. D. Beatty--"Mr. Chairman, I ask what are you going to do with these resolutions that we have passed?"

The Chairman, replying, said "We must be careful and we must have the sympathy of those all over the country. There are people in this Island in a worse condition to-day than we are. I am prepared to leave this chair, but I want responsible men here. This hall was given us free, we have no one to our backs."

Mr. Madden--"Mr. Chairman, what are you going to do if the Assembly don't pass your resolutions? (audience "Tear it down.")

Mr. Cahill--"Mr. Chairman, I would suggest a demonstration of the unemployed."

Chairman--"We must close the discussion. I put the resolutions. Those in favor say contrary nay--audience 'Aye'."

Chairman--The resolutions are carried unanimously. Now we want men to carry them out."

The following committee was then elected:-- Edward Whitty, Chairman; W. Dunn, P. Kavanagh, C. Robins, J. Cahill, J. Dempsey, M. Bennett, Mrs. Julia Salter, Earle, J. Power, Frank Kennedy.

After a few remarks by the new Chairman, and others of the Committee the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Emerald's From Pharaoh's Mines.

Emeralds from the mines of Pharaoh under whom Joseph ruled may some day soon be in the hands of the jewellers again--things of commerce once more, even as they were more than 3,000 years ago. For generations Egyptianologists and others occupied in opening tombs and uncovering the ruins of ancient cities in Egypt have been puzzled by the numbers of emerald jewels found encased in the bindings of mummies and elsewhere.

It is a matter of history that Cleopatra to come down to later times, had her portrait engraved on emeralds. Generally throughout all Egypt the gems were greatly appreciated from very early times down to the Roman conquest. Yet all trace of the source of them had disappeared. Though tradition handed down through the centuries told of a series of anciently-worked emerald

IMPORTANT

There are many good reasons why you should "KLEAN UP" your house. HERE ARE A FEW—
Paint preserves wood from decay. A painted house will outlast an unpainted one. People are judged by the appearance of the house they live in, a shabby looking house is a reflection on the people who reside therein. A house which is painted every 4 or 5 years expresses in a forceful manner the cleanliness and character of its occupants. Buy enough "KLEAN UP" Paint now to improve the appearance of your house.

Produce and Provisions.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)
Wheat.—The exports for this week totalled 11,000 quintals, all from St. John's, except 195 quintals by Messrs. Phillips & Sawyers in the S.S. Herbert Green to Halifax from the South West Coast. The S.S. Rosalind last trip took out 2,802 quintals from various shippers to New York; the S. H. Harriman Co. to Barbados, and the Wainwright 1,935 quintals from various shippers to Barbados.

Cod Oil.—The shipments of Common Cod Oil were large this week, and no less than 17,168 gallons were sent out to Boston by the S.S. Lady of Gaspe. The price is very little improved and the prospect of holding for better prices is by no means encouraging. Holders who are anxious to get rid of their stocks before the new oil comes on the market and Norwegian competition sets in, are losing a good deal of money.

Cod Liver Oil.—There was none exported this week and the demand is at the lowest point for five years. The outlook for price the coming season is poor and the indication at present is about 50 cents a gallon. It is impossible that next month may see an improvement, as stocks are low and new oil will not be available in any quantity before July.

Pork.—The Pork market continues weak but not quite so low since last issue. The gradual decline, however, from the high point of last year has been remarkable, and averages $20.00 for different qualities. Ham Butt is $42.00; Morris Family and Noses are $28.00; Short Cut and Fat Back $34.00, and Spare Ribs $38.00. Merchants are not importing as largely as in previous years, as they do not intend to supply on the usual scale for the fishery.

Beef.—In sympathy with Pork a marked decline continues in Beef values. By June next it is predicted Beef will be two to three dollars cheaper, judging from the recent movement in the American market. The local quotations to-day are: $35 for Beef Flank and Libby's Family, Boneless is $29, and Family, $34.00. The importation is very slack the past month, as importers are waiting for the bottom of the market.

Flour.—The market is weaker and the local quotation for leading brands is now $13.35 wholesale, second quality $12.20. The general opinion amongst dealers that the decline will go on gradually, and before the end of June we shall have a $10.00 flour. This will be good news to the people and will compensate to some extent for low priced fish next fall.

Molasses.—The local quotation for Fancy (old) is still $1 per gallon, and 90 cents for Choice wholesale. The first new cargo will probably arrive here in the Czarina (Monroe Export Co.) from Barbados within two weeks. The price will, it is expected, be lower than the above quotation, but it is impossible at this writing to say exactly what the price of new molasses will be. The Optimist (A. E. Hickman Co. Ltd.) is also loading molasses for Newfoundland and will be the second arrival. The crop is reported to be short.

Sugar.—The F.C.B. is importing their last quota of sugar viz.—1,250 barrels, which added to what is in stock makes 4,400 barrels. Consumption is running about 300 barrels a week now, but this is a slack month and no doubt next month when the trade with the Northern outports opens, the consumption will increase to about 500 barrels. At this rate the F.C.B. stock should be cleared out by the end of June. We should then get sugar for about 12 cents.

Potatoes.—As foretold in last week's issue, it is now certain that Potatoes will be lower next month when consignments from P.E.I. arrive. A city dealer received a cable from Charlottetown yesterday to this effect, also that there were large stocks there and holders would rush to unload when navigation was free. Local farmers would do well to sell theirs at the price they can get now before the P.E.I. stocks come in, which will be around $4.00 for 100 lbs.

Hay.—The market is still weakening and lower prices will rule on the arrival of the first consignments from Charlottetown. The present prices here are $46.00 and $43.00 for lots and the single bale respectively. There is a fair supply in the market and large consignments to arrive about the last of the month.

Oats.—The market is weak and a finer shading off of prices is likely to occur when the first steamer arrives from Montreal, which will be in a few days. White are still quoted at $4.00 per bushel. Mixed at $3.85. There are no Black in the market. There are ample stocks of the other two qualities.

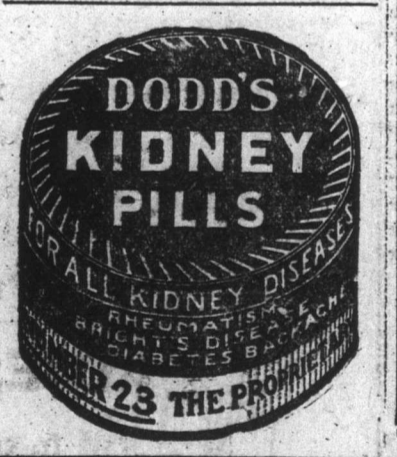

Feeds.—Feeds are very cheap now and it is believed that the lowest point has been reached for the season. Bran is down from $3.10 to $3.20, according to size of purchase. Corn Meal is $2.40 to $2.50. Corn $3.00, and Feed Meal $3.15 wholesale per bushel. Table Meal is $10.40 a barrel.

AMERICANS.

I've been round the land a bit. I've travelled the rails afar. And this I've learned as the bands I've turned—
Men are men wherever they are.
There's the self-same warmth to the western grip
As there is to the eastern shake.
And the welcome, true which they give to you
Reminds the home-folks' make.
I've found them loving the Stars and Stripes
Wherever I've had to roam.
And standing fast to their splendid past
The way that we do at home.
Oh, whether by mountain or whether by sea,
The tropic or temperate zone,
The kids I'd meet on the far-off street
Were very much like our own.
I've heard men telling the things they thought
And talking life's problems o'er,
And I'm ready to swear that they spoke out there
Like men I had heard before.
On the map we are bordered apart by States,
On the flag every state's a star,
But from coast to coast when it counts the most,
Americans, all we are!

St. Charles Borromeo.

Saint Charles Borromeo was no Saint of legend—of miracles and wonders the miracle of an all loving heart and the wonder of a stainless soul.
He was born in the sixteenth century, on the shores of Lake Maggiore in Northern Italy where a colossal statue, measuring seventy feet in height, has been raised in his honor. The hand is raised in benediction of the people whom he loved and who loved him.

In Milan a life-size statue of him in pure silver stands in the sanctuary of the great cathedral.
In a gorgeous little chapel in the midst of walls paneled with silver, glowing with gold, sparkling with gems, his remains lie encoined in a casket of crystal. The skeleton is draped in rich robes and his skull crowned with a jewelled mitre. On the casket, and on the walls of the shrine is repeated the word, "Humilitas," over and over again. It was the saint's motto.

The second son of Gilbert Borromeo, Count of Arona and Margherita del Medici, sister of the Pope Pius IV, Charles Borromeo was a member of one of the oldest, noblest, richest and proudest families of Lombardy. Because he was the second son Saint Charles was from infancy dedicated to the church for which he studied at Milan and Parvia.
By the time he was twenty-six, he had been granted two and had inherited two fortunes, and by the death of his elder brother, he succeeded to all the family treasure and honors. In addition to this King Philip II settled a pension of 9,000 crowns yearly upon him; and gave him the principality of Oris; his uncle, Pius IV, created him cardinal and archbishop of Milan.
Living as his uncle's companion at the Court of Rome, he was a constant source of marvel to his companions for his sincerity and humility as much as for his wisdom.
The rich revenue and the large estates at Milan which he inherited from his brother, gave him no pleasure. He slept upon a bed of straw and under his gorgeous robes of State wore a threadbare cassock. Everything that he owned, he used for public good works and private charities, and while others partook of his generous hospitality he partook only of dry bread and water.
Not only over himself but over all those under him, his rule was of the strictest so that while he had many friends and admirers he also had a host of enemies. However, over these he invariably triumphed.
It was an enemy who shot him one afternoon as he knelt before the altar in his own church, celebrating vespers. The bullet struck him fairly in the back, but was deflected by the heavy gold embroidery on San Carlo's cope. This, however, was not at first apparent. At the sound of the report the congregation rose in tumult to their feet and rushed to his assistance, but he—although he supposed himself mortally wounded—rising, ordered them to their knees again, and with unshaken calm and unmoved countenance proceeded with the service. When he found that his life was in danger, he consecrated it anew to the service of the Master.
In 1585, when the plague broke out in Milan, Carlo Borromeo proved beyond question his great love for his people. He was at Lodi when the news reached him and he returned at once to Milan, although every primate, every noble and every citizen, who could afford to do, had fled from the plague district. Daily he visited the sick playing with them and for them.
Twenty-eight of his priests remained to help him in his ministry and neither he nor they suffered from the scourge.
Eleven years after this, when he was forty-seven years old, Carlo died of a fever. His last moments were beatific. Radiant with inner glory, he was heard to murmur: "Ecce-Venio!"
"Behold—I come"—and then he expired, doubtless finishing the quotation "To do Thy will" as he went on to join the Church Expectant in Paradise.

UNSUNG HEROES.

The owner of the Blue Front store has ample reason to be sore, to have a throbbing sigh, for when the price slump hit the land he had all kinds of goods on hand, he bought at prices high. He had to sell them under cost, and every night there was a frost, when he sized up the till; each day of business stripped his roll, and put him further in the hole—it was a bitter pill. And yet he wore a smiling face, and went around with princely grace, refusing to be glum, and urged his neighbors to be glad and boost their good old native trade, and help to make things hum. The merchant princes of the land have seen a season's profits canned, they had a plexus blow: "We'll just forget the loss," they cry, "for better luck will soon come by—we haven't time for woe." The walking come from doleful genies who lost some twelve or fourteen cents, from pickers here and there; the bigger men just stand the

Mrs. Trempe Says Nothing Seemed to Restore Her Strength After The Flu—Tanlac Again Proves Merit.

"I eat meats, vegetables, just anything I want now, but for months before I took Tanlac I had to live almost altogether on liquid diet," said Mrs. Achille Trempe, Morkill St., Sherbrooke.

"I had the flu two years ago and it left me with stomach trouble and I soon got all run down. It just seemed I couldn't get my strength after that attack. Nothing I ate agreed with me and I suffered so much from indigestion that even the sight of food became distasteful to me. I was so nervous that even slight noises would start me trembling like a leaf. I got so little rest that it was all I could do to get up in the mornings and for the rest of the day I just dragged one foot after the other. I was weak and miserable when I began taking Tanlac but I am feeling like a different person now.

"I have a splendid appetite and everything I eat agrees with me. I have gained twelve pounds in weight and feel better and stronger than I have in years. I sleep all night without waking once and in the morning feel so refreshed and happy I sing as I go about my work. Tanlac has certainly brought me health and happiness."

Gifts of War to Peace.

By George Hies, author of "Leading American Inventors."

In this third year following the Great War, let us note a few of its bequests to the arts of peace and industry. Aviation was mightily spurred during the four years of desperate strife. In Italy, France and England, aeroplanes were remodeled so as to defy tenfold heavier than those of earlier flights.

Where Zeppels Failed. Balloons, the forerunners of aeroplanes, underwent transformation at the hands of Count Zeppelin. He gave their frames the shapes of birds, so as to lessen their resistance in rapid flight; and he built them in dimensions of a daring whiffy new. Yet his balloons ended in failure. They were inflated with hydrogen, a highly combustible gas. When a spark struck a Zeppelin, that instant it burst, into flame.

Helium, which ranks next to hydrogen in lightness, is incombustible, and therefore, is the safest possible filling for balloons. At the outset of the Great War helium was scarce and dear. Fortunately it has been discovered in the natural gases of Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas. Its separation is moderate in cost. In the near future helium balloons may find a place as carriers of passengers and freight, at less running expense than aeroplanes.

Wireless From Aeroplanes. Electrical devices were eagerly seized and promoted during the war. Step by step wireless communication from aeroplanes to one another, from aeroplanes to the ground, increased from two miles to fifty miles. Often an operator at a height of 10,000 feet told a gunpointer in what direction to fire. All this has had its effect since the Armistice was signed. Last year wireless signals from Bordeaux encircled the globe.

Radio detectors, performed by modern electricians, had inestimable value in the contest between German submarines and their foes. To-day radio apparatus is quietly pushing the old-fashioned compass into a secondary place. On shore near the harbor at

Home News

Dover, England, are several radio stations which, moment by moment, communicate with approaching vessels, and in storm or fog, tell them just where they are, and pilot them safely to port.

Similar pulses may actuate a clock aboard ship, and give the time as accurately as the best chronometer. A new method of electric pilotage under fog, is worthy of mention. A cable laid in the channel from the sea to the harbor, throbs with a rapid electric pulse. Two detectors, identical coils of wire, are laid down over the sides of the moving vessel. To each coil a telephone is attached. If one coil is nearer the cable than the other, a louder signal is heard from that side. When both telephones are equal in loudness, the listener knows that his ship is over her cable, just where she should be.

Getting Rid of Rocking of Ships.

A gyroscope spinning at the utmost speed keeps its axis constantly pointing in the same direction. To compare a great sphere with a small sphere, the earth is a gyroscope always true to the invariable line of its axis. Long before the war engineers of London and New York, built gyroscopic compasses much preferable to the magnetic needle. They were unaffected by iron or steel aboard ship; they were not affected by the ship's list. The compasses were of the size and actuation, until they serve to steady a ship, a submarine, or an aeroplane so as to open new conquests to all three. It is probable that we may soon cross the Atlantic Ocean on a deck as steady throughout the voyage, as the deck of a ferryboat plying between Quebec and Lewis. This steadiness of deck had importance in battle, as guns were aimed and fired. It will have further and higher importance in promoting safety and economy as we voyage through the air or across the sea.

Navigation receives another item of help from the Great War, and in a quarter where help was unexpected. From 1914 to 1918 the art of camouflage was carried far and wide. Artists succeeded in making a ship, or a stretch of earthwork, all but invisible. In this they copied the tree-toad who rests on bark mottled like himself; they imitated the Brazilian butterflies which cling, without motion, to dead leaves they closely resemble. Incidentally our camouflage learned what colors are most conspicuous as well as those which are all but invisible. So to-day we know how to paint a ship so that she may have the best possible chances of being seen in a fog or in rough weather, much reducing the risks of collision. In like manner we can wisely choose colors for lightships and buoys, so that they may be easily observed by mariners. The same lesson can be passed on to the painter of railroad signals, of the road-signs intended to catch the eyes of chauffeurs.

England Will Develop Oil Fields in New Anglo-Persian Company Has Acquired Areas on West Coast—Engineer on Ground—Colony Expected to Supply the World's Markets With Product.

BAY OF ISLANDS, Nfld., April 3.—There are important developments in the oil industry. The Anglo-Persian Oil Company, in which the British Government is financially interested, and on the board of which they are represented by two directors, have come to an arrangement with the Government by which they have control of all unallocated land, for mining purposes in Newfoundland. The agreement, however, has not yet been actually signed, but the fact is known that the Minister of Justice, Hon. W. R. Warren, conducted important negotiations to this end while in London recently. Mr. Henry, representing Parson's Pond interests, had an interview with that Minister this week; he also saw His Excellency the Governor and the Hon. Dr. Campbell, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, on the subject, and developments to the advantage of the Western part of the Colony will most probably take place this summer.

It is known that Newfoundland is being much discussed in London at the present time. One report puts it that the Anglo-Persian Co. expects to supply the market in all parts of the world from Newfoundland. Financial papers, reporting a meeting of General Oilfields Ltd. state that Mr. Henry, for many years a pioneer oil expert in London, has so much faith in the oil industry that he has decided to make Newfoundland his permanent home, a strong expression of his faith in the business. This company has recently extended its holdings, and different interests will have surveys on the coast this summer. Sydney Post.

Bulb Competition.

(Indoors.) The results of the Bulb Competition have been most gratifying. The number of entries was much greater than in any previous competition. The blossoms this year have been exceptionally fine, and the increasing interest shown by so many children is very encouraging. We congratulate the prize-winners, and hope that their success will induce others to try in future competitions. The prizes for bulbs grown out of doors will be announced later.

- Prizes:
- 1st. $2.00, Mildred Samson; $2.00, Lottie Hiscock; $2.00, Beesie Williams.
 - 2nd. $1.00, William Canning; $1.00, Reginald Press; $1.00, Helene Clark.

Repeal the Regulations.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Without a doubt, three years of the present financial troubles of Newfoundland can be said to be caused by the Fish Regulations. They should be repealed immediately. The sooner the Government makes up its mind to this fact the sooner will it calm the present feeling which is growing all over the country. They have brought nothing but ruin and hard times upon us. Their effects will be felt for years to come. Those who are most to blame in aiding and abetting Coaker should not be allowed to shield themselves behind the cloak of obscurity. Such men will go down in history as people who not only helped ruin the country by the Fish Regulations, but accepted nearly half a million dollars of public funds with which they purchased Labrador codfish in 1920.

Mr. R. B. Job, of the firm of Job Bros. & Co., is perhaps more responsible for the Regulations than any other man in the country. In a letter in the Daily News, published December, 1919, this is what he wrote: "The question as to whether we can regulate these prices to a desirable level must depend upon competition from competing fisheries (Norway, Iceland and France). When our prices abroad are above those asked by these competitors, we shall be forced to reduce them, and it seems to me no necessity or reason in doing this until the occasion arises. There is no reason to cut our throats by permitting insane competitors here."

Thus wrote Mr. Job, the sponsor of the Regulations, whose firm was given a large slice of half a million dollars with which to buy Labrador fish. After sixteen months of Regulations, what do we find? Icelandic, Norwegian and French fish accepted in the European markets in place of ours. We have lost entirely the Italian market and the fish (some three hundred thousand quintals), which should have gone there dumped on the Portuguese and Spanish markets in addition to their own requirements. We have by our school-boy policy, only sold in Brazil one quintal of fish to every ten before the Regulations.

But, Mr. Editor, what is the argument put forward by these men to justify them in bringing ruin upon the country? They say in extenuation of their offence that Newfoundland is only sharing in the world-wide depression of trade as an aftermath of the Great War. Let us look closely into this argument. Everyone will admit, even Hon. Coaker, that England suffered more by the war than any other part of the Empire. This is the financial condition of England to-day? In spite of a very serious strike among her coal miners and a war in Ireland, England is solvent and is paying off her war debts as they become due. She paid America £100,000,000 sterling last week. What is the condition of Canada? We find for the fiscal year 1920-21 an increase in revenue of approximately fifty million dollars. Canada has passed the crucial point in the period of depression, and is now rapidly recovering her former position among the countries of the world. Even the little Province of Prince Edward Island, after meeting all its expenses of Government, paid off $20,000,000 of its provincial debt and had a snug little surplus to its credit. Yet the sponsors of the Fish Regulations are comparing our present financial condition with the countries I have named.

From the statements made in the Assembly by Sir Michael Cashin and Sir John Crosbie—the two ablest financial men we have in the country—to-day—we find that Newfoundland has yet to face a period of depression worse than the present. It is now nearly the first of May, when every fisherman should be getting ready for the fishery, yet no one knows whether any supplies will be given or whether there will be any quantity of fish caught or not this year. The people are in a state of alarm and the Government has done nothing to allay this feeling. Nearly half of the business men of the country have been ruined by Fish Regulations, others have met such losses that they have been compelled to curtail their supplies.

Will Mr. Squires or Mr. Coaker tell the people how they are going to get supplied by the fishery this year? Another argument put forward, Mr. Editor, by the men who brought about the Fish Regulations is that Mr. Coaker was sincere in his intentions. I wonder how they ever heard of the saying that the road to Hell is paved with good intentions? When we find Water Street fish merchants permitting a man like Coaker to tell them how they should conduct their business, it is laughable. Is Mr. Coaker such a business genius that he considered him well qualified to give them advice as to their own business? Let the Labrador Fish Scandal, the Salt Scandal, and other Scandals connected with the Fish Regulations tell the tale. The country is waiting for some definite statement from the Prime Minister as to what he intends doing to remove the Act regulating the sale and export of salt codfish from the Statute Book before it can again engage in the fishery to any extent.

Contracts made with car owners for supplying their season's gasoline. Monogram Lubricating Oil, $1.80 per gallon, at J. McKinlay's, Lime Street.

West Coast Notes.

Since my last notes to you the snows of the anticipated good fishery have disappeared. The drift fish has been on shore and over the fishing ground with the result that the fish have all disappeared—gone, no doubt, to the Eastern and Southern banks—there to await the time to go to the Straits so soon the ice clears, and the opinion of the fishermen is there will be no more fish until the herring strike, which is usually the middle of April.

The fishery on this coast is the worst for many years. At Channel very few boats are fishing. No one there appears to be interested. I assure you there is nothing of an encouraging nature in codfishing to-day. It is difficult to get any merchant to take codfish, either fresh or salt bulk, and with the low prices offered, 1½ to 2% cents per pound for fresh, to be deducted therefrom is the high price asked for bait and together with the cost of gasoline, and when a boat brings in 3 or 5 qts. of fish to be divided between three married men—as the majority of our fishing skills are married with—leaves but little to each.

At Burnt Islands the people are in a much worse condition. There are no provisions, with the exception of a few barrels flour sent there by the liquidators of R. Moulton, Ltd., to barter, for which they are charging $16.75 per barrel and paying 1½ cents per lb. for fresh fish. Many times the people of that place were compelled to go either to Rose Blanche, Isle aux Morts or Channel and barter the few quintals of fish they may have had, in exchange for only the bare necessities of life—flour, tea and molasses—and laterly when the fish left the grounds nearly the whole of the Burnt Island people had to go to Rose Blanche to apply to the Relieving Officer for assistance. Many times they were compelled to walk 12 miles, and haul back flour on sleds. Similar conditions exist all along the shore as far East as Burgeo.

The aforesaid is what is happening and this part of the coast to-day—the once self-prided "Gloucester of Newfoundland"—The failure of R. Moulton, Ltd. and other firms along the shore, are all attributed to the Coaker enacted Fish Regulations. The tying up of all the foreign going vessels on the coast of the delays in sailing, are also attributed to the same cause. Is it a wonder the self-praised fisherman's friend is to-day the most hated man in Nfld.? And is it any wonder the present Government is expected to be short lived?

Two cargoes of salt arrived last week to Burgeo, consigned to John T. Moulton, who is trying to find a purchaser. At Burgeo everything is at a standstill. No one appears to have energy to do anything else but frowl. So soon as an opportunity offers for our young men and many of the married men to get out of the country they are gone.

Many from Fortune Bay have already gone to Lunenburg to fish in their fleet on account of many of our bankers being laid up, not being able to make the venture a paying one.

Is it any wonder that our fishermen are so disgusted with the present Government and its laws, which are grinding the life blood out of them? Take for instance the taxes fishermen have to pay for the export of their fish—30 cents per quintal—this is a direct tax on the fishermen only. The Government claims it is the exporter that pays this and not the fishermen. To give an illustration of how this is not so, Americans come to purchase a cargo salt bulk fish. They know they have to pay 30 cents per quintal export duty and 50¢ License, and they give the fishermen that much less for their fish. How much longer are the present conditions going to hamper us? Who will answer?

Admiral Sturdee's Retirement.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)

Admiral Sir Frederick Doveton Sturdee's retirement from the Navy (writes a naval correspondent) touches many memories amongst old and young naval men. Admiral Sturdee was present at the bombardment of Alexandria as a Lieutenant in H.M.S. Helix. Another historical incident was when in command on the Australian Station in 1889 he was ordered to Sagoa at the time when Germany was making her claims there. When the Great War broke out he was appointed Chief of the War Staff. After the loss of Admiral Cradock's squadron, off Valparaiso, the Staff was blamed for having no reinforcements to these ships, which were much inferior to the German vessels known to be in these waters. Wherever the responsibility lay and what proportion, if any, lay at the Admiralty door, we shall not know until the overdue naval history of the war appears. Immediately the disaster was known Sturdee was dispatched with the invincible and Indefatigable and other ships to South America, and off the Falkland Islands destroyed Von Spee's squadron in the most decisive naval victory of the war.

After that he commanded the fourth battle squadron, and in the Benbow was present at Jutland. On the re-organization of the Grand Fleet, he transferred his flag to the Hercules, and latterly was commander-in-chief at Chatham. Naval men will agree that Admiral Sturdee is one of the most brilliant and intellectual officers in the service. He was twice awarded the gold medal of the Royal United Service Institute, and won many other honors. He is probably the greatest authority on tactics in the British Navy. At an early period in his career he realized the importance of the subject, and he never failed to impress his view on all officers, both senior and junior, under his command. It was characteristic of him that he avoided unnecessary ceremony and contented himself with a small, but very efficient staff. Whilst maintaining the traditions and discipline of the service his approachable character made him the friend of such as the commander of his submarines. His popularity as a commander was shown by the fact that in leaving the Grand Fleet his squadron cleared lower deck to man and cheer ship, which affected him so deeply that he had to leave the bridge.

A Question for the Committee.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—May I on behalf of the unemployed in this city and, if there be any, outside this city, appeal to the Government for whatever aid can be rendered, and what consideration is possible? I do so quite of my own desire and without request. The only appeal of this nature made up to the minute of writing this, so far as I am aware, was the eloquent letter of Mrs. Julia Salter Earle some months ago. I do not know how many unemployed there are in the city or country. I do know that if there be any they should have done for them anything that can be done. They have served the state long and in the majority of cases honestly. Now that they are through no fault of their own, unable to help themselves, not to speak of the state, it is the solemn duty of the state to help them. These fellow-citizens are men and brothers. They are human and have their bodily needs, even as you and I. Their families—wives and children—have needs. Their little children must eat, sir, even as yours and mine must. If, through no fault of theirs, they may not obtain the food so vital to them, it is without doubt the duty of organized society—which is the government, or the state—to provide that food. But these fellow-citizens of ours do not ask charity, nor will they accept it, if I am not mistaken.

They want work.

I attended a Saturday night meeting called to discuss the subject of unemployment. I may say that there appeared to me to be an undercurrent of intense feeling—a feeling which was expressed frequently during the meeting, particularly when some speaker would put into words the unformed, inchoate thoughts which the audience possessed. I tried to speak myself, but was not allowed to finish. I regret it because of this. I believe, much good which would have resulted from the meeting will not now materialize. I hasten to add, lest that be thought egotistical, that my reason for so thinking is that the meeting adjourned without passing, considering or having put before it, any resolution dealing with unemployment, or even containing the word unemployment. That is to say, while unemployment was discussed by one speaker and another, the resolution which was submitted by Mr. E. J. Whitty and passed, while dealing with fish regulations, war measures acts, food control boards and free trade, had nothing whatever to say about the subject for the discussion of which the meeting was called. I was trying to point this out when I was stopped by the chairman, prompted by Mr. Whitty, despite calls from the floor to let me proceed. Some one standing near the platform stated loudly that I was a Daily Star reporter. I replied politely that I was not and never was. I told the audience that I had come to the meeting with the intention of writing a story of the proceedings, so as to help the cause of the men by trying to enlist the public and the public's sympathy. The chairman, having been tipped off by Mr. Whitty, who seemed to me to be a little energetic in "grabbing" the meeting, ordered me to stop, and announced that newspaper reporters would not be allowed to speak. Mr. R. T. Joy, another newspaperman present, asked to be allowed to have his say, but was refused. There may have been some justification for this, but I claim that there was none in my own case.

Sir, when the deputation appointed by the meeting present itself at the House of Assembly and reads the resolution passed at that meeting, namely, a resolution composed entirely of condemnation of government measures, measures which have been much used in politics, and measures on which the government perhaps pivots, can the house honestly regard the petitioners as men uninterested in politics, unpartisan, and impartial? I fear not. I fear, too, that when the public reads the resolution it will not be long in concluding that the meeting was not entirely free of political taint and partisanship. That is a terrible pity. It may have the result of undoing the good which that meeting of men for the most part honest in their desire to get work and bread tried to do. On the heads of those who "worked" the dodge lies the blame.

I want to point out to the public, however, this fact, that whereas there might have been political wire-pulling at that meeting, the men for the most part were honest and sincere and were not there for any political purpose at all. I firmly believe that if I had been allowed to finish, the men would have seen as I did, and asked for the government to consider their case, instead of passing a resolution knocking the government. After all, sir, how using government to seriously regard the government Saturday night meeting, if there is the slightest suggestion of political wire-pulling about it?

Sincerely,
J. R. SMALLWOOD.

Obituary.

By the death of Mrs. D. Louise, wife of W. J. Coleridge, Bonavista has lost one of its most highly esteemed residents. Her death came as a great surprise to her many friends as she was enjoying good health until a few days previous to her death. During her short life she never ceased working for her Master, always taking great interest in Church and School work, whilst her kindness to the sick and needy made her a favorite among her friends. All that medical skill could do was not successful in prolonging life, as God's will must be done, and on Saturday morning, the 2nd day of April, her soul winged its flight to the Great Beyond to receive the reward of a well-spent life. On Sunday evening she was laid to rest, a large gathering of relations and friends wending their way to the cemetery, where the remains were interred, there to rest until awakened by the sound of the Great Trumpet. There is a vacant place in the home which can never be filled and the heartfelt sympathy of the community goes out to the dear ones who are left to mourn.

"Look beyond the skies are clearing See the mist dissolves away Soon our eyes will catch the dawning Of a bright celestial day. Soon the shadows will be lifted That around us now are cast And rejoicing we shall gather Home at last."—COM. Bonavista, April 14th, 1921.

Naval Prize Money.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—With reference to a letter in your issue of the 23rd inst., signed by ex-Skipper John Rodgers, R.N.R., under the heading "Naval Prize Money," I beg to state that no money has been paid by me on behalf of the British Admiralty to the Newfoundland Government for Naval Prize Money, and that the statement contained in a letter published in your issue of the 15th inst., signed "One Returned," that the Paymaster of the "Briton" had told the writer that this money had been paid to the Newfoundland Government, is incorrectly attributed to me.

Yours truly,
F. D. NIND,
Paymaster Commander R.N.,
H.M.S. "Briton."

11th April, 1921.

BORN.

On April 17th, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williams, 35 McDougal Street, a son. On the 14th inst., to Mr. and Mrs. Mark Chipman, 10 Clifford Street, a son.

DIED.

Yesterday morning the 17th inst., Elizabeth, widow of Isaac Richards, aged 76 years, leaving five sons, one daughter and twenty-two grandchildren, to mourn their sad loss. Funeral to-morrow, Tuesday, at 2.30 p.m., from her son's residence, Larkins Square. On Saturday morning, 16th inst., Hilda Power, eldest daughter of Isabella and Richard Power, aged 11 years. Yet again we hope to meet thee, When the days of life are fled; And in Heaven with joy to greet thee Where no funeral tears are shed.

On April 17th, 1921, after a sad but brief illness, Priscilla Jane (Sadie), beloved wife of Mark Chipman and only daughter of the late Isaac and Mary leaving a husband, four children, mother and one brother. Funeral to-morrow, Tuesday, at 2.30 p.m., from her apartment, 75 McFarlane Street. Boston papers please copy.

At Topsail, on 13th inst., at 12.30, after a long illness, Alexander J. Mercer, aged 42 years, fortified with the rites of the Holy Catholic Church. He was laid to rest in that little churchyard at Topsail, on April 16th, to await that final call on resurrection morn. He leaves to mourn a wife and a large circle of relatives and friends. Sacred Heart of Jesus have mercy on his soul.

When the angel of death came to him, His soul for to release; After 18 long months of suffering He closed his eyes in peace. All earthly cares he laid aside, For the spirit it was free; Then God had called him to his home In bright eternity.

He bore his suffering bravely, Without murmur, tear or sigh; Yet oft he prayed his patron saint Would help him for to die; Then on that bright April day, God granted his request; And the angels beckoned him to come To the mansion of the blessed. —Inserted by his wife, Teresa M. Mercer.

At the Fever Hospital, after a short illness, the beloved son of John and Lizzie Skeans, aged 14 years. We miss thee from thy home dear; We miss thee from thy place; The shadow o'er our home is cast, We miss the sunshine of thy face.

We miss your kind and willing hand, Your fond and earnest care; Our home is dark without you, You are missed both everywhere.

Water Street Stores Dept.

FOR SALE AT A BARGAIN,
1 12-H.P. SEAL ENGINE, in first class condition.

Here are a few of its important points: No water pump is necessary, the circulation around the jacket causes a natural flow of water. The crankshaft is enclosed in a case which carry the lubricators to the bearings. The crank dome cover can be removed with half the bearings for inspection of piston and connecting rod, without dismantling the engine. The valve gear can be removed independently of cylinder, the head of which is below the water line. The water circulation is automatic. Each down stroke gives an oil drip on the connecting rod, thus supplying free lubrication. The fuel is controlled by an automatic inlet valve; once set by the regulator it requires no further attention. After five minutes running of the engine the automatic timed ignition takes up the firing, being operated by a bulb, which becomes red hot and ignites the mixture at the correct moment by the plunger which admits fresh mixture to the bulb. It is of the four stroke type and runs 800 revolutions a minute.
