The Pacific Railway Bill.
The Pacific Railway Bill was again before the House on Friday, when it was passed through Committee, and ordered for a third reading. The Opposition moved several important amendments, which if carried would have divested the measure of some of its worst features, but with the exception of two or three they were objected to by the Government and consequently defeated. One of the most important of these amendments was that proposed by Mr. Mackenzie, that the clause giving the Governor in Council power to charter companies for the construction of the road be expunged. He contended with great force of argument that Parliament was the proper body to grant such powers, and gave instances where in times past the House had jealously guarded their rights on questions of railway legislation. It was no use, however, the Government were determined to carry the clause, and Mr. Mackenzie's amendment was voted down. Another amendment, providing that actual settlers might enter on lands unsold or unoccupied belonging to the Government or the Railway Company, on terms to be decided by Parliament, and that portions of the country should be reserved for free grants, was also voted down. Sir John Macdonald advanced the extraordinary objection to its adoption, that it was equivalent to telling the people of Europe to enter the country, and that the people of Canada would have to pay for making the road. In other words he objected to it on the ground that it would hold out too tempting an offer to immigrants, and that the lands along the road would be settled too soon! We were always in the belief that what this country wanted most was immigrants, but the Premier seems to think otherwise, and upholds the policy which has kept this country back so long, by putting difficulties in the way of the immigrant in the shape of charges for public lands, which should be thrown open free to the industrious settler. No one dared to answer Mr. Mackenzie's argument that we were borrowing money to build the road, and that the best and surest way of paying for this debt, was to fill the country with settlers, who would cultivate the lands, and in many other ways swell the yearly revenues of the Dominion.

The Washington Treaty.
The negotiations ancient the Supplemental Treaty are not yet broken off, but there is now little hope left that any agreement will be come to about it between Britain and the United States. Mr. Gladstone's Government objected to the acceptance of the changes made in it by the United States Senate, and that body, as well as the President, refuse to withdraw these alterations, or make any more changes in it. The London Times, commenting on the subject, in an article on Friday, asserts there never has been any genuine agreement between England and America touching the indirect claims. It thinks that if the official telegrams on the subject had been communicated directly to the foreign Ministers of each Government instead of being filtered through a medium the claim which separated them would have been recognized long ago. With the correspondence before us, concludes the Times, we must consider the failure of the arbitration inevitable. We may thank the American Senate for this. Had it accepted the supplemental article without amendment, our position would have been awkward.

A Hint to Wool-growers.
The price of wool this season will greatly increase the clip for the next. The demand has stimulated the enlargement of flock this spring, and has prevented the consumption of sheep for table use. We count has twenty-five per cent more lambs than at this time last year. California and Oregon sixteen. Texas nine, while in some of our more important sheep-raising States, the increase is as high as thirty per cent. The limited quantity of wool in the market has enabled dealers to carry stock for higher figures. There is much of this wool to be disbursed from the warehouses of New York and Philadelphia. The wool market will not always be in the power of parties refusing to supply manufacturers excepting at fancy prices. For 1872 wool will be no lower. Those who have fleece to sell are of the favored few. Farmers must not forget that while a crowded market is attended with results that are disastrous to their interests, a forced market is a beacon of falsity to encourage the production of an article, yet does not give such tone to an industry as is profitable to both producer and consumer.—Milwaukee Journal of Commerce.
Mr. SANFORD MACDONALD is dangerously ill, and little hope is entertained of his recovery.
In the debate on Mr. Blake's bill to promote the independence of the Senate, Tom Ferguson, it is said, threatened to slap the Hon. E. B. Wood's face. This is the good old Tom argument.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.
Ottawa, May 31.

On the Canada Pacific Railway Bill being called, Sir George E. Cartier announced that it had been decided to accept certain amendments suggested by the Opposition. One of these, proposed by Mr. Bodwell, was intended to regulate the frontage of the land allotments, which it was decided should be in lengths of six or twelve miles; the other was to the effect that the ten per cent proportion of the capital to be held by any company undertaking to construct and work the road should be deposited with the Receiver-General before any agreement was come to between the company and the Government. On the suggestion of Mr. Wallace, (Vancouver's Island), it was agreed that the deposit might be made in Government securities. Some amendments with regard to the route and terms were voted down. Mr. Mackenzie, after once more pointing out the dangerous unconstituted character of the measure, from the extraordinary functions delegated by the bill to the Government, moved an amendment to expunge the provisions enacting that the Governor in Council shall assume the right of chartering and granting powers to railway companies. Lost, Yeas 52, Nays 78. Mr. Mackenzie then moved an amendment, providing that actual settlers might enter on lands unsold or unoccupied belonging to the Government or the railway company, on terms to be decided by Parliament, and that portions of the country should still be reserved for free grants. Sir John A. Macdonald alleged that the proposal was equivalent to telling the population of Europe to enter the country, leaving the people of Canada to pay the bill. Mr. Mackenzie said the Premier had stated, if the motion was passed, it would fill the country with immigrants from Europe, which was just what he (Mr. Mackenzie) wanted. Sir John A. Macdonald denied he had made such a statement, but his explanation only confirmed the construction Mr. Mackenzie had put upon his words. The amendment was put and lost by Yeas 33, Nays 102. Mr. Wood said one of the chief functions of Parliament was the control of the expenditure of the country. No scheme should be presented to the House which required Parliament to disburse itself of that power. He moved an amendment that so large a sum of money, and so large an amount of land, should not be placed at the disposal of the Government of the day. The Speaker then declared it lost on a division. The report was then read, and the third reading ordered for to-day.

The Re-distribution Bill did not make its appearance yesterday. If no further delay occurs, it is to be brought down at one o'clock to-day. G. Jackson, Esq., M.P., for South Grey, is spoken of as the next Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.
