

LONDON'S SECRET VICE.

MORE OF THE INSIDE HISTORY OF THE MODERN BAYLON.

The Exportation and Importation of Girls - How Marguerite was Ruined - An Interview with an Ex-Slave Trader.

Special Cable Despatch to The World. London, July 11. - The exposure in the Pall Mall Gazette...

An ex-detective, who has served on the London detective force for years...

Yesterday while the streets were echoing with cries of protest...

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

he asserts, that they are going to situations, and under this mistaken idea are lured to their ruin.

Under the heading "An interview with party shipped to Bordeaux and Madrid, the Gazette states that a woman who was forced by her husband's ill health to seek a situation, was told by a friend who was a girl in an honest situation...

The Pall Mall Gazette has thus far printed four articles on the subject of the Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon...

The Pall Mall Gazette's inquiry commission pays high tribute to the assistance given it by the salvation army...

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

thank you for your heroic treatment of London's social evil. Speak and hold not your peace for her purposes some owned and used in various parts of London.

Under the heading "An interview with party shipped to Bordeaux and Madrid, the Gazette states that a woman who was forced by her husband's ill health to seek a situation, was told by a friend who was a girl in an honest situation...

The Pall Mall Gazette has thus far printed four articles on the subject of the Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon...

The Pall Mall Gazette's inquiry commission pays high tribute to the assistance given it by the salvation army...

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

coupled one of the handsomest residences in Piccadilly, but is understood to have been sold for her purposes some owned and used in various parts of London.

Under the heading "An interview with party shipped to Bordeaux and Madrid, the Gazette states that a woman who was forced by her husband's ill health to seek a situation, was told by a friend who was a girl in an honest situation...

The Pall Mall Gazette has thus far printed four articles on the subject of the Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon...

The Pall Mall Gazette's inquiry commission pays high tribute to the assistance given it by the salvation army...

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

THE BRETHREN'S PARADE.

CELEBRATING THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF THE BOYS.

Two thousand Orangemen in the Procession - A Big Parade at Exhibition Park - A Sermon at St. James' Cathedral.

The 156th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was observed by the Orangemen of Toronto and neighborhood in a quiet manner.

The woman exercised the right of the highest rank or social position. No one could enter except as introduced by the person well known to her.

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

RETURNING TO HOME PORTS.

Arrival of the Steamship Alberta's Passengers in Toronto.

The Alberta's passengers, who arrived in Owen Sound at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, reached Toronto at 12.30 p.m.

The woman exercised the right of the highest rank or social position. No one could enter except as introduced by the person well known to her.

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

EXPECTED ON TUESDAY.

WINNIPEG WAITING TO WELCOME HER SOLDIER BOYS.

The Remains of Col. Williams on Their Way to Fort Hope - Chief of the Members of His Regiment in Recognition of Their Services.

OTTAWA, July 11. - Sir John A. Macdonald gives notice that he will on Monday move that the house resolve itself into a committee of the whole to consider resolutions to recognize the services of the militia forces engaged in suppressing the outbreak in the Northwest...

The woman exercised the right of the highest rank or social position. No one could enter except as introduced by the person well known to her.

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

LOCAL NEWS PARAGRAPHS.

Notice extraordinary. Our table of Ladies' Satchels, Bags, Pocket Books, etc., at a great reduced price.

Wm. Bell has resigned his position as tax collector for the city of Toronto.

The woman exercised the right of the highest rank or social position. No one could enter except as introduced by the person well known to her.

The investigation shows that a majority of the houses had undergone some re-arrangement...

In our next issue we will give a full account of the proceedings...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

Count Von Munster, German ambassador in London, in reporting to Berlin...

SYMPATHY WITH THE MOVEMENT.

Ministers and Women Thank the Pall Mall Gazette.

London, July 11. - The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

The Pall Mall Gazette in a leading editorial on the subject of its revelations...

THE TORONTO WORLD.

MONDAY MORNING, JULY 13, 1885.

THE WORLD ON THE ISLAND.

Coasters and Boarders can have their papers delivered to the island in good time. Leave orders at the office.

It is coming out that there exists in the United States a secret society called the "Hing," of great power among the Chinese.

The first hint of it appears to have come from Philadelphia, but it is said to be powerful in New York and other eastern states, as well as on the Pacific coast.

Within the past few weeks printed circulars have been distributed among the Chinese of Philadelphia that are unintelligible to the best American scholars of the language.

It is supposed to bear peculiar significance to such persons as understand their import. They are printed, not written, on a piece of rice paper four inches long by one inch in width.

An Americanized, naturalized Chinaman, named John Wing, engaged in the trade in a modest way on North Ninth street, near Race, sheds some interesting light on the subject.

He pronounces the slip a veritable proclamation of the Yee Hing, one of the most feared of all the Chinese secret alliances. While he frankly admits that he does not understand the characters, he declares the slip to be a genuine bit of Chinese word coinage, the letters being formed by combinations of recognized forms which are readily pronounced, though antagonistic to the unpronounceable structure of the language.

He believes the card to be the work of a Shanghai scoundrel, but the opinion on certain marked possibilities of letter formation is the first specimen of the Yee Hing he has seen since leaving Tientsin.

One of the ports of Peking, five years ago. He had seen the full set of circulars just before an outbreak at Poo-Chow. They were often circulated by kites and small balloons which carried great quantities of the tissue paper proclamations aloft and released a babel of noise that over a wide area as a fine silk cord, leading to the hands of a conspirator, was pulled. As the noisy shower began to fall people in the street stopped, picked up one of the scraps, glanced at it, and if they comprehended its import, spat upon it and affixed it to a post or the side of a house. Then they abandoned all their vociferous hastened to the central point previously agreed upon or indicated in the cipher. The utmost publicity was given to these proclamations, and the phenomena carried so such an awful extent that a properly instructed Ye Hing could read the newest inscription as well as one which he had previously seen. It was asserted, even before John Wing left China, that its membership in the coast provinces and in Cochin China exceeded ten million men.

A Toronto Chinaman, interviewed by the Globe, says that in this very city there are members of the organization referred to. He should say that, if there are not, there very probably soon will be. It is beyond question that since the enforcement of the anti-Chinese law in California, an important movement of Mongolians to eastern cities has begun. What has happened and is now going on in the States should be a warning to Canada. Soon after the Canadian Pacific railway is completed the invaders will be upon us in large numbers. There need be no doubt of this at all, it is as certain as anything of the kind can be. The dominion government has done some thing in the matter, really a good deal more than was expected, but still not half enough. The question readily occurs: Would Mr. Blake and his lieutenants, had they been in power, have done anything more than has been done by Sir John and Mr. Chapleau? Most probably not, he should say, judging from the fact that on this important question they have remained dumb in spite of the lavishing opportunity afforded them of saying something for the good of the Canadian people on recent occasions. And many of Sir John's supporters, as well as Mr. Blake's, have remained dumb too. By the time another general election comes round our honorable members may discover that the Chinese question is one of popular urgency and not to be trifled with.

It is considered certain that parliament will be prorogued ere the present week closes; and Thursday, or even Wednesday, is named as a probable date. Whether there will be any opportunity for the Senate's amendments to the Scott act being taken up again by the commons is extremely doubtful. There are on both sides members who do not want the question to come up, and who would almost rather face a Gelling than that a vote on the Scott act. This applies to the Ontario members chiefly; in the other provinces the "fringe of terror," of which we have before spoken, does not exist as it does here.

One slip in a nation's foreign affairs may swallow up at once the proceeds of a whole generation of economic law-making at home. The French people are beginning, not too soon, to realize this. They are coming to see the need of getting the people at large to take an interest in foreign politics, and of subjecting the conduct of the republic's international relations to the judgment of the people's representatives. The manifesto recently issued by the extreme and radical left is strong on the subject. It is signed by eighty deputies, and goes on to say: "Abroad, remote expeditions have jeopardized, at all points of the world, the resources of the budget, the blood of our soldiers, and the fortune of the country. You know what a burden of millions they cast on the national industry, which already has such difficulty in facing foreign competition."

The Germans were at the beginning a thirty race; if the historian Tacitus is to be believed; but it would not be generally believed that this third of their has become severer with time, and that to such a degree that it takes more quenching than even the proverbial British thirst. This, however, is established by Consul-General Oppenheimer, of Frankfurt, in his most interesting report to the Foreign office on German drinking. Although proportionately more beer is drunk in England than elsewhere, the quantity of spirits drunk in North Germany is five times greater than in the United Kingdom.

In Prussia alone there are 83,000 spirit houses, and the average consumption of grain-brandy (Schmied) among the workmen is six glasses a day, daily, and the total value of the spirits sold in a year is thirteen million sterling. Yet, bad as Prussia is, there are three countries in Europe the people of which are still harder drinkers. They are Sweden, Russia and Denmark.

Mr. Samuel Morley, the member for Bristol, who has been mentioned by the Pall Mall Gazette in connection with its revelation of aristocratic profligacy, has long been noted as one of the leading philanthropists of the day. His latest move is to offer to be one of the commissioners to investigate the truth of the Gazette's charges. It is hard to see how digging any deeper into the mire of iniquity can be productive of any good. The parties concerned are probably rich enough to get without the reach of the law. Investigating, therefore, will only serve to make the public scent for this nastiness keener, to destroy belief in all social good, to offend the senses of right-minded people, and to create distrust in that portion of the world to whom mankind is the most indebted. Sweep the beastly garbage away, we say, use the best possible means to prevent its accumulation again, and if it will rise to the surface, why, try to suppress it without any unhealthy publicity. No real and lasting benefit has ever been derived from periodical exposure of this horrible depravity. On the contrary, the discussion that it gives rise to is not only decidedly objectionable, but in its effect cannot fail to be most baneful. Mr. Morley, however, is not only willing to investigate, but wishes to take practical steps in the way we have indicated for the removal of the cause. He has arranged for a meeting of members of the house of commons on Tuesday next to discuss the protection of young girls.

THE RAILWAY SITUATION.

The railway situation in Canada is settling itself in the direction of a "harmonious understanding" between the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific.

The magazine of the two concerns have been hobnobbing of late. Mr. Stephen and Sir Henry Tyler are now crossing the ocean together. Mr. Edgar and Mr. McNeill have signed an agreement to keep up passenger rates, and the managers have entered into similar bonds, special rates for freight have been called by both, and generally the two have agreed to quit fighting and to divide the business.

In then, the Canadian Pacific of no use. As long as it remains under management different from the Grand Trunk it will be a check, more or less, on the latter, it has opened up new country in Ontario and Quebec, and it has given us a great continental railway.

But if the "harmonious understanding" is continued, the C. P. R. will not give competition in rates. All it will give us in Ontario is competition in the quality of service. If the two roads agree on rates, then they will simply fight for the business in the matter of speed, car equipment, accommodation, attention to comforts of passengers, etc.

Competition of this kind is something, but it is not what we expected. We expected competition most of all in freight and passenger rates. And this being the case, the wisdom of those towns seeking to effect connections with the C. P. R., in order to have competition in rates, may well be doubted. The whole history of Canada in the way of building railways to bring about competition in rates shows that failure and nothing but failure. The Grand Trunk absorbed the Great Western, the Northern the Hamilton and Northwestern, the Nipissing and Victoria, the Lindsay and Port Perry, the Grand Central, etc., all more or less competing lines, were solidified into the Midland, the Brockville and Ottawa, and the Prescott and Ottawa were both gobbled by the C. P. R., and a dozen other lines built for competition became consolidated.

These houses, immense in the aggregate, voted for competing lines would have been better employed had they been put into improving the wagon roads throughout the municipalities.

What then is the future? For a time, perhaps, monopoly. But a mighty revolution is coming. The great roads both in Canada and the United States will be re-capitalized on what it would cost to replace them by lines built much more cheaply owing to improvements and advances in construction, doing the work more efficiently, and owned by the state as national highways. All the watered stock and bonds will be squeezed out, all the unproductive and unnecessary lines will be abandoned, and the mad projects born in moments of unreflecting zeal and begotten of a foolish desire for competition will be wound up to the regret only of those who have sunk money in their stock or bonds.

The state will own and administer the railways as she does the canals. Private individuals or corporations will run the trains, paying tolls as they go, and moving at what speed and over what lines they wish, provided they obey the general regulations.

In the meantime it might be a fair question for a member of parliament to ask the government for copy of any agreement made by the Canadian Pacific with the Grand Trunk. Surely the C. P. R. is government road enough to sanction such a request.

ST. LAW.

The Pirars in Toronto.

The people of Toronto are all complaining of being plagued by bad miscreants, watchmen at one order, and watchmakers are denounced as wholesale robbers. The end of all this, is that they are compelled to take their watches to Doherty's, 260 Queen street west.

The Scott Act.

The love of our country has often been found to be a doubtful principle, as its trend tendency is to set the interests of one division of mankind in opposition to another, and to establish a preference, built upon accidental relations and not upon reason. A wise and well-informed man will not fail to be the votary of liberty and justice. Wherever there are individuals who understand the value of political justice, and are prepared to assert it in his country; wherever he can most contribute to the diffusion of those principles and the real happiness of mankind, that is his country. Nor does he desire for any country any other benefit than justice. (Godein's Political Justice, book v, chap. xvi.)

Liberty and Justice! In Canada, where the Scott act was passed, since the Scott act was placed on our statute books. There is an axiom which has never been disputed, and which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it is decidedly with the maximum of restraint. The end cannot justify the means. It is a maxim which is as true in this country as in any other, that the law is best which procures the maximum of advantage with the minimum of restraint. If there be a law which is a maximum of advantage, which I deny, it

IMPROVED PROSPECTS.

The Crops All Round in the States... Washington, D.C., July 10.—The June report of the agricultural department was issued to-day. The month has been favorable to the development of winter wheat.

What is Canada? From the Mail (Can.) Dec. 15. Canada is a mucous-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amoeba in the internal lining membrane of the nose.

Editor World: The Toronto papers are assuming prudish airs of disgust and indignation towards their conferees the Fall Mail Gazette on account of its terrible revelations of vice amongst the highest classes of London society.

—The lungs, liver, kidneys, bowels, &c., act as so many waste gates for the escape of effete matter and gases from the body. The use of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery helps them to discharge their duty.

From a careful analysis of over 3500 special crop reports from its subscribers, the Rural New Yorker publishes a list of the crops which have become a proverbial word, that "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do."

—Volumes of bombast have been published about the multifarious and reliable effects of many proprietary remedies. The proprietors of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery content themselves with the simple and honest statement that their product is what it is.

—Opium, morphine and kindred habits. Receipts and valuable tradeable seat free. The medicine can be given in a cup of tea or coffee and without the knowledge of the person taking it if desired.

—Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says: "I have suffered severely with corns, and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Holloway's Corn Cure."

Honest Papermakers of Old Times. From the London Papermakers' Circular. I recently saw some paper which had been printed on as long ago as 1839, and was surprised at its excellent quality.

—Jas. Shannon, Leaskdale, writes: For many years my wife was troubled with chilblains, and could get no relief from any kind of treatment.

Double attraction to-day. The great hat party goods from Montreal at the Bon Marche, 7 and 9 King street east. Open till 10 to-night.

A hearty cheer would send them better. Editor World: With all regard to the kind intentions of the citizens of Toronto, I think the reception that would be meted out to the "beys" would be a good thing.

The Princess Beatrice's Wedding. From London Truth. Several months ago I attended the wedding of Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg which took place at Whitehall church during the week before Goodwood.

Several months ago I attended the wedding of Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg which took place at Whitehall church during the week before Goodwood.

Characteristics of a publication. A book is not a mere collection of facts, but a selection of facts, and the selection should be made with care.

An Old Soldier's EXPERIENCE.

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral as a cough remedy."

Thousands of testimonials testify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

TENTS!

LAWNCHAIRS ONLY $2. CAMP BEDS - $1. CAMP CHAIRS - $1.

INTERNATIONAL TENT COMPANY, 67 ADELAIDE STREET EAST.

BATOCHÉ! GRENADE! ICE COMPANY.

Ice Cream, Coffee and Lunch Parlors, 13 and 14 Yonge Street, Arcade.

ADAMS WANTS MONEY. DOWN GO PRICES.

Clothing Factory, 327 Queen West, 513.

THE ROCKFORD WATCH

is the Best in the Market. See them at DAVIS BROS., 130 Yonge Street, 246.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE. BILIOUSNESS, DIZZYNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, HEADACHE, OR OF THE SKIN.

OLD COUNTRY PASSAGES.

ECONOMY WITH COMFORT. The Royal Mail Steamship Agency of the White Star Line, has a dining-room and state rooms for a strictly limited number of passengers.

ALLAN LINE.

ROYAL MAIL STEAMSHIPS. Londonderry and Liverpool. ONLY $13.

Storage to or from. 1st class, $20. 2nd class, $15. 3rd class, $10.

TORONTO POSTAL GUIDE.

Table with columns: City, P.M., A.M., P.M., A.M. Rows include G.T.R., U.S.N.Y., U.S.Western States, British mails.

Show Case Manufacturers and Shop Fitters.

GOLD, SILVER, NICKLE AND BRASS PLATERS.

J. L. BIRD.

313 QUEEN ST. WEST.

LISTEN TO OUR OFFER ON WOOD

For the next two months we will receive daily via G.T.R. and Midland railways at our wholesale yard, foot of Berkeley street, a train load of twenty cars of best maple wood, which we offer to dealers at $4 per cord on cars.

O. J. SMITH & CO.

TO THE PUBLIC: I will deliver for the next two months the best maple wood, cut and split (2 or 3 cuts), to any part of the city at $5.00 PER CORD.

C. J. SMITH. Head Office: 25 Queen West. Branch Office: 407 Queen West.

COAL AND WOOD.

Am Just Received via Canadian Pacific Railway a Special Lot DRY SUMMER WOOD, BEECH AND MAPLE, which must be sold during the next ten days, and will sell, delivered to any part of the city, at following prices:

Table with columns: Wood type, Price per cord. Rows include Best Quality Long ($4.50), Best cut and split (5.00), 2nd cut and split (4.50).

P. BURNS. Telephone Communication Between all Offices.

J.R. BAILEY & CO., DEALERS IN COAL!

32 KING STREET EAST.

LEATHER BELTING.

Patent Stitched, Steam Machine Stretched English Oak Tanned Belting and Lace Leather. HARRIS, HEENAN & CO., 124 & 126 Queen St. Montreal.

PHOTOGRAPHERS

357 YONGE STREET, 462. R. RAWLINSON, 548 YONGE ST.

PERKINS' PHOTOS

Stand Unrivaled for Beauty of Finish and Artistic Pose. All Cabinets Mounted on Chocolate-tinted Gift Edge Cards.

STUDIO, 293 YONGE STREET

JOHN TEEVIN.

CLUB WHISKEY

OF 1879. HIRAM WALKER & SONS, DISTILLERS, WALKERVILLE, ONT.

JOHN SIM, PLUMBER,

No. 21 Richmond Street East, Corner Victoria Street, 135.

CANADIAN BREEDER & REVIEW

showing a thorough knowledge of the nature and constitution of the animal body.

M. PEAREN, DISPENSING CHEMIST

308 CANTON AND BEEKER. Prescriptions Carefully Dispensed.

LACROSSE STICKS

WHOLESALE ONLY. The Toronto News Company, 42 YONGE STREET.

ROBERT ELDER.

Carriage and Wagon Builder AND GENERAL BLACKSMITH.

J. B. ARMSTRONG, PRACTICAL TAILOR.

ESTABLISHED 1859. Drink "Plantagenet," THE GREAT APERIENT WATER.

ROBT. R. MARTIN & CO.

Pharmacists and Perfumers. COR. QUEEN AND YONGE STS. TORONTO.

Rubber Garden Hose.

3-Ply Best Rubber only 10 cents per foot, at P. Paterson & Sons, 77 KING STREET EAST.

TYPHOID AND MALARIAL FEVER.

Prevent this by having your closets cleaned and disinfected by Marchant & Co.

J. YOUNG, THE LEADING UNDERTAKER,

347 YONGE ST. TELEPHONE 67.

W. H. STONE, THE UNDERTAKER,

YONGE 187 STREET, Nine Doors North of Queen Street.

DR. FERRAULT'S FRENCH MOUNTAIN

A wonderful discovery made by Dr. Ferrault in 1812, for producing healthy hair on any part of the head.

NOTICE TO YOUNG & OLD.

The celebrated Dr. H. Mollek of London has established an agency in Toronto for the sale of his medicine.

PRIVATE Medical Dispensary,

ESTABLISHED 1832. 27 Gould St., Toronto, Ont.

DOMINION KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE

A sure remedy for Bright's Disease, Inflammation of the Kidney, Liver and Urinary Organs.

DR. E.C. WEBB'S NERVE AND BRAIN TREATMENT

A guaranteed specific for Hysteria, Dementia, Nervous Prostration, Insomnia, Headache, Nervous Prostration, caused by the use of alcohol or tobacco.

M. PEAREN, DISPENSING CHEMIST

308 CANTON AND BEEKER. Prescriptions Carefully Dispensed.

