For all kinds of Baking

—for Bread, Biscuits and Pan Cakes—for Pies, Cakes and Fancy Pastry—no flour, milled of a single kind of wheat, compares with a BLENDED FLOUR.

It bakes whiter and lighter—it contains more nutriment—and it yields MORE bread etc. to the barrel.

"Made in Ontario"

Use A Blended Flour

(of Ontario and Manitoba Wheat)

and you use the perfect flour.

BLENDED FLOUR combines the splendid food properties of Manitoba wheat—with the lightness and nutty flavor of Ontario wheat.

TRY A BLENDED FLOUR—the result of your first baking will PROVE its superiority.

This trademark is on all fine BLENDED FLOURS. It is the sign of quality. Look for it on every bag and barrel you buy.

WHO IS THE CRIMINAL?

(Published by request.)

A ragged, shivering little boy was brought before a magistrate for stealing a loaf of bread from a grocer's window. The grocer himself was the informer. The judge was about to pass sentence on the little wretch, when a kind lawyer offered the following considerations in mitigation of his offense.

"The child," he said, "was the eldest of a miserable group; their father lies low in a drunkard's grave. This morning when the act was committed the mother lay drunk on the floor, and her children were crying around her for bread. The older boy, unable to bear such misery any longer, rushed from the house, resolved to obey that paramount law of nature which teaches us the principle of self-preservation even in disregard to the law of the land. He seized the penny loaf from the grocer's window, and returning to that wretched home, spread the unexpected morsel before his hungry brothers, and bade them eat and live. He did not eat himself. The consciousness of crime, and a fear of detection, furnished a more engrossing feeling than that of hunger. The last morsel was scarcely swallowed before the officer of justice entered the door. The little thief was pointed out by the grocer, and he was conducted before the public tribunal.

"In the midst of such misery as this," said the kind-hearted lawyer, "with the motive of this little criminal before us, there is something to soften the heart of man, though I do not that the act is a penal offense. But the tale is by no means told. This little circle, now utterly fallen and forlorn, is the wreck of a family once prosperous, temperate, frugal, industrious and happy. The father, strange as it may appear, was once a professor of religion. The very first drop of that liquid of destruction which descended through the path of corruption to the grocer, was handed him by this very grocer, who now pursues the starving child of his former victim for stealing a penny loaf. The farm became encumbered; the church expelled him from its communion—the wife sought refuge in the same tremendous remedy for all distracting care, and oblivion of her domestic misery. Home became a hell whose only outlet was the grave.

"All this aggregate of human wretch shapes," said the lawyer, "was produced by this very grocer. He has murdered the father—he has brutalized the mother—he has beguiled the children—he has taken possession of the farm—and now prosecutes the child for stealing a loaf to keep his brothers from starving!

"But all this is lawful and right—that is, it is according to law. He has stood upon his rights. The theft of a penny loaf by a starving boy, where his father laid down the last farthing for rum, is a penal offense!"

SET THE RIGHT VALUE

ON TRIFLES

"I have two words of counsel and suggestion that I think worth your consideration," says Margaret F. Stanger to her thousands of girl readers in the November issue of the Woman's Home Companion. "The first is, be careful lest you underrate little things. In the scheme of life as it affects the well being of the home nothing is trifling. The pretty stock that sets off the dainty toilet, the trim belt and the modish buckle, the becoming method of arranging the hair, the neat gloves and shoes that are accessories of a girl's costume, are of more value in setting off her beauty than are rich stuffs and gowns in the height of fashion. Following out this idea, the tact that sets people at ease, the unobtrusive helpfulness, the readiness to divert a fretful child or comfort a disappointed one, may appear trifling, but they reveal character and are indicative of sincerity and nobility in womanhood. Do not underrate little things anywhere.

"The second word is, think twice before regarding anything by its financial return. Thousands of girls not in actual need are making the mistake of fancying that the saving of money is the most desirable thing the period has to offer. Believe me, it is often the least rewarding thing in which a girl can engage. The daughter at home on whom is laid the obligation to earn her own bread should feel herself in no way inferior to her friend whose duty it is to take her place among the paid laborers of the world."

MARIAN'S CHOICE

The slender too of Marian's slipper sought the piazza floor and set the hammock swinging. There was that graphophone again across the street! How could people!

Next door the Drev's piazza was gay with Japanese lanterns and young voices. The light and the laughter filtered through the vines and crossed the dark lawn between the houses.

It had been so every evening since Marian came home. As soon as it grew dark the chairs and steps began to fill.

"Every dollar that I can earn is yours and here you know that," he said.

"I know, I know, John," replied Mrs. Ellis, gently.

A third came in Marian's throat as she heard her father's step through the hall and up the stairs. Poor father! Every night since she had been home he had apologized for being sleepy, or excused himself and gone to bed. She did not see him except at dinner and in the evening, for he stayed in town to luncheon and she did not get downstairs for the early breakfast.

Five minutes with the pushing-lug five minutes with chest weights, and ten minutes of other exercises, followed by a cold shower, brought her down with a few minutes for the meal, but it also made her late for it.

So they were giving up the four that they had talked of so long!

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis' wedding tour had been like the Marches' down the St. Lawrence River and among the Thousand Islands. They had always said they would go again, but the years had never gone.

When the Marches took their silver wedding journey, Mrs. Ellis said, "Well take ours, too, where we took the first. And this was the year!" Marian had forgotten that. How careless of her! The hammock hung motionless for a time.

Affairs in the Ellis household ran smoothly, so methodically and with so simple when compared with the manner of living which she had found in the homes of most of her friends at the Frohlsby school that she had never thought of it. How careless of her! Of course they were not rich, she knew that—but there had always been seemed to be enough for them to live simply, with a margin for small luxuries and a few more hospitalities. Now as Marian looked back over the past four years, she wondered.

Vacations spent by her father and mother but a short distance from home, or perhaps not taken at all—the summer was so cool, and there were so comfortable at home... So many years that her mother had declared would do perfectly well for another year with a little freshening. So many things that could be done better by herself than by any one whom she could hire to come in.

It had all seemed very easy and natural, and each year Marian had gone back to school—one of the best schools in the country, as it was also one of the most expensive.

She gave a little sigh. "I'm afraid I'm one of those investments of father's that are not doing much," she thought.

The next morning, instead of going at once to her books when she had finished her breakfast, Marian went out into the garden. Immediately on coming home she had set about planning a systematic division of her days. After breakfast an hour of German, an hour of Anglo-Saxon, then a walk of five miles, before luncheon. In the afternoon a nap, readings of a course of old English novels that she had arranged, and such calls as were absolutely necessary. This would be for the summer. Later she would do more studying.

How lovely the roses were with the dew on them! Gathering an armful, she carried them into the house and arranged them in a blue china bowl on the sitting room table. For the first time she felt as if she was really enjoying her vacation.

When she had finished, she went out to the kitchen. It was Mrs. Ellis' habit to make the deserts for dinner herself, and Marian found her in the pantry with a bowl and an egg-beater in her hand. "If you've an easy textbook for beginners, mother, I'll see if I can work out the pudding proposition for today," she said.

The bowl and egg-beater went out with a cordiality that was both prompt

PROF. H. A. HOWELL, OF HAVANA, CUBA, RECOMMENDS CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

"As long as I can remember, my mother was a faithful user and friend of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, but never in my life have I realized its true value until now," writes Prof. H. A. Howell, of Howell's American School, Cuba. "On the night of Feb. 2nd our baby was taken sick with a very severe cold, the next day was worse and the following night was desperate. He could not lie down and it was necessary to have him in the arms every moment. Even then his breathing was difficult. I did not think he would live until morning. At last I thought of mother's remedy, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which we gave, and it afforded prompt relief, and now, three days later, he has fully recovered. Under the circumstances I would not hesitate a moment in saying that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and that only, saved the life of our dear little boy." For sale by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN, W. W. After a delightful evening spent in games, conversation and music, the guests left for home feeling that such gatherings are very cheering on the journey through life.

Mrs. Coleman Joyce died at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hunt at six o'clock on Tuesday morning last. Her death was not unexpected as she had been ill for more than a year with tuberculosis. Her infant child, a boy eight months old, also contracted the disease and died a few hours after his mother. Both bodies were placed in one casket and the remains interred in the Baptist cemetery, the funeral taking place at two o'clock on Thursday afternoon. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved family.

"A Kingly Gift"

EARL GREY'S APPEAL

On behalf of Needy Consumptives

Strong words of Canada's Governor-General

At the official opening of the King Edward Sanatorium for Consumptives, near Toronto, His Excellency delivered an address that must have an important bearing on the future of the sanatorium movement in Canada. We quote:—

"The proceedings this afternoon commenced with a beautiful and reverent prayer from your old friend, Dr. Potts. He prayed that the light of the Lord might shine upon us. That prayer is abundantly answered. He also prayed that the White Plague might be removed. Well, whether that prayer will be answered or not depends upon yourselves."

"Is it not a standing shame and reproach to the governments and individuals that there is not more care taken by the people of Canada, to protect themselves against the cause of consumption?"

On his way out to the King Edward Sanatorium,—so named by permission of His Majesty King Edward VII—the Governor-General's car was stopped in its progress outside the Canada Cycle & Motor Co. by a large crowd of its employees. A contribution of one hundred dollars was handed the Governor-General, a donation to the Toronto Free Hospital for Consumptives.

"'Twas a Kingly gift," said His Excellency in making acknowledgment. "I will tell the King."

Addressing the large audience that attended these opening exercises, referring to this event, Earl Grey said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, when the workmen of Canada are setting an example of this character, I hope you will not be slow to follow, and I trust that the example of the Canada Cycle & Motor Co. may be followed, as I am sure it will, in every factory and manufacturing industry throughout the land."

Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

An institution that has never refused a single applicant admission, because of his or her inability to pay.

Seventy-five patients can be cared for to-day. Accommodation could be provided for three hundred if the required money were forthcoming.

To make this possible, our appeal is for $50,000, to be used in extension of buildings and maintenance of patients.

Where will your money do more good? Every community and every individual is interested.

His Excellency Earl Grey has shown his interest and sympathy in the work at Muskoka for needy consumptives, by accepting the position of Honorary President of the National Sanitarium Association.

Contributions may be sent to Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Chief Justice, Osgoode Hall, Toronto; W. J. Gage, Esq., 84 Spadina Ave., or J. S. Robertson, Sec'y-Treas., National Sanitarium Association, 347 King Street West, Toronto, Canada.

Spent Eighteen Dollars

"Gentlemen—I have pleasure in stating that I have used six boxes of Psychine, and as a result was cured of very serious throat and lung trouble. My case was a most difficult one, and the doctors had practically said that I could not get well. I tried Psychine, and it did me so much good that I continued its use until I had taken $18.00 worth, with the result that I am now a new man physically. I have gained thirty-five pounds."

"It is with the greatest confidence that I recommend Psychine to all who are afflicted with throat or lung trouble."

deared. That's good! I don't feel like hurrying about anything tonight. It's been sizzling in town! You haven't any idea!"

Again Marian nodded. She had "talk about Antonio's terrace dinner!" exclaimed Mr. Ellis, as he returned to the porch half an hour later this time by way of the dining room. "Isn't this great? And as he surveyed the table with its silver and glass and white damask. Small green ferns rose from a pyramid of cracked ice in the center. Honeyuckle and Dutchman's pipe sat out the street. "How pleasant this is!" he repeated, in great content, leaning back in his chair after finishing his soup.

"There's no reason why we can't have all our meals out here on pleasant days," said Marian.

"It would be taking a good deal of Nolah, though," her mother reminded.

"Nolah says she won't object to serving it till she gets the table, and I'm sure I shan't mind that."

"Breakfast?" inquired her father, quickly.

"This is an era of reform, as everybody knows who reads the magazines," laughed Marian.

After dinner Mr. Ellis went into the house to look over the evening newspaper, and as her mother followed, Marian went round to the other piazza, where the hammock hung.

The graphophone was not going that was good. And as she leaned back comfortably in the hammock, from Hilja's piazza came the sound of voices. She would go over, only she had something else planned. Perhaps she would go tomorrow night.

At last she rose and stepped through the long window into the sitting-room. Her father was still reading the newspaper, and her mother was sitting by the table sewing.

"That was too fine to work on evening music," said Marian.

"I just want to finish sewing the lace on this blouse."

"But, dear, her mother interrupted, "we want you to have the visit, and will go next year if all is well."

"Which wouldn't be the same thing," said Marian. "A postponed silver wedding trip would have no romance at all. Of course, she continued, a smile discovering a dimple that she had never fully outgrown. "Of course I don't know whether I should be invited on an occasion like this, but I should like to go—a hundred times better than to go to Newport!"

Marian's mother laid a hand on hers. "A large part of the pleasure of it would be wanting without you, my dear," she said.

"That's true little girl," echoed her father.

"I'm sure that's an invitation," said Marian, gathering up the books and shaking them together. "Then I shall write to Julie tomorrow that I'm engaged for August."

"You were entirely wrong, John, in your idea that Marian might not be contented," Mrs. Ellis said, as she straightened the sitting room up for the night, after Marian had gone up stairs. "She was tired, of course, at first, and it takes a little time to settle into home ways, but I am sure she is happy and satisfied."

"So am I," said Mrs. Ellis, taking a heavy chair out of his wife's hand. "Where does this go—here? I ought to have remembered that she is her mother's daughter." —May Kelsey Chapman in The Youth's Companion.

"I'll do it myself tomorrow." By a series of steady pulls Marian drew several yards of lawn and lace through her mother's unwilling fingers.

"There's going to be a good deal to do before you go away," Mrs. Ellis warned.

"I know it. You will have to work every day for the next month to get ready to play steadily for the month after. I'm not going to Newport. I shall write Julie that I can't come."

Her mother looked up in surprise as Marian stood beside her, resting her hands on the table. Her father, too, had caught the words, and was regarding her over his paper.

"Why, thought you wanted to go," Mrs. Ellis said. "As for the work—'Yes, mother, dear, you're going to say that it would be an unalloyed pleasure to spend your summer upstairs in the sewing room, running the machine? But I've had my eye on that table for some time, and I think that I can tell Julie that I have another engagement."

She looked across the table. "It's the first two weeks in August," she asked, "that you usually take for vacation, isn't it, father?"

"Why—sometimes," Mr. Ellis replied, surprised by the sudden question. "Yes, that's the time it's usually taken, but I haven't planned to take any this year."

"No vacation?"

"Things are pretty busy at the office, you see, and—"

"And daughters are so expensive," Marian supplemented. "That was a lot of money that mother asked you for, father, and every cent goes for her. She hasn't spent any of it yet, I'm glad to say."

"You were welcome to it, child," her father said heartily.

"Marian crossed the room to one of the bookshelves, and returned with a handful of pamphlets and folded papers that had been tucked between the top edges of a line of books and the shelf above."

"I went into town today to Bassett & Meyer's—and got these. What a quantity of delightful literature those ticket agencies are willing to give away!"

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis looked curiously at the circulars and pamphlets that she spread before them on the table. Advertisements issued by various railway and steamship lines, thick guide books bound in paper, lists of hotels and boarding houses—all bearing "St. Lawrence River and The Thousand Islands" conspicuously on the outside leaves.

"There!" said Marian, as she laid down the last one.

Mrs. Ellis had already taken up an announcement sent out by one of the steamship lines, a sumptuous pamphlet of heavy paper and artistic half-tones and was turning the pages slowly.

"Oh, John, do come round to this office," she called delightedly—"or I'll come over there!" She rose and drawing her chair round to the opposite side of the table, sat down by her husband.

Together they turned the leaves of the different books and circulars, one after another, lingering over views that were familiar, while Marian stood behind, looking over her shoulders, delighted with their curiosity.

"It brings it all back, doesn't it?" said Mrs. Ellis, with a little sigh, as she laid the last pamphlet on the pile. "It doesn't seem twenty-five years ago, I declare," replied her husband.

"I've been looking at these nearly all the afternoon," said Marian, "and I'm quite sure that a two weeks trip up there, for all of us, won't cost as much as you had planned to spend for me."

"But, dear, her mother interrupted, "we want you to have the visit, and will go next year if all is well."

"Which wouldn't be the same thing," said Marian. "A postponed silver wedding trip would have no romance at all. Of course, she continued, a smile discovering a dimple that she had never fully outgrown. "Of course I don't know whether I should be invited on an occasion like this, but I should like to go—a hundred times better than to go to Newport!"

NO MORE RHEUMATISM

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HIM

Christopher D. Graham is a well known citizen of Ottawa—formerly in the City Hall and largely instrumental in forming the Ottawa Hunt Club. Mr. Graham's voluntary testimony as to the great benefit he received from taking "Fruit-a-tives" will carry conviction.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 26th, 1907.

Dear Sirs:—

I have been a sufferer from Rheumatism for a long time—pains in my shoulder and joints practically all the time. I tried various treatments without benefit and then I was recommended by a friend to try "Fruit-a-tives." I took several boxes of the tablets and now, for a long time, I have been entirely free from all rheumatism and rheumatic pains.

I wish to state, also, that I suffered from hemorrhoids, or piles, for years. I used all kinds of ointments and treatment and nothing did me any good, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives" for my rheumatism I am entirely cured of these dreadful piles. (Sgd.) C. D. GRAHAM.

"Fruit-a-tives" or "Fruit Liver Tablets" are sold by dealers at 50c a box—6 for $2.50—or will be sent on receipt of price. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Sensitive Girl

The girl who is constantly living in the thought that her every action and word is being criticised by her friends or otherwise spends a miserable existence. And the painful part of it is that any young girl of this type can rarely be made to realize her own foolishness or the misery it causes her. She cannot, it seems, recognize the simple truth that supersensitiveness never has found and never can find happiness.

Some girls are so sensitive—and they foolishly so—that if by some ill chance they believe they have given cause for offence they are utterly wretched and go about half crazy, wondering what So-and-so will think. As likely as not the offence is absolutely imaginary and So-and-so is not giving the slightest attention either to the supposed offence or to the person who is fretting her life over it.

But if the sensitive girl should happen to really offend, she makes a mistake in her haste to apologise, to beg pardon, to let her hair down, to show herself abjectly grateful, and to acknowledge that it is her fault. In fact, it is the worst compliment of a friend, it is only to learn that she has done wrong, and will be forgiven and left to her own devices.

UNQUALLED AS A CURE

HINTS FROM THE HIBED MAN.

A practical farm hand writes as follows in Goodell's Farmer:—

"The man who sells at the horses and cubs them by the rigs ought to be kicked out of the farm."

"The best man I ever worked for taught me the value of reading things about my work. After I had learned to be a pretty good farmer in this way he raised my wages, because, he said, 'I don't want to have to teach another man in your place.' No man who is willing to work full time during the rash season, who helps the owner to plan, shows an interest in his work, and keeps himself clean in mind and body, will ever be out of a job."
