PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY OF GREEK, LATIN, SCRIPTURAL, AND OTHER ANCIENT NAMES.

RULES AND DIRECTIONS FOR PRONUNCIATION.

The pronunciation indicated in the following list is that usually heard from educated speakers of English, who as a rule do not attempt to pronounce Greek or Latin or Scriptural names in the way in which they were pronounced by the ancients themselves—if that could be with certainty determined—but rather seek to assimilate the pronunciation to that of their own language. There is therefore no great difficulty in the pronunciation of such words, and by attention to the following rules and directions any name in the list can be sounded correctly.

Special knowledge required for the right pronunciation of these words is—

1. The seat of accent; and
2. The sound to be given to the letters as they stand in the word.

The syllable of the word which is to receive the accent is denoted by the usual mark, an acute accent, placed immediately after it, as the first syllable of the word Ca'to, the second of the word Cam-by'ses, and the third of the word San-cho-ni'a-thon. The seat of the accent varies considerably in words of more than two syllables, though it is never on the last syllable; in dissyllables it is always on the first. The pronunciation of the latter, therefore, as also of monosyllabic words, after the following remarks are studied, will present no difficulty, and consequently few of them are given in the list below. The division into separate syllables is denoted by the mark - as well as by the accentuation mark. Two vowels coming together in a word, but having one or other of these marks between them, must therefore always be pronounced as belonging to different syllables.

The sounds to be given to the several letters will be considered under two general heads, viz.: 1. The vowel letters; and 2. The consonant letters. It must always be borne in mind that silent letters, so common in English (e final for instance), are the exception in the words here treated of.

I.—THE VOWEL LETTERS.

The vowels heard in the words fat, me, pius, not, and tube, are called long vowels; while those heard in the words fat, met, pis, not, and us, are called short vowels.

1. When any of the vowel letters a, e, i, o, and u, constitute an accented syllable, and also when they end one, they are pronounced as long vowels; thus, in the first syllable of the words Ca'to, Pe'lops, Di'do, So'lon, and Jn'ba, they are pronounced as in the respective key-words fat, me, pius, not, and tube.

2. When the vowel letters are followed by one or more consonants in a syllable, they are pronounced as short vowels; thus, in the first syllable of the words Ca'sca, Hec'tor-ba, Cin'na, Cor'doba, and Publi'us, they are pronounced as in the respective key-words fat, met, pis, not, and us.

3. When the letter a constitutes an unaccented syllable, as in A-hy'dos, and when it ends one, as in Jn'ba, it is pronounced as e in fat.

4. The so-called diphthongs æ, æ, are always pronounced as the e of me, and are therefore simple vowel sounds, as in Ca'sar, Pæ'tum, Æ'thus, Bo'otia.

5. The digraph æi in a syllable is pronounced like ei in suicid. It occurs only in Scriptural names. The ei of Greek words was pronounced like common English affirmative ay, or much the same as i in pius; but by the common spelling it is latinized into æ. An e and an i coming together, but belonging to different syllables, will of course have either the accent or the mark - between them.

6. When r follows a in the same syllable, and is itself followed by a consonant, as in Ar'go, Car-tha'go, the a is pronounced as in fær. In such a word as Ar'a-dus it is sounded as in fat.

7. The digraph æu, as in Clau'di-us, Au'di'us, is pronounced as e in fat. An e and a u coming together, however, may belong to different syllables, as in Em-ma'na.

8. When e constitutes an unaccented syllable, as in the first of the word E-to-cles, and when it ends one, as in E-vad'na, it is pronounced as e of me. And when e is followed by e as the final letter of a word, as in Her'mes, Ar-is-top'h'a-nas, it is always pronounced as e of me.

9. When e is followed by r in the same syllable, as in Her'mes, Mer-cu'ri-us, the e is pronounced as e of fær. The letters i, u, and y, before r, have the same sound, as in Vir'gil, Bur'sa, Cyr'rus. When er is followed by a vowel, however, e is sounded as in met, thus Er'a-to, Mer'o-a.

10. The digraph ei, as in Plei'a-dea, is pronounced as i of pius. An e and i coming together, however, may belong to different syllables. Compare Rules 5 and 7.

11. The diphthong or digraph æu, as in Len-cip'pus, E-leu'sia, Ti-mothe'us, is pronounced as u of tube. It occurs chiefly in Greek names. In other cases the e and u belong to separate syllables. Compare Rules 10 and 7.

12. When i constitutes the first and last syllables of words, whether accented or not, as in I-be'ri-a, Fa'bi-i, it is pronounced as i of pius. And i as the terminal vowel of a syllable at the end of words is also so pronounced, as in Im'ri, A-ceph'a-li.

13. But i at the end of any other unaccented syllable than the last, as in In'dia, Fa'bi-i, is pronounced as i of pius.

14. In many cases i assumes the value of y consonant in English; thus Aquila is pronounced as If Aqui'lya, Caicus as If Ca'ius. This is especially common in the terminations of words.

15. o at the end of an unaccented syllable, as also when constituting an unaccented syllable by itself, is generally pronounced long or of medium length. Followed by r in the same syllable, as in Gor'us, it is not usually pronounced long, but as e of not. The o in such a position is, however, by some speakers pronounced rather long than short, this being pretty much a matter of taste.

16. At the end of an unaccented syllable, or forming an unaccented syllable (as in Æ'dn-i, A-bi'hn), u is pronounced much the same as when accented, but shorter. Following g it is pronounced as w.

17. The letter y is pronounced as i would be in corresponding positions; thus the y in Ty'a-na is as i of pius; and the y in Tyr-da-rus as i of pius.

II.—THE CONSONANT LETTERS.

The consonant letters, b, d, f, g, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, and x, have each but one sound, and as that is the English sound, they present no difficulty. The letters c, g, s, t, and x, have each more than one sound, and hence require rules to pronounce them aright.

1. C and g are hard, or sounded as in call and gun respectively, when immediately followed by the vowel letters a, o, and u, as in Ca'sca, Cor-ne'li-a, Cur'ti-us, Hec'to, Hec'to-ba, Gal'ius, Gor'di-us, Au-gus'tus, Me'ta-ra. C and g are also hard immediately before other consonant letters, as in Clau'di-us, Mo-ba'te-na, Hec'tor, Glauc'us.

2. C and g are soft when immediately followed by the vowel letters e, i, and y, and the so-called diphthongs æ, æ, either in the same or in the following syllable, as in Car'te-rus, Cin'na, Cy-re'na, Oic'ro, Gel'l-i-us, Gir'eo, Gy'as, Ag-o-la'us, Ca'sar, Co-ed'i'tus. In words such as Dacia, Sicyon, Phocion, Acetius, Glaucia, Cappadocia, the ci or cy, having the accent immediately before it, is often pronounced as ch; some authorities, however, retain the c sound in such words.

PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY

MODERN GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

HINTS ON THE PRONUNCIATION OF FOREIGN NAMES.

Foreign geographical names are spelled in English books either in the same manner as they are spelled in the language of the country to which they belong (when that language uses the Roman alphabet), or phonetically in accordance with the prevailing sounds of the letters of the English alphabet.

In foreign languages there are many sounds or shades of sound not heard in English; but for ordinary purposes it is not necessary to try to reproduce all these, and in the key below it will be seen that only six signs are used to represent non-English sounds. These must be learned by the ear from those who are able to render them accurately, but it may be mentioned that the French sound heard long in vds and short in bds is like the sound of w in the Scotch word obese; that that heard long in blés and short in néw has some resemblance to the sound of e in Aer; that the sound represented by â (as in the French ca) is produced by emitting voice through the mouth and nose at the same time, and is accordingly not a pure nasal (like the English ng in ring) but a semi-nasal; and that the â in the German nacht is a strongly aspirated guttural like â in the Scotch word loch. (Strictly speaking â has this sound after the vowels a, o, u only; after the other vowels and after consonants it is produced between the point of the tongue and the fore-part of the palate.) As the key shows, y is always used with its consonantal sound as in yes. It will be understood that in respelling names to indicate pronunciation, the consonants b, d, f, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, r, t, v, w, and s; and the digraphs ng, nk, and ck always have their usual English sounds; and s always has the hissing sound as in sea.

VOWELS AND VOWEL DIGRAPHS.

a is usually sounded â (see bottom of page), but sometimes long, sometimes short. In Hungarian it is often like o in not.
â in Swedish is sounded â.
â or æ is usually sounded like â or æ, in Flemish (and old Dutch) like â.
aa in Danish is sounded as â, in Dutch as â.
ai and ay usually have each of the vowels sounded, the sound of a being rapidly followed by that of i. In German they are sounded like i in pine, in French mostly like â.
ao in Portuguese is sounded as ou.
au is usually pronounced either with the sounds of the vowels separately, or as a diphthong like ou. In French it is pronounced like o in note.
e is usually sounded like â or e in met. Very often it has an obscure sound as in the English golden. In French it is often mute.
eau in French has the sound of o in note.
ei and ey, like ai and ay, usually have each of the vowels sounded separately, the sound of a being rapidly followed by that of i. In Dutch and German they have the sound of i. In French they are pronounced like â or e.
eu is sounded in Dutch as in French, in German like oi, in other languages with the sounds of the vowels separately.
i is usually sounded like ê, or, when short, much like i.
ie in Dutch, German, and French is sounded like â except where the letters belong to two syllables.
ij in Dutch has a sound like that of i in pine.
o is usually sounded like â or o, in Danish and Norwegian sometimes like o.
ô or oe is sounded in German, Danish, and Swedish like ou in French.
o in Danish has a sound similar to â.
oi is usually pronounced with the sounds of the separate vowels, in French it is like w in wer.

ou in French has the sound of u, in Dutch and Norwegian that of ou.

u is usually sounded as û or y; in French, as already mentioned, the sound is peculiar, and in Dutch is much the same as u or ue in German is sounded like â or â.

â in Welsh is sounded like â.

ui in Dutch is pronounced like oi in oil.

y is usually sounded like û; in Danish, Swedish, and Polish like the French u. In old Dutch it is used where the digraph ij is used in modern orthography. In Welsh, without an accent mark, it has the sound of u, except at the end of a word, when it sounds like i.

y in Welsh has the sound of e in me (like the Welsh â).

CONSONANTS AND CONSONANTAL DIGRAPHS.

Most of the consonants have the same sound in the language of the European continent using the Roman alphabet as they have in English, but the following peculiarities are to be noted:—
b at the end of a word is often sounded in German like p. In Spanish it is pronounced with very feeble contact of the lips so as to be softened almost to a v-sound.

c before another consonant and before the vowels a, o, n is usually sounded like k. Before the vowels e and i in French, Danish, Swedish, and Portuguese it is sounded like s: in Italian like ch in chais, in Spanish like th in thine, in German like ts. In Italian where another vowel follows c (as well as gi or ci) the i is not sounded, having merely the effect of softening the c. In Spanish America c is usually pronounced as s in those cases in which in Spain it is pronounced th. In Bohemian and Polish it is always sounded like ts, and in Celtic always like k.

ç is used in French and Portuguese to indicate the s-sound of c before the vowels a, o, and u.

ch in Dutch, Polish, and Bohemian, as well as in German, has the sound of ck; in Italian it has the sound of k; in French (except in some words derived from the Greek, in which it is sounded like k) that of sh.

ce in Hungarian has the sound of ch in chais.

cs in Polish has the sound of ch in chais, in Hungarian that of ts.

d at the end of a word in German and Dutch is often sounded like t. In Spanish and Danish between two vowels, and after a vowel at the end of a word, it is softened to a sound resembling va (=th in thine). At the beginning of a word and when the Spanish d is preceded by another consonant, a sound like that of the English d is produced. When d comes after l, n, r in Danish it is not sounded.

dd in Welsh has the sound of vn.

g before a consonant and before the vowels a, o, and n mostly has the sound of g in go; and it has the same sound before other vowels also in German and Danish, and in all situations in Polish and Welsh. After a vowel it frequently has in German and Danish a guttural sound like ch of Scotch loch. In Dutch the sound is always like this, except in the combinations gh and ng, the former of which is pronounced like g in go, the latter like ng in ring. In French, Portuguese, Spanish, and Swedish it has the sound of the j of the same languages in all situations in which it has not the sound of g in go, and in Italian it is then sounded like our j. (See above under c.)

gh in Italian and Dutch has the sound of g in go.

gi in Italian has the sound of ly (y being sounded as in yes; gli—lye).

gn in French and Italian has the sound of ny (Bologna—bo-lon'yal).

*F*ite, *f*ar, *f*at, *f*all; *m*et, *m*et, *h*er, *g*olden; *p*ine, *p*in; *n*ote, *n*ot, *m*ove; *t*ube, *t*ub, *b*ull; *o*il, *p*ound; ch, *ch*ain; s, *g*o; j, *j*ob; y, *y*es; *v*a, *th*en; th, *th*in; sh, *s*ure. French, *v*ds, *h*nt; bleu, neuf; â, ou. Scotch and German, ck, loch, nacht.

gu in French always, and in Portuguese and Spanish before e and i, has the sound of g in go.

gy in Hungarian has the sound of dy or dsh.

h in French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese is silent or scarcely audible. In Spanish it is heard as a slight aspiration before the combination ua. In Danish it is not sounded before j and v.

j in most languages has the sound of y; in French and Portuguese that of sh; in Spanish that of ch. In Danish the sound of the Danish j (that is, the sound of the consonant y) is always interpolated after the consonants k and g before the vowels a, e, o, y, and i.

k in Norwegian before e, i, j, y, and the modifications of a and o, is sounded like ty.

ll in Portuguese has the sound of ly (Ital. gli).

l in French in formal speech has the sound of ly, but colloquially is generally sounded like the consonant y without any t-sound. In Spain it always has the former sound (Sevilla—sev-er-ya), but in Mexico the latter is often substituted. In Welsh it has a peculiar sound, which is approximately rendered when one attempts to pronounce tl at the beginning of a syllable.

m in French and Portuguese often has the sound of n.

n in French has the peculiar pronunciation already mentioned.

ñ in Spanish

nh in Portuguese } have the sound of French and Italian gn.

qa in French always, and in Portuguese and Spanish before e and i, is sounded like k.

r is almost always more strongly trilled than in English.

rs in Polish } are both sounded like rs.

s in German is usually pronounced soft, like English z, at the beginning of a word where a vowel follows; in Hungarian it is sounded as sh.

sc in Italian before e and i has the sound of sh. (See above under e.)

sch in German has the sound of sh; in Dutch is equivalent to sch, in Italian to sk.

sk before e, i, j, y, and the modifications of a and o, is sounded in Norwegian like sh.

stj in Swedish when followed by a vowel has the sound of sh.

sz in Polish } are both sounded like sh.

s in Bohemian } are both sounded like sh.

m in Hungarian is sounded like s.

th in Welsh is sounded like th in thia, in all other European languages using the Roman alphabet like the simple t.

tj in Swedish when followed by a vowel has the sound of ch in chain.

ts in Hungarian is sounded like ch in chain.

w in German and Dutch has a sound closely resembling that of v produced by bringing the lips feebly into contact, not by placing the upper teeth against the lower lip. In Welsh it has the sound of u or o.

x in Portuguese has the sound of sh; in old Spanish spelling it is used where j is now used to represent the sound of ch.

y may be either a vowel or a consonant, and the latter sound is heard in Hungarian after d, g, l, n, and t.

z in German and Swedish has the sound of ts; in Italian sometimes that of dz, sometimes that of ts; in Spanish that of th in thia.

z in Spanish America it has usually the sound of s in sing.

z in Bohemian } have the sound of zh.

m in Hungarian } have the sound of zh.

The above rules have reference to languages, such as most of those of Europe, that use the Roman alphabet (with certain modifications). In regard to languages that do not use this alphabet, the general rule is to spell geographical names in English phonetically in accordance with the prevailing sounds of the letters of the English alphabet. In such phonetic spellings, however, the vowels usually receive their continental sounds (as in far, vet, pine, rule). In Indian and some other Asiatic names and in Arabic names a is often used also to represent the sound of the English u in but. The vowel digraph ai usually represents the sound of y in fy, but sometimes that of a in fat; ei, most commonly that of a in fat, but sometimes that of y in fy; ou for the most part sounds as ow in now, but in some cases as a in fall. In the spelling of Indian names this last digraph was often used where a is now mostly used, the sound intended being that of a in far, or perhaps one somewhat broader. The consonants j, w, y, e have as a rule their characteristic English sounds, as in jet, yet, well, see; g usually has its hard sound as in get. ch usually represents the sound which it has in chain; gh sometimes that of a very rough aspirate, sometimes a sound like that of the Northumberland or Berwickshire burr, sometimes, before e or i, merely the hard sound of g; kh is the combination most frequently used to represent the sound of ch; and th usually stands for the sound which it has in thia, sometimes for that which it has in then.

In Indian, Arabic, and some other names aspirated consonants occur, and are represented in spelling by an h following the consonant, as in Bhotan. The proper sound of this combination is accurately represented by the letters composing it, but in the English pronunciation of such names this peculiarity is commonly disregarded.

In the spelling of geographical names belonging to languages which do not use the Roman alphabet numerous variations are found from different causes. Very often the variation is due to the irregularity in the use of our own alphabet, which leads one person to represent the same sound phonetically in one way, another in another, as in Moorook, Mursuk, &c. Sometimes the variation is due to the obscurity of the sounds themselves, as where a vowel sound is so short that its exact quality can hardly be determined, as in Bedouin, Belawin. In other cases the variation is due to the adoption in English of a continental mode of spelling, as where dj is adopted from the French for j, as in Djebel for Jebel, or tch from the same language for ch, as in Kamchatka (the common spelling) for Kamchatchka, or j from the practice of most continental nations using it for y, as in Jakutak for Yakutak. Other variations are due to the fact that the sounds to be represented have no signs for them in the Roman alphabet or any of its commonly used digraphs, so that different signs are adopted to represent them approximately in accordance with the conceptions of different persons. In other cases, again, the variation is accounted for by differences of dialect, or different pronunciations of the same dialect in different parts of the country or region in which a particular language is spoken.

Such variations should be kept in mind by those who consult this list, since names not found under one spelling may be found under some other equivalent spelling. Thus names not found spelled with c, ch, s, y, &c., may be found under the spellings k, kh, a, j, &c. respectively; Spanish names in x may be found spelled with j, Dutch names in y may be found in ij, and so forth.

ACCENT.

As to the position of the accent no general rules can be given. Many languages exhibit no such marked accentual stress as is heard in English. This is the case with French indeed, though French words are commonly regarded as having an accent on the last. The accentuation of German, Dutch, and the other Teutonic tongues, in its main features coincides with that of English, the root syllable having the accent. Italian words ending in a vowel usually accent the syllable next the last; the same is the case with Spanish and Portuguese. Spanish words ending in a consonant almost always accent the last; if there is any peculiarity in accentuation the accented syllable is usually printed with an acute.

FORMS OF ADDRESS

IN CEREMONIOUS COMMUNICATIONS WITH PERSONS OF TITLE OR OFFICIAL POSITION.

Ambassador. The title 'Excellency' belongs specially to ambassadors, as well as to governors of colonies, and the Lieutenant of Ireland. Address letter: 'His Excellency' with name or distinctive title following: Her Britannic Majesty's Ambassador and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of —. Begin: 'Sir,' 'My Lord,' according as the ambassador possesses title or not. When personal reference is made say 'Your Excellency.' An envoy extraordinary or chargé d'affaires, though inferior to an ambassador strictly so called, also usually receives the title 'Excellency,' and the wives of ambassadors are generally addressed similarly during their husbands' tenure of office and while residing abroad.
Archbishop. Address: 'His Grace the Lord Archbishop of —.' Begin: 'My Lord Archbishop.' Refer to as 'Your Grace.' The most formal method of addressing the Archbishop of Canterbury is as follows: 'The Most Reverend Father in God, James (or whatever the Christian name is), by Divine Provision, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England and Metropolitan.' The Archbishop of York is addressed as 'The Most Reverend Father in God, —, by Divine Permission Lord Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan.' An Irish archbishop is now addressed as 'The Most Reverend the Archbishop of —.' An archbishop may be addressed as 'The Right Honourable and Most Reverend the Archbishop of —' if he have a claim to be called 'Right Hon.' apart from his ecclesiastical position. In America the common form of address is 'The Most Reverend A—B—, D.D.' The wife of an archbishop has no special title in right of her husband's dignity, being only plain Mrs.

Archdeacon. An archdeacon is styled 'Venerable.' The Venerable the Archdeacon of —. Begin: 'Venerable Sir,' or 'Reverend Sir,' or 'Mr. Archdeacon' (especially in speaking).
Baron. Address: 'The Right Hon. Lord —,' less formally 'The Lord —.' Begin: 'My Lord.' Refer to as 'Your Lordship.'
Baron's Daughter. Baron's daughters are all entitled to be called 'Honourable.' Unmarried they are addressed as 'The Hon. A—B—,' with Christian and surname. They retain the title 'Hon.' after marriage, the wife of a commoner being 'The Hon. Mrs.' with husband's surname, the wife of a knight or baronet being 'The Hon. Lady,' with husband's surname. Begin 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Ladyship' if so entitled by marriage. If a higher rank is conferred by the husband the title of course corresponds.
Baron's Son. All the sons are 'Honourable,' with Christian name and surname. In Scotland the eldest son is addressed as 'The Hon. Mr. Master of' (peerage title), or 'The Hon. (John) Master of.' Begin: 'Sir.' The wife of a baron's son is 'The Hon. Mrs.' with husband's surname or both Christian name and surname. Begin: 'Madam.' If the daughter of an earl, marquis, or duke she must be addressed accordingly.

Baroness. Address: 'The Right Hon. the Baroness —,' or 'The Right Hon. Lady —,' or 'The Lady —.' Begin: 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Ladyship.'
Baronet. Address: 'Sir A—B—, Bart., giving Christian name and surname. The Christian name must be given; it is quite wrong to speak, for instance, of 'Sir Vernon Harcourt' where 'Vernon' is merely one of the surnames. Begin: 'Sir.' A baronet's wife is addressed as 'Lady' with husband's surname (her Christian name would also be used if the daughter of a duke, marquis, or earl, and in this case she would also be 'Your Ladyship.' Begin: 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Ladyship.'
Bishop. Address: 'The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of —,' or 'The Right Rev. A—B—, Lord Bishop of —,' or simply 'The Lord Bishop of —.' Begin: 'My Lord Bishop,' refer to as 'Your Lordship.' In formal documents a bishop is styled 'The Right Reverend Father in God, John, by Divine Permission, Lord Bishop of —.' A bishop suffragan is addressed as 'The Right Rev. the Bishop Suffragan of —.' Begin: 'Right Rev. Sir.' Bishops' wives have a share in their husbands' titles.
 In Ireland the bishops of the Protestant church are now most correctly addressed as 'The Right Reverend the Bishop of Worshipful or

— (or in the case of Meath 'The Most Reverend'). Begin: 'Right Rev. Sir,' in Scotland the usage is the same — 'The Right Rev. the Bishop of —,' or 'The Right Rev. A — B —, Bishop of —,' or 'The Right Rev. Bishop —' (with surname). Begin: 'Right Rev. Sir.' The Primate of the Scottish Episcopal Church is addressed as 'The Most Rev.' Begin: 'Most Rev. Sir.' Neither Irish nor Scottish bishops can claim to be spoken of as 'Lord Bishop,' 'Your Lordship,' though this is sometimes done.

A retired bishop is still addressed as 'Right Reverend.' 'The Right Reverend Bishop —,' 'Right Rev. Sir.' In America the form of address to a bishop is generally 'The Right Rev. A — B —.'

[Roman Catholic bishops in Ireland seem to claim the title 'Most Reverend.']

Lord A — B —,' if the son of an earl, viscount, or baron; 'The Rev. the Honourable A — B —,' or 'The Hon. and Rev. A — B —,' if he is a baronet, 'The Rev. Sir A — B —, Bart.'

Countess. Address: 'The Right Honourable the Countess of —,' Begin: 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Ladyship.'

Dean. Address: 'The Very Reverend the Dean of —,' Begin: 'Very Rev. Sir,' more familiarly 'Mr. Dean' (used in oral communications).

Dowager. When the holder of a title marries, the widow of a previous holder of the same title becomes 'dowager,' this being often inserted in addressing her: 'The Right Hon. the Dowager Countess of —,' 'The Dowager Lady —,' instead of 'Dowager,' to which some ladies object, the Christian name may be used: 'The Right Hon. Mary Countess of —,' Begin: 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Ladyship.'

Duchess. Address: 'Her Grace the Duchess of —,' Begin: 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Grace.'

Duke's Daughter. Address: 'The Right Hon. Lady —,' with Christian name and surname, or 'The Lady —,' with Christian name and surname. Begin: 'Madam,' refer to as 'Your Ladyship.' If married to a commoner or a peer by courtesy, the surname is derived from the husband's name or title; if to a peer the wife takes a title corresponding to her husband's.

Duke's Son. A duke's eldest son takes by courtesy one of his father's secondary titles, and is thus usually a marquis or an earl, being addressed exactly as if really a peer with the respective rank. His wife receives the corresponding title, being thus a marchioness or countess, and their eldest son takes also a courtesy title belonging to the family, being thus either a viscount or a baron.

A duke's younger son is addressed similarly to his sisters: 'The Right Honourable Lord A — B —,' or 'The Lord A — B —,' Begin: 'My Lord,' refer to as 'Your Lordship.' Their wives are treated in a corresponding manner: 'The Right Honourable Lady A — B —,' or 'The Lady A — B —,' Begin: 'Your Ladyship.'

Earl's Children. The eldest son of an earl (like the eldest son of a duke) takes a courtesy title from his father and thus ranks either as a viscount or a baron, being treated as if really a peer and his wife as a peeress. The younger sons of an earl are all called 'Honourable' (their eldest brother is 'Right Honourable') — 'The Hon. A — B —,' the same as the sons of a baron. (See above.)

The daughters of an earl are all 'Right Honourable,' and are addressed as the daughters of a duke. (See above.)

In England the county court judges, however, are regularly called 'judge.' 'His Honour Judge —' (surname); on the bench referred to as 'Your Honour.'

In many British colonies the members of the higher courts are called judges and addressed as 'The Honourable A — B —.' In the U. States the term judge is regularly applied to all such functionaries; and all are addressed in the same way.

Justices. Judges of the High Court of Justice in England, in the Chancery and other divisions, are called justices. Address: 'The Honourable Mr. Justice —,' or if a knight, 'The Hon.
