It is Here Where the Discriminating Go to Enjoy an Excellent Sport Under Ideal Conditions,

There are many reasons why the people of Toronto patronize so extensively Parkdale Skating Academy. It is lo-cated in one of the finest parts of the city; the building is large, with a particularly high roof, which affords an abundance of air space. It is well ventilated and is kept nice and clean. In warm weather the rink is artifi-. cially cooled and no matter how warm the evening may be it is never uncomfortable skating here. The street car service to this point is excellent, and this enables people to come to Parkdale from any aprt of the ity without inconvenience. The big business that this place is the antenna of M. Turpain's thunder-storm recorder. The antenna was a one-twelfth-inch copper wire about 100 yards long, which was attached to a factory chimney, and at a certain point was bent at the sharp angle of 25 de-grees. Above the bend the wire was burned up by the lightning. Below this point the discharge divided into three parts-one of which followed the wire and de-stroyed the thunder-storm recorder, and several iron guy wires, and the third took the form of a fire ball, which traveled 20 yards and exploded with sufficient force to break a window. The theory has been suggested that the ball was due to self-induction of the wire at the bend.

Furnishing the Home On the Adams Plan

The ability of a great store like the Adams' store to completely equip a home-to supply everything to give to the home the proper atmosphere of comfort and beauty-to present ample variety in everything, making it unnecessary to go from shop to shop, is one of the factors that have made this store such a permanent success.

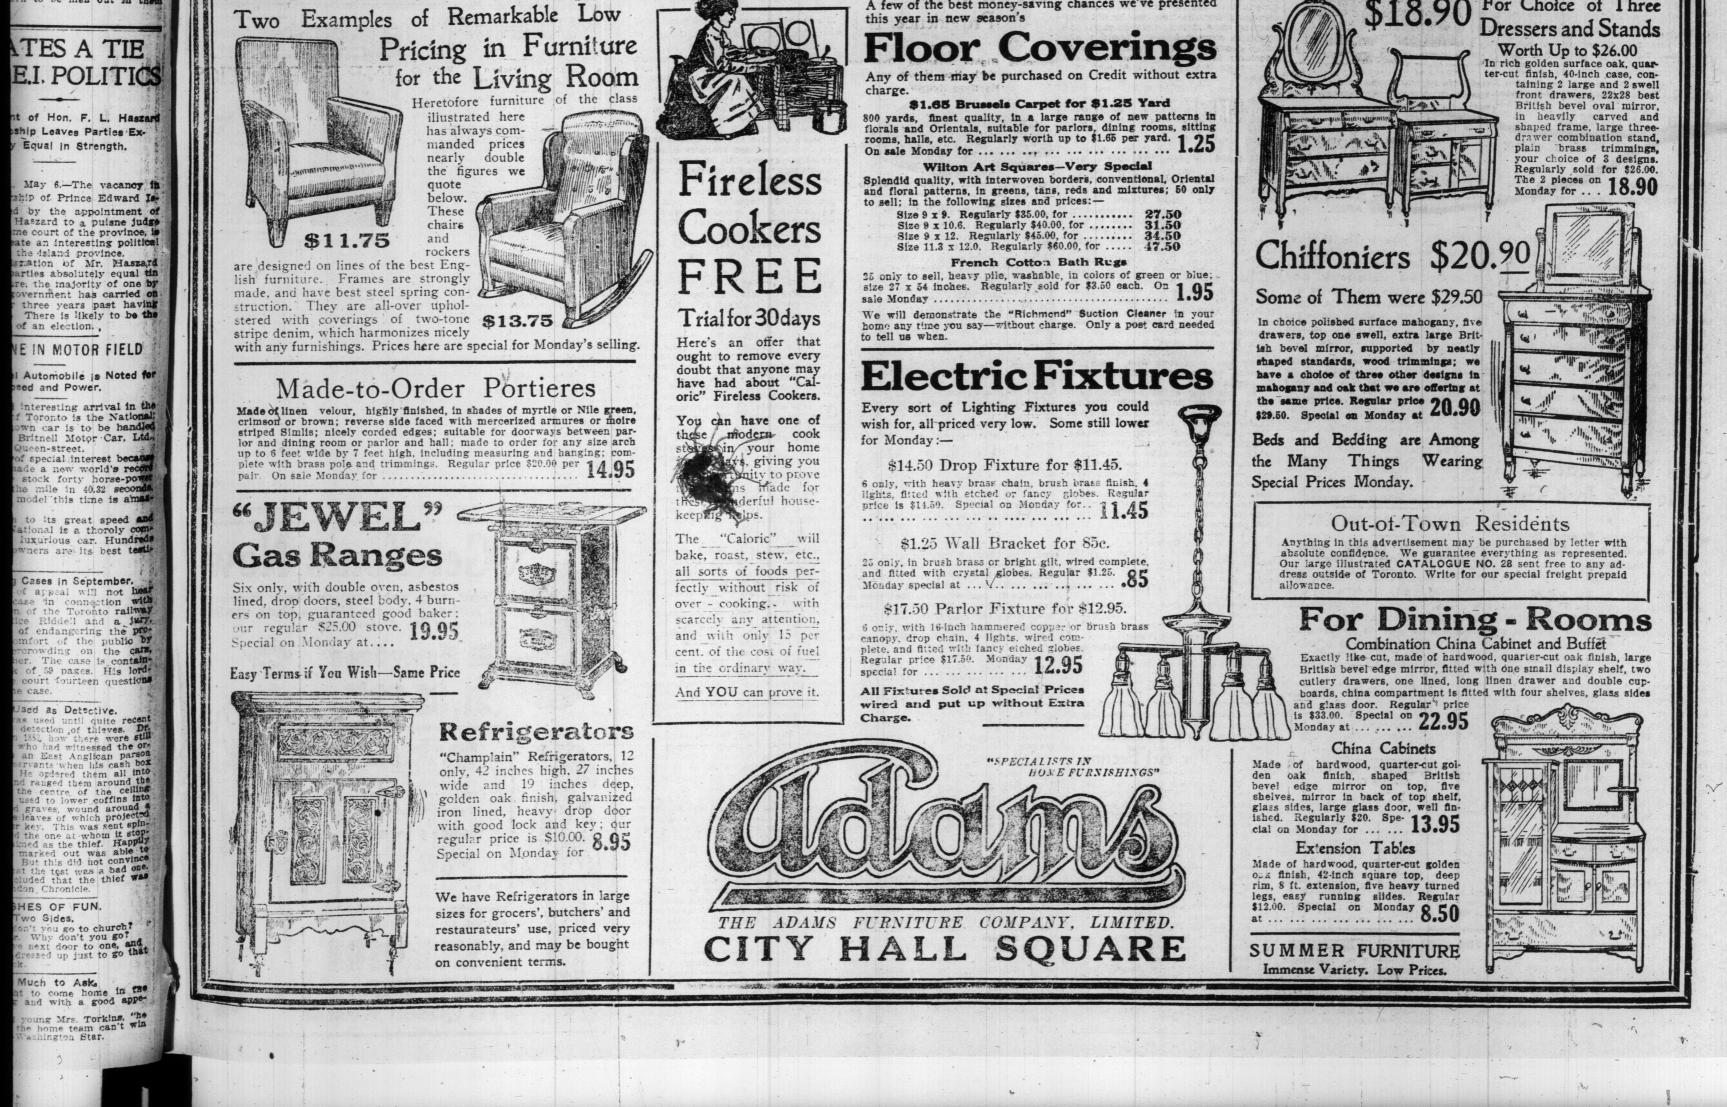

"Specialists in Home Furnishing" is not a mere motto in this store, but a living, active principle, a trade phrase correctly denoting the specific character of this store's calling. More than a quarter of a century catering exclusively to the furnishing needs of home makers has given us an experience that is unique; we have devoted all our energies to this business. We know the home's demands from A to Z. Whether you need a single piece of furniture, a rug, or what not, to the entire equipment of the home, to furnish a single room, a suite or a palatial residence, the Adams store will provide it as no other store can do it.

Folks having fine homes to furnish can save themselves much of the usual anxiety and uncertainty by consulting our Contract Department, who will relieve you of as much of the burden as you wish, going so far as to map out the decorative scheme and indicate colors that will be appropriate and harmonious, select the furniture, carpets, electric fixtures, bedding and draperies, make them up for you, hang them, completing your home-even to the wall ornaments, pictures, etc.-supply the linen and silverware if you say so.

This service in conjunction with our immensely popular Charge Account Plan, is a convenience that cannot well be overestimated. If you are a stranger to this Store, give us an opportunity to show you what we can do for you.

SUNDAY MORNING

NEW POLITICAL SITUATION SAVES DIGNITY OF PARLIAMENT

The decision of parliament to adjourn the house for almost. two months, to enable the prime minister to respond to the call. to attend the Imperial Conference and the Coronation in London next month, gives a new aspect to the reciprocity situation. From the outset The World has taken the position that the question involved in the Taft-Fielding trade pact demanded uncompromising hostility at the hands of the opposition. After the first wave of enthusiasm had passed away, and the public began to consider the consequences, reciprocity did not seem to meet with the favor its promoters had expected. True, in certain rural communities there was a remnant of the old sentiment of a generation ago, but the younger and more virile men of the country felt that the integrity of Canadian nationality was worth making a sacrifice to maintain. The marking time of both political parties has at least helped the Conservatives, altho it would have been better in the first instance if the principle of the measure had been threshed out and the house not been put into committee of ways and means. FORCED TO GO TO ENGLAND.

Since R. L. Borden's suggestion a week ago, to grant an additional interim supply bill and adjourn the house in order that Sir Wilfrid Laurier might attend the Imperial Conference and Coronation in London next month, at the same time declaring that the position of the Conservative party was one of "uncompromising hostility," receiving the reply that the govern-ment's attitude was one of "uncompromising support," those who occupy the seats of the mighty have undergone a volte face. Whatever may have been the nature of the cabinet meeting a week ago vesterday --- and it is said that weighty matters were under discussion --- the prime minister has been forced into accepting Mr. Borden's suggestion. This suggestion has a twofold significance: it saves the dignity of the Canadian Parliament from dealing with a measure, and then sitting quietly by until it pleased the United States to give the reciprocity bill the boots or the boost; at the same time, it places Sir Wilfrid in the position of accepting terms proposed by the opposition in respect of a legislative proposal that represents the greatest political cleavage since 1896, and makes Canada the rag doll of parties and politicians in the United States.

With a normal majority of forty in the house of commons, Sir Wilfrid Laurier might have done better, but the support which the Liberals have given to reciprocity has all the earmarks of party discipline. This very majority, on the other hand, has been the strength of the opposition. The Conservative party is prepared to face the people on the issue; to oppose it and to appeal to the best sentiments of Canadian national life. The question must be settled now once and for all, and there is only one court competent to pass judgment---public opinion --- and let that be heard.

TAFT IS FRANK.

President Taft deserves credit for at least making himself. understood. The United States wants Canada's natural resources, and those at the head of affairs in Washington are convinced that this is the psychological time to divert imperial sentiment and ideals, to avert, if possible, the consummation of that gicbe-girdling belt of self-governing dominions in whose keeping are entrusted the great destinies of the race.

The situation from the government standpoint is a surrender. The opposition have won a tactical advantage. 'Tis time to be up and doing, and not even the making of dollars should obscure the "duty of the hour" to those who love Canada and are consecrated to her national development.

THE IRON RING--By Gerald Villiers-Stuart

"I will curse you if you speak. I will hate you. The pain is nothing-let it drip,' moaned Kousienhoff."

T was such a little thing that scantlings were screwed iron rings. Above the framework was a projection like an old-fashioned gallows, such as you see in Punch and Judy shows. Fastened to this projection was a funnel-shaped porcelain flask; a light rope connected with the flask came out through the projection and was carried along the wall, passing through a small block to the left. It hung down loosely like the rope on the awning.

Markovitch was seated at a table smoking a cigar Natalie Erming in hoff with Kousienhoff, her beof an inventor. The cigar smoke hung in tiny wreaths about the dark brown beard which concealed the weakness of his chin; his small, protruding eyes sparkled venomously with the joy of one who hunter trothed, and so intent were they on examining the contents of the window and each other's eyes that they were unconscious of the presence of Markovitch, of Natalie and Kousienhoff looked disdainfully at the agent of the secret police. They had not overcome the old habit of regarding him as the cringing student, Before the revolution began Markovitch had make very little progress in the world. He had and they had no idea of the meaning of the framework on the wall. the hunting instinct, but not the Natalie turned her head round; her terror-widened eyes looked into those of her beloved. She was dumbly asking his permission, for she knew now that love of country and loyalty to the brotherhood were as nothing when weighed in the balance against her love. She would hold out to the last moment, but she would speak before one single drop branded that dear face. Kousienhoff read her mind in the look and tried to brace her fortitude. With his eyes fixed steadily on his wife, he spoke to Markovitch. "My wife knows," he said, in a slow, intense voice, "that I would endure a worse torture than your devil's mind has invented before I would allow her to say one word which she has no right to say. I am not a coward like you, Markovitch, and my wife knows it. I would kill myself afterwards, and she knows it. I would curse her, and she knows it."

"All the same she will speak, my dear Kousienhoff. She may know all that, but she will some kisses.' Again that strange sound came from Kouslen-hoff's lips. He was wondering what he would do to Markovitch if he could get free. His tor-mentor felt a tremor of fear go through him in his security.

"Perhaps, my pretty Natalie, your Imagina-tion is not capable of appreciating the sensa-tions which can be caused by a drop of vitriol; you did not, I remember, attend the chemistry classes. It would be kind if I gave you a demon-stration. He dipped a glass tube into a bottle under the table, came over to the girl and touched her left hand with the tube. She screamed at the unexpected agony.

"That is how it feels, my dear Natalie. That is only one drop, and there are many drops above your beloved Kousienhoff's head. If you are not careful you will shake them down on him as you shook the water from the awning. "She will not speak," said Kousienhoff, between his teeth. Markovitch laughed. "We will see."

Natalie's right arm was trembling; already it felt numb and detached. At any moment she knew that she might lose control, but the burning pain in her left hand helped her to keep her forces together. She looked at the cheap American clock on the shelf behind her tormentor. It was half-past five. At six her husband's brother would come to tea, Ivan, the farmer brother, who was stronger even than her husband. He would come, but long before that she would have spoken-unless-unless he came early, but it was more likely he would be late. Her husband did not know his brother was coming, it was to be a sur-

Natalie's became fixed on the clock; it seemed to be making faces at her while the clock; it seemed drip, drip, drip," but the hands it ticked out "Drip, drip, drip, drip," but the hands stood still. Sometimes she had to remove her gaze from the clock to look at her right arm. It was the she could tell that she was keeping it up. It was very numb and yet a thread of pain trembled inrough it all down the bone. At intervals Kousienhoff spoke, always the same again as Ivan Kousienhoff charged into the room. Some plaster fell from the wall above, for frightened men fire high He had not even the nerve to fire again at close quarters, but turned to run and fell senseless from the first blow of lvan's gigantic fist Ivan did not even try to understand the ituation He caught the bar of pain that was poor Natalle's arm, and almost with a sigh of relief she allowed the rcom to spin as it would and nestled down into her bonds.

"Keep her arm high, Ivan, and get the rope off her wrist. If you lower it I'm done for.'

Ivan freed Natalie's wrist with very little difficulty.

"Now, undo these ropes." Then Kousienhoff issued orders. He was suffering terribly, for several drops had traced their course down his cheek like molten tears, but his head was clear.

"Hold up her arm, Ivan. Hold it high." Kousienhoff released his wife's inanimate body with his own hands. He kissed her right arm; it felt like an icicle. He made no attempt to revive the girl; he had work to do of which he wished her to remain unconscious.

When Natalie opened her soothe a man eyes once more the room was changed, the furniture was piled against the door, all but the table and a couple of chairs. In one of those chairs by the table sat Kousienhoff. He sat where Markovitch had been seated. Markovitch stood bound beneath the funnel where Kouslenhoff had stood. There had been a slight re-arrangement of the apparatus because the stopper rope was now fastened to Markovitch's left wrist. He was holding it high in to Markovich's left wrist. He was nothing it high in the air. From his mouth issued a steady stream of sound; sometimes it was cursing, but more often he pleaded for mercy. "I tell you I can hold it up no more, feels like lead," he cried, and the perspiration ran down his face in streams. "Lower your arm my dear Markovitch, if it is tired," answered Kousienhoff, using the other's words, mimicking also his voice. "It only means a few drops of vitriol running down your cheeks." "Why play with him?" growled Ivan, "let me kill him and be done with it." His great hands worked convulsively.

"He has not asked you yet, Ivan," replied Kousien-hoff, sombrely; "wait until he asks you. It will be time enough then."

Natalie came up behind her husband and put her hands on his shoulders. "What is it you mean to do with him?"

"What he did to us, Natalie, nothing more." "Ah, but you don't know the torture of it, the long agony, the fear." "You spoke a name," replied Kousienhoff, and tilted his head back so that Natalie saw the cruel mark on his face; grease had been rubbed on the livid lines. Many of the students he had known were rotting in prison or slaving in Siberia, but Kousienhoff, his successful rival, and Natalie, who had humiliated and recessful rival, and Natarle, who had huminiated and ro jected him, were still at liberty. Markovitch knew well enough that they were revolutionaries, but no domiciliary visits, no questioning or bribing of other students, had put into his hands even such slight evidence as would satisfy a Russian court. Yet Kousienhoff and Natalie were members of "The Iron Ring."

The society had not even a name by which it could be identified, but, because of the extraordinary loyalty of the members, and because of the band of/metal which was handed to a comrade when he had been appointed executioner, each member thought of the society as "The Iron Ring." By a process of deduction, Markovitch had come to the conclusion that Kousienhoff and Natalie must belong to the mysterious organization. And a dreadful plan formed in his brain, whereby he might unmask the secret and take his revenge on the two people whom most in the world he hated, and the pretty fooling of a loving woman gave Markovitch the idea.

There had been a shower of rain the afternoon on which the lovers looked into the window of Oblonski's furniture shop, and the edge of an awning over the confectioner's next door was rimmed with little drops; the sunlight came through them and left a baby rainbow in the heart of each. The rope which was used for raising the awning swung near to the hand of Natalie and the spirit of mischief entered her pretty head.

"Look up, quick, Maruska!" she said-for that is Russian for sweetheart, and her lover, who was standing beneath the edge of the awning with his soft black hat in his hand, looked up, and a number of baby rainbows fell on his face as Natalie with a merry laugh pulled the rope.

Kousienhoff pretended to be angry, "You have a cruel disposition, Natalie," he accused; "that is the torture of the Inquisition.'

The girl laughed and dabbed the moisture off his face with soft little touches of her handkerchief.

Markovitch had seen the little play; had heard the, words, "The torture of the Inquisition;" had noted how the girl's hands lingered about this man-the yearning touch of a woman with an infinite capacity for loving.

No information had come to Markovitch from his spying, but a plan had formed in his brain. His afternoon was not wasted.

The day after Natalie and Kousienhoff were married Markovitch paid them a domiciliary visit in their new home. He brought with him three men, who at his orders handcuffed Kousienhoff and his wife. They were taken into the kitchen while the sitting room was being searched.

All the time they were in the kitchen they heard the sound of hammering in the sitting room. "They are taking up the floor," said Natalie. "They will have to put it down again," said Kousien-hoff; "it is all they will have for their trouble."

When they were taken back to the sitting room they saw that the floor had not been disturbed, but against the wall a framework had been erected. Some scantlings had been spiked into the wall, and into the "Fasten them up!" ordered Markovitch.

They did not resist; they knew it was useless, but had they known the meaning of the framework and the flask they would have struggled and fought every inch of the way across the little room. As it was, they allowed themselves to be fastened to the iron rings; Konsienhoff on the right below the funnel-shaped flask, Natalie to the left, where the rope dangled loose like the rope of the awning. They held up her right wrist and about it they fastened the end of the rope. Markovitch took the cigar out of his mouth. "I warn you." he said to Natalie malevolently, "not to lower your arm." Then he dismissed his satellites, for he did not mean to share with any one the information he meant to extract.

"' 'Look up quick, Maruska,' she said."

Markovitch locked the door, then he returned to his seat at the table, and fear began to invade the hearts of the lovers.

"The reason I advised you not to lower your pretty arm is this," he toid Natalie. "If you lower it you will pull the stopper from the flask above your husband's head and the contents will fall on him drop by drop. Your arm will get very tired, but when you wish to be released you have only to give me certain information want about the secret society to which you belong. the names of your comrades and the plans of the organization, then both of you will be free."

"There is no organization, Markovitch, you spying devil!" cried Kousienhoff angrily, "but, if there was, a few drops of water would not make me a traitor."

"I forgot to mention," answered Markovitch, in his smooth, malevolent voice, "that it is not water. There was water on the awning, but there is vitriol in that flask. Surely, Natalie, you will not drop vitriol on your dear husband's face rather than speak a few words.

"You devil! you devil! you devil!" hissed Natalie, writhing, yet afraid to move very much.

Kousienhoff went rather white and strained at his bonds as a mastiff strains against his chain. A sound issued from his lips, more a growl than a moan, such sound as a strong man makes when he finds himself helpless in the power of a weak one. Markovitch laughed and allowed himself the luxury of a fresh cigar.

"You'd better speak now, my dear Natalie. Why put yourself to the inconvenience of holding up your arm so long, for when you find that the vitriol is spoiling

"You are wasting your time, Markovitch. wife will not speak. Drop the stuff over me and be done with it."

Always Markovitch made the same answer: "I am in no hurry, and she will speak." The hands of the clock, for all its mockery, pointed to a quarter to six, but in spite of Natalie's efforts the room began to revolve. Very slowly at first, for all will power was concentrated on holding it in its place, but it was slipping out of her grasp; she looked at her arm. It was lowered, but too numbed to feel the weight of the rope. She managed to raise it by bending her body—too late. A drop had fallen on Kousienhoff's head. By the exercise of superhuman control he managed to endure the pain in silence. "Courage, Natalie! courage!"

he said between his teeth. His voice revived her for a moment, but after a little while her arm lowered again. and this time Markovitch saw the drop fall. drops as a dog

Natalie had opened her mouth to speak, when she heard a heavy tread on the wooden stairs. The rooms were on the top floor of the house; the man might be on his way to one of the lower floors, but the hope that it might be Ivan, faint though it was, gave the tortured girl a little strength.

"I am waiting," said Markovitch, dipping his pen in the ink.

Again she opened her mouth to speak; again she heard the steps ascending the stairs and bent her body beneath her swaying arm. Whoever it was had reached the landing below. Natalie heard him knock on a floor. Then she moaned out a name-all hope had left her.

"I can't hear." said Markovitch, his pen poised above the paper. "Speak louder."

Then he spoke a name distinctly, and at that moment the steps were heard mounting to the top floor. "Help!" shrieked Natalie. "Help! Help! Help!"

The handle turned, was shaken, relinquished. Mark ovitch dropped the pen and, pulling out a revolver, faced the door with a snarl. The steps backed away. "Help!" shrieked Natalie again.

For answer the door shook with the terrific impact of a heavy body. There was a snick as when metal cracks, but the door did not open. Again came the impact like a padded shell bursting the lock from its fastening. Markovitch fired through the door and

Although spring is still young, it is not a bit too early to plan for the torrid days that lie in wait not many weeks ahead. Much can be done by a little forethought to make the house cool and pleasant all through the heated term, and our summer stocks, now about complete, are fruitful in suggestion alike for those whose summer home is to be right here in Toronto, and for the fortunates who have a cottage among the pines up north.

Cretonnes and Taffetas---Denims and Linens

In distinctively summer fabrics such as these we have this season a stock incomparably the largest and most varied we ever imported. Notable in the collection are wonderful copies of fine Old English Prints, many of them handblocked in designs that your grandmot hers or great-grandmothers may have used in the draping of their bedroom windows or four-poster beds.

Cretonnes-There are single-width Cretonnes. 30 and 36 inches wide, in so many different patterns and colorings that it is useless to attempt a description, so we must be content to say they are all pretty, dainty or handsome, and that the prices are quite moderate 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c per yard

KING OF THE SPEEDWAY MONARCH OF THE ROAD

Victorious at Jacksonville

MAKES NEW WORLD'S RECORD. In a certified stock National "40" chassis registration No. 311, Wilcox broke the world's record for the straight away stock chassis mile, doing the distance in 40'32 seconds at the rate of 89 1-4 miles per hour. This is .03 seconds faster than the time made last year by Oldfield at Daytona.

DEFEATS 250 H.P. MERCEDES. In the five mile open event, Wilcox hurled a National from standing start to victory in 3.13.27 minutes, going at the rate of 93 1-3 miles per hour. beating the 250 Horse Power Mercedes, Burman driving, by a full second.

For the utmost in speed, power, reliability, comfort, and design, the National "40" at $3.350 and $3,500 has no competitor that seils for less than $5,000. Regardless of what you pay, you can get no more in a motor car than th's. Long terrific grinds on road and speedway, and continued use in the hands of owners prove that a better motor car cannot be built.

The big, powerful, reliable motor (4 Cylinder, 5 by 5 11-16) is always at your command. to win the friendly brush on road or bou evard or carry you majestically to the crest of any hill. Regardless of what he paid for his car, no one can rass you.

Wide scattered to the breeze, For us who still remember Dear other days than these.

With two meetings of the council and three civic free lunches in three days the past week was a busy one for Toronto's municipal representatives. It was the hope of the mayor that they could get thru with one meeting of the council, but many of the more elocouncil, out many of the more elo-quent members of the aldermanic board felf that it was rather too big a contract to dispose of the usual semi-monthly business and the city's budget, even with the free lunch thrown in. Therefore they succeeded at the Monday meeting in talking on other subjects until there was no nosother subjects until there was no pos-sibility of giving the weighty consid-eration to City Treasurer Coady's carefully prepared statement of the probable revenue and expenditures for the current year. Therefore, they talked over the advisability of acting on the advice of the board of water experts and other things, until close upon midnight. Then, when the estimates were reached they commenced a stampede for their homes, and the mayor consented to an adjournment, in order to save the meeting from go-ing by default for want of a quorum.

During the week the city's hydroectric celebration has come and gone. It was a success from every viewpoint. Ald. Maguire, chairman of the legislation and reception committee, who had a great deal of difficulty in persuading the council that they should entertain their guests at a banquet, was more than pleased that he had succeeded in carrying his point. and the banquet was admitted to be by no means the least enjoyable part of the proceedings. At the meeting of the board of control previous to the the board of control previous to the celebration, there was promise of a sensation at the banquet when Con-troller Spence declared that he would not appear in full dress, but was com-ing attired orly in his committee badge. Whether the police heard of it and sent Inspector Kennedy after him is not announced, but he under-went a change of mind before evening as he put in an appearance wearing his customary black frock coat and ored smile.

It was a proud moment for Sir ames Whitney, Hon. Adam Beck and the citizens of Toronto when the for-mer pressed the button in front of the city hall and started the illuminations going. This was the official introduction of hydro power to the city. It had been unofficially received and set to work many weeks before, but that did not make the ceremony any less interesting. Fully half the population of the city was on hand for the event. and were so happy to see the illum-inations that they refused to listen to speeches and stormed the city hall, carrying the city's guests before them as the they were straws in a hurricane. It was more good luck than anything else that there were not a few fataliities, but everything passed off smooth-ly and there was nothing to mar the glory of the event.

When the special meeting of the council on Wednesday for the consideration of the estimates opened, Con-troller Spence presented the ridiculous spectacle of a minister of finance at-tacking his own budget. He took fuliy an hour to tell what he believed was in error and when he finished many of the aldermen wondered if it

AIR CURRENTS AND WHAT CAUSES THEM.

Until men began to navigate the air and study its currents and movements little attention was paid to the con-ditions of the upper atmosphere, and such matters as atmospheric tides and top currents completely encircling the earth were of seemingly little inter-

Since men have flown, and especial-Since men have flown, and especial-ly since men have flown and fallen, says The Chicago Tribune, we have heard a great deal in a vague way of air currents. Recently Lawrence Hodges, in a paper before an English scientific body gave some unique facts about air tides which are not gener-ally known.

ally known. The moon, we know, causes the marine tides by its attraction. It draws the water on the sunafce of the earth toward it in a hump on the side that is exposed to the lunar influ-ence, and draws the earth itself away from the water on the opposite side. leaving a corresponding hump of wa-ter completely around the earth in the dip per atmosphere. This was first brought to public at-tention when the volcano Krakatao blew a cubic mile of matter into the upper atmosphere in the eightles. The lighter particles were seen to make a complete circuit of the earth seven times in this circumglobluar current before they finally disappeared.

The young son of a prominent railway man was playing with the drawing-room chairs one afternoon, when his father entered, accompanied by a gentleman whom the child had never particularly fancied. As the visitor took a chair the boy remonstrated. "I beg your pardon, sir, but this is a train of cars." 'Very well, my son," was the answer, "I'll be your passenger." But the youngster didn't want the grown-up for a passenger, so he said: Where do you wish to get off?"

leaving a corresponding nump of war-ter. The air, it seems, is affected in the same way. The layer of atmosphere about the earth rises, falls and flows more freely than water, because it is highter, so the tide comes more quick-fy in the air at a given spot than the marine tide. This rise and fall, however, means, just as much to the navigator of the air as the tide in the sea does to the sallor, and has to be accounted fur. The most remarkable current, how-ever, is one constant stream in the atmosphere running from west to east completely around the earth in the up-per atmosphere.

Canada as a Breeding Ground

A Country Where Great Men Have Their Origin and Good Horses are Developing-When the States Fall Down Canada Has Her Opportunity.

The climate of a country is as much to have that enthusiasm and to think to it as the soil. Doubtless some that Canada has made it possible? As to Breeding Capabilities. people will imagine that a strange Whether it is the faith that is born statement to make. But isn't it? Canada is a great country-and Lord how in them, or the courage and desire of life that comes with extra maturity, it I remember when it was despised. As is impossible to say, but the most emthe first editor of The Mall was extra phatic believer in the capabilities of fond of saying "The Whirligig of time with it and seen it grow. It is the exbrings many changes" and it certainly has regarding Canada. Fifty years owing somewhat to petural causes ago, owing somewhat to natural causes morning, at an nour when the user ors of vernality were drowsing it away and somewhat to the struggles the I was talking to a veteran of breed-Grand Trunk Railway had to make to ing and of the turf. "Yes," said he "I finance itself, "Canada" was practical- have always maintained that Canada Inance itself, "Canada" was practical-ly a by-word and the Grand Trunk ing horses and men." You see horses a subject for laughter on the London were uppermost in his mind. And then a subject for laughter on the London were uppermost in his mind. And then Stock Exchange. Australia was then the El Dorado of the empire. Since that time the whirligig has been very busy. And in no way any more than in the country's splendid facilities for breeding men. women, children live and the time when that great horse in the country's splendid facilities for breeding—men, women, children, live stock, trees, cereals, plants, every "blooming" thing. Mines give out, but climate and soil go on forever. Both can get tired but the order of nature is that they shall return, and so the world goes on for ever. And Canada, our glorious heritage, becomes great-er and greater. This is the enthusi-asm of age and isn't it a grand thing

The Roll of Fame. It is not for me to instance the roll of men of fame, the Sir John Roses, the Lord Mountstephens, the Sir Wil-liam Mackenzies, the Lord Strathconas, the "Jim" Hfils, who have developed from practically nothing and glory in the humility of their origin and their country in their origin.

Canadian-Bred Horses.

In like manner Canadian horses, in the show ring, on the farm, on the streets, in the practical ways of life, are able to secure their share of both honors and shekels. On the turf and track perhaps to date they have not beaten the world but in instances they have come mightily near doing so. In England there is a natural disposition England there is a natural disposition to sneer at Canadian-bred horses' pretensions to compete in the great Epsom Derby. Doubtless this is the reason for 'Sam' Darling's turning down Mr. Dale's colt, but the time will come when a St. Bass, a Powderman, a Havrock, or a Sanderling will go hence and astonish the natives. MAY 7 1911

We have a big run of horses for Lext week, and the list includes all classes: Heavy Draughts, General Purpose, Express, Delivery, Farm Chunks, Workers, Wagon Horses, Drivers and Carriage Horses. We will have two loads of especially heavy horses, and these will weigh around 1500 to 1600 lbs. each. These are coming from St. Marys, a good heavy horse district, and in addition we will have many other loads of heavy horses, as well as a good supply of the lighter kinds.

We have instructions from Albert Brennen, Esq., Contractor, Hamilton, Ont. To Sell on Tuesday, the 9th a consignment of work horses. These horses are right out of heavy team-ing, and our instructions are to sell them. They are all good horses.

We are also selling for

F. T. Richardson, Esq. a load of horses which had been purchased for shipment to Edmonton. Alta. These are all of the heavy kind, and they are to be sold. Mr. Rich-ardson has simply decided not to go west until a little later, and gives us instructions to selv his load of horses.

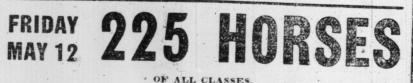

A bay mare, 8 years out, sound, and well city broken, will be offered on Tuesday. This mare is 153 aands and is a fine carriage mare. She is in foal to Halfling. Halfling is well known as a winner at the recent Horse Show and at the Toronto Exhibition last fall. The consignor has purchased an auto and instructs us to sell the mare for him.

A city gentleman, who has dispos-ed of his horses recently, has con-signed for disposal his complete liv-ery outfit, all as good as new, and they are the product of the best makers. These will be sold Tues-day, the 9th.

We have instructions also from to sell for him on Tuesday next, the 9th insk, his Brougham, Landau, Vic-toria and Dog Cart. These were used by him at Simcoe, Ont. and are described as being in fine condition. Dr. Imrie is selling for the reason that he has an auto, and he does not want to pay duty taking them into the United States. These should be bargains to someone, for we have positive instructions to sell them to the best advantage.

Four floors of our Main Building are devoted to the display and sale of Horse Goods, and we carry anything from a Mane Comb to a Brougham. Write us for prices. Gilliam Grand Circuit Hopples sell for $11.75 per set. We are Sole Canadian Agents for REDUCINE, the great absorbent and remedy. Price $4.00 per tin cash with order. AT THE REPOSITORY. Horses are Selling Uncommonly Well

For this Season of the Year.

Business at The Repository, Simcoestreet, during the past week was ex-ceptionally good. On Monday the firm had horse-racing and horse sports ceptionally good. On Monday the firm were very busy all day with private sales, and sold a great many horses. They sold about $2500 worth to the ionally good judgment. These horses were absolutely sound and right, and will do splendid work for the clty. They were purchased at reasonable prices. Any horses that were not perfectly sound were passd over. The Tuesday sale was a busy one and some of the best horses of the season were sold. Trotter and Trotter of Brandon; Man. got some splendid horses and paid prices up to $352.10. M. Sheehy of Milestone, Sask, got a load of good serviceable horses, and here were many other carload buyers, The city trade is very brisk, and The Repository is selling more horses half the world with Britishers; neither inbreeding care to go.

"Bending forward at the waist, letting the arms swing loosely and twisting the body about, gives suppleness to the figure.'

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri. Y articles have been, as a rule, addressed to the average person in average circumstances To-day I shall take up the exceptional girl, the one whom we know as the "delicate girl." The delicate girl may not be sickly. She may simply be a little less strong than her companions. While the strength of her chums may be represented by a gallon measure, hers would be proportionally represented by a quart cup, or if theirs was the quart measure, hers was the pint.

Increase the number of counts to, seven and eight. Form this habit of deep breathing and it will be come a necessity. The girl of pinched nostrils and contracted lung space usually has a corresponding stoop. It is imperative that she straighten those drooping shoulders. A stoop neglected has dug many a grave It is hard, I grant you, to always stand straight. When we are tired our erect car-

ECRETS OF BEAUTY No. 123 -The Delicate Girl By Mme.Lina Cavalieri the Most Famous Living Beauty.

ME. LINA CAVALIERI gives to-day valuable advice to that large class of maidens who are known as "delicate girls." As she states,-""Because she has a smaller fund upon which to draw, the delicate girl is more diable to illness, and illness has ever been the foe of beauty. The delicate girl must be more careful to safeguard herself from the assaults of disease than the girl of abundant vitality need be."

The beautiful prima donna discusses the weaknesses of the delicate girl, and advises her how to strengthen the weak places in her equipment of health and beauty.

undeveloped in the chest, and for strengthening this weak place in the body, should take light calisthenics that develop the upper half of the body. Raising the arms above the shoulders, elbows straight and hands clenched, let arms slowly and naturally fall to the sides. Then raise them again and let them fall. This exercise fans the vital force as a bellows the flame in a furnace. Both in-troduce fresh air, the life principle, lut because she has a smaller fund of vitality upon which to draw, the delicate girl is more liable to illness, and illness has ever been the foe to beauty. The delicate girl must for this reason be more careful to safeguard herself from the assaults of disease than the girl of abundant vitality need

The delicate girl is liable to have weak lungs. Even though she has never had any warning of tais weakness she may berself detect it by noting whether her nostrils are large and have a wide flars, or whether they are narrow and pinched. The size of the nostrils is an accurate guide to the amount of the lung space It is a guide as infallible as the parometer to the temperature or a weather vane to the direction of the wind. The delicate girl should summon two aids to increase the lung space and her breathing capacity. One is deep breathing, the other the right carriage.

Many times a day she should go to the window and holding her shoulders back, or still better, raising her arms above ner head with elbows scraight, draw in the fresh air, hold it as long as possible, then slowly and rhythmically expel it, trying to empty every lung cell of its accumulation of impure air. At first this exercise may be overdone, so I counsel beginning moderately, counting four for each stage

He Didn't Forget

WOMEN usually find ways of having things done when they want others to do them, and a North Side woman seems to take the prize, if the tale of the husband can be believed. Recently the wife gave him a sealed letter with instructions not to open it until he reached his office. He did as directed.

"I am obliged to tell you something that will pain you," the letter read. "There is, however, no help for it. You shall know all. I have felt for some time that it must come to this. I can remain silent no longer.

"You must bear part of this trouble yourself and do not overwhelm me with reproach.' The husband's face was ghastly, and cold perspiration stood out on his brow. He was prepared for the worst. Tremhe read on: have asked you to order a load of Maybe you will not forget if this

I have before told you that they have so calming an effect upon the nerves that it is well to eat an onion sandbefore retiring, to ensure wich sleep. This is a custom I have borrowed from the French peasants that has cured my insomnia.

But onjons do more than this. They have the faculty of absorbing and carrying away with them the accumulated poisons in the system. Place a raw onion in a sick room and it will quickly turn black, proving that it has absorbed the poisons in the atmosphere. Onions cleanse the kidneys by dissolving uric acid. They clear the complexion because of the presence of sulphur. Carrots are the friend of the aenemic, for they are rich in iron. They increase the number of red cells of the blood. And, except onions, no vegetable so clears and beautifies the skin.

Spinach is known in proverbs as the "broom of the stomach." It cleanses the system of those accumulations which correspond to ash and clinkers in a furnace, and I have a firm belief, strengthened by experience, in the value of walking as a tonic and rebuilder for the system, and yet I do not walk much That is a paradox, is it not? Let me explain. long to the last, and in a sense am delicate. Now following the principle that exercise must not exhaust the vital force, I take short walks several times a day, rather than a long walk once a day. Nor do I bathe in the sea except in the height of the season in mid-summer and when the water is warmest, at midday. Sea bathing, a magnificent tonic for the strong or those of average strength, is weakening to the "meagers," of whom I am one, the shoulders straight, and raise the right arm with a slow curving motion, the elbow outward and the hand drooping and relaxed, above the head Let this arm fall naturally and easily to the side and raise the opposite one in the same way. Then joining the hands, in a hooplike way, move the joined arms easily right and left, slowing swaying the head in unison.

Let all the exercises be slow and regular, and let whatever exercise you try be directed at straightening the shoulders and expanding the chest.

Keep your feet dry and warm is good advice for all, but is indis-pensable to the delicate giri, to whom a heavy cold may become a tragedy.

"CAN you tell me what on earth is the matter with my watch?" we in-quired anxiously of the jeweler, one day last week.

The jeweler stuck his little dice box into his left eye and squinted at the in-strument's innards. Then he looked up, "You find it necessary to shake it real hard, every now and then to start it go-ing, don't you?" he inquired. "That's tight," we acknowledged, wondering at the man's almost uncanny perspicacity.

"And you find it gets dusty, don't you? Perhaps when you open it from behind you don't blow hard enough on the works?

"Oh, but I do-every day." "Well, well! But are you careful to start the balance wheel going with a toothpick every hour or two?"

"And in spite of all your precautions, in needs about $5 worth of repairs. Now, that seems very strange."

For the jeweler possessed a dry and sarcastic wit that we didn't get next to until we had thought it over.

Of all the motor cars made in the world, none other has ever so fully met all expectations as has FORD Model T for thorough reliability.

This is best proven by the fact that there are to-day more than 75,000 Ford cars in actual service, of this number over 45,000 are FORD Model T cars. This is double the number of any other one individual make of cars. Now, you know that only a car of the utmost stability and reliability could maintain such popularity.

The FORD Model T as a Touring Car for 5 passengers, as a Roadster for 3 passengers, as a Runabout with either Torpedo or Open Body for 2 passengers, is the car of all-around efficiency; that is, it is suitable and adaptable to every demand, while the price puts it in a class by itself. As in everything else, quality in a motor car is an absolute necessity. Quality first, price afterwards.

No higher quality in motor car building has been attained than we give you in the FORD Model T-in fact, when quality in materials is specified, there is no other motor car whose entire steel construction is of Vanadium Steel, at once the strongest and most expensive steel in the world.

Vanadium is a mineral alloy found in Peru. Six per cent. of Vanadium mixed with the molten steel increases the stress of the best carbon steel 85 tons per square inch; besides, it gives a quality to the molecule of the steel which prevents crystallization under vibration. This is why FORD Model T cars stand up reliably under the most intense and strenuous demands-why, they fly over the bumps, the ruts, the stones, the deep sands and mud, the slush and snow, the rocky bottoms of creeks, through the woods, over the stumpy, fields, up the steepest hills, safely and smoothly and rapidly. When the driver knows his car is built of Vanadium Steel, he can ride securely in the confidence of continual safety. Vanadium Steel, combined with the wonderful genius of Henry Ford in design, is responsible for the fact that every

Sudden comes a little crackle-sound of Too few people in Toronto properly realize the value of the district east of the Don, along Danforth-avenue, and the Broadview district. This istrict is entered thru Broadview-avenue, being just situated north of Riverdale Park, and it is the Broadview car line alone that serves this Important section of the city. It is for this district, and for all the rest of Toronto that lies east of it, that the Bloor-street viaduct was wanted. The unanimous opinion of those who have studied the situation in all its phases is that had this project been carried an era of building would have been seen this spring such as has never before been equalled in Toronto. As it is, people are waiting for relief from the present situation that the Forento Realway Company has brought about. In spite of the failure to put the viaduct thru there is a great future ahead of the Danforth and Broadview district, and in order to show how this development is to come about a short review of the situation is of interest.

Splendid Houses. After passing Riverdale Park, it can easily be seen by the hundreds of mewly built houses on Broadwiew and the neighboring streets that the district has always been favorably thought of. The palatial homes on Broadview from the park to Danforth road is an eye opener to those who de not make it a practice to visit the different sections of Toronto, and watch their growth. Houses that run in value from $10,000 to $20,000 are plentiful, with the home of James Harris on Broadview, costing $30,000, as one of the best in the city.

Land on Broadview at this point is now selling from $60 to $80 per foot, and within a block and a half eastward. From there to Greenwoodavenue land runs in value from $30 to $50 per foot, and from there to the city limits sells at $20. Pending the building of the civic car lines, how-ever, not a great deal of land is now changing hands, tho last year saw "great deal of activity in land sales and building. The beauty of the district, approached as it is thru the ravines of the Don, makes for a resideptial district of unsurpassed beauty. The lots which have been selding on Broadview have been 300 feet deep, insuring to those who build gardens in the rear, where flowers and vegetables can be grown. North of Danforth-avenue at the head of Broadview there is at present a consider. able number of lots in the Playtor Estate being sold at $40 per foot, with restrictions that call for $3000 houses. Not only is there this restriction, but, what is most unusual, lots are sold only on condition that buildings be erected on them within a given time. This strikes hard at the land speculator, and ensures a solid growth that speaks well for the district's future. Out east on Danforth Road are thousands of acres of splendidly situated land which will soon be accessible to the public when a street car rulce opens it up for settlement. No greater outlet exists in Toronto for the increasing population than this Danforth district.

Even At Two Fares.

Industrial Demands and Shifting Population Will See Taking the situation at the worst, that is, that there will be no running rights given the civic lines over the tracks of the Toronto Railway Company, the building of the car lines will still serve the purpose. From Down town churches are rapidly | ings are usually darkened in the eventhe head of Broadview at the corner of Danforth-avenue to the city limits in East Toronto is a distance of about 31 miles. Civic cars could run back and forth over this route for a small fare, say eight or ten tickets for twenty-five cents, and still make money, so quickly would the district grow. At the head of Broadview passengers would transfer to the Broadview line of the railway company, making about a seven cent fare alto-gether, which would not be much of a hardship when the advantages of the situation are taken into consideration. Whether the other branches of the civic car system will pay or not, the line along Danforth-avenue is bound to do so, and that without delay. Large numbers of people in East foronto who now use the York radial line and connect with the Queenthreet cars at the Woodbine would use the civic cars and transfer down few church buildings. Dilapidated Houses Snap for Shrewd Ones

Expenditure of Few Hundred Dollars Often Means Quick Turnover at Handsome Profit.

A shrewd broker rarely takes a pros-pective customer to inspect a house that is in a dilapidated condition. Lack of paint, broken shutters, torn wall-paper, dirty floors and broken door-knobs are usually fail. On the other hand while the average man can see paper, dirty floors and broken door-knobs are usually fatal. On the other when they put a verandah around hand while the average man can see their houses, the assessment prompty nothing in a house that is in this con-dition, such a house often offers to the shrewd investor or speculator a chance to turn over a considerable amount of meney

Owners with houses of this class on their hands are usually glad to sell at lower prices, not realizing that the ex-Penditure of a hundred dollars in repairs would mean several hundred in the price obtained for the property. Thus many really good properties that have run down thru carelessness are snapped up, renovated, and turned over at an extra handsome profit. The man who has bought considerable is able to size up what a house is really worth, regardless of its outside appearance and decide quickly what his profit would be after a small expenditure for repairs. A verandah added, a few rol's of wall-paper used make a wonderful difference in the selling value of a house, and it is knowledge of this fact that enables a good deal of money to be paid. Consequently it is necessary these days for an investor to have a fairly good knowledge of the cost of wallpaper, paint and labor, and to be able to estimate these costs without any delay.

Still Like Frame Houses

In spite of greater danger from fire, the frame house and bungalow are still favorably regarded by a considerable number of people. The beauty of the carefully built frame house is considered by some well worth the risk of fire. Especially is this so amongst suburban dwell. ers, and on a large number of lots sold on different sub-divisions re-cently opened up, frame houses will be built. In some cases the ma-terial will not be all of wood, but used more for decorative purposes in conjunction with brick and town factories. They are equalsbut not competitors, for the down town beauties, who work amid the nerveracking noise and beauty-dimning dust, soon lose their bloom, as flowers that grow by the roadside soonest wither.

Besides, the girls in the factory have not the education that enhances nor the gowns that emphasize the loveliness of the women of the stage. Stage life, moreover, prolongs youth, which is to my mind inseparable from beauty, and factory life destroys it. So we must eliminate the downtown factory girl, and admit that the stage leads the world's procession of loveliness.

And so it was the natural unfolding of events and ideas that I should decide to issue a Beauty Book of the Stage. I have always known, as I suppose everyone else knows, that there are more beautiful women on the stage than anywhere else in the world. I grant only one exception.

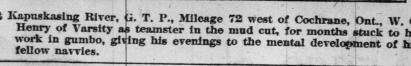

All the world comes to New York, particularly all the world of the stage, and I as a first-nighter, and especially sitting where faithful first-nighters like to sit—in one of the first rows—have seen the greatest stage beauties. Some of these I have painted. Others I shall paint. And their portraits will appear in the Beauty Book of the Stage. Feminine beauty differs as widely as flowers. When the victims interviewed the professed unterfeiters the latter showed them mine notes, and claimed that they were counterfeit. Of course the "imwere counterteat of course the un-itation," being really real looked so good that the purchasers gladly de-cided to take a chance and placed their orders at once, but, by a little sleight of hand, they were given a substituted parcel, of identical size and appearance to that which containand appearance to that which contain-ed the notes they had examined, which, when they next opened it, they found contained a very choice bundle of nice biank paper. The amazing outcome of this story is that these dupes have been complaining to the police that THEY WERE SWINDLED by the THEY WERE SWINDLED by the counterfeiters who didn't counterfeit, because the latter failed to supply the wherewithal for them to swindle other people. As the essence of all crime is primarily "intent," whether that intemp be successful or not, it would seem that the intending swindlers who desir-ed to acquire the instruments for fraud, and only failed because they ran up against other swindlers a good deal smarter than themselves, should emarter than themselves, should have been arrested as soon as they disclosed, by reporting their dis-appointment, what their intention had been. It is a clear case diamond cut diamond, but the intending swindlers who were swindled are none the less guilty, and their appeal to the police is a most amazing piece of impudence.

The Mail last week had a couple of columns headed "On Dit at the Horse Show." These columns contained nothing but a list of ladies present, and a description of their costumes. I am wondering if the heading was intended to convey that the ladies wore "speaking" dresses.

You see what a difference the point of view makes to the way you regard any given thing. A gang of men blew up The Times Building in Los Angeles --incidentally killing several harmless, innocent persons, and causing quite a big money loss. Detectives set out to find the perpetrators of this outrage, and decided that they had good cause to fix it upon at least two men, whom they, without wasting time to split legal straws, promptly arrested, and trotted back to the scene of the crime. It will probably seem to any rightminded man that they did well, and are worthy of every praise for prompt, clever activity. But these men, the accused, that is, belong to a union, and their fellow members promptly raise the nicest of legal poirts about extradition and "rights" of all sorts. It never struck them to advance the "rights" of the poor devils who were slaughtered, to their lives, or of the owners of the building they destroyed

SURFACE ILLUMINATION FOR THE WALLS OF HOUSES.

Not long ago interesting tests were made of the surface illumination of the walls of houses and cars, of school and office desks, school blackboards, etc. As now made in London, the small portable photometer used, known as the "Holophane Lumeter," measures eight and one-half by two and threefourths by two and three-fourth inches, is divided into two chambers, the first supplying the standard light from a small electric lamp fed by two storage cells-and the other containing the matt-white circular photometer screen.

The white walls of the first chamber reflect the light thru a small opening upon this screen, which is viewed thru an eye-plece inserted obliquely into the side of the chamber. The surface to be tested is seen thru an opening in this screen and a corresponding one in the end of the chamber, and two secng one in tors, one notched and the other plan, can be moved over the aperture be tween the two chambers until the brightness of the outer part of the ometer screen equals that of the entral part.

Two scales outside give readings up to one candle foot, which may be in-creased by dark glass screens to 100 candle feet. The standard is one for a white surface one foot from a stands ard candle.

The Violin

Violinists make a mistake in not having their instruments looked after by a good violin maker or repairer. Comparatively few players appreciate the importance of the bridge and the post in making tone.

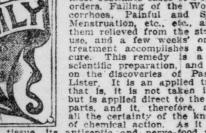

It is too often the case that the bridge is made of common wood, is too high, and the feet do not fit. 'I'hese are points upon which an experienced workman can readily enlighten) the player who may sometimes be compelled to attend to such details for himself.

The wood in a first class bridge should be maple, and have even grain; the cutting of the bridge varies some what with different makers but the general design is that which seems to favor tone production. It is worthy of not that different model violins, or instruments that vary as to the thickness of the wood require difference in the bridges. Those that are thick and heavy should have a hard wood bridge thin wooded instruments call for softer wood in the bridge. Fit the feet firmly to the curve of the instrument

Flat models can use a higher bridge than the high models. A maker says that a soundpost may be made of hard or soft wood, and be thick, medium or thin. The medium is adapted for the average instrument, of high model, use a post of soft wood, or ene of high model, use a post of soft wood; conversely for a flat model use a hard wood post. Note also that the post should be made by hand and carefully fitted to the violin, and be of even, straight grain.

"hell is the hospital for the incurables of the universe, where men must exist in eternal, unceasing bodily suffering; it is the insane asylum of the universe." "Hell is without hope, forever and ever Into a gulf how dark and how profound, When I have writhed ten thousand years In fire, Ten thousand thousand, let me then expire." .

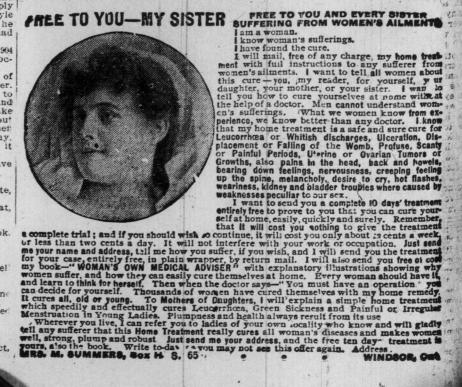

"Hell is without hope, forever and ever "Hell is without hope, forever and ever is the ceaseless wail from that restless sea of fire." Would to God those who think otherwise could succeed in proving it. If they could only bring one text which taken in connection with its con-text, would do so, I'd be the gladdest not teach, the literal hell fire doctrine now. King Who Has Gone to See Another King Put on His Crown

Wise and Kindly Ruler Who Metes Out Even Justice To All Who -... Come to Him On His Throne in the Toronto Police Court-More Concerned With Intent Than Meaning of the Law. A Sketch of the Police Magistrate.

KING has gone to look at a king. His Supreme and Serene Highness George Taylor Denison, police magistrate in and for the City of Toronto, has left his throne in the city hall to see George V. properly crowned and set on his'n across the water. There are several differences between these two monarchs. It is known to all students of history and political, science that George V. is not an absolute monarch, while it is equally well known of many other students of yet another science and history that George Taylor's monarchy is about as absolutely absolute as any monarchy could well be in these. enlightened times or any other times, for the matter of that.

For, mark you, he says to one "come" and he cometh. and, if perchance he cometh not, then doth George Taylor Denison write upon a paper which is called a warrant, and he cometh because he is brought. He saith unto another "go" and he goeth. Yea verily, he goeth down to whatsoever place and for whatsoever days, months or years it pleaseth George.

Taylor Denison to name, for he is "took."

But if he is an absolute monarch, he is also a kindly and withal a wise and prudent ruler, meting out the high, low and middle justice with an even hand, with no fear and little favor. And this is known of all those who come before him, so that those who feel that their position in the community entitles them to a little more consideration when they have reached into/their neighbor's pockets than is accorded the common or garden variety of thief fly from his count as a matter of course, choosing rather to meet whatever ills may come to them at the hands of some other tribunal than to face the utter disregard of place for which this vigorous old man of nearly seventy-two years is famed abroad.

More than once has he sat upon his leather chair, which is called a bench, and declared that the law was something which he had not time nor inclination to divine, and would therefore content himself with common justice.

for every day he comes down to the city hall to face a breakfast of "bad eggs." This repast never fails for the diligent servers the police unfailingly gather up the necessary provisions over night. While the magistrate is sleeping the sleep of the just, these minions are out in the highways, the byways and the back alleys collecting criminals or suspected ones of all colors, kinds and sizes, and every morning these are laid out so that the gentleman upon the bench may pick out the sheep from the goats, and they are as mixed a pack as the foregoing metaphor.

THE TAX SHOT MAN ADDRESSES, SHOW

And as he sits upon the bench as he has sat for lo these many years, "The Colonel," as he is familiarly known, hears the tales of woe from the witness box, and wonders which way lies the remedy. For there are two ways out of the dock which stands before him. One of these is a swinging door which faces the exit from the courtroom and leads to liberty and the other leads down into the cells and at the end of each wait many fates. Too much liberty, too many chances to do wrong may spell destruction, just as surely as the desperation Truly, Toronto's police magistrate is a man to be pitied, that hovers in the dull corners of the cell.

All these matters must "The Colonel" weigh, and he must do it not onw and again nor once in a while, but every day. And it isn't a little thing to lift a man out of the free air and the warm sunshine to place him within gray walls and behind prison bars, and the wonder is that the shoulders upon which rests so grave a responsibility are still squared and erect and that the eyes which have looked on so much sorrow are still bright and smiling.

This man has been blessed and cursed more times than most of us will be greeted in a year, but, to his greater honor be it said, that the blessings will come close to evening up with the curses in number and will, in the long run, prove the more fervent. But be they blessings or curses, "The Colonel" sits on from day to day "drawing the thing as he sees it for the god of things as they are."

He has been there upon that bench so long that he is like the sky to those who come often before him. And, as such, he becomes a matter upon which the oldest inhabitant speaks with authority. If you go into the police court and watch the line seated upon the bench at the back of the dock awaiting his appearance, they have just the look of him who scans the clouds to see what the weather will be. When he appears you will hear a whispering among several of the old timers. while others sit in contemplative silence. If it looks like a stormy day, the requests for remands will be numerous and urgent; if the skies seem clear, the number of those ready to try the hazard are many.

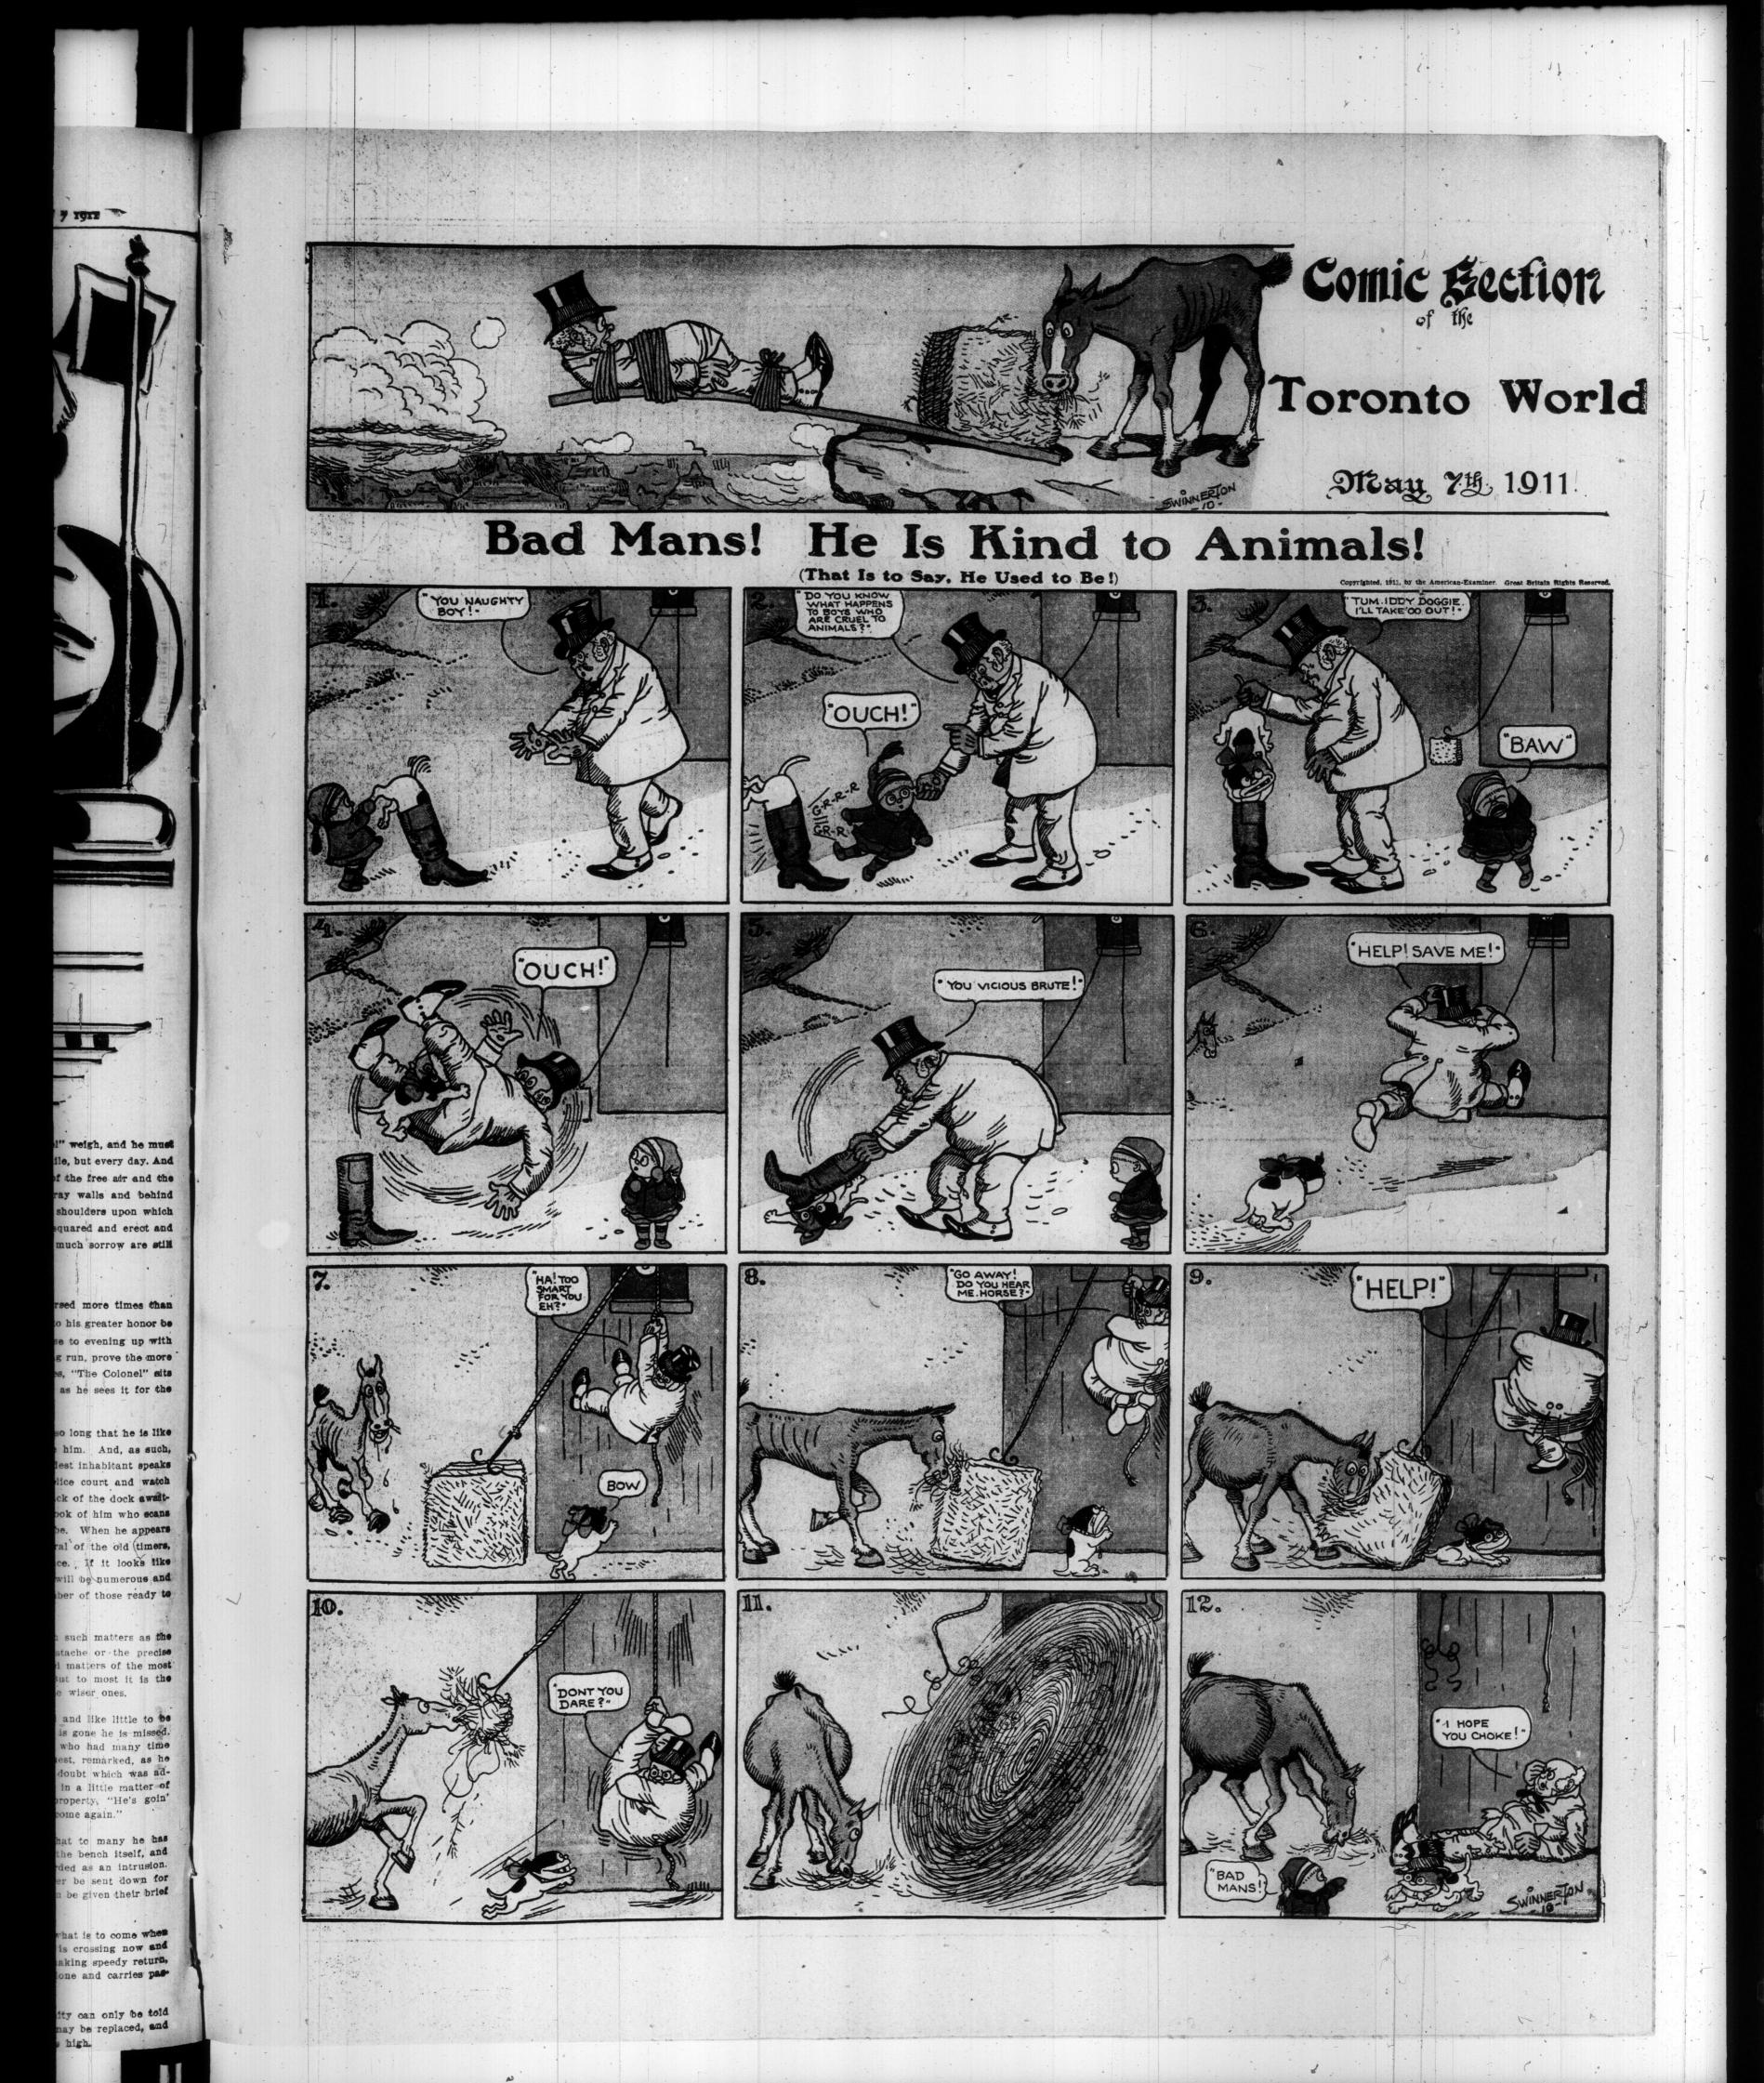

Among the more superstitious, even such matters as the color of his tie, the droop of his moustache or the precise moment of his appearance are considered matters of the most' momentous import and significance. But to most it is the eyes that count, and truly these are the wiser ones.

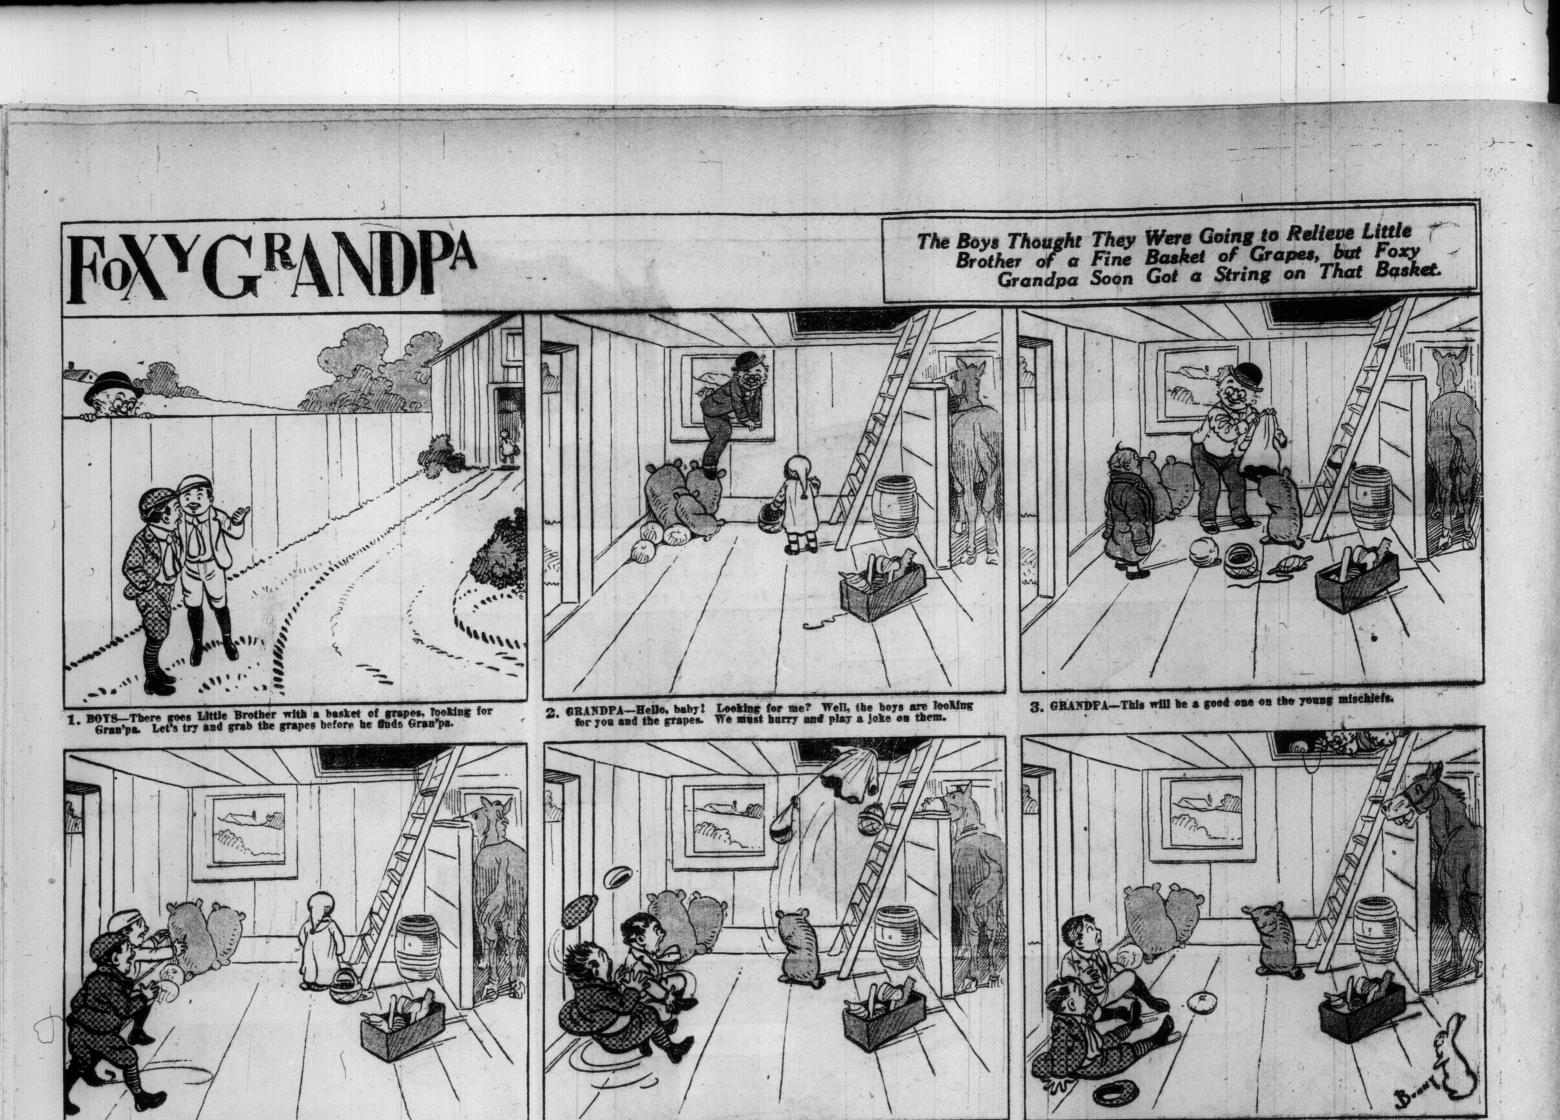

While he sits there many fear him and like little to be brought into the presence, but when he is gone he is missed. Only the other day, an old, old timer, who had many time iourneyed over the Don by special request, remarked, as he left the dock by grace of an emaciated doubt which was adjudged to exist with regard to his guilt in a little matter of an unauthorized transfer of personal property, "He's goin' away. God send him back here before I come again."

He has sat there so many years that to many he has become as much a part of the court as the bench itself, and the presence of another upon it is regarded as an intrusion. There are some who would almost rather be sent down for a casual thirty days by "The Colonel" than be given their brief respite of liberty by another.

This brings to mind the question of what is to come when he goes across a greater ocean than he is crossing now and over which there are no palatial liners making speedy return, but where Charon's ancient ferry plys alone and carries parsengers only one way.

The value of a man to his community can only be told by the ease or difficulty with which he may be replaced, and by this standard "The Colonel's" price is high.

Sculptures of Monsters of the Mesozoic Age. The unique cement sculptures that have been assigned a special section of Hagenback's great aximal park, near Hamburg, are the work of J. Pallen-berg, a German artist, and are restora-tions of about thirty 'of the gigantic monsters that dominated land and water in Mesozoic times, perhaps 10,-000,000 years before man. The land animals are grouped around water in Mesozofc times, perhaps 10,-000,000 years before man. The land animals are grouped around a three-acre lake, while enormous crocodiles and other aquatic forms are seen in the water. Among these glants are the iguanodon, a herbinorous di-nosaur, reaching twenty-five feet in height as it stands on ids stout hind limbs, and having spurs on the hands of its short fore limbs; the diplodocus, about sixty-six feet long, with long thick tail, short, thick body, long neck and massive limbs—the largest creature that ever walked on four legs; the ste-gosaurus, twenty-five feet long strangely armored with three-foot vertical plates along the back and spines on the tail, and having an en-largement of the spinal cord in the sacrum to more than ten times the size of its brain; the trieeratops, twenty-five feet long, with a rhinocenos-like body, three horns on its face and the largest head and smallest brain of the reptile race, the eight-foot skull ex-tending back in a caplike flange, and Tea at Five. Candles on pink-petaled globes,

Daffodils sheathed all in green, 'Eads'' in bewildering robes,

Dainty, demure and serene-Think when they ask me to come,

Lillith is certain to pour!

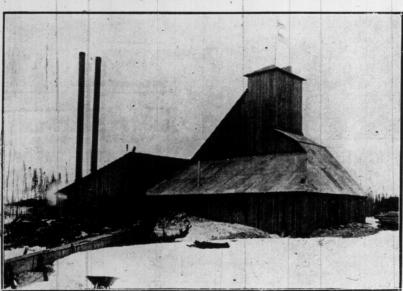

Lillith in flower-like guise,

Five-and I haste to depart-

So do the others galore, Saying each one in his heart: "Lillith is certain to pour." But, at disquieting whiles, I know (I wonder do these?), Little Miladi of Smiles-You are the afternoon tease.

Teas are for women-a bore-But here's a comforting crumb-Lillith in flower-like guise, Putting the daffies to shame, Smiling in friendliest wise, Saying: "So glad that you came!" Likewise bestowing her smiles On men, and more men, for these Flock where sweet Lillith beguiles-Even to afternoon teas!

GRACE MERRITT'S STAGE CAREER.

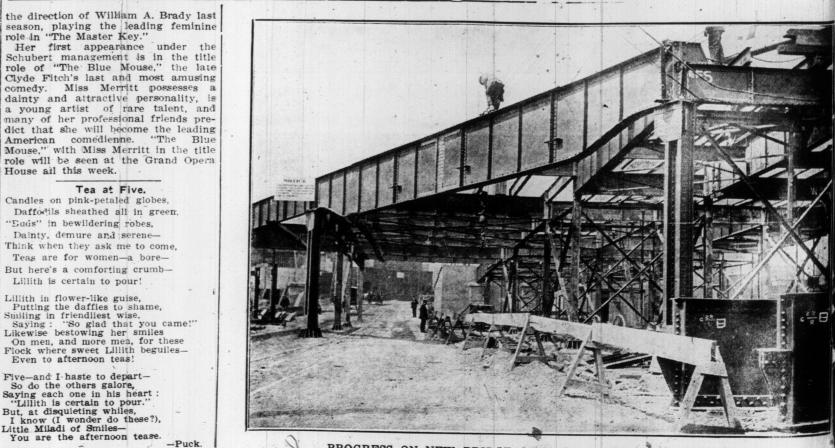

Miss Grace Merritt, the Toronto girl who has been engaged for leading roles by the Shubert Brothers of New York, has had an interesting and varied career, and the future looms large for her. Her early work was with Richard Mansfield, and her first conspicuous role was that of "The Lady" in Bernard- Shaw's "Man of-Destiny," in which she achieved a most remarkable success, altho only a girl or eighteen at the time. She has toured with Julia Marlowe, H. Reeves-Smith, Orrin Johnson and others, and acted leading roles in plays by Cosmo Hamilton, Charles Major and other well-known playwrights. Miss Merritt's most distinguished success has been as "Mary Tudor," in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," playing this extremely dif-ficult role in all the leading cities of the United States, except those on the Pacific Coast, and sustaining it profit-ably for her management for three seasons. Miss Merritt appeared under
