They Do Not All Know

That it is a wasteful policy to invest money in anything but reliable goods.

Everybody knows there's a world of difference in clothes. But only those who have had the experience are conscious of the fact that any old thing looks good when it is new. Some suits of clothing will outwear three or four others, and they will look better than the fourth that is made of shoddy. It pays, and pays well, to invest in good clothes. The so-called cheap article is seldom cheap. It is when a reliable firm, such as Deeks & Munson are known to be, offer to sell at largely reduced figures in order to make room for the coming season's goods, that real bargains may be had.

The Situation to Date.

The point at issue between the Company and their former employes is very simple, yet very important

The Company say in effect they are but not a full arbitration

The strikers say they are willing to arbitration covering all points, past, present and future-but not a merely partial arbitration.

What is called the joint City Council and Citizens' Committee have been trying hard to lay down a basis for arbitration satisfactory to both parties. Probably the Committee made a mistake in attempting any such task. The chief function for which they were appointed we should rather take to be to get the opposing parties together in arbitration to settle the differences themselves, in the usual manner. Each side ought surely to be able to trust its own arbitrator.

eliminate this phase and that phase of the controversy from consideration, would be tantamount to deciding certain points in advance in favor of one of the parties. That would be arbitrat- several Dutch members of the legislaing in advance of an arbitration!

Then, as to the selection of a third arbitrator. The men hold that each ments. The military authorities at the side should appoint one, and that these two should appoint a third; not that plies to Kimberley.

tion of the men in their collective capacity-to omit the question of wages -and to give the men no efficient say in the selection of the third arbitrator: in other words, to give the Company the whole thing in advance—that would be a funny sort of arbitration:

It seems to us the time has come when all little devices of sharp lawyering should be put to one side, and an arbitration entered into, full, fair and friendly, without quirks and reserva-

There are two attitudes of mind in which to approach the settlement of these difficulties. One is that of Plato-"for everybody is a good sort of fellow, when you know him." The other is that of aloofness and suspicion. The Maxim Gun is. no remedy. Fair and friendly arbitration is.

The mere finding and publication of the joint City Council and Citizens' Committee will have no more influence on public opinion than a wind that blew a thousand years ago, except in so far as they are based on common sense. An arbitration that is not an arbitration would settle nothing.

LATER-

Since the above was written, we learn that the Company, not content with a suggested basis of arbitration which proposed to give them several points in advance, decline the proposals apparently because the Citizens' Committee did not suggest to give them

This attitude on the part of the Company only emphasizes the duty of the City Council, in open meeting, to insist on fair and full arbitration.

CLOSURE. London, July 14.- The House of Commons, in committee, held an all-night session over the tithe rent charge rating bill, the second reading of which was carried on June 24, by a majority of 314 against 176. The government forced the clause through by means of the closure, and the bill finally passed through the committee, which rose at

He said it would be a death-blow to arbitration if the courts sanctioned such claims as advanced by Venezuela. The sessions of the commission were adjourned until Wednesday next.

It was ebb tide, with a northerly wind blowing, which would naturally take getting nearer and nearer the Manacles, until within 400 yeards of them, whereas we ought to have been a mile to the southward. Things looked queer for a time, but we altered our tactics and cleared the rocks. From what I have seen during the past six weeks, I am confident some mysterious current draws the vessels towards the rocks. While working on the Paris we warned numberless vessels of the dan-assist the finances of the country by giving up another two million pesetas of the civil list. The King of Spain, Alforso XIII., had a civil list, fixed by the cortes in 1886, of 7,000,000 pesetas, or $1,400,000, exclusive of allow-ances to members of the royal family, the queen regent having the administration of the said sum until the said king becomes of age. The annual grant to the queen, as mother to the king, was fixed by the cortes, 1886, at 250,000 pesetas. The immediate successor was assigned 500,000 pesetas, and 250,000 to the second The parents of the late king, Queen Isabel and her husband, have an allowance of 1,650,000 pesetas, or $210,000, and the four infantas, sisters, of 800,000 pesetas, $160,000. The total amount of the civil list and allowances to the relatives of the late king was fixed by the cortes, 1876, at 10,000,000 pesetas, or $2,000,000. It was recently reduced to 9, 500,000 pesetas, or $1,900,000.

ZOLA HOLDS HIMSELF IN

RESERVE. Emil Zola is still in Paris, closely watching the Dreyfus affair. He is not in the best of nealth, having had a touch of some heart trouble, which his doctors are unable to relieve. During the closing stages of the trial he pur poses writing two or three powerful newspaper articles in his most vigorous style. "It is a significant fact," the novelist says, "that nobody any longer is trying to find proofs of Captain Dreyfus' innocence. They seek only proofs of his guilt." M. Zola intends to write later on, giving his impressions of England. Although he is in much need of money he now refuses basing his refusal on the feeling that he must keep quiet, and that he par-ticularly must not write for the foreign public until Capt. Dreyfus shall have been acquitted. He will do nothing to hurt that cause. He feels that he must still hold himself in reserve in case his help is needed.

The Berlin Reichsanzeiger publishes a decree issued by Dr. Struckman, president of the Rhine Province, at Aix-la-Chapelle, prohibiting the impor-tation of fresh beef. The arrangements were very complete, and elaborate, but not ostentatious. The service at the residence was in charge of Rev. G. F. Salton, pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, assisted by Chancellor Burwash. Dr. Potts and Dr. Smith, the two latter having been pastors of the Centenary Church. The funeral car was drawn by four jet black horses. Sergeant Jenkins' Resignation Handed in to the Mayor.

Implied Charges Against the Chief and P. C. Egelton-An Investigation Probable.

Police circles were startled yesterday evening when it became known that the following letter had been handed to Mayor Wilson. The letter explains fteelf:

"London, July 18, 1899. "His Worship Mayor Wilson, Chairman Board of Police Commissioners: "Sir,-For the past 21 years I have been a member of the police force in this city, and for 14 years I have been one of the sergeants. For some time past the actions of Chief Williams and Police Constable Egelton towards me have been anything but pleasant, and of late have become so unbearable that I feel compelled to tender my resignation as sergeant and as a member of the police force. I therefore tender my resignation and ask to be relieved from duty at the expiration of one week. Will you kindly see that the amount to which I am entitled out of the police superannuation fund is paid to me? Yours respectfully,

"THOMAS JENKINS."

Sergeant Jenkins is one of the most popular men on the force, both with his fellow-officers and with the public generally. He has a splendid record as an upright, courteous, discreet and most efficient officer. Regret and astonishment are being expressed on all sides at the conditions which have led to so serious a step, and which may end in the entire disruption of the police force as at present constituted. It is understood that the trouble has been brewing for some time, and that Mr. Jenkins has not acted hastily. It is not improbable that a public investigation of Sergt. Jenkins' implied charges against Chief Williams and P. C. Egelton will be demanded.

Sergt. Jenkins is a native of London England. He served for a time in the millitia in England, and came to city while still a young man. In 1876, about the time the first horse care were run on the streets of London, he was an employe of the London street railway. He is a prominent Knight Templar and has many influential friends.

Of course, she knew what that meant, but still she was grateful for the courtesy. In her part of "the back woods" people had time to be cour-teous, and this man left a pleasant memory that made her almost hope-

"Of course not," he went on, having taken heart of grace from her approval. "Of course I can't send anybody out of the office for that, but my wife says—" He hesitated a moment, and then broke off with: "Now, how would like to run over and do this lecture for us, of course, we couldn't use more than a stick at the outside; but better start at that than nothing. the opening wedge you want, you know. 'So glad you are going with me." she said, and then raced her to the elevated station till both were fairly out of breath. They regained it, how-ever, on the way down to Christopher street, and started on a fresh race to the ferry. The gate was closed, so the literary lady walked up and down impatiently, and finally bought a paper et the news-stand just as the gate op-ened. When they had found seats on the boat she unfolded the paper and turned to the woman's page. The first thing that caught her eye was her own

The train was beginning to move, but she followed the girl to the rear platform and called to her as she important. jumped off:

'My room is second to the left on the third floor,"
The girl was almost convulsed with laughter at the humor of the situation. She caught the ferryboat back, but had to wait at Fifty-Ninth street for a Sixth avenue elevated. When she got to the house she pushed the bell frantically, but got no response. Once, twice, thrice again, but still no answer. Moments were precious. Finally some ladies opened the door and went out. The girl seized the opportunity and There was no one in sight. She went up stairs and to the second room on the left, third floor. She knocked dubiously, not knowing whom or what she should find. No response. She opened the door and entered. Books and papers everywhere; evidently this was the literary lady's she found the satin skirt in the drawer without any trouble, but had to light the gas to look in the trunk. Besides there were two trunks, and there was no way of knowing which, Suddenly it occurred to her the possibility that someone might come in, discover her prowling and mistake her for a thief. There was not a person in the house who knew her. She rang the bell, meaning to explain to the maid. Then the impossibility of being able to explain to a maid who had never seen her suggested itself and she locked the door. That very act made her feel like a thief, and she crept about stealthily, fearful half lest the maid should not come, half lest she should. She waited breathlessly; no one came. After much searching she found the waist and made up the package in a newspaper. There was not a bit of string anywhere, so she snipped off the curtain cord and tied It up. Now, the question of making an exit was an important one. Sureshe could not get away with that big bundle without being seen, but get away she must. It suddenly came to her that she might be mistaken either for a laundress or a sewing woman and in that hope she could not keep from feeling guilty and trying to steal out noiselessly. When she got to the door it seemed that she could not get it open and when the outer door slammed so noisly behind her she thought surely discovery was at hand, and she could not restrain herself from running down the steps and, indeed, to the elevated station at the corner. If a voice had by any chance cried "Stop. thief," she would have collapsed. She even glanced furtively around at the people on the car. What if the harmless-looking little man in the corner should turn out to be a detective. Really she could not compose herself. one thing her bundle was too big, and for another she feared she would miss her train. When she got off the elevated she looked behind to see if the little man in the corner was following her. She bought a ticket to cross the ferry and asked the time of the next train to Orange.

"Do you want a ticket to Orange?" the man at the window asked.
"No; I have one," she said.

When at last she was seated on the and ran. train with the big bundle in her lap, feeling fairly comfortable for the first time, her eyes fell to scanning the newspaper that inclosed the pregown. Suddenly they were caught by the notice of the lecture. Heavens! It was to be at 2:30 and she was then on the 1:35 train. She had never been to Orange before; she knew no one; she had no idea where the literary lady was to be found. If she was not at the station to meet her all was lost. She looked out eagerly when conductor called her station, but the lady was not to be seen. struggled across the platform with her bundle. "Drive me to-the club," she said desperately to the cabman who came to her assistance.

"What club?" he asked.
"The Ultras." she said. "Oh, the hall," he answered, and she thought she was saved. She pictured vaguely the consternation she would create by bursting into the hall in the midst of the lecture possibly, but by this time she was physically exhausted and mentally blank. She paid the cabman intuitively and had started up the stairway before which he had stopped when she thought she heard voices calling and a heavy step running toward her. At last she was pursued. But save the gown she must and would. Springing up the stairway she burst open the door into the hall. The platform was empty, but there was a noisy hum of expectancy running through the crowd. At first she heard nothing distinctly. Then a heavy hand was laid on her shoulder and voice behind her said:

"Give me your bundle miss." She looked up at the blue-coated po-liceman, who had come up behind, and fell in a faint at his feet. When revived she was lying on a rug in a little white-plastered room. The window was open, the cold snow-laden air from without was blowing on her, and a sweet-faced gentle woman was bending over her, holding a bottle of smelling salts to her nose.
"Are you the matron?" she asked feebly. "The what?" said the woman.

"The matron?" She waited a moment. "Then were you put in, too?" she said.

ou put in, too?" she said.
"In what?" the woman asked.
"In prison," she said, suddering.
"In prison, child," the "Why, this isn't a prison, child," the woman said with a smile. "Why did you think you were in prison, pray?"
"For stealing that gown," said the

"Why, you didn't steal the gown, did you?" and the woman burst out laughing.

"No." she answered, "but I thought they thought I had, and the policeman arrested me."

"How very funny," the woman said, still laughing. "Why, he was only getting the gown to take to the literary lady, who was waiting at a milliner's across the way to put it on. She saw you come and got him to run after you. But how very funny."
"But where's the gown now?"

Why, the lady has it on and is speaking away: don't you hear her?"
"Then for heaven's sake let me get out and report her." said the girl,

BASEBALL.

Hamilton, July 13 .- [Special.]-In a pitchers' battle Hamilton and London put up a fine game of baseball for seven innings today; but in the eighth the locals found Price, and five single hits gave them three runs. The Londons failed to find McCann, who finished stronger than he began, striking out Reed, Babbit and Jones in the ninth inning. A hit by Dean, sacrifice by Schrall, and a hit by Elton gave Hamilton a run in the first, and London tied in the second on Schwartz's three-bagger and Mohler's single. Babbit's double and Franck's single gave London a lead of one in the fourth, which Hamilton tied in the sixth, Dean getting first on Cope's wide throw after a fine stop, a base on ed Catcher Croft, after having him balls to Schrall, which sent Dean to upon their pay roll all season without second, and two steals-to third and home by Dean. In the eighth Dean hit safely, but was retired at second, trying to steal. Schrall got a base on the next four men, Congalton, McKevitt, Phillips and Conwell, hit safely. McCann didn't give a base on

Capt. Farrell Was Ten Miles Out in His Reckoning When the Portia Foundered.

Halifax, N. S., July 14.—Failure of the Steamer Portia's patent log to register the full distance run is said to have been the chief cause of the wreck of that vessel on Big Fish Shoal, west of Halifax harbor, Monday night. She had an extraordinary escape from destruction on three other dangerous ledges, which she must have almost brushed against as she passed before she ran on Big Fish and had her bottom torn out. After the disaster the discovery was made that the log was not working properly, but there was not the least suspicion before the steamer struck that such was the case. It is understood that Capt. Farrell supposed the ship to be ten miles west of the point where she struck. So confident was he of the position of the vessel and her safety that he spent half an hour at dinner, and he returned to the bridge only a minute before she hit the rocks. The divers state that the undertow is running through the Portia's holds and cabins. The steamer Orinoco has been chartered to take the wrecked steamer's place on the route between New York, Halifax and St. Johns, Nfid.

Lindsay In Line.

Many People in that Town Being Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Word has been received from Lindsay that Doan's Kidney Pills are curing people in that town of backache, kidney disease, bladder weakness and urinary troubles.

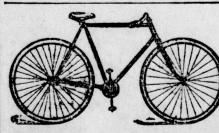

Mr. Christopher Oryell 4 William street, Lindsay, Ont., the well-known proprietor of the handsome barber shop and bathrooms, and for twenty years a resident, says: "For six years I have had serious kidney and urinary troubles with a great deal of pain over my hips, in the small of my back and in my shoulders. was sometimes so sore I could hardly bear to touch myself, and felt tired and worn-out nealy all the time. My sleep was disturbed and did not rest me.

"Hearing Doan's Kidney Pills highly spoken of as a good medicine for kidney disease, I thought I would try them, and got a box. That box gave me so much relief that I bought two more, which I have taken, with the result that I now have no pain or urinary trouble of any kind. I sleep well and feel rested; the tired feeling is all gone and I am very much stronger. I recommend them, not only as a cure for all kidney troubles, but as an excellent tonic and invigorator."

London Adbertiser. [ESTABLISHED BY JOHN CAMERON IN 1863.]

and Editor. John Cameron

London, Friday, July 14, 1899.

London Made Ridiculous.

Sheriff Cameron writes the Free Press stating that, in his recent controversy with the Company's solicitor, he did not wish to dissociate himself in the least from his share of the responsibility, whatever it might be, for the reading of the riot act, and the calling in of the militia. Apparently the main object of his first letter was to defend himself from a charge of lack of peronal courage, made against him by the Company's agent and newspaper organ. Fortunately, the sheriff, in his natural Indignation at the original scurrilous paragraph in the Free Press, let the cat out of the bag in his first letter, which created a great deal of talk around the city. It revealed the fact that agents of the Company had gone to him and asked him to read the riot act in the East End, after the mayor had refused. The sheriff first desired to length. know the mayor's reasons for declining, and, failing that, wished the advice of the county crown attorney. We think he did well to take these precautions, instead of being dragooned into carrying out the Company's behests without due consideration. His prudence appears to have given offense to the Street Railway Company, whose The agents proceeded to load up the Free Press with a statement in which the sheriff is held up to public contempt, as an official who was frightened out of doing his duty by a little stone-throwing. It was of a piece with the contemptible attacks which have been made on the police magistrate from the same quarters. No wonder the sheriff, stung by the insult, wrote that he thought, "in all soberness, that Mr.

Ivey, solicitor of the Street Railway Company, of all men, should have held his peace at this juncture."

We quite appreciate the sheriff's apprehension lest his first letter might be pleaded in excuse of the disturbance on Saturday night. The Advertiser, or anyone who knows the sheriff, could read no such meaning into it. We agree with the sheriff that it was a disgraceful proceeding. But authorities of cool judgment aver that, with proper handling, the streets could have been cleared in five minutes. The great mistake was in calling in outside militia. Instead of inspiring respect for law and order, the measures taken have unhappily thrown ridicule on the authorities, and made London the laughingstock of the whole country. But for the incident of the militia, the trouble here would have attracted no great attention outside the city. That ill-advised step did more to damage London's prestige than did the conduct of the hoodlums on the streets.

Full Arbitration the True Remedy.

The strong feeling in this city in favor of the striking employes of the London Street Railway, which was temporarily obscured by the Saturday night disturbance, has resumed its course; and once more nine-tenths of the people of London are heartily in favor of the position taken by The Advertiser from the very first, namely, that all differences between the Company and their former employes, whether relating to the past, the present, or the future, should be submitted to full and fair arbitration. Among the limited number who have upheld the Company's cause were some who could hardly be expected to do otherwise-those, for example, who are connected in some way or other with the Company, or dependent on them. Then It was to be expected that some of the "new rich," who are apt to lose their heads, failing to see themselves as others see them, should, so far as their courage would permit, take sides against that mass of the public proudly designated by Henry Ward Beecher "the common people," who are in no respect the inferiors of those whose only title to deference is a bagful of money.

SENATE REFORM

Have Been Delayed, but Not Abandoned.

The Charge of Selling Liquor in London Camp

Positively Denied by Major-General Hutton-Canadians Ready to Do Battle With the Boers.

Otawa, July 13.-On the orders of the day being called this afternoon, Charles Tupper asked if the prime minister had abandoned his intention of bringing down the senate "reform" resolutions, seeing it was now so late in the session. Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied in effect that he was sorry he could not postpone the resolutions. They had not been brought down earlier by reason of pressure of other business before the house.

Sir Charles then asked when they would be introduced, as he had no idea of their tenor. The premier thought Sir Charles have known their tenor when criticised the proposal at such All he knew of the scheme, the leader of the opposition replied, was gathered from the crude statement made by the premier in his speech in Montreal. THE CANTEEN IN CAMP, The minister of militia called the attention of the house to a press dispatch, giving a report of the Provincial Temperance Alliance in Toat which a resolution was passed against military "canteens."

The report stated that Major Campbell, of Orillia, took the minister of militia, Mr. Borden, very thoroughly to task, declaring that it was time the minister retired. He told how the minister had given permission to the various camps for violation of the order prohibiting the sale of liquor in canteens, and when the results were called to his attention, by a miserable subterfuge, he had tried to make it appear that he was unaware of the violation, and promised stringent enforcement—a promise which, Major Campbell held, the minister had not kept. After reading the foregoing charge the minister went on to say that when he took office he found a regulation had been passed in 1893, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors of all kinds in the militia camps of instruction. He knew that in Nova Scotia this regulation was strictly observed, and was surprised to hear that it was not being observed in the camps in the provinces, and called the attention of the major-general commanding to complaints as regards the camps in Ontario and Quebec, asking him to eral wrote him that the regulation was clearly specified in the orders for the camp issued by him.

CHARGES BY THE W. C. T. U.

At the conclusion of the London camp he had received a letter from a representative of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of London, alleging that drunkenness had existed in camp to a greater extent than ever before in a Canadian militia camp. No names were given in the letter, and no authority given for the charge. He at once sent a copy of this letter to the major-general, and received a reply from him, stating that he would be greatly indebted to the writer of the letter if she would give him, directly or indirectly, any facts which would go to prove that liquor had been sold in the London camp.

GENERAL HUTTON'S REPLY. In this letter the general stated that he had been personally in command of the first division at London, and spent considerable time in the lines. During all that time he had not seen a single drunken man, and he never saw better discipline observed or a more orderly camp. He was sure there had been a mistake made, and he was personally aware that no liquor had been sold in the camp at London. He had seen none used by the men. On receipt of this letter from the general, the minister said, he at once sent a copy of it to the lady who made the charges, asking her to forward to him a statement of the facts on which she based her charges, received no reply to that letter. There are still canteens, he said, but under the regulations no liquors of any kind can be sold in them. He supposed there was a misunderstanding as to the meaning of the word "canteens" from the fact that there are still "canteens," or shops, where articles are sold, but not liquors. If Major Campbell was correctly reported, all he could say was that it would be impossible for any man to condense into so short a space so great a number of inaccuracies or a more unjust attack on himself and the gentlemen who are administering the militia depart-

Sir Charles Tupper expressed his satisfaction that the minister of militia had promptly taken steps to correct any impression, so disastrous to the whole militia, that notwithstanding stringent regulations the bringing together of numbers of young men in camps was to result in dissipation and the use of intoxicating liquors. government could not take too rigid means to prevent liquor, even in small being surreptitiously quantities brought into camp.

Col. Hughes said that at the Niagara camp there were canteens for the sale of pipeclay and the like, but no liquor sold, and there was very little intoxication in the camp. Mr. Pettet (Prince Edward), as paymaster of the Sixteenth Battalion, could testify that he never saw an officer or soldier intoxicated on the camp grounds. With that the subject dropped. VOLUNTEERS FOR THE TRANS-VAAL. Col. Sam Hughes next brought up the matter of Queensland's offer of 250 men for service in the Transvaal. He urged upon the government the ne cessity of taking similar action to fulfill our part as the senior of all the British colonies. He knew, for a fact, there would be no trouble in enrolling thousands of men in Canada to assist the mother country in the case of war with the Transvaal, where, more than in any other part of the world, the necessity existed for vindicating the honor of the old flag. He was satisfied that a brigade of 5,200 men could be enrolled at short notice, and knew hundreds of officers who would be only too glad to take part in leading such an enterprise. There were a number in the House of Commons. He had before offered to raise a corps, and would offer to do so again for such an expedition.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier sincerely hoped it would not be necessary for Queensland or any part of the empire to go to the assistance of the mother coun-try in South Africa. All were of the opinion that the trouble there would be appeased before the sword was un-sheathed. While all sympathized with our fellow-countrymen in South Africa. It was hoped that the Transvall would recognize that since it was under the suzerainty of her Majesty, the same measure of justice should be given to all classes there. He hoped given to all classes there. He hoped their principles would prevail, and that there would be no occasion for the troops offered by Queensland to leave their country or for Canada to follow her example

Sir Charles Tupper shared the hope that there would be no necessity to come to the aid of Great Britain in South Africa, but the avoidance of difficulties there would be largely due to the outspoken support that the men of Great Britain had given to the government in its determination to firmly maintain British supremacy in South Africa, and nothing would contribute more to the avoidance of war between Great Britain and the Boers than the knowledge on their part that not only the great heart of the em-pire—the British Islands+were determined to abate not one jot or tittle of British rights, but that the outlying points of the empire were ready in the case of necessity to strengthen the arms of the mother country.

morning Abram Aaronberg, who is applying for a divorce from his wife, in taking the oath, was sworn first upon the Bible, with his head covered. Sir Louis Davies inquired if it was custo-mary for persons of the Jewish faith to take the oath on the Bible, and Mr. Aaronberg said he had always under-stood so. Mr. Belcourt and other lawyers on the committee held that the practice of the courts was different and Sir Louis Davies observed that that was the very reason he asked the question. The plaintiff was thereupon sworn upon the Pentateuch. The curious fact was brought out that at the Masonic investigation into the charge of adultery brought by Aaronberg against the co-respondent, Dunin all camps. Then, when the camps were being arranged for the summer he again colled the grand lodge for a commendmer, he again called the general's attention to the matter, and expressed the hope that he would see the order was obeyed. In reply, the major-gencase, they reported the charge clearly "not proven," and Dunning was ordered to be restored to good standing. The point which created considerable discussion yesterday was as to whether or not Aaronberg lived with his wife lived with his wife or not Aaronberg lived with his wife lived w after the alleged offense was committed, or, in other words, had condoned the offense. Sir Louis Davies, Mr. Mc-Allister and other members of the committee were not satisfied with the evidence on this point, and desired further tstimony, but the committee, by 9 to 4, ordered the bill to be reported. It has already passed the senate. The senate devoted most of the sitting to discussing the usury bill. Considerable opposition developed on both sides of the house to the bill sanctioning the principle of exporting deer from Canada.

MORE TROOPS READY TO COME

Stratford and St. Thomas Companies Waiting Under Orders.

Stratford Herald, 13th .- Twenty-five big, brawny specimens of the genus Tommy Atkins are today under arms in Stratford, ready and more than willing to proceed to London, Ont., to help the mayor and police to maintain order in that city. Whether their services will, or will not be needed is else to withdraw them, but he had a matter on which no two persons appear to have the same opinion. When the word came for the men to get ready for active service there was no difficulty in filling up the required number of men. In fact five or six times as many could quite easily have been obtained. After a brief drill, the men were warned to be in readiness to leave at a moment's notice, and were then dismissed. The following is the complete roster of those who are ready to go to London:-Lieut. H. Baker, Sergt. Allan, Sergt. Ballard, Corp. Scott, Corp. Clancy, Ptes. Cornell, Bombry, McNeil, Newman, Legg, Beckford, Nichol, Sheridan, Scully, Gordon, Hastings, Adams, Lamb, Hillman Workman, Kane, Gallagher, Smith, Gough, McMahon. It seem to be most probable that the men will be sent to London sometime tonight, or tomorrow morning. The idea is not so much that there is any danger sufficient to call for increased military protection in London, but rather to enable the militia already there to

The Greatest Promoter of Thrift in the World

History of This Wonderful Institution -Only 38 Years Old.

Saturday, June 24, marked a new epoch in the history of an institution which has been the greatest promoter of thrift among the masses in the whole world. The British Postoffice Savings Bank, with its 7,000,000 depositors and its funds of over $6,000,000, has been compelled to take possession of a tract of land five acres in area. in the outskirts of London, where enormous buildings for its accommodation are now being erected. Saturday's function has been the laying of the corner-stone of the new structure by the Prince of Wales.

No financial institution in all history has enjoyed so marvelous a growth as the British Postoffice Savings Bank. It was founded only 38 its headquarters staff soon became ne-Extensions and additions cessary. fully occupied as fast as completed, until no further accommodations near the general postoffice were possible without expenditure out of all proportion to the ends required. The growth has been so rapid that more than 100 clerks have been added to the staff each year for more than ten years It is obvious after a moment's past. thought that there is good reason for maintaining the headquarters of the bank in the heart of London. The Postoffice Savings Bank is not a bank where current accounts are kept; there is no payment of checks over the counter; no customer can enter into any confidential relations with the bank-in fact, there is no bank return home, the Stratford detachment management in the ordinary sense of the term. For the receipt of money the bank has an office in every town and village in the kingdom; there are now over 12,000. The withdrawal of money is a leisurely affair and must be conducted by correspondence; consequently the relations of the head office with the public are of the slight-est character. The business of that office is to keep accounts-for it has been a distinguishing feature of the from the first that all accounts should be kept in London, and every payment made from there-to warrants for the repayment of deposits, and to conduct such a voluminous correspondence. The Duke of Norfolk, the present postmaster-general, secured the broad tract of land, covered for the most part with church buildings, adjoining the Olympia show, Barnum & Bailey's dren headquarters at West Kensington. location is rather four miles or less from Charing Cross, and is, of course, the most distant of any departmental government buildings.

It is worth while to outline briefly gregate to the coffers of the govern- eral millions the amount which

The savings bank appealed to him as an institution which helped the laboring classes to help themselves, and he became its apostle He brought the bank within the reach of the children by providing the penny stamp slip, thus enabling the school-boy to make the minimum deposit of a shilling by pennies put by from time to time. At the other end of the scale he enabled the depositor who was approaching the maximum to buy consuls through the bank and thus to recommence his deposits of cash. And by his power of popular exposition he made all who were interested in practicing or encouraging thrift familiar with the advantages of the bank. The result soon became apparent in the accounts. The deposits rose to an average of forty-two millions between 1881 and 1885, and in 1890 they had risen to sixty-seven millions.

But during the last decade the busiyears ago. So quickly did it win the confidence of the public that a separate building for the accommodation of astonishing sum of nearly one hundred and sixteen millions, and by this which have since been made have been time they doubtless have exceeded fully occupied as fast as completed, £120,000,000. In an old report of the postmaster-general's there is a forecast that for some time the annual increase in the savings bank business would be from 130,000 to 140,000 in the number of depositors, and about £1,500,000 in the amount of the deposits. Between 1896 and 1897 the number of depositors increased by 577,000, and the amount deposited by nearly eight millions. The vast sum held by the bank is made up of a great multitude of small savings; there are more than seven millions of depositors, and the average sum standing to their account only slightly exceeds £16. One in every five persons in England and Wales has an account in the bank. In Scotland the bank has never been so popular, not because the population is less thrifty, but because the ordinary banks invite the deposit of small sums; both there and in Ireland one in every fourteen persons is a depos-

It is not only by taking care of the savings of the individual that the postoffice assists thrift. It is the banker of friendly societies, penny banks and small charitable funds of all sorts. It is used by the war office for the sav-ings of the soldiers abroad and for the deposit of deferred pay; while the Technical Education Board of the London county council pays its scholarships through the books of the bank. When school-pence were abolished the postoffice and the education department operated in an attempt to capture for the benefit of the chilthe small sums previously for the education, and it is estimated that £40,000 was deposited through elementary schools in the first year after the change. Nor has the bank destroyed the older agencies for the encouragement of thrift, the trustee savings banks. Rev. Dr. Johnston Was an Eye-Witness of Saturday's Disturbances.

And Was Astonished at the Calling Out of the Militia-He Deprecates the Display of Military Force-Authorities Showed Lack of Prudence

ILL-ADVISED

Rev. Dr. Johnston, when interviewed this morning regarding the disturbances Saturday, and the calling out of the militia, said that absence of discussion or criticism was probably most desirable at this juncture until men's minds were calmer. Speaking, however, from what he had himself observed on Saturday, when on two occasions KINGSTON, JULY 13.—At the cheese board today 230 white and 1,000 colored, June make, boarded; sales, 600 colored at 8%c; 8 9-16c offered for reat 4 and again at 10 o'clock he had happened to pass through the crowd he was astonished beyond measure to hear next morning that extreme measures had been resorted to. Dr. Johnston feared that the calling out of the militia had had the effect of unduly exaggerating the unhappy situation, and he regarded it as a measure, perhaps hastily decided upon by the authorities without a due consideration of the effects that would be produced.

"Any display of military authority at this time," said Dr. Johnston, "when the city is as quiet as a village, and there is no appearance of violence, can only produce a feeling of resentment. To exaggerate law and authority is quite as great an evil as to be lax in its administration."

"The worst effect of the whole matter," Dr. Johnston added, "is that a sentiment is being created and developed in our city that is separating classes, and from which the city will not free itself in many years; it is too bad that steady prices. Calves were in light supply, fair demand, steady; choice to extra were quoted at $6.25 to $6.50; the closing months of the century should be marked by such scenes scenes which prudence and firmness on the part of those in positions of authority should have prevented."

ALTOGETHER TOO REALISTIC

Shotted Cartridges Used in a "Wild West" Show-Three Persons Injured.

Rochester, N. Y., July 14 .-- During the performance at Summerville on Lake Ontario last night, the Tuscarora Indians, who have been giving a "Wild West" entertainment there during the week, fired into the crowd that had assembled to watch their antics, and wounded three people The injured are: Joseph E. That part of the programme during which the Indians fire on a log cabin and are fired on by the occupants, was carried out without a hitch, but when the cabin was fired and the whites were obliged to fight the attacking party in the open, the trouble began. Suddenly Miss Williamson uttered a scream and fell to the ground. Mar-cill went down before another charge from a gun in the hands of the Indians, then young Brotsch toppled over. The Calling In of the Militia Ridiculed and Condemned.

Outside Press Say Arbitration Is the Remedy-the Head That Was Lost and the Leg That Was Pulled.

[Hamilton Spectator.] In London the Little they are making a tremendous fuss about a very small matter. The streets are full of militiamen, and gatling guns rumble over the pavement, all because there was a small row between striking street car men and their "scab" successors in office. Half a dozen policemen could have controlled the "mob" at its worst, and there was not the slightest necessity to import an army of militia from other cities and towns. Somebody in authority lost his head. Or, perchance,

[Kingston Whig.]

Peace and amity are not to be restored in London by pistols, clubs and rotten eggs. What's the matter with the people? Have they all lost their heads over the street railway strike? The difficulty is one for arbitration. It cannot be settled by the police and military with batons and bayonets.

[Stratford Herald.]

Some esteemed Londoners are lamenting the ill effects of the strike upon the commercial interests of the city, and are pointing lugubrious morals wickedness of labor organizaabout the tions. They miss another point which may be quite as material, that is, as to the folly of a Canadian municipality like London bargaining away a valuable franchise like the street railway to millionaire foreigners for a mess of pottage. Is it correct, or it is not, that the controlling power of the London Street Railway is a Cleveland millionaire, who cares nothing for London except as a source of tribute? The troublous street car strike in Cleveland having occurred under the same ownership, the presumption is just as reasonable that the management in both places is harsh and grinding, as that the em-ployes are a bad lot. It is not much of a sign of loyalty on the part of some Londoners to display eagerness to lay all fault upon Canadian fellowcitizens, and play into the hands of United States millionaires and their hired men. At this distance it is far from clear that the fault is chiefly with the street car employes, whilst the frantic resort to martial law—at which the whole of Western Ontario is laughing-invites loud suspicion as to the blameworthiness of the street car authorities and the weak civic head who has allowed his leg to be pulled so absurdly.

[Dresden Times.]

The mayor of London, Ont., may or may not have been justified in calling out the militia on Saturday last. In the light of subsequent events he was not right in alarming the whole western portion of the province by calling militiamen from all portions of it to quell an incipient riot like that which occurred in London. If the city of London, and every other city, and the provincial and federal governments would compel corporations like the London Street Railway Company to adjust differences with their employes through an arbitration board, no neceswould exist for such scenes as London has witnessed of late. How-ever, it is creditable to the union men that they were not the cause of the

[Windsor Record.]

The mayor of London has made himself and his city ridiculous by calling self and his city ridiculous by calling what in the aid of outside militia. has been called a riot turns out to have been a very small affair, and could have been dealt with by the city police and the Canadian regulars located in London. The calling in of outside militia gave a prominence to the disturbance which its importance did not warrant, and will do injury to that city.

ILL-ADVISED WORTH

Rov. Dr. Johnston Was an Eye-Witness of Saturday's Disturbances.

And Was Astonished at the Calling Out of the Militia-He Deprecates the Display of Military Force-Authorities Showed Lack of Prudence

Rev. Dr. Johnston, when interviewed this morning regarding the disturbances Saturday, and the calling out of the militia, said that absence of discussion or criticism was probably most desirable at this juncture until men's minds were calmer. Speaking, however, from what he had himself observed on Saturday, when on two occasions at 4 and again at 10 o'clock he had happened to pass through the crowd he was astonished beyond measure to hear next morning that extreme measures had been resorted to. The crowd, cited to acts of violence.

Dr. Johnston feared that the calling out of the militia had had the effect of unduly exaggerating the unhappy situation, and he regarded it as a measure, perhaps hastily decided upon by the authorities without a due consideration of the effects that would be produced.

"Any display of military authority at this time," said Dr. Johnston, "when the city is as quiet as a village, and there is no appearance of violence, can only produce a feeling of resentment. exaggerate law and authority is quite as great an evil as to be lax in its auministration."

"The worst effect of the whole matter," Dr. Johnston added, "is that a sentiment is being created and developed in our city that is separating classes, and from which the city will not free itself in many years; it is too bad that the closing months of the century should be marked by such scenes scenes which prudence and firmness on the part of those in positions of authority should have prevented."

THE MAYOR'S WEAKNESS.

[Woodstock Express.] Mr. James Carrie, of Runians, Gray, Carrie Company, of London, and for-merly of Woodstock, told an Express reporter yesterday that the business men of London viewed with great alarm the prospect of a protraction of the street railway strike into the fall season. He explained that the loss had already been very great, and that the big military camp this season had been of little benefit to the city, as, on account of the strike, the soldiers and camp visitors did not get down into the city to do any business. Mr. Carrie, in common with most of the prominent merchants of the city, strongly condemned the bringing of outside troops tle moderate today, and prices 5c to into the city. He thought it gave Lon-10c lower; good to fancy steers, $5 to don a bad name, and kept people away $5.85; common, $4.60 to $5.25; stockers and feeders, $3.50 to $4.90; bulls, cows and heifers, $2.25 to $5.10; Texas steers, $4.25 to $5.25; calves, $4.30 to $7. the additions to the city's forces that could possibly be required. Both sides were wrong to a certain extent, and the weakness and vacillation of the mayor had done as much as anything else to bring about the present trouble.

ALTOGETHER TOO REALISTIC

Shotted Cartridges Used in a "Wild West" Show-Three Persons Injured.

Rochester, N. Y., July 14.--During the performance at Summerville on Lake Ontario last night, the Tuscarora Indians, who have been giving a 'Wild West' entertainment there dur ing the week, fired into the crowd that had assembled to watch their antics, and wounded three people.

The injured are: Joseph E. Marcill, seven shot wounds in right leg and two in left.

Raymond Brotsch, 9 years old, several shot wounds in right thigh.

Miss Helen Williamson, wounded in the body and limbs.

That part of the programme during which the Indians fire on a log cabin and are fired on by the occupants, was carried out without a hitch, but when the cabin was fired and the whites were obliged to fight the attacking party in the open, the trouble began. Suddenly Miss Williamson uttered a scream and fell to the ground. Marcill went down before another charge from a gun in the hands of the Indians. then young Brotsch toppled over. excitement prevailed for a few minutes. None of the injured were seriously hurt, but the wounds are extremely painful. The shooting was entirely accidental, the loaded cartridges be-coming mixed by mistake with the regular blanks used at the performance. No arrests were made

The Calling In of the Militia Ridiculed and Condemned.

Outside Press Say Arbitration Is the Remedy-the Head That Was Lost and the Leg That Was Pulled.

[Hamilton Spectator.] In London the Little they are making a tremendous fuss about a very small matter. The streets are full of militiamen, and gatling guns rumble over the pavement, all because there was a small row between striking street car men and their "scab" successors in office. Half a dozen policemen could have controlled the "mob" at its worst, and there was not the slightest necessity to import an army of militia from other cities and towns. Somebody in authority lost his head. Or, perchance, he had no head to lose.

[Kingston Whig.]

Peace and amity are not to be restored in London by pistols, clubs and rotten eggs. What's the matter with the people? Have they all lost their heads over the street railway strike? The difficulty is one for arbitration. It cannot be settled by the police and military with batons and bayonets.

(Stratford Herald.]

Some esteemed Londoners are lamenting the ill effects of the strike upon the commercial interests of the city, and are pointing lugubrious morals about the wickedness of labor organizations. They miss another point which may be quite as material, that is, as to the folly of a Canadian municipality like London bargaining away a valuable franchise like the street railway to millionaire foreigners for a mess of pottage. Is it correct, or it is not, that the controlling power of the London Street Railway is a Cleveland millionaire, who cares nothing for London except as a source of tribute? The troublous street car strike in Cleveland having occurred under the same ownership, the presumption is just as reasonable that the management in both places is harsh and grinding, as that the employes are a bad lot. It is not much of a sign of loyalty on the part of some Londoners to display eagerness to lay all fault upon Canadian fellowcitizens, and play into the hands of United States millionaires and their hired men. At this distance it is far from clear that the fault is chiefly with the street car employes, whilst the frantic resort to martial law—at which the whole of Western Ontario is laughing-invites loud suspicion as to the blameworthiness of the street car authorities and the weak civic head who has allowed his leg to be pulled so absurdly.

[Dresden Times.]

The mayor of London, Ont., may or may not have been justified in calling out the militia on Saturday last. In the light of subsequent events he was not right in alarming the whole western portion of the province by calling militiamen from all portions of it to quell an incipient riot like that which occurred in London. If the city London, and every other city, and the provincial and federal governments would compel corporations like the London Street Railway Company to adjust differences with their employes through an arbitration board, no necessity would exist for such scenes as London has witnessed of late. How-ever, it is creditable to the union men that they were not the cause of the little riot.

[Toronto News.] Street cars manned by policemen are about as profitable as a theater filled with deadheads.

[Windsor Record.]

The mayor of London has made himself and his city ridiculous by calling in the aid of outside militia. has been called a riot turns out to have been a very small affair, and could have been dealt with by the city police and the Canadian regulars located in London. The calling in of outside militia gave a prominence to the disturbance which its importance did not warrant, and will do injury to that city.

A LONDON CANTATRICE. The following is from the Advertiser, Newark, N.J., regarding a song recital given by Miss Dora Taylor, of this city: "Wissner Hall was crowded last night, the artist being Miss Dora Taylor, contralto, of St. George's P. E. Church, New York. Miss Taylor has an unusually rich contralto voice of great fullness and fine quality and range. Besides the natural qualities of voice, the singer shows a fine control over all shades of vocal color and romantic feeling, evidences of long and earnest study. The programme was varied, running through many styles, from Gluck, Mozart and Schubert, to the school of today. The song cycle of Von Fielitz, 'Eliland,' was a most finished piece of vocal work, the ten songs arousing great enthusiasm. The 'Love Song' of Flegier, with violin obligato, also awakened a hearty response from the audience, by its broad and dramatic rendering. The recital was remarkably successful, and among the audience were people from ong the audience were people from New York, Jersey City and Summit, N. J. Strikers Once More Decline Partial Arbitration,

But Are Willing to Abide by Arbitration That Is Complete and Full.

The Company Also Decline to Accept the Proposed Basis Without Amendment.

The strike committee were at work late and early yesterday, with a view to drawing the men and the company into line. A sub-committee, consisting of the mayor, Ald. Parnell and Dr. Roome, did not let their labors rest until 1 a.m., and they were at it again about noon. All of the meetings were behind closed doors, until 1 o'clock today, when the reporters were admitted. A deputation from the strikers was expected, but did not appear, and the committee adjourned for lunch. At 2 o'clock the committee got together again. The documents in the case explain themselves. The basis of a settlement was suggested by the sub-committee and considered by the company and the men, both of whom replied. Mr. Essery was subsequently heard, and verbally explained the men's position. SUGGESTED BASIS OF SETTLE-MENT.

The basis of settlement suggested by the grievance committee was: 1. All matters in dispute between the company and its striking employes, except the scale of wages and the question of recognition of the union, but including the question whether the employes were justified in striking on the 22nd of May last, to be left to arbitration. The arbitration to award such redress and direct the payment of such damages and costs as, all the circumstances being considered, they deem just and right.

2. Provided that the men waive the recognition of the union, the employes of the company to be protected by a covenant of the company entered into with the city, giving the men full pro-tection, and providing for the submission of disputes to a board of arbitration, whose decisions shall be final, and bind both the company and its em-The company at all times to hear grievances whe'ther presented by individuals or by a committee.

3. The arbitrators both under the first and second clauses to be appointed, one by the men, one by the company, and the third by the two so appointed, or, failing agreement, under the Ontario act.

4. Failing agreement as to future wages, the scale determined by the last agreement to be in force for two years: 5. Pending the arbitration under clause 1, the strike to be declared off, ne company meanwhile to be engaged temporarily

THE MEN'S REPLY. The men's reply, addressed to Chairman Parnell, was as follows: "Sir,-The undersigned, on behalf of the members of Division 97, of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America, of London, Ont., beg leave to inform the committee that the men have discussed the suggested basis of settlement received from the committee on the 13th day of July, 1899, and regret that the request made the committee therein, that the men agree that the arbitrators shall except the scale of wages and the recognition of the union from the investigation, but include the question whether the employes were justified in striking, and that the men shall also declare the strike off and agree to nonunion men filling their old positions, pending the arbitration, cannot be accepted. "Dated this 14th day of July, 1899.

"(Signed) THE COMMITTEE." COMPANY ALSO REFUSES. The following letter was received from the company; it was addressed to the chairman, and read: "Dear Sir,-The suggested basis of settlement submitted to the street railway company yesterday has been carefully considered by the directors, and while they think it goes a very long way further than should be asked of the company, and cannot accept same as it stands, yet in the interests of a settlement for all concerned, they trust the committee will be able to make such amendment to the document as will render its acceptance possible. Yours very truly,

"C. E. A. CARR, Manager." Mr. Hunter-The company is willing to accept that basis if it were changed to suit them. They get pretty near all they want in it as it is. Mr. Hunter held that it was a very unfair basis of settlement, and did not in the slightest degree censure the men for not accepting it.

Ald. Douglass wanted to know why Mr. Hunter objected to it. Mr. Hunter replied that both the wages clause and the recognition of the union should be included in the arbitration. He was also opposed to the method proposed for selecting arbitrators.

.Dr. Roome said they didn't know of better way of selecting the arbitrators. It was according to the Ontario Mr. Essery, solicitor for the strikers, was sent for, and appeared before the committee. "Do you wish, as before, all matters submitted to arbitration?" the mayor

Mr. Essery-Yes. Ald. Rumball-Don't you think they will do anything less than that? Mr. Essery, in reply, reviewed the situation. It was apparent to any one who coolly considered the matter, he said, that the propositions of the company could never be accepted.

Their first proposition of arbitration was, that the company, if beaten, would take only those for whom they had vacancies. It might mean that there would be no vacancies. The men had all along been prepared to arbitrate everything, but they were not prepared to place themselves in a position before they started, so that arbitration would be of no use to them. To ask the strikers to declare the strike off was absurd. Everybody knew there was a strike on. What the committee wanted and what the citizens wanted was a settlement of the strike new on. And they desired that such settlement be final. Every suggestion of arbitration had so that the company would get the benefit and the men nothing, no matter what the decision. He didn't see any chance of a settlement at present.

Ald. Rumball-The company offered arbitration and the employes simply we could not possibly accept. Ald. Rumball—We agree with you, that you could not accept it, but we want concessions.

Mr. Essery—You have got no concessions from the street railway company, and we have made concessions.

The mayor said that what they were to discuss now was the basis suggested. Each side should tell them where it was at fault, and then they could try to get it agreeable to both.

The document was discussed clause by clause, and Mr. Essery pointed out why his clients objected to it. The discussion was in progress as we go to press.

There was another display of military force this morning. The troops under orders at Wolseley Barracks paraded through the were again peaceful, sunlit streets, slightly inter-fering with traffic, but furnishing a mild sort of spectacle as a quid pro quo for the extra expense the city is under. The maxim gun was trundled along also, to the delight of the small boys. Most of the volun-teers were smiling quizzically under their helmets, and seemed to feel the ludicrousness of the situation.

Four street cars were run last night on Dundas and Richmond streets. There were two policemen on each car. The cars were not molested in the slightest way. Hamilton Typographical Union has DAINTINESS IN ENGLAND.

[Vernon Lee in the July Atlantic.] England in fine weather, like its inhabitants when in happy circumstances, has a singular look of newness and good breeding, says Vernon Lee in the July Atlantic. Everything is swept and garnished, like the interior of a daintily kept house. The hoppoles make a pale green pattern on the violet ploughed ground. In the streams, the long willow-like weeds are combed out and starred with jasmine-looking blossoms. Fish dart like ghosts in the sunlit bright golden water. And then the gardens of the old cottagescottages, some of them, of the time of Elizabeth, nay, almost of the Black Prince, with scalloped weather-tiles of delicate peach-bloom color, and brilliant whitewashed walls, against which stand out geraniums, and pink and white mallows, and even an exquisite Japanese lily. What dainty prosperity!

And characteristically through the midst of it runs the past, in the shape of an old Roman highway. You can still see slabs of it, along the downs, among immense nut-laden the downs, allows the beeches, past duckponds and hay-stacks. What a strange mixture of a very present Present with a Past which seems scarcely Past at all.

JESSAMINE.

"My family!" he said, is forced gaiety, on the morning of his departure. "I assure you, my consequence in my own eyes is mightily augmented by the acquisition of my new honors."

Eunice called up one of her slow, bright smiles acknowledgment. Jessie appeared to heed the com-pliment as little as she did did the parting, that drew tears from her sister's eyes and choked Roy's farewell directions as to the care she must take of herself while he was eway.

"I shall write to you every day, my
"I shall write to you every day, my sweet wife," he promised. "And it will not harm you—it may help you to while away the time, if you can scrib-ble a few lines to me in return, now and then.'

"If I can I will. If you wish it I ill write certainly. But don't expect to hear every day from me. There's very little here to write about, you know," answered Jessie.

Eunice wondered, to reverent admiration, at the love and forbearance with which he thanked her for the

They attended him to the porch. The morning was foggy, and Roy put Jessie back in the shelter of the hall

"It is too damp for you out here! Don't stand there to see me off!" Eunice-maybe he-would have been better satisfied had she disregarded the loving command. As it was, when he waved his hand from the carriage door, Eunice stood alone in the door-way. Yet she was sure Jessie did not mean to be ungracious; that she was not really insensible to the devotion of the husband of her choice; but that for the stay of his presence she must have gone mad or died in her overwhelming grief. What she mistook for unwifelike reserve was an insessant effort to control herself, to play the woman and not the child. It was best not to interfere even so far as to hint that Roy's kindest schemes for her comfort or pleasure as often as not were unnoticed by verbal thanks or grateful look from her whom he aimed to benefit. As Jessie's interest in the outer world and passing events revived, this blemish would vanish. Older people, who had known more of the discipline of life, had fallen into the mistake of idolizing their sorrows while they were new.

The sisters were at tea on the third day of Mr. Fordham's absence, when a letter was brought to Jessie. "From Roy," she said, quietly, and laid it down by her plate until the meal was finished-Eunice hurrying

Instead of this Jessle broke the seal, and read the four closely written pages by the lamp upon the supper table, while her sister washed the silver and china in the same little cedar-wood pail, with shining brass hoops her mother had used for this purpose a quarter of a century before. Eunice was inclined to be scrupulous in the matters of extreme cleanliness and system in housekeeping, and neatness and fitness of apparel; and had other and quaint, but never unpleasant, peculiarities that leaned towards what the vulgar and unappreciative style "old-maidism." But she was a bonny picture to behold tonight, her black dress setting off her fairness to exquisite advantage; her features chastened into purer outline and a softer serenity by sorrow; her eyes more beautiful for the shadows that had darkened them.

She was younger in appearance and feeling than her companion, who scanned, without change of expression and complexion, the love-words that had streamed, a strong, living tide, from the writer's heart. She read it all, from address to signature; then handed it to her sister, who had just sum-moned Patsey to remove the hot water

"There are several messages to you in it," she said languidly. "You can read them for yourself."

Eunice drew back.
"I don't think he meant it for any

"I should have to go all over it again in order to do that," returned "They are scattered sentences -business items, and the like. You may look for them at your leisure. I shall leave the letter upon the table

Faithful to her promise to Roy to do all in her power for the restoration of Jessie's native cheerfulness, she compelled herself to wear a tranquil countenance in her sight, to speak hopefully and, when she could, brightly,

Jessie neither smiled nor frowned. She looked simply and wearily indif-

Eunice skimmed the first three pages cursorily, on the watch for any men-tion of her own name, beset, all the while, by the idea that her own act in opening the letter at all bordered on profanation, and affected almost to tears by stray sentences she could not avoid seeing, eloquent of the young husband's tender compassion for loved one, his longing to be with her, and fond prognostications of the peace and joy of their future life.

At the top of the fourth page a pas-sage seemed to dart up at her from the sheet, and, leaping into view, to be changed into characters of red-hot flame:

"What a discreet little woman you are, never to hint to me your knowledge of Orrin's engagement! The communication took me completely by surprise. He could scarcely believe that you had not told me; said that he had went down to Dundee on purpose to impart to you the agreeable and important secret. The marriage is fixed for December. I always prophesied that he would marry in haste when he had selected the lady, whom I am extremely curious to meet. He has floated from flower to flower so long that his selection ought to be worth seeing. You know her, he tells me. I shall expect a full-length description of her, done in your finest style, when I return. I own I should be better satisfied that he is to be made as happy as I would have him, if Miss San-ford were not an heiress. While we-you and I—and others who know him well, will never suspect him of selling himself for money, the above fact may give occasion for scandal-mongers to The father of the rave and exalt. bride-elect is in town. Jessie did not look around as her sister refolded the letter, tucked it into the envelope, and laid it upon the table. But while each believed herself to be separated from the other by a fathomless gulf of memories, every one of which was an anguish, both were pondering the same section of the epistle that lay between them. The announcement of Wyllys' approaching marriage was, in itself, nothing to the wife. The thought of it had lost the power to wound when she parted with her faith in him. The wrong he had done her could never be forgiven; he had misled her purdeceived her cruelly; robbed her life of love and hope, and given her self-contempt and remorse instead. But she did not regret him -as she now knew him to be-or linger fondly upon recollections of their bygone intimacy. Hester Sanford was welcome to the suitor her gold had bought. The phrases that had found a sentient spot in her breast were these: "Whom I am extremely curious to meet;" "I shall expect a full-length description of her." The apathetic misery which had locked brain and heart with fetters of ice since her father's death had not rendered her totally unmindful of her husband's long-suffering and gentleness, his un-selfish love and care of herself. She was persuaded that the girlish passion that had made of him a demi-god was gone forever. Her flesh fainted and her spirit died within her, at the caresses to which she had turned herself in the days of her idolatry, as roses open to the sun-as innecently and as naturally. She could never love again—the fire had scathed too deeply for that; but she had begun to believe that she might find comfort in esteeming and liking her only protector; might seek, and not in vain, in a calm, true friendship for this good man, forgetfulness of the storms that had wrecked her early dreams. In his frank and noble presence suspicion stood rebuked. It was easier to discredit the evidence of one's own senses and judgment than to doubt his integrity.

A man of letters has but little show in a breach of promise case. No amount of culture will make a man stop snowing in his sleep.

The life of the business woman is not easy. Usually it is a monotonous routine of work, often aggravated by the ill temper or stupidity of others. And when the physical condition of the woman keeps her in constant suffering, it makes her lot a hard one.

So many women have found entire relief from the ills peculiarly feminine, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that it seems almost criminal to neglect the opportunity of a complete cure offered by the use of this medicine.

You are invited to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., either personally or by letter free of charge. If your case is severe or others have failed to reach it, do not hesitate to write to or go and see Dr. Pierce. Your letter will be read in private, its contents treated as a sacred confidence, and an answer promptly returned in a plain envelope bearing no printing upon it. Write without fear and without fee.

without fear and without fee.

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness for about two years," writes Mrs. Emma Richardson, of Goss, Wayne Co., Ky. "Could not do my work part of the time. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and felt as well as I ever did. I have also used Doctor Pierce's Goiden Medical Discovery for ulceration of the throat with good results and half of one bottle cured my throat when I could scarcely swallow." The permanent benefit to health from the timely use of Dr. Pierce' Pellets is testified to by thousands of women. They regulate the stomach, liver and bowels, fold by all medicine dealers.

A Song for Canada.

Onl gather, sons and daughters of the beauty of the North; Oh! gather, men and women, for the nation bids you forth!

Your Canada demands it; you, her children, are you true, Are you faithful to the Empire and the old Red, White and Blue?

Some are boasting no true Briton ever wears the Maple Leaf; Some would set the hardy Beaver on to fight his Lion Chief. Let them hear our proud defiance—they may dry Niagara's flood Ere our land forgets the Name for which our fathers shed their blood! Let them say there's not a Briton in our dear Canadian home,

But the bond of blood is stronger than the barrier of foam; A thousand leagues may separate—a thousand ties will bind Till the brotherhood of Britain is the glory of mankind. We cannot and we will not have our Canada disclaim Her portion in the Empire, in the Flag, the Roll of Fame; Britain leads among the nations, she will set the people free, She will march to man's redemption, but she needs the Maple Tree. They would pilfer his allegiance from the strong Canadian heart, And bargain for his heritage with diplomatic art; They would hew our stately Maple into splinters in their spite Till they left no branch in Canada to bear her emblem bright. But her forests are not wider than the race of patriot sons That will bless her, every acre, where grass grows or water runs, That will love ber, live and work for her, and die for her at last, And sleep beneath her maples with the heroes of the past. Let folly fill the shallow heart that lays his birthright down;

Confusion take the hollow heart disloyal to the Crown! There's no excuse of vicious king or mon arch led astray To justify the traitor to the world's best hope to-day. For England, mother England, still fights hard for right to be, Her glittering Crown the symbol yet of valient men and free. Look, fellow Britons, look and judge what alien banners are, For a brighter flag than England's you must seek another star:

Then rise and reign, Dominion fair, between the world-wide seas; White Peace her mighty pinion spreads to cherish your decrees; Strong as the North your sons go forth with Freedom for their dower, To guard from blame your name and fame, to build you like a tower. destiny will daunt them, no adversity dismay. The King of kings will grant them wisdom with the power they sway;

And while their pride to Britain turns—the Empire of the Free-

Canada their loyal love, their heart's desire shall be! -Albert E. S. Smythe. Toronto, Dominion Day, 1899.

AN OLD SAND CLOCK

It Used to Mark Time in Olden Times Before Clocks and Watches Had Been Invented.

It is very easy for us who have watches and clocks to tell the time of day or to note the passage of the minutes, but in the olden time, before the invention of clocks and watches, there were others just as important to their owners, if not quite as accurate as ours. At first the ancients had sun-dials, by which it was easy to tell the hour of the day by the shadow that they cast. In the night time this was impossible, and so water clocks and sand clocks were invented. The water clock was nothing more than a vessel of water with a small hole in the bottom through which the water leaked away. An upright rod in the vessel was marked by the hours registered on the sun-dial in such a way that as the water flowed out the figures remaining above water showed how many hours had passed since it was filled. But this was rather inconvenient, for the vessel had to be refilled every day, and it was rather a damp clock at best, not well adapted to stand on the mantelpiece. Working on the principle used in it of reckoning the time by the amount of space left empty, the idea of using sand, the most fluid of solids, was reached. This was not allowed to run away, but merely passed through a minute hole from one glass to the other. In the National Museum of Germany is one of the oldest of these sand clocks, dating from the year 1600. It was intended to mark each quarter of the hour, for on the first hour glass the figure one-quarter showed that when all

AN OLD SAND CLOCK. of its sand had passed downward 15 minutes were past. The second was marked two-four; it was a half-hour glass. The third was marked three-four, making the last a real hour glass. All the difference between the four glasses lies in the amount of sand being increased by the amount in the first one in each succeeding glass.

A new insulating material known as iron felt, and made in Germany, is being extensively used in Europe for a number of purposes. For the prevention of vibra-tion it is said to be quite successful, and it is placed between engines and their foundations and also between rails and sleepers. It consists of the larger and stouter woollen fibres treated with a by. product of petroleum and then coated with gelatine and India rubber and vulcanized. After pressure it is used in the form of plates somewhat over two square feet in area, and from one-half to two inches in thickness. The plates are said to be extremely elastic and imperishable, and have a surface so hard as not to be cut by the sharp edges of bolt-heads or tren girders.—Public Opinies.

HOARD'S IDEAL CREAMERY

How the Statesman and Editor Eas Put His Ideas Into Practical Working Shape.

Former Governor W. D. Hoard of Wisconsin may properly be termed the practical idealist of the dairy world. He is editor of Hoard's Dairyman, published at Fort Atkinson, and some of his ideas have been brought cut in a new creamery, which is described by Superintendent C. L. Fitch as follows. There are six buildings in the plant

The office, with a force of six persons. The barn, electric lighted, with space for the teamsters' wagons, light wagon and for three teams, besides the driver The storehouse and box factory, where the whitewood butter boxes are made daily. The engine house and electric light and power plant. The skimmilk tanks and weighers are also here in the rear and so entirely away from the creamery. The light and power plant fornishes light for all the buildings and for the homes of the four Hoard families, for The Dairyman office and for Three butter makers are employed in the home factory. Clarence McPherson, a man of much experience, with Mr. Hoard almost from the beginning, is in charge. Thomas Kyle, Jr., and Clarence Dibble are the other butter makers, and both are skilled in handling large quantities of fine print but-

We use methods of butter making work which are new and designed particularly for our purposes here-methods for obtaining butter of absolutely uniform color, the natural June shade, throughout the year and from the different creameries of the line and ways of keeping the fall and winter flavor as near as may be like that of the grass season. The metric system is in use within the creameries except in the matter of weights, which must be in pounds for customers' convenience. All glassware and graduates are metric and per cents instead of ounces to pounds methods are used throughout, which is thought very accurate and gives better

Foamy Cream.

Many times in winter and spring and from various causes cream, when churned, foams up light and increases two or three times its original quantity. Instead of the butter breaking and coming together, it will scarcely break at all, and when it does it resembles fish eggs and will not gather. The following remedy has been tested on the most obstinate cases and has never failed to bring good results: After pouring the cream in the churn add hot water till the cream is at a temperature of 70 ed to bring good results: After pouring degrees; then add one half teacupful of salt to every three gallons of sour cream; then churn as usual. The butter will break in about 15 minutes and will gather perfectly.-Live Stock.

BOARD OF WORKS

Holds a Short Session-Engineering Assistance Required in Connection With the Sewer System.

Owing to unusual circumstances it was thought better to hold the regular meeting of the board of works yesterday afternoon instead of evening. All of the members were present.

The appointment of two inspectors for cement walks was laid over for a week. There were five applications. Mr. W. H. Bartram appeared before the committee and requested that the city engineer be instructed to take certain measurements and levels of private property in connection with Mr. Bartram's dispute with Mr. M. Scarrow. A lively tilt between the city en-gineer and Mr. Bartram ensued. The former said he wouldn't have anyone in his office do the work unless so directed by the committee, and this the committee refused to do. Messre. J. A. Thomas and R. A. Garside urged that an alleged nuisance, caused by the Evergreen avenue sewer, be abated. The committee will visit the property of the complainants on Monday or Tuesday, and will at the same time look into the City Gas Company's claim for damages.

Subsequently the sewer committee met and considered a strong recommendation from the city engineer that Prof. J. A. Duff, of the Toronto School of Science, be engaged for the next two months, to help the regular staff taking levels for field work on section A, of the sewer system, and in connection with the plans of the watersheds of the city. The committee considered it adrisable to act as advised by Mr. Graydon, and left the matter with him to see a majority of the aldermen, and in the event of obtaining their sanction, to engage Prof. Duff.

DEATH OF ALFRED ROWLAND. Many of London's old-time residents will regret to hear of the death of Mr. Alfred Rowland, formerly of this city, which-occurred yesterday at his home in the town of Lake Geneva, Wis., where he had lived for nearly nineteen years. Mr. Rowland, who was the third son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rowland, sen., of this city, was born in Kingston-on-Thames, in May, 1823, and came to London with his father's family in 1843. He will be remembered by the older residents as one of the Phoenix Fire Company. He early took an active part in temperance, Sunday school and church work, having joined the York Street Baptist Church under the pastorate of the late Rev. Dr. Robert Boyd. He was engaged for some years in the crockery business on Richmond street, and afterwards on Dundas street, starting the original "China Hall." In January, 1880, he left London, and resided for a time at Lake Mills, Wis., subsequently settling in the town of Lake Geneva, the beautiful summer resort of some of Chicago's wealthiest families. Mr. Rowland was a genial. warm-hearted Christian man, with a sincere love for evangelistic work, in the pursuit of which he late in life en-

The young man who has always thought he must have his clothes made to measure by an "exclusive" tailor doesn't know till he tries "Fit-Reform" garments how much he can save in money without any sacrifice of correct form and fashion.

"Fit-Reform" Clothing is, in fact, practically made to your measure in the most approved style, from carefully selected materials by none but skilled workmen. Every garment guaranteed.

LIFE SAVED-Mr. James Bryson Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs and was given up by physicians.
