Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming are checked below.

- Coloured covers / Couverture de couleur
- Covers damaged / Couverture endommagée
- Covers restored and/or laminated / Couverture restaurée et/ou pelliculée
- Cover title missing / Le titre de couverture manque
- Coloured maps / Cartes géographiques en couleur
- Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or black) / Encre de couleur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)
- Coloured plates and/or illustrations / Planches et/ou illustrations en couleur
- Bound with other material / Relié avec d'autres documents
- Only edition available / Seule édition disponible
- Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin / La reliure serrée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge intérieure.
- Blank leaves added during restorations may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming / Il se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.
- Additional comments / Commentaires supplémentaires:

L'Institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurer. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

- Coloured pages / Pages de couleur
- Pages damaged / Pages endommagées
- Pages restored and/or laminated / Pages restaurées et/ou pelliculées
- Pages discoloured, stained or foxed / Pages décolorées, tachetées ou piquées
- Pages detached / Pages détachées
- Showthrough / Transparence
- Quality of print varies / Qualité inégale de l'impression
- Includes supplementary material / Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
- Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possible image / Les pages totalement ou partiellement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une pelure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir la meilleure image possible.
- Opposing pages with varying colouration or discolourations are filmed twice to ensure the best possible image / Les pages s'opposant ayant des colorations variables ou des décolorations sont filmées deux fois afin d'obtenir la meilleure image possible.

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

National Library of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfilm shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▽ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Bibliothèque nationale du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par la seconde plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "À SUIVRE", le symbole ▽ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

INTRODUCTION.

The Maps, Charts, Plans, &c., of which a catalogue is here presented have been drawn from many sources, including the British Museum, and different departments of the Imperial Government, the Bibliothèque Nationale and different departments of the French Government; also departments of the Federal and Provincial Governments of Canada; and, to some extent, from private collections. While of varying degrees of interest and value, all say their uses, and the object in preparing a catalogue is to render them more easily available for examination, than would otherwise have been the case, by persons engaged in historical or other research. The classification adopted is, broadly speaking, geographical, and a few remarks may be made on different sections.

WORLD MAPS.

Of the World Maps several are of much historical interest. The first on the list is the celebrated map of the Spaniard Juan de la Cosa, a biographical essay on whom, translated from the Spanish is printed in Appendix A. to this publication. It may here be briefly stated that La Cosa, according to the Spanish narrative referred to, commanded a vessel in the first and second expeditions of Columbus to America. The relations between the two men do not appear to have been entirely harmonious, but of the ability of La Cosa as a navigator there does not appear to be any doubt. His map, which is dated 1500, is believed to have been made in that year after his return to Spain from a third voyage, made in 1499, in which Amerigo Vespucci acted as pilot and cosmographer, and in which the mainland of America was discovered. La Cosa sailed for America seven times in all, and finally lost his life at the hands of the natives of Venezuela on the 28th of February, 1510. The original map is in the possession of the Spanish government, by whose permission a number of fac-similes were made in the year 1892. After the fashion of the time the inland spaces of the map are adorned with pictures of churches and castles, effigies of reigning sovereigns, as well as of earlier historical characters, and various other illustrative devices. Flags are used to distinguish the possessions of different nations.

The second map in the list, that of Sebastian Cabot, also deserves special mention. It is dated 1544 and shows a much more advanced condition of geographical knowledge than the map of La Cosa, much having been done in the intervening period, both in the way of exploration and of conquest, on the American continent. The map bears twenty-two legends in all of a descriptive and historical character. Mention is made therein of the voyages of Magellan and John Sebastian del Cano; but the map is chiefly interesting, from a Canadian point of view, in that it purports to indicate the point where John Cabot, father of Sebastian, first saw land on the American coast, the locality in question being apparently near the northerly extremity of Cape Breton. Through an error the probable explanation of which, with other information relating to the map, will be found in Appendix B., the date of the discovery is given as 1491 instead of 1497. Even this later date, it is to be remarked, is the earliest on which any portion of the American continent, as distinguished from the islands of the West Indian archipelago, was discovered.

The Waldseemüller Maps are entered as one map under No. 6, inasmuch as the twelve divisions of which it consists admit of being placed together so as to constitute one large map. This map was discovered as lately as 1901 by Prof. Fischer in the library of Prince Waldburg at Wolfegg. The former existence of the map was known from a work still extant, published in 1507 at St. Dié (Lorraine), under the title of Cosmographic Introductio, which spoke of it as having been issued contemporaneously. In this book no account is given of the four voyages of Amerigo Vespucci, and the suggestion is made it is believed for the first time that the newly discovered continent should be called after that explorer, regarded apparently as entitled to the honour. All trace of the map referred to had long disappeared; but it was surmised that, if it had escaped destruction, and should subsequently come to light, it would show the name America as given to the New World. Such proved to be the case. The name "Waldseemüller" has been given to the map, one Martin Waldseemüller having been cartographer and geographer to the learned society at St. Dié, under whose auspices it was prepared. The several maps constituting the great map have been reproduced in facsimile in atlas form, and furnished with preface and notes in German and English by Professor Jos. Fischer S.J., and Fr. R. V. Wieser.

In the Waldseemüller Atlas is included another map of much importance entitled Carta Marina, the existence of which was wholly unsuspected. Its date is 1516. Like the earlier map just referred to, it consists of twelve sections forming one complete map. It shows some advance in general geographical knowledge, but it does not exhibit the name "America."

NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA, WEST INDIA ISLANDS.

In this section are many maps of much interest. Among these may be mentioned (No. 14) "L'Amérique Septentrionale," drawn by Sansou, Geographer to the (French) King, and published by Herbert Jallot at Paris in 1674. In this map the possessions in North America of the different European nations are shown according to the best knowledge of the time. Deserving of special mention also is No. 20, entitled Carte Particulière de l'Amérique Septentrionale, published by Henry Popple at Amsterdam in 1650, bearing a certificate by Edmund Halley the Astronomer Royal of England. This map embodies a great deal of detail and shows a certain approach towards modern accuracy of delineation. A large number of maps in this section belong to a comprehensive publication entitled "Petit Atlas Maritime," in five volumes small folio, the work of Jacques Bellin, chief Hydrographic Engineer of the French navy. The maps or plans in question are founded on surveys extending from the mouth of the Mississippi to the River St. Lawrence. Some are acknowledged as having been taken from English originals.

A few maps and plans bear the name of Chaussegros de Lery, who was chief engineer at Quebec in the later years of the French regime; and some that of his son. Others in greater number are the work of British military engineers, and bear date for the most part before the Revolutionary War. Amongst the publishers of maps we meet the names of the most celebrated English map makers of the 18th and the early part of the 19th centuries, Emmanuel Bowen, William Faden, Thomas Jeffreys, the two Arrowsmiths, Aaron and John, the latter a nephew of the former, and Johnston.

Some of the maps are naturally more illustrative of the history of the times than others. Map 39 shows the line of forts constructed by the several provinces of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia, as a protection against the attacks of the French and their Indian allies. A map published by Bowen the Geographer Royal in 1768 purports to distinguish the British, Spanish and French possessions according to the Treaty of 1763. "The whole," it is claimed, "is laid out according to the latest and most authentic improvements," yet it shows us did some other maps of the period, the State of New York as extending up to the St. Lawrence at Sorel, and thus embracing a large section of what are now the "Eastern Townships" of the Province of Quebec. A more correct boundary is shown in: "A New and Correct Map of North Amerien" (No. 179), published in 1777, and stated to have been "corrected from the original materials of Governor Pownall, member of Parliament." Pownall had spent some years in America, and had filled the office of Governor of Massachusetts. This circumstance, coupled with an earlier connection with the British Board of Plantations, had given him extensive information in regard to colonial matters. He also possessed considerable skill, it is stated, in map-construction. The map now in question shows the Appalachian mountains as the general western boundary of the Atlantic colonies, the hinterland between that and the Mississippi north of the Ohio forming part of the cession made by France to England.

The Atlantic Neptune series, of which frequent mention is made in the catalogue, was the work of J. W. Desbordes, a British military engineer, who was employed as assistant engineer under General Wolfe at Quebec, and was afterwards entrusted with the task of making surveys on the Atlantic coast of North America. The maps produced by him form five folio volumes and have been described as "the most splendid collection of charts, plans and views ever published."

LA NOUVELLE FRANCE.

In this section will be found maps taken from the works of the early French explorers, Champlain, Jolliet, Hennepin and others; also maps founded on surveys made under British authority after the Conquest. Of the latter the most celebrated and interesting is undoubtedly that made on a very large scale by order of General Murray, and bearing date 1763, in which all the parishes lying along the course of the St. Lawrence from Cap Tourmente below Quebec, to the Cedars some forty miles above Montreal, are shown in great detail. A description of this map, which forms an important historical document, is given in Appendix C.

A later map of Canada (No. 289) compiled by order of Lord Dorchester, and completed in 1795, is also of interest showing, as it does, the country from the river Montmorency in the east to the limit of the surveys that had been made on the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa.

Mention should also be made of the well-known "Mitchell's Map" of 1755 (No. 267) showing "the British colonies in America with the Roads, Distances, Limits and Extent of the Settlements," which was one of the principal documents made use of in connection with the boundary negotiations between Great Britain and the United States, which were brought to a conclusion by the Ashburton Treaty of 1842. On this map are indicated the boundaries between French and English territory according to the French and English constructions of the Treaty of Utrecht, which differed very materially.

A sketch published in 1755 (No. 263) shows the several routes of the French from Quebec to the Mississippi. It is noted on the map that the journey from Montreal to New Orleans by Presquile (Oswego) and the Ohio, considered to be the most expeditious route, generally takes about four months, and that from Montreal to Michillimackinac about three months. The name Toronto appears as given to a fort on the site of the present city of Toronto.

Some valuable maps were produced by the Surveyor General of the Province of Lower Canada, Mr. Joseph Bouchette. Among these may be mentioned No. 581, a map of the entire Province, published by Faden of London in 1815; an earlier map dated 1805 of the townships south of the St. Lawrence in which granted are distinguished from ungranted lands, and the proportional reserves for the maintenance of a Protestant clergy are indicated; and No. 598, dated 1829, in which "the new subdivisions of the Province by counties are shown." Mention may also be made of "A new Map of the Province of Lower Canada, describing all the Seigniories, Townships and Grants of Land, &c.," by Samuel Holland, Surveyor General, published by Wyld of London, in 1825.

The route of the Canadian couriers between Montreal and Skeensborough, which appears to have occupied the site of the present town of Whitchall at the head of Lake Champlain, is indicated on Map 575, which also shows the two forts built on the Richelieu river (here called the Sorel) at Chambly and St. Johns for the protection of the country from the south, and, particularly in the early days, from the attacks of the Iroquois.

In different maps can be traced the subdivision of Canada into counties at successive dates and the changes made in the names of counties. It will be noticed how large a proportion of the maps and plans are of military origin, attesting the importance attached by the Home Government to the defences of Canada, and pointing to a considerable expenditure for that object.

UPPER CANADA—ONTARIO.

Among the maps in this section illustrating incidents in the history of the country may be mentioned a plan (No. 1571) of Navy Island in the Niagara river a short distance above the Falls, which was occupied by the rebels under Mackenzie and Van Rensselaer in December, 1837. The plan takes in the neighbouring village of Chippewa and shows on the opposite shore the village of Schlosser where the steamer Caroline, which had been bringing supplies and reinforcements to the rebels, was cut out from its moorings and set on fire by a party of men under the command of Captain Drew, R.N.

A plan made in 1788 (No. 1602) of "the Entrance of the River from Lake Erie to Detroit," might be used to illustrate a hostile movement made by a body of American sympathizers with the rebellion just fifty years later against a settlement on the Canadian shore at what is now the town of Amherstburg. The island of Bois Blanc is shown, of which the enemy, whose attempt was entirely defeated, took a brief possession.

A "Map of the American lakes and adjoining country, the present seat of war between Great Britain and the United States" (No. 16974), possesses interest as having been "done in part from a sketch by Major General Sir Isaac Brock." The sites of engagements and encampments in the war of 1812 are marked.

The lands acquired by the Canada Company in 1826 are shown in several plans, 1719, 1720, 1723, &c. In the last mentioned the site of the future town of Galt, called after John Galt, the first manager of the company in Canada, is indicated.

The earlier history of the country is illustrated by a plan of Fort Frontenac or Katarakony, dated 1685. The fort, first built by Frontenac in 1673, was destroyed by order of a later governor, the Marquis de Denonville, in 1689. Frontenac returning to Canada in the same year caused the fort to be rebuilt. There are two later plans of the fort made by De Léry and De Léry, fils, in 1726 and 1738, respectively, showing the same general outlines, but with some internal improvements.

The lake and river surveys made by Lieut. Bayfield, R.N., in 1817 and 1818 are represented by several maps in this section.

The Abbé Galinée's map of 1669, "Carte du Canada et des terres découvertes vers le lac d'Erie," reprinted by the Ontario Historical Society, is of interest as a very early attempt at representing the geographical outlines of western Canada. A note on this map describes the district now embraced in the Ontario counties of Norfolk and Oxford as "le plus beau lieu que j'aie vu pour l'abondance des arbres fruitiers, &c.," (the most beautiful country I have ever seen for the abundance of its fruit trees) and adds that there is splendid hunting for deer, bear, wildcat and beaver.

Memories of the war of 1812 are again revived by a plan (No. 2066) of part of the Niagara frontier, embracing a sketch very clearly drawn of the battle of Lundy's Lane, 25th July, 1814.

The progress of settlement in Upper Canada is exhibited by a map (No. 2107) published by Faden of London in 1825, showing the located districts. North of Lake Ontario four tiers of townships have been laid out as well as considerable districts in the Western Peninsula. Some of the older towns as Sandwich, Amherstburg, Aneaster, Queenston, Newark (Niagara), Whitby, Port Hope, Brockville, &c., are shown, but not as yet St. Thomas, Guelph, St. Catherines, or Bytown (Ottawa). Lord Selkirk's purchase of land to the east of the Grand River (here called the Ouse) is marked; and there is a note relating to an exploration made by Lieut. Catty, R.E., in 1819, for a communication between the lakes running northeast from Balsam Lake to Lake Chat or the Ottawa. The map made by Lieut. Catty in connection with the exploration in question is also in this section.

Of local interest as regards the city of Ottawa are a number of plans by which its growth from the first formation of a settlement may be traced. One of these is a "Copy of the Original Plan of Bytown in the time of Col. By," and shows the lots and the names of the property owners or leaseholders on Rideau, George, York, Clarence, Murray and St. Patrick streets. A beaver meadow on Rideau street is marked. The south side of Rideau street is not shown.

The first division of Upper Canada into counties after the passing of the Act of 1791 is exhibited by a plan drawn by order of Lieut.-Gov. Simcoe in 1795. A map compiled at his request a few years later, and published by Faden of London in 1800, shows the state of settlement of the Province at that time. The portion of the Province now forming the counties of Huron, Bruce, Grey, Lambton, Perth and Wellington, with parts of Oxford and Kent, is described, without any other designation, as "Great Tract of Woodland." In the central part of the Province no townships are laid out north of Rice Lake on the Trent River. "Salmon fisheries" are indicated as existing at several places on the north shore of Lake Ontario. A proposed canal is sketched connecting Lake Simcoe with Lake Ontario, and having its Ontario outlet near Pickering, some twenty miles east of Toronto.

A map dated 1819 (No. 2774) of the central part of Upper Canada shows the seat of war in 1812-1814, and, incidentally, the Clergy Reserves for the lands assigned to the Six Nations, and the Crown Reserves for the County of Lincoln.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

A number of the maps and plans of Prince Edward Island go back in date to the period of French occupation, when the island was known as Ile St. Jean, and the capital (now Charlottetown) as Port La Joie. Others were made in the time of the early British governors, and under their direction; others again by British military or hydrographic engineers.

NOVA SCOTIA.

The French maps of Nova Scotia include Nicolas Denys' map (No. 2949) taken from his work "Description Géographique et Historique de l'Amérique Septentrionale," published in 1672 and lately republished by the Champlain Society of Canada with translation and notes; also a plan of the siege of Louisburg (No. 2979) under Admiral Boscawen on the 26th July, 1758, the original of which is in the Library of Congress at Washington. In this plan, somewhat crudely drawn, the British and French fleets are depicted as well as the landing of troops, skirmishes on shore, houses in flames, &c. There is an English plan of Annapolis Royal at the time of its surrender to the British in 1710. There are many plans of Halifax and its harbour, some belonging to the French period, when the name Chibucto (variously spelt) was given to it. An English plan (No. 3109) shows "the city and fortifications of Louisburg" at the date of its capture (17th June, 1745) by an expedition from New England aided by an English fleet. "A New Map of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton Island, with the adjacent parts of New England and Canada," published by Sayer & Bennett, of London, in 1775, bears the name of Thomas Jefferys, Geographer Royal to the King, who claims to have "regulated it by many new astronomical observations." Military plans and also geological ones are numerous.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Maps and plans of the French period are comparatively few. One of these is a map of the Baie des Chaleurs made in 1724 by M. L'Hermitte, Royal Engineer. There are plans of St. John and its harbour dating back to 1784. A plan of the River St. John is given (No. 3443) "whereon are delineated the several allotments of land granted, and laid out to be granted, to loyal emigrants and disbanded corps, done under the orders and directions of His Excellency Governor Parr." Map 3491 shows the route of H. M. 85th Regiment from Fredericton to Canada, the various claimed boundary lines, roads, &c., and is a memorial of a time when the boundary between the State of Maine and Canada was still a matter of controversy and anxiety. Military, geological and public service plans of various kinds make up a large part of the list.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Among the maps of Newfoundland is found a chart of the island with the rocks and soundings, drawn from surveys made under orders from the Admiralty by James Cook, the celebrated navigator, and Michael Lane. There is a chart of the coast by Des Barres, as well as maps of the Harbours of St. Johns and Placentia by Bellin (Petit Atlas Maritime), &c.

MANITOBA, ALBERTA, SASKATCHEWAN, BRITISH COLUMBIA AND YUKON.

The maps of these provinces consist chiefly of government, railway, and geological surveys of comparatively recent date.

DOMINION OF CANADA.

This section consists chiefly of maps made by different departments of the Dominion government. A few only antedate Confederation. The Admiralty Charts, however, of the River St. Lawrence between Quebec and Kingston, and also the plans accompanying Lieut. Phillpotts' reports (1840 and 1841) on "the Inland Navigation of the Canadas," are included under this head.

TRANSPORTATION, RAILWAYS AND CANALS, ETC.

The maps and plans in this section throw light on the development of internal communications by land and water in Canada. An early condition of things is exhibited in a map (No. 3821) "showing the line of road by which the mail passes from Fredericton to Quebec, with the different stage houses on the said road." No. 3823 gives a list of railways as existing in 1853, and later sketches bring the statistics of the subject practically down to the present time.

BOUNDARY MAPS.

Under this head are included a certain number of coast maps, as well as boundary maps in the more ordinary sense. The boundaries of Quebec, according to the Royal Proclamation of 7th October, 1763, are shown in map 3883, founded on "the French Surveys Connected with those made after the War. By Captain Carver, and Other Officers in His Majesty's Service." A number of maps and sketches in this section bear on the Maine boundary question, and others on that of the dividing line between Lower Canada and New Brunswick. Map 3940 shows "Canada divided into counties and ridings as per Union Bill."

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY MAPS.

As the French dominions in North America extended at one time to the mouth of the Mississippi several of the maps in this section are of French origin. Map 3999 is a copy of one made by the explorer Jolliett; others show the travels of La Verendrye. There are also sketches made by Major P. McKellar, R.E., of the battle on the Monongahela (9th July, 1755) in which General Braddock lost his life; while others relate to the war of 1812.

FOREIGN MAPS.

These do not call for special remark. The maps from Nos. 4047 to 4071, inclusive, are zincographs of different localities in South Africa made by the Intelligence Division of the War Office in connection with the Boer war.

ATLASSES.

Among the Atlases will be found copies of those appended to the cases and the counter cases of the British and United States governments respectively in the Alaskan Boundary Arbitration; also "The English Pilot," published in 1775, embracing 30 maps and charts; "The North American Pilot," published in the same year by Sayer & Bennett of London, "being a collection of sixty accurate charts and plans drawn from original surveys"; the charts of Vancouver, 16 in number, published in 1798; the Petit Atlas of Bellin, Vol. I., published in 1764, with many others.

It should be stated that the present catalogue represents the collection of maps, plans, &c., as it existed at the close of the year 1910, since which time considerably over a thousand maps have been added. These include Arrowsmith's map "exhibiting all the new discoveries in the interior parts of North America," with accompanying astronomical data, published in 1749; a scarce collection entitled "Plans des Principales Cités de l'Univers," Amsterdam by Danker Danckerts; the A. L. Pineau collection of maps of New York, Boston, Montreal, Quebec and Louisburg from 1651 to 1731; a number of maps from London and Paris connected with the early history of the country; also a considerable number of "separates" among which are to be found one of "Nouvel Amsterdam en Amérique," dated 1672, together with maps of Fort Pontchartrain, Placeutia, Detroit, and various other places of which frequent mention is made in early Canadian history.

In a supplement, which will be published in due course, these will be included, as well as other maps found in the manuscript collection, and in printed books, many of which possess great interest and value.

815. Plan of the Battle fought the 28th of April, 1760, upon the Height of Abraham, near Quebec, between the British Troops Garrisoned in that place, and the French Army that came to besiege it. The whole effectives of the Garrison amounted to about 3,000 men only. They were commanded by the Hon<sup>ble</sup>. Brig<sup>t</sup>. Gen<sup>l</sup>. Murray, Governor. The French Army was Commanded by the Chevalier de Levi, and amounted to upwards of 12,000 men of which there were Ten Battalions of Regulars, the rest were Canadians and Indians. The British came out in two columns one by St. Johns gate, the other by St. Lewis's gate, the French came along the road from St. Feis, and would have been attacked before they could form, if the difficulties of the snow and ground had not retarded the advancing of our cannon which deprived us of a great advantage. This map has copious References to the first forming of the British Troops, their position during the action, the positions of the French Troops, with their Body of Reserve. References to the Town and Works of the Besiegers. Amongst the references is the following concise account of the Battle:—The action which lasted full three hours was chiefly upon the flanks: there the enemy made all their efforts without making scarce any attempt upon the Center, tho their numbers were sufficient to make a push there likewise: But even upon the flanks we for some time gained considerable advantages. Upon the right our Infantry beat back their Grenadiers from the house and windmill, but they unluckily pursued too far to be sustained, and suffered accordingly; they were beat back in their turn with such a loss as to appear no more in action; upon our left we gained a good deal of ground; the Volunteers and Grenadiers of the 28th drove the enemy out of the two redoubts Y & Z; they kept possession of them for some time, but being at length surrounded, they were obliged to force their way back. The enemy had now overpowered our flanks with such superior numbers as left us no more hopes of success, a retreat began of its own accord in which it must be observed that the Redoubt W, was of great service, and kept the Enemy at bay for about ten minutes which saved our rear as many of our wounded from being cut off from the town; this was one of the works designed to fortify the Heights, it was raised only a few Fasings high on account of the frosts, but there being two pickets left there during the action it deceived the enemy as a compleat work; we brought off only two pieces of artillery, it was impracticable to bring off the rest on account of the snow. X Y Z are Redoubts raised by us at the Siege, 1759, but were not thought of consequence enough to be demolished when the other works were. N.B. The dead, all the wounded men and several of the wounded officers who could not get off the field were as usual, every one scalped for the entertainment of the Conqueror.

The notes are continued to the raising of the siege on May 16-17 at night.

- 831. Plan of Cape Diamond and of the Heights of Abraham, as far as they rise before the City of Quebec, and some distance beyond their summit with a part of the Ramparts of Quebec, Vizt., from Cape Diamond to St. Ursula Bastion. Shewing the sections that have been taken on those grounds where the figures marked like soundings on a seachart shew how many feet any spot rises above or falls below the level of the point A which is the highest on Cape Diamond. N.B. Those places that are higher than the level of A have the sign + prefixed to the figures denominating that rise; thus on the highest point of the heights is marked +8 to show that that hummock is 8 ft. higher than A. These sections were taken partly in 1769, by order of His Excellency Governor Carleton, then Commanding the Northern District and completed in 1778 by a special order from His Excellency General Haldimand, Governor and Commander in Chief, &c., &c., &c. By John Marr, Comdg. Eng. in Canada and Capt. To His Excellency Frederick Haldimand, Governor and Commander in Chief of the Province of Quebec and Frontiers thereof, &c., &c., &c. With some observations relative to this Plan.

Original, coloured MS., bearing the stamps of the Inspector General of Fortifications and Board of Ordnance. 48 x 41. O.

- 832. Plan of the City of Quebec and its Fortifications and of the Ground without-side beyond the Heights of Abraham from an Actual Survey, taken thereof by Capt<sup>n</sup>. Marr, Commandg. Engr. in Canada. Shewing the different levels of the ground above or below the Point A, on Cape Diamond which is the highest on that Cape, like the sounding on a sea chart. N.B. Those places that are higher than the level of A have the sign + prefixed to the figures denominating their rise, thus the highest point of the heights is marked +8 to shew that that hummock is eight feet higher than A. Some observations relative to this Plan. As there are not at present a sufficient number of Barracks in Quebec to contain a proper Garrison it is humbly proposed that two large Block houses be erected of logs before the Gorge of each Bastion. These works would not be expensive and might be so contrived that in case of a proper Citadel being erected they might be taken to pieces without spoiling the timber which might then be applied to other purposes. These would serve not only as quarters for a part of the Garrison in time of Peace but would also contribute greatly to the defence of the place in case of a siege. For in case of a breach made in any of the Bastions and of the enemy mounting to assault that breach, the cross fire from some small pieces of cannon and the Musquetry lodged in these Redouts being unexpected would cause the enemy's fury to relax and give time to those driven from behind the breach to rally and kick the assailants into the ditch. If these redouts before the Gorge of each Bastion were joined by a Pile of Barracks, constructed of logs they would be no desprible entrenchments. The brush on the Heights in front of the town as being a cover for an enemy should be cut down, it was under cover of this brush that the rebels worked their batteries against the town in 1775. The brush from L'Anse des Meres along the face of the Cape Diamond should also be cut down. The nature of the soil before Quebec.—On the outward part of Cape Diamond as well as over the valley between that and the heights, and on the face of the heights as far as the swampy ground to the S. W. and as far as the road from St. Louis gate the earth was scraped off to the face of the rocks to furnish stuff to fill up the Rampart and what parts of the Glacis are formed. On such parts of the Heights as are most proper for erecting Batteries against the works there is hardly one foot deep of soil above the surface of the rocks, which would oblige an enemy to bring earth from a distance for his Batteries and entrenchments. It is humbly thought that a stop should be put to the Quarries digging stones in front of St. John's Bastion and curtain, as these quarries might easily be turned into lodgements for a besieging enemy. 72 x 47.

1331. Plan de la moitié du pont de Neuf Cents pieds de long, que le soussigné propose de faire sur la Rivière Saint-Maurice d'une seule Arche tout en fer battu ou étiré pour Douze Mille Louis, tout le fer de cette pont pèsera Cent Cinquante Touneau, la hauteur du Pont et de trente pieds de Haute; La Figure 1 montre les rayons du milieu avec double rang de Croix St-André pour empêcher le devers du Pont, ils sont placés de trente à trente pieds de distances, dans tout la longueur du Pont, les Arcs vers les extrémités du Pont s'approchent si près des Cordes qu'on ne peut mettre qu'un rang de Croix St-André, tel que la Figure 2, une si grande longueur de Pont Seroit sujet à Serpenter ou fonetter, il est donc nécessaire de lier les trois Arcs par des Croix St-André, et des traverses tel que la figure ey-dessous qui montre que les Arcs sont liés de Cinq à Cinq pieds. Dans la coupe ey-dessus du pont montre les Rayons de dix à dix pieds, mais je me propose de les mettre de Cinq à Cinq pieds pour être plus maître des Arcs, et comme le froid et le chand, Contracte ou étend le fer, ce qui sera d'une grande conséquence dans la longueur de Neuf Cent pieds, je me propose de mettre une des extrémités du pont sur les cylindres de fonte qui roulement sur des prismes quarrel aussi de pont. 2551. Eye Sketch—River Ruscom. a small river about 17 miles from the Detroit river, 10 miles from the Thames—affords shelter for Batteaux, if the bridge were removed from its mouth. It was only navigable about 2 miles when I was up it in August, 1815. Above this it was choked up with weeds. I am informed it is navigable much further in the spring. It has 9 feet of water for about  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a mile, then 5 feet and about a chain wide. There is a settlement over 4 miles up and three farms at its mouth, French Canadians. The Flats at the mouth are rich soil, at present overflowed by the Lake. J. Harris. No. 26. 1815.

Original, accompanied Sir E. Owen's report, 1816.

Scale, 1 mile to six inches. 10½ x 17½.

Coloured MS. copy from Q series.

July, 1796. Alex. Bryce, Lieut., Corps Royal Engineers. Royal Engineers Drawing Room, Quebec, 5th May, 1815. G. Nicoll, Lt. Col. Cg. R. Engineer.

Extract of a letter from Capt. Payne, dated Drummond's Island, 24th Feby., 1816. "With regard to a channel on the eastern side of this Island, I have to inform you that there is a very good one. Capt. Collyer sailed through it in the Surprise Schooner last summer, and it is his opinion which I now state. I also passed through it last September when making the tour of the Island. The Sauk and another Schooner sailed to St. Joseph, through the said channel (commonly called the False Detour), having mistaken it for the Detour. No doubt therefore exists as to the channel, and it is apparently wider than the Detour, also very deep."

"A few islands intervene from the false Detour to St. Joseph's; and though the navigation is practicable, yet it is said to be difficult, in consequence of there being some shoals."

Quebec, 24th June, 1816. G. Nicolls, Lt. Col. Engineers. Engineers Office, Quebec, 1815. J. B. Duberger, Junr. This plan shews both the Detour and False Detour.

BIOGRAPHICAL ESSAY ON THE RENOWNED NAVIGATOR AND CARTOGRAPHER, JUAN DE LA COSA

Translation of the «*Euseyo Biográfico del Célebre Navegante y Consumado Cosmógrafo Juan de la Cosa y Descripción é Historia de su famosa Carta Geográfica por Antonio Vasenzo Obra impresa en español, francés é inglés, para acompañar el Mapa-Mundi de Juan de la Cosa que, como recuerdo del Cuarto Centenario del desenbrimiento de América, han publicado en Madrid los Sres. #### I

It is not through any affected modesty that we call this little compilation a Biographical Essay.

We cannot, indeed, think of any more appropriate title for the series of facts which we have brought together, and will narrate in chronological order, concerning the author of the first Mapa-Mundi that was ever traced. These facts amply suffice to show the exalted merits of the man, and furnish some details of his checkered life, but they do not pretend to constitute a complete biography of Juan de la Cosa.

None of the numerous authors, who have undertaken the investigation of the circumstances connected with the life of this renowned Navigator, has, as yet, been able to clear away the obscurity surrounding this hero of a most heroic age.

The historians of the Indies, López de Gomara, Herrera, and Fernández de Oviedo, refer to his voyages, and important services to his country, and extol his wonderful knowledge in the construction of Navigation Charts. But to Don Martín Fernández de Navarrete belongs the glory of bringing into fuller light this illustrious Cartographer and Navigator, the rival of Columbus himself.

Navarrete published in his Collection of Voyages and Discoveries (Colección de Viajes y Deseubrimientos) a multitude of Original Documents, Diaries, Royal Charters, Letters, and Judicial Instruments, in which Juan de la Cosa appears; now as a sailor and Master and Owner of vessels; then as Pilot and Captain in the expeditions of Columbus and Ojeda; sometimes as Commissary of Queen Isabella; frequently in conferences with his Sovereigns respecting new discoveries; and always as the most expert mariner and unrivaled Pilot of his age. And not content with this mention of Juan de la Cosa in general terms, Navarrete has left us more precise information respecting our hero, in a condensed form in his posthumous work Spanish Maritime Library (Biblioteca Marítima Española); wherein he gives many facts of his own indefatigable research; thus constituting, if not a complete biography, at least the store to which most biographers, such as Sala, Charton, Didot and others, have had recourse, when writing of this great Navigator.

Subsequently some interesting papers have been found in the Archives of Simancas, relating to Juan de la Cosa, and have been published in the Collection of documents for the History of Spain—(Colección de documentos históricos para la Historia de España)—adding somewhat to the Collection of Muñoz's Extracts of Documents from the Archives of the Indies. (Extractas de los papeles del Archivo de Indias).

But all of this together, as D. Enrique Leguina, and don Cesáreo Fernández Duro, very justly remark (the former in his work Biographical Study on Juan de la Cosa (Estudio biográfico de Juan de la Cosa); and the latter in his Spanish Museum of Antiquities (Museo Español de Antigüedades) does not suffice to show in full detail the life of the Pilot and Captain, who, if anything could be wanting to his fame, after being the author of the immortal Chart that bears his name, and on which, for the first time, the American Continent was traced, it would be found in our having to admire him through the dark clouds which envelop his existence, compelling us to look upon him with the fascination of imagination inseparable from all that is veiled in mystery.

Let it not be supposed, however, that we are going to give free scope to phantasy and present to our readers a story of the exploits of a hero of legend and romance. Not so. What we are about to relate of Juan de la Cosa is borne out by numerous documents of whose authenticity there can be no doubt. We write history—not romance.

An illustrious son of Santander has vainly tried to find the baptismal record of Juan de la Cosa. There is nothing strange in the fruitlessness of such an inquiry, taking into account the circumstance that, although the Parochial Archives of Santoña (the reputed birthplace of La Cosa) contain Register books of date prior to 1450—in fact one of said books appertains to the year 1403—it is certain that many volumes were destroyed by fire; and several of those that were saved from the flames are in such a state of decay that they are now illegible. Nevertheless it is universally admitted that the intelligent cosmographer Juan de la Cosa was born in Santa María del Puerto (now Santoña) in the province of Santander, about the year 1450. The reasons assigned for this belief are on the whole admissible, not even well founded. In the first place it is undeniable that there has existed throughout ages, a quarter of the town of Santoña called de la Cosa; and it is natural to suppose that this quarter of the town was so called after the renowned Captain and Navigator, whose fame not only reached the footsteps of the throne of their Most Catholic Majesties, exciting their Royal estimation and moving their Regal munificence to the granting him frequent largess; but excited, at the same time, the admiration of the simple minded mountaineers, in whose eyes, as remarked by Leguina, Juan de la Cosa must have appeared a veritable hero. It is, therefore, not surprising that his great popularity should induce his townsmen to give the name of La Cosa to a quarter of the town that once was his ancestral seat, or probably where stood his simple home. It is, certainly, on record that Juan de la Cosa had his domicile in Santoña in August 1493 (<sup>1</sup>). It is, also, a circumstance not to be overlooked that his contemporaries (See Herrera in his Décadas de Indias). Consider him to be a Biscayan, because in those times the inhabitants of one district were often confounded with those of some neighbouring district—the whole of the inhabitants of the Cantabrian Coast being usually called Basques; from among whom the Spanish Monarchs usually drew their supplies of men for the Naval Service.

That Juan de la Cosa was sprung from no plebeian stock is proved by D. Miguel Ortiz Otañez in his Santoña Laureada (1677), wherein he refers to La Cosa as of gente birth.

The name of La Cosa appears, moreover, repeatedly in the xv Century; sometimes as sponsors in baptisms, at others as bridemen at marriages; and in like manner in the xvi and xvii Centuries the name occurs frequently in the Parochial Books. It is further noteworthy, and affords a remarkable proof of the importance of the family name in Santoña, that Lope García Salazar, the Chronicler of the time, mentions the Cosas as one of the most redoubtable bands whose feuds produced such disasters and desolation in the Santander territories during the xiv and xv Centuries. Nor must we forget to mention what a learned physician, a native of the ancient town of Santona, says, in reference to La Cosa, in his work Brief Narrative of the Triumphs and Renowned Sons of Santona, or Santona (as he spells it) Breve Relación de los lauros, hechos gloriosos & hijos famados de Santona, o Santonio, (1677). He calls Juan de la Cosa the celebrated Pilot who accompanied Columbus, and drew up the first Chart of the Cantabrian Coast: He (La Cosa) drew up the Chart of this dangerous Coast, and thus rendered a most important service to seafaring men and contributed to the saving of the lives of his brethren and preventing immense losses to Commerce.

Finally, as there is not a single writer of the xvii Century who casts any doubt on Juan de la Cosa being a native of Santona, and no proof whatsoever existing to the contrary, we may, surely, admit a fact that has been affirmed by so many authors and questioned by none.

III.

There are divers documents extant proving that Juan de la Cosa belonged to a family of Navigators, and that the greater part of his youth was spent at sea, going on what was then considered long voyages, and that he had made more than one trip to the West Coast of Africa, which was in those times the region of the Discovery Adventures of Spaniards and Portuguese. The Chart he traced of that part of the world, compared with Portuguese charts of the same period, is a proof, in the opinion of many competent writers, that La Cosa must have formed part of some of those old expeditions carried out by the Spaniards towards the end of the xiv Century.

Now, Juan de la Cosa being the owner and Captain of the caravel Santa María, a ship (nao) built in Cantabria expressly for trading with Flanders the most difficult navigation of those times, in which were trained those Great Castilian seamen, as Columbus calls them, a ship, consequently, of very superior sea-going conditions, contrary to what has been vulgarly believed (thanks to the whim of those who wish to magnify the greatness of the achievement of the discovery of America by reducing the caravels to the category of craft without deck, and the seamen who manned them to the level of ablicklegs); and the said nao Santa María, being in the waters of the County of Niebla (probably in the port of Huelva) when the fleet for the Columbus expedition was being organized, Columbus was struck with her, and, at once entered into treaties with her owner and captain, Juan de la Cosa, for employing her in his expedition of discovery, with the condition of being allowed to hoist his Ensign of Admiral on her mast head.

Juan de la Cosa, in whose stout breast there was no room for fear, whatever might be the dangers to be braved, at once accepted and signed the charter proposed; and as Master of the said caravel Santa María, and as Pilot of the fleet, he was ready to form part of the daring enterprise.

Both La Cosa and the crew of his vessel, all of them regular sea wolves--went out under conditions of charter agreed on beforehand. Not so the brothers Pinzón. They joined Columbus as associates in the contract he had stipulated with Ferdinand and Isabella in the Royal Camp at Santa Fé. The Pinzons sailed as partners in the profits, and they contributed towards the expenses of the expedition.

During the first voyage, whose numerous vicissitudes are too well known to require repetition here, it soon became evident that La Cosa's superior knowledge was an eyesore to the Admiral--one of the great defects in the character of Columbus being that he could not suffer any one to shine in his presence. This grudge of Columbus towards La Cosa is proved by the confession of the seaman Juan de Ibarra, who declared that he saw and heard how the Admiral complained against Juan de la Cosa, saying, that after he (the Admiral) had brought him out to those parts of the world and taught him navigation, La Cosa went about saying he knew more than the Admiral himself.

On this Fernández Duro very justly remarks, that Columbus could not pay a greater compliment to himself as master. For, as if the art of navigation were as easily learned as the avocation of a water carrier, who knows the way to the fountain after the first trip, Columbus here admitted that La Cosa was no dull fellow, but a clever pupil who could learn navigation in a single voyage. But the Admiral seemed to forget that when he became acquainted with La Cosa, the latter was then a Captain, navigating his own ship, and that he had bravely and generously placed both his life and property at the disposal of a Chief, who was quite a stranger to him, and who was in no high repute among the great majority of La Cosa's Countrymen.

Nor did the spite of Columbus towards La Cosa end in the above complaint against his pilot. For after the discovery of the island of San Salvador, and prior to the return to Spain, the Admiral or Flag ship Santa María, the property of Juan de la Cosa, was wrecked on a sunken rock off the island Hispaniola—an accident of which Columbus gladly availed himself to dub La Cosa with the title of traitor, coward, and insubordinate.

The injustice of such grave epithets is easily shown.

Navarrete himself, who admits these charges as entered in The Diary of the Admiral, transmitted to us by Padre Las Casas, says: At the moment of the grounding of the caravel the sea was perfectly calm—as calm as a basin of water—and the vessel touched so softly that nobody on board except the man at the helm was conscious of the accident. Is it, then, credible that such an experienced seaman as Juan de la Cosa—that he who did not flinch, in a subsequent expedition, before the terrible hordes of the Indians of New Cartagena, nor betake himself to flight when his Chief Ojeda owed his safety to his swiftness of foot, was likely to have fled from a ship where there was no real peril, and, through cowardice, abandon his own property, his sole fortune, comprised in the memorable nao Santa María? Besides: if La Cosa was guilty of this charge, why was he not accused in the grave and formal indictments presented against Pinzon and others for insubordination to the orders of the Admiral? A simple note in a Diary which was not likely to ever meet the eye of the accused, offers no serious ground of proof of anything beyond the private spite of Columbus against the expert pilot who helped him to discover the New World.

But we have, happily, for our hero an irreversible proof—a proof invested with all legal requisites—to show that in the wreck of the Santa María, there existed neither cowardice, nor negligence, nor culpable ignorance, and, still less, treason, as has been stated by Columbus. This proof is contained in a paragraph of a letter of their Most Catholic Majesties to Juan de la Cosa. Inasmuch as thou didst proceed as Master in one of our ships on the High Seas where, during said voyage, were discovered the lands and Islands of the Indies, and inasmuch as thou didst lose the said ship. We to repay and satisfy thee...etc.

Now what is to be inferred and concluded from this but that Juan le la Cosa, on account of the unfortunate accident of the loss of the nao Santa María, was entitled to indemnity and recompence, instead of punishment or unjustifiable censure?

IV.

On his return to Spain, along with Columbus, on the 15th of March 1493, Juan de la Cosa at once set about preparing for another expedition.

Their Most Catholic Majesties being encouraged by the unexpected success of the first expedition, and the curiosity of the people being excited by the specimens of the strange products of such distant lands that Columbus had brought home; and the desire of gain being added to the love of adventure, the preparations were made with enthusiasm and promptitude.

But some delay in starting on this new expedition occurred on account of the question that had sprung up between the Courts of Spain and Portugal, which at last was settled by the famous Bull of Pope Alexander VI; and on Wednesday, the 25th of September 1493, the second fleet destined to cross the Atlantic Ocean sailed from Cadiz, composed of three large Naos and fourteen caravels, manned by fifteen hundred men.

Juan de la Cosa went in the Niña (otherwise called Santa Clara) as Captain, and with the additional title of Master Chart Maker.

From the manner in which Columbus insisted on Juan de la Cosa forming part of this second expedition to the New World, and the good will with which La Cosa agreed to reembark with Columbus notwithstanding their past want of cordiality, some writers are inclined to think—although it is very doubtful—that these two great Navigators, in spite of their apparent differences, professed towards each other unbounded admiration and sincere affection.

In this second voyage were discovered the islands of Santo Domingo, Monserrate, Santa María la Rotunda, Santa María la Antigua, and Santa Ursula, before they arrived at Hispaniola.

Here, to their great grief, they found the Colony they had left completely destroyed, with evident signs that the Spanish garrison had perished at the hands of the Indians.

The mistake of Columbus in believing that Cuba was a Mainland, or Continent, existed equally in the mind of La Cosa, who, in the Declaration drawn up on board of the Niña, dated the 12th of June, 1494, and signed by all the educated part of the crew, affirmed and witnessed: that he had never heard of nor seen an island hiring an extent of 335 leagues of coast from East to West, without having got yet to the end of it; and that he now perceived that the Mainland turned towards the S. SW. and SSW; that he had no doubts about its being a Mainland, but, on the contrary, believed and would maintain that it was a Mainland and not an island; and that before one had gone many leagues, sailing along the said Coast he would find land inhabited by civilized people instructed, and with a knowledge of the ways of the world, etc. . . . .

Notwithstanding their holding the same opinion on a point so important, the expedition to Jamaica and adjacent islands contributed to widen more and more the breach between the Admiral and La Cosa; and keeping aloof from each other as much as circumstances permitted, they both returned to the Peninsula, where they arrived on the 11th of July 1496.

Juan de la Cosa, after this, as some authors assert, resumed his former sea life on the Coast of Biscay and Guipuzcoa; while others say he went into business with the money he had received, in 1494, from the Castilian Monarchs, as an indemnity for the loss of the Santa María.

As a mere matter of curiosity, we copy here an entry, referring to Juan de la Cosa, in the Accounts of the Royal Treasury, kept by Alonso de Morales, as La Cosa's Salary for the second expedition; which document exists in the Archives of Simaneas. Juan de la Cosa, seaman; To his credit 1,000 maravedis each month, on board of the ship "Colina," in which he has served from the 20th August 1493 to the 11th June, 1496, when he returned from the Indies to Cadiz, 33,766 maravedis. He has received 15,000 maravedis; remaining to his credit 18,766 maravedis.

V.

Captain Alonso Ojeda having obtained a Royal Charter in 1499, to proceed to the New World and discover lands for his own account and risk, he at once sought the co-operation of Juan de la Cosa, who came to Puerto de Santa María, where the expedition was being fitted out.

Nicolas Pérez, who was Captain of the King's own ship—1513—describes La Cosa at that time as follows: A great seaman in the opinion of all, and in his own, not inferior to the Admiral himself, whose companion and pupil he was in the voyages to Cuba and Jamaica.

The new fleet was composed of four ships commanded by Ojeda in person, La Cosa acting as chief pilot.

They set sail from Puerto de Santa María, and, after 27 days navigation, sighted the land of Paria, where they did not disembark. They visited the island of La Margarita, and had several encounters with the wild caribbean savages.

Herrera, in his General History of the Exploits of the Castillians in the Islands and Mainlands of the Atlantic Seas («Historia general de los Hechos de los Castellanos en las Islas y Tierras-Firme del Mar Océano»), maintains in this voyage (1499) the true Continent of America was discovered. Herrera vindicates strongly the right of Juan de la Cosa to the title of Discoverer of America, in preference to Amerius Vespuccius, who, although a Pilot in this expedition, held only the rank of Cosmographer.

Here are Herrera's own words: And all that was discovered in this voyage, to Alonso Hojeda, a native of Cuenca, as Captain, and Juan de la Cosa, as Pilot, belongeth the glory.

What, however, admits of no question is the fact, that this expedition to the Indies, the third in which La Cosa took part, was of the greatest advantage to his Country. For he not only navigated and explored many leagues of new Coast on the American Mainland, but settled, with great prudence and tact, a very serious quarrel that arose between Ojeda and Roldan, the Mayor of Hispaniola.

The expedition of Ojeda arrived at this island on the 5th of September; and a dispute as to whether or not Ojeda had cut down some Brazil-wood trees, and was trying to seduce over to his party some Spaniards, who were discontented with Roldan's Administration, gave rise to great animosity between the parties, and led to armed encounters, in which several persons were killed; and it was difficult to foresee what would have been the consequences, had it not been, as Herrera remarks, for the great ability and prudence of Juan de la Cosa, who succeeded in bringing about what neither the artifice nor negotiations of Hojeda could obtain from the stubborn Roldan; who acceded, through the persuasion of Juan de la Cosa, to all the proposals which had been, hitherto, made to him in vain.

The good offices of Juan de la Cosa being crowned by the restitution to Ojeda of a ship which Roldan had seized, both Ojeda and Juan de la Cosa abandoned the island Hispaniola and returned to Spain in 1500—an ever memorable date in Geographical Science—for in that year Juan de la Cosa finished the Marine Chart («Carta de Marear») which bears and immortalises his name.

VI.

Bordering on the picturesque is the description given by Herrera (in his Decade I, Book 4<sup>o</sup>, Chap. 11), of the preparations that were being made for the fourth voyage of Juan de la Cosa. As it was the daily gossip, says he, how, from the New-Continent, in exchange for little bells and mere trifles of scarcely any value, were brought home Gold and Pearls; and as Spain was then scarce of money, great interest was felt in these reports. The desire of enriching themselves increased in the breasts of men, extinguishing therein the fear of navigating deep and, hitherto, unknown seas. This was, in a special manner, the feeling among the men of the quarter of Triana, in Seville, who were mostly mariners.

A certain Rodrigo de Bastidas, an honorable and intelligent man (and who must also have been the possessor of some means) resident in Triana, undertook to fit out two ships for a voyage of discovery and purchase of Gold and Pearls. He entered into arrangements with several persons, and particularly with Juan de la Cosa, who was the best Pilot in existence for those seas, and who had been trained by the Admiral.

Having obtained, as we read in Leguina, the Royal Charter, and all their equipments being finished, they set sail for the New Continent at the beginning of the year 1501.

They touched at many Ports, exchanging the trifles they had brought from Spain for precious metals and objects of much value; and entering the Gulf of Venezuela, and following the coast Westwards, they arrived at the Port called "Retreat," where also was the Port and city bearing the Name of God; and all the new land they discovered exceeded 100 leagues; and they gave the name of Cartagena to all the islands that be there.

In the Gulf of Jaragua they lost their ships, through which misfortune they were compelled to go by land to Santo Domingo; and there the Governor, Francisco de Bobadilla, under the pretext that they had bartered for Gold with the Indians, had them arrested and shipped at once for Spain.

In the Records and Papers of the Trading Department at Seville, (Apuntes y Papeles de la Casa de Contratacion), preserved in the Archives of the Indies, mention is made of the grave peril in which Juan de la Cosa found himself on his passage home. For a great tempest arose and most of the fleet was wrecked in which Rodrigo de Bastidas was returning: but La Cosa escaped in a ship, the worst of the six or eight that were saved; and the name of this ship was "Aguja," on board of which was the wealth of the Admiral, four thousand dollars, which was the first that reached Spain and seemed Providential... Presently he arrived at Court and paid to the Monarchs their fifth in the Gold and Pearls he had brought home; and everybody rejoiced on hearing that these things were being brought from the New Continent.

VII.

The fame of Juan de la Cosa had grown immensely; and from the Monarchs down to ship owners and Officials of the Trading Department at Seville, every body sought his co-operation, looking upon him not only as the best, but the only good pilot of the newly discovered Seas.

He was, however, unable to accept any of the many proposals made to him; for, on the 5th of July 1503, a Messenger arrived at Court with the news that four Portuguese ships had reached the lands discovered in the late expedition of Bastidas, and that they had brought home Indian slaves and Products of divers kinds.

La Cosa was at once selected by the Spanish Monarchs (at the beginning of August) to proceed to Lisbon, and, with all possible precaution, to get at the exact truth with regard to this report. La Cosa displayed such zeal in his mission that the Portuguese, who were not pleased with this prying into their affairs, held him for some days a prisoner. But he got back in September, and presented himself to the Monarchs at Segovia, where the Court was then residing. He was paid 6,750 maravedis for his expenses in this mission.

La Cosa informed Queen Isabella that the expedition of the Portuguese was a fact, a: I that they had sent out a fresh expedition within the present year.

La Cosa availed himself of this audience with the Queen to present Her Majesty with two new Hydrographic Charts of the Indies, with improvements, no doubt, on his Mapa-Mundi Chart of 1500 (which we are now reproducing) already presented to the Queen, and with the addition of the lands since then discovered, and many particulars collected by him during the past three years, so valuable to Geography.

It was, at this juncture (1504) considered most urgently important to cut out the Portuguese explorations; and, to this end, on the 14th of February, Contract and stipulations were entered into with Juan de la Cosa, to proceed to further Discoveries in the Mainland and Islands of Pearls, and in the Gulf of Urabá, and other places that he had not been as yet visited by Columbus, or the Portuguese.

In relating the conditions of this Contract, the original document, in its quaint old phraseology, says: We make thee, Juan de la Cosa, our Captain of the said ships and of the men going therein.

The Monarchs to show their esteem for La Cosa, and their high appreciation of his services, granted him a pension for life of 50,000 maravedis.

The project being arranged and agreements being entered into with his associates, they started, says Oviedo in his History of the Indies, in four ships for the coast of the Mainland, Juan de la Cosa as Captain General, and Julian de Ledesma as Captain of one of the ships.

The expedition, after touching at the Canary Islands, and completing their supplies of water and fuel, continued the voyage, leaving the islands of Guadalupe and San Juan to the leeward, on the North, and landed on the island of La Margarita.

There they remained one day; and, on the following day, they reached the Gulf of Cumma, where they explored some islands, and came to anchor in the Port of Cartagena, where they found Captain Cristobal Garcia, or Guerra, as he is most frequently called by Oviedo.

Leguina relates how several quarrels and disputes took place there, until Juan de la Cosa brought away his fleet to Isla Fuerte, which he took possession of by force of arms; and then made an incursion up the great river Darien, taking on board some Indians and quantities of manufactured Gold.

At this time a long boat arrived at the fleet, saying it belonged to the party of Cristobal Garcia, that remained behind in the port of Cartagena, to whom they said they had delivered over the Brazil wood and slaves to be conveyed to Spain, and they related, how, after the departure of Juan de la Cosa from Cartagena, the Flag-ship of Cristobal Guerra had been lost, and many of the crew drowned, the ship having struck on a sunken reef not far distant; that they had hastened to find Juan de la Cosa, in another of the ships to which this long boat belonged, but that the ship was so leaky that they were unable to keep her afloat; and that getting into the Gulf of Urabá, they had to throw cargo overboard and run her aground, where she remained stranded; that the Captain who commanded her, a native of Triana, called Monroy, with the others on board, begged La Cosa to come to their aid, and pick them up; for which purpose the said long-boat had made the tour of nearly all the Gulf of Urabá in search of La Cosa's fleet.

Juan de la Cosa was not, says Leguina, a man who hesitated in hastening to the aid of his countrymen in distress. He set out at once to the relief of Guerra's men, who, under Monroy, waited impatiently his succour, not minding the unfitness of his own ships, which, although the distance was not great, became so leaky that he had to run them aground, and was only able to save from their wreck the armaments, boats, sails and ropes, and had to lodge under cover of tents some 200 men of his expedition, «of whom, Oviedo laconically remarks, «few indeed ever returned to their native land.»

Here they remained several months, until reduced to almost half their number. But although broken down and weakened through privations and sickness, they managed to get ready two brigs and a skiff, in which they abandoned the aforesaid Gulf, always under the command of Juan de la Cosa, who supported all these hard trials better than the rest. They landed in Zamba so short of provisions, that, mad with hunger, some of them did not hesitate to murder an Indian, and «roasted part of the body which they devoured, and cooked the other part in a large pot to feed on this flesh in the longboat which the men who did this deed occupied.»

This horrid act having been reported to Juan de la Cosa, his great and noble breast swelled with indignation, and those sentiments of humanity mixed with courage, which had so often distinguished his character, roused his anger to the highest pitch; and notwithstanding the critical circumstances in which he was placed, when both authority and prestige are so little regarded, among men driven to desperation through long privations and full of brutal instincts, he nevertheless reprimanded his men most severely, and cast to the ground the pot wherein the human flesh was being cooked.

It was then decided to abandon, forthwith, a place that had so few attractions for adventurers so covetous of wealth; and, after several attempts, they succeeded in landing in a territory entirely unknown to them. Then Juan de la Cosa and Ledesma, at the head of 30 men, picked out as the bravest from among the 50 hands to which the expedition was now reduced, advanced into the interior and visited several villages, where they found a supply of provisions, and discovered that this coast on which they had such difficulty in landing, was that of Jamaica.

As soon as La Cosa had ascertained this, he sent off the brig, which was the only craft they had now left, to the island Hispaniola, shipping the most of his little band and all the sick, while he himself remained behind with a few companions to await the return of the brig to convey him to La Hispaniola—the long desired spot where they might rest, after such a long series of hardships.

But the few brave men, who remained behind with La Cosa, rejoicing in the hope of soon finding rest from the trials, little dreamt of the new storm that was gathering around them.

The Indians, emboldened by the small number of the Spaniards, and the reduced armament remaining on the island, resolved on murdering the strangers. With this foul design they offered to guide the Spaniards in their march, and carry their baggage into the interior, encouraging them with promises of finding there abundance of provisions.

The unsuspecting Spaniards, to whom treason was ever an unfelt sentiment, accepted these overtures. But they soon perceived they were the victims of an insidious snare.

The extraordinary number of Indians that kept gathering round them, in hopes of making an easy prey of these few white men; their daring shouts of war—so unusual in these Indians, who were habitually so timid and irresolute—and the roughness of the ground, so well fitted for an ambush, into which they seemed to be conducting their dupes, were evident signs to the Spaniards of the evil intentions of their guides, and of the fate they might expect. When the Spaniards became convinced of the treason of the Indians, they held council as to the best means of defending themselves in the danger to which they were hourly approaching. Several opinions were expressed, when Juan de la Cosa, turning to Captain Ledesma, asked him what was his council? Now, Ledesma was a brave Knight, and spoke as follows: « My Master, what we must do, if we are to save our lives, is to arrest these four Chiefs and tie them up; and of this other rabble let us kill as many of them as we can, Chiefs and tie them up; and of this other rabble let us kill as many of them as we can, peril; for their number is already great, and it will increase every hour; and more will still be arriving. »

This opinion of Ledesma was unanimously accepted, and his advice was at once carried into effect. The Chiefs were briskly made prisoners; and this produced such a panic among the Indians that they instantly dispersed. In this way the imminent danger, which threatened the Spaniards, was at an end; and they began to retrace towards the Coast, not without the loss of some of their number; for the Indians dogged them on their march, and killed any Spaniard who lagged behind.

At last they happily arrived at the Coast, where they found the brig that had been coasting about in search of them; and all of them were taken on board. Juan de la Cosa, with his usual good policy and habitual generosity, setting the Indian Chiefs at liberty—and were borne to the long desired isle of Hispaniola.

Juan de la Cosa, without giving himself much rest, returned to Spain to wait.

Out of the proceeds of this expedition, Juan de la Cosa paid to the Treasure, Matienzo 491,708 Maravedis, being the amount of the fifth appertaining to the Crown.

It was during this expedition, in which the notorious adventurer Cimora took part, that the Indians began to show their open opposition to the incursions of the Spaniards; and through the incorrigible character of their race, gave cause for its being said of them in after years: «that the Indians are born in dishonor; live devoid of shame; feed without cleanliness; and die without fear of a hereafter.»

VIII.

For some time after this we find Juan de la Cosa engaged on Official Commissions.

First of all, in 1507, he was in command of two caravels to look out for and convoy the ships returning from the Indies that were being chased by the Biscayan Pirate, Juan de Granada, and the Portuguese.

From this new post held by Juan de la Cosa, we see the confidence reposed in his knowledge and ability in the art of Navigation, as well as the opinion held of his bravery, and loyalty to his country, of which he had given so many proofs.

In this same year, 1507, King Ferdinand, desirous to revive that restless spirit of adventure, which had always led to undertakings, no matter how full of peril, for carrying out new Discoveries (and which spirit of adventure, as Navarrete remarks, as well as zeal for all public affairs, had fallen into a state of paralyzation during the years immediately following the death of the illustrious Queen Isabella)—summoned to his Court, then residing at Burgos, Juan Diaz Solis, Vicente Yáñez Pinzón, Juan de la Cosa and Amerigo Vespucci. These Navigators being assembled in presence of the King, it was agreed by all that explorations ought to be continued along the Coast of the Mainland (Tierra Firme) towards the South; and the territory already discovered, from Paria Westwards, colonized. To this end—and because of the increasing rivalry between Spain and Portugal four caravels were rapidly fitted out. The procuring of the necessary stores was assigned to Amerigo Vespucci, as he was known to be well experienced in such work.

Pinzón and Diaz Solis sailed that same year, 1507, from Seville with two of the ships; and Juan de la Cosa, later on, set out, also, for the Indies in command of the other two vessels, which were called Huelga and Pinta, whose respective Pilots were Martin de los Reyes and Juan Correa.

Juan de la Cosa, before his departure on this voyage, left traced out the Royal Plan, or General Marine Chart, which under the direction of the Trading Department of Seville, was being carefully got up in view of every new particular being noted and brought home by the Exploring Expeditions.

In this, his sixth voyage, Juan de la Cosa gained much Royal favor, and largess to the amount of 100,000 maravedis, as part of the expenses; and also other substantial proofs of the Royal estimation. A Royal Decree, dated the 17th June, confirmed him in the post of Chief Constable of Urabá, which appointment he already held since the 3rd of April 1503.

Moreover, when he had returned, in 1508, the proceeds of his expedition amounted to 297,708 maravedis. For the Spanish Monarchs, not content with the favors granted by them for notable exploits and extraordinary progress in the Exploring Expeditions, encouraged the adventurers, by conferring on them, in advance, special distinctions. So that when Juan de la Cosa was fitting out his expedition, in 1507, a License was granted him by Royal Decree, dated the 15th June, 1507, to possess two slaves in his voyage to La Hispaniola; and in a fresh Decree, dated the 17th of said month and year, Diego Columbus was ordered to place at the disposal of La Cosa an Indian Chief (cacique) with his Indians, because La Cosa was then accompanied by his wife<sup>4</sup>; and intended to establish himself, for good, in that Colony, as supposed by some; or merely to be nearer to the lands to be yet discovered, without requiring to cross the Atlantic so frequently to get to his home, as believed by others.

IX.

Juan de la Cosa left the coasts of Spain for the seventh time in 1509—little thinking he was never again to see his native land!

He steered for La Hispaniola, taking out with him, in accordance with the Agreement drawn up to colonize the Mainland, 200 picked men, in one ship (Nao) and two brigs.

In Santo Domingo he entered into arrangements with Ojeda, and the expedition was increased by another ship and 100 more men. He and Ojeda set sail from the said island on the 10th of November. In this expedition was present the afterwards celebrated Pizarro.

Juan de la Cosa had here a new opportunity for displaying his greatness of character for persuasion and firmness continued, for he had to make peace between Ojeda and Niemesu, who had a question pending respecting the limits of each of their States and jurisdiction.

They agreed to refer the matter to La Cosa, who, at once settled their dispute; his decision being that the limit of their respective Governments should be the Great River Durien; the one to possess the East and the other the West side thereof.

Juan de la Cosa went out in this expedition as Lieutenant, by express will of the King, who ordered this to be so inserted in the Agreement drawn up; and commanded that in all parts where Ojeda should not be present, Juan de la Cosa was to be held as Lieutenant of the King. "And," says Oviedo, "the great enemy of Juan de la Cosa—a the king being mindful of Juan de la Cosa, ordered Ojeda for express command to take La Cosa with him in that quality: he (the king) was pleased with what La Cosa had already performed on those Coasts, and because he was an able Navigator, and was acquainted with those lands,"

Sad, indeed, were the consequences of the decision of Ojeda in leaving La Hispaniola, in 1510, in order to accompany Juan de la Cosa to colonize the Mainland, for which La Cosa held the Royal Privilege. They landed in Cartagena, the seat of Ojeda's government. But the natives of that place were no longer those simple beings, whose minds had been so strongly impressed by the clash of arms, the glitter of accoutrements, and military tactics of the Spaniards, that they had looked upon their white visitors as supernatural creatures, to whose will they had offered submissive obedience. But having got accustomed to the society of their invaders, and become more acquainted with their weaknesses, their insatiable covetousness, their continual cruelty and hardness of heart, the Indians, on several occasions rose against their conquerors, regardless of the sure punishment that awaited them. We must, specially premise that the Indians, where Ojeda decided to disembark, were highly exasperated by reason of the conduct of some of the Spaniards towards them—particularly Cristobal Guerra and his party—a few years ago. La Cosa, who knew this well, and was also aware of these Indians using poisoned arrows, advised Ojeda to colonize the Gulf of Urabá, where La Cosa was from the beginning, on the most friendly terms with the natives, and had accustomed them to a fair and just exchange of articles of barter mutually satisfactory to Spaniards and natives. Ojeda turned a deaf ear to this wise counsel; and they had scarcely landed when he ordered the Spaniards to advance into the interior with fire and sword, causing terrible destruction among the natives. The Spaniards got separated from each other through their eagerness to kill the savages with booty more freely, and were soon forced to retreat, fighting their way back to the Coast. But although the Spaniards displayed their usual valor (those who fell selling their lives very dear) they were overpowered by numbers, and not one of them escaped, with the exception of Ojeda and Diego de Ondax, who owed their safety to their swiftness of foot, and under cover of a woody part of the country.

Juan de la Cosa, full of rage and vexation, succeeded, through loud appeals to the honor of his countrymen, in rallying eight of the fugitives to his side; and with these, making a last effort of incredible valor, he made a stand, and caused tremendous slaughter among the advancing masses of savages. But the Indians kept pressing on, in ever increasing numbers, and amidst horrid yells of vengeance. For every Indian that fell by a bullet from the fire arms of the Spaniards, or the thrust of a Castilian blade, ten savages emerged from the thickets, with their bows and arrows ready for a discharge against the handful of white men.

Finally, they completely surrounded La Cosa and his heroic companions; and, one by one, in hand to hand struggle, they succumbed. The last who fell was Juan de la Cosa.

His person was a single mass of wounds, and covered with blood, with over twenty poisoned arrows piercing his body.

This catastrophe took place on the 28th February 1510, in the land which now is Venezuela.

The sad event is described by Fray Pedro Simor as follows:

«Juan de la Cosa made Dirgo de Ordaz hasten to acquaint Hojeda of the critical position he was in; and having succeeded, by the authority of his voice and remonstrances, in rallying eight of his companions, he threw himself, sword in hand, against the ranks of naked savages, causing among them a dreadful slaughter. But immense multitudes of barbarians pressing on La Cosa, and his companions on every side, they fell back for shelter from the Indian's darts, on a hut, which they unroofed, and from this little fort they defended themselves with the most obstinate valor. La Cosa saw his comrades fall, one after another, by his side, while he himself, pierced by more than twenty poisoned arrows, and about to expire, withdrew when the affray was about over, and died at the moment he was found by his countrymen, who came to the rescue.»

Padre Las Casas relates the tale of La Cosa's death in almost the same words,

«Juan de la Cosa says he cloak shelter in a hut, which he found unroofed, or he himself and his countrymen unroofed it as they best could, and forming a barricade with the timber, they defended themselves, until La Cosa saw, with sorrowful eyes, his companions dead at his side; while he felt burning within him the fire of the many poisoned darts, which transpierced his body; when he became faint, and seeing one of his men still alive, who had fought manfully without succumbing before the Indians, he thus addressed him: "Since God hath still spared thy life, my brother, hasten and save thyself, and tell Hojeda how thou hast left me in this extremity."»

López Gomara affirms «that the body of La Cosa was devoured by the Indians.» But this version is contradicted by grave authors, and among them Hevera, who relates, that when some of the companions of La Cosa, under the command of Ojeda, came to his aid, reinforced by Nienesa's men, «they found the body of Juan de la Cosa close to a tree like a hedgehog, on account of the many darts therein, and must have been swollen and disfigured by the poisonous herbs, and with many ugly wounds; and at this sight the Spaniards were so horror-struck that not a man of them would dare to remain there that night.»

Navarrete gives a similar account of this lamentable day. «On the arrival of Nienesa at Cartagena, the bouls of Hojeda's party put off to meet him, and informed him of the great calamity that had befallen them. Nienesa sent for Hojeda, and when they met he fell on Hojeda's neck, and received him with great love and generosity, offering to go along with him to look for La Cosa, and help him to avenge those who had fallen in battle. Then both mounted on war steeds, and with four hundred men, in two divisions, they commenced their march; and, during night, fell on the village of Turbaca by surprise.»

And the Indians, who believed they had made an end of the Spaniards, seeing them, now again, putting the savages to pieces, and burning them up in their huts, whenever they took refuge therein, were frightened beyond measure, especially at the sight of the war horses, which they had never seen before.

It is said that the booty they made for Nienesa and his party took seventy Spaniards to carry it away.

They found the body of Juan de la Cosa tied to a tree, like a hedgehog on account of the many darts therein, swollen and dreadfully disfigured by the effect of the poisonous herbs.

X

Thus ended the life of the brave Captain and illustrious Navigator.

His death is one of the most glorious that a soldier could desire. His name, in the Annals of the history of the Discovery and Conquest of the Indies, must always shine with inextinguishable splendour.

His loss was keenly felt by the Crown of Castille; for the King saw himself, with much regret, deprived of the counsels of an illustrious Cosmographer, who at that epoch enjoyed the highest reputation, not only in Spain, but in Portugal and elsewhere; and also of the valued services of a Captain, who never hesitated a moment in offering his life as a holocaust for his country.

And hence we find that, in 1511, when the King granted sundry recompenses to the Discoverers, orders were given that the Indians (slaves) of Niene and La Cosa should remain to them; and by a Royal Decree, dated the 2d of April of the same year, the Trading Department of Seville was ordered to pay to the widow of La Cosa 15,000 Maravedis, as a bridal gift to his eldest daughter, who was about to be married. This sum appears in the Official Accounts, as also the salaries owing to Captain La Cosa, who, as shown by authentic documents, enjoyed an annual pension of 40,500 Maravedis.

The news of the death of Juan de La Cosa was received in Spain with great sorrow. Solemn funeral rites were performed; and history has transmitted to us part of the panegyries pronounced.

In addition to this we have many high opinions of him extant.

Colombus himself, who notwithstanding his resentment towards La Cosa, could not help calling him a «clever man», and a Master in the art of Navigation, says that he «took with him, in his first and second voyages, Masters in Marine Chart making, and most able Pilots, of much renown, whom he chose out of the great mariners of Castille.»

Padre Las Casas calls him «the great Pilot.»

Herrera says he was «the best Pilot that existed for those Seas; a man of great courage and merit.»

Lopez de Gemara calls him «an expert mariner.»

Fernandez de Oviedo says «he was an experienced seaman, and a man of great personal courage.»

Washington Irving states that «La Cosa was a mariner of much fame, and a pupil of the Admirals.»

Kohl terms him «the famous Pilot and designer of Charts.»

And, finally, we have his Great Sovereign's opinion of him, in the Royal Charter, dated in Alcalá the 5th of July, 1503, which contained the stipulations for the expedition of Bastidas; wherein Queen Isabella says: «I would feel more highly pleased should the said Juan de la Cosa go out in this voyage; for I believe he knows better how to conduct it than any one else.»

On another occasion he suggests to Cristóbal Guerra: «As to what concerns Navigation, I would have you to be guided by Juan de la Cosa, whom I know to be a man able to give advice.»

Posterity confirms this Royal opinion; and will ever look upon Juan de la Cosa as one of the brightest Stars in the Galaxy of Spanish Discoverers.

HISTORICAL DESCRIPTION OF THE CELEBRATED CHART OF JUAN DE LA COSA.

I.

The first Mapa-Mundi extant is, undoubtedly, the very interesting one, which we owe to the practical science and skill of the consummate Cosmographer Juan de la Cosa preserved, nay, almost venerated in the Naval Museum of Madrid.

This invaluable original document is drawn on parchment, comprising two sheets, connected at the smaller ends, and would form a rectangular surface of 1<sup>m</sup>. 83 in length by one, 46 in height, were it not for the rounding at the top, with the object, doubtless, of giving a more pleasing appearance to the ensemble, and of suppressing the space destined to be filled up with the yet unknown regions of the newly discovered American Continent.

Of this rectangular figure the tropical «Cancer» is made to serve as the larger axis—the higher extremity being the Western Cardinal point, in which, in contact with the arch of the circle that forms the border of the document, there is another small rectangle, in the fashion of a picture within a frame, which contains a likeness of Saint Christopher in the act of crossing the river, holding a huge pine staff and carrying the Child Jesus on his shoulders—an evident allusion to Christopher Columbus. It is supposed by many that the face of the Saint is a true portrait of the Admiral; and, in truth, the arguments are as strong in favor of this belief as against it.

At the foot of the little square, containing this effigy, there is an inscription that runs as follows: «Juan de la Cosa la fizó en el puerto de S. M. en el año de 1500.» (Drawn by Juan de La Cosa in Port Saint Mary in the year 1500.)

A little lower down, on the axis line, there is a large Rosette, or Mariner's Compass, of sixteen points or directions, and also an image of Our Lady, but not drawn by the same hand as that which designed the Saint Christopher picture. This is easily discernible not only from the greater perfection in the drawing, but from the fact that the picture of Our Lady is a cutting from a paper engraving, pasted on the parchment, and illuminated with colours to match the rest of the work.

The artist must have proceeded in the same fashion with regard to the Royal Arms Escutcheon, which must have fallen off, or been taken, purposely, from the Map, the little square space it occupied only remaining.

Although the drawing in the pictures is not very fine, yet the Chart, in minute details, is the work of patient labour; and the rich illumination in gold and colours is of the superior class of work of those times, and, compared with our modern engravings, is what miniature Bibles are to printed ones.

But where the extreme care of the cartographer is evinced, is in the beauty and distinctness of the inscriptions, written in ink of diverse colours, especially the principal names of the parts of the world, Africa, Europe, Asia, and, in the centre, Mare Oceanum, which is fancifully and elegantly traced.

In all the spaces of Inland, where there is no danger of confusing the directions or sailing courses, useful for the guidance of the Navigator, the painter of the Map gave scope to more capricious colouring, locating in the cities of importance and in the Ports of greater conourse, figures of churches, castles, walls, and fanciful buildings. In each kingdom he draws effigies of the reigning sovereigns, adorned with the insignia of their office, and some of them seated on thrones. In Babylon he places the renowned Tower; on the coasts of the Red Sea, the Queen of Sheba, brandishing a sword; and the three Wise Men, or Magi, mounted on their steeds, crossing Asia towards Syria, guided by the star; and, what is particularly worthy of attention (on the Eastern extremity within the corner of the Great Genghis Kan) are the two figures, the one of a man without a head, with his eyes in his chest, and his mouth in his stomach; and the other with the snout of a dog. The inscriptions attached to these figures "R. Got," "R. Magot," may be taken to refer to "Gog, Magog," of the Bible; and may, at the same time represent those monsters which Columbus, in his first voyage understood to exist in Cuba, and which, in his imagination, he confounded with the hinds of Cipango and Cathay, described by Marco Polo in the account of his adventures.

La Cosa sketched, also, on his Map the ships and caravels of his day, according to their respective nationality; and, following the custom of the times, he uses flags to distinguish the limits and possessions of Ports and Islands.

«This circumstance alone would be sufficient,» says Fernández Duro, from whom we take this information, «to render La Cosa's Map of immense value, as no doubts can exist as to the authenticity of every particular indicated thereon; and History, Archaeology, and Ethnography shall receive a boon the day that this Map becomes faithfully reproduced, on its natural scale, and can be studied with greater attention and leisure than has hitherto been possible.

This opportunity is now afforded by the grand publication of this Map which señor Canovas Vallejo and professor Truynor of Madrid are now giving to the world.

To render the decoration more complete, and to assist in calculating the sailing course, lines are drawn from the Rosette, or Mariner's Compass, in various colours which, in their pristine state, must have been pleasing to the eye.

II.

The Chart is not drawn to scale, nor in strict conformity with modern Maps as to figure; so that it is somewhat difficult to verify in detail and determine minutely some of the places, owing, not so much, to the facilities of analytic comparison with modern documents, as on account of the ravages of time, which have somewhat altered the configuration of the Map and the names of the places, although it is not, in general, in bad state of conservation. It comprises, entire, Europe and Africa; a large portion of Asia, and is drawn with wonderful perfection, considering the times. Nothing seems to have escaped the attention of the cartographer in his sketch of what must be justly considered a « Mapa Mundio» or a true representation of the world as explored by Europeans at the end of the XV Century.

But what gives special importance to this Map, what raises this piece of parchment to the category of an Historical Monument, is its presenting to us the West Indies at the moment of their discovery; showing the first lands explored; and depicting the Islands of the Antilles and the American Continent, from the River Amazon to the Isthmus of Panama, with a relative truthfulness that speaks highly in favour of the skill of the Spanish Navigators at the time of laying this foundation stone in the history of their wonderful Maritime Expeditions.

The Map preserves the primitive names of the places, among which may be pointed out, as curiosities, some of the principal ones, such as: «la Aneagua» (Submerged Coast), and «Mare Dulce» (Fresh Water Sea), which took their sight at the Delta of the River Orinoco; «Costa de las Perlas» (Coast of Pearls), and «Isla de Margalida» (Pearl Island), given to the place where the Spaniards bartered for this favorite ornament of the fair sex; «Isla del Brasil» (Isle of Brazil) where they obtained specimens of the dye woods then called by that name; «Bocas del Dragon» (Dragon's mouth) at Trinidad, where the Current's dreadful roar was heard; «Venezuela» (Little Venice) in the Gulf of Maranibo, where they saw what appeared to them towns built upon the waters. Other places were named according to the impressions produced on the senses of the discoverers; such as, «Isla de Gigantes» (Isle of Giants); «Cabo de Spera» (Cape of Waiting); «Isla de Posesion» (Isle of Possession); «Rio de Vacia-bariles» (River of Emptying barrels); «Cabo Flechado» (Arrow pointed Cape); «Rio de la Holganza» (River of Laziness); etc. etc.

It is rather surprising that La Cosa should be acquainted with the voyages made by Sebastian Cabot, in 1497, with sufficient details to sketch the Coast which he calls «Mar descubierto por ingleses» (Sea discovered by the English), that is Nova Scotia and Labrador; with other names that have not been preserved, such as «Cabo de Inglaterra» (Cape England); «Lisarte» (Lizard); «San Jorge» (Saint George); «Santa Lucia» (Saint Lucy), . . . And, what is still more surprising, La Cosa makes Cuba appear on his Map as an island. Columbus himself never was aware of Cuba being an island; nor was this satisfactorily ascertained until Nicolas de Ovando, Knight, was sent out by order of king Ferdinand with special instructions for Sebastian de Ocampo to sail round it, which he did in 1508. Herrera, quoting the original document, which existed in the Council of the Indies, relates this fact in his Deeada I, book 7.<sup>o</sup>, Chap. I. Yet it is evident that La Cosa knew that Cuba was an island eight years earlier.

Taking into consideration the rude instruments of Navigation of those times, and the scant store of material for such work then carried on board, it would be too much to expect that the geographical position of the localities should be absolutely correct, and in strict accordance with what hydrographers, after the lapse of 400 years, and with great labor, have fixed with scientific exactness. It is, precisely, on account of the amount of labor and advancement that have been requisite to arrive at perfection in geographical science, that we can appreciate the work of La Cosa, who, by this single Map, as observed by Fernandez Duro, has immortalized his name.

III.

This celebrated Map was finished in October 1500, just at the close of the Middle Ages, and at the dawn of the XVI Century.

From the hands of their Most Catholic Majesties, it passed into the Archives of the Trading Department of Seville (Casa de Contratación de Sevilla), where by order of king Ferdinand, all such documents were kept, as a sort of « Registry », locked up in a safe to which there were three independent keys. From there it was transferred to the Archives of the Indies, along with all the documents, Plans, Maps, etc., of the ancient « Trading Department » (Casa de Contratación). It is probable it found its way from there into some Monastery, which is not strange, if we consider the influence of the Monastic Institutions and Churchmen of those times, and the interest they took in all matters of science and literature.

Pedro Martir Angleria relates that, in a visit he made to Bishop of Burgos, Juan Fonseca, in 1514, he saw in the Chamber of the Prelate a beautiful Marine Chart of Juan de la Cosa. Pedro Martir Angleria gives no description of this Chart; so that we cannot freely assert that it is the same one we now possess. Yet it would be hazardous to deny the possibility of its being the same; for Fonseca had been the President of the «Casa de Contratación» of Seville; and we have here a proof of the facilities for Maps and Charts ordered by King Ferdinand to be kept in the Archives of said «Casa de Contratación», to find their way into Bishops palaces. And the fact mentioned by Pedro Martir Angleria goes far to explain the disappearance of this valuable Map of La Cosa, which was stolen and carried into France, if not during the Peninsular war, as stated by a learned writer, at least in time to be discovered in a sale room by the well known geographer Baron Walkenaer, who at once bought it up, to add to his Collection of Maps, Charts, Plans, and all such interesting curiosities, for the scientific studies to which he devoted his time and talents.

The Baron was at the time Minister for Holland at Paris; and no sooner had he got hold of this famous Map of the renowned Spanish Pilot, than he presented it with great show and praises, to the circle of bibliophilists by whom he was constantly surrounded. He made honourable mention of it in the translation of Pinkerton's Works, and permitted it to be inspected and copied by all those who had a taste for such studies.

The first who availed himself of this generosity was the illustrious Baron Humboldt, who has spoken at some length on this Map of Juan de la Cosa in the Introduction and Vth volume of his «Examen critique de l'histoire de la Géographie du Nouveau Continent; » and caused a «fac-simile» reproduction of it to appear in the Geographical and Physical Atlas of his Travels.

M. Jomard, Curator of the Cartographic Department of the Imperial Library of Paris, had another reproduction of it made, in ink only, which forms part of «La Collection des Monuments de la Géographie du Moyen Age».

Viscount Santarem, in the great work he directed by order of the Portuguese Government, confined himself to copying from it the part appertaining to Africa.

M. Charlton inserted in his «Voyages Anciens et Modernes», engraved on wood, the part of Amerien, on a reduced scale, confining himself, in the text, to the opinion of M. Denis, («Nouvelle Biographie Générale») who is an enthusiastic admirer of the Map of Juan de la Cosa, which he calls «a Monument of the Primitive Cartography of the New World.»

MM. Terneaux, Compans, and La Roquette are of the same opinion; as well as all writers as have had occasion to refer to this Map. And M. Vivien de Saint Martin endorses these general opinions in his «Histoire de la Géographie», wherein he says: «Juan de la Cosa, one of the most expert mariners and able cartographers of his time, has left us a Geographical Monument which immortalises his name; inasmuch as it is a Mapa-Mundi, representing, in an admirable manner, the countries known in his time, not only of the New Western Regions but of the Globe.»

The above quotation, like numerous others in relation to Juan de la Cosa, we have transcribed from Fernández Duro, who, however, as remarked by Leguina, and as verified by ourselves, absolutely contradicts what is stated in said quotation, when he says, in his article on Juan de la Cosa, in the great Work «Museo Español de Antigüedades»: «It is not possible to admit that any one who treats of Geography in the present day should be ignorant of the existence of a Document of such importance; and yet we have to count among the number of those that omit it a recent Work of M. Vivien de Saint Martin—a work of some pretensions, as revealed by its title, its lavish typographical beauty, with chromo-lithographed Atlas; purporting to give an idea of the Charts of the greatest antiquity and merit, yet without even mentioning that of Juan de la Cosa.»

Notwithstanding this contradiction, we are inclined to think that the first mentioned quotation from Vivien de Saint Martin is more like the truth, although Sr. Duro did not express his other opinion until recently.

IV

The Map remained in possession of Baron Walckenaer until the year 1853, when his bibliophilist friends heard that he had died suddenly, and that the valuable documents belonging to the learned Baron would be, at once, put up to public auction. The sale was advertised for the 12th of April, and the Catalogue, describing the rare and curious documents, placed at the head of the list the Chart of Juan de la Cosa, which the learned Baron had qualified as «the most interesting Geographical Drawing that we have inherited from the Middle Ages.»

Señor Ramón de la Sagra, author of the «Political and Natural History of the Island of Cuba»,—an intimate friend of the Baron, and a great admirer of the Cosa Map, of which he had not only made mention in the preface of his work, but had a sketch taken of it in the part referring to the New world, which he annexed to his work—as soon as he heard of the sale, broke the matter to several influential Spaniards, and addressed an official communication to the Minister of Marine, suggesting that it was both just and advisable to restore to Spain this invaluable original Map, which contained the proofs of the scientific knowledge possessed by the Spanish Mariners, Companions of Columbus in the discovery and exploration of the West Indies. The Minister of Marine at once communicated the news to the Minister of State, requesting that, through the Spanish Legation at Paris, the Map of La Cosa should be bought for account of the Hydrographic Department of Madrid, in whose Archives it should be placed. La Sagra was commissioned to assist at the sale; and after many difficulties and misgivings (for several private individuals, Englishmen and Russians, and even a representative of the Imperial Library of Paris, appeared at the sale and kept bidding for the Map until the price went up to 4,321 francs) it was, at last, secured by La Sagra, who, when he got possession of it, did not mind confessing, in the presence of all who heard him, that he had been determined to have the Map at any price, without any limitation whatsoever; as the matter was one in which the «amour propre» of the Spanish Government was concerned. Thus the Map was restored to

Spain, and was exposed to public curiosity in the Naval Museum of Madrid, in the Department of Discoverers and Illustrious Marines, and placed on the Catalogue of the Museum, with a note, of which the following is the translation:

«Nº 553. Chart of the part appertaining to America, designed by Juan de la Cosa, in the second voyage of the Genoese Discoverer in 1493, and in the Expedition of Alonso de Ojeda in the same year. Stolen from Spain, it was in the possession of Baron de Walckenaer, whose Executors sold it in public auction, when it was bought for the Hydrographic Department, whose Director, at the time, Señor George Lasso de la Vega, kindly had it deposited in this Museum, in order that the public may admire a document so curious, and of such merit, considering the epoch in which it was made.»

From the time of its installation up to now, notwithstanding the many precious reliques contained in the Naval Museum of Madrid, the Map of Juan de la Cosa has become the object of the greatest curiosity to every class of visitors.

In the year 1875 this Map was reproduced on a small scale, and without any colour but black (precisely the only colour which the original does not contain) and was annexed to the beforementioned work « Museo Español de Antigüedades », with a well written article full of interesting facts by señor Fernández Duro.

Subsequently Photographs have been made of it, which are altogether insufficient to give an adequate idea of the value of this document. And, during the present year, a Review called « El Centenario » has offered to its subscribers a small photo-lithographic reproduction of it, deplorably illuminated, and which, besides the numerous inaccuracies as to colours, is inadequate to afford any useful study of the Map; as it is impossible to read even one of the thousands of names which the original contains on the Coasts, nor even the names on the interior of the Continents, so interesting in so many respects.

The importance of La Cosa's Map, and the non-existence of a Reproduction thereof, that could satisfy the legitimate wishes of men of science, induced Señor Antonio Canovás Vallejo and Professor Traynor, of Madrid, to publish an exact, careful and faithful copy of it, without omitting a single detail, as to size, colours, or even injuries of time; so that, in reality, the possessor of one of these Reproductions can study the Map as if it were the original.

We need not here extol the meritorious character of such an undertaking, which has been crowned with the greatest success.

We have only to refer to the Reproductions themselves, which have had such favor from the public, and to the encouragement and applause we have received from every quarter of the Old and New World.

Spanish Version rendered by Professor Traynor.)

APPENDIX B.

MEMORANDUM UPON THE CABOT MAP.<sup>1</sup>

The map following is a photo-lithograph from a negative made at Paris by order of the Minister of Agriculture. It properly finds a place here for it contains what may be called the first entry in the volume of our history—practically to the effect that prior to the discovery of the mainland of the western continent by Spain the Christian cross and the banners of England and Venice had been planted on the shore of a province now forming part of the British dominions in America.

The map has been the occasion of much controversy, and it is inexpedient to renew discussion in these pages; but, at the request of the Archivist, I append a few notes of explanatory introduction.

The old writers contain many notices of maps by the Cabots, and more especially of certain maps by Sebastian Cabot; of which last very many copies were extant in England between the years 1550 and 1600. There were even several editions printed between these periods of one of these maps differing in date and to a slight extent in the wording of the legends; whether they differed also in any minor or major geographical features is not positively known. All of the copies however of whatever date and all maps of any kind made by either Cabot utterly disappeared for an indefinite time—probably two hundred years.

In the year 1843 a copy of one of the editions of the map above mentioned was discovered in the house of a curate in Bavaria. It was found by Von Martins and its great importance being recognized it was speedily deposited in the National Library at Paris. The photographic facsimile appended is very nearly one-half the size of the original. The original was printed from an engraved plate and on either side there is a strip, printed from type and attached to the map, containing information of a geographical, antiquarian, or historical nature explanatory of the map itself. These strips have been proved to be contemporaneous with the map and in fact they are identified with it by cross reference numbers engraved on the plate.

An inspection of the map shows it to be a map of the world on an elliptical projection drawn from all sources of information then existing. Authors of all periods even as early as Pliny have been cited in the printed legends and many extravagant beliefs current at the time of its publication are recorded and fabulous monsters are not only described but portrayed. The map contains many errors—not only current errors of the period but inconsistencies, errors of the engraver and errors of transcription by the compiler from the materials used. It bears date A.D. 1514. At that time Sebastian Cabot was living at Seville, holding office as Grand Pilot of Spain. The map was not however printed in Spain. It bears the Imperial arms and was printed in one of the German Imperial cities or in one of the hereditary possessions of Charles V. in Northern Europe. It is the almost unanimous opinion of scholars that it was printed at Antwerp or Brussels. The proofs were not read in Spain, nor by a Spaniard, as is demonstrated by the existence of many typographical errors. Nor was the compiler or engraver familiar with French for Cartier's names in the Gulf and River St. Lawrence are not only changed by translation into Spanish, but by errors in reading or copying the French originals.

Nevertheless it is now universally conceded that Sebastian Cabot contributed information to the compiler of this map. It is the extent of his contribution which is keenly disputed among scholars. It contains information which could not possibly be known by any other man than him and references are made to him citing his authority, but in the third person and in a strain of fulsome commendation not likely to have been employed by Cabot himself. One main item of such special information is the mention of John Cabot's name as the discoverer—a fact which had almost completely dropped out of knowledge for, up to the date of discovery of this map, the records showed no intimation by Sebastian Cabot of his father's agency in the matter. The character of the younger Cabot for truthfulness and filial duty has suffered in consequence and has also been the subject of keen controversy.

In consequence of the reduced scale some of the geographical names are difficult to make out, and, therefore, to assist the reader, a copy of a facsimile on a larger scale of the American portion of the map, taken from Winsor's Narrative and Critical History, has also been given. By the aid of this the Canadian geography can be traced. It will be seen to extend as far as the present Montreal—as far in short as Jacques Cartier went—and no farther.

The interest of this map centres in legend No. 8, and especially at the tongue of land on the map marked primâ tierra vista (first land seen) because that was the landfall according to Sebastian Cabot. That tongue of land will be recognized at once as the extreme northeastern point of the island of Cape Breton, and as on the Atlantic coast. It is disputed whether the tongue of land is Cape North the northernmost point, or Cape Breton the northeasternmost point. There are also some who attack the personal character of Sebastian Cabot, and stigmatize the map as a fraudulent attempt to curry favour with the King of England—all of which with the answers thereto is set forth at length in many articles and papers published in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Canada and elsewhere.

Another difficulty arises in the legend No. 8. The discovery is stated to have been made on June 24th, 1494. It is however now universally admitted that the year was, in reality, 1497. That is absolutely certain from existing records in the English Archives, and from recently discovered documents in the archives of Venice and Milan. The conflict which raged round the date has now ceased. It has already been observed that there were several editions of the map, the present copy is unique, and is dated 1544. Other copies certainly existed bearing date 1549. This copy gives the year of discovery as 1494, Cabot's map hanging up in the Queen's Gallery about 1582-1600 (according to Hakluyt) gave the date as 1497. Mr. Major suggested that the error arose from the engraver making MCCCCXCVII into MCCCCXCIII by simply straightening the V into II. This is ingenious and probable but that the mistake exists is proved by the documentary evidence above referred to.

Much interest attaches to these legends. They are in Spanish and Latin and, on this copy, seventeen are in both languages and five are in Spanish only. The late Dr. Charles Deane of Boston, who contributed the chapter on the Cabot voyages to Winsor's History made a special study of the map and had photographic facsimiles made for twelve great libraries in the United States. He also had translations made of the legends by persons skilled in Latin and Spanish. These were published in vol. 6 of the second series of the Transactions of the Massachusetts Historical Society. This work is not generally accessible and in order to place the information within reach of the public the transcriptions and translations are reprinted herewith. Any attempt to improve on work so faithfully done would be unsatisfactory. The following sentence will show the methods of the translators:—

In the translation, words which are in the Spanish version but not in the Latin are printed in italics. The additions of the Latin version are given in the footnotes. Mr. Deane apparently employed two different persons to copy the inscriptions. The copyist of the Spanish version found his text put upon the map in such a bungling manner, in respect to the separation of syllables and the running together of words and in other ways, that he wrote out the abbreviations and corrected the spelling, in order to render the meaning intelligible. His copy has, therefore, been carefully followed. The Latin version was in a better state, but it contained a great number of abbreviations which could not be easily represented by modern type; and though these abbreviations were preserved by the Latin copyist, they have been spelled out in printing, to conform to the rule adopted with regard to the Spanish version.

The above explanations are necessary lest some one may take a glass and make imaginary discoveries which may be sources of new discussions and much waste of time.

It will assist the reader in tracing the references of the marginal legends to their proper places on the map to give the following index from Dr. Deane's paper:—

The references in the body of the map to the legends at the sides are placed as follows:—

- No. 1, between the Bermuda Islands and the West Indies.
- No. 2, north of the Island of Antigua.
- No. 3, opposite to the west coast of Mexico.
- No. 4, opposite to the Strait of Magellan.
- No. 5, at the Molucca Islands.
- No. 6, opposite to the coast of Peru.
- No. 7, at the mouth of the Rio de la Plata.
- No. 8, in Hudson Bay.
- No. 9, opposite to Iceland.
- No. 10, in the northern part of Russia.

- No. 11, in the northeastern part of Asia, where the reference is incorrectly given to Table 2, No. 2.
 No. 12, in the northern part of Asia.
 No. 13, in the middle of Africa.
 No. 14, in Hindostan, without a numerical reference, but it is indicated by the picture of a woman surrounded by flames.
 No. 15, north of Japan.
 No. 16, near Sumatra.
 No. 17, on the eastern side of the map, just south of the equator.
 No. 18, north of Europe and Asia.
 No. 19, in the Indian Ocean, nearly south of Hindostan.
 No. 20, directly below the preceding reference.
 No. 21, in the Indian Ocean, northwest from No. 19.
 No. 22, near Ceylon.

It will plainly appear therefore that legend No. 8 never was intended to apply to the place of landfall, but to the whole region of northeastern America. Much discussion has turned upon this point. There is moreover a controversy relative to the island of St. John indicated on the map. Some contend that it is the present Prince Edward Island and that it was discovered by Cabot; while others argue from its position and from Cartier's voyages and from the unanimous testimony of all other maps that it is an agglomeration of the Magdalen group and is moreover identified by the attendant islets as well as by the direction of its axis from northeast to southwest.

The controversy concerning these voyages has been carried on with intermitting activity ever since the year 1833. Much that was obscure has been cleared up but many points remain still indistinct. It is unlikely that absolute certainty will ever be attained. If however a high degree of probability be reached this question will be in no worse position than many historical and political theories on which human action is continually based. The existing materials have been very thoroughly threshed out and unless some new map or document be brought forward it is altogether improbable that anything will be elicited which has escaped the notice of the large number of scholars who have taken part in this very keen controversy.

NOTE E.

MEMOIRE SUR LA CARTE DE CABOT.

La carte suivante est une carte photo-lithographie d'un négatif fait à Paris par ordre du ministre de l'Agriculture. Elle trouve ici la place qui lui convient, puisqu'elle contient ce qu'on peut appeler la première entrée dans le volume de notre histoire—ayant pratiquement pour effet d'établir qu'antérieurement à la découverte de la masse principale du continent occidental par l'Espagne, la croix chrétienne ainsi que les bannières d'Angleterre et de Venise avaient été plantées sur la côte d'une province formant actuellement partie des possessions britanniques en Amérique.

La carte a fourni le sujet de beaucoup de controverse, et il ne convient pas de recommencer le débat dans ces pages; mais, à la requête de l'archiviste, j'annexe ici quelques notes d'introduction explicatives.

Les anciens auteurs contiennent beaucoup de notices touchant des cartes faites par les Cabots, et plus particulièrement touchant certaines cartes de Sébastien Cabot; de celles-ci de nombreuses copies existaient en Angleterre entre les années 1550 et 1600. Il y eut même plusieurs éditions d'imprimées, entre ces périodes, de l'une de ces cartes, différant quant à la date et, dans une certaine mesure, quant au libellé de la légende. On ne sait pas positivement si elles ne différaient pas aussi, sur quelque point majeur ou mineur, quant à leur caractère géographique. A tout événement, tous les exemplaires, de quelque date qu'ils fussent, et toutes les cartes faites par l'un ou l'autre des Cabots, ont complètement disparu pendant un temps indéfini—probablement pendant deux cents ans.

En l'année 1843, un exemplaire de l'une des éditions de la carte susmentionnée fut décoverte dans la maison d'un curé de Bavière. Il fut trouvé par Von Martius et, comme on en reconnaissait la haute importance, il fut diligemment déposé à la bibliothèque nationale de Paris. Le fac-simile photographique ci-annexé atteint très-approximativement la moitié de la grandeur de l'original. L'original fut reproduit par l'impression d'une planche gravée et, de chaque côté, se trouve une bande imprimée et attachée à la carte, contenant des renseignements géographiques, antiquaires ou historiques explicatifs de la carte même. Ces bandes, ainsi qu'il a été trouvé, sont du même temps que la carte et, de fait, y sont identifiées par des numéros de correspondance gravés sur la plaque.

Une inspection de la carte fait voir qu'elle est une carte du monde à projection elliptique tirée de toutes sortes de renseignements alors existants. Des auteurs de tous les temps, remontant jusqu'à Pline, ont été cités dans les légendes imprimées, et nombre de rumeurs extravagantes, courantes à l'époque de sa publication, y sont consignées avec non seulement la description mais encore le portrait de monstres fabuleux. La carte contient nombre d'erreurs—non seulement des erreurs courantes de l'époque, mais des inconséquentes, des erreurs du graveur et des erreurs de transcription, commises par le compilateur des matériaux employés. Elle porte la date de 1544 A.D. A cette époque Sébastien Cabot vivait à Séville, tenant l'emploi de grand pilote d'Espagne. Toutefois, la carte ne fut pas imprimée en Espagne. Elle porte les armes impériales et a été imprimée dans une des cités impériales de l'Allemagne ou dans une des possessions héréditaires de Charles Quint dans l'Europe septentrionale.

C'est l'opinion la plus unanime des savants qu'elle fut imprimée à Anvers ou à Bruxelles. Les épreuves n'en furent pas corrigées en Espagne, ni par un Espagnol, comme le démontre l'existence de plusieurs erreurs typographiques. Le compilateur ou graveur n'était pas, non plus, familier avec la langue française, car les noms de Cartier, dans le golfe Saint-Laurent, sont non seulement changés par des traductions en espagnol, mais encore par suite d'erreurs commises en lisant ou copiant les originaux français.

Quoi qu'il en soit, on concède maintenant universellement que Sébastien Cabot a fourni des renseignements au compilateur de cette carte. C'est sur la proportion de ceux qu'il a fournis que les savants se disputent. Elle contient des renseignements qu'aucun autre que lui ne pouvait avoir et il est fait mention de lui-même cité comme autorité, mais à la troisième personne et en termes pompeusement élogieux dont il est peu vraisemblable que Cabot ait lui-même fait usage. Un trait capital de ces renseignements, c'est la mention du nom de Jean Cabot comme celui à découvrir, fait qui était presque complètement ignoré, car à la date de la découverte de la carte, les archives ne contenaient aucune assertion faite par Sébastien Cabot touchant la participation de son père en cette affaire. La réputation de Cabot, jeune, quant à sa véracité et à sa piété filiale a souffert en conséquence et est aussi devenue le sujet d'une chaude controverse.

Vi la réduction de l'échelle, quelques-uns des noms géographiques sont difficiles à déchiffrer. C'est pourquoi, pour venir en aide au lecteur, copie d'un fac-similé sur une échelle plus étendue de la partie américaine de la carte, prise de la Winsor's Narrative and Critical History, a aussi été donnée, à l'aide de laquelle la géographie canadienne peut être retracée. On verra qu'elle s'étend jusqu'à Montréal d'aujourd'hui—aussi loin enfin que là où Jacques Cartier s'est rendu—and pas plus loin.

L'intérêt de cette carte se concentre sur la légende n° 8, et spécialement sur la langue de terre marquée sur la carte prima tierra vista (première terre vue), parée que c'était là l'atterrissement d'après Sébastien Cabot. Cette langue de terre va être tout de suite reconnue comme étant l'extrême pointe nord orientale de l'île du Cap-Breton, et comme étant la côte de l'Atlantique. C'est une question en dispute que de savoir si la langue de terre est le Cap Nord, le point le plus septentrional, ou le Cap-Breton, le point le plus nord-est. Il y en a aussi qui attaquent la réputation personnelle de Sébastien Cabot et stigmatisent la carte comme une fraudulente tentative de se mettre en faveur auprès du roi d'Angleterre. Le tout avec les réponses qui y ont été faites est exposé au long dans les rapports de la Société Royale du Canada et ailleurs.

Une autre difficulté surgit à propos de la légende n° 8. La découverte y est mentionnée comme ayant été faite le 24 juin 1494. Il est cependant maintenant universellement admis que c'est, en réalité, 1497 qui est cette année. Cela est absolument certain d'après des archives anglaises existantes et des documents récemment découverts dans les archives de Venise et de Milan. Le conflit soulevé à propos de la date a maintenant pris fin. Il a déjà été observé qu'il y en eut diverses éditions de la carte. La copie actuelle est unique et porte la date de 1544. Il existait certainement d'autres copies portant la date de 1549. Cette copie-ci fixe l'année de la découverte à 1494. La carte de Cabot accrochée dans la galerie de la Reine vers 1582-1600 (d'après Hakluyt) fixait 1497 comme étant la date. M. Major a émis l'idée que l'erreur provient de ce que le graveur a changé MCCCVXCVII en MCCCVXCIHII, simplement en redressant le V en II. Ceci est ingénieux et probable, mais il est établi que l'erreur existe par la preuve documentaire susmentionnée.

Ces légendes exercent beaucoup d'intérêt. Elles sont en espagnol et en latin et, sur la présente copie, dix-sept sont dans les deux langues et cinq en espagnol seulement. Feu le docteur Charles Deane, de Boston qui a écrit le chapitre sur les voyages de Cabot pour l'Histoire de Winsor, a fait une étude spéciale de la carte et en a fait faire des fac-similés pour douze grandes bibliothèques des États-Unis. Il a aussi fait faire la traduction des légendes par des personnes connaissant bien le latin et l'espagnol. Elles ont été publiées dans le volume 6 des Rapports de la Société historique du Massachusetts. Cet ouvrage n'est pas accessible à tous, et, en vue de mettre le renseignement à la portée du public, les transcriptions et traductions sont ici reproduites. Toute tentative d'améliorer un travail si fidèlement exécuté ne donnerait aucune satisfaction. Le passage suivant fera voir quelle est la méthode des traducteurs :

Dans la traduction, les mots qui se trouvent dans la version espagnole mais qui ne sont pas dans la latine sont imprimés en italiques. Les additions contenues dans la version latine sont données en notes au bas des pages. Il y a apparence que M. Deane a employé deux personnes différentes à la transcription des inscriptions. Le copiste de la version espagnole a trouvé son texte placé sur la carte d'une façon si maladroite, en ce qui regarde la séparation des syllabes, la cursirité des mots et autres choses qu'il a écrit les abréviations et corrigé l'épellation de façon à rendre le sens intelligible. Sa copie a en conséquence été fidèlement suivie. La version latine était en meilleure condition, mais elle contenait un grand nombre d'abréviations qui ne pouvaient pas être facilement représentées en caractères modernes; et, bien que ces abréviations aient été préservées par le copiste latin, elles ont été épelées au long dans l'impression, afin de se conformer à la règle adoptée pour la version espagnol.

Les implications précédentes sont nécessaires de crainte que quelqu'un ne prenne une lunette pour faire des découvertes imaginaires qui pourraient devenir la source de nouvelles discussions et d'un perte de temps considérable.

Le lecteur recevra de l'aide pour se reconnaître sur la carte aux indications des légendes marginales, de l'index suivant, emprunté au travail du docteur Deane.

Les renvois dans le corps de la carte aux légendes mises sur les bords sont comme suit :—

- N° 1, entre les îles Bermudes et les Antilles.
- N° 2, nord de l'île Attigua.
- N° 3, vis-à-vis la côte occidentale du Mexique.
- N° 4, vis-à-vis le détroit de Magellan.
- N° 5, aux îles Moluques.
- N° 6, vis-à-vis la côte du Pérou.
- N° 7, à l'embouchure de la rivière La Plata.
- N° 8, dans la baie d'Hudson.
- N° 9, vis-à-vis l'Islande.
- N° 10, dans la partie nord de la Russie.

- N° 11, dans la partie septentrionale de l'Asie, où l'indication est inexactement faite au tableau 2, n° 2.
 N° 12, dans la partie nord de l'Asie.
 N° 13, au milieu de l'Afrique.
 N° 14, etc Indoustan, sans indication numérotique, mais indiqué par le portrait d'une femme entourée de flammes.
 N° 15, nord du Japon.
 N° 16, près de Sumatra.
 N° 17, sur le côté oriental de la carte, juste au nord de l'équateur.
 N° 18, nord de l'Europe et de l'Asie.
 N° 19, dans l'océan Indien, près du sud de l'Indoustan.
 N° 20, droit au-dessous de l'indication précédente.
 N° 21, dans l'océan Indien, au nord-ouest du n° 19.
 N° 22, près de Ceylan.

Il paraîtra donc clair que la légende n° 8 n'a jamais été destinée à s'appliquer au lieu de l'atterrissement, mais à toute la région de l'Amérique nord-orientale. Ce point a soulevé beaucoup de discussion. Il y a de plus une controverse relativement à l'île Saint-Jean, indiquée sur la carte. Quelques-uns prétendent que c'est l'île du Prince-Edouard actuelle et qu'elle a été découverte par Cabot, pendant que d'autres soutiennent, d'après sa position, les voyages de Cartier et le témoignage unanime de toutes les autres cartes, que c'est une agglomération du groupe de la Madeleine, et que, de plus, elle s'identifie par les flots qui s'y rattachent aussi bien que par la direction de son axe du nord-est au sud-ouest.

La controverse relative à ces voyages s'est poursuivie avec une intermittente activité depuis 1833. Beaucoup de choses obscures ont été éclaircies, mais il reste encore beaucoup de points indistincts. Il n'est pas probable qu'on puisse jamais arriver à une certitude absolue. Si toutefois on atteint un haut degré de probabilité, cette question ne se trouvera point dans une position pire que ne le sont beaucoup d'autres théories historiques et politiques sur lesquelles les hommes s'appuient pour agir. Les matériaux existants ont été très ressassés, et à moins de la découverte de quelque nouvelle carte ou nouveau document, il est tout à fait improbable que l'on découvre quelque chose qui ait échappé aux recherches des nombreux savants qui ont pris part à cette très vive controverse.

Es tierra de muchos animales; ciervos, puercos monteses, leones, pardos, tigres y otra mucha caza, asi de aves como de animales terrestres. Es gente muy abil en contrahacer al natural qualquiera figura de bulto y en dehazar pinturas. Las mujeres comunemente se adornan con piedras preciosas y perlas de valor. Usan esto Indios cierta especie de papel en el qual dibujan con figuras todo lo que quieren decir, en lugar de letras. Nunca tuvieron paz entre ellos, antes los unos perseguian á los otros con batallas continuas, en las cuales, los que eran presos de una parte y de otra los enemigos les sacrificavan á sus dioses, cuyos cuerpos inmortos eran mantenimientos publicos á la hueste. Eran ydolatras y adoravan lo que se les antojava, eran muy amigos de comer carne humana; puesto que al presente se despojaron de aquellas heras y crueles costumbres, y se vistieron de Jesu Christo, creyendo de buen corazon nuestra sancta ley Evangelica, y obedeciendo á la sancta madre iglesia y á sus mandamientos sanctissimos.

Nº 4. Fretum hoc Omnim "Sanctorum" Fernandus Magallianus apernit, quem clavis regie Hispanorum ad aperiendum expugnandumque Malucarum Insulas. S. e. c. Majestas Caroli Imperatoris invictissimum islas Maluen. Ay en este estrecho hombres de tan grande estatura que parecen gigantes. Es tierra muy desierta; y vistense de pieles de animales.

Nº 5. Estas islas de Maluen fueron descubiertas por Fernández de Magallanes, Capitán de una armada que su magestad mandó hacer para el desembarcadero de las dichas islas, y por Joan Sebastian del Canno, es á saber, que el dicho Fernández de Magallanes descubrió el estrecho de todos sancos, el qual está en IIII grados y medio hacia el polo Antártico; y después de aver passado el dicho yio estrecho synto estrecho, y no sin grandísimo trabajo y peligro, prosiguió su viaje hacia las dichas yslas por espacio de muchos días. [v] Llegó á unas yslas de las quales le meridional dallas está en XIII grados; y por ser la gente della tan burliosa, y porteno les hurtaron el batel de una nao, la pusieron nombre, la isla de los ladrones; y de ay prosiguiendo su viaje, como dicho es, descubrió una isla, que le pusieron nombre la Agumia, porque ay tomaron agua; y de ay adelante descubrieron otra, que se dice Bundana, y Acelani, y otra, que se dice Culm, en la qual ysla murió el dicho Capitán, Hernando de Magallanes, en una escaramuza que ayvo con los naturales della; y la gente que quedó de la dicha armada eligieron Joan Sebastian del Canno por Capitán della; el qual después descubrió la ysla de Bundana, en la qual ay mucho oro de nacimiento y canela muy fina; y ay mismo descubrió á la ysla de Poloau, y á la de Brunnay, y á la de Gilolo, y á la ysla de Tridari, y á la de Terenati, y Motil, y otras muchas, en las cuales ay mucho oro, y clavos, y nuez moscada, y otro genero de especeria y droguería. Cargo el dicho Sebastian del Canno dos naos, que les avia quedado de cinco que llevaron, de clavo en la dicha ysla de Tidori, porque en ella y en la dicha ysla de Terenati dizan nacer el dicho clavo, y no en otra alguna; y así mismo traxo mucha canela y nuez moscada. Y veniendo la buelta del cabo de buena esperanza por el mar Indico adelante, para venir á España, una nao lo fue forzado de arrribar y tornar á la ysla de Tidori, de donde se partió, por la mucha agua que havia; y el dicho Capitán Joan Sebastian del Canno, con su nro, nombrada Sancta Maria de la victoria, vino á estos Reynos de Castilla, á la ciudad de Sevilla, Anno de M. D. XXII, por el cabo de buena esperanza. De manera que claramente parece aver dado el dicho Joan Sebastian del Canno una buelta á todo lo universo: por quanto fue tanto por occidente, aunque no por un parallelo. Bolvió por el oriente al lugar oceano de donde se partió.

Nº 6. Estas provincias fueron descubiertas por el honrado y muy eforzado caballero, Francisco Pizarro, el qual fue gobernador dellas durante su vida; en las quales ay infinito oro y plata de nacimiento, y

Nº 5. Has Maluenianas Insulas Fernandus Magallanus dum nostrisibus clausas apernit, neconon Joannes Sebastianus del Canno epus successor, quem inquam Fernandum ad opulentissimas has Indorum Insulas apertundas 8. c. e. Majestas Caroli Imperatoris domini nostri hujus nomine quinque, sua regae Hispanorum classi ducem & gubernatores prefererat, que quidem classis e portu Hispalis insignis ciuitatis Betice provincie nantem solvit. Is itaque primo fretum Omnimur Sanctorum apernit, quod ab equinoctiali ad Antercticum vergens 52. gradibus cum dimidio distat: cumque suprad etas insulitas petens hand sue maximo sui periculo snrnoque labore intolerabili, ultimus navigare pergeret. Tandem longo post tempore quibusdam appulit Insulis, e quibus a Polo Arctico, quod magis ad meridiem expectat duodecim ab aequatore gradibus semita est, enjus homines agitatae appertos callidi sunt, quicunq; latrociniis, quia cymbula quedam classis, e conspectu nautorum Hispanorum evanuit, ea loca, latronum Insulas denominaverant. Hinc deinceps ulterior navigatione apernit quandam Insulam, cui Lagnada nomen inditum quoniam codeta aquatum ire illi configit: Apernit & alias linnam scilicet, Aceliani & Culbu, quoniam ultima dictus Fernandus Magallanus con gressu quodam Indorum hostium vita functus est, cui Joannes Sebastianus del Caño totius classis suffragiis, votisque omnium electus feliciter successit, qui postea sequentes Insulas Hedenmo, Apoloam, Branna, Gilolo, Atidori, Terenati, Motil, aliasque quan plurimas Insulas prosperè apernit quibus maxima aurri copia excititur, Gariophilon, Cinamoni, nesciisque mirristice ac omnino aromatum & merentis, adeo ut ipsa Sebastianus Joannes Sebastianus del Caño duas naves ex quinque, quas è naufragio cooperat incolimes, Tidori Insula Gariophili oneravit. In illa siquidem ac Terenati tantum, in allis vero Insulis nequam produciunt: Abundat itidem Cinamomum, ac nesciisque mirristice Bendecao legitam, quarum etiam maximam copiam inde abstulit. Undique is ad Hispaniam per mare Indico rediret, ac bona spei promontorium insinuare properat, alterna navium sentinam exaultans facile valens, ne fluctibus obrueretur. Tidori Insulam iterum petere coactus fuit unde mare metiri cooperat: Joannes vero Sebastianus del Canno bona spei promontorium pertransiens, navi, qua vobebatur eum nomen diva victrix Maria, Hispalim civitatem Betice regionis tuto adire potitus est, unde primum navigare inchoaverat, Anno nativitate redemptoris 1522. Ex quo satis constat Joannem Sebastianum del Canno totum orbem circulariter navigasse, utpote qui adeo occidentalem plagam usque permisit, ut eam transiens ad occidentem iterum rediret, unde primum iter cooperat.

Nº 6. Has provincias nobis apernit, nerant expugnaveruntque magnanimi equites Franciscus Pizarro & Almagro, qui inquam Francisus Pizarro has dum vixerit gubernavit; copiosè inde extractis divitiis. Abun-nmas de esmeraldas muy finas. El pan que tienen hacenlo de maiz, y el vino semejantemente; tienen mucho trigo y otras semillas. Es gente bellosa; usan en sus guerras arcos y bolas, y lanzas; sus armaduras son de oro y plata. Ay en las dichas provincias mas ovejas de hechura de pequenos camelos; tienen la lana muy fina. Son gentes idolatras y de muy soñil ingento; y en toda la ribera de la mar, con mas de veinte leguas dentro de la tierra, no llueve. Es tierra muy seca, los Christians tienen lecho en ello muchos pueblos, y cada dia van aumentandolos.

Nº 7. Llaman los Indios a este gran Rio, el Rio Iunuai, en castelleno, el Rio de la plat. Toman este nombre del Rio Iunuai, el qual es un Rio muy caudaloso, que entra en el gran Rio de Parana. Desenbrido Joan Diaz de Solis, piloto mayor de los catholicas reyes de gloriosa memoria; y descubrió hasta una isla, que el dicho Joan Diaz puso nombre la isla de Martin Garcia, porque en ella enterró un marinero, que se decia Martin Garcia; la qual dicha isla está obra de treinta leguas arriba de la boca deste Rio; y costeó bien caro el dicho desenbrido, porque los Indios de la dicha tierra lo mataron y lo comieron. Y despues pasados muchos años lo bolvió á hallar Sebastian Caboto, Capitan y Piloto mayor de S. e. c. m. del Imperador don Carlos, quinto deste nombre y Rey, nuestro señor, el qual yva por Capitan general de una armada que su majestad mandó fazer para el desenbrido de Tarsis, y Ofir y Catayo oriental; el qual dicho capitan Sebastian Caboto visto este Rio por caso fortuito, porque la nao capitana, en que yva, se le perdió, y visto que no podia seguir el dicho su viaje, acordó de descubrir con la gente que llevava el dicho Rio, vista la grandisima relacion que los Indios de la tierra le dieron de la grandisima riqueza de oro y plata, que en la dicha tierra avia; y no sin grandissimo trabajo y hambre y peligros, asi de su persona como de los que con el iban. Y procuró el dicho capitan de hacer cerca del dicho rio algunas poblaciones de la gente que llevó de España. Este Rio es mayor que ninguno de quantos aca se conocen; tiene de ancho en la entrada, que entra en la mar, veinte y cinco leguas, y trezentas leguas arriba de la dicha entrada tiene dos leguas en ancho. La causa de ser tan grande y poderoso es que entran en el otros muchos rios, grandes y caudalosos. Es rio de infinitissima pescado y el mejor que ay en el mundo. La gente en llegando á aquella tierra quiso conocer si era fertil, y aparejada para labrar y llevar pan; y senbraron en el mes de setiembre LiL granos de teigo, que no se halló mas en las uas, y cogieron luego en el mes de diciembre cincuenta y dos mill granos de trigo, que esta misma fertilidad se halló en todas las otras semillas. Los que en aquella tierra bien dicen, que no lejos de ay en la tierra adentro, que ay unas grandes sierras de donde sacan infinitissimo oro, y que mas adelante en las mismas sierras sacan infinita plata. Ay en esta tierra unas ovejas grandes como asnos comunes, de figura de camelos, salvo que tienen la Hanc sequitur per varios casus per tot obseruacione termini, dum clausum suis aperit, expugnatque, ab Indis oppressus occisusque devisor. Ellipsis autem postea multis annis Sebastianus Cabotus navigandi arte astrorumque perittissimus, dux & archigubernius Caroli Imperatoris, hiujus nominis quinti regisque potentissimi, denou nobis aperuit classe regia, cui ipse Imperator ducem profecebat ad aperiendum insulas Tarsis, Ofir, Ciapangu & Boicat, qui inquam archigubernius obiter fuerit hoc intravil, in causa fuit, quia navium eius ductrix nafragium fecerit, procellosis obruta fluctibus, quo cursum sibi destinatus cum sociis infiniti continuare potuit, cumque his nantis, qui mari recepti adeant, Iunum aperire aggressus est tandem sine magno, sive periculo suorumque labore intollerabili, famis ac rerum omnium penuria, & nonnullis Indorum ante certior factus, regionem islam auro & argento, omnium opulettissimam esse, quo soletissimos dux & archigubernius motus ducere colonias cepit; prope flumen nonnullos arces ac propugnacula condere diligenter curavit, quibus Hispani inde facile tuerentur, & vii hostium Indorum inde propellent. lana tan fina como seda; y otras muy diversas animales. La gente de la dicha tierra es muy diferente entre si, porque los que llevan en las ablas de las sierras son blancos como montes, y los que están hacia la ribera del río son morenos. Algunos de ellos dicen que en los dichos sterrios ay hombres que tienen el rostro como de petro, y otros de la rodilla abajo como de Alabastro, y que estos son gentiles trabajadores y que cogen mucho mues, de que hacen pan, y vino del. Otras muchas cosas dicen de aquella tierra que no se pone aquí por no ser prodigios.

Nº 8. Esta tierra fu descubierta por Joachim Caboto Veneciano y Sebastian Cabot su hijo, anno del nacimiento de nuestro Salvador Jesu Christo de n. ccc. xxiij, a trente y cuatro de Junio por la mañana; a la qual pusieron nombre prima tierra vista, y a una isla grande, que está par de la dicha tierra, le pusieron nombre saint joan, por aver sido descubierta el mismo dia. La gente della andan vestidos de pieles de animados; usan en sus guerras arcos y flechas, lanzas, y dardos, y unas putras de palo, y hondas. Es tierra muy seca; ay en ella muchos osos blancos, y ciervos muy grandes como caballos, y otras muchas animales; y semejantemente ay pescado infinito, sollos, salmones, lenguados muy grandes de vara en largo, y otras muchas diversidades de pescados; y la mayor multitud de ellos se llaman los halcones, y en si mismo ay en la dicha tierra halcones, pintores como ciervos, aguilillas, perdices, perdillas, y otras muchas aves de diversos maneras.

Nº 9. En esta isla de Islandia ay gran distina multitud de pescado; comiendo en el invierno, y secando con el grande frío que hace allí porque esta dicha isla está dentro del circulo Artico; y en el verano van allí de muchas partes, y merecan del dicho pescado así sea a trinque de burrino y cervas, y este dicho pescado es tan seco y duro que para comérlo lo batén con unos martillos de hierro encima de unas piedras duras como acero, y después le ponen a remojar un dia o dos, y así lo comen después, cuidado con multeza de vacas. Y en toda esta mar setentrional ay grandissima multitud de pescado, y muchos de ellos grandes y de monstruosa forma; ay visto los que en este mar navegan morenas grandissimas, que parecen grandes serpientes, y acometer a los navíos para comérse los navegantes. Los naturales de la dicha isla la mayor parte de ellos hacen sus casas debajo de tierra, y las paredes de tejas de pescados; no tienen lejana sativa, ni mosquitos, arbolezitos y destos muy pocos, y en pocos lugares. Mas el Proveedor de todas las cosas lo provee cada anno, que le viene por la mar, de lozana las partes setentrionales de la dicha isla, muy grandissima multitud de arbustos de diversas suertes y grandezas, como cosa de naufragio, transportados de furiosos vientos septentrionales a la costa de la dicha isla; y de los Nº 14. El Rey destu provincia y Reyno de Bengala es muy poderoso señor y tiene debaxo de su señorria muchas ciudades, y muy grandes y de mucho trato. Ay en este provincia y Reyno mucha canela, clavo, gengibre, piñonera, sandalos, lacar y seda en mucha cantidad. Tienen por costumbre en este Reyno y provincia, despues que mueren, de quemar los cuerpos; y quando el marido muere primero que la muger, quemase la muger biva con el marido, diciendo que va á gozar con el en el otro mundo; y es desta manera; que muriendo el marido la muger haze un gran combite y se viste de los mas ricos vestidos que tiene; al qual combite vienen todos sus parentes y del marido, y despues de aver comido, ya ella con toda la gente á un lugar donde está hecho un grandissimo fuego, contandy baylando hasta llegar al dicho fuego; y despues hechan el cuerpo muerto del marido dentro, y luego ella se despide de sus parentes y amigos, y se lanza en el fuego; y aquella que mas liberalmente se hecha en el fuego, aquella da honra a su linage. Mas ya esta costumbre no se usa como solia, despues que los portugueses tractaron con ellos, y le dieron á entender que Dios nuestro señor no era servido de tal cosa.

Nº 15. El gran Can, Imperador de los Tartaros es muy grandissimo señor y muy poderoso: entitulase Rey de los Reyes y Señor de los señores; tiene por costumbre de dar á sus Varones vestidos treze veces en el anno, en treze grandissimas fiestas que haze en cada un anno, y estas vestiduras son de mayor o menor valor, segun la calidad de las personas á quien se da; y á cada uno dan una cinta, y calzas, sombrero guarnescido de oro y perlas y piedras preciosas, segun la grandeza de las personas; y estas vestiduras que da el dicho gran Can en cada un anno son cxi. m; y esto haze por egrandescer y magnificar sus fiestas. Y quando muere llevando á enterrar á un morte que se dice Alcay, donde se entierran los gran Canes, Imperadores de los Tartaros; y los que lo llevan á enterrar matan á todos los que hallan, diciendoles; id á servir á nuestro señor en el otro mundo; y assi mismo matan todos sus envíados, camelo y aziemillas que tienen, creyendo que van á servir á su señor. Quando murió Mongui Can, Imperador de los Tartaros, fueron muertos trecientos mill hombres, que encontraron en el camino aquellos que lo llevavan á enterrar, segun dice Marco Polo en su libro, capítulo xiiii. Pogio Florentino, Secretario del Papa Eugenio quarto, acerca del fin de su segundo libro, que escribió de la variaacion y mudanza de la fortuna, hace mucho para la confirmation de lo que el dicho Marco Polo escribió en su libro.

Nº 16. Diversas opiniones ay qual sea la Trapovana, despues que los Espanoles y Portugueses navegaron el mar Indico; de la manera que el Ptolemeo la tiene situada, por grados de longitud y latitud, creo que á todos sea notorio. Algunos de los modernos descubridores tienen que la isla de Ceislán es la Trapovana; otros tienen que es la isla de Camatra. Plinio escribe de la Trapovana en su sexto libro, capitulo xxij, y dice que fue un tiempo que tuvieron opinion que la Trapovana fuese otro mundo, y que se llamava Antichton; y que Alejandro fue el primero que nos dió noticia aquella ser isla; y que Oneschorito, admirante de su armada [dijo] que en la dicha isla de Trapovana ay mayores elephantes y mas belicosos que en la India; y que Magasaece pone su longura siete mill estados, y de anchura cinco mill; que no ay en ella ciudad cercada, salvo sete cientos villages; y que en el principio de Claudio vinieron embaxadores de la dicha isla á Roma. Desta manera; el liberto Danio Plocamio, el qual avia mercado de la republica la renta del mar vermejo, y navegando al rededor de Arabia, fue dal viento setentrional transportado de manera, que al quintodecimo dia entró en un puerto de la dicha isla, el qual se dezia Hippo; y que fue del Rey liberalissimamente recibido y tractado. Y que, despues de aver estado en la dicha isla seis meses, aprendió la lengua, y que un dia hablando con el Rey, le dixo, que los Romanos y su Imperador eran de inaudita justicia, y que el Rey mirando la moneda, que el dicho liberto tenia, eran de eygal peso, aunque las ymagines demonstravan ser de diversos Imperadores, movido desto, embió embaxadores á Roma; el primero fue Baebia, á conciliar amicita con Claudio. De los cuales embaxadores entendió que en la dicha isla avia eccecc ciudades, y que estos dichos embaxadores se maravillaron de ver en este nuestro cielo Setentrion y las Vergiliias, como cosa nueva y á ellos incognita; y que dizian que en la dicha isla no veian la luna sobre la tierra, si no del octavo dia fasta el quinto decimo; y maximamente se maravillavan que las sombras xyan hacia el nuestro cielo y no hacia el suyo, y que el sol saliese á la diestra y se pusiese á la sinistra; por las quales susodichas razones parecese, que en la dicha isla, donde el dicho liberto aportó, no parece la estrella de Norte, la qual parece en la Trapovana isla. Por donde se podria decir, atento de donde se partió el dicho liberto Danio Proclamio, y al camino que podria hacer con furioso viento setentrional, que la isla, donde el apartó, fue la isla de Sant Lorenzo y no la Trapovana. Y que el Rey de la dicha isla es elegido, por el comun, hombre viejo y clemente y sin hijos; y si despues de elegido engendrase alguno, luego lo descomponen; y quando lo eligen, le dan treynta consejeros; y que el dicho Rey no pueda condenar á nadie, si la mayor parte de los dichos sus treynta consejeros no sean de consentimiento con el; y que despues, el dicho condenado puede apelar para el pueblo, el qual luego eligen setenta Juezes, los cuales miran su causa; y si hallan que fue mal sentenciado, dantlo por libre, y aquellos consejeros, que fueron en condenarlo, quedan privados de sus oficios y por infames para siempre jamas.

Nº 47. Sebastianus Cabotus Dux & archiguberanus S. c. c. m. domini Caroli Imperatoris, hujus nominis quinti, & Regis Hispanie domini nostri, summam mihi manum imposuit, & ad formam hanc protrahebat plana figura me delinavit, anno ad orbem redemptum, nativitatem Domini nostri Iesu Christi 1514, qui me juxta gradnum longitudinem ac latitudinem, ventornique situm, cum docte tum fideliiter, navigatore Chartae instar descripsit, Geographi Ptolomei auctoritatem, peritiorumque omnium neoteriorum loca clausa nobis aperientium tam Hispanorum quam Lusitanorum fidem sequuntur, neconon ex usu ac industria longae navigationis integerrimi viri Joannis Caboti natione Veneti, atque Sebastiani astrorum peritia navigandis arte omnium doctissimi, ejus filii auctoris que mei, qui aliquantum orbis partem du nostratibus clausam apererunt, qua profiter me fida doctissimaque magistris, et Hydrographica charta intus, quocumque est animus mare metiri poteris, eos multe variationem observans, qua ad Arctum vertitur. Cuius rei argumentum est. Sic ex sacro promontorio nantem solvens, Celicum promontorium petitus, nam licet protinus ad Arctum dirigere iubet, Hydrographica acu, quo census recto tramte Finis terre appuleris, promontorio, iter tamen quod vere navis tua peregerat, non recta ad Arctum, sed Arctum versus od quartam Cecie fuit. Navigatoria siquidem acus & si recta linea ē Sacro promontorio ad oram Finis terre earum demonstrat, ad Arctum nihilque tamen tanum quartu parte ab Arcto ad Ceciam distare certum est. Quapropter cum navi aeu nautica ad Arctum regere posseris, erit navigatio tua per quartam Septentrionis Ceciam versus. Eandem navi-al Sudeste, quarta del Sur; y así por consiguiente haras en toda otra parte deste universo, mirando la variazion que te haze la dicha aguja de marear con la estrella del Norte. Porque la dicha aguja no se bueve ny está en todo lugar al Norte, como el comun vulgo piensa; porque la piedra yman, segun paresce, no tiene virtud para hazerla buever al Norte en todo lugar, mas, segun por experientia se ve y alcança, tiene solamente virtud de hazerla estar stabil y fixa en un lugar, por donde a de monstrar forzado por linea recta por qualquier viento que fueres, y no por circular, y aessa causa haze la dicha variazion. Que si le dicha aguja se bueviese al Norte, cada y quando y en todo lugar, no haria variazion ninguna porque iria por linea circular, porque siempre estarias en un paralelo, qual no puede ser yeudo por linea recta en un redondo. Y as de notar que quanto mas te apartares del meridiano que la aguja te está derechamente al Norte, hacia el Occidente o hacia el Oriente, tanto mas se apartará tu aguja de Norte, es á saber la flor de lis della, la qual está senllada por el Norte; por donde paresce claramente que la dicha aguja muestra por linea recta y no por circular; y as de saber que el meridiano donde la flor de lis del aguja está derechamente al Norte es obra de treynta y cinco legnas de la isla de Flores, la ultima isla de los Angores hacia el occidente, segun la opinion de algunos expertos, por la mucha experieucia que dello tienen, á causa de la quotidiana navelgacion que hacen al Occidente á las Indias del mar Oceano. El dicho Sebastian Caboto navegando hacia el occidente se halló en parte donde el Nordeste quarta del Norte le estava derechamente al Norte; por las cuales susodichas experienças, paresce claramente ser verdad los defectos y variazion que la dicha aguja de marear haze con la estrella del Norte.

gationis considerationem observaberis, cum e Salmedina brevi scopulosoque mari, in exitu portus sancti Linea ad Nagae oram Tenerife Insulae navigare decreveris, tunc siquidem licet ad Liben seu Aphrienum navem regere studeas Hydrographicae charte observatione, rectus tamen itineris cursus nauticas aeras probabiliori fide per Aphrienum quartam & co amplius Anstrum versus procul dubio erit, Salmedina nempe ad Nagam navigatio quarta longe ministrum Hydrographicae charta indicat, nautica aera demonstrat. Unde pro comperto habebis, cum ē Sacro promotorio oram solvens Septentriones petiturus, quod iter tunc erit per quartam Arcti Cæciam versus. Eadem modo si ē Salmedina ad Nagam Tenerife Insula adnavigaveris ad Aphrienum, navis tuae cursus erit per quartam Austrum. Eadem ratione sigillatim uti poteris in quibus hujus discretionis parte aera magnetæ fricata variationem observavus, qua cum Arcti sidere varie operatur, quippe que non assidue neque ex omnibus locis Septentrionem expetat (uti plebs inducta censes) cum Magne lapis illi (ut patet) nullam habet vim dirigendi navigatorum acutum ex omni parte ad Arctum, quin potius (ut experientia constat) cabem volubilem immotum reddere recta linea, non autem circulari ad quenvis ventorum non arcto proximum, & hac de causa aera nautica usque variatur, nam si eadem aera assiduè ex omnibus locis verteretur ad Arctum, nulla fieret ejus variatione, utpote que per circularem lineam semper viam demonstraret, ex quo sequeretur, eundem aequidistantem seu parallelium frequentare, quod nullo modo continget recta linea circularem formam admetti. Porro unum hoc admotabis, candide lector, quo magis ad Solem ortum vel occasum à linea meridiani secos, ubi aera nautica depictum Lillum ad Arctum directe ostendit, eo magis ab Arcto te distare pro comperto habebis, unde satis liquet, acum nauticam recte linea non autem circulari viam demonstrare. Ad rotandum igitur est, quod linea meridiani s. quoniam nautica aera lillum rectissime & pretiosissime ostendit, distat à Floria Insula triginta parsangis, que quidem ultima accipitrum Insula est occidentem versus, juxta peritissimum omnium navium gubernatorum consensum, opinionemque, nonon ex eorum solerti experientia, quam diutina assidue navigatione sue iure profitentur, siquidem Atlanticum mare & Indianum indies remetiri assuecent. Ad huc Sebastianus Cabotus in eius auctor, occidentalem Oceanum adnavigans, ad aquor quoddam devenit & plagam, ubi quarta parte Septentrionum iuxta Cæciam ventus aera navigatoris Lillum illi rectissime Arctum ostenderet, quibus de causis & rationibus & tuitissima navigandi experientia apertissime constat defectus & variationes aerae nauticae cerebro fieri cum Arcti observatione.

Y de Oriente navegó por el mar Iudeo hacia Septentrio, hasta tener el mar Caspio al Sur, la arnuada de Macedonia, en el tiempo que Seleucio y Antiocho reynavan; y mandaron que aquella region se llamasen Seleuchida y Antiochida. Y al Septentrio del mar Caspio muchas partes se au navegado; de manera que poco queda que todo el mar Septentrional no le ayan navegado. Plinio escriva en el su noveno libro, capitulo veinte y cinco, de un pescado que se dice Nichio, el qual dice ser como redondo y que pegandose á una nao la tiene aunque haya á la vela. Et Petrarca, en el prologo del segundo libro de prospera y adversa fortuna, dice que el echenis o remora, pez de grandeza de medio pie detiene una nao aunque sea muy grande y que los bientos y ondas y remos y velas le ayden á yr; el solo fuerza la fuerza de los elementos y hombres, no con otra obra ninguna, sino pegandose á las tablas del navio, ni con otra fuerza alguna, si no con sola su naturaleza; el qual pece es como limon o cieno placiendolo [y sacandolo] del agua pierde la fuerza. ## ENGLISH TRANSLATION OF THE LEGENDS.

FIRST TABLE.

Of the Admiral.

N° 1. The admiral Don Cristoval Colon, a Genoese by birth, offered to their Catholie Majesties of glorious memory to discver the i-lands and mainland of the Indies,<sup>1</sup> by the west, provided they gave him for this purpose a sufficient fleet and favor;<sup>2</sup> and having it, and having fitted out three caravels in the year 1492, he proceeded to discover them, and from that time on many other persons have continued the said discovery, as is shown by the present desription.

N° 2. In the island Espaniola there is much virgin gold and very fine lapis-lazuli [blue copper ore?] and much sugar and cassia fistula, and an infinite number of cattle of all kinds.<sup>4</sup> The swine of this island they give to the sick, as here in our parts they give mutton. The said island contains many harbours,<sup>5</sup> and very good ones, and the chief one of them is the city of Santo Domingo, which is a very good city and of much trade, and all the others are places built and settled by the Spaniards; and in the island of Cuba and of San Juan, and in all the other islands, and on the mainland virgin gold is found;<sup>6</sup> and in the city of Santo Domingo his Majesty has his royal chaneery, and in all the other towns<sup>7</sup> and provinces governors and rulers who govern and rule them<sup>8</sup> with much justice; and every day are discovered<sup>9</sup> new lands and provinces, very rich, by means of which our Holy Catholie Faith is, and will be, much increased, and these kingdoms of Castile have become great with much glorious fame and riches.

N° 3. This mainland which the Spaniards named New Spain, the most illustrious gentleman, Don Fernando Cortez, marquis del Valle de Guaxacon, conquered. There are, in this land provinces and cities innumerable; the chief of them is the city of Mexieo,<sup>10</sup> which contains more than fifty thousand inhabitants; it is in a salt lake which extends over forty leagues. There is in the said city, and in all the other provinces, much gold, virgin silver, and all kinds of precious stones; and there is produced in the said land and provinces much very good silk, and cotton, alum, orchil, dyewood, cochineal, and saffron, and sugar,<sup>11</sup> of all the aforesaid great quantities, with which many ships come loaded to these kingdoms of Spain.<sup>12</sup> The natives of this land are very expert in all that relates to trade; instead of coins, they make use of certain kernels, split in halves, which they call cacao, or cacanghnate, a barbarous expression.<sup>13</sup> They have much wheat and barley, and many other grains, and vines, and many fruits of different kinds. It is a land of many animals, deer, mountain boars, lions, leopards, tigers, and much other game, both birds and land animals. It is a people<sup>14</sup> very skilful in moulding any object after nature, and in painting pictures.

The women usually adorn themselves with precious stones and valuable pearls. These Indians use a certain kind of paper, on which they draw what they wish to express with figures [pictures] instead of letters. They never had peace among themselves; on the contrary, some persecuted others in continuous fights in which the prisoners on either side were sacrificed by their enemies to their gods, and their dead bodies were given to the army, as public banquets. They were idolators, and adored whatever took their fancy; they were very fond of eating human flesh, whereas now they have laid aside these fierce and cruel customs, and have clad themselves in Jesus Christ, believing heartily in our holy evangelical faith, and obeying our most holy mother<sup>2</sup> church and its most holy precepts.

Nº 1. This strait of All Saints was discovered by Hernando de Magallanes, captain of an expedition which his Sacred Cesarean Catholic Majesty, the emperor and king Don Carlos, our lord, ordered to be made to discover the Maluco islands. There are in this strait men of such great stature that they seem giants; it is a very desolate land,<sup>3</sup> and they dress themselves in the skins of animals.<sup>4</sup>

Nº 5. These islands of Maluco<sup>5</sup> were discovered by Fernando de Magallanes, commander off<sup>6</sup> an expedition which his<sup>7</sup> Majesty ordered to be made to discover the<sup>8</sup> said islands, and by Juan Sebastian del Cano;<sup>9</sup> that is to say, the said Fernando de Magallanes discovered the strait of All Saints, which<sup>10</sup> is in 52° degrees towards the Antarctic pole; and<sup>11</sup> after having passed the said strait, [and not] without very great labor and danger, he continued his journey towards the said islands; after many days he arrived at certain islands of which the southern one is situated in 12 degrees,<sup>12</sup> and because the people were so turbulent and because they stole from him the beat of one of his ships, they gave it the name of the Isle of Thieves (de los Ladrones); and thence continuing his journey, as has been said, they discovered an island, which they called la Agnada, because they took in water there; and from thence on they discovered another, which is called Bumham, and Accilani, and another, which is called Cubi, in which island died the said Captain Hernando de Magallanes, in a skirmish which took place with the natives thereof, and the survivors of the said expedition chose Juan Sebastian del Cano as commander of it, who afterwards discovered the island of Bendanao, in which there is much virgin gold, and very fine cinnamon; and in the same way he discovered the island of Poloan, and that of Brunay, and that of Gilolo, and the island of Tidore, and that of Terenati, and Motil, and many others in which there is much gold, and cloves, and nutmeg, and other kinds of spices and drugs. The said Sebastian del Cano landed two ships which<sup>13</sup> remained to him out of five which they took with them, with cloves in the said island of Tidore, for in it, and in the said island of Terenati, the said cloves are said to grow, and not in any other, and in the same way he took much cinnamon and nutmeg;<sup>14</sup> and coming on through the Indian Ocean,<sup>15</sup> in the direction of the Cape of Good Hope, one ship was forced<sup>16</sup> to put back and return to the said island of Tidore, from which it had set out, on account of the great amount of water which it was making, and the said

Captain Juan Sebastian del Canno with his ship, called St. Mary o' Victory (Santa Maria de la Victoria), came to these kingdoms of Castile, to the court of Seville, in the year 1522, by the Cape of Good Hope; so that it clearly appears that the said Juan Sebastian del Canno sailed round the whole universe,<sup>1</sup> because he proceeded only towards the West, although not on one parallel, through the East to the place in the West whence he set out.

Nº 6. These provisions were discovered<sup>2</sup> by the honored and valiant gentleman,<sup>3</sup> Francisco Pizarro, who<sup>4</sup> was governor of them during his life; in which there is infinite gold and virgin silver and mines of very fine emeralds. The bread which they have they make of<sup>5</sup> maize, and the wine likewise; they have much wheat and other grain. It is a warlike race; they use in their wars bows and slings and lances; their arms are of gold and silver. There are in the said provinces certain sheep of the form of small camels; they have very fine wool. They are an idolatrous people, and of very subtle mind;<sup>6</sup> and on all the sea-coast, and for more than twenty miles inland it never rains. It is a very healthy land. The Christians have made many settlements in it, and continually keep increasing them.

Nº 7. The Indians call this great river the river Hurmai, in Spanish the river of silver (Rio de la Plata). They take this name from the river Parana. Juan Diaz de Solis, pilot-major of their<sup>8</sup> Catholic Majesties<sup>9</sup> of glorious memory, discovered it, and he explored it as far as an island, to which the said Juan Diaz gave the name of the island, of Martin Gareia, because in it he buried a sailor who was called Martin Garcia, which said island is about thirty leagues above the mouth of this river and the said discovery cost him very dear, for the Indians of the said land slew him and ate him; and after many years had gone by it was again discovered by Sebastian Cabot, Captain and Pilot-major<sup>10</sup> of his Sacred Cesarean Catholic Majesty the Emperor Don Carlos Fifth of the name, and king, our lord, who was commander of an expedition which his Majesty ordered should be made to discover Tarsis and Ophir<sup>11</sup> and Oriental Cathay; which said Captain Sebastian Cabot came to this river by chance, for the commander's ship, in which he was, was lost,<sup>12</sup> and seeing that he could not continue his said voyage, he determined to explore with the people he had with him the said river, by reason of the very great account which the Indians of the land gave him of the very great wealth in gold and silver which there was in the land, and not without very great labor and hunger, and dangers both of his own person and of those who were with him.<sup>13</sup> And<sup>14</sup> the said Captain endeavoured to make near the said river certain settlements of the people whom he brought from Spain.<sup>15</sup> This river is larger than any that is known up to the present time. Its breadth at the mouth where it enters the sea is thirty-five<sup>16</sup> leagues, and three hundred leagues above the said mouth it is two leagues in breadth. The cause of its being so great and mighty is that there run into it many other and mighty rivers. It is a river infinitely full of fish and of the best there is in the world. The people, on arriving in that land, wished to learn if it were fertile and fit to plough and raise bread; and they planted in the mouth of September fifty-two grains of wheat,—for there was no more in the ships,—and they gathered soon in the month of December fifty-two thousand grains of wheat; and this same fertility was found in all the other seeds.<sup>1</sup> Those who live in that land say that not far from there, in the country inland, there are certain great mountain-ranges from which they take infinite gold, and further on in the same mountains they take infinite silver. There are in this land certain sheep large as ordinary asses, of the shape of camels, except that the wool they bear is fine as silk, and other animals of different kinds. The people of the country differ very much; for those who live on the slopes of the mountains are white like us, and those who are near the banks of the river are dark. Some say that in the said mountains there are men who have faces like dogs, and others are from the knee down like ostriches, and that these are great workers, and that they raise much maize, of which they make bread and wine. Many other things they say of that land, which are not put down here lest they be tedious.<sup>2</sup>

N° 8. This land was discovered by Juan Cabot, a Venetian, and by Sebastian Cabot, his son, in the year of the birth of our Saviour Jesus Christ 1494, on the 24th of June,<sup>3</sup> in the morning, to which they gave the name of "first land seen" (prima tierra vista); and to a large island which is situated along the said land they gave the name San Juan, because it had been discovered the same day.<sup>4</sup> The people of it are dressed in the skins of animals. They use in their wars bows and arrows, lances and darts, and certain clubs of wood, and slings. It is a very sterile land. There are in it many<sup>5</sup> white bears, and very large stags like horses, and many other animals; and likewise there is infinite fish,—sturgeons, salmon, very large soles a yard in length, and many other kinds of fish,—and the greatest quantity of them is called (baccalaos) codfish;<sup>6</sup> and likewise there are in the same land hawks black as crows, eagles, partridges,<sup>7</sup> linnells, and many other kinds of birds of different species.

N° 9. In this same island of Iceland (Islanda) there is a great quantity of fish. They take it in winter, and dry it by means of the very great cold which there is there, because this said island is within the Arctic circle, and in summer men<sup>8</sup> go there from many parts and barter for this fish, thus dried, in exchange for meal and beer; and this said fish is so dry and hard, that to eat it they beat it with certain hammers of iron on certain stones hard as marble, and then they put it to soak a day or two, and thus they eat it, stewed with butter. And in all this Northern sea there is a very great quantity of fish, and many of them large and of monstrous shape; those who sail in these seas have seen very large lumpreys, which resemble great serpents and [have seen them] attack ships, in order to eat the sailors. The natives of the said island most of them build their houses underground, and the walls of fish-bones. They have no wood, except some extremely small trees, and of these very few and in few places; but the Provider of all things provides every year that there comes to them by sea, on the northern parts of the said island, a very great quantity of trees of different kinds and sizes, as driftwood, borne by furious north winds to the coast of the said island, with which the natives provide themselves, and make use of it for all that is useful to them. And they say that often they hear spirits speak and call each other by name, and take the form of living persons, and tell them who they are; and in certain parts of the said island there rise up<sup>1</sup> certain very dreadful fires, and other wonders<sup>2</sup> the natives of the said islands say there are in it.<sup>3</sup>

1. This extraordinary statement as to the productiveness of a grain of wheat in the country of the La Plata is repeated in the Latin version of this section. It is probably an inadvertence. Eden, who copied this section from Cabot's map, in the free English version, into his "Decades of the New World," London, 1555, pp. 317-319, corrects the error, but on what authority, except his own knowledge of natural history, we do not know. He makes the text read thus: "Taking, therefore, fifty grains of wheat and committing the same to the earth in the month of September they gathered thereof two thous<sup>and</sup> and fifty at December next following." Eden then proceeds: "Wherein some being deceived and mistaking the thing, have written in the stead of two thousand and fifty, fifty thousand and two."—Note by Mr. Deane.

N° 10. The men who dwell in this region are savages,<sup>4</sup> they are destitute of bread and wine, they tame deer and ride upon them, and they fight with another people which is situated further to the north, and which they call the Nocturnal people, for they go about in the night and perform their business as here [we do] in the day, and this because the days there from the 14th of September to the 10th of March are so short that there is not an hour of light. They are a very wicked people, quarrelsome, they rob all those who pass [through their country] so that no ship dares to ride at anchor near the coast for fear of these night people, because they slay and rob all who fall into their hands; and a little beyond these night people toward the southeast they say there are certain monsters which have bodies like those of human beings except the head, which is like that of a pig, and that they understand one another, grunting like pigs.

SECOND TABLE.

N° 11. Those who inhabit this region, some adore the sun, others the first thing they see in the morning, others adore a piece of colored cloth which they place on a lance, and thus each worship what he prefers: they are under the sway of the great Khan, emperor of the Tartars.

N° 12. Here there are monsters like unto men who have ears so large that they cover the whole body, and they say that farther on towards the East there are certain men who have no joints whatever at the knees nor in the feet: they are under the sway of the grand Khan. In the province of Balor, which is fifty days' journey in extent, there are wild men: they live in the mountains and forests.

N° 13. Here dwells that mighty king of Azimba and Auxana whom some call Prester John, to whom sixty kings yield obedience; he is very wealthy in all riches,<sup>5</sup> and there is no record that he was ever defeated in any battle, but often as he came back with glorious victory from the south from the Throglydyte people, a race naked and black, which people extends as far as the Cape of Good Hope. Among which people there is a race which does not speak but they understand each other by whistling; and this is not Prester John,<sup>6</sup> because Prester John had his empire in eastern and southern India until Genghis Khan, first king of the Tartars, defeated and overcame him in a very cruel battle, in which he died and the said Genghis took from him all his kingdoms and lordships, and allowed the Christians to live in their own faith, and gave them a Christian king to rule and govern them, which king was called George, and from that time till now all the kings who succeed him are called George, as Marco Polo relates more at large in the 42nd and 48th chapters of his book.<sup>7</sup>

N° 14. The king of this province and Kingdom of Bengal is a very mighty lord, and has under his rule many cities, very large and of great trade.<sup>8</sup> There is in this kingdom and province much cinnamon, cloves, ginger, pepper, sandalwood, lacquer, and silk in great quantities. They are wont<sup>9</sup> in this province and kingdom to burn bodies after death, and when the husband dies before the wife, the wife burns herself alive with her husband, saying that she is going to be happy with him in the other world, and it is done in this way, that, the husband dying, the wife gives a great entertainment and dresses herself in the richest garments she has, to which entertainment come all her relatives and those of her husband, and after having eaten, she goes with all the people to a place where a very great fire has been built, singing and dancing until she reaches the said fire, and then they throw in the dead body of the husband, and at once she bids farewell to her relatives and friends and leaps into the fire, and she who most nobly throws herself into the fire brings most honor upon her family, but even now this custom is not observed as it used to be, since the Portuguese have traded with them and given them to understand that Our Lord God is not served by such a practice.

N° 15. The grand Khan of the Tartars is a very great lord and very mighty, he is called King of Kings and Lord of Lords; he is wont to give to his liegemen garments thirteen times a year, at thirteen very great feasts which he holds each year; and these garments are of greater or less value according to the quality of the person to whom they are given, and to each one is given a belt and leggings, a hat adorned with gold and pearls and precious stones according to the greatness of the personage, and these garments which the said grand Khan gives each year are 156,000; and this he does to give greatness and magnificence to his feasts, and when he dies they bear him to be buried in a mountain which is called Aleav, where are buried the grand Khans, Emperors of the Tartars, and those who bear him to burial slay all those they find, saying to them go and serve our master in the other world; and in the same way they slay all his horses, camels, and baggage mules which they have, thinking that they will go to serve their lord. When Mongai Klein, Emperor of the Tartars, died, there were slain three hundred thousand men, whom those who bore him to burial met on the way as Marco Polo says in his book, chapter 42.<sup>2</sup> Poggio the Florentine, secretary of Pope Eugenius IV, towards the end of his second book, which he wrote on the variation and changes of Fortune, does much to confirm what the said Marco Polo wrote in his book.

N° 16. There are various opinions as to what is Trapovana,<sup>3</sup> since the Spaniards and Portuguese have navigated the Indian Ocean. How Ptolomy places it in degrees of latitude and longitude I think is well known to all. Some modern explorers hold that the island of Ceylon is Trapovana; others hold that it is the island of Sumatra.<sup>4</sup> Pliny writes of Trapovane in his sixth book, chapter 22, and says there was a time when the opinion was had that Trapovana was another world, and that it was called Antichiton, and that Alexander was the first to inform us that it was an island, and that Onesicritus, admiral of his fleet, [says] that in the said island of Trapovana there are larger and more warlike elephants than in India, and that Magascene gives as its length seven thousand stadia, and as its width five thousand; that there is no walled city in it, but seven hundred villages, and that in Claudius' reign<sup>5</sup> ambassadors came from the said island to Rome. In this way the freedman Damius Plocanius, who had bought of the repudie<sup>6</sup> the taxes of the Red Sea and sailing around Arabia was carried by the north wind in such a way that on the fifteenth day he entered a port of the said island called Hippus,<sup>7</sup> and was very generously received and treated by the king, and that one day having remained in the said island six months he learned the language, and that one day talking with the king he told him that the Romans and their Emperor were incredibly just, and that the king, seeing that the coins which the said freedman had were of equal weight although the stamp showed that they were of different emperors, moved by this, sent ambassadors to Rome, the chief of whom was Rachia, to make friendship with Claudius, from which ambassadors he heard that in the said island there were five hundred cities, and that the said ambassadors were astonished to see in these heavens of ours the north star and the Pleiades as something new and to them unknown, and that they said that in the said island they only saw the moon above the earth from the eighth day to the fifteenth, and they were especially astonished that shadows turned<sup>1</sup> towards our sky and not<sup>2</sup> towards theirs, and that the sun rose on the right and set on the left, from which aforesaid reasons it seems that in the said island where the said freedman made harbour the north star is not seen, which is seen in the island Trpovana, whence it might be said, considering whence the said freedman Damus Proclamius started and the course he might have made with a raging north wind,<sup>3</sup> that the island where he made harbour was the island of San Lorenzo and not Trapubana. And that as king of the said island an old and mild man without children<sup>4</sup> is usually elected, and if after being elected he should beget any, at once they depose him; and when they elect him they give him thirty counsellors; and that the said king can condemn no one if the majority of his said thirty counsellors are not agreed with him, and that afterwards the said condemned man can appeal to the people, which therenpon selects seventy judges, who examine his case, and if they find that he was wrongly sentenced they set him free, and those counsellors who agreed in condemning him are deprived of their offices and are held infamous forever after.

Inscription of the author with certain reasons for the variation which the needle of the compass makes with the north star.

N° 17. Sebastian Cabot, captain and pilot-major of his Sacred Cesarean Catholic Majesty, the Emperor Don Carlos, fifth of the name, and King<sup>1</sup> our lord, made<sup>5</sup> this figure projected on a plane in the year of the birth of our Saviour Jesus Christ 1541, drawn by degrees of latitude and longitude, with its winds,<sup>6</sup> as a navigating chart, imitating in part Ptolemy<sup>7</sup> and in part the modern discoveries both Spanish and Portuguese, and<sup>8</sup> partly discovered by his father and partly by himself, by which you may navigate as by a navigating chart, bearing in mind the variation which the needle of the compass makes with the north star. For example, you wish to set out from Cape St. Vincent in order to make Cape Finisterre; you will give orders to steer your ship to the north according to the needle of the compass, and you will strike within the said cape, but your real course, which your ship made, was to the north, quarter northeast because your compass-needle northeasts you a quarter at the said Cape c<sup>o</sup> St. Vineent, so that commanding your ship to be steered north by the compass-needle your course will be north, quarter northeast; and in the same way sailing from Salmedina, which is a shoal as you go out of Sun Lucar de Barrameda, to go to the point of Naga on the island of Teneriffe you will give orders to steer southwest by the needle and you will make the said point of Naga because it is situated on the navigating chart, but your course will not be to the southwest inasmuch as your compass-needle northeasts you a wide quarter point at Salmedina, but your course will be southwest a wide quarter south; so that you may say that sailing from St. Vincent to the north your course will be north, quarter northeast, and sailing from Salmedina to the southwest your course will be southwest, quarter south, and so consequently you will do in every other part of this universe, watching the variation which the said needle of the compass makes with the north star, for the said needle does not turn or stay fixed to the north in every place, as the vulgar think, since the magnet-stone, as it appears, has not the power to make it turn to the north in every place, but, as is seen and acquired by experience, it has only the power to make it remain stable and fixed in one place, therefore it must point necessarily in a straight line whatever wind you may have, and not in a curved line, and this cause brings about the said variation; for if the needle were to turn to the north always and in every place, there would be no variation, for then it would follow a curved line, because you would always be on one parallel, which cannot be when you go in a straight line on a sphere; and you must notice that the further you move from the meridion on which the needle points directly north, towards the west or east, so much the more will your compass move from the north, that is, from the flower-de-luce<sup>1</sup> at which marks the north; wherefore it clearly appears that the said needle points along a straight line and not a curved line; and you must know that the meridion where the flower-de-luce of the needle points directly north is about thirty five leagues from Flores, the last named of the Azores towards the west, according to the opinion of certain experts, because of the great experience which they have of this, on account of the daily navigation which is made toward the West, to the Indies of the Ocean. The said Sebastian Cabot,<sup>2</sup> sailing towards the west, found himself in a place<sup>3</sup> where northeast quarter north [of the compass] stood directly north, on account of which observations aforesaid it appears clearly that defects and variations which the said needle of the compass makes with the north star really exist.

Pliny in the second book, chapter 19,<sup>4</sup> writes:

N° 18. That from Cadiz and the columns of Hercules, sailing around Spain and Gaul, the whole west was sailed over. The greater part of the northern ocean was sailed over in the time of Augustus, passing by all Germany as far as the Cimbrian Cape, and thence as far as Sibylia. And from the East the fleet of Macedonia sailed along the Indian Ocean towards the north until the Caspian Sea was to the south of them, in the time that Seleucus and Antiochus reigned, and they ordered that that region should be called Seleuchida and Antiochida. And to the north of the Caspian many parts have been sailed over, so that the northern sea has been nearly all sailed over; and he likewise says, in the same chapter, that Cornelius Nepos writes that to Quintus Metellus Celer, who had been consul with Afranius, and who was then pro-consul in Gaul, there were sent certain Indians by the king of the Suevi, who, starting from the Indian Ocean, had without mischance been carried to Germany.

N° 19.<sup>5</sup> In these Rocas islands there are birds of such size (as they say) and strength that they take up an ox and bear it in their flight<sup>6</sup> in order to eat it, and still more than say<sup>7</sup> that they take a vessel, no matter how great it may be, and raise it to a great height and then let it drop, and they eat the men. Petrarch likewise says so in his book of Prosperous and Adverse Fortune.

N° 20. There are in the island of the people of Calenguan lions, tigers, panthers, deer, and many other different kinds of animals; likewise there are eagles, and white parrots who speak as clearly as human beings what is taught them, and many other countless birds of various kinds. The people of the island are idolaters; they eat human flesh.

In this figure, projected on a plane, are contained all the lands, islands, ports, rivers, waters, bays, which have been discovered to the present day, and their names, and who were the discoverers of them, as is made more manifest by the inscriptions [tables] of this said figure, with all the rest that was known before, and all that has been written by Ptolemy, such as provinces, regions, cities, mountains, rivers, climates, and parallels, according to their degrees of longitude and latitude, both of Europe and of Asia and Africa.

And you must note that the land is situated according to the variation which the needle of the compass makes with the north star, for the reason of which you may look in the second table of No. 17.

Of the fish which stops a ship.

Pliny writes in his ninth book, chapter twenty-five, of a fish which is called Nichio, which he describes as being round, and that attaching itself to a ship it hold it even though it be under sail. And Petrarch, in the preface to the second book of Prosperous and Adverse Fortune, says that the echenis or remora, a fish of half a foot in length, stops a ship, though it be very large, and winds and waves and oars and sails aid its course; it alone overpowers the power of the elements and of man, with no other agency save attaching itself to the planks of the ship, and with no other force than its own nature; which fish is like mud or mire, and taking it out of the water it loses its power. The aforesaid is found in very distinguished writings, which are not quoted here lest it take too much space.

Dans l'ile Espanola il y a beaucoup d'or vierge et de très beau lapis-lazuli (mineraie de cuivre bleu), ainsi que beaucoup de sucre, de cassia fistula et d'un nombre infini de bestiaux<sup>1</sup> de toutes sortes.<sup>2</sup> Les pourceaux de ces îles, on les donne aux malades, comme, chez nous, du mouton. Cette dite ile contient plusieurs havres,<sup>3</sup> et de très bons, et le principal d'entre eux est la ville de Saint-Domingue, qui est une très bonne ville et de beaucoup de commerce, et tous les autres endroits bâties et établis par les Espagnols; et dans l'ile de Cuba et de San-Duan, ainsi que dans toutes les autres villes et sur la terre ferme se trouvent de l'or vierge;<sup>4</sup> et dans la ville de Saint-Domingue Sa Majesté a créé l'erie royale, et dans toutes les autres villes<sup>5</sup> et provinces, des gouverneurs, et gouvernent, et les gouvernement et les régissent<sup>6</sup> avec une grande justice; et tous lez jours on découvre de nouvelles terres et provinces, très riches, par le moyen de jelles. Notre Sainte Foi Catholique est et sera considérablement augmentée, et ces royaumes de la castille sont devenus grands avec beaucoup de renom glorieux et de richesses.

N° 3. Cette terre ferme que les Espagnols ont nommée Nouvelle-Espagne, le Très Illustré gentilhomme Hernand Cortez, marquis del Valle de Guaxacon, l'a conquise. Il y a dans cette terre des provinces et des villes innombrables, dont la principale est la ville de Mexico<sup>7</sup> qui contient plus de cinqante mille habitants; elle est située sur un lac salé qui se développe sur plus de quarante lieues. Il y a dans la dite cité et dans toutes les autres provinces beaucoup d'or et d'argent vierge ainsi que toutes sortes de pierres précieuses; et il se produit dans les dites terres et provinces beaucoup de très bonne soie, du coton, de l'alun, de l'orseille, du bois de teinture, de la cochenille, du safran et du sucre,<sup>8</sup> et de grandes quantités de ces dites choses, dont plusieurs navires viennent chargés aux dits royaumes d'Espagne.<sup>9</sup> Les naturels de ce pays sont très experts en tout ce qui a rapport au commerce; en guise de monnaie ils emploient certaines graines fendues en deux qu'ils appellent cacao ou cacanghnate, expression barbare.<sup>10</sup> Ils ont beaucoup de blé et d'orge ainsi que beaucoup d'autres grains et de vignes, et nombre de fruits de différentes sortes. C'est une terre portant beaucoup d'animaux, les daims, les sangliers de montagne, les lions, les léopards, les tigres et beaucoup d'autre gibier, tant oiseaux qu'animaux. C'est un peuple<sup>11</sup> très habile à mouler tout objet d'après nature et à peindre des images. Les femmes se parent d'ordinaire de pierres précieuses et de perles de valeur. Ces indiens font usage d'une certaine sorte de papier, sur lequel ils peignent ce qu'ils veulent exprimer avec des figures (images) au lieu de lettres. Ils n'ont jamais eu la paix entre eux; au contraire, quelques-uns poursuivaient les autres dans des combats continuels dans lesquels les prisonniers de chaque côté étaient sacrifiés par leurs ennemis à leurs dieux, et les cadavres étaient donnés à l'urnée, comme banquets publics. Ils étaient idolâtres et adoraient tout ce qui leur venait à l'idée; ils étaient très friands de chair humaine, alors que, maintenant, ils ont abandonné ces féroces et cruelles coutumes et se sont revêtus de Jésus-Christ, croyant de tout leur cœur en notre sainte foi évangélique,<sup>12</sup> et obéissant à notre très-sainte mère<sup>13</sup> l'Eglise et à ses très saints préceptes.

N° 4. Ce détroit de Tous-les-Saints a été découvert par Hernando de Magallanes capitaine d'une expédition que Sa Sacré Majesté catholique césarienne,<sup>14</sup> l'empereur et roi, et Don Carlos, notre seigneur, avaient fait faire pour découvrir les îles Molinques. Il y a dans ce détroit des hommes de si haute stature qu'ils paraissent être des géants; c'est une terre très désolée,<sup>15</sup> et ils se couvrent de peaux de bêtes.<sup>16</sup>

N° 5. Ces îles Moluques<sup>1</sup> furent découvertes par Fernando de Magallanes, commandant d'une<sup>2</sup> expédition que Sa<sup>3</sup> Majesté commanda de faire pour découvrir les dites îles, et par Juan Sebastian del Cano;<sup>4</sup> c'est-à-dire que le dit Fernando de Magallanes découvrit le détroit de Tous-les-Saints, qui<sup>5</sup> est à 52 $\frac{1}{2}$  degrés dans la direction du pôle Antarctique, et après avoir franchi le dit détroit, (et nou) et sans grand travail et grand danger, il continua son voyage vers les dites îles; au bout d'un grand nombre de jours il arriva à de certaines îles dont celle du sud est située à 12 degrés<sup>6</sup> et, comme les habitants en étaient fort turbulents et qu'ils lui volèrent le canot de l'un de ses navires, ils lui donnèrent le nom d'île des Voleurs (de los Ladrones); et de là, continuant leur voyage, ainsi qu'il a été dit, ils découvrirent une île qu'ils appellèrent la Aguada, parce qu'ils y prirent de l'eau; et, de là, poursuivant leur route, ils découvrirent une autre qui s'appelle Bunham, et Aceilani, et une autre qui s'appelle Cuba, dans laquelle mourut le capitaine Hernando de Magallanes, dans une escarmouche qui eut lieu avec les naturels de droit, et les survivants de la dite expédition choisirent Juan Sebastian del Cano pour en être le commandant, lequel, par la suite, découvrit l'île de Bendanao, dans laquelle se trouve beaucoup d'or vierge et de la très belle cannelle; et, de la même manière, il découvrit l'île de Poloan, et celle de Brunay, puis celle de Gilolo, et l'île de Tridore, et celles de Térénati et de Motil, ainsi que beaucoup d'autres dans lesquelles il y avait beaucoup d'or, de clou, de muscade et autres sortes d'épices et de drogues. Le dit Sebastian del Cano chargea deux navires qui<sup>7</sup> lui restaient de cinq qu'ils avaient pris avec eux, avec du clou de la dite île de Tidori, ear dans celle-ci et dans l'île de Térénati pousse, dit-on, le dit clou, et dans aucune autre, et, de même, il prit de la cannelle et de la muscade;<sup>8</sup> et, franchissant l'océan Indien,<sup>9</sup> dans la direction du Cap de Bonne-Espérance, un navire fut contraint de faire relâche et de retourner à l'île de Tidori d'où il était parti, à cause de la grande quantité d'eau qu'il faisait, et le dit capitaine Juan Sebastian del Cano, avec son navire appelé Sainte-Marie de la Victoire (Sancta Maria de la Victoria), vint en ce royaume de Castille, à la ville de Séville, en l'an 1522, par le Cap de Bonne-Espérance; de sorte qu'il appert clairement que le dit Juan Sebastian del Cano a navigué autour de l'univers entier, parce qu'il a avancé seulement vers l'ouest, bien que ce ne fut pas sur une seule parallèle, à travers l'orient, jusqu'à l'endroit de l'occident d'où il était parti.

N° 6. Ces provinces furent découvertes<sup>10</sup> par l'honorable et vaillant gentilhomme,<sup>11</sup> François Pizarre, qui<sup>12</sup> en fut gouverneur sa vie durant: dans lesquelles il y a intimentement d'or et d'argent vierge, ainsi que des mines de très belles émeraudes. Le pain qu'ils ont ils le font de<sup>13</sup> maïs, et le vin de même; ils ont beaucoup de blé et d'autre grain. C'est une race guerrière; ils emploient dans leurs guerres des ares, des froudes et des lances; leurs armes sont d'or et d'argent. Il y a dans ces provinces certains moutons de la forme de petits chameaux; ils ont de la fort belle laine. C'est un peuple idolâtre, et d'un très subtil esprit;<sup>14</sup> et sur toute la côte maritime, sur plus de vingt mille gagnant l'intérieur, il ne pleut jamais. C'est une terre très salubre. Les chrétiens y ont fondé de nombreux établissements et continuent à les augmenter constamment.

N° 7. Les indiens appellent cette grande rivière Hurnai,<sup>15</sup> qui est une puissante rivière se déchargeant dans la grande rivière Parana. Juan Diaz de Solis, pilote-major de Leurs<sup>16</sup> Majestés catholiques<sup>17</sup> de glorieuse mémoire, la découvrit et il l'explora jusqu'à une île à laquelle le dit Juan Diaz donna le nom d'île de Martin Gareia, parce qu'il y enterra un matelot qui s'appelait Martin Gareia, laquelle dite île est à environ trente lieues en amont de l'embouchure de la rivière, et la dite découverte lui a coûté fort cher, car les indiens de la dite terre le massacrent et le mangèrent; et, après que nombre d'années se furent écoulées, elle fut redécouverte par Sébastien Cabot, capitaine et pilote-major<sup>1</sup> de Sa Sacrée Majesté Catholique Césarienne, l'empereur don Carlos cinquième du nom, et roi, notre seigneur, commandant, d'une expédition ordonnée par Sa Majesté en vue de découvrir Tarsis et Ophis<sup>2</sup> ainsi que la Cathay orientale: lequel dit capitaine Sébastien Cabot vint à la rivière par hasard, car le navire du commandant dans lequel il se trouvait fut perdu<sup>3</sup> et, voyant qu'il ne pouvait pas continuer son dit voyage, il décida d'explorer, avec les hommes qu'il avait avec lui, la dite rivière, vu le magnifique rapport que les indiens du pays lui firent de la grande richesse en or et en argent qui se trouvait dans le pays, et non sans beaucoup de travail ni sans avoir beaucoup souffert de la faim et couru de nombreux dangers de sa personne et de celles qui étaient avec lui<sup>4</sup>. Et le dit<sup>5</sup> capitaine essaya de créer près de la dite rivière certains établissements avec les gens qu'il avait amenés d'Espagne.<sup>6</sup> Cette rivière est plus grande que toutes celles connues jusqu'ici. Sa largeur à l'embouchure, là où elle se jette dans l'océan, est de trente-cinq<sup>7</sup> lieues, et, à trois cents lieues en amont de la dite embouchure, elle a deux lieues de large. Ce qui fait qu'elle est si grande et si puissante c'est qu'elle reçoit plusieurs autres grandes rivières. C'est une rivière remplie d'une infinité de poissons, et des meilleurs qui soient au monde. En arrivant dans cette terre, les gens voulaient savoir si elle était fertile, propre au labourage et à la production du pain; ils y plantèrent, au mois de septembre, cinquante-deux grains de blé, vu qu'il n'y en avait pas davantage dans les navires,—et, au commencement du mois de décembre ils récoltèrent cinquante-deux mille grains de blé; et la même fertilité s'accusa pour toutes les autres graines<sup>8</sup>. Ceux qui habitent cette terre disent que non loin de là, dans l'intérieur, il y a des chaînes de montagnes d'où l'on tire une quantité infinie d'or, et, plus loin, dans les mêmes montagnes, on trouve de l'argent en quantité infinie. Il y a dans cette terre une certaine espèce de moutons aussi gros que des ânes ordinaires, de la forme des chameaux, sauf que la laine qu'ils portent est aussi fine que la soie, et d'autres animaux de différentes espèces. Les habitants du pays sont beaucoup; car ceux qui vivent sur les versants des montagnes sont blancs, et ceux qui sont près des bords de la rivière sont noirs. Quelques-uns disent, dans les dites montagnes il y a des hommes qui ont des faces de chiens et que d'autres, à partir des genoux, sont comme des autruches, et que ceux-ci sont de grands travailleurs, et qu'ils récoltent beaucoup de maïs, dont ils font du pain et du vin. On dit beaucoup d'autres choses de cette terre, qui ne sont pas naises ici par crainte qu'elles soient fastidieuses<sup>9</sup>.

10 Cette extraordinaire déclaration touchant le rendement d'un grain de blé dans le pays de La Plata est répétée dans la version latine de cette section. C'est probablement une inadvertance. Eden qui a copié cette section de la carte de Cabot, dans la libre version anglaise, dans ses "Decades of the New World," London, 1555, pp. 317-319, corrige l'erreur, mais d'après quelle autorité, si ce n'est d'après sa propre connaissance de l'histoire naturelle, nous ne le savons point. Il fait lire le texte ainsi: "Prenant donc cinquante grains de blé et les confiant à la terre, au mois de septembre, ils en récoltèrent deux mille cinquante en décembre suivant." Puis Eden continue: "Ou quelques-uns, trompés et se méprenant sur la chose, ont écrit au lieu de deux mille cinquante, cinquante-deux mille et demi." Note de M. Deane.

11 [Dans la version latine la dernière phrase vient immédiatement après "de l'argent en quantité infinie," et est elle-même suivie par la clause commençant "et que ceux-ci sont de grands travailleurs."]

N° 8. Cette terre fut découverte par Jnau Cabot, vénitien, et par Sébastien Cabot, son fils, en l'année de la naissance de Notre Seigneur Jésus-Christ 1494, le 24 de juin,<sup>1</sup> au matin, à laquelle ils donnèrent le nom de " première terre vne " (prima terra vista); et à une grande île qui est située le long de la dite terre ils donnèrent le nom de San-Juan, parce qu'elle avait été découverte le même jour.<sup>2</sup> Les habitants en sont vêtus en peau de bêtes. Ils font usage dans leurs guerres d'arcs et de flèches, de lances et de dards, de certaines massues de bois et de frondes. C'est une terre très stérile. Il s'y trouve le nombreux ours Idanes, et de très grands cerfs, comme des chevaux, et nombre d'autres animaux; et, de même il y a beaucoup de poisson, — des esturgeons, du saumon, des soles d'une verge de long, et beaucoup d'autres espèces de poissons,— et celui qui s'y trouve en plus grande quantité s'appelle (baccallao) morue,<sup>3</sup> et pareillement il se trouve dans la même terre des faucons noirs comme des corbeaux, des aigles, des perdrix,<sup>4</sup> des linotes et plusieurs autres sortes d'oiseaux d'espèces différentes.

N° 9. Dans cette même île d'Islande (Islanda) il y a une grande quantité de poisson. On le prend en hiver, on le séche au moyen du très grand froid qui s'y fait sentir, parce que la dite île est dans le cercle arctique, et dans l'été, des hommes s'y rendent de plusieurs lieux et y font le troc de ce poisson, ainsi séché, contre de la farine et de la bière; et le dit poisson est si sec et si dur, que, pour le manger, ils le frappent avec de certains marteaux de fer sur certaines pierres dures comme du marbre, puis ils le font tremper un jour ou deux et le mangent ainsi frit dans du beurre. Et dans toute cette mer du nord il y a une très grande quantité de poisson, dont beaucoup sont gros et de forme monstrueuse; ceux qui naviguent dans ces mers ont vu de très grosses lampreies, qui ressemblent à de grands serpents (et ils les ont vues) attaquant les navires pour en manger les matelots.

La plupart des naturels de cette île bâissent leur maisons sous terre et ils en construisent les murs avec des os de poissons. Il n'ont point de bois à part quelques arbres tout petits, et ceux-ci en très petite quantité et en peu d'endroits; mais le Pourvoyeur de toutes choses pourvoie à ce que, chaque année, il leur vienne par mer, sur les parties septentrio.<sup>5</sup> De la dite île, une très grande quantité d'arbres de différentes sortes et grosses, comme bois de dérive apporté par les furieux vents du nord à la côte de la dite île, dont les naturels se pourvoient et confectionnent toutes sortes d'articles d'utilité pour eux. Et ils disent entendre souvent des esprits parler, s'appeler par leurs noms et prendre la forme de personnes vivantes, et leur dire qui ils sont; et dans certaines parties de la dite île il s'élève<sup>6</sup> de très effrayants incendies, et les naturels mentionnent d'autres merveilles<sup>7</sup> qui y sont.<sup>8</sup>

N° 10. Les hommes qui habitent cette région sont des sauvages,<sup>9</sup> ils manquent de pain et de vin, ils domptent des daims et les montent, et ils se battent avec un autre peuple habitant plus au nord et qu'ils appellent le peuple nocturne, car il rôde la nuit et fait la nuit ce que [nous faisons] ici le jour, et cela parce que, depuis le 14 septembre jusqu'au 10 de mars, les jours y sont si courts qu'il n'y a pas une heure de lumière. C'est un peuple très méchant, querelleur, il vole tous ceux qui passent (à travers son pays), de sorte qu'aucun navire n'ose jeter l'ancre près de la côte par crainte de ce peuple nocturne, parce qu'il tue et pille tous ceux qui tombent entre ses mains; et un peu au delà de ces gens de la nuit, vers le sud-est, il y a, disent-ils, certains monstres ayant des corps comme ceux d'êtres humains, moins la tête, laquelle est comme celle d'un cochon, et qu'ils se comprennent entre eux en grognant comme des cochons.

N° 11. Les habitants de cette région adorent, les uns le soleil, d'autres la première chose qu'ils voient le matin, d'autres un morceau d'étoffe de couleur qu'ils placent sur une lance, et ainsi chacun rend culte à ce qu'il préfère; ils sont sous la domination du grand Khan, empereur des Tartares.

N° 12. Ici il y a des monstres ressemblant à des hommes, qui ont des oreilles si grandes qu'elles leur couvrent tout le corps, et ils disent que, plus loin, vers l'est, il y a de certains hommes qui n'ont de jointures ni aux genoux ni aux pieds; ils sont sous la domination du grand Khan. Dans la province de Balor, d'une étendue qu'il faut cinquante jours à franchir, il y a des hommes sauvages; ils vivent dans les montagnes et dans les forêts.

N° 13. Ici demeure le puissant roi d'Aziumba et d'Anxara, que quelques-uns appellent Prester John, auquel soixante rois rendent obéissance; il est très riche en toutes sortes de biens,<sup>1</sup> et il est nulle part fait mention qu'il ait jamais été défait en aucune bataille, mais il est souvent revenu glorieusement victorieux du sud, du pays des Troglodytes, race nue et noire, lequel peuple s'étend jusqu'au Cap de Bonne-Espérance. Parmi ce peuple se trouve une race qui ne parle pas, mais dont les individus se comprennent mutuellement en sifflant; et ce n'est pas là Prester John,<sup>2</sup> parce que Prester John eut son empire dans l'Inde orientale et méridionale jusqu'à ce que Genghis Khan, premier roi des Tartares, le défit et vainquit dans une très cruelle bataille, dans laquelle il mourut, le dit Genghis lui enleva tous ses royaumes et seigneuries et permit aux chrétiens de vivre selon leur foi et leur donna un roi chrétien pour les gouverner, lequel roi fut appelé George, et depuis lors jusqu'à maintenant tous les rois qui lui succèdent sont appelés George, ainsi que Marco Polo le relate plus au long dans le 3<sup>e</sup> et le 4<sup>e</sup> chapitres de son livre.

N° 14. Le roi de cette province et du royaume de Bengale est un très puissant seigneur et a sous sa domination de nombreuses cités, très grandes et d'un fort commerce.<sup>3</sup> Il y a dans ce royaume et cette province beaucoup de cannelle, de clou, de gingembre, de poivre, de bois de santal, de laque et de soie en grandes quantités. On a la coutume en cette province et ce royaume de brûler les corps après la mort, et quand le mari meurt avant la femme, la femme se brûle elle-même vive avec son mari, disant qu'elle va être heureuse avec lui dans l'autre monde, et l'on agit ainsi: le mari venant à mourir, la femme donne un grand festin, se revêt de ses plus riches habits, auquel festin viennent tous ses parents et tous ceux de son mari, et, après avoir mangé, elle va avec tout le monde à l'endroit où un très grand bûcher a été dressé, chantant et dansant jusqu'à ce qu'elle soit arrivée au dit bûcher en feu, et alors on y jette le cadavre du mari, et aussitôt elle dit adieu à ses parents et amis et saute dans le feu, et celle qui se jette le plus noblement dans le feu apporte le plus d'honneur à sa famille, mais même maintenant cette coutume n'est pas observée comme jadis, depuis que les Portugais ont fait commerce avec eux et leur ont fait comprendre que Notre Seigneur n'est pas servi par de telles pratiques.

N° 15. Le grand Khan des Tartares est un très grand seigneur et très puissant, il est appelé Roi des rois; il a pour coutume de donner à ses hommes-liges des vêtements treize fois par année, à treize très grandes fêtes qu'il donne chaque année; et ces vêtements sont d'une plus ou moins grande valeur suivant la qualité .et la personne à qui ils sont donnés, et à chacun est donné une ceinture, des jambières, un chapeau orné d'or, de perles et de pierres précieuses, suivant la grandeur du personnage, et ces vêtements qu'il dit être donnés chaque année par le grand Khan sont au nombre de 156,000; et il fait cela pour donner de la grandeur et de la magnificence à ses fêtes, et, quand il meurt, on le porte, pour l'inhumer, à une montagne appelée Alcay, où sont inhumés les grands Khans, empereurs des Tartares; et ceux qui le portent au tocbeau (peut tous ceux qu'ils trouvent, disant: allez servir votre maître dans l'autre monde); et, de la même façon, ils tuent tous ses chevaux, ses chameaux, ses mules de transport qu'ils ont avec eux, pourtant qu'ils vont aller servir leur maître. Lorsque Mongai Khan, empereur des Tartares, mourut, trois cent mille hommes furent tués, qui avaient été rencontrés, sur leur voie, par ceux qui le portaient en terre, comme le dit Marco Polo dans son livre, chapitre 42. Poggio le Florentin, secrétaire du pape Eugène IV, vers la fin de son deuxième livre, qu'il écrivit sur les variations et changements de fortune, fait beaucoup pour confirmer ce qu'a écrit Marco Polo dans son livre.

N° 16. Il y a différentes opinions touchant ce qu'était Trapovana,<sup>1</sup> depuis que les Espagnols et les Portugais ont navigué l'océan Indien. De quelle façon Ptolemy<sup>2</sup> la localise en degrés de latitude et de longitude est, je crois, bien connu de tous. Quelques explorateurs modernes prétendent que l'île de Ceylan est Trapovana; d'autre soutiennent que c'est l'île de Sumatra.<sup>3</sup> Pline écrit sur le compte de Trapovana, dans son sixième livre, chapitre 22, et dit qu'il fut un temps où l'on soutenait l'opinion que Trapovana était un autre monde qui s'appelait Antichtou, et qu'Alexandre fut le premier à nous informer que c'était une île, et que Onesechritus, amiral de sa flotte, [dit] que dans la dite île de Trapovana il y a des éléphants plus gros et plus belliqueux que ceux de l'Inde, et que Magasacne fixe sa longueur à sept mille stades, et sa largeur à cinq mille; qu'elle ne contient aucune ville enclose de murs, mais sept cents villages, et que, sous le règne de Claude,<sup>4</sup> des ambassadeurs vinrent de la dite île à Rome. De la façon que voici: l'affranchi Damius Proelanius, qui avait acheté de la République<sup>5</sup> les taxes de la mer Rouge, contournant l'Arabie par mer, fut emporté par le vent du nord de telle façon que le quinzième jour il entrat dans un port de la dite île appelé Hippus,<sup>6</sup> où il fut très généralement reçu et traité par le roi, et qu'après être resté six mois dans la dite île, il en apprit la langue, et que, parlant, un jour, avec le roi, il lui dit que les Romains et leur empereur étaient inévoquablement justes, et que le roi, voyant que les pièces de monnaie que cet affranchi avait étaient d'un égal poids, bien que la face fit voir qu'elles fussent de différents empereurs, étonné de la chose, envoya à Rome des ambassadeurs, dont le principal était Rachia, pour faire amitié avec Claude, desquels ambassadeurs il apprit qu'il y avait dans la dite île cinq cents cités, et que les dits ambassadeurs, furent étonnés de voir dans ces lieux nôtre étoile du nord et les Pléiades comme étant chose nouvelle et d'eux inconnue, et qu'ils dirent que dans la dite île ils ne voyaient la lune au-dessus de la terre qu'à partir du huitième jour jusqu'au quinzième, et qu'ils furent particulièrement étonnés de voir que les ombres tournassent vers notre ciel et non<sup>7</sup> vers le leur, et que le soleil se levât à droite et se couchât à gauche, desquelles raisons il semble que, dans la dite île, où le dit affranchi avait trouvé un havre, on ne voit pas l'étoile du nord, qui est vue dans l'île de Trapovana, d'où l'on pourrait dire, considérant d'où le dit affranchi Damius Proelanius était parti et la route qu'il avait parcourue sous la poussée d'un violent vent du nord,<sup>8</sup> que l'île où il a trouvé refuge était l'île de San-Lorenzo et non Trapovana. Et que, comme roi de la dite île, un vieillard débonnaire et sans enfants était généralement élu, et si, après son élection, il lui en naissait, on le déposait immédiatement; et quand ils l'élisent ils lui donnent trente conseillers; et que le dit roi ne peut condamner personne, si la majorité de son dit conseil n'est pas d'accord avec lui, et qu'après cela le dit condamné peut faire appel au peuple, qui, sur ce, élit soixante-dix juges qui examinent son cas, et, s'ils trouvent qu'il a été condamné à tort, ils le remettent en liberté, et ceux des conseillers qui ont été d'accord pour le condamner sont privés de leur office et tenus pour infâmes à perpétuité par la suite.

Inscription de l'auteur donnant certaines raisons explicatives des var. Rous salies par l'aiguille de la boussole à l'égard de l'étoile polaire.

N° 15. Sébastien Cabot, capitaine et pilote major de Sa Sacré Majesté Catholique Césarienne, cinquième du nom, et voilà notre signatur, a fait la présente figure projetée sur un plan en l'année de Notre Seigneur Jésus-Christ 1544, donnée par degrés de latitude et de longitude, avec ses vents,<sup>4</sup> comme carte de navigation, imitant en partie Ptolémée<sup>5</sup> et, en partie, les modernes découvreurs, tant Espagnols qu'Portugais, et en partie découvertes par son père et en partie par lui même, au moyen de que, on peut naviguer comme avec une carte de navigation, en se rappelant les variations subies par l'aiguille de la boussole par rapport à l'étoile polaire. Par exemple, si vous déirez faire voile du Cap Saint-Vincent pour aller au Cap Finistère, vous donnez ordre de diriger votre navire au nord en vous guidant sur l'aiguille de la boussole et vous arriverez en deçà du dit cap, mais la course réelle faite par votre navire aura été dans la direction du nord, quart nord-est, parce que l'aiguille de votre boussole vous donne une direction nord-est et quart du dit Cap Saint-Vincent, de sorte que, d'autant ordre de faire prendre au navire la direction nord d'après l'aiguille de la boussole, votre course sera vers le nord, quart nord-est; et, de la même façon, faisant voile de Salmedina, qui est un haut-fond en sortant de San Lucar de Barrameda, pour aller à la pointe de Naga, sur l'île de Ténériffe, vous donnerez ordre de diriger vers le sud-ouest d'après l'aiguille et vous toucherez la dite pointe de Naga, attendu qu'elle est placée sur la carte de navigation, mais votre course n'aura pas été dans la direction du sud-ouest, attendu que l'aiguille de votre boussole vous oriente vers un point large, quart à Salmedina, mais votre course aura été dans la direction du sud-ouest, un large quart au sud; de sorte que vous pourrez dire qu'en faisant voile de Saint-Vincent vers le nord, votre course sera au nord, quart nord-est, et qu'en faisant voile de Salmedina au sud-ouest, votre course sera sud-ouest, quart sud, et ainsi, conséquemment, ferez-vous dans toute autre partie de cet univers, surveillant les variations que la dite aiguille de la boussole subit par rapport à l'étoile polaire, car la dite aiguille ne tourne ni ne reste fixe vers le nord en tout lieu, comme le croit le vulgaire, puisque la pierre d'aimant, ainsi qu'il paraît, n'a pas le pouvoir de la faire tourner vers le nord en tout lieu, mais, comme on le voit et ainsi que la chose est acquise par expérience, elle n'a que le pouvoir de la faire tenir stable et fixe en un lieu, d'où elle doit nécessairement pointer en droite ligne, quel que soit le vent que vous ayez, et non en ligne courbe, et c'est là la cause qui produit la dite variation; car si l'aiguille devait tourner vers le nord, toujours et en tout lieu, il n'y aurrait aucune variation, car alors elle suivrait une ligne courbe, parce que vous seriez toujours sur une même parallèle, ce qui ne se peut quand on va en droite ligne sur une sphère; et vous devez remarquer que plus vous vous éloignez du méridien sur lequel l'aiguille pointe directement au nord, dans la direction ouest ou est, plus votre compas s'éloigne du nord, c'est-à-dire de la fleur de lis qui y indique le nord; d'où il appert clairement que la dite aiguille pointe en droite ligne et non en ligne courbe, et vous devez savoir que le méridien où la fleur de lis de l'aiguille pointe directement au nord-est à environ trente-cinq<sup>6</sup> lieues de Flores, la dernière île des Açores dans la direction de l'ouest, de l'opinion de certains experts, à cause de la grande expérience qu'ils ont eue de la chose par la navigation quotidienne faite vers l'ouest, aux îles de l'Océan. Le dit Sébastien Cabot,<sup>7</sup> faisant voile vers l'ouest, se trouva en un endroit<sup>8</sup> où le nord-est quart nord [de la boussole] se tenait directement au nord, en suite desquelles observations susdites il appert clairement que les d'fauts et les variations qu'accuse la dite aiguille de la boussole par rapport à l'étoile polaire existent réellement.

8 vient le une mer et à un rivage,

N° 18. Que de Cadix et des colonnes d'Herenle, contournant l'Espagne et la Gaule, tout l'Ocident a été navigué. La plus grande partie de l'océan du nord n'a été naviguée au temps d'Auguste, passant par toute l'Allemagne, jusqu'au Cap Cimbricus et de là jusqu'en Scythie. Et de l'Orient la flotte de Mucédomne fit voile le long de l'océan Indien vers le nord jusqu'à ce que la mer Caspienne fût au sud d'eux, au temps où Séleucus et Antiochus régnèrent, et ils ordonnèrent d'appeler cette région Séleucide et Antiochide. Et au nord de la Caspienne plusieurs parties ont été naviguées, de sorte que la mer septentrionale a presque toute été naviguée; et il dit encore, dans le dit chapitre, que Cornelius Nepos écrit cela à Quintus Metellus Celer, qui avait été consul avec Afranius et qui était alors proconsul en Gaule, que certains Indiens furent envoyés par le roi des Suaves, qui, partant de l'océan Indien, avaient sans maléfice été amenés jusqu'en Allemagne.

N° 19.<sup>2</sup> Dans ces îles Rocas il y a (dit-on) des oiseaux d'une telle dimension et d'une telle force qu'ils prennent un bœuf et l'emportent dans vol<sup>3</sup> pour le manger, et ils disent de plus<sup>4</sup> qu'ils prennent un vaisseau, si grand soit-il, l'enlèvent à une grande hauteur, puis le laissent tomber, et ils mangent les hommes. Pétrarque également dit la même chose dans son livre de la Fortune favorable et adverse.

N° 20. Il y a dans l'île du peuple de Calenguan des lions, tigres, panthères, dauns et plusieurs différentes autres espèces d'animaux; de plus il s'y trouve des aigles, des perroquets blancs qui disent aussi clairement que des êtres humains ce qu'on leur apprend, et quantité innombrable d'autres oiseaux d'espèces variées. Les habitants de l'île sont idolâtres; ils mangent de la chair humaine.

N° 21. Un navire de Cambaya découvrit cette île de Mamorare, et l'on dit qu'il s'y trouvait tant d'or qu'ils ne le chargèrent point d'autre chose, d'après ce que disent les Portugais.

N° 22.<sup>5</sup> Il y a dans cette île de Ceylan de la cannelle native, des rubis, des hyacinthes et des yeux de chat, ainsi que d'autres espèces de pierres précieuses.

Ciapangu est une grande île située sur les hantes mers, laquelle île est à mille cinq cents milles de distance de la terre ferme du Grand Khan, dans la direction de l'orient. Ils sont idolâtres et sont une race douce et belle race. Elle a un roi indépendant, à elle-même, ne payant tribut à nul autre. Elle contient beaucoup d'or et de gis, qui n'est jamais enlevé de la dite île, parce que les navires n'y touchent jamais, à sa grande distance et son éloignement de la route. Le roi de cette île a un très vaste et très merveilleux palais, tout fait d'or en lingois de l'épaisseur de deux réaux, et les fenêtres ainsi que les colonnes du palais sont toutes d'or. Elle (l'île) contient des pierres précieuses et des perles en grandes quantités. Le Grand Khan ayant entendu mentionner la renommée des richesses de la dite île, désira en faire la conquête, et y envoya une grande flotte, mais ne put jamais la conquérir, comme nous le relate au long Marco Polo dans son livre, au chapitre 106.

Du poisson qui arrête un navire,

Pline écrit dans son neuvième livre, chapitre vingt-cinq, touchant un poisson qui est appelé Nephio, qu'il décrit comme étant rond, et comme s'attachant à un navire, qu'il retient lors même que celui-ci est sous voile. Et Pétrarque, dans la préface de son deuxième livre touchant la Fortune favorable et adverse, dit que l'échenil ou remora, un poisson d'un demi-pied de long, arrête un navire, si grand soit-il, et que les vents, les vagues, les rames et les voiles aident sa course; à lui seul il domine la puissance des éléments et de l'homme, sans autre procédé que celui qui consiste à s'attacher aux aîs du navire, et sans autre force que sa propre nature; lequel poisson est comme la boue et la fange, et, sorti de l'eau, perd sa force. Ce qui précède se trouve dans des écrits fort distingués, qui ne sont pas cités ici par crainte de prendre trop d'espace.

PARISH OF VERCHERES.

The Parish extends about one league and a half along the St. Lawrence upon a depth of two leagues; the Family of Vercheres, Mess<sup>rs</sup>. Chieau, Boisseau, and Cornoyer are Lords thereof. Island Mary belongs to the Family of Vercheres, where some Families are settled. Isle Borgaro belongs to some inhabitants, and cannot be inhabited as it is constantly overflowed.

Families, 147.

Men able to take Arms, 194.

Doutour lies between Vercheres and Contreeleur.

THE PARISH OF CONTRECOEUR.

This Parish was granted in 1672 to Mons<sup>t</sup>. Contrecoeur, a French Officer, whose heirs possess the same, except a small part sold to a Mons<sup>t</sup>. Martell in 1675; the Islands lying antignous were granted to Mons<sup>t</sup>. Contrecoeur; they are not inhabited on account of their being constantly overflowed every spring; but have excellent pasture. It extends two leagues upon the same depth.

Families, 60.

Men able to bear Arms, 91.

Then comes the ruins of the Church of St. Ours, and lower down the confluence of the Richelieu or Sorrel river and the St. Lawrence.

At the month of the Richelieu, lies the Parish of Sorel, the settlement being shewn on the eastern bank.

PARISH OF SORREL.

This Parish extends about two leagues along the St. Lawrence upon the same depth, it was conceded in 1672 to Mons<sup>t</sup>. Sorel an Officer and belongs at present by purchase to Mons<sup>t</sup>. Ramsey, Lieut. du Roy at Quebec in 1759. The present possessor obtained a grant of one league farther back in 1739, the Islands of St. Ignace, Isle Ronde, Isle de Grace, Isle Madame, Isle aux Ours, and Isle aux Cochon, are dependancies thereof. Isle St. Ignace is the principal and has about 27 Families, is about a league and a half long, upon a breadth of forty Arpents, there is channel between it and the Isle du Pas about an Arpent and a half broad. Isle Madame has about 6 Families; great part of it as well as the other Islands are overflowed and consist of wood and pasture.

Families, 122.

Men able to bear Arms, 134.

The River Richelieu is otherwise vulgarly called the Sorrel, because it empties itself into the St. Lawrence about the center of this Parish, it is Navigable at all times, for large ships up to St. Ours, about three leagues from the Embouchure and in Spring to Chambly twelve leagues further up. Beyond Sorel comes Tamaska Bay or Bay de La Vaillière.

RICHELIEU OR SOREL RIVER.

The French had a fortified post at the mouth of this River in 1760.

When Brigadier Murray came opposite to it, 12th August, a small detachment of Rangers was sent from the place to the Isle aux Noix, to acquaint Col. Haviland, of the approach of the Quebec Army, and of Brigd<sup>r</sup> Murray's intention to proceed without loss of time to Montreal to keep the Enemy in cheque there, and to facilitate the junction of the three corps.

Following up the course of the River on the main Map, one comes first to Isle Dechallion, then the Parish of St. Ours, Isles Ever, Isle de Lassumption and the ### PARISH OF ST. ANTOINE.

This parish extends two leagues in front upon a depth of one and a half, it was conceded in 1694 to the Sien<sup>t</sup>. Martel, and is now divided between his heirs, Mons<sup>t</sup>. Contrecoeur and Madame La Perriere.

To the rear and slightly to the West of St. Augustin is the Seigniory of Feau Sembault, alongside the Cante de Belare, beyond a well defined road crossing the Domaine Brook in the Parish of St. Joseph and then running through the Domaines of the Jesuits, the Cante de St. Anne, behind which again lie, St. Genevieve and the Cante de St. Joseph, St. John Baptist, Du Grand Desert and De Cante de Grand Desert to Ancient Lorette, with its Corn and Saw Mills.

Between St. Joseph and St. Augustin runs another road, running parallel with Cap Rouge River and passing through the Cante de St. Dennis, The Domaine of the Nuns, and St. Ange with its Saw Mills. Here it is met by another road starting from the Burnt Mills at the east end of St. Augustin, and by Lake Deadmor, and the Ditch to bring the wool from Cap Rouge River to the Lake. The two roads joined traverse Champigny, in the midst of which it is crossed by the Cap Rouge River running to join the St. Lawrence at Cap Rouge, to Ancient Lorette, where the Lorette River takes its rise, and the Cante St. Paul or St. Gabriell.

PARISH OF OLD LORETTE.

Mons<sup>t</sup> de Menie was first Seigneur of Old Lorette; Mons<sup>t</sup>Duthesnaye and the Jesuits are so at present, its extent is about a league and a half in length and as much in breadth.

From Cap Rouge a road runs north easterly to St. Foy, passing the Redoubts, at its junction with a road running northeasterly through La Senneterre. From St. Foy another road runs down by St. Ignace and St. Francis, to the St. Lawrence between Reveryne Point and Sillery. From Sillery a road runs up, leaving Foulon on the river front to the south and crossing the Hauteur D'Abraham enters Quebec.

QUEBEC.

Quebec the Capital of Canada and a Bishop's See is divided into the upper and lower Town; the latter of which when possessed by the French was Chiefly inhabited by Merchants, and trading people, the upper Town by the Gentry, Military and Civil Officers, within its Walls in the Upper Town is a Colledge belonging to the Jesuits, a Spacious and convenient building, a Seminary for the education of youth, a Convent of Recollets, following the Order of St. Francois and two Convents of women, the Hotel Dieu and the Ursulines, each of which hath its Chapel and a handsome Garden. The Bishop had a Palace, Chappel and Garden, which was the only endowment annexed to the See in America, there is only one Church in upper Town, which was Parochial as well as a Cathedral, no part of it is standing at present but the bare walls; in the lower Town there was a Chappell of ease, just now in the same situation, both publick and private buildings having suffered prodigiously from the British Artillery in 1759, when they were cannonaded and Bombardeed for upwards of sixty days; this was the residence of the Conseil Supérieur, or Supreme Court of Justice before which all appeals from inferior Jurisdiction in every part of this Extensive province, were tried. The Gouvernor General usually resided in Fort Louis, the remains of the first fortifications in this Country, but now extremely shattered; the Intendants Palace in the Lower Town is a Noble and spacious Building converted into a Barrack. The Fortifications are extensive, weak, and irregular, the Parish reaches about a league without the Walls; within its preeinets and near the River St. Charles, stands the General Hospital, a Convent of Women, erected and endowed by a Bishop of Quebec, for the Reception of the Sick, Ideots, and incurables; before this War broke out the number of Souls in the Town and Suburbs was computed at 7,000, and at the last Recensemt since it's surrender to His Majesty's Arms, did not amount to above half that number; it is, however, daily increasing as several houses have been and are actually rebuilding.

Families, 883

Men able to bear Arms, 793.

Adjoining Quebece come St. Roch and the General Hospital, and the little French Bridge across the St. Charles River, which flows into the St. Lawrence immediately under the walls of the City. This map not only gives the bridge, but also the fortifications for the defence of each end of it.

Ascending the St. Charles one finds Notre bonne des Ange, on the left bank, and then passing Caute St. Gabriel on the right bank finds La Musaire, or St. Iacque, and St. Bon Adventure, St. Barnon, with its Corn Mill, and Trudel on the left bank with St. Martin, and L'Orniere or St. Barbe opposite to them, and comes New Lorette.

MISSION OF JEUNE LORETTE.

These Savages are of the Tribe of the Hurons formerly a very numerous and Warlike Nation situated round the borders of the Lake of that name; in 1649 having been surprised and entirely defeated by the Iroquois, with whom they had waged war for eleven years, they dispersed, a number of Families joined a few already settled at Sillery; a short time after they quitted that place, and after shifting their habitations several times, finally fixed at Jeune Lorette in 1697, where they have remained ever since. It is a part of the Seign<sup>r</sup> of St. Gabriel belonging to the Jesuits, one or two Fathers of that order always residing amongst them as Missionaries.

Their number is greatly diminished, the whole Village not consisting of above—

Families, 20.

In this Parish is marked the Village Nice Bourie.

The South channel of Orleans and the Chanail D'Hibervi . . . . . are marked on the map.

The title of the latter is incomplete, and the details of the Parishes of Berthier and St. François are missing, this portion of the survey being torn off.

APPENDIX D.

BOUNDRY MAPS UNDER TREATY OF GHENT.

Beginning at a stone Monument, erected by Andrew Ellicott, Esq. in the Year 1817, on the South Bank, or Shore, of the said River Iroquois, or Cataragui, (now called the St. Lawrence) which Monument bears South 74 deg. 45 min. West, and 1,540 yards distant from the stone Church in the Indian Village of St. Regis, and indicates the point at which the 45th parallel. of North Latitude strikes the said River; thence, running North 35 deg. 45 sec. West into the River, on a line at right angles with the Southern shore, to a point 100 yards South of the opposite Island, called Cornwall Island; thence, turning Westerly, and passing around the South and Western sides of said Island, keeping 100 yards distant therefrom, and following the curvatures of its shore, to a point opposite to the North-west corner, or angle, of said Island; thence, to and along the middle of the main River, until it approaches the Eastern extremity of Barnhart's Island; thence, Northerly, along the Channel which divides the last mentioned Island from the Canada shore, keeping 100 yards distant from the Island, until it approaches Sheik's Island; thence, along the middle of the Strait which divides Barnhart's and Sheik's Islands, to the Channel called the Long Sault, which separates the two last mentioned Islands from the lower Long Sault Island; thence, Westerly, (crossing the centre of the last mentioned Channel) until it approaches within 100 yards of the North shore of the Lower Sault Island; thence, up the north branch of the River, keeping to the North of, and near, the lower Sault Island, and also North of, and near, the Upper Sault (sometimes called Baxter's) Island, and South of the two small Islands, marked on the Map A and B, to the Western extremity of the Upper Sault, or Baxter's Island; thence, passing between the two Islands called the Cats, to the middle of the River above; thence, along the middle of the River, keeping to the North of the small Islands marked C and D; and North also of Chrystler's Island, and of the small Island next above it, marked E, until it approaches the North-east angle of Goose Neck Island; thence, along the passage which divides the last mentioned Island from the Canada shore, keeping 100 yards from the Island, to the upper end of the same; thence, South of, and near, the two small Islands called the Nut Islands; thence, North of, and near, the Island marked F, and also of the Island called Dry or Smuggler's Island; thence, passing between the Islands marked G and H, to the North of the Island called Isle au Rapid Plat; thence, along the North side of the last mentioned Island, keeping 100 yards from the shore, to the upper end thereof; thence, along the middle of the River, keeping to the South of, and near, the Islands called Cousson (or Tussin) and Presque Isle; thence, up the River, keeping North of, and near, the several Gallop Isles, numbered on the Map 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, and also of Tick, Tibbet's, and Chimney Islands; and South of, and near, the Gallop Isles, numbered 11, 12, and 13, and also of Duck, Drummond, and Sheep Islands; thence, along the middle of the River, passing North of Island No. 14, South of 15 and 16, North of 17; South of 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, and 28, and North of 26 and 27, thence, along the middle of the River, North of Gull Island and of the Islands No. 29, 32, 33, 34, 35, Bluff Island, and No. 39, 44, and 45, and to the South of No. 30, 31, 33, Grenadier Island, and No. 37, 38, 40, 41, 42, 43, 46, 47, and 48, until it approaches the East end of Well's Island; thence, to the North of Well's Island, and along the Strait which divides it from Rowe's Island, keeping to the North of the small Islands No. 51, 52, 54, 58, 59, and 61, and to the South of the small Islands numbered and marked 49, 50, 53, 55, 57, 60, and X, until it approaches the North-east point of Grindstone Island; thence, to the North of Grindstone Island, and keeping to the North also of the small Islands No. 63, 65, 67, 68, 70, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, and 78, and to the South of No. 62, 64, 66, 69, and 71, until it approaches the Southern point of Hickory Island; thence, passing to the South of Hickory Island, and of the two small Islands lying near its Southern extremity, numbered 79 and 80; thence, to the South of Grand or Long Island, keeping near its Southern shore, and passing to the North of Carlton Island, until it arrives opposite to the South-western point of said Grand Island in Lake Ontario; thence, passing to the North of Grenadier, Fox, Stony, and the Gallop Islands, in Lake Ontario, and to the South of, and near, the Islands called the Ducks, to the middle of the said Lake; thence, Westerly, along the middle of said Lake, to a point opposite the mouth of the Niagara River; thence, to and up the middle of the said River, to the Great Falls; thence, up the Falls, through the point of the Horse Shoe, keeping to the West of Iris or Goat Island, and of the group of small Islands at its head, and following the bends of the River so as to enter the Strait between Navy and Grand Islands; thence, along the middle of said Strait, to the head of Navy Island; thence, to the West and South of, and near to, Grand and Beaver Islands, and to the West of Strawberry, Squaw, and Bird Islands, to Lake Erie; thence, Southerly and Westerly, along the middle of Lake Erie, in a direction to enter the passage immediately South of Middle Island, being one of the Easternmost of the group of Islands lying in the Western part of said Lake; thence, along the said passage, proceeding to the North of Cunningham's Island, and of the three Bass Islands, and of the Western Sister, and to the South of the Islands called the Hen and Chickens, and of the Eastern and Middle Sisters; thence, to the middle of the mouth of the Detroit River, in a direction to enter the Channel which divides Bois-blanc and Sugar Islands; thence, up the said Channel to the West of Bois-blanc Island, and to the East of Sugar, Fox, and Stony Islands, until it approaches Fighting, or Great Turkey Island; thence, along the Western side and near the shore of said last mentioned Island, to the middle of the River above the same; thence, along the middle of said River, keeping to the South-east of, and near, Hog Island, and to the North-west of, and near, the Isle à la Pêche, to Lake St. Clair; thence, through the middle of said Lake, in a direction to enter that mouth or Channel of the River St. Clair which is usually denominated The Old Ship Channel; thence, along the middle of said Channel, between Squirrel Island on the South-east, and Herson's Island on the North-west, to the upper end of last mentioned Island, which is nearly opposite to Point au Chênes, on the American shore; thence, along the middle of the River St. Clair, keeping to the West of, and near, the Islands called Belle Riviere Isle, and Isle aux Cerfs, to Lake Huron; thence, through the middle of Lake Huron, in a direction to enter the Strait or Passage between Drummond's Island on the West, and the little Manitou Island on the East; thence, through the middle of the passage which divides the two last mentioned Islands; thence, turning Northerly and Westerly, around the Eastern and Northern shores of Drummond's Island, and proceeding in a direction to enter the passage between the Islands of St. Joseph's and the American shore, passing to the North of the intermediate Islands No. 61, 11, 10, 12, 9, 6, 4, and 2, and to the South of those numbered 15, 13, 5, and 1; thence, up the said last mentioned passage, keeping near to the Island St. Joseph's, and passing to the North and East of Isle à la Crosse, and of the small Islands numbered 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, and to the South and West of those numbered 21, 22, and 23, until it strikes a line (drawn on the Map with black ink, and shaded on one side of the point of intersection with blue, and on the other side with red) passing across the River at the head of St. Joseph's Island, and at the foot of the Neebish Rapids, which line denotes the termination of the Boundary directed to be run by the VIth Article of the Treaty of Ghent.
