Place-Edge Wedding

Last Saturday afternoon, June 29th, a quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Edge, when their only daughter, Annie La Vera, was united in marriage to Russell Garfield Place, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Place, of Guelph.

Promptly at 2.30, to the strains of the wedding march, ably rendered by Miss Bernice Simpson, the bride entered the room on the arm of her father. She wore a gown of white silk crepe de chene and carried a bouquet of cream roses and was attended by her cousin, Miss Clara Edge, of Hamilton, as bridesmaid, who wore a pale blue charmeuse and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Mervyn Kitching, who acted as best man.

The Rev. R. A. Facey, who united the young couple in the bonds of holy matrimony, made a very appropriate address, followed by short addresses by Mr. Robert Place, father of the groom, Mr. Wm. Edge, father of the bride, Mr. W. Attridge, and others.

About forty guests were present and partook of the wedding dinner, which was served in a marquee on the lawn, after which the happy young couple motored to Guelph, where they will spend a few days at the home of the groom's parents before proceeding to Calgary, Alta., their new home.

The high esteem in which the young couple were held was evident by the many valuable and useful presents.

The bride was well and favorably known by everyone here and will be greatly missed by all. The groom, who for a number of years has been in the employ of the C.P.R. as station agent at the South station, has made a host of friends during his residence here and the best wishes of the citizens of Waterdown will follow him and his fair bride to their far off home in the west.

Institute Meeting

The North Wentworth Farmers' Institute held their annual meeting here Wednesday, June 26th.

Mr. A. Smuck, president of the South Wentworth Agricultural Society, delivered an able address on "Institute Work."

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, James A. Gray, Freeton; vice-president, J. McDonough; secretary, A. Parnell, after which an adjournment was made to the farm of D. C. Platt, Millgrove, where the visitors received a royal welcome from Mr. Platt. His fine herd of cattle were thoroughly inspected by the visitors, who were more than delighted with what they saw, all pronouncing the herd one of the finest in the Dominion.

Mr. Percy Sackville, B.S.A., delivered an interesting and instructive address on "Dairy Farming."

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for women's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

WINNING AFRICA FOR THE ALLIES

(New York Sun.)

A despatch from London says that two railways have been built during the war in allied territory in Central Africa. The two roads referred to are evidently the line connecting Kambove with Bukama on the Congo and that joining Kabalo on the Congo with Albertville on the west shore of Lake Tanganyika. These names mean little to the outside world; yet the roads joining these towns in the vast area of tropical Africa, when considered with the possibilities offered by the allied conquest of German territory in that region, will be strong factors in deciding the future of Africa.

These two railways, opening up many routes in Central and Eastern Africa, have afforded the white man an easy means of exploring a practically unknown land and of developing one of the richest tropical regions of the earth. They have made it possible to cross the once "Dark Continent" at the equator by railway and steamboat from the Indian Ocean to the Atlantic. By stages this route is

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

"Woodlands," Middleton, N. S.

from Dar-es-Salaam on the German East African coast, by the acquired German Central Railway to Ujiji, on Lake Tanganyika, across the lake by steamer to Albertville, then by the recently constructed road to Kabalo, thence by rail and steamboat down the Congo to the Atlantic coast. This route either passes through or tributary to territory of Great Britain, Belgium, Portugal and France.

Besides furnishing this east and west line across Africa, the railroad builders have completed links in the Cape to Cairo line. The railway from Kambove to Bukama is really an extension of this project northward from Elisabethville. By the use of this road, the Congo steamer and the railway from Kabalo the traveler can reach Lake Tanganyika. The continuation of the British occupation of German East Africa after the war will solve a puzzling part of the projected line, the link between Lake Albert and the existing Central and South African system of railways. There are now three possible routes by which former German territory and former German railways can be made available. Any one of these will more quickly realize the Cape to Cairo project than previous plans, and also at much less expense. At the same time these new plans provide for connecting lines to ports on both the eastern and western coasts of Africa. It is now asserted that a through communication from South Africa to the Mediterranean and with connecting east and west lines will be established in less than ten years.

With the completion of these means of communication the real development of the tropical resources of Central Africa will begin. It will be an entirely different development from that which the Germans contemplated. They had not looked upon their African possessions as possible homes for settlers, but as fields for the production of materials for German manufacturing through native labor. What the people of South Africa, England and other allied nations of Europe with African colonial possessions ask is that the men who have fought for their cause may have the land for homes, and that they may reap the advantages that will result from its development.

This is the practical working out of Cecil Rhodes' project for the formation of a federation of Africa States united by a common interest. But even he, great empire builder as he was, could never have conceived of the forces that eventually were to carry his masterful ideas to success.

Had a Slim Chance.

Being firm friends, Marie's two lovers decided that one must end his courtship to help the other. When Alex suggested "heads or tails" no coin was at hand. He agreed to the use of Sandy's pocketknife, but was ill prepared for his friend's words as the knife shot upward: "If the knife stays up you win!"

Most Pertious Trade.

It is not the trapeze performers, the steeplejack or the old-time sailor who faces the greatest peril in his work, but the ship's rigger who combines all three of these callings. During the present war, with the reappearance of sailing vessels in our ports, the ancient profession of ship's rigger has been suddenly revived. The seaports have been scored to discover old riggers, for their service to-day is invaluable. The skill and daring of American ship's riggers was once as famous as that of the Yankee skippers, says Boys' Life.

When a sailing vessel comes into port in need of repairs the ship's rigger is the first man aloft. It may be impossible to tell if her rigging will support a man's weight. The ropes may be covered with ice. The rigger must judge the strength of the ropes with his eye and risk his life upon them. A trapeze performer in the circus must trust his weight to ropes high in air, but he is sure that they are strong and will bear his weight. The ship's rigger must swing himself in quite as perilous positions and remain there for hours, doing the hardest kind of work.

The sailing of the ship usually waits upon the rigger's make-up, and the expense of waiting the crew and delaying the ship makes it necessary for him to work with favorable haste day and night.

Lazy Larks.

Investigation has ruined the lark's reputation for early rising. That much celebrated bird is quite a sluggard, as it does not rise until long after chaffinches, linnets and a number of hedge-row birds have been up and about for some time.

Only a Dad.

(Detroit Free Press.)
Only a dad, with a tired face,
Coming home from the daily race,
Bringing little of gold or fame,
To show how well he has played the game,
But glad in his heart that his own re-joice
To see him come and hear his voice.

Only a day, of a brood of four,
One of ten million men or more,
Plodding along in the daily strife,
Bearing the whips and scorns of life
With never a whimper of pain or hate
For the sake of those who at home await.

Only a dad, neither rich nor proud,
Merely one of the surging crowd,
Tolling, striving, from day to day,
Facing whatever may come his way;
Silent, whenever the harsh condemn,
And bearing it all for the love of them.

Only a dad, but he gives his all
To smooth the way for his children small.

Doing, with courage stern and grim,
The deeds that his father did for him,
This is the line that for him I pen
Only a dad, but the best of men.

The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which never fails to banish colic or simple fevers or any other of the minor ills of little one. Concerning them Mrs. J. P. #### SCIENTIFIC JOTTINGS.

The Yukon is said to be about 200 miles longer than the Mississippi.

American dolls are now equal to the best imported ones.

One-half the gasoline product is used for pleasure riding.

Italians take the lead in human hair traffic, the main source of their supply being obtained from the peasant women of Italy, Dalmatia and Switzerland.

Out of a total world production in 1914 of 150,000,000 tons of rubber Brazil contributed 35,000 tons, or about 23 per cent.

Dogwood root is said to be the source of the "Indian Red" which the original Americans used for dyeing their feathers and plumes.

It is said that the Philippines could supply 100,000 soldiers.

The hansom cab, now almost extinct, was invented by John Alloysius Hanson, who was born in York, Eng., in 1803, and died in London, in 1882. The invention was called "patent safety cab."

The origin of the tankard took place many years ago, when the water used in the city of London was carried in by men who made use of ironbound buckets of wood holding three gallons.

The kangaroo is not naturally a fighter, but he is not defenseless. The long hoof of his free hind leg is his weapon; and with this—having by good fortune trapped an unwary antagonist to his breast with his sharp-clawed forelegs—he deals a terrible fashion of death.

The rate of growth of the nails depends directly on the length of the finger; thus the nails on the two middle fingers of men grow more rapidly than those on the first and third fingers, respectively, and these in turn are more speedy in growth than those of the little fingers.

THE SCRIBE

Who is it feeds you all the thrills,
And clothes your weaknesses with frills,
And makes your words sound sane and true?
(Which is far more than you can do).
Who takes your compliments and jibes
With equal grace—just us—the scribes.

Who hastens at the beck and call
To hear a would-be sage enthrall,
Or here an audience at length?
When weakness is imagined strength,
Who doth all majesty ascribe,
And saves your skin?—O, just the scribe.

Who knows your motive from the start,
Also your reticence of heart?
Who holds your future in his palm,
And oftentimes smooths your soul with balm
Of flattery? You might ascribe
This mercifulness to the scribe.

Sometimes the scribes may go astray
In quoting what you meant to say,
Why swear at them "if you are ill"?
Like you, they're not "infallible";
Come down from off your high estate!
The scribe can make you small or great.

—G. W. Lublin.

CORNS PEEL OFF, SHRIVEL RIGHT UP

It's a corker the way Putnam's Extractor goes after the kernel of a sore corn. You simply paint on a few drops of Putnam's and relief comes at once. The pain all goes, the corn shrivels up, and soon drops off. Wonderful—you bet it is. No other corn remedy can touch the quick, sure action you get with Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. When a quarter buys a dead-sure cure like Putnam's why pay more? Get Putnam's to-day.

HANDY WITH THEIR FEET.

Many Animals Use Them Cleverly in Taking Their Food.

Kangaroos use their hands very readily to hold food in and to put it into their mouths. As their forelegs are so short that they have to browse in a stooping position, they seem to be pleased when able to secure a large bunch of cabbage or other vegetable provender and to hold it in their hands to eat. Sometimes the young kangaroo, looking out of its mother's pouch, catches one or two of the leaves which the old one drops, and the pair may be seen each nibbling at the salad held in their hands, one so to speak, "one finger" above the other. The slow, deliberate clasping and unclasping of a chameleon's feet look like the movements which the hands of a sleepwalker might make were he trying to creep downstairs. The chameleons are almost deformed hands, yet they have a superficial resemblance to the feet of parrots, which, more than other birds, use their feet for many of the purposes of a hand when feeding. To see many of the smaller rodents—ground squirrels, prairie dogs and marmots—hold food, usually in both paws, is to learn a lesson in the extremely dexterous use of hands without thumbs.

Nothing more readily suggests the momentary impression that a pretty little monkey is "a man and a brother" than when he stretches out his neat little palm, fingers and thumb, and, with all the movements proper to the civilized mode of greeting, insists on shaking hands.—London Graphic.

Making Bulgarian Milk.

The milk of the Bulgarians, well known all over the world for its superior nutritive quality, is made by exposing it to the sun, the rapid development of the germs under the action of the ultra violet rays being such that when it becomes dry they are in highly concentrated form.

The average man is content to strike while the iron is hot, but the baseball player often takes three strikes.

CANADIAN HOSPITAL SHIP SUNK BY GERMAN U-BOAT

Only 24 Survivors of 258 on Board, Including 80 C. A. M. G. and 14 Nurses

Desperate Brutality Shown by Pirate Officers in Their Crime

London, July 1.—A German submarine, 70 miles from the Irish coast, on the night of June 27, torpedoed the 11,000-ton hospital ship Llandoverly Castle, which had been chartered by the Canadian Government and had been in the service by carrying wounded and sick from England to Canada for many months past. The ship was then on her way to England and had on board 258 persons, including 80 men of the Canadian Army Medical Corps and 14 female nurses.

ONLY 24 SURVIVORS.

Up to the latest reports only 24 of those on board, including the captain, have survived the treacherous attack, which came without warning. The submarine commander, who ordered the captain of the Llandoverly Castle, several of his officers, and Major Lyon, of the Medical Corps, aboard declared that he had sunk the ship because she was carrying American aviation officers and others in the fighting service of the allies. He added to this later by asserting that the vessel was carrying munition stores, because of an explosion which had occurred aft.

All lights were burning when the Llandoverly Castle was torpedoed. These included a huge electric cross over the bridge and strings of white and green lights on either side. The red cross on the sides of the vessel also were illuminated by electric lights.

It is assumed that the 14 nursing sisters reached a lifeboat, but so far as known there was no trace of them after the ship sank.

According to Red Cross information many were killed in the engine rooms. There is hardly any doubt of this, as there was no response of Capt. Sylvester's signals from the bridge after the torpedo struck. As the engines were either killed or left their posts, there was no one to shut off the power, and the ship kept on her way despite the great holes torn by the torpedo, not beginning to slow down until the water rushed into the boiler room, extinguishing the fires.

SHELLED THE BOATS.

This added to the confusion in launching the lifeboats. There was no panic, however, and by the time the Llandoverly Castle lost her momentum most of the boats were over the side. Those above decks began climbing into them in good order, but many were unable to reach the boats, and the ship was sinking rapidly. They jumped into the sea, and a few of them were picked up.

According to information received by the Canadian Red Cross here, Major Lyon, from the Llandoverly Castle, was forced to stand in the conning tower, despite an injured foot, while the German submarine officers questioned him. The Germans insisted that Major Lyon was an aviation officer, despite the officer's strenuous denials. The Germans even threatened to shoot Major Lyon, contending that he was an officer of the fighting unit, not a medical officer.

The Admiralty report on the sinking describes the cruel treatment of Major Lyon and declares that the submarine, after sinking the vessel, shelled an unknown target, which it intimates might have been the missing boats.

The captain's boat, containing the survivors, was picked up by the destroyer Lysander, the commander of which has reported that he had found no trace of the remaining five boats.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT.

The Admiralty statement on the sinking of the hospital ship follows: "German's awful debt to the world continues to grow. Another hospital ship has been torpedoed, this time 70 miles from the nearest land, and her people turned adrift in their boats to sink or swim as best they might."

"And though, as it happened, she was a Canadian hospital ship returning from Halifax with no wounded aboard, the tale of crime reveals wanton deliberation on the part of the submarine commander, and almost suggests the hope on his part that he would find her full of injured and helpless men."

"The Llandoverly Castle, R. A. Sylvester, master, was chartered by the Canadian Government to convey their sick and wounded from England to Halifax. The Llandoverly Castle had on board a total of 258 persons, including 80 Canadian Army Medical Corps men and 14 female nurses. One boat, containing 24 survivors, has reached port so far."

COULD NOT BE MISTAKEN.

"It was during the night of June 27, towards 10.30, that the crime occurred. The Llandoverly Castle, steaming on her course at some 14 knots, showed the usual navigation and regulation hospital ship lights.

Under the overcast sky she was plain to see, and could not be mistaken for anything but what she was—a ship immune by every law of war and peace from attack or molestation.

"No one on board saw the wake of the torpedo. The first indication of the presence of a submarine was a jar and the roar of an explosion from aft. Then the lights went out."

"All that followed, save when a dim light was obtained from an emergency dynamo, just before the ship foundered, just place in the darkness. The engines were rung to stop, then full speed astern, but from engine-room came no answer."

ROUTINE HELD GOOD.

"The rehearsed routine of the ship, however, held good. With the German enemy one must be prepared for every emergency like this, and along the darkened decks the crew groped to the boat stations and stood by for orders to leave her."

"From the bridge the captain's megaphone, loud in the night, bade them hold tight till way was off the ship. The carpenter was aft making an examination of the damage."

"In his wireless cabin the Marconi operator was trying in vain to transmit the ship's position. His key gave no response, the spark was gone."

"The carpenter's report was that No. 4 hold, aft, was blown in and that the ship could not remain afloat. The order was given to lower away the boats on both sides and abandon ship."

"The officer commanding the Canadian Army Medical Corps on board reported that his people were out. This is important in view of the fact that no boat but the captain's has been picked up."

"Save for any of the ship's company or the engine-room crew, who may have been killed by the explosion of the torpedo, it is clear that everyone got away. One of the small boats, called accident boats, was held back for those last to leave the ship, but when all the others were away the captain went to his cabin for an electric torch, and, on returning to the deck, found that this also had gone."

HAILED IN ENGLISH.

"The boat was pulling down to pick up a drowning man. The second officer stood up and shouted back: 'We are picking up a man from the water.'"

"Come alongside," repeated the brusque voice from the submarine. The boat held on its way, and forthwith two revolver shots were fired at or over it."

"Come alongside, I will shoot with my big gun," shouted the submarine commander. The boat lay alongside the submarine and the captain (probably the man picked up) was ordered on board. In case he should be made prisoner and kept on board, he gave the second officer, who remained in the boat, the course to steer. He was then taken to the conning tower of the submarine, where two officers awaited him."

ACCUSED OF CARRYING U. S. AIRMEN.

"The commander asked him sharply: 'What ship is that?' 'The hospital ship Llandoverly Castle,' answered the captain."

"Yes (the commander did not attempt to appear surprised), but you are carrying eight American flight officers."

"We are not," replied the captain. "We have seven Canadian medical officers on board. The ship was chartered by the Canadian Government to carry sick and wounded Canadians from England to Canada."

"To the submarine commander's reiterated, 'You have been carrying American flight officers,' he added: 'I have been running to Canada for six months with wounded. I give you my word of honor that we have carried none except patients, medical staff, crew and sisters.'"

"The commander then demanded if there were any Canadian medical officers in the boat, and he was told there was one. He ordered him to come aboard."

"Where are our other boats?" asked the captain.

ROUGHLY HAILED ON BOARD.

"The submarine commander did not answer. He was watching the Canadian medical officer being roughly hauled on board and thrust along the deck. This was done so violently and with such plain intention to injure the Canadian, Major Lyon, of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, that he actually had a small bone in his foot broken by the handling he received."

"There was another German officer in the conning tower, the second in command, who had not yet spoken. In reply to the captain's question, he motioned over his shoulder with his field glasses, northwards."

LIST OF SURVIVORS.

"The following survivors from the captain's boat are the only ones accounted for up to the present. Eleven of them were picked up from the water:

"R. A. Sylvester, captain; L. Chapman, second officer; D. C. Barton, fourth officer; H. M. Evans, purser; Lamp Trimmer Davies; Paluter Scott; O. S. Hunt; Able-bodied seamen: Murphy, Schroeder, Goodrich, Ward, Treddigan; Fireman J. McVey; Fireman Mounsey; Trimmer Heather; Deck Steward Savage, Assistant Steward Abraham; Ward, attendant of the Canadian Army Medical Corps. The boat also contained the following: Major T. Lyon, Sergt. Knight and Officer Taylor, Hickman, Pilot and Cooper."

"Major Lyon was interrogated after protesting, as a medical officer, and ordered back into the boat. The captain was allowed to go. The boat was cast off and pulled away from the submarine."

"The submarine began to circle around the wreckage at full speed. Several times it shaved the boat narrowly, once swirling past within two feet of it; once it stopped and again took the second and fourth officer aboard and questioned them."

INVENTED NEW EXCUSE.

"By this time the submarine commander invented a new excuse. He stated that there was a big explosion astern as the vessel sank, and that therefore she must have been carrying ammunition. The second officer explained patiently that that was the explosion of the boiler and the falling of the funnel. They were allowed to return to the boat, which then made sail and proceeded."

"Again for a while the submarine circled and threatened her by swooping close to her; then moved off and seemed to come to a stop. From this position, says the captain's official statement, she opened fire at an unseen target, firing about 12 shells."

"It is perhaps too early yet to guess what the unseen target may have been. Possibly the other boats when they are picked up can furnish evidence on this point."

NO WIRELESS FOR AID.

"The captain's boat had been towed for some distance, while alongside the submarine. Nothing was to be seen of the others. Since no wireless was sent out there was no hope of assistance arriving from the north. The captain therefore decided to make for the Irish coast to send help. After sailing and pulling for about 70 miles, they were picked up by the destroyer Lysander, which immediately sent a wireless that search should be made for the other survivors, and carried the occupants of the captain's boat into Queenstown."

WIDENED FRONT WEST OF BRENTA

Good Results of Italian Mountain Captures.

Czecho-Slovak Troops Did Good Work.

Roman Army Headquarters, July 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The local actions resulting in the reconquest of Monte di Valbella, Col del Rosso and Col del Rosso and for their objects the widening of the Italian front west of the Brenna, and the driving of the enemy from the positions he captured near Chiuson, lost to the Italians in January, and regained on June 16.

The Italian losses were slight compared to those sustained by the Austrians. This was due almost entirely to the accuracy of the Italian and allied artillery fire under cover of this fire the infantry was able to take enemy positions without much opposition and to dig in at once. The Austrian artillery return fire has been severe, some shells reaching the plains behind the lines and destroying houses centuries old. Trees 150 years old on Monte Rosso have been torn up.

The attack on Col del Rosso began Sunday morning shortly before noon. The Italians took the height from the third Edelweis division, which formerly fought under Emperor Charles. The division suffered severely. Italian airplanes showered them with bombs, while the Bersaglieri exacted a heavy toll in hand-to-hand fighting. Many of the Bersaglieri wore their red fatigue caps during the battle.

CZECHO-SLOVAKS AIDED.

Roman Army Headquarters, Monday, July 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—Czecho-Slovak troops distinguished themselves in the capture of Monte di Valbella by the Italians. Among a number of Austrian prisoners captured by a company of Czechs was a brother of one of the men in the victorious company. They soon established their identity and a joyful reunion took place.

One of the questions asked of his newly found brother by the prisoner was this: "Whose offensive is this? The Italians seem to be doing all the fighting."

FRENCH TAKE STRONG CREST FROM ENEMY

Gain Ridge On Two-Mile Front Northwest of Chateau Thierry.

READY FOR THE FOE

Feeling That Big Events Are Near and Confidence in Future.

Paris, June 30.—French troops late last night attacked the German lines north-west of Chateau Thierry, on the Marne front and captured the crest of the ridge between Mosloy and Passy-en-Valois. The War Office statement announces that the French advanced their line for a distance of 800 yards on a front of nearly two miles. Prisoners to the number of 265 were taken.

Positions taken from Germans by the French on Friday along the vital sector of the line south-west of Soissons, have been the scene of vigorous counter thrusts by the enemy. These attacks, one at Fosse-en-Bas and the other on Cutry ravine, which are about three miles apart, have been repulsed by the French. The new French lines have been held intact.

Late Friday night and early Saturday, the Germans put down vigorous parages along the sector north of Marville, but no further infantry action has been reported.

Great fleets of airplanes are constantly wheeling over hostile territory and conducting bitter warfare against the Germans.

Italian forces south-west of Rheims, on the heights of Bligny, who last week gallantly held their positions against two strong assaults by the Germans, again have repulsed the enemy, after they had succeeded in gaining a foothold in their lines.

American troops at Montdidier, in the vicinity of Cantigny, have captured 40 prisoners according to the French official statement, which continues by saying the French have taken prisoners and material in Apremont Forest.

There is a curious atmosphere in Paris and throughout France that the allied armies once again are on the eve of important events. The allied fronts show the same queer calmness experienced previous to the big German drive last March.

A high French military official said he thought the lull would not last much longer and that once again the Germans will launch at terrific offensive.

The worn-out German divisions have been reformed and prepared for the impending drive. Military circles remark on the activity shown by the Germans, again have repulsed the enemy, after they had succeeded in gaining a foothold in their lines.

Miller's Worm Powders act mildly, and without injury to the child, and there can be no doubt of their deadly effect upon worms. ## ITALIANS MAKE MORE GOOD GAINS

London, July 1.—Italian troops on Aslago plateau renewed their offensive yesterday and carried the important strategic positions of Col del Rosso and Col di Chello.

Heavy attacks launched against Monte di Valbella by the Austrians were repulsed by the Italians, "the enemy masses being mowed down by artillery fire," according to the official statement from headquarters. More than 2,000 prisoners were taken by the Italians.

The Austrian War Office to-day admits the complete evacuation by the Austrian forces of Col del Rosso and Monte di Valbella.

Visiting this week at their nephews, Arthur Newell, is Mrs. Bogle of Harper's Corners and Mrs. Cust of Lowville, whose ages total 169 years. The burning question of the hour is "who got the cloth" or rather what uninvited individual entered the establishment of Gordon & Son, in this village on Friday last and stole two pieces of valuable cloth, which the proprietor claims cannot be replaced. The loss was not noticed for some time afterwards, and then believe me, "there was something doing." The aid of the law was immediately invoked, and two of our most trusty sleuths were detailed on the case, but by time of going to press no trace of the missing goods has been obtained. The loss of the cloth following so closely on the loss of his valuable dog some days ago was a very sad blow to our esteemed tailor, and his many friends hope that the culprits will be caught and severely dealt with.

A Departed Treasure.
"Was your boy Josh much of a help to you around the farm?"
"Yes," replied Farmer Corntossel. "I didn't realize how much of a help he was. He didn't do much work. But he could play the Jewsharp an' tell riddles an' keep the farmhands entertained so that sometimes they'd stay for days at a time."

Too Busy Knitting.
"I proposed to Miss Peacher last night."
"Did she accept you?"
"She said, 'Yes,' in an absent-minded way, but I'm afraid that isn't final."
"Why not?"
"She was knitting at the time. I don't believe she understood what I asked her."

Less Trouble.
"My wife hates to answer the doorbell Sunday afternoon when she's comfortable in a kimono."
"Mine, too. But she says she'd rather take the trouble to dress than to wear herself out guessing around the circle of her friends trying to figure out who rang."

The Work Water.
"This idea of an age limit is all right," said Plodding Pete. "But it stops too quick."
"What do you mean?"
"There's nothin' to look forward to. A man soon gets too old to fight, but he's never too old to work."

LATER THE BETTER.

Hubby—Hurry, dear, or we shall be too late for church.
Wifey—We can't be too late when I'm wearing this new dress and hat.

Self-Help.
"Don't you hate a man who insists on being waited on instead of doing things for himself?" asked one woman.
"No," answered the other. "Our home would be much happier if my husband didn't get the lights and the doorbell all mixed up owing to his impression that he is a natural-born electrician."

An Expert.
Mr. Shears (in a jeweler's shop buying diamonds)—I wish my husband were here.
Jeweler—Is he an authority on diamonds, madam?
Mrs. Shears—Not exactly; he is an editor, and knows paste whenever he sees it.—Pearson's.

A Tempting Morsel.
"My, what a beautiful lion tamer!"
"A stunning creature."
"The lions show almost human intelligence."
"How is that?"
"They eye her as if they thought she looked good enough to eat."

The Reel Thing.
Patience—Who's the guy I see with you at the movies every week?
Patrice—Isn't he the "goods," though?
"He's not so bad. But, tell me, who is he?"
"Why, he's my reel steady."

MORE COMING.

"The fools are not all dead."
"That isn't the worst of it; they aren't all born yet."

Christening the Baby.
Brown has a lovely baby girl.
The stork left her with a flutter;
Brown named her "Oleomargarine,"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON 1—JULY 7, 1918.
BEGINNING THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.
John 1: 35-51; Acts 16: 13-34.

COMMENTARY—1. Jesus calling disciples (John 1: 35-51). After Jesus was baptized by John the Baptist, the latter said to two of his disciples, "Behold the Lamb of God," and those disciples at once became followers of Jesus. These were Andrew and probably John, they each brought a brother to Jesus, or at least Andrew brought his brother Simon Peter and it is quite likely that John brought his brother James. The next day Jesus secured Philip as a disciple, who in turn invited Nathanael to join them. The latter hesitated to cast in his lot with Jesus, for he doubted whether any good thing could come out of Nazareth; but when Jesus showed that he knew him perfectly and had seen him under the fig tree before Philip called him, he was convinced of his Messiahship and said, "Thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel."

II.—The conversion of Lydia (vs. 12-16). 13. On the sabbath we went... where prayer was wont to be made—Paul had seen a vision at Troas which divinely called him into Macedonia to preach the gospel. He and Silas, his fellow worker, went at once in obedience to the call and arrived at Philippi. Not finding a synagogue in the city and hearing there was a place of worship "without the gate by a river side," they went thither on the Sabbath. The apostles sought for people who worshipped the true God whenever they went to labor, and they naturally joined themselves to those in Philippi who prayed. We sat down—The customary posture of one who was giving instruction or explaining the scriptures. Spoke unto the women—Reference is made to those who were gathered on this particular occasion. The Christian religion has the effect of elevating woman to her true place in the world. Pagans look down upon her as inferior, and even the Jew did not properly honor her, but Christianity recognizes her equally with man. 14. Lydia... hear us—Her nationality and occupation are given and the fact also that she worshipped God. She must have come in contact with the Jews in her native country, Lydia is Asia Minor, and become a proselyte to the Jewish faith. Whose heart the Lord opened—The Holy Spirit had been working upon her heart and had prepared the way for the laborers of the apostles. To give heed unto the things... spoken by Paul (R. V.)—She not only heard the truths which Paul spoke, but she accepted them and acted in accordance with them. She believed the gospel and became a Christian. 15. was baptized—By accepting this ordinance she openly declared her faith in Jesus Christ, and professed the washing away of guilt that the application of water symbolized. Come into my house—Lydia and her household turned to Christ, were converted and baptized, and Lydia would gladly have the apostles make her house their home while they remained in Philippi. This is an example of that hospitality that is ever shown by true Christians.

III. The Philippian jailer converted (vs. 16-34). 16-24. There was, as usual, immediate opposition to the work of the Lord in Philippi. The record does not declare the motive of the damsel who was possessed of the spirit of divination, in declaring that Paul and Silas were servants of the true God; but whatever the motive may have been, the apostles were not willing to have such witness borne to their mission. She was a sorceress, pretending to foretell future events and to give advice regarding mysteries. The young woman was cured of her malady, and this was the occasion of a bitter outbreak against the apostles. 25. Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises—The situation the apostles were in was not conducive to sleep, even if they were disposed to rest; but they doubtless chose to spend the time in prayer and song. They praised God for his great mercy to them and for the privilege of suffering for Jesus' sake. The tense of the verbs in this sentence is the imperfect, which indicates that they kept praying and singing praises to God. The prisoners heard them—it is safe to say that no such sounds were ever before heard in the jail at Philippi. 26. And suddenly there was a great earthquake—While Paul and Silas were praying and singing with loud voices, the place was shaken with an earthquake. During the service that followed, Peter's miraculous release from prison some time before this, the place was shaken where the Christians were assembled (Acts 4: 31). Immediately all the doors were opened... hands were loosed—in the presence of God's power strict orders to keep prisoners securely, in inner prisons, stocks and guards were unavailing. The Almighty set one of his many agencies into action and his servants were set free. God employed one of the most powerful agencies in nature to do delicate work that night. Prison doors were opened, stocks were unfastened and no one was injured. 27. What have I done?—The jailer was responsible for keeping the prisoners who were committed to his care, and, if they escaped, his punishment was death. He saw the prison doors open and concluded that the prisoners had escaped, hence his purpose to "take his own life." 28. I cried with a loud voice—in the dim light the jailer could not see the prisoners, but Paul could see him, and saw what he was about to do.

29. Called for lights (R. V.)—The jailer was in haste to see the condition of things in the prison. Trembling—This marvellous occurrence deeply affected the jailer whose heart doubtless the Holy Spirit had touched. Fell down before Paul and Silas—An act of fear and reverence. 30. Brought them out—The jailer brought Paul and Silas either into the court of the prison or into his own apartment. He had no fear now that they would escape. 31.—Lords. The jailer addressed his prisoners as his superiors. What must I do to be saved—The jailer was not asking how to be saved from punishment for allowing his prisoners to escape, for they were all in custody still; but he was asking about the salvation of his soul. He was moved by the Spirit and by the influences of the apostles to realize his sinfulness and his need of salvation. 31. Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ—This included the acceptance of Jesus as his saviour, and complete surrender to him. It meant the giving up of paganism even in the midst of pagan influences. Thou shalt be saved—Saved from sin and placed in the way of final salvation. And thy house—All would be saved on the same conditions. 32. Spoke the word of the Lord—Paul and Silas preached the gospel to the jailer and his household in the night and amid the marvellous results of the earthquake. 32. Washed their stripes—The jailer tried to make amends for the severe treatment the apostles had received at the hands of the people of his city. Baptized—straightway—The jailer and his household made no delay in making full declaration of their faith in Christ and receiving the seal of entrance into the Christian Church. 34. Set meat before them. It was a wonderful night, both for the apostles and the jailer's household. The jailer fed the apostles and he could not do enough for them.

QUESTIONS—Give an account of how the early disciples of our Lord became his followers. Where is Philippi? How came Paul and Silas to be there? Describe the conversion of Lydia. Why were Paul and Silas arrested? How did they employ their time in prison? What inquiry did the jailer make? What directions did Paul give him?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.
Topic—The Christian life and how to begin it.

I. The Christian life.
If. How to begin it.

I. The Christian life. A true Christian life embraces an inward experience and an outward expression. The former has its origin in a moral regeneration, and consists in a living union with Christ. At its threshold Jesus places the marvel and mystery of an experience which He calls being "born of the Spirit." Without this He declares no man can "see the kingdom of God." The vital relationship he represents under the figure of the vine and its branches. The relation is one of mutual, though not equal, dependence. One life flows through both. There is no independent spiritual life for men. "Apart from Me ye can do nothing" (John 15: 5, R. V.). Likewise the vine is dependent upon the branches for extension and fruitfulness. "In them and they in me," the dependent upon the branches for extension and fruitfulness. "In them, and thou in Me," is the Master's expression of the former, "that ye bear much fruit," of the latter. Exalted as were the character and ministry of John, his mission was only preparatory; and he turned his disciples from himself, that they might find the Christ, who came that "they might have life;" and who alone as "the Lamb of God... taketh away the sin of the world." No process of instruction or self-development can effect moral restoration or self-development can effect moral restoration. Mere conformity of conduct to correct standards is insufficient. "Is thine heart right?" It is "not by works of righteousness... but by the renewing of the Holy Ghost." "Neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature." "Be ye transformed." Christian life finds its appropriate expression in unselfish service.

II. How to begin it. By a right choice. In the volition lies the point of departure; and of return. "Ye will not come unto me." "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." A wrong choice wrecked the race. The fall occurred at the instant in which the will of the creature consciously placed itself in rebellion against the will of the Creator. Disobedience was the expression of an already accomplished fact. The attitude of the will is not sufficient, but it is indispensable. Here is the essential element of repentance. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts." Tennyson describes it thus:
"And what is true repentance, but in thought,

How to Help a Lame Corn Crop

The Judicious Use of Artificial Fertilizer Will Stimulate Growth and Hasten the Maturity of the Crop—By Henry G. Bell, B. S. A.

Unless material assistance is given to the corn fields of Canada, thousands of barrels of water are going to be harvested instead of mature corn. An unparalleled seed shortage last spring necessitated the importation of corn seed from the Middle Western and Eastern States. Within a few days this seed will be planted and with favorable weather there will be an extraordinary growth of corn stalk but without help, little of the crop will reach the stage where grain is formed. In most parts of the province it is doubtful if even corn ears will be formed before the early frost cuts short the growing season.

Corn which has been produced under conditions of the Middle Western or Eastern States has become used to a growing season of 180 to 200 days free of frost. Such is the average climatic records from the states whence that the corn in immature condition—immature corn such as much of this southern grown seed will produce at the time of the first frosts in Ontario—the crop contains approximately half of the dry matter that it should produce before putting in the silo. Its actual value as a producer of flesh and muscle is approximately 60 per cent of what it would be if the corn matured. The fat the ensilage contains is only one-fifth of what good ensilage corn should carry, while the heat and energy producing food (carbohydrates) amount to only 11 per cent of what it would be if the corn reached the stage of maturity in which it is best suited to the silo.

These points are of vital importance to the feeder of dairy or beef cattle.

There is no panacea for such an unfortunate condition of affairs. No one can suggest a line of action that the importance of a continuous and abundant supply of available plant-food from the time of planting till the time of harvesting the maize plant (corn).

"But," the average man asks, "how is a man to get fertilizer applied to his corn crop?" If his corn acreage is comparatively small, he can apply the fertilizer by distributing it up and down between spaces of the corn rows and work it in at the time the corn is cultivated. In the south, much fertilizer is applied to corn through what is called a fertilizer bugle. This is a very simple apparatus, consisting only of an ordinary tin funnel 8 or 10 ins. across inserted in a piece of rubber hose. The bag of fertilizer is thrown over the shoulder and the funnel is held under a corner of the bag, where an opening has been made. The other end of the rubber hose guides the fertilizer along the row as near the corn corn has been obtained. In bringing it to Ontario even under the best conditions the period free of frost will rarely exceed 150 days, while the growing seasons of many sections where ensilage corn is an important crop, does not exceed 110 to 120 days free of frost. There is an immense difference in the water content and food value of corn at various well-known stages of the growth. Indiana station in 1914 published an exhaustive study on the subject. Samples were taken at various stages of the growth of the plant and carefully analysed. When the corn was forming its sixth blade, the plant contained 85.6 per cent of water. When the ears were just starting to form, it contained 86.8 per cent of water. When the kernels were in the milk stage it contained 75.1 per cent water. In the glazing stage 65.8 per cent of water, and when the corn was in best condition to put in the silo it contained 62.8 per cent of water. These comparisons show the great importance of maturing of the corn, to avoid harvesting water instead of feed material. Moreover, corn put in the silo in an immature state tends to sour to such an extent that the ensilage is reduced to a very low feeding value.

The judicious use of artificial fertilizer will also hasten the growth and maturity of the crop. The one thing that will be of supreme importance to the Ontario corn crop this year is a good supply of available phosphoric acid in the corn soil. This is no mysterious condition, but is a kind of plantfood that the crop takes out of the soil or out of manure or out of fertilizers. In order to hasten its maturity. The rapidity of growth of the crop depends largely upon the supply of nitrogen which the plant can obtain from the soil, hence the plantfood that will be of most assistance to the growing crop this year is one supplying a small amount of nitrogen and a comparatively large amount of available phosphoric acid. The authors of the Indiana bulletin have the following to say on this point: "From a practical standpoint the curves show plant as is desirable. By this means the fertilizer can be distributed along the row as fast as a man walks. Possibly the best method of applying fertilizer as a side dresser is through the fertilizer attachment of the corn cultivator. Many modern corn cultivators have fertilizer boxes attached, which provide for the fertilizer to be distributed in front of the shoes. The cultivation of the corn works the fertilizer into the ground.

Undoubtedly not a few corn growers will say, "How can a man attend to such a matter as side-dressing corn when labor is so short?" Records show that without fertilizer it is possible to produce corn which will yield approximately 28 to 37 bushels ear corn to the acre, while with fertilizer it is possible to increase the yield of corn more than 16 bushels per acre. It takes just as much labor to produce the unfertilized corn as it does fertilized. The actual yields show that labor used on fertilized corn has been 50 per cent more efficient than that used on the unfertilized, or stated in another way—a third less the acreage will produce just as much corn when the corn is well fed.

The corn should be allowed to stand as late as possible. A slight touch of frost will not very injuriously affect the feeding value and will quite possibly improve the keeping qualities of the ensilage.

Not even in inmost thought, to think again. The sins which made the past so pleasant to us. Repentance is not mere regret, even though deepened to include the moral element of remorse. This was the challenge of the wilderness fore-runner, of the Master Himself, and of his Spirit-baptized apostles (Matt. 3: 2; 4: 17; Acts 2: 38). It remains a primary note of every true gospel message, and can not be obscured without fatal results. Self-surrender is the attitude of the will toward the demands of God's law. It recognizes its authority and acknowledges the righteousness of its requirements. It is the central principle of that denial of self, which is the original and permanent condition of discipleship; and implies a sincere purpose of implicit obedience. Trust in Christ, Faith, which is not an immediate impartation, but the exercise of an inherent faculty of the soul, is the original, only, and immediate condition of salvation. W.H.C.

THE ALIBI

—BY—
Geo. Allan England

Author of "Darkness and Dawn," "Beyond the Great Oblivion," "The Empire in the Air," "The Golden Blight," "The After-Glow," "The Crime-Detector," etc.

What had become of all his confidence of only a few hours previously? Whereas the night before in the darkness he had felt absolute confidence in his astute plans and clever ruses, now all at once—under daylight and amid all these hurrying thousands of his fellow-men—he found himself stripped bare of courage.

For a second it seemed to him as if all the dykes of self-control were breaking before that flood of unreasoning terror; as if he must run amuck, flinging his arms wildly, screaming:

"Look, all you people; I—I am the murderer!"

But by an effort that wrenched his soul he lashed his routed forces into discipline again. His panic, having reached its climax, now began to subside. After all, nobody had noticed him to any serious degree. Nobody knew him; nobody had understood.

He turned aside from the morning throng, all so busy and so eager; he put his foot upon an iron rail in front of a steamship company's office and retied his shoe lace. This little act, this small respite from facing the eyes of human beings, gave his stampeded resolutions time once more to form in battle line.

And as he stood up again, again looked men in the face and drew a deep breath, he knew that he had conquered. Once more he had whipped his wavering soul back to the firing line. He still was master in his own house.

Still weak, though with returning strength and self-confidence, he resumed his course up Broadway. Jarboe's office lay close at hand, in Trinity Place. Thither he now directed his steps. The note must be met at once; moreover, to carry eighty-five thousand dollars in the stolen one-thousand dollar bills back to the bank itself would be the acme of rashness. At all hazards he must rid himself of those bills immediately.

Jarboe had just got in when Slayton arrived. The rat-eyed little usurer, disfigured by a large wen on the forehead, showed him into an inner office, a veritable spider web of iniquity and extortion, when but few files ever escaped with whole wings. Rubbing his hands together and leering with disgusting insinuation, the old Shylock awaited his money.

Slayton made no words with him, but counted out the cash, took the note and without even a "Good morning!" started to leave.

"Awful tragedy up at your bank, sir. Awful, indeed!" the old man mumbled. "But it's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Could Not Lift Stick of Wood

Would Almost Faint From Severe Pain in Back—Doctors Could Not Get the Kidneys Set Right.

A great many people suffer the results of deranged kidneys and do not understand the cause of trouble or the way to obtain cure. The writer of this letter suffered excruciating pains in the back and in vain his physician tried to cure him. For some reason or other his medicines did not have the desired effect.

Mr. Olt's brother was a merchant selling among other medicines, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and he heard his customers telling about how they were cured of kidney derangements by their use. This led to Mr. Olt's putting them to the test, with the splendid results reported in this letter.

Mr. E. C. Olt, Benton, Carleton County, N. B., writes: "I am glad to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I suffered from my kidneys, which at one time were so bad I could not lift a stick of wood without getting on my knees, and then would almost faint from the pain in my back. I consulted a doctor about it, and he gave me some medicine, but it did not help me. My brother, who is a merchant, and carries all your medicines, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I got one box, and they helped me, so I got another one, and kept on until I had taken five boxes, which cured me. I have had no trouble with my back since, and am never without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house. Last summer I also suffered from piles. I used three boxes of your Ointment and it cured them. I can certainly recommend Dr. Chase's Pills and Ointment."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute or you will certainly be disappointed.

Slayton's face paled to a dull gray. "What do you mean, you infamous scoundrel?" he demanded.

"Mean, sir? Oh nothing; nothing. Why do you ask?"

"Do you insinuate—"

"I insinuate nothing, sir. It's nothing to me where a client of mine raises the money to pay his just debts. If I get my honest dues that's all I'm concerned about. Only—MacKenzie was such a fine old chap; now wasn't he, sir?"

Beside himself, Slayton whirled on the creature, his face a mask of hate. "Look out, you bound!" he flung at the usurer in a low voice of passion. "Look out that you don't get as much, some of these days, from one or another of the men and women you enjoy ruining, you blood-sucker!"

"There, there, sir," returned the usurer, grinning with toothless gums. "Don't get excited, sir. What happens outside of this office is no concern of old Jarboe's. We all of us have secrets. Skeletons rattle in every closet, sir. They rattle in mine. All well and good. Let them. Maybe they rattle in yours, I don't care. None of my business. If you have anything on me keep it to yourself. I'll do the same by you, sir, and thank you. Good day, sir, and thank you."

Speechless with rage—rage so intense it swallowed even any alarm that old Jarboe's pregnant words might have awakened—Slayton left the office, slamming the door behind him.

Only when he once more found himself in the street did he recover his full wits. But with the return of entire rationality he found all his residue of fear was gone. The interview with Jarboe had—for a time at least—banished it. And, too, the feeling that after all these weary months and years of dickering and bargaining and begging and usury he once more was a free man—out of Jarboe's gnarled clutches, filled him with a vast, assuaging sense of relief.

In vain now news-stands and shouting urchins assailed him with their visual and auditory shocks. Tall headlines and stentorian cries had lost their power to be inculcated against emotion. His first severe panic, caused by his first hearing of the shout, "Bank Murder!" had now, in subsiding, left his emotions a scintilla medium.

The fires of fear had purged away most of the consumable panic material in his soul. He had received his necessary training. Now he felt a new boldness. A certain eagerness began to possess him; an impatience to meet his peril, to face it down, to have it over and done with, once for all.

"The quarter past, the better," he growled, striding along with renewed confidence.

His intense anger at Jarboe had infused fresh vitality into his look. His face betrayed no more emotion than might naturally have been expected there, not that the whole downtown section was re-echoing to the news: "Powhatan Bank Murder!"

Suddenly he bethought him that he had not yet bought a paper. This in itself might look unnatural and give rise to suspicion. Surely he must have a paper. He purchased two—one yellow, the other moderate in tone—and thrust them into his overcoat pocket.

It was impossible for him to force himself to read a single word of the story. Irresistibly it repelled him. But headlines flung themselves at him as he paused at the news-stand, and would not be denied.

Slayton knew he ought to read something of the murder. He understood perfectly well that the papers might contain information vital to his welfare—warnings, perhaps, or hints of conduct he might employ to strengthen suspicion of Mansfield. Yet, strive as he could, he found himself unable to fix his thought on the printed columns as he walked on and on. Now that he was approaching the vortex of his crime, a resistless force seemed to be drawing him onward, downward, as into a whirlpool. All he desired now was to reach the bank and with his own eyes see again his horrible handiwork; with his own ears hear the infant cry; with his own mouth speak the words that should send an innocent boy to the electric chair. Haunting his steps, he pressed on toward the bank.

Everywhere, he felt positive, people were talking of the tragedy. His exaggeration of its importance had become almost an obsession with him. In knots on curbs and corners men were gathered. What else could they be discussing save that? He saw open newspapers in office windows with clerks and brokers reading them. They were reading details of the murder, of course; nothing else mattered now but this crime of his.

As he walked down Cedar street he thought the drift of traffic was setting toward the bank. A policeman on William street was obviously headed that way. As all roads lead to Rome, so now all Slayton's thoughts and sense-impressions drew toward that fatal spot where old man Mackenzie, shot down by his hand, lay rigid in the eternal mystery, death.

Slayton reached the last corner, took a firmer grip on his resolution, and swung into the street itself where the bank stood. Now that the supreme moment was almost upon him, an icy coldness of determination had possessed his body, mind and soul. A sphygmograph would hardly have registered his pulse as higher than normal.

His face was pale and just a bit drawn about the mouth, but who could question that? Mackenzie had been his friend for many years. Had he not shown some natural emotion, would it not have been strange indeed?

As he approached the bank he saw the street was almost blocked by the crowd that, morbidly curious, had clotted round the door. A number of policemen were doing their best to keep the traffic moving, but without any very marked success. A motor patrol stood backed up to the sidewalk. Slayton caught sight of the uniform of a police surgeon.

In the building opposite, eager faces crowded at the open windows, faces wherein no sympathy showed, faces

A GOOD APPETITE A GREAT BLESSING

The Occasional Use of a Tonic Will Ensure a Good Appetite and Good Health.

Loss of appetite during the summer months is a common trouble, and indicates that the digestive system is out of order. Lacking a healthy appetite many people—especially women—go too long without food, or eat sparingly because food seems to distress them, and it is no wonder they complain of being constantly tired and unable to stand the hot weather. All this simply means that the digestive system is not doing its proper work, and that the nutriment that should come from the food is not being distributed to the various organs of the body. In other words the blood is growing thin and watery. In such cases what is needed is a summer tonic, and among all medicines there is no tonic equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "Take a short treatment with these pills and notice how promptly your appetite returns and your power to digest food improves. Your food will seem to you good, your strength will return and you will no longer complain that the hot weather tires you out. Mrs. M. Kelly, Windsor, Ont., says: "I suffered from indigestion for several years, and although I was constantly taking doctors' prescriptions they did not cure me, and the result was that I was greatly run down, and always feeling poorly. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I soon found they were helping me I continued their use until I was fully cured, and am now able to properly digest any food I take. As a tonic and blood-builder I know of no medicine to equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I recommend them to all in need of a medicine."

The best time to begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the moment you feel the least bit out of sorts. The sooner you do so the sooner you will regain your old time energy. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at fifty cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

morely gaping with pleasurable excitement, in one of the windows a moving-picture operation was steadily turning a crank. This scene would ere long appear on a multitude of screens as part of the news of the day.

A shudder of repulsion passed through the cashier at sight of the sensation-seeking New York mob now clustering round the place of death like flies on carrion. With this repulsion he felt at the same time a kind of strange and perverse pride that he, Walter Slayton, should be the cause of all this commotion. For a moment he understood the psychology of the low-grade murderer who cannot rest till he has returned to look once more on the face of his dead enemy.

As he came on and on through the outskirts of the crowd, slowing through the thick of it, a reporter snatched a local plane in his face. Slayton felt no emotion. Nothing in that photograph, though printed in a half-million edition, could harm him. He realized that, after all, his appearance could not matter much. A good deal of perturbation could pass unnoticed or be taken as quite natural. The sequence of circumstantial proof above all—this must be the determining factor in convicting.

Slayton's relief became greater. He held his head well up now as he bowed his way to the front.

"Let me pass, here!" he commanded. "Let me pass!"

A policeman halted him. "Nothin' doin', mister! Nobody else ain't allowed in the bank!"

Slayton flashed his card. With apologies the officers cleared a way for him.

"Has the coroner come yet?" asked Slayton.

The officer nodded. "He's just gettin' through viewin' the body," he answered. "He only came a few minutes ago. We had trouble locatin' him," he added, while morbid bystanders craned and crowded to catch a word.

"Any verdict?"

"Not yet there ain't. But it's a job, all right. Somebody croaked him sure, and—

"Anderson found him? The janitor found him? Is that right?"

"That's right. When he opened the place the old man was lyin' there cold."

Slayton pushed on through the big revolving doors into the lobby of the bank. Now finally he had reached the crowded yet the longed-for place where lay his victim. Now his ordeal of self-control was crowding close upon him. Now at last the moment of supreme peril was at hand.

CHAPTER I.

Warily, yet with the boldness that now alone could save him, the murderer advanced, his every sense alert for peril.

A strange, unnatural tension reigned in the bank. None of the usual morning activities had as yet begun. Paralysis lay upon its entire life. Not a single one of its people could be seen in any of their accustomed cages. Here and there an officer in uniform or a plain-clothes man stood silently, watchful. At one of the glass shelves on the left a man was busily writing—scratching hasty lines on cheap paper. Slayton recognized a reporter and shuddered.

Near a pillar at the end of the hallway a little knot of men, all unknown to Slayton, were talking in low tones. One or two of them looked up at him. He felt again that horrible sensation that his guilt must be apparent to everybody. Once more he felt there must be a strong effort he collected himself and advanced toward the little doorway which gave admittance to the grilled area of the bank.

Through the grillwork Slayton could see another group of men, some of them employees of the bank, some strangers. One he recognized from newspaper pictures he had seen as "Coroner Roadstrand." With the coroner Slayton caught a furtive glimpse of himself in a mirror. He perceived that he was very pale, but that his face betrayed his crime he could not see. His thoughts were racing like a sluice. He hardly knew whether to bless or curse the delay in the coroner's arrival. That delay explained, of course, why the body had not been already removed. In some ways this might make the situation harder for him. In others, he instinctively felt, it might help him.

He shrank from viewing the corpse again, and yet he knew he must conceal this emotion. At that precise moment of all moments the most acute peril would assail him.

Where, he wondered, could Mansfield be? It was already past the usual time for his appearance. Why had he not arrived? Slayton felt a burning eagerness to have him arrive, to be at work on the plot against him, and see the meshes tightening about the boy.

And yet the cashier knew that Mansfield's tardiness would help the one was a medical-looking man. plot along. If by any chance the young chap should fail to come at all, that would be of tremendous importance. Every moment of delay now possessed enormous possibilities.

His mind whirling with the strain of the situation, yet dominated by the overmastering determination to play the game to a finish, he approached the gateway in the grille. His reawakening emotions exceeded anything he had calculated on. He had believed himself now cold enough, calm and calculating enough, to preserve his poise even under these circumstances. But he had not reckoned on the reality. A glimpse of a still body, lying there under a blanket that had been drawn over it, sent his heart plunging downward in sick horror.

Sheridan, the paying-teller, glanced up as he approached, turned, and came toward him. One or two others in the group by the body looked at him.

"Hello, here's Slayton! Slayton's come!" he heard voices.

A hand fell on his arm. He started with a nervous shock. Heavens! Arrests were made in just that way! The touch of that hand left him shivering with terror. For a second he thought catastrophe had smitten. Staring, he faced the man beside him.

Another reporter! "Confound you, what are you doing in here?" demanded Slayton with passionate anger, reflex of his groundless fears. "What do you want, anyhow?"

"Have you any opinion as to the identity of the murderer?" queried the reporter.

"If I had, d'you think I'd tell you?"

"I represent the Evening—"

"I don't give a curse what you represent! In a case of this kind, where the personnel of the bank itself may possibly be involved—Get out! Not a word; you understand? I refuse to be quoted for a single word!"

Slayton flouted the reporter and strode on. His confidence had suddenly risen several degrees again. Those few words of his, he knew, had been a master-stroke. Already the reporter was scribbling. Inside an hour, Slayton felt confident, staring headlines would fling to the world:

CATARRHOZONE

CURES WITHOUT DRUGS!

One of the finest discoveries in medicine was given to the public when Catarrhozone was placed on the market about fifteen years ago. Since then thousands have been cured of asthma and catarrh. An interesting case is reported from Calgary in a letter from Creighton E. Thompson, who says:

"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from Asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Finlay's drug store, and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh."

The one-dollar package lasts two months; small size, 50c; sample size, 25c; all storekeepers and druggists, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

CARLISLE NOTES

Carlisle.—On Saturday night last Spencer Bennett and John Gastle, two of our respected bachelor friends from the progresston Boulevard, took a spinster searching trip to Campbellville. An eye witness said the bachelors were togged up for a fair, and looked as if they had been shipped in a band box from New York. Their moustaches were waxed, their shoes shined, laundry perfect, and had not a wrinkle in their apparel. They entered the ice cream parlors with an air of dignity seldom noticed in rural districts and by the way they melted and treated the frozen extract of cow commonly known as ice cream, one would think they were good Samaritans. A brand new Chevrolet auto stood outside the parlors and added much to their effect. Just how successful their search will be remains to be seen. We think, however, that they would have been more successful if they had gone to Spinsterville, sometimes known as Waterdown or Cat-town. It is claimed by pioneers that the natives of Spinsterville, Pusyville, Cat-town, or Waterdown, whatever you have a mind to call it, are 75 per cent old maids, and each old maid has five cats and each cat to keep from starving makes two trips per week to Fishtown, called Bronte, for short. If our Progresston friends are not successful at Campbellville we would suggest a trial trip to Waterdown.

On Monday last the writer took a flying trip to Galt in his tin Lizzie to get some repairs for that agricultural implement so dear to the hearts of the Irish, called the O. K. potato planter. I went by way of "No Man's Land," sometimes known as Frelton for short. From there I went by way of the ninth concession. The first part of the way, and particularly the roads of West Flamboro, were a credit to the people; but, oh, the rest of the road, to be a stone road, showed neglect and my spark of life nearly went out. I would recommend that about $4,000,000 be spent in repair work. Then I came to a mail box with a sign or name on it which seemed characteristic of my feelings, "Riddle," and sure my carcass was riddled and bruised. Nearly all the men along this life departing road were either rolling down stones in the fields or pitching cobble stones on a stoneboat. Apparently they had been picking stone nearly all their lives, for their fingers were worn down to half length. The names on the mail boxes were characteristic of the people who travel that way, for the next one I noticed was "Killagan." "Killed again. Oh, no, not quite," I exclaimed to myself, though well "riddled" and shaken up and I'll pull through yet. At last to my relief the outskirts of Galt appeared and soon I arrived at the office of the Canadian Potato Machinery Co., the place where they manufacture the O. K. implements. The repairs were promptly handed out by the manager. I do not know his name. He had glasses on and was a pretty fine looking man, with a big heart and had a friendly disposition, but what they called him I do not know. At last I started home, not noticing anything worthy of mention until I spied Jim Cook plowing in potatoes, and of course I could not help but stop and renew old acquaintanceship. The next man I came to was a Mr. Hoffman or Halfman, I am not just sure of the spelling, and all I know about him is that when I was a young fellow I resigned in his favor.

The next fellow to appear on the scene was a long-legged, lean chap, by the name of James Aaron Gray. He was stepping off a piece of land, apparently for a field crop competition. Most people in measuring land consider one step or pace to be equal to one yard, but Mr. Gray always counts on two yards to the pace. When I got home I tried the O. K. repairs on the O. K. planter and everything was O. K. I was just going to close this weekly epistle, but I must tell you how the other day I was insulted and discouraged. Well, I always thought I was a pretty fine looking fellow, but the other day I was in Steel Briggs' seed store and the manager called me Mr. Ryckman, and I was certainly sick. A few days later I was in Mr. Cummins' drug store in Waterdown to get some oil of tar to put on the corn to scare the crows, when the druggist called me Mr. Ryckman. Well, I was certainly insulted and discouraged and decided I would not need the oil of tar. Myrrell, I never want to be taken for you again.

WHOLE FAMILY OF THIEVES CAUGHT

One night early last week Mr. Elmer Adamson heard a disturbance among his poultry. On rushing out he found the thief to be a negro from Flamboro Centre. The prisoner was severely dealt with and put out of business. The following night a like disturbance was heard and investigation showed that the negro's wife had left her family of seven at home and came to finish her husband's job. With some difficulty she was rounded up and after being given a fair trial was sent to penitentiary for life. Two days later Mr. Adamson noticed the seven negro children playing around a lumber pile in the yard and had them also sent to the reformatory for twenty years. He thought his troubles were all over, until a few days later he found a cousin of the first prisoner strolling about in a field and gave him some of the former gent's medicine. The thieves all left messages for several of their colleagues at Flamboro Centre and if they wish to know Mr. and Mrs. Skunks' farewell words, go to headquarters and get them. Well done Elmer, killed ten skunks in one week.
