den Death of His Lordship from He errhage at Cobourg This Morning.

Conoung, Nov. 2 .- The Hop. Mr Justice O'Connor, who was holding the izes here, died today at about one p'clock p.m. at the Arlington House. His Lordship opened the court on Monday although feeling very poorly after his illness at Cornwal, and on Tuesday he held court all day, being apparently in good spirits and feeling much better, but during that night he was seized with blood very copiously. On Wednesday morning he was very weak, and Dr. Waters, who was attending him, felt great uneasiness about him. Judge Benson, at the request of Judge O'Conmor, took the court yesterday and today. Judge O'Connor continued to weaken until about 11 a.m. today, when he fell fato a state of collapse from which he of Toronto, who were here as witnesses on a trial, were also in attendance today on the late judge.

mother having emigrated to America from Kerry, Ireland, the year previous, and settled in Boston. Four years later his parents removed to Exeter, where he received his education. In 1849 he married Miss Mary Barrett, eldest daughter of Richard Barrett, of Killarrey, Ireland. Five years later he was called to the bar, and was also a member of the bar of the state of Michigan. His legal attainments soon forced him into a prominent position at the bar of Upper Canada. He was reeye of Windsor about this 2 me, and subsequently warden of Essex county, a position which he occupied for three years, having been twice unanimously elected by the county council. He first ran for parliamentary honours in 1861 in 1861 in Essex, but was defeatel by Mr Arthur Rankin, whom, however, he succeeded in unseating in 1863. Ot the new election he was returned. The general election coming on that year Mr O'Connor was again elected, but his former opponent turned the tables on him this time and gained the seat, from which he was once more ousted by Mt O'Connor in 1867, who represented than e ratituency until 1882. In 1870 he addressed a series of letters to the Govermor General on the subject on Fenianism. The late judge was president of the Council in Sir John Macdonald's Administration during the latter part of 1872 and earlier months of the following year, when he resigned to accept a portfolio as Minister of Inland Revenue. which he relinquished the same year to become Postmaster-General, holding the office until the resignation of the Government in 1873. His sudden taking off has created a widespread feeling of regret among the members of the legal profession, by whom he was universally respected as a gentleman and a judge. He lived at No. 85 Gerrard street east. An Ottawa despatch in the papers today states that Mr O'Connor commenced an action against the Dominion Government, claiming a large sum of money for charges in preparing the case for the Dominion Government against Ontario in the celebrated boundary dispute. One incident in the life of the deceased judge is well worth publishing, as showing his resolute nature : When about 20 years of age, while chopping in the woods on his father's farm, a cold winter's day, after a heavy snow storm, a tree fell on him, pinning one of his legs to the earth. His cries for assistance bringing him no relief, he seized the axe and with one blow severed the imprisoned limb. Then taking out his handkerchief he bandaged up the

THE ROTHSCHILD WEDDING

A Paris cablegram gives the following additional particulars of the great wedding of the week in that city: The wedding at the Jewish Synagogue of Mlle. Aline de Rothschild with M. Albert Edward Sassoen came off at 1 o'clock today with great eclat. Mile. de Rothschild is a brunette, very tall and finely built, with a thoroughbred patri-cian presence. She wore a long white satin dress, with flounces of English lace in the form of an apron, trimmed with but during that night he was seized with orange blossoms. Her corsage was straight cut, with four rows of orange Her corsage was piossoms arranged like the braiding of a hussar jacket. Her headdress was a silver Russian diadem, partly covered beneath her long tulle veil.

Ten paces behind the bride walked Baroness Gustave de Rothschild in peluce infernale, opening on an underdress of rose coral peluche, embroidered in heavy dead gold, with hood to match. Then came the Baroness Nathaniel de Rothschild, in pansy colored plush over did not rally. Mrs O'Conner was with signs traced in dark blue velvet. The Princess de Sagan appeared in a tight

At the moment when the grand rabbi Mass, in January, 1824, his father and pronounced the last word of his address a group of eight young ladies dashed forth into the middle of the synagogue like a squadron of cavalry, all dressed alike in faille rose. Each wore a dia-mond broech with the five arrows of the maison de Rothschild, with pearl and opal doves bearing an olive branch in heir mouths—a present from the bride. Besides these young ladies there were fifteen ladies of honor, all with the same coiffure, namely: A delicious little mouse gray felt hat, trimmed with large pink ribbons and feathers.

At the moment when the squadron of eight young ladies collected in the centre of the synagogue a large crystal vas was dashed upon the stone floor and scattered into a thousand fragments by the grand rabbi, as indicative of the fragility of all things human.

Little Things in the Household.

There are no trifles in this life. To give new emphasis to this familiar truth the Youth's Companion brings forward the very impressive fact that the whole income of all the people of this country is an average of almost exactly hfty cents a day. This sum includes the profits of the rich and the wages of the poor. It represents not only the value of what is

The mind loves to Princess de Sagan appeared in a tight dwell on great things rather than on damas that clung to her fair form like a little drops of water and little grains of sand make the mighty ocean and the beauteous land; but that fact does not generally make a very deep impression.

The truth nevertheless is of prime importance; and nowhere does it hold more inexorably than in family life. It is the oft-recurring "trifling expenses" that consume the income. It is the negligence of the "insignificant" attentions. which love or politeness should prompt that makes hearts ache. It is the utterance of pretty jealousies or complaints that drives love from the fireside.

Take any department of domestic conomy, and see how much the 'trifles' count for. The brightness and good cheer of the parlor depend on the little contrivances of the thrifty housewife. The hospitality, health and savory attractiveness of the dining table depend on her skill in the tedious details of culinary laws. A Woman who Failed.

BY BESSIE CHANDLER.

When Molly Graham married Irving Tcacy, they lived for a time in picturesque poverty. Now picturesque poverty is not a bad thing to live in ; it is not uncomfortable, and is very apt to be jolly. It is as different from true poverty as that in its turn is from squalor. They are all steps in the stairway which lea is from absolute starvation to millionairedom. The trouble with picturesque poverty is that it rarely lasts, It is apt to make progress into the next step of being well-to-do, or to sink slowly into the region of real want. The latter diregion threatened the Tracys at the end of the second year after their marriage.

Irving Tracy was a doctor who had apparently every requisite for a successful career. He was young and strong. devoted to their profession, and more than ordinarily clever, He was full of enthusiasm and energy, and looked "apon the world as his oyster," which he was determined to open as speedily as kicked things a good deal, and for a child

He was called "a very promising young man" by the elder citizens of Greenville, whither he had come about He was always under foot, for they three years before his marriage. During that time he had succeeded in gaining a attempted to take care of him herself. considerable practice, He had a frank, pleasant way which soon made him popular, and the older doctors had been very cordial to him, even while they laughed a little at his very progressive two new physicians had come to Greenways and modern sanitary notions.

Every one in Greenville was glad was as popular in her way as he was in

She did not live in Greenville, but had come there for several summers to visit her old school-mate Anna Carter. She was an orphan, with a little sum of money, which had been enough to clothe and educate her, and she had stayed at her boarding-school after she was graduated, teaching the younger classes, She was very pretty, though with a delicate, undecided sort of prettiness, that might possibly develop as she grew older into real beauty, or might on the contrary, disappear entirely. She was a great favorite, and had many friends and at least two lovers in Greenville, but though John Carter was financially a much better man than Dr. Tracy, Molly had not hesitated a minute between love

Irving loved her in the intense, wholehearted, devoted way, that is just at present a little out of fashion. She was for him "the world's one weman." He could no more have analyzed his emo tions concerning her than he could have criticized Moliv herself. That she prising as it was beatific, but that loving him she should marry him, not only willingly, but gladly, in spite of his poverty, did not seem to him strange at all.

In fact, Molly and he were in love so much with each other, and seemed to things." care so little about their slim purses, that older people, who had, some of them, tried the experiment of living on bread pity and envy.

Irving rented a small pictbresue cottage, painted red, with olive green blinds, and drew from his slender store to furnish it. Molly took a part of her ordering her household so that things money, too, and together they made the fitted in. The baby did not fit in anylittle home very cosy and bright.

thought her a wonderful housekeeper with her as when he married her, though, to be sure, he had detected a few weak spots in her character. But he treated them as a good skater does thin ice, glided over them as soon as possible, and tried in each instance not to go near that place again.

At the end of the second year things began to wear out in the Tracy's home. Many of the wedding presents, which hal done so much toward beautifying it, were broken, and others had lost their

The pretty cretonne, which Molly had used so lavishly for curtains and upholstery, had faded, and the colored Cantonflannel, which had supplemented cretonne, looked even more forlorn. It had faded and fuzzed up too. The carpets were beginning to be a little shabby and the cheap furniture, which had been so pretty when new, looked rather banged and marred. A good deal of the damage was due to the baby, who was of a particularly destructive variety. It loved to try to pull himself up by the small tables, which he only succeeded in tipping over on top of him with all that who was kept reasonably clean, it seemed as if he left the most extroardinary number of dirty finger-marks around. could not afford a nurse, and Molly had of all. With a length of some fourteen miles and a greatest width three, it is spacious enough to hold the navies of the world, and, with a little assistance to nature, could defy any attack; it is besides perfectly sheltered from every wind. Its shores are lined with farms, gardens and orchards, while pretty, farm houses dot the hillside all around. There is little in the peaceful aspect of this basin now to suggest the many sanguinary conflicts of which it has been the scene. Approaching Digby we had to lie off, as the tide was too low to permit of our going to the wharf. Some cargo, mainly fish packed in ice, for the Boston market, was brought off on a flat boat in tow of a tug, and after taking this in we were off again, through the Gut where tide ruus so rapidly that nothing but a steamer could stem it, and

The boat which was a poor affair was greatly over-crowded, the Boston party alone numbering over 50, and considerable disappointment was experienced in securing staterooms. They managed to get state-room accommodation for the ladies of the party, but the greater number of the men, like ourselves had to hang it out on stretchers in the lower cabin. New . The Manly Man.

It isn't the boy that doubles his fists And thrusts them under another's nose Baring the sleelves from his rigid wrists ady to rain vindictive blows:

Whose tongue is ready with gibe and jeer To stir up strife whenever he can; Breathing manace and waking fear.

It isn't the boy who takes his mug Then hangs himself by a silly hug The liveliest lamp-post standing near; Tho' he smoke the vilest cigarette, And lord it over a black-and-tan He's far from being a manly man.

It isn't loose speech nor dress that is loud; It isn't the cut of the ccat he may wear : A clown with case attracts a crowd, And wins a senseless shout and stare He may sport the heaviest watch and chain. With collar and necktie lead the van,? And flourish the noblest hat and cane -

These never make a manly man Will he think he has come to man's estate Will be think that vices makes him great, That only the week are afraid of sin? Some day to his foolish heart he will own He might have followed a wiser plan-One that will halp, and one alone, A boy to be a manly man.

Persian Origin.

Over a hundred years ago the following so called "Genesis 51" was used, says the Albany Journal, to puzzle biblias scholars, and today, were it read aloud in any mixed company, it is questionable if its fraudulent nature would be discovered, so beautifully is the spirit and language of the Old Testament imitated:

Mr. Ely and the priest lodged in the kouse of one of the petits habitants. In the evening, when they were alone, the subject of leprosy came up.

"We hear at the North," said Mr. Ely, "vague accounts of the Terre des Lepreux, which is said to be somewhat in Louisians. What truth is there in them?"

They are no doubt greatly evaguers.

2. And behold a man, bawed down with age, came from the way of the wilderness, leaning on his staff.

9. And at midnight God called unto

Abraham, saying: Abraham, where is the stranger? 10. And Abraham answed and said: Lord he would not worship thee, neither would he call upen thy name, therefore have I driven him out from before my

11. And God said; Have I not borne with him these hundred and ninety and eight years, and nourished him, and clothed him, notwithstanding his rebellion against me, and couldst not thou, that art threaff a single hear with him. that art thyself a sinner, bear with him one night.

12. And Abraham said: Let not the anger of my Lord wax against his servant; lo! I have sinned, forgive me, I pray thee.
13. And Abraham arose and went forth into the wilderness and sought diligently for the man, and found him and returned with him to the tent, and when he had entertained him kindly, he sent him away on the morrow with gifts.

14. And God spoke again unto Abraham, saying: For this thy ain shall thy seed be afflicted 4000 years in a strange land.

15. But for thy repentance will I deliver them, and they shall come forth with power and with gladness of heart, and with much substance.

In 1759, when in England as agent for the colony of Penusylvania, Benjamin Franklin privately printed this "chapter," as he always termed it. Taking only a sheet of paper, he kept it laid the Bible at the end of Genesis, and used to amuse himself by reading it aloud to his friends and hearing them express their supprise that they had express their surprise that they had never recollected reading it, and their openly expressed admiration of the moral it carried with it. Its origin is unknown. It has been traced back 700 years to a Persian poet who simply says "it was so related." It must be very old.

There have been since then no lepers in this parish except in these tainted families. The real Terre des Lepreux ed families. The real Terre des Lepreux in Louisiana is now on the lower Lafourche, below Harang's Canal. The bayou there is turbid and foul; it flows through malarious swamps lower than itself. The creole planters there are honest and temperate folk, but they are wretchedly poor. They raise only rice, and five on it and fish. The wet rice fields come up to the very doors of their fields come up to the very doors of their cabins. The leprosy which certain families among them have inherited is developed by these conditions. Five years ago Professor Joseph Jones president of the State Board of Health, went himself with his son to explore the cypress swamps and legoons of the lower Lafourche. Majeu, it is the region of the shadow of death. He found many poor lepers hiding there. They were as dead men who walk and talk. They could handle burning coals; they felt no longer cold, nor heat, nor pain. Their bodies were as corpses. One man lived alone in a hut, thatched with psimattoes, which he had built for himself, eating only the rice which he had p'anted. No man nor woman had come near him for years. The Terre des Lepreux

Mr. Ely remained silent, though a torrent of angry queries rushed to his lips. Why was othing done to mitigate the horrors of such life in-death? How could this priest, a mau of God, so calmly discuss these poor accursed creatures from his safe, comfortable point of vantage, logging on his easy-going mare vantage, jogging on his easy-going mare from one farm to another? He bade him presently a rather curt good-night, and went to the loft where he was to sleep. When he came down in the morning Pere Nedaud had gone.

Tobacco and the Heart.

Dr. Frantzel, of Berlin, reporting on the effects of immoderate smoking upon the heart, says that smoking, as a rule, agrees with persons for many years, although by degrees cigars of a finer flavor are chosen. But all at once, without any assignable cause, troubles are experienced with the heart, which compels the calling in of the doctor. Common cigars are not so liable to produce these effects as the finer flavored ones. Nor can the charge be laid upon cigarettes, although they produce evils of their own.
The troubles seldom begin till after the smoker is over 30 years of age, and most usually attack him at between 50 and 60 While it has not been determined what it is that makes smoking injurious, it appears certain that the effect does not

It is just as well that the important question of Commercial Union should be discussed so that it may be brought be-fore the public opinion in case it should ever be under the necessity of judging of ir. Until now no political party has put this question on its programme. It remains in the domain of free discussion. However, if the project was adopted, it would have a capital importance inasmuch as it would completely change our commercial relations with the United States and we know these relations represent an enormous capital. - De Journal

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Coca, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gasette."

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, life-less, and indescribably miscrable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or bloating after cating, or of "goness," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, not flushes, alternation with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, confect, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pier eye & Golden Medical Discovery

oms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according miladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and-healing their discases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred diseases.
