For Her Sake;

The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER LI.

Once more Lady Clanronald was at home in the beautiful old mansion of Furness; and the home-coming had been like a dream to her. When she stood on the noble terrace, it seemed to her as though she had never left it. When she sauntered into the rose-garden, where the buds were forming on the trees; when she went into the conservatory, delighted as of old with its wealth of exquisite flowers, the happy past returned to her as a troubled dream. But she could never be the Diana of old; she could never more feel the happiness and the sense of freedom that had once been hers.

The meeting between father and daughter had been undemonstrative, but full of deep emotion.

"Dian," said Peter Cameron, opening his arms to her, "I had almost thought you had forgotten me."

And from her proud aching heart a supplicating cry went up to Heaven that she might forget all and die with her head to his breast.

"You are so changed, my dear," he said, sadly, "that I could almost think my daughter Dian dead."

In the bitterness of her heart she was inclined to tell him that Diana had died on her wedding-day. The ghost of her bright, happy young self seemed to rise before her. The Diana who had sung gayly through the rooms, who had filled the whole house with sunshine and laughter was no more. In her place was a stately, graceful woman on whose lovely face a story of blighted love and shattered hopes was plainly written.

Lord Clanronald had recovered somewhat from his ill-humor as they drove through the park, and by the time they reached the house he was fairly good-tempered again.

"This reminds me of our wedding-day," he said to Dian, as they passed through the great entrance-hall; and she turned from him with a shudder, weary and sick at heart.

Peter Cameron was much better on the day of their arrival, and able to join the family-party at dinner.

"It looks like old times, Dian," he said, "to see you back again. How I have missed your face! The rooms have never seemed the same to me since you left them."

Lady Cameron did not feel pleased with this last remark; but she looked at Diana with a smile.

"Notwithstanding I have done my best to make up for your absence," she said.

Diana made no reply. Time was when she would have taken up the cudgels, when she would have triumphed because of her father's words; but now her heart no longer delighted in the sweets of retaliation, and Lady Cameron's remark passed unnoticed.

They dined in the large dining-room. Lady Cameron looked very handsome in her dress of velvet and point-lace; while Diana was enchanting in a combination of pale-blue velvet and white silk, with which she wore some of the famous Clanronald diamonds.

A casual observer would have thought that a happy family were seated round that dinner-table; but Peter Cameron had mentally noted two disquieting facts. The first was how deeply Lord Clanronald drank; the second, how sad was the habitual expression on his daughter's fair face. There was constant depression of spirits, no sunny laughter was heard, there was never a gleam of fun or amusement in the blue eyes; when any one spoke to Diana, she started like one aroused from a dream.

After dinner Lady Cameron took upon herself the duty of amusing Lord Clanronald. She had not forgiven him—nor was she ever likely to do so—for discarding Evadne to marry Dian; but it would be worse than useless to be disagreeable to him; so she invited him to a game at ecarte. He was not particularly gracious, and murmured that he should prefer billiards; but Lady Cameron smiled the peculiar smile which no man could ever resist, and his lordship succumbed to his wily hostess.

"We will leave Mr. Cameron and Lady Clanronald to talk together," she said. "They have not seen each other for so long."

Lady Cameron had not been an hour late-a-tele with Lord Clanronald before she had what she called "the key to the position" in her hands. By his sneers at marriage and at lofty-minded failure, and that he had regretted having given up Evadne for Dian. A few years before Lady Cameron might have felt some degree of malicious pleasure in this knowledge; but it was not so now. She was securely seated on her throne, she had no longer anything to fear from Diana. Something even of pity for the young wife stole into her heart when she saw how coarse and false the man's nature was.

"He hid his true character well when he came wooing," she said to herself. "If Evadne had seen him as he is, she would never have cared for him."

Meanwhile father and daughter had gone to the great bay-window, and sat watching the April moon rise over the trees. Though their conversation had been of the most affectionate nature, no confidences had been exchanged. Lady Clanronald did not allude to her domestic life, to her husband, or to her troubles.

"I have missed you, Diana," Peter Cameron said; "home was not home without you. But I never knew how much I missed you until I fell ill. I wish you were never going away again."

"So do I, papa," she said.

They talked about old friends—about Richard and Thea and Lady Colwyn—above all, of Sir Sir Royal; and Diana's face grew soft and tender as she spoke of him, her eyes bright with unshed tears. Only a few years ago she would not have been content to remain at home without seeing Sir Royal. If he had not ridden over to see her, she would have gone to Westwater; but now, though she cared for him as much as ever, she had not the heart to meet one whose presence alone would revive all the old and happy associations of her past life.

Mr. Cameron shook his head gravely as he spoke of Sir Royal.

"He has never been quite the same since your marriage. I have often thought that he admired you himself."

Diana knew only too well how truly he had loved her and what he had suffered, but she made no comment.

"Of course," continued Mr. Cameron, "you would never have married him, I know; he was old enough to be your father. But he seems to have changed completely since then. I hear many rumors about him," he went on; "he has acted very strangely once or twice, I am told, and people have not been slow to talk of his peculiarities."

"Poor Sir Royal!" sighed Lady Clanronald. "I should very much like to see him."

"He came every day to see me while I was ill. When I told him that you were coming, he grew very excited, and paced up and down my room, talking most vehemently of you all the time—I might also say, raving about you. Were you happy? That was all he wanted to know. He had heard rumors, and he had been told many things. Were you happy? he was continually asking. And he told me, Diana, that almost every night he dreamed about you, and that you always came to him crying and wringing your hands, and calling out, 'Help me, Royal, help me!'"

She wondered how he could have imagined this, for often in her heart that very cry had arisen.

"I do not think he is in good health," concluded Mr. Cameron; and Diana remembered what Sir Royal had told her.

"When will he come, papa?" she asked, anxiously.

"He will be here to-morrow," was the answer. "I did not invite him for to-day."

"I shall be glad to see him," she said. "And, oh, papa, how strange it seems that Rich should have married Thea! I was so pleased to hear it."

"It was a dreadful disappointment to him that you did not come to his wedding," said Mr. Cameron.

"It was also to me," said Diana, in a low voice; "but I could not. I—to tell you the truth, papa, I do not care to attend weddings." She stopped abruptly, then was silent for a time.

"I will sing to you, papa," she added, presently. "You must have forgotten what my voice is like."

She went to the piano, the moonlight shimmering on her dress as she passed. The rich, sweet voice floated through the room and died away over the moonlit terrace. Peter Cameron felt the tears rise to his eyes as he listened to the words that his daughter sang.

"When the bells that called my love to rest were ringing the vesper chime, I wished their music could bear my soul away from the things of time; And my spirit was heavy laden as I breathed an old, old prayer, For the cross of care that I carried was greater than I could bear. As I wept alone in my sorrow, the gleam of the dying day Through the open lattice softly kissed the harp that she used to play. And, sweet as an echo from heaven, I heard his music once more. And the burden of life was uplifted and the pain of parting was o'er."

"Was it the breath of an angel's wing that passed o'er the golden wires? Was it the sound of a long-lost voice that fell from the angel-choirs? Was it the touch of a spirit-hand that swept o'er each silent string? And hushed the sorrows of earth to rest with words that the angels sing? I heard the sound of an old, old song once more in the mystic strain, A song we sung in the by-gone years and shall some day sing again; For it told me I should meet my love at the portals of the skies, To sing once more as we used to sing in the land of Paradise."

She rose from the piano and went back to the window, through which the moon was shining full and bright, the light falling on her father's face.

"Do you often sing, Dian?" he asked.

"No," she replied. "I have almost given up singing."

"Why, my dear?" was her father's brief query.

"I have lost so much of my interest in music," she said; but she did not tell him that it was because it made her heart ache.

"How Sir Lisle admired your singing!" her father said, reflectively. Then he added, "Do you remember, Dian, the concerts we used to have by moonlight?"

Did she remember. It was as though the words pierced her heart. Could she ever forget? The moonlit terrace and the great bay-window, her father's face, all vanished. She was sitting once before the picture of the Magdalen. A dark, handsome face was looking into hers; dark beautiful eyes seemed to gaze into her soul. How she loved him! And she had sacrificed him to her pride! This vision of the past, with all its happiness and illusions, passed before her as she sat looking out upon the familiar scenes of her childhood.

"I wish," remarked Mr. Cameron, "that Lisle would come home. What is he doing, wandering over the world in such a strange manner, I cannot think."

"Where is he?" she asked; and her voice was hoarse and unnatural, even to her own ears, as she put the question.

"No one knows exactly. Why he does not come home and settle on his estate I cannot imagine."

And Diana went out on to the terrace, lest her father should see the tears that she could not restrain.

BUY LESS GOODS THE SOLUTION
OTTAWA, Nov. 21.
Sir Henry Drayton, Finance Minister, can see no practical way to equal the exchange between Canada and the United States except by Canadians buying less from the United States. During the past six months the trade balance against Canada with the United States has amounted to one hundred and thirty-five million dollars, while in world trade Canada has had a favorable trade balance of one hundred and fifty million dollars. To remedy exchange with the United States there are three propositions: getting more goods to the United States, buying less from the United States, or floating a loan in that country equal to the adverse trade balance. The Government recommends the second proposition.

SET FOR DECEMBER FIRST.
PARIS, Nov. 21.
The Supreme Council to-day agreed upon December 1st as the date when the German Peace Treaty will be formally ratified.

S. S. ACTION WON'T AFFECT OTHER POWERS.
LONDON, Nov. 21.
The inability of the United States representative at Paris to deposit President Wilson's ratification of the German Treaty at the same time as those of other powers are filed, will not prevent the retaining allied or associate powers from proceeding.

Wash Day and Backache

WASH day is the least welcome day of the week in most homes, though sweeping day is not much better. Both days are most trying on the back.

The strain of washing, ironing and sweeping frequently deranges the kidneys. The system is poisoned and backaches, rheumatism, pains in the limbs result.

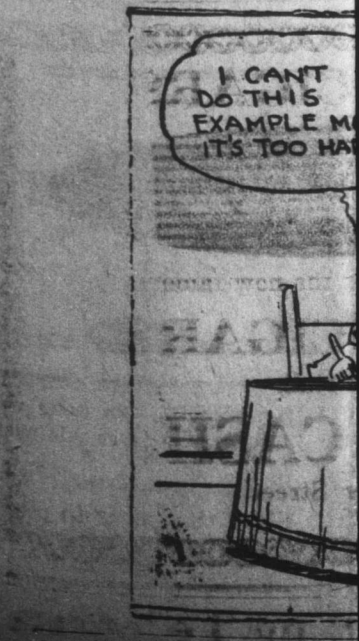

Kidney action must be aroused—the liver awakened to action and the bowels regulated by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This favorite prescription of the well-known Receipt Book author will not fail you in the hour of need.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21. Sir Henry Drayton, Finance Minister, can see no practical way to equal the exchange between Canada and the United States except by Canadians buying less from the United States. During the past six months the trade balance against Canada with the United States has amounted to one hundred and thirty-five million dollars, while in world trade Canada has had a favorable trade balance of one hundred and fifty million dollars. To remedy exchange with the United States there are three propositions, settling more goods to the United States, buying less from the United States, or floating a loan in that country equal to the adverse trade balance. The Government recommends the second proposition.

SET FOR DECEMBER FIRST.

PARIS, Nov. 21. The Supreme Council to-day agreed upon December 1st as the date when the German Peace Treaty will be formally ratified.

U.S. ACTION WON'T AFFECT OTHER POWERS.

LONDON, Nov. 21. The inability of the United States representative at Paris to deposit President Wilson's ratification of the German Treaty at the same time as those of other powers are filed, will not prevent the retaining allied or associate powers from proceeding to carry the treaty into effect," said Andrew Bonar Law, Government leader, in the House of Commons to-day in answer to numerous questions regarding the status by the Treaty as the result of the American action.

IT ALL DEPENDS.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Asked whether the United States action would affect the Anglo-French-American treaty, the Government leader declared "Our understanding in that treaty which so far has been unratified by the United States was contingent upon its also being carried by the United States. Another situation might create a new condition of affairs."

FURTHER DISCUSSIONS.

PARIS, Nov. 21. Further informal discussions have been held with the German representatives now here in connection with notification by the Allies that the protocol must be signed by Germany guaranteeing the fulfilment of these conditions. These discussions have been confined chiefly to methods of procedure in considering the protocol. As yet the Germans have not stated whether they will sign the document.

POLAND MANDATORY FOR EASTERN GALICIA.

PARIS, Nov. 21. The Supreme Council decided this morning to give Poland a mandate over Eastern Galicia under the League of Nations for a period of 25 years. At the end of that time the League is to determine the future of the territory.

MOSCOW SURROUNDED BY INSURGENTS.

LONDON, Nov. 21. Moscow is surrounded by insurgents and the Bolsheviks regard the rebellion as of importance, according to a Copenhagen despatch, quoting Helmsing's advices which the Exchange Telegraph Co. is to-day circulating with reserve. The despatch states that Tomberg, in the Urals has been sacked by a hostile army of 55,000 men.

WON'T RESCIND THE DRY ACT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. While the Supreme Court was hearing the argument to-day on the validity of the war-time Prohibition Act, word went out from the White House that President Wilson would not rescind the dry act until peace formally had been declared. This was expected to set at rest the rumors that the dry ban would be lifted by the President, irremediable of the early ratification of the treaty at Versailles.

RAILROADS ON COAL RATIONINGS.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21. The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad region to-day were placed on virtual war-time rationing of coal. Coal officials instructed the retailers to refuse to make deliveries to persons with at least one week's supply on hand. Generally the coal situation had not improved and the tension in some districts was lighter.

THE PRINCE'S LAST DAY IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21. The Prince of Wales began the last full day of his visit to New York to-day with a trip to the grave of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. The Prince carried a wreath to place on the late ex-President's grave. The MARSHAL FOCH TO BE SENATOR.

PARIS, Nov. 21. Marshal Foch has been offered the nomination for Senator in the Department of Finistere, according to the Presse de Paris, which says he has accepted the nomination on condition that all parties will unite in supporting him.

CLEMENCEAU TO BE PRESIDENT OF FRANCE.

PARIS, Nov. 21. Interviewed by a representative of the newspaper Oeuvre relative to the political situation, M. Viviani, former President, has stated that Premier Clemenceau will remain in his present office until January, and then will become President of the Republic. Viviani is quoted as denying any intention to become a candidate for President of the Chamber of Deputies in opposition to Paul Deschanel.

RUMOUR DENIED.

PARIS, Nov. 21. Jean Longuet, leader of the extreme wing of the Socialist party, denied to-day that his organization was planning drastic steps as a result of the recent French elections.

A Clean Up.

Sounds rather clean, healthy, although clean up is often used otherwise. If you were disposing of a quantity of some particular item you would refer to it as a clean up. If your home was newly painted, papered, etc., you would refer to it likewise.

Just now we use the most used expression, when we say that within three weeks our entire stock of wearing apparel is to be transferred to Ladies, Gents, Boys and Girls of the town. We know what we say. Read the advertisement in this paper and let's hear your say.

MEXICO WARNED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. Mexico was warned to-day by the American Government that any further molestation of William E. Jenkins, American Consul Agent at Pueblo, who was recently kidnapped by bandits would seriously affect the relations between the United States and Mexico, for which the Government of Mexico must assume the sole responsibility. Official reports that Jenkins had again been at Pueblo, reached the State Department to-day from the American Embassy at Mexico City, which was instructed to transmit the note demanding his release.

GERMANY'S "IMPERATOR" WILL GO TO BRITAIN.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. Settlement of the controversy over the disposition of the German liner Imperator, was indicated to-night by the Shipping Board officials, who indicated the ship would be tendered immediately to Great Britain. Action with regard to seven other German steamers in the same status had not been determined, it was said. It will depend, it was indicated, on the final disposition of the tappers under the German flag, but American-owned, now held in the Fifth of Forth by direction of the Supreme Council.

SERBIA TO SIGN TREATY.

PARIS, Nov. 21. Despatches received from Belgrade state that the Serbian Government has authorized that country's delegation at Money in Billiards.

Few people have any idea of the earning of "crack" professionals of billiards. In a normal season, Inman, Reece, or Stevenson would think they had had a lean time if they did not top £3,000—and it is very probable that, when everything is included, the actual result is very considerably above that.

Fiction's Favourites.

There can be little doubt that George is the favourite name with novelists, and it is a remarkable fact that the man endowed with this name is generally a decent fellow, and very seldom the villain of the piece. Some names have a sudden and wide vogue. During the past twenty years or so Peter has come into remarkable prominence. It probably started with George Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbotson," and was carried to the crest of the wave of popularity by "Peter Pan." This was followed by "Peter's Mother," a novel which, as a play, enjoyed the honour of a Royal command performance.

Yet Peter is by no means a pretty-pretty name, and in its Americanised form of Pete is more reminiscent of the mining-camp and lumber settlement than of the drawing-room. Of course, certain names are completely "off the map." Such a name is Judas, although Thomas Hardy uses, its equivalent when he styles one of his novels "Jude the Obscure."

Wash Day and Backache

WASH day is the least welcome day of the week in most homes, though sweeping day is not much better. Both days are most trying on the back.

The strain of washing, ironing and sweeping frequently deranges the kidneys. The system is poisoned and backaches, rheumatism, pains in the limbs result.

Kidney action must be aroused—the liver awakened to action and the bowels regulated by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This favorite prescription of the well-known Receipt Book author will not fail you in the hour of need.

Will They Return?

Just ninety-three years ago the last State Lottery was drawn in England. France followed suit, but the prejudice against them was not universal, and they continued to flourish in other countries, to the joy of those who enjoyed their little flutter. It seemed at one time as though they were to be revived during the war. They were considered among the various schemes for raising money. The gods decided otherwise, however, disappointing many folk who would have relished a new means of getting rich quickly.

The first lottery mentioned in English history realised £20,000. There were forty thousand "lots," of one shilling each, and the proceedings lasted from January to May, and were carried on continuously day and night at the western door of St. Paul's Cathedral. The prizes were pieces of plate, and the profits were spent on harbour repairs.

Crew of "J. B. Bradley" Landed at Barbados.

Word was received to-day saying that the schooner Gladys Monster had arrived at Barbados, having on board the crew of the schooner J. B. Bradley which left Sydney for this port on Oct. 24th, and was given up as lost. The schooner Bradley was coal laden and met a heavy storm and had to be abandoned on Nov. 2nd.

Derelict Asks for Tug.

The Intelligence Department received a message to-day from the S. S. Winifredian, reporting a four masted barque at 4 o'clock this morning in lat 43.01, N., long. 55.13, W., which is about 200 miles S.S.W. of Cape Race; name Paul of Hamburg, and flying German colors with foremast and mizzen top gallantmast gone, but carrying fore sail, main lower topsail, staysails, and sparker. The barque reported having lost all her sails and boats, but the crew did not wish to abandon her. She asked to be towed but the Winifredian was unable to do so. The derelict then asked to have a tug wirelessly for and the steamer continued her voyage. The barque appeared to be in ballast and was floating lightly, standing to the westward on the starboard tack. The wind blew from the north-west in a strong breeze and the sea was rough.

The Great Asquith.

Mr. Asquith declines to stand again in East Fife, the constituency which he represented for many years but which rejected him in the last general election. The great Liberal statesman is not old enough to retire from public life, and he is too valuable a man for Britain to lose if his services can be retained. There should be several years of good service yet in the former premier.—Hamilton Herald.

The Proofs of Democracy.

When Philip Scheidemann says that "since the adoption of the new constitution no land on earth has a democracy in such approximate perfection as the German republic" he is using old boasts and old phrases. That is what the Junkers always claimed for the Germanic peoples under the Imperial constitution. Democracy is as democracy does, and it is early as yet to pass judgment upon Germany in that respect.—New York World.

TRYING
To try too hard to get a thing sometimes ruins the feast the way you work for it. And of nothing is this more true than of trying to get to sleep. I had that true driven home to me this morning in a rather interesting way. When I am going to bed I usually get up and turn the alarm clock off and then I always wake, one hour (almost to the minute) before the alarm is to go off. I look at the clock and see that I have an hour more to sleep and I say "Now, just get right to sleep." And then I find I am wide awake and remain so till it is time to get up.

After I Stopped Trying to, I Went to Sleep.

I have been through that dozens of times. This morning I went through again with this little variation. I tried to get up at half past six, but I was so tired I fell right off. I lay there trying my hardest to go to sleep. Then I opened my eyes and saw that it was six fifteen. I decided that there was no use trying any longer, and turned over on my side. (I always lie on my side.) I kept thinking, "I will give up the struggle and just lie here and rest for fifteen minutes." An instant later I awoke to the sound of the alarm. I had fallen almost instantly asleep and slept the full fifteen minutes.

And the reason was simply that I had stopped trying so hard as to get my own end.

Another object lesson in relaxation. I relaxed, to my sleeplessness thereby conquered it.

When If You Can't Sleep, You Can Rest.

Doctors say that it simply doubles the harm sleeplessness does to you. If you find you are not sleeping, you can do one of two things. You can say, "Oh, dear, I'm going to get two or three hours of sleep to-night. I shall feel so miserable to-morrow. What shall I do?" and get all tense and excited about it.

TRYING TOO HARD.
To try too hard to get a thing sometimes defeats the end you work for. And of nothing is this more true than of trying to get to sleep. I had that truth driven home to me this morning in a rather interesting way. When I am going anywhere that requires of it. Why She is Such a Beautiful Person. I never think of ways of treating those wakeful hours without remembering what a beautiful middle-aged friend of mine once said, "I don't mind lying awake nights because I always start thinking of all the lovely things that have happened to my children."

CHANGE OF HEART.

I used to hate the horrid Hun, and longed to slay him with a gun; but now that war has had its day, my hatred seems to melt away; I find it hard to grind my teeth, and stamp upon my laurel wreath and call down curses on a foe, when such a gent I do not know. I cannot think of any skate who'd make it worth my while to hate. 'Tis true some chaps have wrought me ill; they handed me a bitter pill; but I forget them and their deeds, and spend my evenings stringing beads, and thinking of the boys I've known who never caused me grief or groan. And there are men who hate me well, and of their enmity they tell, and say that on some day re- my neighbors tell me of their words, and still I warble like the birds, and fill my melodies sublime, and have the blameworthy kind of time. They'll all get tired of hating me, when my indifference they see; whereas, if I indulged in sweats, and handed back their foolish threats, the air would soon be full of fur, and teeth and whiskers, as it were. And hatred is the thing I hate; no man can keep his dome on straight, and be accounted fully sane, if he has hatred in his brain.

Household Notes.

Save the celery tops for soup. Silkoline makes excellent dusters. Sandpaper will help sharpen scissors. Put corn beef on to boil in cold water. Flour sacks make excellent dish towels. Pork should always be thoroughly cooked. Left-over cereals can be used in griddle cakes. Excellent croquettes are made of cold boiled fish. Figs and raisins chopped make a good pie filling. Remember that a piano deteriorates if not used. Filoselle is the best silk for darning silk stockings. Keep palms and ferns away from draughts and gas. Beef fat can be very well tried out in a double boiler. A settle beside the fire may be a woodbox in disguise. If sausage is rolled in flour before frying it will not burst. Creamed potatoes served with chives sauce are delicious. To make novel potato canoes cut lengthwise before stuffing. Chicken fats goes further than butter and less should be used. Fine blankets and shawls should be dried on curtain stretchers. Candied cranberries are a novel addition to the Thanksgiving dinner. To thin paste, use vinegar instead of water, and the paste will not spoil. Little raffia mats are handy things to have around to use under vases, etc. Every child should have some fruit every day—apples, oranges or prunes. Always crack a baked potato the moment it is done to let out the steam.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—In July, 1915, I was thrown from a road machine, injuring my hip and back badly and was obliged to use a crutch for 14 months. In Sept., 1906, Mr. Wm. A Plant That Eats.

"Tul-tul," as the natives call it, is the most wonderful vegetable plant in the world. It grows on certain South Pacific islands, and in appearance is like a giant turnip, but blood-red in colour. To the white man it is a very tough and tasteless vegetable. To the natives, however, it is a main item of their diet. They cook it and mix it with their cocoa-nut and bread-fruit, for it is supposed to be very nourishing. They cultivate the plant in a rough sort of fashion in large ditches or swamps. Its most peculiar feature is that it has to be fed, and for this purpose the native children go over the island collecting all decayed vegetable matter. This is soaked in plenty of salt water, and is then taken in armfuls to the plants and put in the centre of the leaf-stems or on the short thick stem from which the leaves spread out on every side. Slowly but surely the decayed matter disappears, the leaves stiffen and spread out erect—signs, apparently, that the plant has dined heartily, for it really is a case of feeding a plant. There is no opening of the stem or the leaves; the food is slowly and gradually absorbed in a silent and wonderful manner.

Silver Trowel Presented to Lady Harris.

Directors of Dominion Co-operative Building Association Make Presentation to Lady who Turned First Sod of Workingmen's Houses—Mr. Wm. Linegar, Chairman of the Association, Make Presentation.

At Government House, yesterday afternoon, a deputation from the Dominion Co-operative Building Association, waited upon Lady Harris and presented her with a beautiful silver trowel in honor of her turning the first sod for the workingmen's houses to be erected by the Association.

Mr. Wm. Linegar, the Association's chairman, made the actual presentation in a very neatly worded speech, while Mr. James J. McGrath, the veteran labor leader, thanked both Lady and Governor Harris for the interest taken in the important subject by them. Hon. John Anderson followed, and with facts and figures brought home the appalling housing conditions of the town.

"We must face the facts," said Mr. Anderson. "There are many problems that await solution in our own country. There is no time to waste in the problems of other lands. We must be up and doing, among our social and commercial activities we are bound by human ties to improve the land we live in, and if possible have it better than we found it. There are very few questions of reform but interest the industrial classes of the city and the fishermen of this Dominion. Among the many problems that go toward the improvement of the social condition of the workingman and his family there is none greater than good health, healthy homes, maternity home, child welfare, education, high cost of living, capital and labor, child labor and the industrial life in all branches of our trade and commerce. Two days ago I had the pleasure of addressing a few words to the Social Congress on Housing. I tried to impress upon that gathering the great necessity of a more aggressive policy of social reform from the three great axes: The Pulpit, The Press, The Physician. We must face the facts. The more important problems that face all classes of our people at the present time, especially labor, are housing, high cost of living, and such as the necessities of life and coal. Our deputation to-day represents something like twenty thousand persons, who are clamoring for better houses and more healthy surroundings. The figures I have prepared for the information of Your Excellency and Lady Harris are based on estimates made up to date.

"To meet the demand for workingmen's houses our aim is to build, provided we get suitable land, in the West End, 100 houses at $8 per month; 50 at $10 per month, 25 at $15 per month; total, 175. In the Central part of the town: 150 at $8 per month, 50 at $10 per month, 75 at $15 per month; total 275. In the East End: 100 houses at $8 per month, 50 at $10 per month, 75 at $15 per month; total 275. The housing conditions of St. John's to-day are appalling. Nine hundred and thirty-five houses are not fit for human habitation, wherein are living seven thousand five hundred human beings in houses not fit for cattle, place.

"Where is our boasted Christianity?" His Excellency and Lady Harris made suitable replies, after which the deputation retired.

BOY SCOUTS' COLUMN.

Edited by an Asst. S. M. Halifax Scouts.

During the past summer a great renewal of interest in Boy Scout activities has been evidenced. Both the visit of Sir Robert Baden-Powell, our Chief Scout, and more recently the visit of the Prince of Wales, Chief Scout for Wales has added to the enthusiasm previously manifested.

Several Summer Camps were held in the Province, in addition to the Leaders Camp on the shores of Picotou Harbour in July. The King's county troops camp under the leadership of Scoutmaster Brown and the Dartmouth Troop near Bedford under Scoutmaster W. B. Elliott, were very successful.

150 Miles' Hike to See the Prince.

This was carried out by five members of the 1st Woodstock (N.B.) Troop of Boy Scouts. Leaving their home town Saturday morning, August 2nd, carrying their blankets, cooking utensils, and extra clothing they reached Meductic the first day, and on Tuesday evening were in Fredericton. They then followed the river road to St. John reaching there on Sunday night the 10th. They were just over a week, being delayed by rain on the way, in accomplishing the journey. Every inch of the "hike" was covered on foot, no offers of rides being accepted. Station platforms and barns were used for sleeping quarters; and on the march no meals were carried. In St. John they obtained their wish—they greeted the Prince.

"Why Wolf Cubs?"

"Why call them Wolf Cubs?" people are asking regarding the Junior Branch of the Boy Scout Movement. Because, as a first step, we appeal to the boy's sense of Romance. Because the furry little brother of the prairie or bush seems, somehow, to embody the ideals of keenness, purity, obedience that we want to hold up to the boys. To the wild tribes who brought scouting to perfection, the Wolf is the perfect scout. With our Boy Scouts the "Silver Wolf" is the highest order that can be gained. And so we call the Junior Scouts "Wolf Cubs," and thus find ready to our hand a symbol of innocence and the gaiety of nature; of obedience founded on the realization that the Old Wolf knows best, and is in authority; of an alertness and eagerness to learn, so becoming the skillful scout of the jungle. And they live up to their name. Nothing could be more eager and alert than those bare-kneed youngsters.

"Do Your Best" is their motto, and they have taken it to heart. They repeat it constantly to each other. They set about things with an enthusiasm and energy that is bound to succeed. Whilst a healthy ambition is set on foot a selfish tendency is brought up short by the Cub Law: "The Cub gives in to the Old Wolf; The Cub does not give in to himself." "Who may become Wolf Cubs?" Every boy between the ages of 8 and 12 who enrolls as a member of the Boy Scouts Association, and who having passed the tenderpad tests, promises on his honour TO DO HIS BEST, to keep

The Cub Promise:—
1. To be loyal to God, and the King, and to the Law of the Wolf Cub Pack.
2. To do a good turn to somebody every day.

The Wolf Cub programme fits in splendidly with every scheme in Parish, Church and Sunday School for the development of the boy, and places within reach of our officers and others a splendid avenue of social service for the smaller boys.

"During my recent tour in the United States and Canada, I have been struck by the extent to which Scouting has developed in its popularity and efficacy since my last visit. (This was nine years ago.) This reflects high credit on the patriotic men who have taken upon themselves its administration; and at the same time gives inspiring promise of its national possibilities in the near future."—Sir Robert Baden-Powell, K.C.B.

City:
Dear Assistant Scout-Master,—
Last week I had the Wolf Cubs on a hike and we had a jolly good time. This week, we opened with our usual programme, Cub's prayer, roll call, etc., after which we studied the composition of the Union Jack. Then we had them do their knots. They catch on quickly. Three more recruits were sworn in; we then had a game called "find the penny," and afterwards formed parade circle, gave badges and dismissed after a jolly good time.

Price of Fish.

(Trade Review.)

The loss of so many vessels on the way home from Labrador and several large cargoes on way to foreign markets has certainly had a stimulating effect to the market. It is estimated that fully one hundred thousand quintals of codfish have been lost.

Quite a large proportion of this will be a direct loss to the fishermen and merchants as they very rarely insure anything like full value, and the Insurance Companies will also suffer considerably in the calamities of the past fortnight.

The whole eastern coast of Newfoundland and Labrador was swept by the unprecedented fury of the waves. Stories of heroism are related from many quarters where Labrador skipper saved their vessels, taking them from one harbor to another in the teeth of the fiercest gale that we have seen for thirty years.

Our old fishermen tell us there has been nothing like it since the terrific gale of 1855 when hundreds of lives were lost on the Labrador coast.

The hardships that our fishermen have to undergo counts for little very often in the price of fish as the demand and supply for foreign markets is the barometer.

The merchants who loaded cargoes on the Labrador coast are paying nine dollars per quintal, and it costs the fishermen $1.50 to bring the fish home, only to find that the same kind of fish is selling for less than $9.00 here to-day.

There is a large supply of soft cure shore fish to come forward but the genuine Labrador codfish heavily salted will be in very small supply this season.

Hard Merchantable Shore fish is in good demand and no trouble to get $12 per quintal. Madera $10 per quintal.

Motor Car Runs in River.

The driver of a Buick motor car lost his bearings last night and landed his car plump in the middle of Rennie's River, near O'Brien's Bridge. The car was left there all night in about three feet of water, and it will be a big job to pull it over the boulders to terra firma.

Civil Re-Establishment.

FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:—After the ending of the Great World War the problem that worried the people of Newfoundland was—"What were the authorities going to do in the matters of Re-Establishing returned Soldiers and Sailors in civil life?" After much discussion an arrangement was made. It was to form a Civil Re-Establishment Committee. This Committee were to look after the applications of returned men for schooling and employment, and to assist them in gaining these two things in the best possible way.

The school formed by this Committee has been a great success. It is under the management of several able and energetic teachers, who do everything in their power to help a man to succeed in whatever course he has undertaken. Besides giving a man an education, he is paid a salary towards his upkeep while attending school. The subjects taught are numerous, commencing from the Alphabet to Commercial training and other higher subjects. After a man finishes his course his first object is to obtain employment, and naturally the first step he takes is to apply to the Civil Re-Establishment Committee to see if they can assist him to attain his object. Here is where the problems are reversed. The worry falls from the minds of the people to the minds of the Civil Re-Establishment Committee as to how they are going to obtain employment for the soldier or sailor. It is then up to the business men of Nfld. to do their part in helping to re-establish the soldier or sailor in civil life. "Are they doing this?" They are in a sort of way, but not satisfactorily. They can do a whole lot more. As a matter of fact they can never do enough to repay those men who gave their blood for them that they might live. Every day we take up a paper and read, "Any man needing employment, apply or communicate with Vocational Officer." The next days papers and many days papers following contain the same advertisement with the same number needing employment and unanswered by any of our business men. "Is this fair to Our Boys?" Those boys who have done so much for us and Humanity's cause. Is it fair? No! A thousand times, no. "It is not fair that those boys who have shed their blood for us should be treated this way. Merchants do your duty towards those boys to whom you owe so much and employ and help them in every possible way."

Yours truly,

Dug Diamonds Are Best.

They Cost Ten Times the Amount of Manufactured Ones.

Many people will be surprised to know that even during the war dealers in precious stones did quite good business. The reason for this is that while ordinary investments may, in times of stress, decrease in value, the purchaser of jewels has a fairly secure method of hoarding up his wealth.

The diamond merchant's art requires more knowledge and skill than any other profession, and even the most cunning dealer is sometimes liable to be caught napping.

Galway and Newfoundland.

The incursion of that erratic and every old warrior, Lord Fisher, into the controversy about a Transatlantic line is thoroughly characteristic of everything Irish. No sooner is one project nearing realisation and materialising than another is started, another here is started to divert and distract the attention of the sportsman. But that game should be too hot and too often repeated to be of any effect now. People should learn by experience. Galway will score in the end if it gets fair play, and it does not dread competition with Blacksood the business of settling on the right side is honestly and fairly decided, and that there are no tricks or tricks in the adjudication. It has the advantage of having been tried in the past and of never having been found wanting. Galway failed not from any inherent fault in the scheme but because of treachery and trickery. That is the enterprise as Mr. Kelly showed in the speech he made before Lord Morris who by the way, I hear, was greatly impressed with Mr. Kelly's historical account of the past ventures and how and why they failed. Every time Galway had a chance it showed its superiority as a port. In the days of the old sailing vessels the record of the voyages from it beat Liverpool hollow, and it was because of that success Galway was run down by the Liverpoolian merchants and shippers.

Newfoundland, England's first, oldest and least developed colony—a country with vast possibilities of mineral and other development—with sufficient timber to supply all Europe's wants—will have its say in the selection of Galway. It has always supported Galway and in the past it helped by grants and active sympathy the Galway scheme. Some few years ago the late Premier, now Lord Morris, visited Galway and promised a subsidy towards a Transatlantic line from his Government. His successor is prepared to endorse his able predecessor's words and repeat the offer.

I wonder if "Jacky" Fisher, as the sailors love to call him, ever saw Blacksood or Galway. Blacksood is a fine bay, no doubt, but it has several natural disadvantages. The entrance is narrow. Indeed the late Captain Boxer, R.N., who knew every port and bay in Ireland and was Commander of the Light ships for years, compared the entrance to Blacksood to a tunnel—a deadly thing for ships. It has no protection from the storms that come down the hills and no boat could get out of the harbor if a high wind is blowing—so expedition and safety are to be discounted.

Then again its remoteness from any place. It is 40 miles from a railway station and the train which should be built would, at the expense of an hour and a half, have to run through a bog—a very uncertain foundation for a railway. These two disadvantages and drawbacks are sufficient to damn any port and will make Blacksood impossible.—Tuan Herald.

Size a Disadvantage.

Size is of no advantage to animals, for great bulk necessarily means slowness of locomotion.

Sir Ray Lankester remarks that only a creature which has unlimited forest or grass or seaweed as its food will be at no disadvantage owing to its size.

"Occasionally the common lobster," he writes, "lives to a great age and grows to be more than two feet long. But he is doomed by his size; the smaller lobsters go quickly around and get all the food (carrion of the sea), and the big fellow has to starve. The whalebone whales, it is true, take animal food; but it occurs in the form of minute sea-slugs and shrimps, which fill the surface waters in countless millions over hundreds of miles of ocean. Hence the whales of this kind have only to swim along with their mouths open through an unlimited supply of luscious food."

"The size of terrestrial animals is also, it appears, definitely related to the natural water supply. There are very few small quadrupeds in the interior of Africa. On account of frequent droughts, the mammals have often to run a hundred miles or more in search of water. Only animals as big as the large antelope and the zebra can cover the ground. The smaller kinds die (and have, in fact, died out in past ages) in these regions of sudden drought."

And the Worst is Yet to Come—valued, and after a few minutes with a lens or microscope, he may tell you that one is worth practically nothing and the other a fortune. If you looked at them under the glass you would see that both have minute air-bubbles in them; but in one stone these bubbles will be distorted and will seem to flow along definite lines, while in the other they will be spherical, and will, perhaps, be arranged about the centre. Photographs by Lightning

Killed by lightning while standing under a tree during a storm, it was found, on medical examination, that the victim's body was marked with the imprint of the tree.

Such a freak is not uncommon. The markings on the skin are reddish brown in colour, and resemble photographic imprints of trees or shrubs. Lightning, however, plays many strange tricks. A girl was once crossing a meadow during a thunderstorm when she was struck by lightning. Although every shred of clothing was torn from her, she herself merely experienced slight giddiness.

In another extraordinary case a man was killed by lightning while riding a horse through a storm. The animal was untouched and unalarmed, and carried his dead master home at a gentle trot.

Newfoundland's Prosperity.

SIR EDGAR BOWRING INTERVIEWED.

"The Dominion of Newfoundland," says Canada, (November issue), "has emerged from the years of war with marked success, and has entered upon the period of reconstruction with confidence and hope. General prosperity reigns throughout the island, thanks not only to the energy of its inhabitants, but to the high prices which have been obtained for the products of the fisheries during the recent seasons. Even more than in other countries, Newfoundland's need at the present time is greater production. Owing to the extent to which its people rely on the fisheries, it is in the peculiar position of exporting practically all its products, and having to import most of the necessities of life. It is to be hoped that in the near future some means will be found of readjusting this latter state of affairs."

The following interview with our High Commissioner in England, Sir Edgar Bowring, is taken from the same magazine as the above extract, and will prove interesting reading:

Sir Edgar R. Bowring, the High Commissioner for Newfoundland, who has returned to London after a visit of nearly three months to the Island Dominion, speaks in glowing terms of the prosperity enjoyed in Newfoundland.

He was there at the time of the visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and he told a representative of 'Canada' (who interviewed him at the High Commissioner's offices, 58, Victoria Street, S.W.1.) that a most cordial reception was given to his Royal Highness, exemplifying the traditional loyalty of the ancient Colony. The Prince's visit to Newfoundland was, however, all too short, and there were many interesting things that his Royal Highness would have been interested to see.

"On every hand," said Sir Edgar, "there are evidences of prosperity in Newfoundland. The Dominion came through the years of war tried and strengthened, and is now settling down to face the problem of the reconstruction period, and looks forward to the extensive development of her rich natural resources. The people in the fishing hamlets scattered around the coast are about as happy and contented as anywhere in the world. Almost every man owns his own plot of land and his own house, which he builds himself, and, no matter what passing misfortunes he may suffer, his plot of ground and his habitation are always secure. Total prohibition has existed in Newfoundland for two years, and as a result there has been a marked decrease in crime and an improvement in conditions generally; the prisons are practically empty, and there is a bright outlook for everyone.

THE STAPLE INDUSTRY.

"The fishery, of course, is the staple industry of Newfoundland, and during the years of war—withstanding the blockade and the difficulties of shipping—the Newfoundland sailing vessels and steamers were able to carry abundant supplies of fish to our regular markets in the Mediterranean. In consequence of the general shortage of food, very high prices were obtained, and, while these may not be able to be maintained, yet the opening of new markets and the resumption of a normal trade relationship give promise of a prosperous season this year. Large catches were made on the Newfoundland shore, on the Labrador, and on the banks. The sealing fishery last year were very poor in respect of the number of seals taken, but this was to some extent compensated for by year was very poor in respect of the which were marketed in England and the United States realised exceptionally high prices.

"The Newfoundland soldiers are practically all returned, and are settling down to peace conditions once again. The wounded and maimed are well cared for; the very best medical attention obtainable being placed at the service of the disabled, and our pension scheme makes full provision for the families of the fallen. In view of the expenses involved, I think it hardly probable that the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, which made such a fine reputation during the war, will be maintained in times of peace.

"No scheme has yet been formulated by the Newfoundland Government for the settlement of ex-service men on the land, although there are large areas available for agriculture, more especially in the fertile valleys of the great sporting rivers. Some of these lands would admit of agricultural development to almost any extent.

"The kind of settler wanted in Newfoundland is the man of robust physique who can turn his hand to anything. Settlers taking up agricultural or pasture land in the interior would need to be prepared with some capital to tide them over the years during which the land was being cleared and made productive.

JUDGE GARY

THE LEADER OF AMERICAN CAPITALISM.

(By F. A. MCKENZIE, in Daily Mail.)

America is heading straight to-day for the greatest industrial conflict the world has ever seen. The man who made the conflict inevitable was Judge Eibert Henry Gary.

He is head of one of the greatest industrial organisations in the world, the United States Steel Corporation. He is in many respects an efficient administrator. He represents benevolent despotism at its best. But American Labour to-day has made up its mind that despotism, benevolent or otherwise, must cease.

He is a farmer's son who has made his own way in life. He studied law at Chicago University, started at $12.50 a week, served for a time as a county judge, and afterwards became attorney for various steel corporations. Next, the judge came to New York at a salary of $100,000 a year as head of the Federal Steel Corporation. When the United States Steel Trust was formed he manipulated the deals.

In his quiet office in 61, Broadway, he spends his days receiving visitors, presiding over committees, and "putting it over" diverse interests. But he will have nothing to do with organised Labour.

The United Steel Corporation, with its industrial army of over a quarter of a million men, its own railway systems, its own fleet of a hundred steamers, its own mines, and its vast industrial plants, has been the leader in the refusal to recognize trade unions or trade union methods. It has deliberately substituted a plan of mutual co-operation between employers and men. It has established a system of co-partnership by encouraging employees to subscribe for shares on which special bonuses are paid. It spends $7,000,000 a year on welfare work to improve the conditions and the health of the men employed by it.

Last summer the American Federation of Labour at its great convention at Atlantic City resolved to challenge the Steel Trust's position. The Federation of Labour has greatly risen in American public esteem during the last few years because of its sobriety, moderation, and statesmanlike conduct of affairs. Its organisers reported that in some steel towns their agents were not even allowed to hold public meetings. It was determined to bring the matter to an issue. "This is notice to the autocrats of the steel industry," the Federation stated, "that their autocracy must remove itself from the face of the earth or be removed. As political autocracy has gone, so must industrial autocracy go. Steel in America must be democratized."

The American Federation sent a deputation to New York to interview Judge Gary. The judge refused even to see them. The steel kings and the financiers behind them believed that trade unionism had delivered itself into their hands.

I discussed the situation at the time with many representatives of capital. They scoffed at the idea of the trouble being serious. "Only a small proportion of the men are trade unionists," they said. "The Steel Corporation has done so much for its people and treated them so well that they will never go out at the order of any union. The American Federation will meet its Waterloo." As one leader put it to me: "There's got to be a fight with Labour. The sooner the fight comes the better. We'll have it right now." They admitted that there must be trouble in the coal trade. That fact Wall-street regarded as serious, but the steel strike would be the biggest fiasco in history. So the employers thought. They have been wrong.

But it would be a mistake to put all the blame of the present situation on men of the type of Judge Gary. Labour, like Capital, is heady at the present moment. The working man in the United States has had such amazingly good times that he has lost his sense of perspective. Despite the increased cost of living, he is better paid than he has ever been before. He lives in a condition of greater comfort. He has more leisure and he can save more. The New York mechanic accounts it an average week when he makes $70. One has ceased to be surprised at office boys earning $15 a week (which is about the equivalent of $5 a week in England). The six-hour day or the thirty-hour week has already been talked about. The forty-hour week—that is eight hours a day for five days a week for labour—is now considered a reasonable programme. The men who are content with it are surprised at their own moderation. Labour demands recognition and authority. It refuses to recognise any inferiority.

Judge Gary represents an extreme as dangerous to American peace on the one hand as I.W.W.-ism—industrial revolutionism—on the other. We have yet to see whether modern and sane men like John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for Capital, and Gompers, for Labour, have been enough to save the situation. We are face to face with a war far-reaching that effects can only be present be imagined.

Editor Evening Telegram:
Dear Sir—Now that the war has ended, our boys are returning to their old homes. Some of them are returning to the fields of France and the battlefields of Flanders. Some of them are returning to the fields of France and the battlefields of Flanders. Some of them are returning to the fields of France and the battlefields of Flanders.

Two Pretty Men.

Fisher and Fisher were two pretty men.
They ruled the roost until nine ten.
Whatever could not be accomplished by Fisher.
Was easily done when he was in the King's and his Cabinet—most too.
With all that mattered had to do.
So many poppets—they were his strings.
While Fisher and Fisher just was never the like of these two men.
They ruled the roost until nine ten.

Men Who Refused Crowns

Several times in the world's history have been as promptly as though they were very dainty and worthless articles indeed. Early in the last century the Greek was offered to Lord who died before he had a chance to accept it. Later on, when the second son, the late Duke of Edinburgh was invited to become King of the Hellenes, but the jealousy of the powers decided his refusal. He was offered in turn to Mr. Gladstone and Benjamin Disraeli, Earl Beaconsfield, but neither was elected by the honour.

Napoleon anticipated the Hungarians by wishing to be King of Hungary from Austria in 1859. He offered the separate crown of the Hungarian Count Esthazy, but the Count refused and went into temporary exile.

Early in the history of Russia there was scarcely acknowledged part of civilized Europe, the throne was offered first to Metastelski, and then to Prince Bismarck, but they feared to undertake such a difficult task.

Finally a youth of sixteen, who was elected on condition that he should reign as a constitutional monarch. He was the first Romanov to rule once again there is no Czardom in Russia.

Later on, when Czar Alexander died in 1881, his brother Constantine was the heir, but he preferred security of private life, and left on to his young brother, Nicholas. George Washington's army to make him a king, but he preferred to be the first President of the GOOD looking clocks: and as good all through as they look outside. Westclox construction is the real reason for Westclox success. A handsome case can't count minutes. Good timekeeping must be bred in the bone.

There's a simple reason why Westclox keep better time and last longer. Every wheel turns on needle-fine pivots of polished steel. This largely defeats friction. There's less wear and tear.

We thank this process for Big Ben's popularity. It's a Westclox patent, of course. But all Westclox users benefit from it. Every Westclox alarm is made in this same way.

کتاب متنوع للبرصائیه New Relief For Constipation, "LES FRUITS"

Physicians agree that with the modern habits of living, constipation is likely to be always with us. They also agree that the constant use of any drug for the relief of constipation is exceedingly unwise—unwise for two reasons. First, a drug constantly used loses its effect and requires a constantly increased dose. Second, because the constant use of any drug is bad anyway.

So the cry is constantly going up from the constipated, "What can we do?" It will be interesting to a great many to know that an answer has been found in the re-discovery of a method which was used with great success by our Forefathers, and in Arabia far back in the twelfth century. The food is called "Les Fruits" because it is composed entirely of figs, dates, prunes, raisins and the leaves of each with the substitution of the Alexandria leaf for the raisin leaf. The taste is pleasant, if not to say delicious, and the effect is exceedingly satisfactory. Try it and be convinced.

The World's Greatest Carillon.

Lighty Tower to be Erected at Washington, Will Contain Fifty-four Bells, Tuned Chromatically—A Memorial to Heroes of Allied Heroes.

Theodore G. Juslin, in the Boston Transcript.—Washington, Nov. 14.—Washington has the greatest of all memorials to America's illustrious dead, if the title of the Arts Club of Washington, erect a national carillon is carried out, and apparently it will be, for the project has the approval of all our leaders in national affairs. Within a few years, therefore, a shaft granite rising 300 feet is likely to rise a height overlooking the Potomac. In the tower will be the finest collection the most expert bell-founders the world can produce, the bells themselves cast from the remnants of those which once screamed and roared under the greatest of all wars. The structure will be of international as well as national significance. Each State will contribute a bell, suitably inscribed, as will the District of Columbia, the Philippines, Hawaii, Alaska, Cuba, and Porto Rico. Into the walls, through gifts from England, France, Belgium and Italy, and the various republics, will be incorporated various war souvenirs—blocks from sacred churches and towers of Belgium and Italy, which were razed in confusion by the ruthless hand of hate; and structured materials from the Marne, Verdun, Lorraine, Mons, Ypres and Liege. Eventually the Powers will be permitted to have works of art signifying the deep fraternity of the Allied people. The tower will contain 54 Bells. In commemoration of the movement that the carillon shall

"SNOW-WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS," to be presented at the CASINO THEATRE on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday,
November 26th, 27 and 28th,
by the pupils of the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy.

A wonderful production that makes more vivid the memories of the story-book. Picturesque settings, scenic effects that present a picture of harmonious colorings, music and singing a treat for the musical, artistic displays a treat for the artist. An amateur presentation that rises to the level of the highest pantomime.

MASSACHUSETTS Who Gave Their Lives That Freedom Might Not Perish From the Earth. Symbolize Genius of Mankind.

From time immemorial in all lands men have built towers for worship, honor or defence, and miles away these massive structures have stood out against the sky-line as symbols of the genius and glory of the human race, while from their summits tidings of joy and of sorrow have been shouted to assembled multitudes. Everywhere bells in church towers have called people to worship for a thousand years. In addition, in many countries nearly every city has had its own municipal bell tower. In most cases these towers, whether ecclesiastical or civic, have been provided only with single bells which often have been inharmonious, but here and there, in foreign lands at least, fine musical effects have been produced.

In the Low Countries bordering the North Sea, especially in Belgium and Holland, "tower music" has reached a high development. In Belgium, the carillon, composed of thirty or forty bells, has taken the place of chimes, with a marvellous improvement in the quality of the music. Chimes are composed of a few bells, are rung by swinging, and being diatonic have a narrow musical range. The bells of a carillon are fixed and immovable, are rung by hammers, and are played automatically by hand on a keyboard, like an organ or piano. The bells of a carillon have a range of four octaves or more, and, consequently, have almost as many tones and half-tones as a piano.

America Has No Carillon.

Carillon-playing in the Low Countries is an honored profession, having its Bauers and Federewisks, master bell-players known everywhere. Those who have heard the music of the bells of Antwerp or Bruges, of Ghent or Louvain, drifting over a whole city and far into the quiet countryside of a summer evening, do not need to be told how wonderful it is when a master player is at the keyboard. For centuries the bell towers of Belgium and Holland have stood for communal life and service, civil and religious liberty, individual and national freedom. In the old days they rang out the Duke of Alva and his minions, in Napoleonic days they were rallying points of civic liberty, and in every great crisis they have cheered and heartened tens of thousands.

The carillon of Ghent rang out in December 1814, at the signing of the treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain, and but for the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, it would have celebrated one hundred years of peace for the two nations. As a result of the World War, many of the Belgian bell-towers are now sorrowful ruins, but they called a brave people to the defence of their land. Some of the master bellmen, as history will record, played defiant music until the Germans were at the very gates of the city. Many of the bells were desecrated and their metal recast for purposes of war. Others were stolen. The latter will be returned. The ruined towers will be rebuilt, but meanwhile there is silence in the land. In our own country we have nothing to correspond to the Belgian and Dutch carillons. At their best our towers have only fine chimes composed of a few bells.

Belgian Embassy Gives Advice.

It was this very fact that gave Mr. Shull the idea of a national carillon for America; and the publication of his idea in newspapers and magazines attracted general attention. This was in November 1918, when cities and towns the country over were planning memorials for their returning soldier boys. The Arts Club of Washington took up the plan, and what has come to be known as the National Peace Carillon Executive Committee composed of W. B. Westlake, Dr. Edwin P. Smith, Captain W. I. Chambers, U.S.N., and Mr. Shull, was formed.

The committee has worked out its plans and at last is ready to begin its public work. The members have consulted with national officials and with experts at home and abroad. Members of the two branches of Congress have agreed to sponsor the measure making it possible for the committee to secure the metal for the bells, while arrangements have been made with the Fine Arts Commission to select the site for the tower and approve its design. Perhaps the most troublesome question has been the proper location for the tower. The French and Belgian embassies in Washington have urged the committee not to locate the tower in the centre of the city, asserting that this is the great mistake made by their home countries. The committee and the commission are inclined to select a plot of land on Sixteenth street Heights, near the centre of the population but still removed from the noise of the business section.

"Something the World Has Never Heard."

One of the first men to write the committee was Joseph Denyn, who may give the first concert in Washington. "With my apologies for replying in French," he wrote, "I have the honor to advise you that I connot new—that bells have been cast from cannon for centuries past. More than 200 years in 1710 to be exact, Emperor Joseph I., of Austria, had a great bell cast from Turkish cannon and placed in the tower of St. Stephen's in Vienna. This, known as the Emperor Bell, weighed seventeen tons. Emperor Bell in derision over defeated France. The carillon proposed for Washington has an entirely different purpose, namely, to commemorate the heroes of Allied lands who fought for right, not might.
