LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER XXII.

Presently a shadow fell across the turf, and he looked up to see the fair face and golden head of his wife. Any other man must have found her inexpressibly fair; her white morning-dress, with its rich laces and blue ribbons, sweeping the grass in graceful folds; an exquisite bloom, brought by the fresh morning air, brightening her face, a knot of roses at her throat. She had tried to look her best, so that she might please his eyes and win a few words of affection from him. But his face darkened as his eyes rested on her, and he looked anything but pleased at the interruption.

"What a lovely morning, Vance!" she began. "You look the picture of luxurious idleness."

"I do not feel very miserable," he responded; but no light came into his eyes when he saw her. He was tired of her soft loveliness.

Lady Laura stood by him in silence for a few moments, while he took up the paper and began to read, ignoring her presence altogether.

"Vance," she said, gently, "if you are not particularly engaged, will you give me five minutes of your time?"

And, considering all that she had bestowed upon him, she felt that it was not much to ask.

He sighed, and resigned himself with as much grace as he could to listen to what she had to say.

"What is it, Laura? A toilet from Worth's, a costume for Harborough House? Something very important, I see, from your face."

There was a ring of satire in his voice which reached even the heart of the woman who loved him so well.

"Nay, Vance; I like nice dresses, but my mind is not so entirely absorbed in them as to leave me nothing else to speak of. It is about yourself that I wish to speak." Then a sudden den hesitation came over her, and a fear lest she should displease him seized her, and almost silenced the words on her lips.

"Me?" he questioned. "Why, Laura, what can you have to say about me?"

"I will tell you," she answered. "I have not been very happy lately, Vance; my heart has ached until it has grown heavy within me, and tears come more naturally to me now than smiles."

He moved impatiently in his chair, but spoke no word. He had a shrewd suspicion of what was coming.

"I do not think," she continued, that any wife could love her husband with deeper, truer love than I give to you."

He smiled complacently. What less royal gift than perfect love could be given to him?

"And I?" she went on, "expect the same love from you; and," she added, with a trembling voice, "I am sure that you can give it to me."

An expression of relief passed over the captain's face as his wife uttered these last words.

"But there is just one thing," continued her ladyship, "that would make me happier, if you would do it."

"What is it?" he asked.

And again her lips seemed unable to frame the words. She looked at her husband with something that was like a mist of tears in her eyes.

"Vance," she said, "do you know that I am almost afraid of you? I find myself wondering whether I dare say what I find myself longing to say."

"You need not fear to say anything you wish to me," he said kindly; and the gentle tone of his words brought back all her courage.

"Well, Vance, I want you to give up your intimacy with Gladys Rane."

The trusting, loving woman did not notice the fiery gleam of anger that darkened his face; but she did see the sudden movement of his fingers, the quick clinching of the strong hands.

"What have you to do with Gladys Rane?" he asked, in a cold, stern voice. "And why should I give up one of the best and dearest friends I have in the world?"

"If she were no more than a friend," said her ladyship, "I would not make the request."

"And who dares to suggest that she is more than a friend?" he demanded, angrily.

"Every one! Oh, Vance, do not be angry! I know it is weak and foolish of me. You gave me the best proof of your love by asking me to be your wife; but I am jealous of Gladys Rane, and the jealousy is poisoning my life."

"You have no cause to be jealous," he said, coldly.

more. I see, besides, so much that I cannot put into words; and, Vance, I have seen you wear her flowers. When she sings, she sings only to you, for her eyes never leave your face; and once I saw you kiss her hand. Something—it must be the instinct of my own heart—tells me that she is my rival. I want you to give up your intimacy with her, Vance. It pains me—it is killing me—I cannot bear it!"—and her voice died away in a little sob.

The captain was silent for a time, and the look on his face was not pleasant to see.

"Have you quite finished, Laura?" he asked, dryly.

"No, I could talk to you for hours out of the fullness of my heart," she answered. "I was so happy before we came here, before you met her, although I was told before we were married that you loved Miss Rane, and that you were going to marry me only for my money."

"Did you believe it?" he asked.

"No," she replied; "nor do I believe it now. I could not live with such a belief. Oh, Vance, make me happy again in the old light-hearted fashion!"

"If I had not heard all this nonsense," said the captain. "I could never have believed that any woman could be so weak, so foolish, so ridiculously jealous. I am astonished at you, though it is true I never gave you credit for being strong-minded. Jealousy is ridiculous at all times; but it is doubly ridiculous when it exists without cause."

"Can you say truthfully, Vance, that my jealousy is without cause?" asked the distressed wife.

"I say so clearly and distinctly; it is an absurd folly, an absurd fancy."

"You do not really love Gladys Rane?" she asked.

"I consider the question an insult!" he exclaimed.

"Then, Vance, if you do not love her, if you do not take an undue interest in her, why not make me happy by giving up the greater part of your intimacy?"

"Because I will not," he replied. "If I were to do that it would prove at once that you were right in the ridiculous conclusion you have come to. If I gave up my friendship for Miss Rane at your request, it would be tantamount to admitting that there was something in it which required giving up."

"I do not think so," Lady Laura returned. "It would simply prove that you love me above all others, and that you would do anything to make me happy."

Knit garments for sports wear are partial to short fringe as trimming. In all draped frocks the tendency is to accentuate the left hip by some ornament. Knee-length white woolen skirts may take the place of knickers in the sports world. Winter resorts are seeing many null and linen dresses in white, with tan and gray. A straight-panel frock of citron-colored moire is worn over a slip of blending satin. The metallic bertha is now being used on afternoon frocks as well as evening gowns.

The Allan Line and the Men Who Made It.

The Last Vestige of this Historic Pioneer Shipping Company Now Disappears with the Change of Name of the Allan Line, Now Owned by the C. P. R.

THE TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS OF THE EARLIER NAVIGATORS.
(By Frederick Paul, in Toronto, Saturday Night.)

In a recent Glasgow despatch hidden away in my newspaper, appeared a statement to the effect that the liner Victoria had been renamed the Marlock; that the Corcoran is to be the Marvale; the Tunisian, the Marburn and the Scotian the Argon.

To those who "go down to the sea ships," and particularly to the older generation, this little item has significance. It means, in a word, that the last vestige of the historic Allan Line has passed—disappeared when the "An" of the C.P.R. gave way to the "Mar" of the C.P.R. Of course the purchase of the Allan Line by the Canadian Pacific Railway took place some years ago, but up to recently the old names were retained, but now the also go. And it seems to me that the final passing of this old steamship line and the men who pioneered in the coupling up of the world with the new, by means of a steamship service, should not altogether overlooked at this time when in these rushing days of constant change.

It was following the failure of a Liverpool firm back in 1852 to properly establish a line of steamships between British and Canadian ports, that the Allans, Hugh the dominant one, who afterward became Sir Hugh, and Andrew, his brother, entered the business in Canada. Of sea-faring, ship-owning family, the Allans were born to the business. By came from Saltcoats, within a few miles of Glasgow, a large family of sons.

That the Allans did succeed in establishing a regular steamship service between Britain and Canada in a face of what seemed then almost insurmountable obstacles can be set down to the tenacity and business sagacity of those long headed Scots. Nautical appliances and charts were comparatively crude back in the fifties, the lighthouse and signal systems were as nothing as compared to-day, to say little of the swift and uncertain currents of the Gulf, together with its fog and ice. Of wireless had not then been thought of.

to the Gulf. The Bohemian was wrecked near Portland when twenty passengers were drowned, and so on through the fateful list.

It is doubtful if there was another shipping company then in existence that would have withstood such a succession of disasters and come through. But the Allans never faltered. As fast as they lost ships they replaced them, and if there was not time to build they bought. Each vessel lost was supplanted by a bigger and a better one, and then their luck turned. But it was not altogether luck for the Allans through the course of years had trained their officers for the special duties and dangers that had to be faced in making the Canadian ports, and more particularly the St. Lawrence in those early days.

For a long series of years, from 1855 onward, there were no losses to speak of and the Allan line grew and thrived. In 1882 the liner Parisian was built for the Allans at Glasgow. In her day she was the "Queen of the seas." With her four tall masts (sails were carried when the wind was favorable) her two funnels, raking nicely aft in line with her masts; her yacht-like bow and her battleship stern, she was a sight for a sailor. For upward of a quarter of a century the Parisian plied the Atlantic carrying the flag of the house of Allan, and never in all that time had she an accident worth recording and never lost a passenger, through any fault of ship or crew.

Speaking of the Parisian it is interesting to note that up to the time she was built, steamships were constructed of iron or wood, and she was one of the first, if not the first, to be built of steel. She also had an inner and outer skin, an extra precaution against accidents, a common thing now, but new in those days. The Allan Line was, I believe, the first to adopt fin keels on the sides of its ships, a precaution that prevents rolling in a seaway. And speaking of rolling reminds one of an early vessel of the Allan line, the Polynesian. This craft was a roller and no mistake, and was known far and wide as the "Rolling Poly." Later on her name was changed to the Laurentian. Perhaps her evil reputation had something to do with the change. But this is a mere guess.

With a fleet of something like forty ships in service, the house flag of the Allans was known in the seven seas. There was scarcely a port, from South America to India to South Africa that their vessels did not enter. And in war times from the days of the Crimean to the end of the Great War their ships did great service in transporting troops.

The question is often asked as to what becomes of a steamship company's older vessels, as year by year the smaller craft is crowded off the regular sea routes by the larger and more up-to-date vessels. And this may be well said of the older Allan liners, for they were built of iron and oak wood and, barring accidents, are well nigh indestructible. Indeed, it is a common thing for an iron built hull to be as good as new after fifty years of service. As a matter of fact these staunch old crafts are to be found in all sorts of odd corners. Years ago I was surprised to see three or four old Allan liners tied up in the port of St. John's, Newfoundland, vessels that had passed out of the sight of the big ports years before. Here they were as staunch as ever, doing duty in the coasting trade and in the seal-fishing business. Others in turn found their way to the South American waters, and if one chances to trip up the Amazon or stops off at Buenos Aires no doubt many other old friends would be found.

And now a final word for the Allan Line. It had its ups and downs, its triumphs and its reverses, as I have attempted to sketch briefly. In the earlier years the ports on the St. Lawrence were entirely dependent upon it for a regular steamship service. It pioneered its way to success and as a pioneer it paid the price in wrecks and lives. It was intricate seamanship learned in a hard school, but it was none the less the school which taught the successful navigation of that gulf and river as we know it to-day.

Then hats off to the old Allan Line and its makers, Hugh and Andrew, long gone to their rest, for much that we now have is due to the tenacity and bull dog courage of men such as these.

THE TEST OF A MAN.

To have lived for the good of a cause; to have come through the test, Tempted by promise of power, still true to your best; To have felt the wind slash at your face and the cold and the rain, And still to have cherished the faith above stations or gain.

More clamorous often are friends, and sometimes more cruel than foes; They will ask what a man should do and suggest what no foe would propose.

But he who would venture for truth, must hear only duty's clear call And strike for the goal that he sees 'till the light shall be seen by them all.

The Franklin Stove.

The early colonists of Pennsylvania sometimes found it hard to keep warm. When Benjamin Franklin brought out his "New Pennsylvania Fireplace" in 1742, it was welcomed as a boon by the colonial housewives. Although a rather complicated affair, in which both coal and wood could be used it grew in its later development into what is now well known as the "Franklin stove." As the bedrooms of the colonists were freezing cold in winter, a warming pan was used to heat up the bed before getting into it at night. The warming-pan was round, about a foot wide, and four or five inches deep, with a perforated metal top and a long wooden handle. This was filled with coals from the fireplace and placed between the bed linen and moved about rapidly. Wood was very plentiful and was used quite freely, the immense fireplaces consuming vast quantities of it.

Embroidery of silver and gold chrysanthemums is charming on brown tulle.

A New Textile Fibre.

Considerable interest has been aroused in textile-manufacturing circles by the advent of argan, a new fibre, native to South America. While travelling in that continent some years ago, Sir Henry Wickham, an authority on rubber-planting, saw the natives making extensive use of the fibre in the manufacture of harness, belts, and other articles. Stimulated by the shortage of all kinds of textile fibres resulting from the Great War, Sir Henry conceived the idea of encouraging the cultivation of argan on British soil. The Government of the Federated Malay States, convinced of the possibilities of the discovery, made a grant of 30,000 acres of land for the cultivation of the fibre; the authorities in India and Ceylon also set aside large tracts for the same purpose. Thousands of specimens of the argan plant, which propagates itself by means of suckers, and takes from two and a half years to reach maturity, were transported from the South American continent, and are now yielding their harvest. The plant is of the pineapple type, and its leaves split readily into fibres 5 or 6 feet long, which resemble silk in their pearliness, and are 50 per cent stronger than the best hemp or flax. Argan resists the action of sea-water, and will, therefore, be especially suitable for the manufacture of fishing-nets, marine cordage, and sails; while, according to Mr. Alfred S. Moore, a 'tinen' expert who wrote upon the subject in a recent issue of Conquest, it spins and bleaches magnificently, takes and retains all dyes, and makes a firm cloth when woven alone or in combination with cotton or linen yarn.—Chamber's Journal.

Bibby's Soap will give you such wonderful results you'll sure tell your friends about it.

Although there are many circular costumes and bouffant styles, the all-around is without doubt slender.

The "Mail" Shur.

Evening Telegram.
 Sir.—In a recent issue of the Mail commenting on the entry of W. S. Monroe into the political arena, that paper made a nasty slur on the memory of the late Hon. Monroe when it stated that he was a Monroe in politics here but he did not save his reputation for it. This slur at the memory of this big hearted, generous man will be resented on Monday by the many friends of this named citizen. The late Hon. W. S. Monroe was one of the best men that ever made this country his adopted home and it is because of the "Mail" or any other publication to try and besmirch his memory. Many the widow and orphan reason to remember his charity liberality in their hour of distress it is men of the Monroe stamp that we want now to help us in our hour of affliction brought about by the misrule of the Squires-Coaker administration. That great labor giving organization the Ropewalk was started by the enterprise of the late Moses Monroe, assisted by his lamented son, the late James H. Monroe. I am sure that the many friends of the Monroe family and the employees of the Colonial Cordage Co. will be their disapproval of this unprovoked attack by supporting the party at the forthcoming election of Mr. W. S. Monroe a prospective candidate.

Yours truly,
 ST. JOHN'S WEST.

Eagle Sailed.

REPAIRS QUICKLY EXECUTED.
 The Eagle, Capt. Ed. Bishop, which was delayed in her sailing with repairs of the sealing feet yesterday, owing to a tyrod of her boiler becoming defective, left yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Bishop and his crew were given a hearty send-off by "kiddie" men who had gathered at the pier. The steamer in the harbor was until the ship passed through the narrows. The fleet must have felt the force of the westerly storm and news of their departure will be awaited with interest.

"Pilate's Daughter."

SUCCESSFUL REPRODUCTION LAST NIGHT.

The third performance of the intensely interesting drama "Pilate's Daughter," drew a full house at the Casino Theatre last night, despite the inclemency of the weather. Amongst the audience, many of whom witnessed the initial performance, were his Excellency the Governor, Lady Allarby, and Suite, who occupied Box No. 2, which was draped with the National colors. A feature of the play was the selections rendered by the orchestra of the Academy of Mercy under the direction of Miss Power. The presentation of the play was faultless, each and every one of the characters being portrayed with such grace and ease as if the performers lived their parts. Without appearing to be invidious, particular mention might be made of Mrs. Norris, Miss Keegan, Miss Primm, Miss Howley, Miss Krentalin, Miss Foran and Miss Fraser. The last mentioned lady as she gave a wonderful impersonation of a most difficult character, Little Miss Eileen Kiely as Claudia, the daughter of Pilate, in the first act was particularly natural in that character. The production reflects the splendid training which is given the pupils of the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy, and the good Nuns, and Mrs. J. Baxter, under whose direction the play is staged, must feel proud of their talented pupils. "Pilate's Daughter" will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night, and there will be a matinee Saturday afternoon for the kiddies and no doubt crowded houses will result.

Canadian Hockey.

NEWFOUNDLAND GIRLS STAR AT MONTREAL.

A very interesting report of a ladies' hockey match appears in the Montreal Star of February 28th, which in glowing terms refers to the splendid hockey exhibition displayed by two Newfoundland girls, Miss Olive Mews, and Miss M. Fenwick, law students at the Toronto University. The game was played at the Mount Royal Arena, Montreal, between the University of Toronto and Royal Victoria College, and resulted in a complete walk-over for the former sextette by a score of nine to none. Special mention of Miss Olive Mews' play, is as follows:—"Miss Olive Mews, on the defence, was the fastest and most outstanding player on the ice, and she combined the majority of the features that go to make up a good player on a team of either sex. The neat manner in which she would close in on opponents against the boards was something new to the followers of ladies' hockey here."

The young lady mentioned above is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Mews, this city, and is taking a course at Toronto University leading to the degree of Bachelor of Commerce. Miss Fenwick, who played a very spectacular game in centre ice for the victors, is the daughter of Rev. Dr. Fenwick and is taking a similar course.

CAPT. THOMAS JANES IMPROVING.

Capt. Thomas Janes and the members of the crew of the ill-fated schr. A. B. Barbeau, who were removed to the General Hospital on Tuesday to receive treatment for their frost-bitten limbs, are doing fairly well at the Hospital. Capt. Janes, who appeared to be suffering most, had a good rest last night. An operation in his case has not yet been decided upon. The other members of the crew will, in all probability, come around by a course of ordinary treatment.

Poland's New Canals.

With the reconstruction and expansion of Poland's railway service, plans for the development of a system of waterways, according to reports, are progressing simultaneously. Among the important river and canal routes for which plans have long been in preparation are those connecting Polish Silesia with Danzig by way of the Vistula River and northeastern Poland with Memel by way of the Niemen River.

The reunion of the three parts of Poland which were for many years under the Governments of Prussia, Austria and Russia has made possible a more extensive use of waterways. Formerly the frontier lines cut the nation into three parts, in no one of which large development of waterways was feasible. At the present time the most important route in use in Poland is the Vistula River from Warsaw to Danzig. It requires only further improvement to open the Vistula as far south as the Silesian coal fields. Once Silesia is connected by canal and river with the Baltic, transportation costs will be lessened sufficiently to stimulate both mining and manufacturing.

Development of the Niemen River will provide a direct water route to the Baltic for the Polish lumber industry. At present the transportation difficulties are so great that only a limited exploitation of the immense forests in northeastern Poland has been profitable. The Niemen River, which flows from Poland through southwestern Lithuania to the free city of Memel, was internationalized by the Treaty of Versailles and consequently the difficulties which have stood in the way of the development by this water route have been of an engineering rather than of a political nature.

The Vistula River, according to the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, has also been opened to the ships of all nations. As an international trade route this river is regarded as offering great opportunities. Plans for connecting the Baltic Sea with the Black Sea by a river and canal route, are based largely on the possibilities of developing the Vistula system and connecting it with the San and Dniester Rivers by canal.

The construction of canals connecting the Vistula, San, Dniester, Dnieper and Bug Rivers will not only open the greater portion of Central Europe to cheap water transportation, but will lessen the distance from Danzig to the Crimea to less than one-fifth the present water route. Even after allowances are made for canal tolls, according to the report, the transportation by this route is estimated at less than one-half of the present water route costs from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Development of this route will mean much for Poland's cities, it is stated. With but two exceptions, the larger cities of Poland are situated on the Vistula and its tributaries. Nearest the source of the river is the old Polish capital, Cracow. Half-way to the sea is the present capital, Warsaw. Toward the north are Plock and Torun. Lodz is on the tributary of the Vistula. Poznan and Lwow are the two cities of great importance not touched by the Vistula system.

Edward IV's Body Discovered.

Early in March, 1790, while workmen were employed in paving the choir of St. George's Chapel, at Windsor they discovered a decay in the stones which closed up the entrance into the vault where the remains of Edward IV. had been deposited. Two of the canons and the surveyor entering the vault viewed the Royal body, which enclosed in a leaden and a wooden coffin, was reduced to a skeleton measuring 6ft. 3in.; the skull reclined to the north or left side, with a quantity of long brown hair which had fallen off it, but no trace of envelope or cere-cloth, nor any rings or other insignia. A liquor covered the bottom of the inner coffin to the depth of about 4in., which upon examination, was found to be only the moisture which had drained from the body. On the king's coffin lay another of wood, only much decayed which contained the skeleton of a woman; who from the marks of age about the skull, was supposed to be the remains of his wife Queen Elizabeth Widville, who died three years after him at Hermondey Abbey, and was probably buried with less pomp. The body of his fifth daughter Mary, who died the year before him, and was the only person of his family buried at Windsor, was not in this vault, which from various circumstances, appears to have been opened and plundered at some former period. On the walls of the vault was written in chalk, in abbreviated characters of the time, "Edward" or "Edward IV." and several names of workmen or assistants at the funeral. Edward IV. died April 9, 1482, and was buried on the 18th of the same month in this chapel, the foundations of which he himself had laid some years previous.

How They Loved Each Other.

Read What Mr. Coaker and Dr. Mosdell Published About Each Other in the Star and Advocate.

(Daily Star, March 24, 1919.)

As a factor in the education of a sane and sober newspaper of the most effective agents of sanity and sobriety do not characterize the line of policy followed by the Advocate in its abusive treatment and persistent misrepresentation of Mr. Coaker.

Those who depend upon the Advocate columns to form honest opinions of men and affairs are sorely and deliberately deceived.

The supreme desire manifested by the personal organ of Mr. Coaker is to keep readers in ignorance of the true state of public affairs.

Perpetrating persistence in this policy remains the success of Mr. Coaker in befuddling the toilers of the sea and securing their good will.

The same date we clip the following from the Advocate in 1919:

Let us remind Mr. Squires right here he will never again be regarded as a sitting man to represent a Northern district in the House of Assembly.

The man that insulted the verdict of the electors of Trinity Bay, by crawling into the Department of Justice and taking a seat in the Upper House in defiance of the wishes of the electors will never again be respected by any body of electors.

His fate was decreed by Trinity electors in 1913 at the request of the F.P.U. and the medicine meted out to him will be meted out to all like traitors to the fishermen's cause.

The members of the F.P.U. will let Squires and his clique know what they think of them when they get the chance. The Squires clique are moving hell and earth to kill Coaker and the F.P.U.

Now Mr. F.P.U. man and fishermen all over the country, what do you think of Mr. Squires today? Is he not the same man whom Mr. Coaker and the Advocate so strongly denounced as shown above?

Who is the traitor now? Read those comparisons above and form your own opinion of Dr. Mosdell, Sir Richard Squires and Mr. Coaker.

Newfoundland Murderer

ONCE PROMINENT SCHOLAR.

Dr. Charles Howlett wires the Evening Telegram from New York with reference to the man Joseph Murphy, arraigned for murder at Stratford Frothingham's Court in that city, as reported in the Canadian news service despatch published in another column. Dr. Howlett's message reads:—"Globe gives the following a big notice to-day. Joseph Murphy, a graduate, with high honors forty years ago, from Nicolaus College, St. John's, Newfoundland, gave himself up to police as the murderer of Joseph O'Rourke. Murphy was a salmon porter, though once very prominent in the leather business. 'Could this be the Nichol's School?'

The Menace of Coakerism.

Absolute power of the Central Soviet Committee over its members, and full control of the fortunes of these persons, was declared in a secret resolution by the third internationale at the instance of Lenin. It reaffirmed the Bolshevik plot for the destruction of all existing governments by any means and threatened the members who failed to carry out the order. The resolution branded all parliament as the tools of capitalism. Here and swindlers. "The duty of the proletariat is to snatch these pernicious tools from the hands of the ruling classes, and to crush and destroy them," declared the conference.

The above somewhat resembles the principles as we see embodied in Coakerism or Coaker Rule in Newfoundland. The destiny of the Dominion is wholly and solely in control of W. F. Coaker, who is assuming unto himself the power he claims to hold, declares that his only wishes (which are more or less personal) must be entertained. His frenzied attempt to disrupt the trade and commerce of the country is only equalled by the Bolshevik methods of the notorious Lenin. The Government is Coaker and he only.

According to the Russian Reds all municipal institutions must be destroyed to enable Bolshevism to accomplish its claims. Wherever the Communists have a majority they must immediately agitate for a revolution and introduce full armed workingmen's militias. The Communist members of parliament should bind themselves to active participation in the work of promotion of Bolshevik interests, both legal and illegal.

That is what is happening here in Newfoundland. The Fish Regulation Scandal, the Sugar Scandal, the Woodford Affidavit Scandal, are only small instances that may be illustrated at the present time. We have only to peep out that if such infamous deeds were practised by any other Government what an uproar the Coaker press and party would cause; but having the power and influence behind them, they not only fail to offer excuses or apologies, but sneer and vilify those who wish to sneer their conduct in a sane manner.

The people all over the country have the responsibility of sweeping this menace out of existence for all time.

A Bennett Government will mean sane and progressive legislation.

Bennett.

Vote for Bennett and the Return of Good Times.

TRADESMEN ALL YOUR WELFARE DEPENDS UPON YOUR VOTE.

Dear Sir—As the prosperity of a city may be measured by the property of its tradesmen, so its decline to a stagnant condition reflected in the material condition of this honest and honorable class of workmen when that decline is clearly visible. Four years ago the city of St. John's displayed all the evidences of a growing and a prosperous town and all of its tradesmen were happy and contented. This was because employment was to be had in abundance and nothing seemed visible in the distance to fear that such a happy condition would be set. Then, unfortunately, came the elections when many of our tradesmen, in poor faith, voted for a change of Government. Like many other honest but misguided men they did not sufficiently give heed to the alarm that the menace of Coakerism would cripple St. John's and throw out of gear these avenues of employment upon which the welfare of their families solely depended.

Now, however, all eyes are opened to the ruin that took place; all of us have clear visions of the injuries that have been inflicted and as it is our duty this time to restore the city once again to its former prosperous and proud position. This all depends upon ourselves, for the election, soon to occur, gives to us the power to become the arbiters of our own fate for the next four years to come. We have now the power to undo the wrongs of 1919, and as on the one side we see again the devastating hand of Coakerism spread out to make conditions in the city more terrible than they have; whilst on the other side we view the warm and welcome sunbeams that betoken years and years of good times, plenty of employment, happiness and contentment for ourselves and families and a prosperous St. John's once more, that should be no doubt then as to how we shall mark our ballots. THE SOLID STRAIGHT TICKET FOR THE BENNETT CANDIDATES will be the battle slogan of every city tradesman who seeks the welfare of himself and family. And in addition we shall all lend our weight and influence in assisting our friends, the labourers, the clerks in shops and offices, and all employees amongst us to rid St. John's now and forever of this intolerable rule of Coakerism, that has worked such havoc amongst us.

Yours truly,
CITY COOPER.
March 8th, 1923.

John Drinkwater's Famous Play.

MISS JOYNER WILL GIVE RECITAL AT LLEWELLYN CLUB TONIGHT.

The great play "Abraham Lincoln" written by John Drinkwater, has won much fame in England, although so short a time has elapsed since its initial production. The author is now engaged in conjunction with Sir William Orpen in editing a work entitled "The Outline of Literature and Art" to be completed in twenty-four fortnightly parts. If this work is an indication of the value of the play, then the Llewellyn Club has a great pleasure in store for it to-night. Miss Joyner, M.A. is the first female instructor that Bishop Field College has had, and during the past year she has proved her worth. The Llewellyn Club is to be congratulated on having secured her to lecture to them on this day.

Pharmacy Board Examinations.

These were recently held at the Lyon Building, occupying the entire day, and resulted in certificates being awarded to the following candidates: Messrs. E. Dorn, M. J. Fitzgerald, B. Callan, and Leonard Burke. Two of these students were from the city, one from Grand Falls and one from Carling. The subjects of Examination and Examiners were:—Elementary Chemistry set by Dr. Scully. Practical Pharmacy set by Mr. Leo O'Mara. Dispensing set by Peter O'Mara. Materia Medica set by A. E. Parkins. Oral and Identification set by R. G. Macdonald. The examination showed much careful preparation and creditable marks were obtained by all. It speaks well for the future when the Junior Drug Clerks are taking to their books and endeavoring to fit themselves for the responsible relation that must ever hold to the public.

Pharmacy Board Examinations.

TERRA NOVA REPORTED.—The Terra Nova, Capt. A. Keen, reported this morning that he passed 10 miles north of Cape Bonavista at 7 o'clock last night making good progress, while the Ranger was also doing good work. The captain also stated that the engines were working very satisfactorily.

Rabbit Season Extended.

Owing to conditions prevailing throughout the country the Game and Inland Fisheries Board have granted an extension of the time in which rabbits may be killed. The permission, however, only applies to taking rabbits by snare until March 31st, 1923.

Making Sagona Ready.

S.S. Sagona is now at Bowling's outside premises. A staff of men are engaged fitting up the quarters for the crews, while minor alterations are also being made prior to her leaving for the Seal Fishery. Capt. Job Khee and crew arrived at Gamba last night, and will leave for St. John's by the first train available. The Sagona is not expected to get away before Saturday.

FOR ICEFIELDS.

GLENNON AT ARGENTIA.—S. S. Glennon was forced to return to Argentia last night and will be detained there until a change of wild moves the ice off shore.

Is it Scandals?

The Government organ challenges us to name any scandals that can be imputed to the Government. The man who invites this reply must be crazy or living in a state of amnesia the past three years. We thank those few for teaching us that word for there is a veritable litany of Scandals in the three years' record of the Squires-Coaker Government. Here is a list of the big ones in which all the money was wasted:

- Fish Supplies . . . . .400,000
- Halt Scandal . . . . .370,000
- F.P.U. Supplies . . . . .1,000,000
- F.P.U. Supplies . . . . .250,000
- Badger Road . . . . .500,000
- Old steamers now lying at anchor . . . . .300,000
- South Branch Coal . . . . .100,000
- Road De Luxe . . . . .27,000

Total . . . . .$2,747,000

All this was money thrown away with nothing any good to the Colony to show for it. There are also a lot of lesser scandals financially, such as goods Bonds at the Custom House and motor cars that were imported by friends of the Government who tried to shirk the payment of duty, so wonder the fishermen and labourers are groaning under the load of taxation and the fishermen cannot carry on the fishery. This extravagant expenditure must be reduced and the way to do this is to vote for Bennett's men.

Straight Ticket for Bennett's Team.

Wants Whistle Well Forward.

His theory for a fog whistle was that it should be placed as far forward as possible—on the foremast, say above the "crow's nest," where the noise would not be penetrating to the ears of the officer on the bridge or to the officers who were trying to sleep in their rooms just below.

One of the incidents recalled by Captain Dow was his experience in a fog for many hours when he was in command of one of the Cunarders in the Atlantic trade. After being on the bridge for some time he went into the chart room to take a cup of coffee, and while there he heard the blast of a steamer's whistle.

He rushed up to the bridge and asked the chief and third officers on watch, and they said they had heard nothing. He went back to his coffee and had only been there a few minutes when he again heard the whistle distinctly, and came back to the bridge, where the officers gave him the same reply as before. They had heard nothing. Then he sent the chief officer into the chart room, and in less than five minutes he came running up the ladder to the bridge and said:

"That sound is very close, sir."

A few minutes later they heard from the bridge the sound of a steamer's whistle almost abeam. From that time on, Captain Dow said, he had always made it a practice whenever he was about to post as junior officer in the chart room. That officer was always the first to report the fog signal, and it was usually some time afterward before it was heard from the bridge.

Urges Compressed Air.

The fog signal on the foremast, in his opinion, should be operated by compressed air and not by steam. There should also be an alteration in quite a number of steam whistles, so that as soon as the leeward whistle is pulled the sound would follow instantly. In too many cases the steam had to blow many gallons of water from the pipe before the sound was heard.

Captain Dow pointed out that in the Board of Trade examinations the eyesight tests were very severe, and so long as candidates passed them they were granted certificates of competency. He considers that the hearing power of candidate was just as important as his eyesight, for the greatest danger was in fog and not in clear weather, when a ship's steaming lights could be picked up a long distance off.

Captain Dow also stated that the construction of the bridge was also of paramount importance to the navigation and safety of the vessel. Hundreds of the finest ships afloat were hampered with stanchions, bridge ropes and guys of all descriptions, with the result that in foggy weather a continual whistling noise was heard around the bridge, which greatly interfered with safe navigation. The bridge should always be adequately enclosed so that the hearing of the officers there would not be affected by the noise referred to.

Another matter alluded to by Captain Dow was the proximity of the Maroonal route to the bridge, especially in East-going vessels. In some steamers the Maroonal route was located on the bridge deck only a few feet away from the bridge, where the officer was keeping watch. The noise of the spark of the instrument was very disturbing to the officers when they were trying to hear local signals during a fog.

GLENNON AT ARGENTIA.—S. S. Glennon was forced to return to Argentia last night and will be detained there until a change of wild moves the ice off shore.

Urges New Place for Ship's Whistle.

CAPTAIN DOW SAYS IT OUGHT TO BE ON THE FOREMAST ABOVE THE BRIDGE.

Captain Dostel Dow, R.N., R.N.R., retired, who commanded the Maroonalia, Lusitania, Carmania, Caronia and other steamships of the Cunard Line during his long career at sea, said recently in an address before an audience of ex-masters and officers at Liverpool that many years ago, when he left sailing ships to go into steamers, he found that the ship's whistle was in the wrong place. "In all British ships," said Captain Dow, "the fog whistle was placed on the forepart of the forward funnel, the master's and the officers' rooms being situated immediately adjacent. I have never been able to understand why shipbuilders and shipowners could not see the danger of such an arrangement. In the event of fog coming on, the blast caused a certain deafness to the officer on watch which lasted for several minutes, and prevented him from hearing, during that time, any local sound."

In this manner Captain Dow drew the attention of his audience to the collision of the Peninsular and Oriental liner Egypt in the British Channel, which cost many lives and for which he did not know what the position of the bridge was, or its distance from the whistle, but from the report of the inquiry it appeared that the Egypt never heard the Frenchman's whistle until just before the collision occurred, when it was, of course, too late.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

MONTREAL, March 8.

Cecile Brisson, aged 8, and Louise Brisson, aged 4, lost their lives; and their father, A. V. Brisson, aged 40, is lying in hospital suffering from severe burns, as the result of a fire which destroyed their home in the East End early to-day.

THE SAME THING AGAIN.

NEW YORK, March 8.

The temper of the Great National Assembly, sitting at Augusta, is sensibly different from what it was represented in first dispatches, according to Constantinople advices received from French diplomatic circles. These advices say that although the Assembly has not accepted the financial clauses of the Laucauna Treaty as a whole, nor is it disposed to agree to a resumption of negotiations with the Allies, for which it is prepared to draw up alternative proposals.

U.S. TARIFF COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, March 8.

Reports of a split in the tariff commission over the administration of a flexible tariff, are being given wide circulation in Washington. The whole question of increase or failure of flexible tariff legislation is said to be at stake. High tariff men on the Commission and in Congress, are said to be seeking to restrict the flexible feature of the measure so as to make it practically a dead letter. Thus far nothing has been done by the Commission, towards lowering rates to relieve United States public from high duties, and unless the President insists, it is declared, nothing will be done.

NEGROES FOR RUBE.

NEW YORK, March 8.

Harry V. Daugherty, arriving on S. S. Majestic yesterday, announced he had completed plans to transport before twenty-five hundred and five thousand United States negro miners to Rube to work coal mines seized by the French Government. The negroes will get seven dollars per day in addition to board, lodging and compensation in the event of injury.

To-Night's Attraction.

DOUBLE HEADER HOCKEY.

The attraction for tonight will be the double header hockey in the Prince's Rink. Fandom can be really assured that a splendid exhibition of puck chasing will be witnessed, as the pick of both the Junior and Senior Leagues will be seen in action. The first game will be played by the St. Bon's, champions of the Inter-Collegiate League, and a picked team from the G.W.V.A. and Gaiterons. The 15 minute periods will be played. The fans who were not given an opportunity to witness the College games during the season, will be able to see these boys in action to-night.

The entire proceeds go to the Child Welfare and G.W.V.A., and it is a foregone conclusion that a large attendance will be present. The lineup of the G.W.V.A. and City teams in tonight's game is as follows:—G.W.V.A.—Hunt, Paterson, Cannon, Tall, Winter, Parn, Herder, W. Clouston and Callahan. (colists white with purple caribou on breast.) CITY—Haley, H. Rendell, G. Haley, E. Ewing, Phelan, Collins, Field, Coutins, J. Tobill. (colors, blue and white.)

The C.L.R. Band will be in attendance and will render music for the general skating.

MONROE & CO. DEFEAT C. F. BENNETT & CO.

In a good fast game of hockey the Monroe Export Company last night defeated C.F. Bennett & Co. by 19 goals to two. For the winner R. Chase scored four goals, while Neville and Adey were the goal setters for the losers. The Monroe team have played four games and so far have not been defeated. The game was played at the St. Bon's Rink. Mr. A. McNamara was the referee.

Answers to Things We Want to Know.

IN THE ADVOCATE.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—In looking over the issue of to-day's Advocate, I was amused to see questions headed "Things we want to know." Well, as far as I can see, the Advocate knows nothing, and the contributor of said questions knows absolutely nothing about politics in our island home, to which he migrated by accident.

First, he wants to know if there is a real Tory Party in Newfoundland. Yes, there was a real Tory Party and a real Liberal Party, and by the amalgamation of some of each party originated the People's Party, led by Sir E. P. Morris, and represented in the District of Trinity by Sir R. A. Squires, later defeated by the Liberal-F.P.U. Party. He, Sir R. A. Squires with the aid of the genial Minister of Agriculture and Mines entered politics, and formed the party known as the Liberal-Reform, and with the consent of the Hon. William F. Coaker he added F.P.U., thereby originating the Liberal-Reform-F.P.U. Party. Every Newfoundland knows what success it has achieved.

Second—Why the Opposition Party has changed its name? As far as I know the Opposition has not changed its name, but with the consent of the Labor Committee added Labor, thereby making it Liberal-Labor, which to my mind is more appropriate than the Liberal-Reform adding F.P.U., because Labor in this country is a free body, and not led by one individual, as is the F.P.U. He thinks that by adding the name Labor to the Opposition Party it is being used as bait for votes. Well, if I thought the Opposition would make overtures to him for his vote, I would refrain from voting at all, because I have an idea that he would sell his vote for one cent up to any amount. I wonder what bait was used by the firm that secured his services on the other side. Maybe it was the bait we used to catch sculpin with, a bit of "bull" on a crooked pin. Any-

Third—Not only the Telegram thinks the country is going bankrupt, but the 10,000 Newfoundlanders, who left it last year to seek a living elsewhere, and others, who are coming to leave it to "suckers" like the men from outside who live here at the expense of our hospitality.

Fourth—He admits there is going to be a new Government, and worries where it will get the money to run a bountiful, and he well knows how non-spent money accumulates.

Fifth—Mr. Coaker has been making some big breaks. For instance, the Fish Regulations, Sugar, Salt, Steamers, Government Purchase of Fish and some others.

Sixth—If Sir R. A. Squires will have a clean, honest opposition in the new Government? Certainly he will. The Opposition with a few more good men added will be the new Government, and Sir R. A. will get all the opposition asked for him.

Seventh—Jesse Winsor has never been known to get sick over a bargain he has himself made, particularly this one. And his followers will fish next summer as they did in past summers and provide food for some of the Advocate scribes.

Yours truly,
NATIVE BRED.

Impertinence.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Whatever Newfoundlanders in London think of it, Newfoundlanders in Newfoundland think it a great piece of impertinence for them to interfere from London in the Atlantic colonial affairs such as this proposed Humber deal. We reserve to ourselves the right to say whether we shall or shall not trust the making of such a gigantic deal with Squires. Before that deal be put through we want to have the particulars before us, and we want men to handle it whom we can trust. We cannot trust Squires. Sir Patrick McGrath probably knows the reason why.

The country regards the action of the Squires Government in precipitating a General Election now before meeting the House as proof enough that there is more truth than poetry in Sir Patrick's classical remark: "Squires can't be trusted." If we had adequate laws against fraud in this country, Squires et al would not dare spring this campaign of foul treachery upon an unprepared country. That Humber Deal should have been presented to the Assembly for either rejection or approval and not submitted to the country at this stage. It is the most grossly immoral piece of political chicanery ever attempted, and those guilty of the gross act should be impeached. If we had a truly awakened public opinion, I am not sure this would not be done. I do not for a moment doubt the result of the coming contest. I do not doubt it is going to be a regular landslide for the Opposition. It is not my fear of the result which causes this protest, but my hatred of a tyranny and brutal betrayal of the very essential ground work of intelligent and free government.

It is a crime against decent government to have a campaign such as this one, with a cowardly government putting a responsibility on the people that they themselves should assume. A deal of the most far-reaching consequences is being contemplated, and without knowing the facts, the country is being asked to pass judgment upon it. Not only that, but the betrayal of the very essential ground work of intelligent and free government. It is also branding as enemies to progress all who courageously raise a voice of protest against entering into what might prove a disastrous bargain without being in possession of full facts. There is a something sinister in the manner in which the Humber campaign is being carried on by the Government. If we ask for information we are loaded with vile abuse, and if we refuse to be silent or dream into ignominious acquiescence we are subjected to insults from the minions of a hireling press. But we are neither going to desist from questioning nor driven to give our assent. The whole subject must be debated openly. It must be submitted to analysis and the broad-light of day.

Yours truly,
ARTHUR ENGLISH.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Friday's blizzard seemed to have been the worst experienced here for the winter. It was felt in this town considerably and quite a few extremely high snow-banks were in evidence on Saturday. Some houses were actually snowed in and the inmates had to depend on their good neighbours to shovel a passage way before they could get out. The first few days of March having been so very fine, many were apt to jump to the conclusion that spring was at our doors, but all of a hurry we got a mighty set-back—such is what we expect winter time in Newfoundland, and take it all as it comes. Owing to the high wind and tide of Friday and Saturday, the harbour which had been completely frozen over for so long, was broken up from just outside the Point of Beach. The bridge still remains good, though for our South Side folks, but the skaters have lost their fine rink which afforded them so much enjoyment.

The marriage of Miss Annie Soper and Mr. Walter Willis, both of Bristol's Hope, is to be solemnized this afternoon, March 5th. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Wm Harris, Pastor of the Methodist Church here.

Finds Greece Big Problem.

NEW YORK, Feb.—Greece to-day presents "one of the most tremendous refugee problems the world has ever known," says a statement from Lt.-Col. William N. Haskell, American Red Cross commissioner to that country, included in a report made public here to-day.

Fresh from a tour of investigation of all the principal seaports, Col. Haskell cabled that there were at least a million refugees in an area whose entire population did not exceed 5,000,000. "In many cases," he said, "there are as many refugees as normal population in cities and towns, and in some instances the normal population has been doubled or tripled by the refugees."

Government Helpless.

"If all the people in New York were set down overnight in Chicago and tried to find shelter, food and clothing, the conditions would be much the same as they are in Greece."

"The Greek government is as yet totally unable to cope with the problem. The relief situation, however, is being rapidly stabilized. The actual emergency for some time to come can be dealt with by means of the food supplies and medical equipment already shipped."

Health conditions are much more promising than they were only a short time ago, though the situation is still precarious. Col. Haskell reported. If an epidemic of typhus can be averted for one month more, the worst of the danger will be past. Threatened epidemics of smallpox and cholera also are being combated with extensive preventive measures.

A Foul Attack.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Could political malevolence go further than as displayed in that ghoulish attack of the Daily Mail, Tuesday's issue, on the memory of one of the most prominent and influential merchants of St. John's, of his time? The contemptible hack who penned the words to which exception is taken, should be spraddled, and leashed with a whip made of scorpions. If that is a specimen of the quality of political campaign writings the country will have to put up with in the ensuing election, from a newspaper whose editor is a Bachelor of Medicine, a professional Journalist, (?) a Member of the Legislative Council, with the right to use the prefix, Honorable, to his name, beside being on so many Government Boards and Commissions, the number of which is legion, then it is time for the Prime Minister to take the chemical engine up Prescott Street to the Daily Mail office and give it a thorough fumigation, such as will destroy all the parasites in the building. Being of the Medical Profession the genial doctor-editor will amply appreciate what it is to be disinfected. Should any similar attacks on the memories of men long passed away be made in future, it might become necessary to take such steps as will prevent a recurrence. The Times of yore—the stringers—have every respect for their dead, but the Political Thugs of the Squires-Coaker party possess neither respect for the dead in body or memory. To besmirch dead and living alike seems to be a penchant of theirs. Only in Newfoundland would such dastardly journalism be tolerated, but even as it is, murmurings are being heard which are in reprobation of such base conduct on the part of those who profess and call themselves gentlemen, but who would be more at home in a sty than a drawing room. These murmurings may yet come to full voice, and should the whole volume of sound thereof be heard, someone had better beware. Attack, and damn the living if you will, Mr. Mail, but keep your foul pen in the memories of the sacred dead. Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours truly,
VINDEKX.

"Unanswerable."

"Why is it that the tenderest must tread the roughest road? Why is it the weakest back must carry the heaviest load? While the feet that are softest cannot have the smoothest road to go. And the back that is straightest and strongest has never a burden to know."

Why is it the brightest eyes are ones soon dim with tears? Why is it the brightest heart aches and aches for years? While the eyes that are hardest the coldest shed never a tear. And the heart that is smallest and meanest has never an ache to fear!

Why is it that those who are sad have always the saddest road? Why is it that those who need the coldest shed never a tear. And the heart that is smallest and meanest has never an ache to fear!

Why is it that those who are sad have always the saddest road? Why is it that those who need the coldest shed never a tear. And the heart that is smallest and meanest has never an ache to fear!

Why is it the sweetest smile has its sister a sigh? Why is it the strongest love is love that we always pass by? While the smile that is cold and indifferent is the smile for which we pray.

And the love we worship and kneel is only common clay!

Why is it the friends we trust are ones who always betray? Why is it the lips we wish to kiss are lips so far away? While close by our side if we love is a friend who loves to be true. And the lips we might have kissed are the lips we never see!

Why is it the things we can have are the things we always refuse? Why is it none of us live the life which if we could we'd choose? While the things we all can have are the things we always hate. And life seems never complete a matter how long we wait!"

MADE ALL MY GIRLS SWIM-MING CHAMPIONS.

(By "MA" BERLO.)
I am all for swimming, although
I swam a stroke before forty!
As their mother and swimming coach, I speak for all the Berlos—
Lily, Annie, Kitty, Madeline,
Florence, Pauline Barbara.
Swimming kept me young and gave my children bodies to be proud of.
Swimming is particularly healthful because every muscle in the body is made to work. I am sure I swam to thank for the fact that although I am over sixty—I am to be exact—I am still as my youngest daughter has a gray hair in my head—
I don't use eye either.

The Berlos swim but my husband never liked the water. This is the story of how I learned to swim and how I learned to swim different from that of any other swimmer. I stopped awaking about in the water for the first time when I was forty, and now have a reputation for swimming the "Hudson" style of eighty-five foot swim. Until forty my fame was as a woman with a lot of children.
I was living in South Boston, not far from the ocean. I used to take my children down to baths every week. I wanted them to learn to swim, and I myself didn't know how,
so I thought it an excellent idea to have an emergency. It also made their little bodies strong and healthy. One day I was in the water with them, showing them
I thought was the accurate style. They, with the natural buoyancy of youth, learned how to swim very quickly, although I myself had not yet attempted to take my first swim.

My daughter Miss Powers, a school teacher who swam the breast stroke very well, that is "her arms and head in unison." I remember her saying "It's marvelous! How Ed swam that way." Then I hear-ed and added with resignation,
"I'm too old. I'll never be able to swim!" I made the effort with the result, you all know,
I have never seen me flop into the water since.

My daughter and swimming is all right. I like it and I'm liked for it. My bones aren't what you call "floppy," and I'm as good about as good a time as any to swim to my chicken, dog and cat, which I am seriously considering doing next year. You see, I'm of lonesome now that all my children are gone. The last two died just a few days ago. Of course I must make the best of it, but I am a free woman. They worry me when I have them.
I must admit, however, that I am having them. I spent the best years of my married life with them. I think I can honestly say those were the happiest years I have known.

I believe in big families. Women nowadays won't have even one child.
I can't understand them. They must have the maternal instinct somewhere in them. I think I can honestly say I don't think it's right to suppress it. My daughters know my point of view. And I am proud to say that the third generation of Berlos is well on its way.

Perhaps I was happiest when rearing my little ones because they were never sick. I have no doubt but swimming has done that for them—given them their splendid health, I mean. I know swimming has done that for me. I've never known one day of illness. Of course, I must have been pretty hardy in the first place, or I could never have stood the strain of diving from bridges and swimming all winter in water filled with floating blocks of ice. I swam across the Hudson from the Palisades to Manhattan when I was fifty-three. And I must have been pretty nearly fifty when I dove off the eighty-five foot bridge in Minneapolis, turning two somersaults on the way down. For an old mother, I don't think I compared so badly with my daughter Lily, who managed to turn three before she struck the water.

The year that I swam the whole winter we were living on L Street in South Boston. Our home wasn't far from the beach. Every day after I shipped the children off to school, I used to go down for my dip. The first time I did it, it was snowing, and I had my daughter on hand to tell me what she thought of me swimming through the winter. The first shock of the ice-cold water was awful. But soon I loved it. When I came out, the doctor said that he didn't see how winter swimming could make anybody hardy, since you would have to be hardy to do it in the first place.

Then he looked at my skin and lips and noticed that they were both glowing red. He warned me that if either turned blue I ought not to continue my winter swimming. I swam every day that whole winter without once turning blue. Since then the girls have tried swimming in ice-cold water, too. A few winters ago we swam in the Hudson in a hole cut in the ice.

It is strange to think now that I had another profession when I was young. I was born in Newfoundland and, true to the English tradition, I played cricket and rode horseback, but I never swam. Few people in Newfoundland swim. They say the water is too cold. I must go back there next summer and show them how it isn't at all cold.

Before I was married I was a dressmaker. Being a dressmaker then was a very different thing from making dresses now. Now they just cut in a hole out of a piece of cloth, jump into it and tie it almost in the middle. In my time gowns had to be fitted snugly over tight corsets, which meant a million little seams and darts in just the right places.

I never thought when I was dress-

 Have you noticed that at the parts most exposed to wear, the plate has become worn?
 Do you think this condition of your Silver is in keeping with your idea of a well appointed table?
 Then why not, when you decide on replacing your old ware, give place to it with the "Wallace" Brand, the Silver that refuses to wear and is guaranteed without time limit.

EPIDEMIC IN CANADA.

We are just advised by Toronto Home Office that serious epidemic of "Flu" has been going strong for the past sixty days, and that the Union has been paying from 25 to 50 CLAIMS Per Day.
 Some of these claimants had only one premium paid, others were with the company from two to five years, and in a great many cases, each claim was far in excess of all premiums paid.
 Don't wait for "Flu" here. YOU may not be insurable THEN! Better get complete protection at once—NOW. That's what we're here for.
