Colonial Trade of Great Britain.

Grant facilities, Mr. Speaker, to Commerce and you necessarily increase the power of your Navy; and let it never be forgotten, that, from her lasular situation, the national glory of England is founded solely upon her naval ascendency."—

We give beneath a document, which is not only curiew in itself as matter of abstract inquiry, but comes to us at the present moment with peculiar claims to our attention, on account of the commanding interest, which all Colonial questions have a count of the commanding interest, which all Colonial questions have the public mind. The Edinburgh Raview, with that eleganence and witchery of lan-Review, with that cloquence and witchery of lan-guage, which leads the mind captive by a spell, even though the views be sophistical; has at length pronounced an anathema against the whole system of Colonial policy; and endeavoured to prove that of Colonial policy; and endeavoured to prove that these foreign appendages of Great Britain are in no degree necessary to her prosperity, or political pre-eminence and well-being. That they have made out this point in their inquiry—viz.—that the cost of maintaining the Colonies of N. B. America far exceeds the profits of their present trade—is, we think, undeniable; and consequently, if their possession were viewed of a simple matter of profits and least it follows that the Mother Country fit and loss, it follows that the Mother Country should knock off the fetters of our vassalage and leave us to our fate. But the Minister of a Great nation is not to council the measures of the Cabinet, as an intelligent merchant would the continuation of a enterprise, by the nice calculation of a balance sheet. His views must be more expanded-like the arch of the rainbow they must stretch from pole to pole. He must look not only to the acquisition of wealth—but to the safety and to the acquisition of wealth—but to the safety and glory of the Nation. It is one of the first rules of political instice, that the benefit of a part, must be in a cf. the whole. The posacrificed for the well-being of the whole. The po-litical weighs and ascendency of the United King-dom is founded unquestionably upon the superior-ity of her Navy:—it is the thunder of her ships" sail Baonaparte, with that greatness of thought, that ever distinguished him, "which, rolling along the surface of the ocean makes itself heard in every the surface of the ocean makes itself heard in every corner of the globe, and strikes terror into every cabinet in Europe." The power and greatness of that Navy arises from the extent and magnitude of her commerce. The canvass of England bleaches under every sun, her flags wave in every breeze; and the wide seas of the Pacific, Atlantic and Great Southern oceans contribute to her safety and fame by training up a race of bold, active and adventurous seamen. And without these resources, her Navy would be powerless—and not only her Name, but her existence would be threatened. If these views he just, it becomes Great Britain specially to extend her fostering care to that Trade, which gives employment to the largest portion of her shipping. And were that policy acted on, it would be high treason to the state to recommend the relinquishment of the Colonies of British Tonnage, than any to a larger amount of British Tonnage, than any other department of Trade open to British enterprize. The West Indies scarcely employ two thirds of our quantity—Russia, not a half— Prussia and Germany, respectively. about oue-fifth—France, an eighth—Denmark, a tenth—and the vast continents. of Asia and Africa united, not one third!!!

In addition, the testimony of all history seems to confirm this fact—that Naval power has ever graws with, and been sestained by Colonial Possessions. The Phoenicians and Tyrians railed the ocean after Godes and Carthage were respectively founded by them—the glorious victory of Salamis was not gained, until the Islands of the Archipelago, Rhodes. Cyprus and many of the clies on the coast of Asia Minor were the Colonies of Greece,—Rome had no Navy, until the attempted the sub-Rome had no Navy, until she attempted the sub-jugation of Carthage—the Spanish fleets had reached the pleuitude of their vast extent of the Imperial Dominions—the Dutch Navy, in the middle of the 17th century rose to its height, from the great commerce which was carried on with their Indian possessions—and even the foundation of our Naval power—which has since become so perfect and irresistible as to give to our Parent Country the proud name of "Mistress of the Ocean," was not laid till the reigns of Elizabeth, and the Charles—till she had acquired a footing in the East, and our Colonies were planted by Raleigh and his followers in the New World.

in the New World.

If the Maternal Government, then, yielding to the outery of the New School of Economists, should relinquish those Colonies, we must then sue, with the humiliation of outcasts, for the protection of the humiliation of outcasts, for the protection of the United States. We have no other resource— for a century at least-most clapse, before we could declare our independence, and be ready to cope with other national powers. True, we have the consolation of knowing, that the Great Republic would open her arms wide to embrace us; for her statesmen are well assured that they only want the Colonies of British America to render her Navy, at present formidable, the greatest on Earth.—
The concluding paragraphs of the Hon. Judge Halliburton's pamphlet illustrates a sentiment which every British Colonist aught to cherish, and which every British Colonist ought to cherish, and which we cheerfully reiterate:—

Let us remember the declaration of the greatest Politician and Warrior that France has possessed for ages; that all he required, to render that Country powerful upon the Ocean, was Ships, Colonies and Commerce; and as the result of his observation, upon the wants of France, is confirmed by the co ed by the experience of the advantages which have resulted to Great Britain from such possessions, let us support and cherish them with the most anxious care.

"Let Speculative Politicians amuse themselves but with their discussions upon minor subjects—but let them not be encouraged to SPORT WITH OUR PALLADIUM," Jerome Alley, Rector of St. Andrews, and the Key. Skefington Thomson, L. L. D. Rector of St. Stephens, others of the Clergy being assembled here to meet His Lordship. Mrs. Loglis and Family came up with his Lordship, and the Carriages of the Lleutenant-Governor and Commandant were in readiness to receive them.

On Sunday His Lordship Confirmed a number of Persons in Christ Church, on which occasion His Lordship delivered in a most impressive manmanner a snitable exhortation; Prayers were read by the Archdeacon, and a Sermon delivered by the Rev. Jerome Alley.

His Lordship in the afternoon preached an able and edifying discourse from the 11th Chap, let Corinth. 25th and 26th Verses, a subject most apprene of communication, and prayers were read by the Rev. Dr. Thomson.

Yesterday Morning the Clergy waited on His Lordship at the residence of the Arthdeacon and presented to His Lordship, an address of which the following is a copy:—

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP.

Ethe Clergy of the established Churchin the We the Clergy of the established Church in the Province of New-Brunswick in general Meeting assembled at Fredericton, to receive your Lordship on your first visit to this Province, respectfully beg leave to present to your Lordship our sincere acknowledgments for this favor, and to express our thankfulness for your safe arrival.

From the rising importance and fast increase of the Church in this Province, and the long period that has elapsed since the benefits of an Episcopal wist have been afforded, its necessities are become most urgent, and the calls for the kind offices of a spiritual Head, will we fear, be more numerous than we can reasonably expect to be, at the present time attended to: But under all circumstances we shall have the high satisfaction of presenting to your Lordship in our respective Flocks, a kind and affectionate people, of whom we may speak (without flattery) as possessing firmness of principle and unalterable attachment to the Doctrines and Discipline of the Established Church.

It will be gratifying to your Lordship, we are fully persuaded, when we venture to assure you of the high estimation in which the Ordinances of our venerable Church are held throughout this presince.

That your Lordship's visit to this Province, may be the means of stimulating its Clergy to an increased exertion in their respective duties, to "make full proof of their Ministry," and of disposing the Hearts of their People to an unremit-

The rapid increase of the Church in this flourishing Province, the affectionate kindness and respect of the people towards her Ministers; their firm principles, and unshaken attachment to her doc-principles, and unshaken attachment to her doctrines and discipline: their high estimation of her primitive rites and ceremonies; and their serious attention to her holy instructions, are subjects for our humble but animated gratitude to the Father of Mercies.

That I may be enabled to assist, however humbly, in preserving and extending such blessings; and to encourage and co-operate in those exertions by which you are desirous to make full proof of your Ministry; that the people committed to your care may be so confirmed in their regard for their everlasting peace, as to prove the crown of your rejoicing; and that every blessing may attend yourselves and your flocks is my fervent prayer to the great Shepherd of the Fold.

" Whatever is true will bear to be related, Whatever is rational will endure to be explained."

Sir,

In reply to the Communication made by Mr. Robertson in the Star of the 27th ult. permit ne, Sir, through the medium of the same Journal, to pusent the Public with the following statement of facts, which, though simple and unadorned, have not for their aim either slavish fears or selfish deagns; objects which though they may afford a mountary gratification to some, yet to the man who professes fortifude, principle, and a decent respect for his own character, such feelings cannot but be always disagreeable and, as a necessary, consequence, always degrading.

ings cannot but be always disagreeable and, as a necessary, consequence, always degrading.

It is not the object of the present communication to say auth injurious to the character of Mr. Robertson, or to derogate, in the remotest degree, from that respectability which, as a man and a Citizen, he may have held, or now holds, in the estimation of a discerning Public; yet, at the same time, authing an be more inequitable than that one man should be accountable for the follies of another, by hving unlimited confidence so far abused, as to expose the sufferer to unmerited blame; or that he, who values his neighbours happiness as equal to his own, should be charged with piness as equal to his own, should be charged with that which he could neither forsee nor prevent. It cannot be denied that truths which one mind perceives almost by intuition, will be rejected by another as fallacious and anworthy of reception.— Whether those of my friends to whom I am more particularly known, and with whom I have inter-changed the kind offices of friendship, will give credence to the following remarks, is not my province to determine. Be this as it may, Truth alone shall direct my pen, and although I may fail to convince, I shall, at least, enjoy the pleasing gratification of knowing that conscious integrity is preferable to riches and that an honest principle can seems the most unfortunate against false ac-

The commencement of my transactions with Mr. Robertson took place in the year 1822, Mr. R. having purchased from the then existing firm of James A. Clare and Whitehead Backer, timber to a considerable amount, he requested of me as a friend to accommodate him with my name—at that period business in this City was prosperous and collateral security was received in no other light, than as an act of courtsey, as those who gave paper were, with few exceptions competent to meet it when due. With Mr. R's, request I cheerfully complied, and joint notes one of £200, and another of the same sum bearing date June 1822, were drawn in favour, and handed to the parties from whom the timber was purchased:—and here, it may not be improper to state, that the timber had been delivered to Mr. R. some time prior to the above arrangement, and that the concern of Clare and Barker to whom the notes were given, was on or about that time, dissolved.

From that period (1822) untif Jone 1825, partial payments were under which reduced the original sum, due A. Clare, to £160. For this balance two Notes were given, one of £80 on demand, the other for the same sum at 3 Mooths, to each of which my name (as in the first instance,) in conjunction with Mr. Robertson's was affixed. Mr. R. is candid enough to acknowledge that the debt heretofore mentioned, was contracted by himself, but it seems that his conscience will not allow him to confess that the writer of this was his security for the debt so contracted. What I mean by saying that I was his security is, that when I accommodated him with my name I had no sinister design—no pecuniary motive to grafify; and that the only object I had in view was to oblige a neighbour, and, as I then thought, a friend. Feeling solicitous to have my name expunged from the Notes held by Clare & Barker, I requested of Mr. Robertson to have them liquidated with-out delay—Mr. R. in reply observed with some warmth, that he considered me indebted to him mote than the amount of Mr. Clare's Note, and which, on a former occasion, I had promised to take up, provided my name was erased from that held by Barker.—That I made such a promise candour constrains me to acknowledge; but that I made it in the manner as stated by Mr. R. I as candidly deny: for when I engaged to redeem the Note held by Clare, it was under the express condition of my being indebted to Mr. R. for the amount thereof. I had repeatedly urged Mr. R. to hand me his account in order that the transactions between us might be brought to a final conclusion; and when the above conversation took place (and and when the above conversation took place (and Mr. Clare, if I mistake not, was present at the time,) I then told Mr. R. that I was ready and willing to fulfill my former promise on the condition heretofore expressed, that I considered myself amenable for the face of the Note provided I stood indebted to him (Mr. R.) for that amount. When I made this observation I was well aware that if the accounts between Mr. R. and myself were arranged, so far from owing him there was every probability of his being indebted to me, and my reasons for so thicking, I shall now endeavour to explain in the simple language of truth and sin-
