Since the man's conduct has been even more lunatic. After fasting for one or two days he will suddenly jump up and devour, with almost brute-like voracity, the food that has accumulated in his cell. Schheiner's habit is to lie stretched on his cell floor or to stand up against the wall in what appears to be a cataleptic trance. For days at a time he will stare into space, speech-less and motionless as a statue. It is even necessary to dress and undress him as though he were a doll.

The question that has been exercising the minds of the prison authorities is "Is Schreiner a madman or a superb malingerer?" The usual tests have been applied by the officials but the man refuses to take the slightest to take him off his guard have failed to induce him to move a single eyelid, and the problem remains unsolved.

What is a Backache? IT IS NATURE'S WARNING TO WOMEN

Diseases of Woman's Organism Cured and Consequent Pain Stopped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"It seems as though my back would break." Women utter these words over and over again, but continue to drag along and suffer with aches in the small of the back, pain low down in the side, "bearing down" pains, nervousness and no ambition for any task.

They do not realize that the back is the mainspring of woman's organism, and quickly indicates by aching a diseased condition of the womb or kidneys, and that the aches and pains will continue until the cause is removed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for twenty years has been the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily cures all womb and kidney disorders and restores the female organs to a healthy condition. Here is one cure among thousands:

Here is one cure among thousands:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I suffered a long time with ovarian trouble, having intense pains in the back and abdomen and very sick headaches every month. I was tired and nervous all the time and life looked very dreary to me and I had no desire to live until I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to get some relief. My recovery was slow but it was sure, and I have never regretted the money spent for the Compound as it brought me back to good health.

"It seems to be a medicine especially adapted to the ills of our sex and I am glad to say a good word for it.—Mrs. Albert Mann, 154 Gore Vale Ave., Toronto, Ont.

A man should examine himself as to his motives lest he enter the holy office unbidden, and be one of whom God would say "I have not sent him." God opposes a man-made minister. No man should take this honor upon himself except one whom God has called.

What should the minister do? He should preach Christ and Him crucified. These words constitute the

He told me of his plans and spoke of his situation. "You know the reason for my going," he said, "even if I have never spoken of it. I am not much of I Joseph and am very little given to running away from a beautiful woman, but in this case I am fleeing from death itself. And to think what a heaven it would be! You are right, Caskoden-no man can withstand the light of that girl's smile. I am unable to tell how I feel toward her. It sometimes seems that I cannot live another hour without seeing her. Yet, thank God, I have reason enough left to know that every sight of her only adds to an already incurable malady. What will it be when she is the wife of the king of France? Does it not look as if wild life in New Spain is my only chance?" I assented as we joined hands, and our eyes were moist as I told him how should miss him more than any one else in all the earth-excepting Jane, in mental reservation.

I told Jane what Brandon was about to do, knowing full well she would tell Mary, which she did at once

Poor Mary! The sighs began to come now, and such small vestiges of her ill humor toward Brandon as still remained were frightened off in a hurry by the fear that she had seen the last

She had not before fully known that she loved him. She knew he was the most delightful companion she had ever met and that there was an exhilaration about his presence which almost intoxicated her and made life an ecstasy, yet she did not know it was love. It needed but the thought that she was about to lose him to make her know her malady and meet it face to

Upon the evening when Mary learned all this she went into her chamber very early and closed the door. No one interrupted her until Jane went in to robe her for the night and to retire. She then found that Mary had rebed berself and was lying in bed with her head covered, apparently asleep. Jane quietly prepared to retire and lay down in her own bed. The girls usually shared one couch, but during Mary's ill temper she had forced Jane to sleep

After a short silence Jane heard a sob from the other bed, then another and another. "Mary, are you weeping?" she asked.

"What is the matter, dear?" "Nothing," with a sigh.

"Do you wish me to come to your "Yes, I do." So Jane went over and "I do not know," responded Jane, "but he will see you before he goes."

"Do you believe he will?" "I know it." And with this consolation Mary softly wept herself to sleep. After this, for a few days, Mary was quiet enough. Her irritable mood had vanished, but Jane could see that she was on the lookout for some one all the time, although she made the most pathetic little efforts to conceal her watchfulness.

At last a meeting came about in this way: Next to the king's bedchamber was a luxuriously furnished little apartment with a well selected library. Here Brandon and I often went afternoons to read, as we were sure to be undisturbed.

Late one day Brandon had gone over to this quiet retreat and, having selected a volume, took his place in a secluded little alcove half hidden in arras draperies. There was a cushioned seat along the wall and a small diamond shaped window to furnish light. He had not been there long when in came Mary. I cannot say whether she knew Brandon was there or not, but she was there and he was there, which is the only thing to the point, and, finding him, she stepped into the alcove before he was aware of her presence.

Brandon was on his feet in an instant and with a low bow was backing himself out most deferentially to leave her in sole possession, if she wished to rest.

"Master Brandon, you need not go. I will not hurt you. Besides, if this place is not large enough for us both, will go. I would not disturb you." She spoke with a tremulous voice and a quick, uneasy glance, and started to Brandon answered her question: "I do not know about going. I think I shall. I have volunteered with a ship that sails in two or three weeks from Bristol, and I suppose I shall go."

"Oh, no! Do you really mean it?" In gave her a pang to hear that he was actually going, and her love pulsed higher, but she also felt a sense of re lief, somewhat as a conscientiou housebreaker might feel upon finding the door securely locked against him. It would take away a temptation which she could not resist and yet dared not yield to much longer.

"I think there is no doubt that mean it," replied Brandon. "I should like to remain in England until I can save money enough out of the king's allowance to pay the debt against my father's estate, so that I may be able to go away and feel that my brother and sisters are secure in their homemy brother is not strong-but I know it is better for me to go now, and 1 hope to find the money out there. 1 could have paid it with what I lost to Judson before I discov I him cheating." "There, now, you are kind again, as kind as even you can be. Be sure, I thank you, though I say it only once," and he looked into her eyes with a gaze she could not stand even for an instant. This was growing dangerous again: so, catching himself, he turned the conversation back into the bantering vein.

"Ah, you want to pay the debt that may have no excuse to remain? Is that it? Perhaps you are not so kind after all.'

"No. no: vou know better. But let to whom is it owing? Tell me at once, urrection in New Spain.

"No, no, Lady Mary; I cannot." "Please do. I beg, if I cannot command. Now I know you will. You would not make me beg twice for anything?" She drew closer to him as she spoke and put her hand coaxingly upon his arm. With an irresistible impulse he took the hand in his and lifted it to his lips in a lingering caress that could not be mistaken. It was all so quick and so full of fire and meaning that Mary took fright, and the princess for the moment came uppermost.

"Master Brandon!" she exclaimed sharply and drew away ber hand. Brandon dropped the hand and moved over on the seat. He did not speak, but turned his face from her and looked out of the window toward the river. Thus they sat in silence, Brandon's hand resting listlessly upon the cushion between them. Mary saw the eloquent movement away from her and his speaking attitude with averted face; then the princess went into eclipse, and the imperial woman was ascendant once more. She looked at him for a brief space with softening eyes and, lifting her hand, put it back in his, say-

"There it is again—if you want it." Want it? Ah, this was too much! The hand would not satisfy now. It must be all, all! And he caught her to his arms with a violence that fright-

"Please don't; please! Not this time! Ah, have mercy, Charl- Well! There! There! Mary mother, forgive me!" Then her woman spirit fell before the whirlwind of his passion, and she was on his breast, with her white arms around his neck, paying the same tribute to the little blind god that he would have exacted from the lowliest maiden of the land.

Brandon held the girl for a moment or two, then fell upon his knees and buried his face in her lap.

"Heaven help me!" he cried. She pushed the hair back from his forehead with her hand and as she fondled the curls leaned over him and softly whispered: "Heaven help us both, for I love

He sprang to his feet. "Don't! Don't, I pray you," he said wildly, and almost ran from her. Mary followed him nearly to the door of the room, but when he turned he saw that she had stopped and was standing with her hands over her face, as if in tears. He went back to her and said, "I tried to avoid this, and if you had helped me it would never"— But he remembered how he had always despised Adam for throwing the blame upon Eve, no matter how much she may have deserved it, and continued: "No, I do not mean that. It is all my fault. I should have gone away long ago. I could not help it. I tried, Mary's eyes were bent upon the door, and tears were falling over ber

Am I not?" "Ah, different! There is no other woman in all this wide, long world. And they were in each other's arms again. She turned her shoulder to him and rested with the support of his arms about her. Her eyes were cast down in silence, and she was evidently thinking as she toyed with the lace of his doublet. Brandon knew her varying expressions so well that he saw there was something wanting, so he asked:

"Is there something you wish to "Not I," she responded with emphasis on the pronour

"Did you not like to hear me say that -that I-loved you?" "Ah, yes! You know it. But-oh!do you wish to hear me say it?" The head nodded rapidly two or three times, "Yes." And the black curving lashes were lifted for a fleeting, luminous instant. "It is surely not necessary. You have known it so long already, but I am only too glad to say it. I love you." She nestled closer to him and hid her face on his breast. "Now that I have said it, what is my reward?" he asked, and the fair face came up, red and rosy, with "rewards," any one of which was worth a king's

"No," said Mary, with a despairing shake of the head, as the tears began to flow again. "No, never!" And falling upon his knees he caught both her hands in his, sprang to his feet and ran from the room.

Her words showed him the chasm anew. She saw the distance between them even better than he. Evidently it seemed farther looking down than looking up. There was nothing left

But Providence or fate or some one ordered it differently, and there was plenty of trouble ahead.

CHAPTER VIII.

A BOUT a week after Brandon's memorable interest THE TROUBLE IN BILLINGSGATE WARD. Mary an incident occurred which changed everything and came very near terminating his career in the flower of youth. It also brought about a situation of affairs that showed the difference in the quality of these two persons thrown so marvelously together from their far distant stations at each end of the ladder of fortune in a way that reflected very little credit upon the one from the upper end. But before I tell you of that I will relate briefly one or two other matters that had a bearing upon what was done and the motives prompting it. To begin with, Brandon had kept himself entirely away from the princess ever since the afternoon at the king's antechamber. The first day or so she sighed, but thought little of his absence; then she wept and, as usual, began to grow piqued and irritable.

What was left of her judgment told her it was better for them to remain apart, but her longing to see Brandon grew stronger as the prospect of it grew less, and she became angry that it could not be gratified. Jane was right; an unsatisfied desire with Mary was torture. Even her sense of the great distance between them had begun to fade, and when she so wished for him and he did not come their positions seemed to be reversed. At the end of the third day she sent for him to come to her rooms, but he by a mighty effort sent back a brief note saying that he could not and ought not to go. This, of course, threw Mary into great passion, for she judged him by herself, a very common but dangerous method of judgment, and thought that if he felt at all as she did he would throw prudence to the winds and come to her, as she knew she would go to him if she could. It did not occur to her that Brandon knew himself well enough to be sure he would never go to New Spain if he allowed another grain of temptation to fall into the balance against him, but would remain in London to love hopelessly, to try to win a hopeless cause and end it all by placing his head upon the block. It required all his strength even now to hold fast his determination to go to New Spain. He had reached his lim-He had a fund of that most use ful of all wisdom, knowledge of self, and knew his limitations, a little matter concerning which nine men out of ten go all their lives in blissless ignorance.

analysis than her pet linnet, did not appreciate Brandon's potent reasons and was in a flaming passion when she received his answer. Rage and humiliation completely smothered for the time her affection, and she said to herself over and over again: "I hate the lowborn wretch. Oh, to think what I have permitted!" It seemed only too clear that she had been too quick to give, no very comforting thought to a proud girl even though a mistaken one. As the days went by and Brandon did not come her anger cooled as usual, and again her heart began to ache, but her sense of injury grew stronger day by day and she thought she was beyond a doubt the most ill used of wo-The negotiations for Mary's marriage with old Louis XII. of France were beginning to be an open secret about the court. The Duc de Longueville who had been held by Henry for some time as a sort of hostage from the French king, had opened negotiations by inflaming the flickering passions of old Louis with descriptions of Mary's beauty. As there was a prospect of a new emperor soon and as the imperial bee had of late been making a most vehement buzzing in Henry's bonnet, he encouraged De Longueville and thought it would be a good time to purchase the help of France at the cost of his beautiful sister and a handsome dower. Mary of course had not been consulted. and although she had coaxed her brother out of other marriage projects Henry had gone about this as if he were in earnest, and it was thought throughout the court that Mary's coaxings would be all in vain-a fear which she herself had begun to share, notwithstanding her usual self confidence. She hated the thought of the marriage and dreaded it as she would death itself, though she said nothing to any one but Jane and was holding her forces in reserve for a grand attack. She was preparing the way by being very sweet and kind to Henry. Now, all of this, coming upon the heels of her trouble with Brandon made her most wretched indeed. For the first time in her life she began to feel suffering-that great broadener, in fact maker, of human character.

Above all, there was an alarming sense of uncertainty in everything. She could hardly bring herself to believe that Brandon would really go to New Spain and that she would actually lose him, although she did not want him as Flashes of all sorts of wild schemes had begun to shoot through her anger and grief when she stared in the face the prospect of her double separation from him, her marriage to another and the countless miles of fathomless sea that would be between them. She could endure anything better than uncertainty. A menacing future is the keenest of all tortures for any of us to bear, but especially for a girl like Mary. Death itself is not so terrible as the fear of it. Now, about this time there lived over in Billingsgate Ward, the worst part of London, a Jewish soothsayer named Grouche. He was also an astrolo and had of late grown into great fame as prophet of the future—a fortune

His fame rested on several remarkable predictions which had been fulfilled to the letter, and I really think the man had some wonderful powers. They said he was half Jew, half gypsy, and, if there is alchemy in the mixing of blood, that combination should surely produce something peculiar. The city folk were said to have visited him in great numbers, and, notwithstanding the priests and bishops all condemned him as an imp of Satan and a follower of witchcraft, many fine people, including some court ladies, continued to go there by stealth in order to take a dangerous, inquisitive peep into the future.

Mary had long wanted to see this Grouche, at first out of mere curiosity. but Henry, who was very moral-with other people's consciences—would not think of permitting it. Two ladies, Lady Chesterfield and Lady Ormond, both good and virtuous women, had been detected in such a visit and had been disgraced and expelled from court in the most cruel manner by order of the king himself.

Now, added to Mary's old time desire to see Grouche, came a longing to know the outcome of the present momentous complication of affairs that touched her so closely.

She could not wait for Time to unfold himself and drop his budget of events as he traveled, but she must plunge ahead of him and know beforehand the stores of the fates, an intrusion they usually resent. I need not tell you that was Mary's only object in going. nor that her heart was as pure as a babe's, quite as chaste and almost as nnocent. It is equally true that the large proportion of persons who visited Grouche made his soothsaying an excuse. The thought of how wretched life would be with Louis had put into Mary's mind the thought of how sweet t would be with Brandon. Then came the wish that Brandon had been a prince or even a great English noblenued, the hope that he might yet, by reason of his own great virtues, rise all of these and she become his wife. But at the threshold of this fair castle came knocking the thought that perhaps he did not care for her and had deceived her to gain her favors. Then she flushed with anger and swore to herself she hated him and hoped never to see his face again. And the castle faded and was wafted away to the realms of airy nothingness.

themselves, and sensible people at that! So Mary wanted to see Grouche, first, through curiosity, in itself a stronger notive than we give it credit for; second, to learn if she would be able to dissuade Henry from the French marriage and perhaps catch a hint how to do it, and last, but by no means least, to discover the state of Brandon's heart toward her. By this time the last named motive was strong enough to draw her any whither, although she would not acknowledge it, even to herself, and in truth hardly knew it, so full are we of things we know not of.

Ah, how people will sometimes lie to

So she determined to go to see Grouche secretly and was confident she could arrange the visit in such a way that it would never be discovered. One morning I met Jane, who told me with troubled face that she and Mary were going to London to make some purchases, would lodge at Bridewell House and go over to Billingsgate that evening to consult Grouche.

willful head, and Jane could not dissuade her. The court was all at Greenwich, and nobody at Bridewell, so Mary thought they could disguise themselves as orange girls and easily make the trip without any one being the wiser.

Mary had taken the whim into her

It was then, as now, no safe matter for even a man to go unattended through the best parts of London after dark, to say nothing of Billingsgate, that nest of water rats and cutthroats. But Mary did not realize the full danger of the trip and would, as usual, allow nobody to tell her. She had threatened Jane with all sorts of vengeance if she divulged her secret, and Jane was miserable enough between her fears on either hand, for Mary, though the younger, held her in complete subjection. Despite her fear of Mary, Jane asked me to go to London and follow them at a distance, unknown to the princess. I was to be on duty that night at a dance given in honor of the French envoys who had just arrived, bringing with them commission of special ambassador to De Longueville to negotiate the treaty of marriage, and it was impossible for me to go. Mary was going partly to avoid this ball, and her willful persistency made Henry very angry. regretted that I could not go, but I promised Jane I would send Brandon in my place, and he would answer the rpose of protection far better than I suggested that Brandon take with him a man, but Jane, who was in mortal fear of Mary, would not listen to it. So it was agreed that Brandon should meet Jane at a given place and learn the particulars, and this plan was Brandon went up to London and saw hid himself behind a hedge near the private gate through which the girls intended to take their departure from They would leave about dusk and return, so Mary said, before it grew dark.

The citizens of London at that tim paid very little attention to the law requiring them to hang out their lights, and when it was dark it was dark. Scarcely was Brandon safely enconsed behind a clump of arbor vitee when whom should he see coming down the path toward the gate but his grace the Duke of Buckingham. He was met by one of the Bridewell servants who was in attendance upon the prin-"Yes, your grace, this is the gate," said the girl. "You can hide yourself and watch them as they go. They will pass out on this path. As I said, I do not know where they are going. I only

overheard them say they would go out

He replied that he would take care Brandon did not see where Bucking ham hid himself, but soon the two innocent adventurers came down the path attired in the short skirts and bonnets of orange girls and let themselves out at the gate. Buckingham followed them, and Brandon quickly followed him. The girls passed through a little postern in the wall opposite Bridewell House and walked rapidly up Fleet ditch, climbed Ludgate hill, passed Paul's church, turned toward the river down Bennett bill, to the left on Thames street, then on past the bridge, following Lower Thames street to the neighborhood of Fish street hill, where they took an alley leading up toward East Cheap to Grouche's house.

It was a brave thing for the girl to do and showed the determined spirit that dwelt in her soft white breast. Aside from the real dangers, there was enough to deter any woman, I should Jane wept all the way over, but Mary never flinched.

There were great mudholes where one sank ankle deep, for no one paved the street at that time, strangely, enough, preferring to pay the sixpence fine per square yard for leaving it undone. At one place, Brandon told me, a load of hay blocked the streets, compelling them to squeeze between the houses and the hay. He could hardly believe the girls had passed that way, as he had not always been able to keep them in view, but had sometimes to follow them by watching Buckingham. He, however, kept as close as possible and presently saw them turn down

Grouche's alley and enter his house. Upon learning where they had stopped, Buckingham hurriedly took himself off, and Brandon waited for the girls to come out. It seemed a very long time that they were in the wretched place, and darkness had well deupon London when they

Mary soon noticed that a man was following them, and as she did not know who he was became greatly alarmed. The object of her journey, had been accomplished now, so the spur of a strong motive to keep her courage up was lacking.

"Jane, some one is following us." she whispered. "Yes," answered Jane, with an unconcern that surprised Mary, for she knew Jane was a coward from the top of her brown head to the tip of her little pink heels. "Oh, if I had only taken your advice, Jane, and had never come to this wretched place! And to think, too, that I came here only to learn the worst! Shall we ever get home alive, do you think?" They hurried on, the man behind them taking less care to remain unseen than he did when coming. Mary's fears grew upon her as she heard his step and saw his form persistently following them, and she clutched Jane by the arm. "It is all over with us, I know. I would give everything I have or ever expect to have on earth for-for Master Brandon at this moment." She thought of him as the one person best able to defend her. This was only too welcome an opportunity, and Jane said: "That is Master Brandon following us. If we wait a few seconds, he will be here."

And she called to him before Mary could interpose Now this disclosure operated in two ways. Brandon's presence was, it is true, just what Mary had so ardently wished, but the danger and therefore the need was gone when she found that the man who was following them had no evil intent. Two thoughts quickly flashed through the girl's mind. She was angry with Brandon for having cheated her out of so many favors and having slighted her love, as she had succeeded in convincing herself was the case, all of which Grouche had confirmed by telling her he was false. Then she had been discovered in doing what she knew she should have left undone and what she was anxious to conceal from every one, and, worst of all, had been discovered by the very person from whom she was most anxious to mide it. So she turned upon Jane angrily: "Jane Bolingbroke, you shall leave me as soon as we get back to Greenwich for this betrayal of my confidence.'

POLICE SEARCHING FOR WOMAN'S BODY

Dragging Harlem River for Remains of Nrs. Duerr-Husband and Friend Suspected of Murder.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.-Police today dragged the Harlem River for the body of Mrs. Katchen Duerr, who was drowned last night under circumstances so suspicious as to cause the arrest of her husband and his friend, Charles Hahn. Raymond Messmer and his wife, par-ents of the drowned woman, declared ed that she had been a victim of foul play. The police hope the body of the ing woman will give them so as to whether the suspicions of her parents are warranted.

Mrs. Durr was only 18 years of age and had been married less than a year to Otto Duerr, a clerk in a jewellry store. Hahn was a boarder with the Duerrs and a fellow clerk with her husband. With the consent of the husband Hahn and Mrs. Duerr spent yesterday at Fort George, an outing place near the Harlem River, and at sunset went rowing on the river. Hahn said later that a swell from a passing tug fright-ened Mrs. Duerr and that she rose from her seat and fell overboard. In trying to save her, he said, he lost an oar, and with the other was unable to res her before she was drowned. Hahn was turned over to the police by persons in a launch who found him adrift in the river. Duerr told the police he thought his wife's death was an accident and that Hahn was not to blame, but Mr. and Mrs. Messmer stated that Duerr had quarrelled with his wife, and said that her husband threatened to kill her. Duerr was then arrested pending investigation.

Mrs. Briggs Thought to be Mother of Child Found in Fredericton.

FREDERICTON, Oct. 11.-Mrs. Susan Briggs, whose husband died three years ago, and who has been living on York street, was arrested here this afternoon on suspicion of being the mother of the infant girl whose body was found in the city dump yesterday. She has been working at a hotel here.

Coroner McKeown held an inquest this evening, and some damaging evidence was brought out. Dr. Bridges and Dr. Irvine were examined, but testified that the child might have died from suffocation or other causes.

Wm. Darlington and Harry Bolter, the boys who found the body, were examined. Mrs. Samuel Dykeman, who lived in the same house with Mrs. Briggs, swore that she was aware that a child was about to be born to Mrs. Briggs. On the evening of September 30 she had found Mrs. Briggs ill. When she saw Mrs. Briggs two or three days Briggs had intimated to her that she was going to send her boys to the dump with some old rags, and asked her if she would give her something to wrap them in. Mrs. Dykeman said she never saw the boys leave the house with any bundle. Miss Nellie Briggs, daughter of the

The High School orchestra was prelent selections.

The afternoon session opened with a song and drill by a number of young people, which was a very interesting and pleasing feature of the programme, A paper was then read on Primary Reading by Miss Lily A. Belyea. Sh illustrated the principles set forth in her paper with a class of 18 small children. In opening Miss Belyea stated there were various methods of teaching the first steps in reading, all of which, however, were old. Of these she strongly preferred the word method. Following out the principles of this method she first made the pupils familiar with a number of new words without attempting sentences. She taught the words by objects or pictures. Next she wrote sentences of the board, including the words learned along with new ones. This, she claimed, was the natural method. The teacher should have two aims; first, to make the child get the thought; second, to express it. The second stage of primary reading that the chief superintendent, Dr. Inch who had expected to be present, was detained at home on account of illness. Also Mrs. Dr. Crocket, who was to sing, had been prevented by sickness from attending.

After a selection from the orchestra,

His Worship Mayor White was called on. He extended a cordial welcome to the teachers from Charlotte county, and expressed the hope that their united meeting would tend to their mutual benefit. Referring to the old Grammar School of St. John, the picture of which had been drawn on the blackboard, His Worship recalled some amusing incidents connected with this institution. He then went on to speak of the responsibilities assumed by a teacher of the public school. The teacher's profession was a worthy and he always looked upon this class of people with a great degree of reect. In his mind the Teachers' In stitute was a very useful organization. Its object, as he looked at it, was to afford the teacher a privilege of con-tinuing his professional education after leaving the Normal School. Before taking his seat His Worship again wel comed the teachers to St. John, and expressed the hope that the Institute would be a grand success.

The next speaker was Dr. Stetson superintendent of the Maine schools. Dr. Stetson, in opening, said: connection with the training of the child, viz., the home, the church, the community, and the school. If the Though the boat did not suffer any was presided over by J. The man succeeded in his attempt, and one day Captain Bernier was astonished to receive a letter. It was from Dr. Mundsen, who told of his whereabouts and the success which had attended his efforts so far, and ishes of Hampton and Upham. Hatfield.

HAMPTON, Kings Co., Oct. 9 .- At the resumption today of the October session of the Kings county court, adjourned from last Tuesday, His Honor Judge Wedderburn delivered an eloquent panygeric upon the life, character, and official standing of the late Sheriff D. Beverley Hatfield, the kindness of his nature and the faithful and efficient manner in which through the years he had discharged the duties of his office. He also congratulated the present Sheriff Fred W. Freeze, upon his promotion, and wished him all success in the administration of his duties.

The Hon, A. S. White followed as senior member of the bar, and for his professional brethren endorsed the sentiments so admirably expressed by his honor, in regard to the late sheriff. He said that in the death of Sheriff Hatfield, the county had not only lost a faithful officer, but the bar a kind friend. He also congratulated Sheriff Freeze upon his well deserved appointment and expressed the hope that he would prove to be as efficient as his two immediate predecessors.

The regular business of the court was then taken up, and as there was no criminal case to come before it, the petit jury was called, and answered to their names.

The Scott Act appeal cases laid over from previous sittings were brought forward. That of George Myers was represented by Messrs. Fowler, Jonah and Parlee. Life Would Have More Happiness

IF THE LIVER WERE KEPT AC-TIVE BY THE USE OF

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Most people realize that if they could nly avoid the sufferings of indigestion and keep the bowels regular and active, lile would have for them much ore of comfort and happiness. We believe that these results are best accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and let us and Henry Dickie of Gagetown have tell you why:

It is the liver which, by filtering bile from the blood and passing it into the intestines, insures good digestion and the natural, healthful action of the bowels. Keep the liver active, and you are sure of the proper working of the digestive and excretory systems. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have a direct and specific action on the tions. The upland hay was much bettering organ they guarantee the colter than last year, but the intervale lection of bile from the blood, where and island hay is far below last year it is poison, and the passing of it to the intestines, where it is necessary for digestion and a proper action of the bowels.

It is not as a mere relief from in digestion and constipation that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recommended, but as a thorough and lasting cure. Put them to the test. The dose is one pill at bed time as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular. Mr. Clement Chiasson, Lameque, N. THEY ARE AFTER CANADIAN WHEAT

Representatives of a Great Army of Consumers

Heretofore They Have Done Big Business With Duluth, But Northward Now Standard is Higher.

When one hears of millions of acres of land being taken up in the west every year, and of a hundred million bushels wheat crop, the first question that suggests itself is: Are the whea growers sure of a market?

Three gentlemen stopping at the King Edward just now on their way wes could give the questioner a lot of inormation as to that. They are T. C. McNab of Leith, Scotland, director of the Scottish Wholesale Co-operative Society; W. F. Stewart, also of Leith, manager of the society's flour mills and John Gledhill of New York, the American representative of the great Co-operative Wholesale Society of England. Some idea of the enormous extent of the interests represented these men is to be gained from the fact that the turnover of the English Wholesale last year was $96,000,000, and of the Scottish $33,000,000. They each have many huge factories for the making of clothes, boots, furniture, wool lens, cottons, and a dozen other staples

The present mission has to do with wheat. The societies own quite a number of flour mills, the Scottish mills being three in number, one each in Glasgow, Edinburgh and Leith. These three mills grind 72,000 bushels a week which in the form of flour is used by the retail co-operative societies affiliat ed with and holding stock in the Wholesale. Heretofore, Mr. Stewart says, a large part of the supplies have com from Odessa and from Duluth. The wheat from the northwestern States is no longer as useful for his purposes as it was. It shows distinct evidences of the exhaustion of the soil, and is be coming softer all the time. Not only so, but not infrequently now the price in the United States is such that wheat cannot profitably be exported. Mr. Gledhill, who has many years' experience m buying, adds to this that the big American milling companies and the railways have things so arranged that rates on wheat are prohibitive at times when flour from the western mills is

In the face of these conditions the co-operatives have sent out their experts to report on Manitoba wheat, and probably-although on this the delegates are discreetly silent-to establish Manitoba grain direct from the grower to the Scottish and English consumer

"Yon can understand," said Mr. Mc-Nab, "that in looking over the whole situation here our object is to get as near the producer as possible. "There is one thing," remarked Mr. Stewart, "that as a miller I would like to say to the Manitoba wheat-grower Every effort should be made to keep up the supply of first-class seed. There was a marked faling off in the quality of Manitoba wheat last year. That was not due entirely to the wet and snowy weather following the harvest, though it was a factor. The chief was deterioration of seed grain, which left the berry both soft and Of course, Duluth grain was even softer and moister, but in both cases after being kept a month mites began to show. Now you must give us as high a standard as, say, Odessa Nikolieff if you are to do the great usiness opening up. I have seen Nikolieff wheat than ran sixty-five pounds to the bushel and yielded seventy-five per cent. of flour contents. My own impression is that you should import some of that seed for your Manitoba and Saskatchewan fields and so prevent deterioration."

The great army of co-operators in are mightily interested Canada, and the idea is shaping itself the membership as follows: Paying in various quarters of using the co-operative machinery to enable people in the congested regions to make a fresh been held and 73 parlor meetings. of Isaiah, "The spirit of the Lord God as an apple blossom precedes the little unto the meek."-Isaiah lxi:1.

Lord Jesus and His anointing of the gotten again by the Holy Spirit, by the Holy Spirit and His preaching, and, as word of Truth. we have heretofore seen, the Scriptures with one voice declare that as Jesus is the head of the church, which is His body, so all the members of that body participate with Him in the anointing of the Holy Spirit and also in the ministry of the Truth. This might be abundantly established by scriptural testimony, but we assume that the majority of our hearts are thoroughly acquainted with the apostle's explicit statements to the effect that we are members in particular of the body of Christ, and are filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in the present time, and are to be associated with our Lord in glory, according to His promise that to Him that overcometh He will grant to pathize with one another in the conflicts the Dark Ages, has misrepresented sit with Him on His throne, in harmony also with the declaration that if we suffer for Him we shall also be glorified together.

It is, therefore, proper that we apply words of this text not only to our Lord Jesus himself, but also to all whom His word recognizes as members of His body, members of His church—namely, to those believers in the redemptive work of Christ, who have accepted the same personally, who have turned from sin to walk in the ways of righteousness, and who have consecrated ther lives wholly and inreservedly to the service of the

THE ANOINTING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT.

A week ago we considered the Pentediscerned that it constituted an anointing of the Lord-a setting apart to power from on high, spiritual power, a new mind, a clearer perception of spiritual things and ability to understand and appreciate and co-operate with the divine purposes. Our text tells us that this anointing with the Holy Spirit constitutes an ordination preach, and a moment's reflection convinces us that none could be properly qualified to represent the Lord and His Truth, unless he was thus inysteries of God and of his plan unless first of all his own eyes of understanding had ben opened and his own heart had been enlightened, permitting such an appreciation and making possible a truthful setting forth of the same to

True in the early church the anointing of the Holy Spirit was accompanied by certain outward demonstrations which are not now granted to the anointed ones. These outward demonstrations or evidences of the anointing were called "gifts," and consisted of power to heal diseases by the word or the touch, the gift of prophesying or public speaking, power to speak in unknown tongues in languages that had never been learned-power to interpret such tongues or languages, power discern spirits, to read thoughts, as when Peter read the hearts of Ananias and Sapphira, when they attempted to readily see were valuable to the early church for the establishment of their own faith, for the demonstration to others that they were really the people of the Lord, and for their own upbuilding in grace and knowledge at a time when the New Testament was not prepared and its aid in the study of the divine plan was not available. But, as the apostle intimated, these "gifts" having served their purpose rould pass away, and would be sucbeeded by certain "fruits" of the Spirit. To the natural man the "gifts" might to be the more valuable, but to the advanced Christian the fruits of the Spirit will be seen to be more desirable and the better attestation of divine Speaking of these fruits of the Spirit, meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly kindness, faith, hope, love, the apostle assures us that love is the principal one, and really includes all the other fruits of the Spirit. All other friuts and graces of the spirit are merely elementary developments, parts of that quality which in its completeness is called love, and which by our Lord is explained to mean, love to God with all our hearts. mind, being, strength, and love for our neighbor as for ourselves.

DISCERNING ANOINTED ONES.

Our Lord assures us that as a good tree will be known by its good fruit and an evil tree by its evil fruit, so His followers will be known by their ession of the Holy Spirit and the fruits and graces which they will manifest in their daily lives. This does not signify that those who are begotten of the Holy Spirit or, as expressed in this text, anointed of the Holy Spirit, will be perfect in the flesh. Quite to the contrary-it is not the flesh which is begotten again, it is the new creature, the new mind, the new will. The anointing received as new creatures maniests itself by its opposition to sin, its harmony with righteousness, its sympathy with everything that goes to make up the divine standard of character and co-operation with the divine

"THE WORLD KNOWETH US NOT."

The world understands nothing about this begetting of the holy spirit, this spirit of a new mind or will in accord with righteousness. It understands nothing about this anointing of the holy spirit, under the influence of which old things pass away and new hopes and aims and objects in life take their places. But each one who has passed them; each one begotten again is aware clare the good tidings of His great salof the change in his mind, his willto righteousness and to the Lord's service, and realizes that an anointing has come to him. And fiee away, and the glorious light of the this anointing of the spirit, whereever it is recognized, constitutes the bond of fellowship and brotherhood in Christ. It is not only the spirit of consecration costal blessing upon the church, and but also the spirit of the truth, which signifies an enlightenment or illumina-tion through the divine revelation of the divine service, an enduement with scriptures. It signifies, therefore, a growing knowledge not only respecting God's plan of salvation and our relationship to it, but also a personal intimacy with the Lord.

The apostle tells us that this is true of all of us: that the world which will not read books and tracts and which cares not to attend preaching will read our living epistles, our daily lives, and in harmony with the anostle, we exhort that all shall thus preach day by day the glorious message of our great salvation, which is of livered to the meek, who may have ears God in Christ Jesus.

WHAT WE ARE TO PREACH.

It should be noticed that we are to preach the good tidings, not bad tidings of great misery.
