AUSTRIAN CODE OF HONOR, A Civilian Suffers Severely for What Is Excusable in a Soldier.

The absurdity and wickedness of dueling has rarely been more dram-atically illustrated than in the duel fought by two citizens of Vienna few days ago, says The London Tel-egraph. A handsome woman of thirty-five, Mme. Loewenfeld, the egraph. A handsome woman of thirty-five, Mme. Loewenfeld, the wife of the junior partner in a large manufacturing firm, mother of a boy of thirteen, had for two years carried on an intimacy with a Lieutenant of Hussars, Benno von Soyka, meeting him clandestinely at his rooms, and seeing him openly in her husband's home. About a week ago the husband was informed of his wife's doings, surprised her in the Lieutenant's rooms, and insulted the officer. The wife declared she would not return to her home, but would go to her parents and wait for a separation, when she would marry her lover. The officer wrote to the outraged husband, whom he felt he could not challenge, a letter saying that his regiment had been transferred to a garrison in Hungary, but that he would wait for his orders until the 8th of the month. The husband understood the hint, and sent Lady Babble and the Stranger. Miss Grace Lane tells a good story against herself at the time when she was playing in "The Little Minister." One night at the suburban theatre, when Lady Babbie came off the stage in the third act, she found the business manager waiting in the wings, in company with a small, fragile looking stranger, to whom he promptly introduced Miss Lane, and hurried away. Lady Babbie, not having caught the name, thought to herself that it was probably a local press man, and opened the conversa-tion by observing that "The Little Minister" was quite a pretty play, didn't he think so? "Yes," was the brief reply. "Are you in front?" continued Lady Babbie. "Yes," said the stranger again. "Have you ever seen it before? Perhaps in London?" "Yes," for the third time, then, with a little twinkle in the keen, bright eyes, the stranger added softly, "I wrote it." It was James Barrie, Col-lapse of Lady Babbie.—From M. A.

Dairy Utensils in Winter.

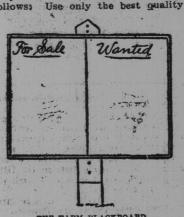

It is often difficult to keep dairy utensils in the best possible condition in winter, because of lack of sunshine. On most farms vessels are sunshine. On most farms vessels are washed and scalded and then put in the sunshine until wanted. Many winter days have no sunshine. Utensils should therefore be boiled thoroughly or subjected to live steam if winter days have no sunshine. Utensils should therefore be boiled thoroughly or subjected to live steam if this is obtainable. At any rate give them a good scalding in boiling water, and place them where they are exposed to outside air. Sunshine is the best possible disinfectant. Is it a matter of small moment to the community that death stalks among us in a hideous form that business is partially paralyzed and that no one knows how closely it may strike him tomorrow? Is it creditable to the city now to condone and apologize for the neglect and supineness of those appointed for the sole and only purpose of protecting our city from such a situation? Is it not rather a matter of the rules are supposed and that no rather a matter of the rules and regulations that they are making votes by it. Sometimes people ask when the Conservative party will return to power. We think we can tell them one thing on this point, and it is that it will not be until the leading organs recognize that the people have just a little common sense and begin to appeal to them upon live issues affecting the country's welfare.—Victoria Colonist (Conservative).

stream. Captain Parker has had a most interesting voyage. The steamer sailed from East London on Monday, Oct. 14th, and although the weather was fine, there was a high racing sea, following which, at times when the ship would take a dive into the trough of the sea, the propellor would be clear of the water and would fly round at tremendous speed. Everything went well until Tuesday, Oct. 22nd, when two blades of the propellor were broken off. This accident greatly decreased the speed of the ship but the The fire was quickly extinguished with-out damaging the house, which is owned by Chas. Reynolds, to any extent. While there he saw some of the wounded while there he saw some of the wounded brought in. In East London harbor the business in shipping is very brisk; there were when he left about 35 steamships in port and they were placed in the small harbor, about five tier deep. Parker said that he found this island one of the prettiest places he ever visited. The residents are most corteous and cannot do enough to please a stranger. Captain Parker remained in St. Helena four lays, while repairs were being made. Asked how General Cronje and his Boe companions, in whose surrender the Canadians at Paardeberg had part, and who are now held prisoners on St. Helena, were making out, Captain Parker said that they were living like princes instead of prisoners. There is said to be about 5,000 Boer prisoners on the Island. Captain Parker said they are a good looking lot of people. They are allowed to roam about at their leisure and can be seen engaged at different kinds of employment.

The Salvation Army is running full swing in St. Helena, and the meetings are crowded with the Boer prisoners. Captain Parker also says that about every cigar. The captain went into a shop to get shaved and found out barber shop to get snaved and found out that the proprietor formerly resided at Johannesberg and was captured at Paarde-berg. The barber was doing a thriving business. Another prisoner is at the head of the leading club in the town.

The prisoners receive each month, fro condon, at the expense of the British overnment, 40 good, fat oxen. The Boer officers have rented some nice houses on he island, and live at ease. "What's wrong with your wife?" sympathetically inquired the countrymen, as his customer kept feeling the same pair of chickens. "Nothing much." was the guarded reply. "She hasn't got smallpox, has she?" ventured the countryman. For reply the chicken purchaser merely modded his head and remarked, "So the doctor seems to think." The startled countryman sank back a few feet and begged the customer "For heaven's sake, take those chickens you have been handling and get out of here." "No. they are not just what I want." "Take them!" yelled the excited countryman, "and get out of here. Never mind the price. They are useless to me now." During one of our recent cold nights the unlocked back door of a South End house appealed with peculiar significance to a lone a hungry and thinly-clad man. It was after midnight the dwelling's accupants were undoubtedly slumbering and to the unfortunate wanderer on the street the possibility of softly turning the doorknob, of entering and thus becoming sheltered from the nipping gale appeared full of a reasonable prospect for success. He approached the door, onened it, tip toed in and gently closing the door, could now afford to laugh if he dare at the unoaming wind the chill and frost of out side. At the end of an adjacent hallway he could distinguish the glowing issenglass squares in a well-fed self-feder and cautiously approaching through the gloom he bathed in its flood of grateful warmth, listening intently for the slightest sound. His confidence in the brotherhood of man must have been supreme for presently producing a match he struck it and, observing a gas jet within easy reach, he did not scruple to at once accommodate himself with a copious supply of light whichrevealed to him a commodious and comfortable hallway, an inviting armchair wear the fire and several newspapers which not scruple to at once accommodate himself with a copious supply of light which revealed to him a commodious and comfortable hallway, an inviting armchair wear the fire and several newspapers which had effdently been but lately read, for they were carefully folded and lay in the seat of the chair. Now what did this presumably hungry and thinly-clad man do but remove his boots, put on a pair of eye-glasses, pick up the papers and settle himself comfortably for a close perusal of whatever the journals might contain. For some time he read on, the rythmical tick-tock of the onyx, eight day, timepiece on the parlor mantel the only sound that fractured a silence so deep as to be almost felt. Suddenly from out a distant dark room came a weird cry which grew louder and more distinct. The man in the chair roused himself. Surely he recognized the tones of that voice. He listened and heard, what? Not the cry of a woman in distress. No! Simply the voice of his wife as she called sharply, "John its after 2 o'clock and if you don't want to go to bed by daylight you'd better come now. Where have you been until this hour, anyway?"

The president apparently left the currency question to his able secretary, Mr. Gage, who treats this important problem with unusual force and clearness in his annual report. There is no domestic question of greater importance for congress to wrestle with than this one. The country needs a scientific and automatic currency system in keeping with modern progress. The change can best be made under prosperous conditions. When reaction sets in and credit contracts, prejudice and ignorance will be more difficult to overcome than now. Mr. Gage's remarks on the currency should be thoughtfully read by every well-wisher of his country. s. d. 733 6 to 35 steamer under prosperous conditions. When reaction sets in and credit contracts, prejutice and ignorance will be more difficult to overcome than now. Mr. Gage's remarks on the currency should be thoughtfully read by every well-wisher of his country.

The president's message is a pronounce ment upon the great affairs of the day which will meet with instant and hearty approval both at home and abroad. Its approval both at may perhaps have existed among a few. The president's attitude towards the was business interests of the country is an earnest of sound judgment and thorough understanding. The interests of labor and capital have alike and equally been considered. The policy of publicity in regard to the affairs of so-called trusts is a very salutary recommendation which must carry with it the opinion of all fair-minded men. Tarriff modification is very wisely confined principally to the lines of reciprocity, in fact the entire work and the contract of the contract o in regard to the affairs of so-called trusts is a very salutary recommendation which must carry with it the opinion of all fair-minded men. Tariff modification is very wisely confined principally to the lines of reciprocity, in fact, the entire message may be said to be a guarantee of stability and harmony in governmental and foreign affairs, and hence a promise of continued prosperity. The executive and legislative branches of the government, it is quite clear from the message, are to act in harmony, not discord, which is a most gratifying assurance to the business interests of the country.

c Lanadian frade,

Of Canadian trade the Review will say:
Christmas trade is not as brisk as usual at St. John, but freight movement to British ish ports is heavier than heretofore. Whole-salers complain of duliness, though improvement is anticipated with more seasonable weather. Lumber mills have about closed down for the season. Lower temperatures created a good demand for heavy clothing and holiday trade is brisk at Halifax. Metal prices are firm and the outlook encouraging. Wholesale trade is active at Toronto, especially in heavy dry goods and furs. Trade in neavy wear and fancy goods improves at Hamilton.

gain admittance.

Mr. Cockran said in part:

"There are but two ways in which the war can be terminated—either the Boers must surrender, or the English government must abandon the attempt to subdirect them. It is quite generally assumed the surrent be successful and if this be true, they would not be justified in continuing a struggle which involved fruitless loss of life and not be justified in continuing a struggle which involved fruitless loss of life and waste of property, even though the losses inflicted on their enemy were tenfold greater than what they suffered themselves, for bloodshed which is useless is always indefensable. But is it true that the resistance of the Boers is hopeless? Since the fall of Pretoria it certainly has not been fruitless. As their resistance has not been fruitless, neither is their struggle for independence hopeless. On the contrary, if their resistance be prolonged for a few months, the abandonment of the struggle to subdue them by Great Britain is inevitable. The capacity of the Boers to maintain the struggle is placed beyond a doubt by the barbarity of the methods employed to subdue them. The English government cannot avoid supporting the women and children made homeless by the destruction of the farms.

"This meeting has no disposition to provoke bitterness, or to increase the crop of resentments already too large throughout the world. Much as we might desire the incorporation of Canada in the union, unless it could be accomplished by the consent of the people on both sides of the frontier, we do not wish it, but it may be well to point out that there was much less justifiable ground for the assault upon the South African republics by Great Britain than there would have been for the forcible annexation of Canada by this country.

"If the South African republics were Much regret was felt Monday morning, because of the sudden death of W. Herbert Campbell at his residence Castle street. Deceased, who had been ill but a few days, was a son of the late William Campbell and brother to G. Wilford and Charles R. Campbell, of the firm of Campbell Bros. For six years he had been in he employ of Scovil Bros. & Co., of Oak Iall. He was 31 years old, unmarried, and ves, besides his brothers, two sisters his mother. The funeral will take at 3 o'clock this afternoon from his home.

Mrs. Alex McTavish, St. Stephen.

St. Stephen, Dec. 9.—(Special)—Mrs. Addie, wife of Alex. McTavish, of the suddendard providence has so ordered events that the president of the United States can compose this bitter quarrel. One word spoken to the English nation would restore peace, establish justice, sectire liberty to these burghers, promote enormously the prosperity of the human race and bring immeasurable glory to the American nation. Will that word be spoken? Will Theodore Roosevelt improve this opportunity for himself, his country.

"If the South African republics were subdued and the last Boer disarmed, the men and women now confined in captivity must be returned to the soil. To maintain authority over these people—resentful, dissatisfied, accustomed to bearing arms—would require the maintenance of a huge army and such an army could not be maintained without establishing compulsory military service in Great Britain than then there would have subdued and the last Boer disarmed, the men and women now confined in captivity must be returned to the soil. In spite of the fact that the word dyspepsia means literally bad cook it will not be fair for many to lay the blame on the cook if they begin the Christmas Dinner with little appetite and cud it with distress or names. It may not be fair for any to do that—let us hope so for the sake of the cook! The disease dyspepsia indicates a bad stomach, that is a weak stomach, rather than a bad cook, and for a weak stomach, which is to day there is nothing else equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla, a It gives the stomach vigor and tone, cures styspepsia, creates appetite, and makes eating the pleasure it should be.

London, Dec. 7.—The special correspondent of the Standard at Pretoria, writing on November 2, says: The Boer, Schimpers, who deliberately shot and murdered Captain Miers, of the South African Constabulary, at Riversdraai, near Heidelberg, the other day, has been taken under guard to General Botha to be dealt with. It appears that Schimpers fired at Captain Miers without the other two Boers, who accompanied him, being in the least aware of his intention. The trio came up to within a short distance of the blockhouse, under a white flag, and Captain Miers rode forward to them at their request, to ascertain their errand. It was at that moment that Schimpers fired at and killed the unfortunate officer. The deed was no sooner done than the two other Boers expressed their detestation of the act, and reported the matter at once to Frield Cornet Oog Meyers, who sent Schimpers under arrest to Commandant Buys. The latter held a preliminary examination, and, being satisfied that a murder had been committed, despatched the scoundrel to General Louis Botha. It is hoped and believed that Schimpers will be shot. The incident goes to prove that, although many of the charges of treachery which have been brought against Boers have substantial foundation in fact, it must not be assumed that the desire to kill our men under all or any direumstances is general amongst the enemy.

The Partridge Island Patients. At present there are in the quarantine hospital on Partridge Island under the care of Dr. March, six families who were taken off the steamer Lake Superior on account of members of the families having measles. The people number 29 all told, and arrived here about a week ago. The patients with measles are all doing well with the exception of one child, aged two and a half years, whom Dr. March does not expect will live. One of the families—a mother and two children—will be ready to leave the Island today. They are en route to Hartford, Conn., where the husband and father awaits them.

Two other families—13 persons in number—will probably be ready to leave to morrow.
