St. John, 18t5 October, 1873.

LONDON, Oct. 2, 1873. Lively English politicians devote the autumn to the laudable purpose of "enightening" their constituents on the results of the concluded session, and giving them such glimpses of the future as their various abilities of divination enable them to do; and recently quite a batch of speeches, from both sides, here and there in the country boroughs, has given us what light is possible on what is generally confessed to be an anomalous and suspensive situation. We have had Ministerial hints from Mr. Hugessen, uling five lines, at 25 cts. each insertion, and five cents for each additional line.

Marriage Notices, 50 cts.; Deaths 25 cts.; Funeral Notices 25 cts., for each insertion.

John Bright will shortly speak at Birmingham, where he will have to appear as a candidate for re-election on accepting a Cabinet office; nor is it likely that the autumn will pass without oracular utterances from Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Disraeli. that the eminent critic has been almost constantly in a state of warfare with actors, managers, newspapers and dramas. He has compared Mr. Vining to a "jackdaw in peacock's feather's," and labelled him a fifth rate actor, whom the public would utterly ignore. He has pitched into Mr. Wilkie Coilins for bad taste in writing letters to the papers praising his own play, "The Woman in White." This attack Mr. Scott himself confesses to have been "offensive in many details;" and he goes on to admit that many of his own criticisms have been "libellous and personally offensive." It was he who so angered Mr. Charles Reade into a libel suit by calling Reade's dramatic version of Trollope's "Ralph the Heir," indecent, to which the irascible author of "Griffith Gaunt" retorted by plainly calling Mr. Clement Scott "a fool, a liar, a slanderer." How the matter will end we shall see next week Meanwhile it affords a spley topic of club, drawing-room and green-room gossip.

THEFT IN HIGH LIFE. A case much more melancholy than Mr. Clement Scott's libel snit has just been heard by Mr. Knox, at the Marlborough street Police Court. A Mrs. Cherlotte Fitzgerald, a lady of excellent family and good station, as well by birth as by marriage, was brought up last week to answer to the charge of having stolen from the fashionable Conduit st. fewellers, Messrs. Collingwood & Son, a gold pencil case of the value of four guineas. Mrs. Fitzgerald is a youngish, very good-looking, quiet and lady-like person, the wife of a major in the East Indian army. The theft of the pencil case is said to have occurred nearly two years ago, and soon after Mrs. Fitzgerald joined her husband in Hindoostan. The joined her husband in Hindoostan. The commander of the regiment of which he was the major was a Col. Gostling, and the families of the two officers were naturally intimate. While together in India Mrs. Fitzgerald showed Mrs. Gostling a beautiful gold pencil-case, telling her she had purchased it in London for six guineas, but that she would sell it for five. As Mrs. Gostling fancied it she purchased it of her friend for that price.

The only question for serious discussion is the sectarian question, and the people of King's will make fools of themselves by voting for or against any man on account of his repeal doctrines. He gave me a single barrelled pistol, and with the had a six shooter, also, which he would give me if I wanted it. I took the pistol and bought some cartridges for it and used it to kill a kitten. At 7 o'clock or a little after, on Friday evening, I was standing with two friends in O'Donnell's driveway. I borrowed a cartridge from one of my friends, loaded the pistol, pointed it across the street and fire it. At about 7.15, I and a girl, Fanny Holmes, and a boy named Cogan, started to go to Prof. Harry's seance.

Instead of being bulwarks around the throne they are sources of weakness. The identification of the throne and a particular church weakens the throne, unless the church has a great majority of the people as its adherents. The present tendency of the Anglo-Saxon race—is towards an extension of government al interference in material things and an utter cessation of interference in things spiritual. When the news of the separation of Church and State in Mexico ocame we remarked that England could not afford to be far behind Mexico, and this sentiment has been echoed in the columns of the more enlightened press of America. The N. Y. Herald, commenting on the Mexican news, says:

Meantime the Mexican separation of Church and State, and this decree prohibiting the possession of property in Mexico by religious institutions, can hardly full to make a deep impression upon the popular mind of England, for example, whose State Church to-day, with the work of the search of the sear Instead of being bulwarks around the says:-

Willie Martin was but 19 years of age. He was universally beloved for his amiable qualities. His father is James Martin, Esq., a respectable citizen, formerly a hotel proprietor in Houlton, and subsequently owner of the Presque Isle stage line. The family, esoecially the mother, are plunged into the deepest agony by this sad affair. Mr. Martin is nearly crazed with grief.

There are occasions on which it may be desirable to know whether a gun is loaded or not, but we should say that pushing the hammer back with the foot and blowing in at the muzzle was a particularly awkward way of finding out. A man near Paducah, Ky., lately adopted that method, and it is doubtful if he knows yet whether that gun was loaded, and if he does, his knowledge is of no use to him. The fact is, the top of his head was blown off.

The following are the particular of the Houlton murder, as given by a The place where the deed was done was on the Bangor road, near the village, in front of P.O'Donnell's boarding house. Mary Keily, the young man's girl, lived in this house. There is a little hill on the road here and a grassy bank which slopes lown to the mill pond, about 50 feet distant. The body was found by a little boy who was carrying water for his mother, about half way between the road and the pond, aboul 7 o'clock on Saturday morning. Word was atonce given to the authorities and soon a large crowd collected. The appearance of the body as it lay on the grass gives one the impression that

CAREFULLY LAID OUT n the position in which it was foun on the position in which it was found. The body was flat and straight with the face downward, and the hands neatly folded under the body, while morning frosts had crusted his upper clothing with its white breath. From the road to where the body lay (say about twenty feet) there

TRACES OF DRIPPING BLOOD. TRACES OF DRIPPING BLOOD.

Traces of a bloody hand are seen where it had clutched the right leg evidently in carrying or dragging the body to its position, while on the toe of the left foot there are also traces where it had evidently been dragged through a pool of blood. Suspicion at once centered on a man named Keily, who had been heard to use threats against this young man for keeping company with his daughter. He and the daughter were both arrested and examined on Saturday. No proof of anything like guilt could be shown against her, and she was at once liberated, while he is still held in custody. A post mortem examination shows that by a pistol ball, the ball entering well up near the top on the left side cut through an artery, shattered and glanced off the skull, and came out behind the ear. At the inquest now being held the whole affair is being thoroughly sifted, and doubtless some clew to the perpetrator of the deed, strong and clear, will yet be found. The facts elicited show that the mardered man was last seen about 7 o'clock on the previous evening near the lower corner of the village, evidently waiting to see this girl. Two young men came up from the house in which she lived and passing him as he sat on a dry goods box, HE WAS SHOT IN THE TEMPLE assing him as he sat on a dry goods box, SHE'S WAITING FOR YOU DOWN THERE, on it being found on an anvil in his smithy. He says it is not his, and he never had it ou. A close examination on his person and clothing showed no evidence of mud or stains of blood, and perhaps he is innocent as a new born babe, as he says he is. As is to be expected, our community is in a fever of excitement, and many rumors are afloat having no foundation whatever.
