COMMUNICATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE STANDARD.

Sir,
You called the account of the dinner at Mr. Tristram Moore's "interesting," and certainly if the temper-in-temper ostentation of the entire concern—the twenty-one puffs from a borrowed swivel in honour of King Jemmy—and the studied obtrusion of religious sentiment at the commencement of the feasting and toasting, have any claim to the title, your epithet was appropriate. The speech, however, (as its author doubtless meant it to be) is the chief attraction of the narrative; and I beg leave reverentially to approach it as a humble commentator. Mr. Brown's well known modesty led him to designate himself "rude in speech," but herein he has not done himself justice; the speech is replete, not only with depth of thought, but likewise of originality of phrase. None of your readers has ever heard, for instance, such novel expressions as "fraternal bond"—"even handed justice"—"a local habitation and a name"—"our country's weal"—and "march of intellect," with which the speech is so splendidly graced. In giving (as Mr. Brown has so generously done) such felicitous phrases to the world, we see at a glance, that "the schoolmaster is abroad."

Mr. Brown declares that "a great political victory" has been achieved at the late election in this country. Here I am happy to agree with him. Yes! the galling chain has been broken; the quadruple alliance is dissolved; the song of the cuckoo has ceased in our land; the cry of the "old four" is hushed, and forever; the tie that bound Mr. Brown and his "fraternal schates," was rudely snapped, and we have his own deliberate confession in the speech, that "at the commencement of the contest, he himself had little hope of ultimate success." One link of the chain has been severed into old iron, and the double-dealing that prevented another from keeping it company, is well known, and sufficiently punished. Something, then has been gained—and as Jacob Faithful says, "better luck next time."

How awfully pathetic Mr. Brown grows on the topic of the political decease of his "worn friend," Mr. Clinch. The touching simplicity of his interesting apostrophe far out-ostentates Orestes. "Sighing like furnace," and with the great big tears coursing down his manly, but grief-furrowed cheeks "like the first drops of a thunder shower," Mr. Brown exclaims, in accents of woe, such as must nearly have melted the hard hearts of Mr. Moore's kitchen dog-boys—"I return to my public duties and my private friendships, and he is not there!"

"My friend is vanished; my heart is sore; I shall find him never, never more!"

What it is that has put an end to the "private friendship" of Messrs. Brown and Clinch, is probably a secret for which the vulgar world is not yet ripe. "Abate profani." Fry not ye sordid-poles of the earth, too nearly into the affairs of such illustrious men! But the impossibility of their ever meeting again in the people's hall of legislation—or even of being "incarcerated together"—by an order from the assize has pierced the soul of the departed. A new course has been put in harness to assist in running the next political stage, and Mr. B with some reason, argued—"may not another reader be pondered by the next time that the fair-haired man pass their points in review." "Hinc ille lachrymæ." "He was my friend" (blabbered Mr. Brown, drawing his coat-sleeve across his nose and eyes) "faithful and just to me." Whether he was faithful and just to his constituents and public duties, is a secondary consideration. All that Mr. Clinch is here praised and regretted for, is his sworn and sustained allegiance to King Jemmy. Yes; the two worthies worked to each other's hands in a sly way. The one was the other's double. They hunted generally in couples, not only under the diadem of the St. John whipper-in, but even in pursuit of a crème,—"for" (says Mr. Brown) "at all parties public and private, wherever the one was, you might be sure the other was not far away." As Mr. B. has, from his post of honor at Mr. Moore's table, been amusing himself and his audience with combatting men of straw, and obtaining victory over them; I may be allowed, perhaps to amuse myself with the letters of the alphabet; thus; if B had a print to carry in a Committee, he got C packed into it—and if I wanted to rail at a Railroad, B gave his sly, silent nod of approbation. No wonder then that Mr. Brown expresses his sincere regret at his separation from his intimate friend Mr. Clinch.—So much, indeed, did the Magdalenic catastrophe prey on Mr. Brown's mind, that in the song which he composed for the tragic comic occasion at Moore's—though his invincible diffidence would not let him grant a copy for publication; yet the chorus to every verse was:

From Fraser's Magazine.
THE SEA—THE SEA!
The Sea! the Sea! Oh me! oh me!
The pain—the quick! I quail—I'm sick—
I'm sick as I can be!
I cannot stir, I cannot stand,
I pines, I pine, I pine!
To my cabin I'll go—to my birth, will I lie,
And like a cradled infant lie.
I'm on the sea—I'm on the sea!
I am where I would never be!
With the smoke above and the steam below,
And sickness whoso'er I go,
If a storm should come, no matter, I wait,
To the bottom I'd go as soon as not.

I love, oh! how I love to ride
In a neat post chaise, with a couple of boys,
And a pretty girl at my side;
But, oh! to swing amidst fire and foam,
And be steamed like a meaty potatoe at home;
And to feel that no soul cares for your woe
Than the puddle that clatters as onward they go!
The ocean's waves I never moved o'er,
But I loved my donkey more and more,
And home I'd fly to her bony back,
Like a trusty boy or a sandman's sack:
And a mother she was and a mother,
For I was an ass—so you go to!

THE FUDGE FAMILY.
Soon after the accession of his late Majesty, one of the families of English travellers who are to be met with at every inn, in and out of every town on the continent, had arrived late at night at a somewhat crowded hotel in a remote part of France, where they clamored in vain for admission. They were told there was no accommodation for the party, which consisted of a papa, a mamma, and two daughters. As it was dark, wet and stormy, and there was no shelter nearer than some miles, they insisted with pertinacity on the doors being opened to them. The host expostulated, the travellers vociferated—the storm increased, and so did their impatience. "Mais que voulez vous?" argued the innkeeper; "my last rooms were taken this afternoon by some English travellers like yourselves—you don't expect they will turn out for you?" In the midst of the altercation the soft voice of an English lady appeared without—offered to the wearied travellers a share of the accommodations which her husband and herself had secured. The husband albeit somewhat malgre lui consented to give up a charming table à deux with his bride, joined in welcoming the discomfited party, who were soon seated by a blazing fire—the ladies in the sleeping-room, the gentlemen in the salle à manger—and the profession to which he had been bred; but had been on his eminent friend with a piece he had been commended to paint, received this salutary advice; that he should apply himself to the improvement of his profession, as a much more lucrative field of exertion, instead of struggling with the difficulties that he must be sure to meet, for want of sufficient patriotism, in following the higher walks of art. The individual to whom this counsel was given, having accordingly turned his talents to study the science of his profession, has produced a highly commended work on the laws of harmonious colouring; and, instead of being a third or second rate artist, trembling with nervous apprehension, about the position in which a picture may be hung, at an exhibition, as really affecting his prospects in life, is the master of a large number of men, giving employment to a great number of men, by the sale of "Scotland's greatest man," himself. When he saw his literary pre-eminence and ingenuity by the declining popularity of his poetical works, and especially by the appearance of Lord Byron as a rival, he, with that good sense in which he so much excelled, resolved to abandon the bright field of poetry for the humbler region of prose. The consequence was that he became more popular in that career than he had ever been as a poet; and, having distanced all competition, erected there the most noble monuments of his fame.

I refrain from the attempt to lay down any rule for the choice of a profession, not only because it might be a presumptuous interference with determinations already adopted by the wishes of friends which ought not to be disregarded, but because I deem it of less consequence what the choice may be, than that a choice should be made and pursued in the right spirit. Excellence in one's art or calling, is the first requirement of professional duty. The disposition to excel, may rise from a calculation of profit or a desire of accumulation; a motive which is honest, and if the object be personal independence, is altogether laudable. It may arise from a desire of distinction or a love of glory, which is a sentiment that deserves our favour, for it has unquestionably been productive of the best and noblest actions recorded in history. It is commonly found in union with a generous enthusiasm, which will not rest satisfied with a mediocrity of exertion, which keeps the mind always fresh, active, and vigorous, and exhibits the evidences of improvement to the latest period of life. It is reported of the celebrated Mr. Wirt, who possessed this fine spirit in an eminent degree, that some of his last professional efforts were superior to any of his previous performances, and that this was observable, not even in the substance of his addresses, but only in the finish and decoration of the style. I know not how others may be affected, but to me nothing appears more admirable, than this progressive excellence in advanced age. It is a splendid triumph of mind over matter, and points unerringly to our immortal destination.

Every one should have constantly in view a standard of merit in his profession, and should stimulate his exertions to realize it in his own performance. Let such a standard be as perfect as it may—the beau ideal or professional excellence; for no axiom is more just than that all models should be perfect, though man remains imperfect, that in striving to reach what is impossible, he may attain to what is uncommon. Thus, by furnishing an example of superior skill and ability, by useful improvements in the practice of his art or by enlarging the boundaries of the science connected with it, he best discharges that debt which every man owes to his profession.

THE FITZGERALD FAMILY AND THE "FUDGE FAMILY."
Soon after the accession of his late Majesty, one of the families of English travellers who are to be met with at every inn, in and out of every town on the continent, had arrived late at night at a somewhat crowded hotel in a remote part of France, where they clamored in vain for admission. They were told there was no accommodation for the party, which consisted of a papa, a mamma, and two daughters. As it was dark, wet and stormy, and there was no shelter nearer than some miles, they insisted with pertinacity on the doors being opened to them. The host expostulated, the travellers vociferated—the storm increased, and so did their impatience. "Mais que voulez vous?" argued the innkeeper; "my last rooms were taken this afternoon by some English travellers like yourselves—you don't expect they will turn out for you?" In the midst of the altercation the soft voice of an English lady appeared without—offered to the wearied travellers a share of the accommodations which her husband and herself had secured. The husband albeit somewhat malgre lui consented to give up a charming table à deux with his bride, joined in welcoming the discomfited party, who were soon seated by a blazing fire—the ladies in the sleeping-room, the gentlemen in the salle à manger—and the sorts of contrivances arranged by the fair hands of the pretty bride herself, assisted by her waiting-maid, to make her, guests comfortable for the night. Shawls, pillows, pillows, were heaped on chairs, and on the floor, and the young bride smiled good humoredly to see how clearly she had settled every thing to the satisfaction of the ladies. After taking as good refreshment as a French country inn afforded—that is, supping on smoked smetlets, with butter and some bread and wine, the stronger ladies began to converse on general topics, and amongst other subjects that of the new reign and the new court was discussed. As the strangers became more talkative, the pretty bride became silent until the former had all the conversation to themselves. Numerous anecdotes were related of the Fitzgerald family; and all the imperfections which just books have recorded, from Lord Rochester to Beau Brummel, were revived and fitted to each of the male members. The females next came under the lash, and, after denying them one good quality after another, their total want of beauty was decided as an incontrovertible fact. "Do you know them well?" ventured the young bride. "Oh, yes," said the mother, "we have seen them thousands of times at Brighton and at Windsor; they are all so proud and stuck-up—you never knew such creatures!"—"Indeed," said the bride; "which of them do you know best?"—"I know 'em all," said the youngest daughter. "Lady F—k—d, with her great black eyes; I see very little in her; but as for Lady Augusta, when they call a beauty, she is the worst of all; and as for pride and—'" "Gosh! hearsen!" exclaimed the bride, colouring with emotion, and entirely of her guard, "who can you mean—my own sister Augusta, or my brother Frederick's wife?"—"I had a thunder-bolt fallen at the foot of the travellers they could not have more felt appalled and conscience-stricken. Nothing now was left but to make apologies, the most abject, the most humble, to the fair creature whom their ignorance and ill nature had so much shocked. Professors of loyalty and attachment to the sovereign, entreaties for forgiveness, were showered upon the blushing and astonished Lady F—k—d, as, with the bewitching smile, half serious half comic, so well known to the inmates of her family, and so peculiar to each of its members, she relinquished her own bed to the sisters, and throwing herself on a pile of cushions, bid them all good night.—London Court Journal.

Various rumours were afloat, respecting troubles in Canada. An insurrection is said to have broken out, and the standard of rebellion hoisted in several counties. An express arrived on Saturday morning in both haste from Quebec, with despatches to His Excellency Sir Colin Campbell, which it is supposed are of great importance. In consequence we presume, the 43d regt, stationed at New Brunswick, are to proceed by the Grand Falls to the Canada line, and an officer of the commissariat is to be detached to Fredericton to make the necessary arrangements for provisioning and conveying the troops under order for Canada. The 56th regt. are to proceed immediately to New Brunswick by the steamer from Windsor.—Halifax Times.

Organic changes in our Provincial Government, respecting the structure of the "Council," will, it is understood, (on good authority) occur during the ensuing winter. We hope that such changes will be productive of all the good that has been expected, and that they will be received with the moderation by which the Province has hitherto been characterized. We trust that a better era is about to open on our rapidly growing country—and that prudent and well sustained energy will give a new impetus to many means of improvement.—Acadian Telegraph.

Sir Jean Colborne, it is generally understood, intends visiting Montreal his residence during the winter.

By His Excellency Major General Sir John Harvey K. C. H. and C. B. Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief of the Province of New Brunswick &c. &c. &c. J. HARVEY, Lt. Governor.

A PROCLAMATION:
WHEREAS the General Assembly of this Province has been summoned to meet at Fredericton on Monday, the sixteenth day of October instant, I have thought fit to prorogue the said General Assembly, and the same is hereby prorogued to Tuesday, the nineteenth day of December next.

Given under my Hand and Seal, at Fredericton, the eighteenth day of August in the Year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty seven, and in the first year of Her Majesty's Command.
By His Excellency's Command,
WM. F. ODELL.

CAUTION.
THE Public are hereby notified not to purchase or negotiate a note of hand given by Wm. C. Hanson in favour of Abiel—dated the 23rd of August last, and due in December next, on which £25 is endorsed paid; and also another note given by the same for £12 6 due in June next; having been given for a horse which has been seized, and no value received.
WILLIAM C. HANSON,
St. Patrick, 2nd Nov. 1837.

THE SUBSCRIBER.
OFFERS for sale the one half of Lot No. 1 in Block Letter L, in Part's division of the town of St. Andrews, and fronting thereon, extending back to Lot No. 6, in the same Block and bounded on the Northeast by the other half of the said Lot, owned by E. H. Whitlock Esq. The said half lot having a good comfortable house erected on it, finished throughout and a Spring of excellent Water in the Cellar.—If the above is not purchased at private sale on or before the 15th of November next, it will be then advertised to be sold at Public Auction.
WILLIAM BETHERINGTON,
St. Andrews, 21st Oct. 1837.

PRIZE WHEAT.
THE WHITTINGTON NEW WHITE WHEAT.
which obtained the PRIZE at the last year's various agricultural meetings.

THE attention of Agriculturists is again called to this valuable, prolific, and perfectly hardy description of WHITE WHEAT, the origin of which was Three Ears discovered on a mountain in Switzerland. From six years' impartial trials and comparisons made by Mr. WHITTINGTON, (a practical Agriculturist and Land Agent for 40 years,) it has been found to surpass any other kind, and to succeed best on "poor soils." If planted on kindly, or rich land little or no manure should be applied. Its promising properties are superiorly in standing the weather—its great disposition to tiller, (a number of Single Grains having this year produced each from 30 to 40 Ears of 5 and 7 inches in length)—its not degenerating in quality or quantity, (12 Bushels on poor land having produced 800 Bushels)—the length and strength of Straw—largeness of Ear and Grain—and its superior Meal qualities, which can be attested by several well-known Surrey Millers. As only a limited quantity will be for Sale, the earliest orders, with remittance, or order for payment in town, will have the preference, by application to Messrs. Thos. Gibbs & Co., Seedsmen, &c., to the Board of Agriculture, Half Moon Street, Piccadilly, London; to Mr. A. B. Gallander, New Corn Exchange, London; or to Mr. Whittington, Whitmore House, near Killybeg, Surrey. Price 2s per Quarter, [new Sacks included] delivered free to any place in town, and not in less quantity than a Four Bushel Sack.

BANK STOCK.
9 Shares in the Charlotte County Bank for sale by the Subscriber.

The Unsold parts of the following property will be offered for sale on days which will be specified when the general wishes of purchasers are ascertained.

VALUABLE Landed Property, FOR SALE BY AUCTION.

On MONDAY Oct. 16, 1837, at 10 o'clock A.M. WILL be offered for sale on the Premises, a valuable tract of about 200 acres of land situated on the East side of Magaguadavic River, about a mile above the village at the Lower Falls, and extending from the River to Lake Etopia.—About a third of this tract is under cultivation and the remainder is covered with a thrifty and useful growth of wood: the soil is excellent and supplied with fine brooks and springs. There are three dwelling houses and a large new barn near the highway leading from St. John to St. Andrews.—The above property is laid out in lots containing from 5 to 20 acres respectively.

On TUESDAY Oct. 17, 1837, at 10 o'clock A.M. at the house of Mr. T. P. SHAW, Lower Falls, About 500 acres of land on the Eastern shore of Lake Etopia in rear of the above tract. The soil is of superior quality, well wooded and watered. A road leads through it from L. Eting to Whittier's mills and the Upper Falls. About 20 acres are cleared on the Lake front, with a barn, and a dwelling house and a large new barn near the highway leading from St. John to St. Andrews.—The above property is laid out in lots containing from 5 to 20 acres respectively.

On MONDAY Oct. 23, 1837, at 10 o'clock A.M. at the house of Mr. JOHN MCGILL, near Wellington bridge, St. Patrick, 200 acres of land fronting on the West side of Digdegue River, opposite to Falls Brook, about 5 miles above the House and Mills of the Hon. James Allan Shaw & Co. The soil and growth are of the first quality finely situated, and surrounded with flourishing settlements. It will be sold in one or smaller lots if desired.

On SATURDAY Oct. 28, 1837, at 10 o'clock a.m. At House-Spur, on the premises, the Eastern half of a lot (so called), with all its buildings and improvements, situated at a short distance from the Chamcock mills of John Wilson Esquire, and 5 miles from St. Andrews, bounded by a tract of the Passanaguddy Bay, Craig's property and the property of the Church. It contains about 20 acres; the Queen's highway passes through its rear, on which part of the tract is a comfortable dwelling house, and a new barn, and the other at Westport, and a new barn, and is in the best manner; and along the road are about 20 acres cleared. A private road leads from the highway lengthwise through the lot to Tassewargent cove on the bay, which forms a good wharf for small vessels, and affords a capital privilege for fishing; is also an excellent opportunity for procuring sea manure, which constantly is brought there; a large fine brook meanders through two thirds of the length of the lot, and debouches into Tassewargent cove. The land is well situated in front and rear, is plentifully stored with a great variety of wood and furnished with many springs of most salubrious water. At the cove, 50 acres are cleared, on most of which crops of grain or potatoes have been produced. It will be sold in divisions of 10 or 20 acres to suit purchasers, or altogether if required.

On MONDAY Oct. 30, 1837, at 10 o'clock a.m. At the several premises in the town of St. Andrews, the following property, viz—
The dwelling House, West end of Green Street, now occupied by C. V. Foster, Esq. of His Majesty's Customs. It is well finished, conveniently situated in a pleasant part of the Town, and will be sold with the outbuildings together with a part of the town lot on which they stand.
The convenient and well situated Cottage, adjoining the above property, with the remainder of the town lot, and appurtenances belonging thereto.
Town Lot No. 1, Black R. Bulkeley's division; the best situation in town for a private residence or respectable house of entertainment.
Town Lot No. 6 in same Block, fronting on Montego Street, and adjoining the former.
Water Lot No. 6, Block K, same division, situated between the House lately built by James McMath and the large dwelling house near the West end of Water Street.
Descriptive details of each of the above Properties will be produced in writing at the several times of sale.

TERMS.
Ten per cent on the amount of purchase to be paid down on the day of sale; and ten per cent on said amount of purchase to be paid within fifteen days after said day of sale on delivery of the deed; the remainder of the purchase money to be paid in four equal annual instalments with interest, and secured by Bond and Mortgage on the Property.
Any further information may be obtained by application to
EDWARD DEWOLFE,
St. Andrews, Sept. 14th 1837.

CAUTION.
THE Public are hereby cautioned from purchasing, or otherwise being concerned in a NOTE OF HAND, given by the Subscriber, in favour of John Anderson, in respect of the Estate of John Anderson, dated 8th Sept. 1834, the same having been attested.

TAKE NOTICE.
ALL Persons indebted to the Subscriber, either by note or book account of longer standing than six months, that those who neglect to settle with him on or before Saturday the 18th of November next will find their accounts in the hands of an Attorney for compulsory collection.
