Future Years.
Sweet little sleeper with bright hair,
On the pale pillow curve clustering fair, Deep in the darkness of things to be,
Wait the years that shall welcome thee; Dimly I see their forms, and mark Faintly the face in the solemn dark; Yet, little sleeper, I cannot say Which are the grave ones, and which the gay!
Some may best these gifts that please; Ah! thou shalt smile when thou meetest these Treasures of riches in grand array; Treasures of learning more grand than they;
Treasures of beauty and healthful life, Treasures of peace untroubled strife;
And the treasures of love, that o'er thee rest Shine forth the rarest and loveliest!

And yet little sleeper, there wait some years Eager to bring thee sorrow and tears; Eager to gird thee with bitter gloom, Like that which hides in the fresh-made tomb;
Eager to stab thee with pangs of loss, Eager to give thee the dreary cross,
For, ah! little sleeper, as the years glide away, Some are the grave ones, and some the gay.

—Edgar Poe.

MR. BROWN'S OFFER.

"I do think it's too bad for anything!
The idea of a man I've never seen having the insolence to write to Uncle Josiah that he's coming all the way from out West to ask me to marry him!"

Kitty Clover's blue eye flashed, and something very suspiciously like angry tears were glittering on her long, curling brown lashes. Her cheeks were flushed, and her lovely mouth dimpled into a look of scorn and rage, that did not at all suit Aunt Susan's view of the case, as she looked over her spectacles, and took Kitty quite sharply to task.

"I can't see what there is so terrible about it. Brother Josiah and I have known Archie Brown ever since he was knee-high to a grasshopper, and a nice boy and a finer man you'll never find than he was and is now. He's good-looking and rich, and wants a wife; and he's seen your picture and fallen in love with you, and he's written to know if brother Josiah has any objection to his coming to ask you to marry him. We take it as a great compliment, and a streak of luck you wouldn't come across twice in your life, and here you must set up contrary to it, and consider yourself almost insulted. Kitty, I'm ashamed of you."

Miss Susan Clover jerked her needle so emphatically that the strong thread snapped viciously. Kitty, perched in the wide, shady window seat, pouted her red lips.

"Well, I don't care—it is a shame!
And Mr. Archie Brown needn't think I'm to be bought and sold like a cow or a pig, just because he happens to have the cash. And I won't have anything to do with it, now! I know I'll just hate him—yes, I hate him already; and when he comes you can tell him my opinion of him!"

And then, after she had flounced out of the pleasant sitting-room, her wavy brown hair all a-tumble over her low white brow, her pretty blue eyes all gleaming with genuine girlish indignation, her white dimpled fingers playing furious havoc with her ruffled apron, and Aunt Susan sat sewing away almost as vered as Kitty herself, thinking what silly fools the young of to-day were, Kitty went up to her room, and went directly to her dressing-glass, and took a long eager survey of herself.

"Yes, I am pretty, and I don't wonder this horrid Mr. Brown—ah, what a name, Brown! I don't really feel surprised that he has fallen in love with my photograph! and Uncle Joe and aunt Susan both say he is good-looking—and for all that I perfectly despise him!
I've a good mind to just fix myself up as irretrievably as possible, and see him when he comes, at eight o'clock, and then—pay him for his impudence by completely crushing him. Yes, I will!"

The anger was all gone from the blue eyes now, and the scorn from the indignant lips; and instead there were gleams of merry mischief, and dimpling smiles at prospect of the glorious triumph so near at hand.

"Archie Brown! The idea! But won't I be revengeful! Oh, he here already!"

For the maid-servant of all-work in the Clover household was handing Kitty a card, and on it she had read a name that sent warm flushes to her cheeks despite her determination.

"Tell Mr. 'A. Brown' that Miss Clover sends her compliments, and will see him presently."

Then she turned to her glass for a parting critical survey, and saw a very satisfactory reflection of a slender, graceful girl, with a fresh, sweet face, and blue eyes that were half-guileful, half-indignant, and a waxy mouth that struggled between the expressions of cold contempt and haughty indifference—a lovely, lovable girl, in a dark blue silk costume, whom it was little wonder Archie Brown, away out in Kansas, had come all the way back to win, if he could.

And he was down stairs—come to hargain with her, come to buy her as he would buy a load of hay! The thought sent flashes of suppressed indignation to her eyes, and more beautiful flushes to her cheeks, as she went slowly down stairs and into the parlor, her train rustling after in a sort of eloquent protest—to see standing in the bay-window, curiously examining a luxurious pot of angulax, a little dumpy gentleman, with a handsome, graceful face, and a pair of eyes looked just a trifle astonished at sight of her; a gentleman who came easily forward to respond to Uncle Josiah's introduction, while Aunt Susan gave a little scream of horrified surprise at the girl's appearance.

"Why, Kitty!"

"Kitty, here is our friend Archie.
Miss Clover, Mr. Brown."

Poor Kitty Clover! She wondered if she was dreaming or crazy. Archie Brown? This Archie Brown—this splendid fellow, that the most fastidious girl could not have failed to almost fall in love with at first sight? Who then, what then, where then, was that other horrid man?

Great banners of scarlet shame were hanging out like signals of distress on her cheeks as she extended her dimpled hand to the gentleman—such a fair, shapely, dimpled hand he noticed, as he took it with a smile that was sweetness itself.

"I am afraid there is somebody for me to fight, Miss Kitty—some one who has been annoying you."

Kitty flashed him a grateful look from her swollen eyes.

"I—I cannot quite understand it!
There was a horrid old man here, and—and he was awful! And his name was Brown—A. Brown; and—and I thought it was—you; and there he goes past the window now!"

Just then aunt Susan craned her neck inquisitively, sprang from her chair, and rushed to the door.

"It's old Andy Brown, come to buy my house-lot down by the timber-land," she flashed at him, almost beside herself.

"You don't? Well, now, that's strange. Why, old Mr. Clover understands it all, and he agreed to tell you the offer I made you—the offer I made you, through him."

Mr. Brown's matter-of-factness almost overcame Kitty. Her words of hot indignation stuck in her throat; and yet this odious fellow sat there placid, at ease, as he went on:

"I will say I am disappointed in your —your appearance, Miss Clover; agreeably disappointed, for I expected to see quite a—different—quite an elderly lady!"

"Indeed!" she flashed out tartly.
"Then it seems we are both surprised—although I am sorry I cannot be so complimentary as yourself, seeing that I had certainly imagined a very much younger man."

Her language, her manner, did not seem to annoy him in the least.

"Oh, well, age and looks don't count for much, if there's the hard cash to back 'em. Come, Miss Clover what is it to be—yes or no? I won't deny I've come quite a way to have your answer, and now I'm here, I'd like it settled at once. You'd better agree to it, here and now; for, if I say it who shouldn't, I don't believe you'll ever get another such chance."

Then Kitty jumped up from her chair, racing at his cool, calm impudence.

"How dare you speak so to me, sir?
As if any man in possession of even half his senses would not know there could be but one answer! No—a thousand times no!"

She fairly shrieked at it him, as he stood staring at her.

Then, as she hurriedly rushed from the room, he frowned inquiringly at her strange conduct, and then slowly gathered his hat, gloves and walkingstick together, and went out, astonished non-plussed.

While Kitty tore up stairs to her room; which so lately she had left in mischievous, half-indignant triumph—her cheeks crimson with fury, her eyes so full of disgusted tears she could scarcely see what she was doing, as she almost frantically tore off her laces, her ribbons, her lovely dress, tossing them angrily on the bed.

"To think I really thought of trying to fascinate him—oh, oh! A nasty, stumpy, greasy, impudent, intolerant old man! To think he dare come trying to make love to me! I'll plaster my hair down to my face, and wear the most horrid calico wrappers I can find, to do penance for the insult I have permitted myself to receive. Oh, Mr. 'A. Brown,' how I hate you!"

And this naughty, wilful heroine of mine sat down in her favorite rocking chair, and cried until her blue eyes were all red and swollen, and her nose almost as bad; so that, when Aunt Susan called her to come down a moment, she was as sorry a sight to see as ever girl was before.

But she went down, too angry and miserable to care for Aunt Susan's remarks, or Uncle Josiah's quizzical looks —went down in her wrapper, with her swollen eyes and nose, and occasional sobs welling defiantly up from her chest —went down in the parlor, to meet a tall, elegant gentleman, dressed just as a handsome, graceful fellow should dress; a gentleman whose splendid gray eyes looked just a trifle astonished at
sight of her; a gentleman who came
easily forward to respond to Uncle

TIMELY TOPICS.

The city of Paris gets $20,000 a year for the rent of its flower stalls.

Switzerland does not impose capital punishment for murder, and the ordinary penalty for that crime is from five to six years' imprisonment.

Spanking a baby in a rude, insolent, or angry manner renders a mother liable to prosecution for assault and battery, according to the decision of a justice in Lafayette, Ind.

Dr. Elliott Cones, the ornithologist, recommends abolishing the penalty for killing sparrows, so that they may be trapped and used for shooting matches instead of pigeons and glass balls.

Mayors in Italy do not seem to command a high place. The mayor of Fagnano, near Bologna, was carried off by brigands recently, but was released on the payment of a ransom of $120.

East Liverpool, Ohio, is warmed and lighted by its natural gas wells. The gas gives a flame that almost rivals the electric light in brilliance, and it costs so little that the lamps in the city streets are kept burning day and night.
It is used in private houses and factories alike, and cooks a steak or heats a furnace.

Last year the potato-bug invaded Prussia, but the authorities of Schidau and Mulheim built fences around the fields, covered them with sawdust and tar, soaked this with kerosene and set fire to the mass. This heroic treatment has been completely successful, as not one of the dreaded insects has been seen this year.

Twenty-eight dishonest tradesmen recently came before the Paris tribunal of correctional police. A coal merchant for cheating in weight was fined $10 and imprisonment for a week; a grocer was fined $10 for selling goods of poor quality; fifteen tavern keepers were fined $10 and imprisonment for adulterating their liquors; nine milk dealers suffered a like punishment for watering their milk, and two bakers were fined $5 for using light weights.

Unlike his father Victor Emmanuel, King Humbert delights in royal display and ceremony. He enjoys entering and leaving the large cities of his kingdom in rigid official form, with outriders, aids and guards, troops in line, and majors in waiting. Last month he enjoyed several fetes of this kind. In Venice a grand illumination and magnificent festivities were given in honor of his arrival, and his departure was after the style of an old-time king.

While six highwaymen were robbing a stage-coach near Hot creek, Wyoming Territory, recently, two messengers crept up near and shot one of the robbers dead. The rest retreated to a neighboring gulch, keeping up a steady fire on the messengers, who returned it, but dared not leave their positions. The coach, in the mean time, had been driven on, and after waiting some time and seeing they were not strong enough to dialogue the robbers, the messengers remounted their horses and rejoined the coach, leaving the mail-sacks lying on the road near the body of the dead robber.

A span of elk in harness attracted much attention in St. Paul, Minn., one day recently. They belong to A. H.
Moore. Their names are Dexter and Dasher. Dexter weighs 516 pounds and Dasher 500 pounds. They are two years old each, well broken to harness, and Mr. Moore says are so well trained that a woman can drive them. They were captured on Rice river, eight miles south of Fargo, Dakota, when four or five days old. It is an easy matter for them to travel sixteen miles an hour and have two men and a buggy, and it is said they can travel one hundred miles as easy as a horse team can fifty. Their antlers are in what the hunters term the velvety stage.

"Pulmonary Consumption" arises from a decline or deficiency of vitality in the natural bioplasm or germinal matter, and this deficiency manifests itself not only in a general wasting or atrophy of the whole body, but also in a peculiar degeneration, chiefly in the lungs and lymphatic system, of portions of this bioplasm into a sluggish, low-lived, yet proliferating matter, which instead of maintaining the nutrition and integrity of the tissues (which is the natural office of bioplasm) elges them, and irritates them with a substance which is more or less prone to decay, and eventually involves them also in its own disintegration and destruction.

To remedy this deficiency by sustaining the vitality of the bioplasm, and thus provide for the general building up of the whole system, is the office and design of Robinson's Phosphorized Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime.

Prepared solely by J.H. ROBINSON, Pharmaceutical Chemist, St. John, N. B., and for sale by Druggists and General Dealers. Price $1.00 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.00.

Parks' Cotton Yarns!

Awarded the Only Medal Given at the Centennial Exhibition

For Cotton Yarns of Canadian Manufacture No. 45's to 10's.

WHITE, BLUE, RED, ORANGE AND GREEN. Made of Good American Cotton with great care. Correctly numbered and Warranted Full Length and Weight.

WE would ask the purchasers of Cotton Yarn to remember that our Yarn is spun on Turcotte Frames, which make a stronger yarn than the Ring Frames, used in making American yarn.

It is also better twisted and more carefully reeled; each hank being tied up in 7 leas of 120 yards each. This makes it much more easy to wind than when it is put up without leas—as the American is—and also saves a great deal of waste.

Those acquainted with weaving will understand the great advantage it is to them to use yarn put up in this manner.

COTTON CARPET WARP, Made of No. 10 Yarn, 4-Ply Twisted. WHITE, RED, BROWN, SLATE, &c. All fast colors.

Each 5 lb bundle contains 10,000 yards in length and will make a length of Carpet in proportion to the number of ends in width.

We have put more twist into this warp than it formerly had, and it will now make a more durable Carpet than can be made with any other material. Since its introduction by us, a few years ago, it has come into very general use throughout the country.

All our goods have our name and address upon them. None others are genuine.
