DIRECTIONS to FARMERS and GARDENERS.

AS some Springs are much earlier than others, the following Directions ought not to be too literally adhered to in point of time; but may rather serve to point out the order in which things may succeed each other; but as to the precise time of beginning, the judgment of the planter must be in some measure regulated by the appearance of the Spring. However, those mentioned for the last week in April, may be put in whenever the snow is gone, the frost out of the ground, and the earth so dry as not to be muddy, and the others succeed in their order.

The first week in May, sow oats, wheat and rye; also some early English beans, (and the main crop by the 10th or 12th), spinage, and orrice; and by the 20th of May a few hills of cucumbers, and a few early bush beans.

The middle of May, sow hemp and flax; and any time between this and the 10th of June will do for potatoes; such as are planted about the first of June, are frequently the largest, but the earliest planted are as commonly the best to eat, being drier in consequence of their being more thoroughly ripe.

The first week in June, plant all sorts of kidney beans; also cucumbers, squashes and pumpkins.

The 20th of June, sow buckwheat; this is also a good time to sow in herds-grafs, clover, or any sort of grafs seed, which is thought to succeed better if sowed in now with buckwheat, than in the spring with oats. Herds-grafs that is sowed the latter part of June, or through the whole of July, instead of running up, heading out, and ripening as that does which is earlier sown, spends the summer in spreading into a large bunch, and rooting firmly, by which it not only bears the severity of the winter, but sends up from each seed many more stalks the ensuing summer. The farmer should be particularly careful to sow his clover, if possible, before the end of July; for it is very apt to be killed with the winter, if not well rooted, and it often happens that crops which come up well, late in the fall, are wholly killed, so that a single plant cannot be found the next summer.—The first week in July sow field turnips—the early Dutch may be sown as late as the 25th.—The 20th is a good time to sow turnip radish, and for a late crop, some salmon ditto, as late as August 10th.—About the middle of August is the best time to sow winter wheat and rye, as by being sowed early it will be better rooted to stand the severity of the winter, and be more likely to escape a blast by coming in earlier next summer.—In the fore part of September, corn salad, which may then be cut any time in the winter or spring when the snow is off.

WINTER.

WHERE, where are now those beauties fled, That charm'd the ravish'd eye, When Sol, in all his glory clad, Triumphant rode the sky? How languid looks the land. scapes all! The eye with discontent	Dejected views the cheerless scenes The season does present. The purling streams have ceas'd to flow, Lock'd up in ice severe; The gentle murmurs of the brook. No longer do we hear.

II. FEBRUARY hath XXVIII Days. 1795.

No playful lambkins now are seen
 To frolic in gamefome bound;
 No tender milk-maid's sonnet's heard
 From all the mead around.
 No thrush nor lark's melodious strains
 Salute the list'ning ear;
 No sportive swallow's on the wing,

The drooping mind to cheer.
 And Sol, from distant southern skies,
 Where he refulgent shines,
 Now darts his pallid beams on us
 In horizontal lines.
 Or e'fe a tenfold cloud obstructs
 His sickly feeble rays,
 And all that we do here enjoy
 Are transient twilight days.

APRIL.

HAIL blooming season! hail delightful Spring! Thy blest return, my Muse shall deign to sing: The groves re-echo with the songsters' strains, And lambskins dance around the daisied plains.	The meadows, mantled with spontaneous flow'rs, Call forth imagination's happiest pow'rs; With showers of April, how they scent the vales, And yield their sweetness to the passing gales.

Whilst vegetation thus her pow'rs confests, And sport their beauties in her infant beam; See the wild tenants of the woods express Her praise, and grow enrap- tur'd with the theme. And, whilst their notes in con- cert wild aspire, And speak the feelings of each little heart,	Shall man not catch a portion of their fire, And in the gen'ral chorus bear a part? Shall he behold the renovating year In every varying tint of beau- ty dress'd; Shall sounds of gladness die upon his ear, Yet wake no sympathy within his breast?

VIII. AUGUST hath XXXI Days. 1795.

The DAWN of a SUMMER'S DAY.

THE beauteous morning
dawns forth in the east,
in cheering smiles and crimson
blushes dress;
Sees as she rises from her purple
wings,
An orient influence all around
she flings:
On the young rose-bud sits the
pearly stream,
And waits th' exhaling of the
solar beam;

The lucid drops in pendant
rows adorn
The spiry grass, the tremulous
leaf and thorn;
While from each blossom rises
rich perfume,
More fragrant sweets than from
Arabia come;
Whose mingled odours grate-
fully arise,
And give the first breath'd incense to the skies.

HARVEST.

THE maiden star now rules the varied year, o'er the fields the golden sheaves appear; Chaste-Luna gently darts a lan- guid ray, To light the sun-burnt reaper on his way, As to his lowly cot he speeds with joy,	No goading cares his happy hours annoy; Whilst he with pleasure views his lipping race, Who round him cling to snatch the fond embrace; With innocence their little-tales impart, Unheedful of the polish'd rules of art:

X. OCTOBER hath XXXI Days. 1795.

As on the table smokes the homely food.	'Tis simply plain, kind nature's call relieves,
Serv'd up in humble bowls of ashen wood;	And to the body health and spi- rit gives.
No massy plate attracts the ro- ving eye;	Let wealth and pomp behold with scornful eyes,
No luscious cares the appetite destroy;	But ask, if they such real sweets enjoy?
No costly beverage to fire the brain,	What tho' on beds of down stretch'd out at ease,
And spread a raging heat thro' every vein:	Where art and nature both com- bine to please.

XII. DECEMBER hath XXXI Days. 1795.

And western skies with rich reflection glow, While on the cheerful hearths the bright fires blaze. No, not the verdure of returning Spring, Nor all the music of the vocal grove,	Can joys to me, compar'd with Winter's bring : For Winter's joys domestic most I love ; Her shorten'd days, when in the social ring Souls mix with souls, and minds their powers improve.

[Not having had it in our power to obtain regular returns of the Militia, we are apprehensive there may be a few incorrections in the foregoing Lists.—We have also been obliged to omit altogether the Lists of Militia Officers for the other parts of the province.—This inconvenience may be avoided in future, by the Commanding Officers of the respective Regiments favouring us in season with correct returns.]

SENTIMENTAL MEDLEY.

[Extracted from celebrated Authors.]

ABSTINENCE.

TO fet the mind above the appetites, is the end of Abstinence ; which one of the fathers observes to be, not a virtue, but the ground-work of a virtue. By forbearing to do what may innocently be done, we may add hourly new vigour to resolution, and secure the power of resistance when pleasure or interest shall lend their charms to guilt.

ACTIONS.

THINGS may be seen differently, and differently shewn ; but Actions are visible, though motives are secret.

ADVERSITY.

WE are taught in scripture, that the Almighty chastens whom he loves ; and scourges the men whom he receiveth to himself. Adversity is a school, in which both private persons and public societies have learned the most heroic virtues.

THE greatest object in the universe, says a certain philosopher, is a good man struggling with Adversity ; yet there is still a greater, which is, the good man that comes to relieve it.

AMBITION.

AMBITION is as restless as fire, which still consumes whatever comes in its way without determining where to stop.

— Ambition, scornful of restraint,

Even from the birth, affects supreme command,

Swells in the breast, and with restless force

O'erbears each gentler motion of the mind ;

As when a deluge overspreads the plains,

The wand'ring rivulets and silver lakes

Mix undistinguish'd in the general roar.

ANGER.

THERE is an inconsistency in Anger, very common in life ; which is, That those who are vexed to impatience, are angry to see others less disturbed than themselves ; but when others begin to rave, they immediately see in them, what they could not find in themselves ; the deformity and folly of useless rage.

TO be angry about trifles, is mean and childish ; to rage and be furious is brutish ; and to maintain perpetual wrath is a-kin to the practice and temper of devils ; but to prevent or suppress rising resentment, is wise and glorious, is manly and divine.

BEAU.

A BEAU is every thing of a woman but the sex, and nothing of a man beside it.

BENEVOLENCE.

THERE cannot be a more glorious object in creation, than a human being, replete with benevolence, meditating in what manner he might render himself most acceptable to his Creator, by doing most good to his creatures.

CHARACTER.

WE should not be too hasty in bestowing either our praise or censure on mankind, since we shall often find such a mixture of good and evil in the same character, that it may require a very accurate judgment, and a very elaborate enquiry, to determine on which side the balance turns.

DEPENDANCE.

AMONG the many who have enforced the duty of giving, I am surpris'd there are none to inculcate the ignominy of receiving ; to shew, that by every favour we accept, we in some measure forfeit our native freedom, and that a state of continual Dependance on the generosity of others is a life of gradual debasement.

Whenever there is wealth, there will be Dependance, and expectation ; and wherever there is Dependance, there will be an emulation of servility.

DESIRE.

THE Desires of man increase with his acquisitions—every step, which he advances, brings something within his view, which he did not see before, and which, as soon as he sees it, he begins to want. Where necessity ends, curiosity begins ; and no sooner are we supplied with every thing that nature can demand, than we set down to contrive artificial appetites.

DETRACTION.

DETRACTION is among those vices which the most languid virtue has sufficient force to prevent ; because by Detraction, that is not gained which is taken away. " He who fishes from me may good name (says Shakepear) enriches not himself, but makes me poor indeed." As nothing, therefore, degrades human nature more than Detraction, nothing more disgraces conversation. The DetraCTOR, as he is the lowest moral character, reflects greater dishonour upon his company than the hangman; and he whose disposition is a scandal to his species, should be more diligently avoided than he who is scandalous only by his office

Amis

DIFFIDENCE.

DIFFIDENCE may check resolution, and obstruct performance; but compensates its embarrassments by more important advantages: it conciliates the proud, and softens the severe; averts envy from excellence, and censure from miscarriage.

FRIENDSHIP.

SO many qualities are necessary to the possibility of Friendship, and so many accidents must concur to its rise and its continuance, that the greatest part of mankind content themselves without it, and supply its place as they can with interest and dependance.

That friendship may be at once fond and lasting, there must not only be equal virtue on each part, but virtue of the same kind; not only the same end must be proposed, but the same means must be approved by both.

Friendship, thou charmer of the mind,
Thou sweet deluding ill;
The brightest moment mortals find,
And sharpest pains we feel.

Fate has divided all our shares,
Of pleasure, and of pain;
In love the friendship, and the cares,
Are mix'd and join'd again.

HOPE.

THE wretch condemn'd with life to part,
Still, still on Hope relies;
And ev'ry pang that rends the heart,
Bids Expectation rise.

Hope, like the glimm'ring taper's light,
Adorns and cheers the way,
And still, as darker grows the night,
Emits a brighter ray.

HYPOCRITE.

'TIS not that the Hypocrite despises a good character, that he is not one himself, but because he thinks he can purchase it at a cheaper rate than the practice of it, and thus obtain all the applause of a virtuous man, merely by pretending to be so.
