THE UNITED KINGDOM ALLIANCE.

MR. EDITOR,—The important meetings in connection with the anniversary of this great association have recently been held. They were mighty gatherings of the earnest supporters of the principles for which the Alliance is so persistingly battling, and there appears to be no abatement of zeal or hopefulness. The attention of the public has been unavoidably drawn towards the movement; its numbers, strength and compact organization cannot be ignored. nor the ungrudging liberality of its enthusiastic supporters. It is much dread ed by all the manufacturers of strong drinks, and the venders thereof intensely hate it. Nevertheless it keeps steadily at work, making free use of the press, multiplying its agencies, watching elections, aiding all measures for legislative restrictions upon the sale of drinks, cooperating with the promoters of Sabbath closing, and gradually moulding public opinion in the direction of its movements and aims.

A LENGTHY TRIAL.

Another long and tedious trial, which the judges), occupied nearly fifty days; has been brought to its conclusion The result is that a Solicitor who had a good practice, and three Detectives of superior rank in the Force, and distinguished for long service and brilliant achievements in their profession, have been found guilty. Their crime has been conspiracy to defeat justice, to enable the guilty to escape, and the giving or reception of monetary bribes. The punishment awarded is two years imprisonment with hard labor. It was not in the power of the Judge to inflict a heavier punishment or it would have been done. Yet the consequences of their guilt are very severe. Loss of honourable position, of valuable pensions, and perhaps of life-long degradation for they are widely known throughout the Kingdom. It has been a most deplorable breach of trust; and has met with sore and abiding punishment and disgrace.

CONNEXION COMMITTEES

upon the various matters of pressing importance have been in session at the Centenary Hall during the past fortnight. These were committed to their consideration, by the last Conference, and their recommendation after undergoing various sittings, will be ready for the Conference of 1878 at Bradford. A certain amount of publicity now attends the sittings of these Committees, and the result of their deliberations soon become known. KINGSWOOD WOODHOUSE GROVE the great schools for the education of the sons of ministers, and those quite recently established for the daughters, are not at all upon a stable foundation. The expenditure has become out of all proportion to the income, and a large debt, which is steadily increasing, is one of the difficulties which has to be surmounted. It is believed that immediate relief would be the result of the introduction of the children of the laity. the education imparted is equal to any that can be obtained in any similiar schools, and spiritual influences are such that the families of our people would eagerly seek for the admission of their children and would willingly commend this change.

bids fair to open the way for such organizations in the midst of the youth of Methodism as will under the blessing of God form the missing link, between our advanced scholars and the educated youth of our flocks, and full membership in the church of Christ. There were other essential matters under discussion, but it would be premature at present to dwell upon them. Methodism is in the midst of an era of development and progress. The old truths are loyally cherished, but new forms and adaptations of existing agencies to the required work of the day, are being employed, and will be, even more extensively, in future.

is in excitement and turmoil. Some prophets of evil forbodings, are asserting that a revolution is imminent, and that Germany is closely watching events and preparing if need be, to strike again. Affairs have certainly not reached such a crisis, but MacMahon is obstinate and under evil influences and listens to malign counsellors. If he does not yield, and meet the wishes of the able and compact majority, or if he attempts another dissolution, all France will be ablaze with wrath and resistance. The times are perilous and the situation critical, but it is hoped that wiser and more pacific counsels will pre-

In Europe the fierce conflict rolls on but Russia everywhere maintains its hold, and for a time at least the victorious achievements of the Turks have come to an end, and they are being severely pressed by the mighty invader.

LETTER FROM MONTREAL.

DEAR MR. EDITOR,-It will please you to be informed that the DAY OF THANKSGIVING on the 22nd ult., was well kept by multitudes in this city. Being appointed by the Dominion Government for the whole country, it was proclaimed as a general holiday by the Mayor, and was suitably observed. Let us hope that the time of public thanks giving in years to come will be the same for all the Provinces. This would be a great convenience. The Cabinet at Ottawa cannot but know that such a course would be welcome to every good Canadian. Sermons were preached in most of the churches here. The occasion was improved for discoursing on our dependence on God for life and breath and all good things, and our consequent obligations to Him for a bountiful harvest-the revival of trade, and peace in all our borders. Thanks giving day affords a fine opportunity for promoting an enlightened patriotism. Its benefits could be best secured by making collections on that day in aid of some public charity, as a hospital for the sick, or an asylum for the insane, the deaf or the blind. The gifts of some of the congregations were wisely and kindly presented to the General Hospital.

MISSIONARY SERVICES so called, have been lately held in several churches here both Catholic and Protestant. A few words on some of them will not be unappropriate. In the Catholic churches the object seemed to be the local revival of religion. "Missions" is the name now given to special religious services in England, as well as by the Catholics in Canada. Their mission was con-The schools are admirably conducted, ducted by the Redemptionist Fathers, and were numerously attended by the Irish. baptismal font, that had been tastefully illuminated. This was done. The preacher then repeated the baptismal vowsslowly-emphatically-to which the vast throng as by one stentorian voice answered "Yes." He then with extended hand pronounced his blessing upon all present, and taking the part prescribed in the ceremony-whether young or old, rich or poor, parents or children. Near the altar a shrine of the Virgin Mary had been erected, and was brilliantly illuminated. This with the blaze of lighted tapers in the body of the spacious edifice made a gorgeous and resplendent scene. During the mission a large number signed the pledge of total abstinence. This is unquestionably good, and may lead to further improvement in knowledge, morals and true religion.

Withal Catholics are investigating beyond the limits permitted to them by their withdraw from the church in which they is to be $1,400 per ann. have been bred, and to join some Protestant body. An instance of this kind has just now occurred in the case of a French bishop of Quebec informing him of the great change in his convictions and pur-spread of the gospel. THE METHODISTS too have recently held Anniversaries in three of the churches. The most effective of these was probably that in the Ottawa Street Church. The talented and popular Dr. Pierce, Editor of "Zion's Herald." Boston, preached, and delivered a most interesting platform speech. It was his first visit to this city for such a purpose. Many hope it will not be his last. He was very edifying and acceptable. Another of the speakers was the Rev. Mr. Saunders from Ontario. He was comparatively unknown, but his abilities baptized with the spirit of love, will surely place him in a forward rank of the host that is fighting the Lord's battle. The Vice-President of the General Conference -the Rev. George Douglas, L.L.D.—was also present and spoke. He has been unwell of late but he pronounced one of his great orations, as if he had risen to the greatness of the enterprise of gaining the world for Christ. The audience admired -were convinced and delighted. Consequently the collections were in advance of those last year. THE ANGLICAN CHURCH was held in two of its Sanctuaries. The first in Christ Church Cathedral was a union of the congregations. The prayers. lessons, hymns, and the sermon were special and appropriate. The evening service was in St. George's Church. The Metropolitan preached. The collection was in aid of Christian work in Algoma.

Surely these general, earnest, devout services in relation to missions are a sign of the time. They may be a providential reply to the scientific unbelief now becoming so portentous. The monthly missionary prayer meetings may have helped to produce this intelligent zeal for the conversion of men to God. Nothing need be added to this. The friends of the Indians seem now to be divided in opinion as to what is best for them. The Government at Ottawa are understood to be willing to assist, provided the Indians will promise to abide by their decision, which some think they ought to do. Others fear that the Indians would be removed from the land they have occupied for generations. Of this they will not hear. It would perhaps be wrong. But there are cases in which the extreme of legal right would be productive of more evil than a judicious compromise. It may be that the case of the Methodist Indians at Oka is of this sort Comfort, security, or social progress can hardly be expected for them in their present surroundings. He was appointed with the writer to the Charlottetown circuit in 1848, He resided near the church on Lot 49. It was adopted, was generally accepted, and has long been the name of the post office in that district. Our deceased brother was a true Methodist preacher. I do not remember that one unpleasant word passed between us on account of work-or finance-or the partiality of friends. His disease so soon after solemnising the marriage of his only son was indeed a surprise. His final hour was probably hastened by his great loss by the fire in St. John. But his work was finished, he rests from his labors. The lesson to his yet surviving friends is "to work while it is day, for the night cometh." The day which follows that night to the faithful laborers is one wherein the sun shall no more go down-but the Lord shall be unto them an everlasting light and their God their glory.

GOD'S DESIGN. One design of God in the gospel is to bring us to make Him the object of our undivided respect,-that He may engross our regard every way. There is an inclination in the creature uot only to the adoration of a lord and sovereign, but to complacence is some one as a friend-some one that may be freely conversed with. Nor does virtue nor holiness destroy or weaken this inclination of our nature; but so hath God contrived in the affair of our redemption, that a divine person may be the object even of this inclination of our nature. And in order hereto, such an one has come down to us, has taken our nature, and become one of us, and now calls Himself our friend, brother, our companion : for my brethren and companions' sake will I now say, Peace be within thee." Is not this all we can want?-Jonathan

HAPPY will you be if you learn what it is to find love an occupation It is no use to ask what those who love God do with Him. There is no difficulty in spending our time with a friend we love: our heart is always ready to open to him: we do not study what we shall say to him. but it comes forth without premeditation; we can keep nothing back; even if we Two other societies have recently been with him. Oh, how much easier it is to love than to fear! Fear constrains, fetters one: but love persuades, comforts.

WHAT OBJECTIONS MAY BE URGED AGAINST THESE MEANS OF GRACE.

It is objected-

1. That class-meetings are not mentioned in the New Testament. I admit the name is not there, but the thing is. Our text, as I have shown, plainly speaks of meetings held for mutual Christian help. Such meetings would be as similar to our class meetings as our public worship is to the public worship of the first Christians. Exhortation one of another, comfort one of another, confession of sin one to another, prayer one for another—as these are features of our class-meeting, so were they features of these Hebrew Christian meetings, which they were exhorted not to forsake.

2. It is objected that class-meetings are not to be found in other modern Christian Churches. This may be admitted. But the Bible, as we have shown, approves them, and though I am not called to judge other Churches, Methodists ought to be thankful for fellowship with a Church so like the Bible pattern. These duties of mutual exhortation, comfort, admonition, and communion must be acknowledged binding on all who take the New Testament for their law. If no Church provision is made for their fulfilment, it is a misfortune, but the duties are nevertheless obligatory. They are obligatory, and yet little likely to be systematically fulfilled—as little likely as the duties of public worship would be if no express provision was made for them.

It is objected that Christian experience is "too sacred a thing" to be divulged, and should be kept secret between the soul and its Lord. But does not David, in the Psalms, throw out his religious life in its every phase? Does not Paul, in the Romans, constantly exhibit his religious experience in all its fulness and failure? Do not those who urge this objection, when they produce a religious biography, always attemp to give us the inner life of their heroes? To them we may say, "Physician, heal thyself." The Psalmist cries. "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare all that he hath done for my soul."

4. It is objected that our class meeting is like a Romish confessional. My reply is, that there is just the difference between them that there is between a good sovereign and a bad one. Of course they are very much alike to those who dont know the difference. But there is all the difference in the world to competent judges. The counterfeit and the true unquestionably resemble one another. The worship of an idol resembles the worship of God. But there is an essential difference between idol worship and God worship, so there is between the Methodist class meeting and the Romish confessional. The Romanist confesses his faults to a priest to obtain absolution: the Methodist confesses his fault to his brethren that they may pray God to pardon him. In the Romish confessional the statement of every secret and terrible sin is extorted by ruthless inquiries · in the Methodist class meeting the members unburden themselves of just as much of their trouble as they judge will promote their edification. Away, then, with that oft repeated slander that the Methodist class meeting is like the Romish confessional! The Bible directs a Christian confessional, of which the Methodist class meeting furnishes an illustration. "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed." But the Methodist class meeting is far more than a confessional in any sense. It is a meeting for exhortation, admonition, thanksgiving! "Come and hear," cries the Psalmist, "all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul."

5. It is said, "People can get to heaven without the class meeting." God forbid that I should represent the road to heaven as narrower than it is! Many dry bones will gather together. It has people we shall surely find there whom always been so. The more religion we We dare to say that good people who lings the more our people have flocked neglect the sacraments of baptism and God will do right, and we are not called -London Methodist.

THE to judge any man. But to any man who should neglect Christian duties on the ground that he may get to heaven without them, we would solemnly say. " Beware you don't get into hell." You may drive very near a precipice without driving over, but such daring is very dangerous. Wise men will keep as far off as possible. Look at the warnings against apostacy that they follow in the train of thought upon the exhortation not to neglect these means of gracejust as if this neglect was felt by the writer to be the first step to ruin. Alas to Methodists at least it has proved so in thousands of cases. Let us not, then, 'neglect the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is."

6. It is said by some, we do not enjoy these class-meetings. If people go to them, not only with no sympathy. but with a positive prejudice against them, they are not likely to enjoy them. Those who have no sympathy with its spirit could not eujoy heaven itself, and hence it is said the unregenerate 'cannot"-not "shall not" -" enter into the kingdom of God." We do not enjoy public worship, but is that good reason for neglecting it? Is enjoyment the chief end of our religious ordinances? Is it not profit? Men of the world do every day a score of things they do not enjoy. They do them not for pleasure, but for profit. The religion of the Cross, that teaches selfdenial-the cutting off the right hand and plucking out the right eye-is not intended as a sweetmeat. It is the method of the Great Physician for the recovery of the sick, and involves much unpleasant medicine. "I don't like it" as a reason for neglecting the class meeting is a spoilt child's whine, and utterly unworthy a Christian warrior bent on conquering world and flesh and devil. The question is not what you enjoy, but what God requires—and what will secure for you the largest amount of religious good. Take Paul's advice. Keep to your class meeting, "Not neglecting the assembling of yourselves ogether as the manner of some is."

These meetings have been the strength of our Church. They have brought the members into contact with each other, and have developed their gifts as no other system has done. They have secured a sympathetic supervision of our Church members such as no pastorate in the world supplies. If they have not done more for you individually, is it not greatly because you have not used them as you ought? You have not gone as regularly as you ought. You have not gone in the right spirit. Before complaining that there has been but little life and fire, ask yourself how much you have contributed. Before complaining that there is a small attendance, ask yourself whether you have not often done your best by staying away to make the attendance small. The leaf on which the past history of your class meeting is written is frightfully disfigured. Turn to a new leaf and begin afresh. Make arrangements as much to attend these meetings for spiritual food as you do to gather to your tables at meal-times for material food. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some

If Methodists lose long and needed some support; man their religion, class meetings will not long be sustained; nor would be worth much if they could be. But give us power, converting sinners, recovering backsliders, quickening believers, and sweeping, like the wind of Ezekiel's vision, over the whole Church, and the we have not expected; many whom we have had in our churches the more conhave expected will be excluded. WEST END METHODIST CHURCH. MONTREAL.

MISSIONARY SERVICES,

Yesterday missionary anniversary ervices were held in this church, there being large congregations both morning and evening. Rev. J. S. Black, of Erskine (Presbyterian) Church, preached at the forenoon service. In the evening Rev. L. Gaetz, of the St. James street Methodist Church, officiated. On the latter occasion, after singing and prayer, the anthem "Oh, how lovely is Zion," was beautifully rendered by the choir. The Scripture lesson was from the first chapter of John's Gospel and the first, chapter of the first general epistle of John. The minister preached an eloquent discourse from the following text :-

For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.—2 Cor., iv., 6.

After showing that God was the original source of all light, material as well as spiritual, he referred to the ignorance and darkness which existed

among men. It was an irreversible law of moral being that no man's character could rise above his conceptions of the Divine being. Men who worship idols are like the idols they worship. The heart of man was corrupt, and the conscience of man also had been darkened by sin. Like a dishonest coroner or a corrupt jury, it fails to bring in a just verdict. So, for the corrections of his corrupt heart and perverted conscience, man should have this light of God to illumine his heart. Man was but an atom pressed by two worlds, and this world was pressing us so hard that we should soon have to give up the ghost. Let philosophers and theorists, if they could, answer the question how we were to enter into that haven of rest? It is the very question answered in the text-we are not left in darkness God reveals this light, first, through His Word. Before the Bible man is microscopic; he is but an atom in the midst of worlds. The highest intellect weighed against the Word of God is like an atom weighed against infinity. But God has condescended to temper the light of His revelation to our imperfect intellect. It was necessary that God should place lights upon the way to light the mariner's path to the haven of eternal rest; and David has said, "The entrance of Thy Word giveth light." The evidences of God's love and grace manifest in His Word are greater than that God is in the sunlight. The preciousness of this medium of light from God the preacher illustrated by the somewhat familiar story of the blind girl, who after her fingers became so calloused that she could not distinguish the raised characters in her Bible, cried for joy on discovering that she could read them by the touch of her lips. asked Christians if, as they made use of the Bible, in the Sabbath-school and elsewhere, they realized the blessedness of this light? Was there not a responsibility connected with the enjoyment of this medium of light, and with the fact that millions of people dwelling in spiritual darkness are dependent for salvation on the light of this Word? It seemed to him it was at the peril of But all the exhortations in the world the Christian's life that he should will go for nothing as to these means withhold the light of this Word of of grace unless the spirit which first Divine truth. The span was full of sin and depraved, in crossing it would need something tangible to support him. Then it was that God gave grand revivals—give us Pentecostal His own Son, and man looking upon Him could say, "Behold the foundation stone of God." Jesus Christ was also the light shining from shore to shore to illumine this path from time to eternity. Another medium was the gospel of the grace of God. Jesus. after His resurrection, declared it was His will that the Gospel should be preached to all men. Humanity, throughout the world, is crying for Christ: the world wants light, and the Church is withholding it from them. God will hold us responsible. Lastly, also a medium for communication of a Judge of the widow and a Father of the solar radiance; call it what they might, he would challenge anyone to say there was not a difference between the countenance of a guilty person and that of the Christian who had been communing with his God. If, then, we have the very pledge and prototype of the light of God revealed to us in Jesus Christ, why should the world be mightier than the Church, the principles of darkness than the principles of light? Why is it that a religion so potent as that of Jesus Christ does not lift the world up? It can be done; it must be done. Let the Church be faithful; let us put our hands together and lift the world up. Lift the benighted in the far-off regions of humanity up from their condition of darkness .- Montreal Witness, 26th Nov

"WITNESSES."

BAPTISMAL TESTIMONY.

DR. ADAM CLARKE: "It is probable." says this learned commentator, following previous expositors, who supposed that there might be allusion to an ancient practice of immersion, "that the Apostle here alludes to the mode of administering baptism by immersion, the whole body being put under water." To an intelligent audience of this City, the above sentence was quoted as an embodiment of Dr. Clarke's opinion. To the important qualification of the passage which follows immediately, there was not the faintest allusion. The bulk of the people present at that time, not having the Commentary for reference, could only carry away one impression. But what must have been the feeling of indignation, with the few who consulted and compared authori ties, when they came to read the whole passage-calling for special attention because emphasized by the use of italics: "I say it is probable that the Apostle alludes to this mode of immersion; but it is not absolutely certain that he does so, as some imagine; for in the next verse, our being incorporated into Christ by baptism is also denoted by our being planted, or rather grafted together in the likeness of his death; and Noan's Ark floating upon the water, and sprinkled by the rain from heaven, is a figure corresponding to baptism.

The great Wesleyan Commentator generously made the concession, that there was probable allusion to immersion, because he tells us. "some do imagine" it; and the concession is quoted without any cognizance of the accompanying argument: sufficiently cogent and positive, we should say, to balance all probabilities that rest only upon imagination.—Rev. J. L. in Bap-

GREAT INGENUITY is displayed in the manufacture of mechanical toys. The near approach of the holidays stimulates inventive genius in this line. Among the amusing toys of this kind now to be seen in some of the Boston shop windows, is a monkey photographer at work. He is nicely dressed, and his monkey sitter is very fine. He stands behind the instruments and directs her how to pose. They chatter a good deal, she smirks, flirts her fan. arranges her dress, and, finally, is ready; then the slide is pulled out, the photographer stands with uplifted finger, in true professional style, and the picture is completed. It is a curious contrivance.

OBITUARY.

MR. GEORGE REYNOLDS. Died at his residence near Port Hawksbury, on the 4th of November, Mr. George Reynolds, in the 69th year of his age. Mr. Reynolds was born at the Strait of Canso, and spent his days near where he died. Frugal and industrious was the life he always lived; toiling early and late to obtain a living for those dependent upon him, from the reluctant soil, and oftentimes more reluctant sea. Yet he was a most liberal supporter of his church. To it he never went empty handed, nor to the house of his minister, whom he often made glad by practical acts of sympathy. In this he seemed to be of the antiquated Jewish sect, on which, in this respect Christianity seems to be no improvement. And though a firm and loyal Methodist, he was not so bigoted or infallible in his opinion as to exclude from fellowship or from Heaven, in his own opinion, those who did not agree with him concerning rites and ceremonies. Of his family, some had passed over, others are left. He first wife years ago died in the faith, and his eldest son more recently. Of those left to claim the prothe life and character of Christians was | mise of Him, who in his holy habitation is | tion and a benediction.

fatherless, are his second wife, who untiringly, lovingly and faithfully watched and accompanied him to the very brink of the stream, and a son who was about leaving Europe for America with his ship at the time of his father's death.

MRS. HUNTER.

Ded, Oct. 13th, at Lakeville, in the Sheffield circuit, MRS. HUNTER, wife of James H. Hunter, in the 56th year of her age. Mrs. Hunter was born in Sheffield and was the youngest daughter of thelate Hugh Cowperthwaite of that place. When about fourteen years of age, during a gracious revival of religion, under the Superintendency of Dr. Pickard, she became deeply convinced of sin, and was brought to seek earnestly the joy and peace of a present salvation. Being taught the way to the kingdom, she soon obtained redemption through the blood of Christ, even the forgiveness of her sins, and was enabled to rejoice in the hope of the glory of God. Having obtained the pearl of great price,' she at once connected herself with the Methodist Church, and for a pe riod of forty years continued to adorn her profession by a consistent walk and godly conversation. Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, she guided her affairs with such discretion that no one could find occasion of offence in her conduct. During her last illness she calmly trusted in the mercy of God, and resigned herself to will. She was entirely delivered from the fear of death, and was patiently waiting till her change should come. She several times spoke of her desire to depart that she might be with Christ; and, at last, while sitting up in her chair, with her family around her, she bowed her head, breathed her last, and thus died in the Lord. Another proof that Christ has robbed the grave of victory, and taken the sting from death.

EMMA HINGLEY.

On the 1st day of December, Emms Hingley, aged 15 years, daughter of Isaac Hingley, of North River, departed this life. Some two years previous to her decease she was led to a knowledge of the truth through the prayers and godly erample of her day-school teacher, Miss McDonald, and though so young in years she continued to show by her matured Christian character that she had "passed from death unto life." She received the sacrament of baptism and the Lord's Supper during the last week of her illness at the hands of the Rev. J. A. Rogers. During some months of physical pros tration through pulmonary disease, ber Christian resignation and triumphant faith excited the love and wonder of all who knew her. Hers was a noble tribute to the sustaining grace of God. Beautiful in life, rejoicing in death she left the impress of her character upon all her young companions. Though "the Rear er" has taken her, as a plant from the gardens of earth, the bereaved parents "Know they shall find their flower again, In the fields of light above.

Through an accident which occured six years ago, she sustained spinal and other injuries. During the intermediate period her life was life of physical suffering. There was in her a remarkable development of the graces of gentleness, amiability, and long-suffering patience. While yet very young she learned to comprehend in sufficient degree what Jesus had done for her. There was a trust in the Saviour, and a well-grounded hope of better things to come, that sustained her in her sufferings, and the memory of which will be to those who loved her dearly and witnessed her triumph in Christ Jesus, an inspira

INTERNATIONAL BIBLE LESSONS. STUDIES IN EARLY

SON XII. PAUL'S LAST WORDS; suithful Unto Death. 2 Tim 4,1-8. mit to memory verses 5-8. Dec. 23.

EXPLANATORY.

CHARGE. Greek, adjure. See Acts 19. 3: Matt. 26, 63. This solemn adjuration his made in view of four distinct motives : 1. God. The all-seeing, omnipotent ruler. 2. Christ Jesus, (the reading of the oldest manuscripts,) and not only because of his love, and his grace, but because he shall judge both the living and the dead. 3. His appearing. The oldest manuscripts read and instead of at. The second coming of Christ is frequently referred to as an incentive to faithfulness. 1 Tim. 6, 14 Col. 3, 4; Titus 2, 13; 1 Cor. 1, 7; 2 Pet. 3, 11, 12, etc. 4. His kingdom. The same incentive is used by Peter. 2 Pet. 1, 10. 11: 3. 13. 14. See how the incentives to faithfulness grow in force: Awe, fear, love, hope. Preach the word. The word rendered preach means literally proclaim, to make known, to announce, as a berald and should not be narrowed down to the use of the clergy. It is the duty of every Christian, as he has opportunity, to proclaim the word, though, of course, it has peculiar emphasis to those who are specially ordained to this work. In season, out of season, whether it is convenient or inconvenient, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear. Reprove, rebuke, exhort. Equally important work, but to be done with all longsuffering, that is, with or in patience, and charity, and doctrine, that is, teaching. Reproof and rebuke are to be used for the purpose of instruction, and not in petulant fault-

THEY. The church at Ephesus, or members of it. That this prophecy was soon fulfilled is shown by Rev. 2, 2. Sound doctrine. The word translated doctrine is not the same as in verse 2. There it means what is communicated, here what is received. The first step in apostasy is the dislike of sound teaching. After their own lusts. Self-gratification preferred to obedience. Any selfish desire leads away from God. Heap. The idea is of a number of teachers-one on another-the love of variety. He who tires of the truth has itching ears; is restless, uneasy, running continually after novelty; preferring away and shall be turned. Not an arbitrary punishment, but the natural result. He who forsakes the truth, must turn to fables, for there is no other ground. Witness the fables invented by an apostate church since that time.

WATCH THOU. Implying both wakefulness and sobriety. It is a time for particular watchfulness when false doctrines are gaining ground. In all things. Overlook nothing which the enemy may do, however small. Endure afflictions. Let no hardships deter you; be patient under suffering; be steadfast. Do the work. Be earnest, energetic, untiring. Evangelist. Literally, one who announces good. A preacher of the Gospel. Full proof. Leave nothing undone-fulfill all the requirements of the ministry-furnish full evidence of faithfulness. There is no better proof of a call to the ministry than success in the work.

READY TO BE OFFERED. Poured out as a libation. As in sacrifices, libations of wine were poured upon the offerings, so his blood was to be poured out. Departure. Literally, loosing anchor. Death to the apostle was but setting sail for the heavenly country. He uses the same figure in Phil. 1, 23. Fought a good fight, Greek, "striven a good strife." The image does not change from the battle-field to the race-course, but is the same. Having striven in the good contest, he has finished his course. He has arrived at the gaol. charged Timothy to keep that good thing which was committed to him, and he now encourages him by the fact that he had kept it.

LAID UP. Greek, set apart, as in the foot-races the olive-wreath crown was set apart to be presented to the winner Crown of righteousness. See the highpriest's crown of Holiness to the Lord, (Exod. 39, 30,) which was to be a sign of acceptance, (Exod. 28, 38,) and compare Rev. 1, 6; 5, 10; 20, 6. At that day. The day of his appearing. Chap. 1, 12, 18. Compare 2 Pet. 3, 10; 2 Thess. 1, 10. All them that love. Greek, " have loved, and do love," showing persevering continuance of love. His appearing. "Unto them that look for him," shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb.

THE PRESBYTERIANS AND THE CHURCH.

A somewhat interesting and important discussion, arising out of the proposal to teach Fpiscopal formularies of faith in non-episcopal day-schools, has been carried on for some time in the Irish Ecclusiastical Gazette and The Witness. The Rev. Dr. Watts, a Presbyterian Professor of Theology, stated publicly that to teach the doctrines of episcopal standards respecting the nature and effects of baptism is to teach the fundamental principals of Popery. For this assertion he was taken to task by the Revs. Dr. King Irwin, and Dr. Duke, both Episcopalians, who, more over, undertook to prove that the Westminster standards teach exactly the same doctrines in regard to the subject formularies. Dr. Watts has replied at considerable length, and the following extract from an appendix to one of his letters will show the pronounced position he has taken up, and the strong language he is free to use:-" As already stated, the two catechisms represent two theories of the way of salvation. According to the Episcopal, saving grace reaches the sinner in the first instance, through the sacrament of baptism; according to the Westminster, no man is to be baptised until he is in possession of saving grace. The former is the Popish doctrine; the latter is the doctrine of the Bible."-Irish correspondent London Methodist.

HOW THE FRENCH WORKMAN LIVES.

The French laborer probably gets more for his wages than any other. His food is cheaper and more nourishing. His bouillion is the liquid essence of beaf at a penny per bowl. His bread at the restaurant is thrown in without any charge, and is the best bread in the world. His hot coffee and milk is peddled about the streets in the morning at a sou per cup. It is coffee not slops. His half bottle of claret is thrown in at the meal costing twelve cents. The Jardin des Plantes, the vast galleries and museums of the Louvre, Hotel Cluny, palace of the Luxembourg and Versailles, are free for him to enter. Art and science hold out to him their choicest treasures at small cost, or no cost at all. French economy and frugality do not mean that constant retrenchment and self-denial which would deprive life of everything which makes it worth living for. Economy in France, more than in any other country, means a utilization of what America throws away, but it does not mean a pinching process of reducing life to barren existence of work and

One of the troubles in order to uniformity in the worship of the Presbyterian Church is to get the people to stand during prayer. It seems that in the Methodist Episcopal Church one of the dif ficulties is to have the people stand while singing. Therefore, at the Akron District Preachers' Institute the clergymen were requested to use their ' influence to have the congregations uniformly rise and stand dusing singing in public service."-Presbyterian Banner.

Yes, ever since the Eden fall, church tanding has been a trouble. And yet we presume letters of "good standing" will continue to be given by both Presbyterians and Methodists whenever the sovereign squatters require such testimonials. Pittsburg Recorder,

A MOST REMAR KAPLE CURE.

Tonganozie, Lewenworth Cb., Kan., April 2, 1876; SETH S. HANCE,—Dear Sir:—The Epleptic Pills that I received from you last September have accomplished all that you recommended them to do. My son is hearty, stout, and robust; he is as hearty as any child in Kansas—indeed he is in the manner a new boy, being red and rosy. Before he commenced taking your Pills he was a very pale and delicate looking child, and had Epileptic Fits for about four years, and seeing your Pills advertised in the Christian Instructor. I sent to you and got two boxes of them, and he has net had a fit since he commenced taking them; he has been exposed to all changes of weather in going to school and on the farm, and he has not had a Fit nor a sympton of one since he commenced taking your Pills. He learns well at school, and his mind is clear and quick. I feel that you are not sufficiently paid for the service and benefit you have been to us in restoring our child to health. I will cheerfully recommend your Pills to every one I hear of that is afflicted with Epilepsy. Please send me some of your circulars, so that I can send them to any that I hear of that is afflicted in that way.

OUR RAILWAYS AS AN INDEX OF PROVINCIAL PROSPERITY.

Twenty years make but a short period in national history. It will be found on comparison that twenty years have made marvellous changes in the Maritime Provinces. An impartial study of the past quarter of a century would effectually silence those who see among us only decline and coming ruin. And in no branch of our public enterprise is this change more marked than in our railways. This, of course, means that the Provinces have advanced with wonderful strides in other respects; for railways are the arteries of a country's wealth.

In 1858 the writer came west on a visit from Newfoundland. Before leaving for that Island he had been an interested observer of the great railway debate which began in the Legislature, and culminated at the elections, particularly the election in Cumberland. His return trip introduced him to the first-fruits of that agitation. A railway train, consisting of a single passenger-car, and one or two for freight conveyed him from Halifax to Truro. The renowned Mr. Murray, still a veteran servant of the Government in railway affairs, was conductor, brakesman, freight-master, porter, and, for aught we know, the occupant of other offices as well. That constituted the railway property of Nova Scotia. Link after link has since then added, till now we hold railway connection with all parts of the Continent, and have just despatched an authorized delegate to invite Western commerce to make our railways the chief highway of the Dominion to the trade with Great Britain A better-equipped, better-managed railway, one more pleasant and speedy and safe, than the Intercolonial, we have not seen, though our opportunities of experience and observation in travel have been wide and varied. Ordinarily there are from thirty to forty trains a day passing between Halifax and other places, in the summer season at least. It has been brought out in recent discussion, that the freight traffic on this road has increased be youd what was at least, ten years to come. Toward the East, a fine railway, ed by them for the admission of pupils or two ago from the proceedings of the

to Pictou, is pushing out its connections toward Cape Breton. A railway, built from Halifax to Windsor years ago, was extended to Annapolis by a private company, securing transit thence to St. John by swift and powerful steamers. New life is to be infused into this road by further extension to Yarmouth, through the energy of another company, which is manifestly destined to open a grand thoroughfare to the United States. A railway is also gradually forming itself across the country, from the heart of Annapolis Valley toward the fine LaHave River, a branch whose tributaries will include in time, besides the Mines traffic they were designed to open up, connection with now somewhat remote counties on the sea-board. From Londonderry to Parrsboro' also the iron horse has found a highway; while of railways, in imagination and on paper, Nova Scotia holds immense property!

New Brunswick is even more ambitious and determined in railway enterprise than Nova Scotia. Its noble St. John River would have sufficed in other ages for the purposes of traffic; but the modern man of business becomes impatient with any facilities short of those provided by the most advanced science. Hence, competing with steam by water, and far outstripping it in fact, steam by land is carrying the pulsations of trade along and beyond the river, helping to open to agriculture some of the richest soil and to the lumbermen the finest material on the continent. The railway from St. John to Shediac has always been regarded as a most substantial public work. It is fair to assume, from all present appearances, that New Brunswick will, before many years, so tap the lines of commerce with the West. that it will have its own "Intercolonial," and draw off much of the traffic passing Eastward toward to its own seaboard.

Prince Edward Island is passing through the first stages of railway experience. To outside observers who have paid any attention to railway history, there is very little force in the complaints which reach them as to railway affairs on that prosperous Island. As the railway continues it will stimulate trade, and as trade accumulates the railway will improve.

Altogether, we are inclined to take new stock in this our adopted country. It is improving. It is improving rapidly—quite as rapidly as is consistent with a due regard to the security of commerc and wealth, but at the same time so manifestly, that only a mind under the cloud and the shadow can fail to see and acknowledge it with

THE HALIFAX HIGH SCHOOL.

The want of a proper connecting link between the common schools and the colleges was for years severely felt in Halifax. As a result of the persevering efforts of many of our citizens, who felt an interest in the matter, we have the High School as at present constituted. No one can deny that the gentlemen in charge of the School, as teachers, are able and enthusiastic educationists, and that they are doing excellent work, but, at the same time, an examination of the manner in which the school is managed cannot fail to convince the enquirer that it is by no means the ideal High School for which the citizens were led to hope. In the first place we object in toto to the principle of charging fees. It is opposed entirely to the spirit and genius of the public school system. The Chronicle, and, if we rightly remember, the newspaper press of the city generally, pointed out this objectionable feature on the opening of the school. Again, the High School should have a department for girls, or rather there should be a separate High School for them. For these things, however, the School Commissioners are not directly responsible, as the Act provides for the admission of paying male pupils to the school on certain conditions, and does not provide for the admission of girls. But we are most decidedly of the opinion that the Commissioners thought a very thorough capacity, for, are by no means carrying out the spirit and letter of the law in the mode adopt-

The subjects embraced in this latter examination are Geography, Grammar and Analysis, Composition, Arithmetic, History of Nova Scotia and of Great Britain, Algebra and Geometry; and in order to pass, the candidates must make an average of 70 per cent., no paper falling below 50 per cent. Now, let us compare these tests, which the pupils must pass in order to gain admission to the High School. with those required of their teachers, in order to obtain license from the Provincial Laminers. The following conditions must be fulfilled in order to entitle candidates to Teachers' Licenses of the various grades, the marking being on a maximum of 100.

Average of marks, 50 or upwards. 2. Average in Greek, 37-50 or upwards. Average in Latin, 50 or upwards. No mark in English branches further mis-spelled. In every case an addition of 5 is made to the average for every word less than 6 mis-spelled.

We believe the same system of marking for Teachers' Licenses is followed in New Brunswick; and, as far as we know, an average of 50 per cent. is the pass standard in all college examinations. _

We think we have clearly shown that an unusually high standard of attainment is required of those who wish to avail themselves of the advantages of the free scholarships. The commonsense view of the case is for the pupils, up to the number of thirty, who are most proficient in the public schools, to be admitted to the High School. Were this done, much dissatisfaction would be removed, and the interests of education would be promoted. We would also suggest that steps be taken to secure, at the next session of the Legislature, the passage of a clause abolishing fees. Then the Government allowances, to which the High School teachers' grades of license would entitle them, and also the County allowance for that school, would be available by the Board. We presume there is no income from these sources under the present arrangement. Much praise is due the Board of Commissioners for the improvement they have effected in our educational affairs, and for overcoming the difficulties connected with opening the High School. Let us hope there will be no relaxation of their efforts until the youth of both sexes in Halifax bave within their reach the advantages of a High School training free of charge.

can be done by only one or two methods. Where any disposition really exists to build up a church on the rightful erritory of other denominations (supposing, of course, that the pastors in such territory are capable of supplying all the reasonable demands of the people), an appeal to some organization such as the Evangelical Alliance, might help to bring matters to a better condition. Certainly an habitual interloper ought not to be countenanced by the pastors of the evangelical bodies. Let him cease his pilfering propensities or learn honest company. We write thus decisively, as we are conscious of a pure record among our own brethren, at least, as compared with the average of Christian ministers. On the other throw aspersions upon their neighmaking unfounded charges against active and useful men as an apology for their own laziness or inefficiency, by the code of Christian good manners they ought to be shut out from the amenities of brotherly inter-

THE PROFESSIONS.—For the benefit of the hundreds of young men who are qualifying themselves for professional life, we hope to give, beginning with the new year, a series of articles, written by experienced representative men, in which the various callings open to our youth, will be treated from an independent and intelligent standpoint. What are the inducements or discouragements, the rewards and the dangers, as well as the necessary qualifications required in each instance? These are questions which ought to be fully discussed, inasmuch as the minds of many sons and their guardians find them pressing perpetually upon their attention. In what direction shall our young men move? and what are the probabilities which the professions present to them? We hope to see these enquiries met in a practical, popular way. By the professions, we mean the several callings which require education and direct preparatory training for a distinct social position.

We are happy to be in a position to afford writers on this subject a wide field for the dissemination of their views, as our circulation is extensive in all the Maritime Provinces.

He described scenes he himself had witnessed of the degrading effects produced by Rum; and he remarked upon the apathy and indifference of the upper classes of society to the evil. and he drew as a lesson the need of persevering effort on the part of moral reformers. The effort was listened to with great attention, and a vote of thanks tendered him at the close. Jno. Fawcett, Esq., presided.—Sackville Post.

MR. Young in St. John.—We cannot do more this week than indicate that this distinguished messenger of the Eastern Churches has been spending some days in St. John, with excellent results. We hope next week to epitomize those incidents or expressions of information which may be reported in Mr. Young's speeches, that have not already appeared in our columns. CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SIX DAYS OF CREATION.

To the Editor of the Wesleyan: Sir,-A writer in the Christian Messenger of last week, over the letters J. M. C., has advo-theory in Dr. Dawson's book, "On the Origin of the World," that the six days commonly understood, but six separate and vast periods of time, "probably millions of years." In opposition to this fictitious and false theory, and in vindication of divine revelation, I will here transcribe a few passages of Scripture, which plainly show that these days of creation mean the ordinary days of 24 hours each, and in no other way can be Scripturally or truly understood. It is a subject which, for decision, rests exclusively on the plain meaning of the words of Scripture. The first passage I submit is the following in Gen. 1, 4, 5. "And God divided the light from the darkness; and God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night; and the evening and the morning were the first day." In these few Scripture lines there are three expressions which clearly show that the literal day of 24 hours is meant, and that no other meaning can be admitted. First. the division between light and darkness; next, calling one portion day, and the other night; and thirdly, the words "the evening and the morning were the first day." The same words, "evening and morning," are applied to each of the other five days of creation. A further proof of the literal meaning is afforded in v. 14 of the Ch. "And God said, let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven, to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs and for seasons, and for days and years." Here there are four expressions, showing the same literal and common meaning. First, the lights to divide the day from the night; next, "let them be for seasons," as some commentators say for sacred festivals, and others for months; and next the words, " for days"; and fourthly the words "and years." Now it is manifest that none of these precise expressions in any of these Scripture passages can, with any propriety or sensible meaning, be applied to that theory of millions of years, or vast ages, for each of the Scripture days of creation. But further, the following words in the fourth commandment are conclusive in showing that the word day is to be taken in its common meaning:—" Six days shalt seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, * * * For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day, wherefore the Lord blessed the days of work are to be considered as vast

M. C. are about as bad as the book, if not worse. All true Scriptural Christians will treat the book and the advice with the censure and rejection they deserve. He says that "science in its discoveries and details should have a higher place assigned to it by educated men-secular and ecclesiastical-and that some of them seem afraid of it, and should be better taught." Such erroneous and pernicious teachings as J. M. C. would give concerning creation had better be avoided. I challenge him to preduce any Scripture or other valid proof of that vast period theory of creation. I remain, Mr. Editor, Yours respectfully, JOHN G. MARSHALL.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

Dear Brother: - It is probable that at this season of the year there is more reflection and anticipation than at other times. Our reviewing extends, not only to the scenes, joyous and grievous, of the year that is closing, but to historical facts which took place many centuries ago. The great thoughts, which crowd in upon our minds, concerning the incarnation of the Son of God, seem not to lose their interest, in the yearly repetition of

Recently that building was sold at public auction, or as Joseph Cook put it, in the prelude to one of his lectures. "Thomas Paine has recently been sold at auction in Boston." Henceforth that substantial structure, will not proclaim the influence of the "Age of reason." or its erring author. "The name of the wicked shall rot."

REPLY TO THE PRESBYTERY OF MIRAMICHI.

NOT "GUILTY."

MR. EDITOR.—The extract taken from the report of matters in the Presbytery of Miramichi, in which the Methodists appear to be seriously implicated, demands a plain statement of the facts from the parties accused. To ignorance of facts can be traced much of the unpleasantness existing between individuals and churches, and upon this ground alone can our charity cover the statement of the writer It is matter of devout gratitude to God, in the "Presbyterian Witness." For the world, during the year, we are enabled, the facts relating to the building of this reward of $25 for information that will le church, as given by the missionary instrumental in its erection: "When I first spoke to the people about building a church at Exuminac, I told them it would be open to any minister, who might be there at any time, to hold service in, when we were not using it, and with that understanding the people were agreed to make the property over to the Methodist Church, which they did." It was my pleasing duty to dedicate the church to the service of God. At the request of the Trustees, who hold the church according to the conditions on which it was built-a Methodist Church, but open to any evangelical minister, who may desire to occupy it, in the absence of the minister on the circuit. In this sense, and in none other, could the contributors to the building of this church consider it a Union Church. Neither do I in St. John, it is proposed by the members to know of one, who in any way assisted in erecting that church, dissatisfied with the action of the Trustees, in the matter to > which your extracts referred. The unkind reference to the Methodists. in the report of the Presbytery, can only be accounted for from the fact that about two years ago, by the request of the settlers at the mouth of the River, a Methodist missionary was sent to labour among them, which has resulted in the gathering of several congregations, and the erection of the church of which the worshippers are justly proud. While we are thankful to the great Head of the church for all the success with which he has ever crowned the labours of the missionaries of the Methodist Church, we would assure our sister churches that we still adhere to the motto of our venerable founder, "The friend of all, the enemy of none."

One of the amendments proposed to the Medical Act at the coming Session of the Legislature is to require all medical schools in the Province to give a ten months course of lectures each year, and this is particularly designed to apply to the new branches of Laval University to be established in Montreal. The amendment is likely to be opposed, it is feared, by McGill and Bishop's College.

The "Free Press" Battleford special says two traders arrived from the Cypress Hills with a petition to the Lieut.-Governor, requesting that they be put on the same terms with the Indians in regard to the killing of buffalo for this year. Their request was granted. They report buffalo plentiful on this side, south of Saskatchewan. The Blackfeet are very much alarmed at the attitude assumed by Sitting Bull, and fears are entertained of trouble. Sitting Bull says he would like to know when the Almighty gave the Canadian Government authority to keep the Indians from killing buffalo. A schooner called the Rock, of Carbonear, Nfid., Captain Kineally, with over fifty souls, men, women and children on board, left Cape Charles, Labrador, on her return voyage, on Oct. 14th for Carbonear, and hos not since been heard of. There is no longer a shadow of hope regarding the ill-fated vessel, which must have foundered at sea in one of the heavy gales which prevailed at the time. She was in ballast, and but poorly prepared to encounter storms. The apprehensions regarding her are confirmed by reports received from vessels recently rrrived, stating that they had passed a vessel about her size on her with their wives and children on board, who had spent their hard-won earnings were returning to their homes. ONE DAY.

Thoughts, serious thoughts, come to me when I reflect on an answer made by an aged man.

He was in a strange city, and had been about the streets all the day. Evening came and found him at a friend's teatable. Bright was the room. Warm was the glow of the red coals in the grate-Bountifully was the table spread; and voices blended with the click of china and the music of the silver.

Around the table was gathered the old the middle aged and the young, each contributing their part to the conversation. One vieing with another in imparting the latest local tit bit; another touching on the latest news from the seat of war; another sorrowfully speaking of the recent death of a talented minister, and glancing off to the condition of Pope Pius.

Thus the minutes went on, carrying good cheer, and social conversation slackened not but became by me disregarded as I thought on the words spoken by our guest. He was asked how he enjoyed the day, "Oh!" said he, while his face light. ed up with a glad smile, " It is another day of life lived." Another day lived; and I interpreted the words and the smile. There rushed to my memory the words

"I am nearer my home to-day Than I ever have been before. Nearer my Father's house, Where many mansions be, Nearer the great white throne, Nearer the crystal sea."

To that old man another day bad brought nearer the time when he should leave the cross and take up the crown.

Another day gone from every life. An other day's opportunities passed away. God and the human alone know how many have passed unimproved. Another day's record entered on high. Oh! If the bright page be stained by our sin. If over the entry angels in pity and sorrow bend; what an awful point of time has the day been for us. There is a sweet thought, worked out by one of our poets, that each day two angels are sent to note our actions and be the messenger from earth to heaven. One bends to see the good thought frame itself in word or act and instantly bears the news away to the recording angel on high. The other pauses until the gates of day olose, ere, with darkened, blackened page it ascends with its account of our wickedness. All the day he waits below, that perchance the sight of regret, the tear of repentance may warrant the erasure of the sad stain from the white page.

Oh these days and moments so quickly flying; blending the living with the dead Let us pause and think, and then live them that each may shine more and more unto the perfect day. E. M.

SAFETY TO MEN.

MRS. M. L. ALLISON, A. M.

To be identified with any philanthropic organization is ennobling and praiseworthy, but to be associated with an enterprise which has for its object not merely the good of society, but the intellectual and moral elevation of mankind is inspiring to the heart of the christian. We would not detract anything from the good accomplished by | urge all the lovers of humanity to gird | crowns, and accordingly the hat was the varied christian and benevolent associations which are so zealously sustained by many of the best and most gifted men and women in every land. Yet, in this age of luxury and indulgence, the cause of temperance forces its way into the foremost rank and puts forth the Macedonian cry to every lover of his race, "come over and help us."

The laborers in this noble work are not satisfied with partially arresting the evil of intemperance; they are looking for its final overthrow and complete extirpation. They have formerly Free Press. found ample scope for argument and a fruitful source of illustration in the bar-room, and the wretched home of the inebriate where misery reigns, and where the heart-broken wife and mother weeps in bitterness and solicitude. But the time appears to have arrived in the progress of temperance when in addition to the ordinary means of its advancement, some other more potent energy must be employed. This is needed to stimulate the workers to renewed energy, and greater activity, and to throw around the erring and reclaimed that protection which in his weakness he so much needs. We have laws guarding the lives and property of the inhabitants of every civilized country, and the violation of these laws when infringing upon the rights of others is justly punished. The Romans had prohibition laws. They permitted no official to use wine: women were not allowed to drink in any form, nor young women under thirty years of age. The Roman Censors could expel a senator for being intoxicated.

The indiscriminate use of fire-arms is prohibited at the present time, and no one wearing any deadly weapon dare exhibit it in the light of day. The pharmaceutist is forbidden to sell any drug which, taken to excess, is destructive to human life, without labelling it poison, and yet in almost every drug-store are private bars, and in retired places are sample rooms, inviting both young and old who have not the courage to enter the public saloon, to partake of that which, like the poisonous Upas tree, spreads its deadly influence on all who come under its power.

The question naturally arises, what is this powerful agency? Cannot licenses for the sale of intoxicants be raised so high as to compell the many who are thus employed to give it up and enter into some more honorable mode of gaining a livelihood. We reply, this might mitigate, but it would not destroy the evil. There will always be some avaricious men found, who know the great gain arising from the sale of ardent spirits, and whose consciences have been benumbed or destroyed by the use of this lethean poison who will still sell it at any cost, and while the appetite of the habitual drinker remains vitiated he will sacrifice everything to gratify that appetite. The old Greek philosopher who said that "intoxication was a brief madness." well understood the frailty of human nature, and if this is true that the reason of the inebriate is dethroned temporally, then we should guard him as a diseased or insane man from doing himself or others harm. There is no. time for dalliance in this matter. The criminals who fill our prisons and the thousands who die annually, unpitied and unblest, call in thunder tones for a prohibitory law forbidding the manu. facture and sale of this demoralizing and soul-destroying poison. This is the powerful archemedian lever which can alone bring this great nation to occupy such a position, both morally and commercially, among the nations of the earth, as the great and supreme ruler of the universe designs it to occupy. Then may it truthfully be said of her, "Happy are the people who are in such a case, yea, happy are the people whose God is the Lord." To this final result everything is rapidly tending, the augmenting influence of the friends of temperance combined with the powerful instrumentality of the press are educating the popular vote. and ere long we shall have a congress like that of a century ago, the members of which, fully alive to the true interests of their constituents, and forgetful of self, will add to their present inimitable code one more law prohibiting the on the armor anew and nerve themselves to this great work, taking for their motto and watchword the noble sentiment of the great Cicero. " Homines ad Deos multa re proprius accedunt quam salutem hominibus claudo." Men in no particular approach so nearly to the Gods as by giving safety to men.

While the principles of our action remain unchanged, we must vary the plan of attack and wield every variety of weapon against this formidable and wily foe .- Northwestern Teetotaler and

A SPEECH BY SPURGEON.

HOW A HEAVEN-INSPIRED MISER HELPED HIM TO HIS FIRST TALL HAT.

(From the London Telegraph.) At an entertainment recently given to the London butchers at the Tabernacle, Mr. Spurgeon made one of his characteristic addresses. He said that there was one virtue which he thought was attained by all speakers, yet very few ever reached it, and that was the virtue of being short in their addresses. All speeches might be short if the speakers liked, but very many of them did not, especially those who had noth. ing at all to say, who always found it necessary to say it at extreme length. hoping that something might at last come of it. He (Mr. Spurgeon), however, would endeavor to get the virtue of brevity, and would speak to them on the religion of Jesus Christ. They knew that there was nothing like experience in this matter. Sometimes he suffered from rheumatism, and he had received more than one hundred different remedies; they were all "infallible," but he had never tried them. Those, however, came with the greatest force in which the sender intimated that he had tried them, for it was the most forcible example to be used. He had tried the religion of Jesus Christ for many years, and it had delivered his conscience from a great deal of trouble, and kept him from doing wrong. If they did a good action it would brighten their windows and make their eyes to shine. When a boy he was very much afraid of becoming drunkard, and wanted something to insure his character to keep him "square." He thought he could be mended up, but the more he looked the more he gave up the hope till at last he found out that God made men new. That suited him admirably, and he was made a new creature. Things he had once loved he then hated, and those he had previously hated he loved. There was nothing like a change of nature when it was wanted for then they cheerfully did what otherwise they could not have done. He trusted they might have deliverance from care, which was a horrible thing. He knew people who had a "trouble manufactory" in their back-yard. He knew a good many men who were always fretting; they could not help it; but he earnestly trusted that those present would have deliverance from care. When he was a very young man of sixteen he was minister of a chapel. Rather young to begin, yet he had a fine large house, full of between 500 and 600 besides those who used to be outside the doors and windows. His salary was £45 a year, not "all found," but you found yourself. He had to find himself a good suit of black, go about like a gentlemen with nothing in his pocket, yet he never wanted, for he was God's servant. The other day he was down in that village where he preached, and was told that the biggest "screw" who ever lived had recently died. This man came down from up-stairs to die, in order that no one could earn sixpence by removing him. He directed he should be buried in his own garden to save expense, and was never known to give anything away in his life. He interrupted his informant and told him that this man on one occasion gave him money. He wanted a new hat to look decent in on Sundays. In the country if one did not wear a respectable hat his reputation was at stake; but he never wore a tall hat now, for his reputation was established and he could wear any hat he liked.

Well, upon this occasion he wanted to buy a respectable hat, and where the money was to come from he did not know. Une day this " screw " of a man Till this is accomplished we would squeezed into his hands three half-bought. On the following Sunday this monster of covetousness said to him, "I am afraid of being covetous, but the Lord told me to give you half a sovereign, and I stopped half a crown out of it. Pray, take the other half a crown; I cannot sleep at night without you have it." He took the half crown to ease the man's couscience, and God, who knew that he wanted the hat. made that old gentleman "fork out" that 10 shillings.

SELDOM has a more crowded or excited audience been assembled in the Cambridge Senate-house than that which gathered last Saturday afternoon, when the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred on Mr. Charles Darwin. The undergraduates, who mustered in force, had an exceptionally grand day. On the entrance of the distinguished man of science, in whose honour the assembly was convened, they greeted him with an uproarious burst of applause, in the midst of which an imitation monkey-to represent the species to which, according to popular belief, Mr. Darwin ascribes the origin of the human race-cleverly attired in academic garb. made its appearance in the centre of the building, suspended by a string stretching from one gallery to the other. A representation of the "missing link" was similarly displayed. A proctor at once rushed to one of the galleries, and made a dash for the monkey. In the struggle which ensued, the unoffending creature fell to the ground, and was easily secured by another official. The "missing link," however, remained conspicuous, and while the public orator was delivering his introductory address it was suspended over Mr. Darwin's head. The usual Latin speech, though at first interrupted by "chaff" from the galleries, was very well received; and when it was concluded, the Vice-Chancellor conferred the degree with the accustomed ceremony. By the special honour thus conferred, the University of Cambridge has publicly recognized the claim to distinction of a laborious and able scientist, whom his friend Profess. or Huxley has described as "the foremost among men of science, with one exception, since the days of Aristotle." This encomium we may hardly be prepared to endorse, and from some of the views of the famous author of the "Descent of Man" we may be permitted to dissent; yet we cannot but feel that the ability and influence acquired by Dr. Darwin are such as to claim recognition and respect from the ancient seat of learning which he owns as his alma mater.-London Recorder.

A SIMPLE WAY OF VENTILATING ROOMS.

Dr. H. N. Dodge informs us that he has found the following plan very satisfactory for the ventilation of rooms that are used during cold weather: Nail or screw a neat strip of wood, from one to two inches high, upon the window sill, just inside of the sash and extending entirely across from one side of the window frame to the other. Upon the top of this strip fasten a piece of ordinary "weather strip," so that there will be formed an air-tight joint between the "weather-strip" and the lower sash of the window, whether the latter is shut down tight or raised an inch or two, the lower cross-piece of the sash siiding on the rubber of the "weatherstrip" as the sash rises. With this simple fixture in place, the lower sash may be raised enough to admit a stream of air between the lower and upper sashes, where they lap over each other at the middle of the window, without admitting the least air at the window sill. The air admitted between the sashes is thrown directly up toward the ceiling, and there mixes with the heated air at the upper part of the room. The room is thereby ventilated in a thorough and agreeable manner without drafts of cold air upon the persons in the room. The fixture should be applied to several windows in a room. The amount of ventilation may be regulated by the distance that the lower sash is raised. This arrangement is cheap, simple and ef-

The Method of the Quaker in dealing with the atheist is a good one. Said the latter : "Did you ever see God?" "No." "Did you ever feel God?" "No." "Did you ever smell God." "No." "Do you believe that there is any God?" The quaker then asked the infidel; "Friend, did thee ever see thy brains?" "No." "Did thee ever feel thy brains?" "No." "Did thee ever smell thy brains?" "No" Do thee think thee has any brains?"

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

BETTER IN THE MORNING.

'You can't help the baby, parson, But still I want ye to go Down an' look in upon her. An' read an' pray, you know. Only last week she was skippin' round A pullin' my whiskers and hair A climbin' up to the table Into her little high chair.

The first night that she took it, When her little cheeks grew red, When she kissed good night to papa, And went away to bed-Sez she, ''Tis headache, papa, Be better in mornin'—bye; An' somethin' in how she said it Just made me want to cry.

But the mornin' brought the fever. And her little hands were bot, An' the pretty red uv her little cheeks Grew into a crimson spot. But she laid there just as patient Ez ever a woman could. Takin' whatever we give her Better'n a grown woman would.

The days are terrible long an slow. An' she's growing' wus in each: An' now she's jest a slippin' Clear away out uv our reach. Every night when I kiss her, Tryin' hard not to cry, Be better in morning'-bye!'

She can't get thro' the night parson. So I want ye to come and pray, And talk with mother a little-You'll know just what to say, Not that the baby needs it, Nor that we make any complaint That God seems to think He's needin' The smile uv the little saint.'

Night falls again in the cottage ; They move in silence and dread Around the room where the baby Lies panting upon her bed. Does baby know papa, darling?" And she moves her little face, With answer that shows she knows him: But scarcely a visible trace.

Of her wonderful infantile beauty Remains as it was before The unseen, silent messenger Had waited at the door. Papa-kiss-baby ; I's-so tired." The man bows low his face, And two swollen hands are lifted In baby's last embrace.

And into her father's grizzled beard The little red fingers cling, While her husky whispered tenderness Tears from a rock would wring Baby-is-so-so-sick-papa-But-don't-want-you-to-cry!" The little hands fall on the coverlet-Be-better-in-mornin'-bye!"

And night around the baby is falling Settling down dark and dense: Does God need their darling in heaven That he must carry her hence? prayed, with tears in my voice, As the corporal solemnly knelt, With grief such as never before His great warm heart had felt.

Oh! frivolous men and women Do you know that around you, and nigh, Alike from the humble and haughty Goeth up evermore the cry; My child, my precious darling, How can I let you die ?" Oh! hear ye the white lips whisper-

BY CLARA G. DOLLIVER.

The car was full of passengers when Trot and her mother got in, every one of whom stopped reading or talking and gazed at the small midget with surprise and disapprobation. Both were quite thrown away upon her, however; for her eyes were shut as tightly as possible, while her mouth was wide open, ditto; and from between her rosy lips, from somewhere behind two rows of pearly teeth, issued a series of determined yells, ear-splitting yells, which did credit to Trot's lungs.

all of passengers when ther got in, every one reading or talking and Il midget with surprise tion. Both were quite pon her, however; for hut as tightly as posmouth was wide open, between her rosy lips, e behind two rows of ssued a series of deterar-splitting yells, which rot's lungs.

and "No, I never!" to one another, varied by other remarks relating to Trot, them uttered in tones sufficiently d for the Midget's mother to hear, she stood in the centre of the car. swaying to and fro, clinging to a strap with one hand, while with the other she steadied the yeller, who was devoted to her occupation so entirely that she might have pitched headforemost into the stomach of the fat old lady who sat opposite had she not somebody to care for her.

The wicked man who was the cause of all this trouble walked slowly up the hill, keeping pace with the car, and crying "Balloons! Balloons!" in a melancholy tone, as if he commiserated the hapless Trot in having such a hard hearted mamma.

For the midget wanted a balloon She was a pretty good midget, and might not have asked for one had not the man, having a keen eye for business. thrust the whole bunch of rosy beauties into her face, saying, "Buy a balloon missy? Oh, so pretty!"

Her mother pulled her along, and distracted her attention with something else; but the man had seen the wish in " missy's" eye, and kept up with them. Business was slack, and he felt that no chance was to be lost. It had not escaped his sharp eye that Miss Trot was a spoiled child and generally had what she wanted, by making a fuss about it. According to his expectations she teased a few times and then began to scream. "Hush, this moment!" said her mother, severely. Trot screamed louder

"I shall take you right home, if you do not stop, said her mother, who had been recently reading an article on indulgence of children, and resolved to reform. Trot did not believe it, and determined to have her own way now.

"Trot, stop screaming!" "Will you buy me a balloon?"

"No, I will not!"

"Will you give me one?"-to the "Oh, missy! I'm a poor man!" he said, with a dreadful whine. She opened her mouth, and began again with fresh zeal; her mother look ed determined but distressed, hailed a street car and got in, where she felt less determined and more distressed by the remarks which the midget's behavior

"Trot, are you going to stop screaming?" she said, at length.

Trot opened one eye, looking straight at her mother and said, viciously,

"No, I ain't!" Proving her sincerity by the vigor of the opening numbers of the new series.

Just at this moment a tall woman who had been eying trot with great disfavor left the car, making a vacant seat to the fat old lady; Mrs. Yale took it with a sigh, and lifted her naughty girl into her lap.

The old lady, who had an eye like a diamond, looked with great interest on her new neighbor. Trot was getting tired, but was determined to gain her point if she had to scream until midnight. After a while the old lady said. in a soft, sweet, grandmotherly voice, "what's the trouble, my dear."

Trot had been trained to politeness, so she opened one eye, and gasped, between two yells, "I want a balloon!" "Oh!" said the old lady, "and you mean to scream until you get one!" The midget did not exactly approve of this way of putting it, but, after a moments's pause, she nodded assent, and then opening her mouth to its widest extent she prepared to go on with her concert.

"If I was your mamma," continued the old lady, still in the same sweet voice, "I would give you something that you want a great deal more than a halloon." "What?" said the midget, much interested, now opening her eyes to their widest extent.

"A good whipping!" said the old lady emphatically.

Trot sat up strait, the very picture of indignant astonishment.

"My mamma never whipped me in my life!" she said.

"So I thought!" said the old lady, ple whispered, "Did you ever?" drily. A quiet grin went round the car: even Mrs. Yale, though she felt much annoyed, could not suppress a smile, which threatened to turn into a tear when Trot added, patting her cheeks. she's too good, she is!"

" Why, you don't love your mamma, do you?" exclaimed the old lady, in a tone of surprise. "Of toarse!" said Trot.

"I was quite sure you did not, from your actions," said the old lady.

"I was bad then, now I'm sorry," said the midget soberly. "Oh!" returned the old lady. "Well, my dear, I am going to buy a balloon, and give it to the best little girl in the car. Who ought to have it, do you

The midget looked carefully through the car; there is but one little girl there besides herself-a dirty, freckled. round-eyed, Irish woman's baby sat on her mother's knee in the corner, staring placidly before her; the midget looked at her for a moment, and then gazed long and attentively at her own pretty pink shoes. Meanwhile, the old lady signalled the balloon man, and when they arrived at the crossing, where the car stopped a moment, she made the necessary purchase.

"Here, my dear," she said, handing to Trot, "Give it to the very best little girl in the car. On who loves her mamma, remember."

Trot looked at it for a moment, not admiringly, but with a face as grave as a deacon's; then she slid off her mother's lap, and tumbling up the car someway, until she reached the corner, she put the string into the Irish baby's little red fist, and turning about tumbled back to her mother again.

"You are a dear little girl!" said the old lady warmly; several heads nodded assent, and an approving murmur went around the car; before it had ceased they had reached their destinanation and departed, the midget throwing kisses from her tiny fingers, and saying "Good bye!" over and over to the old lady, while the round-eved Irish baby looked like a petrified image of joyful surprise. -S. MONTREAL, March 1, 1877 MESSES. T. GRAHAM & SON.

I had for several years been subject to severe attacks of Inflammatory Rheumatism from which I would suffer the most intense pain from four to eight weeks, although under the best treatment I could procure. About six weeks ago I had another attack coming on with its usual severity, when a customer recommended the use of your Pain Eradicator, which he had proven himself and found in a great many cases to be an effectual cure. I gave it a trial and its results exceeded my expectation. it soon relieved the pain reduced the sweling, and I was able to attend to my business as usual in three days, and have been completely cured by less than two 25 cent

For some years I had suffered with pain and swelling around the instep and ankle of one foot, the result of a bad sprain, this was also in a short time cured by it. It has been used in my family for Neuralgia and other forms of pain with simi-

The result of its use in my case has induced many others to try it, and all that use it are well pleased with it, and like myself are determined to keep it always in our houses.

GATES ACADIAN LINIMENT Joyful News for the Afflicted.

S a Vegetable compound, possessing a well concentrated combination of soothing and healing virtues for internal and external diseases, Inflammations or Chilblains, Toothache, etc.

To be mixed with the Nerve Ointment for Diptheria and Sore Throat, Sick Hendache, Rheumatism, Pleurisy, Spinal Disease or affection of the Spine, Sprains, Felons, &c.

Also excellent for beasts.

MESSRS. C. GATES & Co :-GENTLEMEN-Mr. Daniel Alward, of Butternutt Ridge, N.B., appeared before me and made oath that in November, 1877, he was attacked with Diptheria in its worst form. The Doctor pronounced it a very bad case and gave bim some medicine which appeared to ease him, but he took cold and his threat was fast filling up, so he could scarcely breathe. He applied Gate's Acadian Liniment internally and externally with immediate relief. He feels confident that unless he had got relief he could not have lived long. Sworn to before me at Salisbury, this
